Ich glaube, daß mich Gott geschaffen hat samt allen Creaturen, mir Leib und Seele, Augen, Ohren und alle Glieder, Vernunft und alle Sinne gegeben hat und noch erhält; dazu Kleider und Schuh, Essen und Trinken, Haus und Hof, Weib und Kind, Ader, Vieh und alle Güter; mit aller Notdurft und Nahrung dieses Leibes und Lebens reichlich und täglich versorgt, wider alle Fährlichkeit beschirmt und vor allem Übel behütet und bewahrt; und daß alles aus lauter väterlicher, göttlicher Güte und Barmherzigkeit, ohne alle mein Verdienst und Würdigkeit; des alles ich ihm zu danken und zu loben und dafür zu dienen und gehorsam zu sein schuldig bin. Das ist gewißlich wahr.

19] X. Praeceptum. [R. 369

Nec desiderabis uxorem eius, non servum, non ancillam, non bovem, non asinum nec omnia, quae illius sunt.

20] Quae est huius praecepti sententia?
Responsio.

Debemus Deum timere et diligere, ne [a] proximo uxorem, servos, ancillas vel pecudes abalienemus aut abstrahamus, sed illos adhortemur et urgeamus, ut maneat et suum officium diligenter faciant.

21] Quid autem summam dicit Deus de his praeceptis omnibus?

Responsio.

Sic dicit Exod. 20, 5 sq.:

Ego, Dominus Deus tuus, sum fortis zelotes, visitans iniquitatem patrum in filios in tertiam et quartam generationem eorum, qui odierunt me; et faciens misericordiam in millia his, qui diligunt me et custodiunt praecepta mea.

22] Quae est horum verborum sententia?
Responsio.

Deus minatur poenam omnibus, qui ista praecepta transgrediuntur et violant. Debemus itaque expavescere et timere iram Dei et nihil contra huiusmodi praecepta facere. Rursus promittit etiam suam gratiam et omnia bona omnibus, qui mandata illa observant. Merito igitur debemus Deum diligere et illi confidere et iuxta mandata eius omnem nostram vitam sedulo et diligenter instituere.

[R. 370]

II. SYMBOLUM APOSTOLICUM, quomodo paterfamilias id suae familiae simplicissime tradere debeat.

1] Primus Articulus.

De Creatione.

Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, Creatorem coeli et terrae.

2] Quae est huius articuli sententia?
Responsio.

Credo, quod Deus creaverit me, una cum omnibus creaturis, quod corpus et animam, oculos, aures et omnia membra, rationem et omnes sensus mihi dederit et adhuc sustentet; ad haec, quod vestes et calceos, cibum ac potum, domum, uxorem, liberos, agros, iumenta et omnia bona, cum omnibus vitae necessariis, copiose et quotidie largiatur, me contra omnia pericula protegat et ab omnibus malis liberet et custodiat; et haec omnia ex mera sua paterna ac divina bonitate et misericordia, sine ullis meis meritis aut ulla dignitate; pro quibus omnibus illi gratias agere, pleno ore laudem tribuere, inservire, obsequi merito debeo. Hoc certissime verum est.

The Tenth Commandment.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his cattle, nor anything that is his.

What does this mean? — Answer.

We should fear and love God that we may not estrange, force, or entice away our neighbor's wife, servants, or cattle, but urge them to stay and [diligently] do their duty.

What Does God Say of All These Commandments?

Answer.

He says thus [Exod. 20, 5 f.]: I the Lord, thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me, and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me and keep My commandments.

What does this mean? — Answer.

God threatens to punish all that transgress these commandments. Therefore we should dread His wrath and not act contrary to these commandments. But He promises grace and every blessing to all that keep these commandments. Therefore we should also love and trust in Him, and gladly do [zealously and diligently order our whole life] according to His commandments.

II. THE CREED,

as the Head of the Family Should Teach It in the Simplest Way to His Household.

The First Article.

Of Creation.

I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth.

What does this mean? — Answer.

I believe that God has made me and all creatures; that He has given me my body and soul, eyes, ears, and all my limbs, my reason, and all my senses, and still preserves them; in addition thereto, clothing and shoes, meat and drink, house and homestead, wife and children, fields, cattle, and all my goods; that He provides me richly and daily with all that I need to support this body and life, protects me from all danger, and guards me and preserves me from all evil; and all this out of pure, fatherly, divine goodness and mercy, without any merit or worthiness in me; for all which I owe it to Him to thank, praise, serve, and obey Him. This is most certainly true.

Der andere Artikel.

Von der Erlösung.

Und an Jesum Christum, seinen einzigen Sohn, unsern Herrn, der empfangen ist von dem Heiligen Geist, geboren aus Maria der Jungfrau, gelitten unter Pontio Pilato, gekreuzigt, gestorben und begraben, niedergefahren zur Hölle, am dritten Tage wieder auferstanden von den Toten, aufgefahren gen Himmel, sitzend zur Rechten Gottes, des allmächtigen Vaters, von dannen er kommen wird, zu richten die Lebendigen und die Toten.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Ich glaube, daß Jesus Christus, wahrhaftiger Gott, vom Vater in Ewigkeit geboren, und auch wahrhaftiger Mensch, von der Jungfrau Maria geboren, sei mein Herr, der mich verloren und verdammt Menschen erlöst hat, erworben und gewonnen von allen Sünden, vom Tod und von der Gewalt des Teufels, nicht mit Gold oder Silber, sondern mit seinem heiligen, theuren Blut und mit seinem unschuldigen Leiden und Sterben, auf daß ich sein eigen sei und in seinem Reich unter ihm lebe und ihm diene in ewiger Gerechtigkeit, Unschuld und Seligkeit, gleichwie er ist auferstanden vom Tode, lebt und regiert in Ewigkeit. Das ist gewißlich wahr.

Der dritte Artikel.

Von der Heiligung.

Ich glaube an den Heiligen Geist, eine heilige christliche Kirche, die Gemeinde der Heiligen, Vergebung der Sünden, Auferstehung des Fleisches und ein ewiges Leben. Amen.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Ich glaube, daß ich nicht aus eigener Vernunft noch Kraft an Jesum Christum, meinen Herrn, glauben oder zu ihm kommen kann; sondern der Heilige Geist hat mich durchs Evangelium berufen, mit seinen Gaben erleuchtet, im rechten Glauben geheiligt und erhalten; gleichwie er die ganze Christenheit auf Erden beruft, sammelt, erleuchtet, heiligt und bei Jesu Christo erhält im rechten, einigen Glauben; in welcher Christenheit er mir und allen Gläubigen täglich alle Sünden reichlich vergibt und am jüngsten Tage mich und alle Toten auferwecken wird und mir samt allen Gläubigen in Christo ein ewiges Leben geben wird. Das ist gewißlich wahr.

III. Das Vaterunser, wie ein Hausvater dasselbe seinem Gesinde auf das einfältigste vorhalten soll.

Vater unser, der du bist im Himmel.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gott will damit uns loden [will uns damit loden], daß wir glauben sollen, er sei unser rechter Vater und wir seine rechten Kinder, auf daß wir getrost und mit aller Zuversicht ihn bitten sollen wie die lieben Kinder ihren lieben Vater.

3]

Secundus Articulus.

De Redemptione.

Et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuus [R. 371 et sepultus, descendit ad inferna, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in coelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei, Patris omnipotentis, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos.

4]

Quae est huius articuli sententia? Responsio.

Credo, quod Iesus Christus, verus Deus, a Patre ante saecula genitus, idemque verus homo, natus ex Maria virgine, sit meus Dominus, qui me perditum et damnatum hominem redemit et ab omnibus peccatis, a morte, a potestate Satanae liberavit, non quidem auro et argento, sed suo sancto ac pretioso sanguine suae innocentiae passionis ac morte, ut ego essem totus ipsius, et in regno eius sub ipso viverem ac ei servirem in perpetua iustitia, innocentia et beatitudine, perinde ac ipse a morte surrexit, vivit et regnat in aeternum. Hoc certissime verum est.

5]

Tertius Articulus.

De Sanctificatione.

Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam ecclesiam catholicam, sanctorum communionem, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem et vitam aeternam. Amen.

6]

Quae est huius articuli sententia? Responsio.

Credo me propriis rationis meae viribus Iesu Christo, Domino meo, fidere, aut ad eum accedere et pervenire nullo modo posse; [R. 372 sed Spiritus Sanctus per evangelium me vocavit, suis donis illuminavit, in recta fide sanctificavit et conservavit; quemadmodum solet totam ecclesiam in terra vocare, congregare, illuminare, sanctificare et in Iesu Christo per veram ac unicam fidem conservare; in qua ecclesia mihi et omnibus Christianis omnia peccata quotidie benigne remittit et nos omnes in extremo die a morte suscitabit ac mihi et omnibus in Christum credentibus vitam aeternam dabit. Hoc certissime verum est.

III. ORATIO DOMINICA, quomodo paterfamilias eam suae familiae simplicissime tradere debeat.

1]

Pater noster, qui es in coelis.

2]

Quae est horum verborum sententia? Responsio.

Deus amanter nos hac praefatiuncula invitavit, ut vere credamus eum nostrum verum Patrem nosque eius veros filios esse, ut eum confidentius pleni fiducia invocemus, quemadmodum videmus liberos certa fiducia aliquid a parentibus suis petere.

The Second Article.

Of Redemption.

And in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried; He descended into hell; the third day He rose again from the dead; He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

What does this mean? — Answer.

I believe that Jesus Christ, true God, begotten of the Father from eternity, and also true man, born of the Virgin Mary, is my Lord, who has redeemed me, a lost and condemned creature, purchased and won [delivered] me from all sins, from death, and from the power of the devil, not with gold or silver, but with His holy, precious blood and with His innocent suffering and death, in order that I may be [wholly] His own, and live under Him in His kingdom, and serve Him in everlasting righteousness, innocence, and blessedness, even as He is risen from the dead, lives and reigns to all eternity. This is most certainly true.

The Third Article.

Of Sanctification.

I believe in the Holy Ghost; one holy Christian Church, the communion of saints; the forgiveness of sins; the resurrection of the body; and the life everlasting. Amen.

What does this mean? — Answer.

I believe that I cannot by my own reason or strength believe in Jesus Christ, my Lord, or come to Him; but the Holy Ghost has called me by the Gospel, enlightened me with His gifts, sanctified and kept me in the true faith; even as He calls, gathers, enlightens, and sanctifies the whole Christian Church on earth, and keeps it with Jesus Christ in the one true faith; in which Christian Church He forgives daily and richly all sins to me and all believers, and at the last day will raise up me and all the dead, and will give to me and to all believers in Christ everlasting life. This is most certainly true.

III. THE LORD'S PRAYER,

as the Head of the Family Should Teach It in the Simplest Way to His Household.

Our Father who art in heaven.

What does this mean? — Answer.

God would thereby [with this little introduction] tenderly urge us to believe that He is our true Father, and that we are His true children, so that we may ask Him confidently, with all assurance, as dear children ask their dear father.

Concordia Triglotta.

Die erste Bitte.

Geheiligt werde dein Name.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gottes Name ist zwar an ihm selbst heilig; aber wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß er bei uns auch heilig werde.

Wie geschieht das? — Antwort.

Wo das Wort Gottes lauter und rein gelehrt wird, und wir auch heilig als die Kinder Gottes danach leben; das hilft uns, lieber Vater im Himmel! Wer aber anders lehrt und lebt, denn das Wort Gottes lehrt, der entheiligt unter uns den Namen Gottes; da behüte uns vor, [lieber] himmlischer Vater!

Die andere Bitte.

Dein Reich komme.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gottes Reich kommt wohl ohne unser Gebet, von ihm selbst; aber wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß es auch zu uns komme.

Wie geschieht das? — Antwort.

Wenn der himmlische Vater uns seinen Heiligen Geist gibt, daß wir seinem heiligen Wort durch seine Gnade glauben und göttlich leben, hier zeitlich und dort ewiglich.

Die dritte Bitte.

Dein Wille geschehe, wie im Himmel, also auch auf Erden.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gottes guter, gnädiger Wille geschieht wohl ohne unser Gebet; aber wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß er auch bei uns geschehe.

Wie geschieht das? — Antwort.

Wenn Gott allen bösen Rat und Willen bricht und hindert, so uns den Namen Gottes nicht heiligen und sein Reich nicht kommen lassen wollen, als da ist des Teufels, der Welt und unsers fleischlichen Wille, sondern stärkt und behält uns fest in seinem Wort und Glauben bis an unser Ende: das ist sein gnädiger, guter Wille.

Die vierte Bitte.

Unser täglich Brot gib uns heute.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gott gibt täglich Brot, auch wohl ohne unsere Bitte, allen bösen Menschen; aber wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß er [er's] uns erkennen lasse und mit Dankagung empfangen unser täglich Brot.

Was heißt denn täglich Brot?

Antwort.

Alles, was zur Lebensnahrung und -notdurft gehört, als Essen, Trinken, Kleider, Schuh', Haus, Hof, Acker, Vieh, Geld, Gut, fromm Gemahl,

3]

I. Petitio.

Sanctificetur nomen tuum.

4] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Nomen Dei per se quidem sanctum est; verum nos oramus hac petitione, ut [R. 373] apud nos quoque sanctificetur.

5]

Qua ratione fit istud?

Responsio.

Cum Verbum Dei pure ac sincere docetur, et nos secundum illud, ut filios Dei decet, pie vivimus. Quod ut fiat, dona nobis, mi Pater, qui es in coelis! Qui vero aliter docet vel vivit, quam Verbum Dei docet, ille nomen Dei inter nos profanat. Ne autem hoc accidat, tu prohibe, mi Pater coelestis!

6]

II. Petitio.

Adveniat regnum tuum.

7] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Regnum Dei venit etiam per se, sine nostra oratione; sed petimus hac precatione, ut ad nos quoque perveniat.

8]

Qua ratione fit istud?

Responsio.

Cum Pater coelestis dat nobis suum Sanctum Spiritum, qui efficit gratia sua, ut sancto eius Verbo credamus ac pie vivamus, cum in hoc tempore, tum postea in aeternum.

9]

III. Petitio.

Fiat voluntas tua, sicut in coelo, sic et in terra.

10] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Bona ac misericors Dei voluntas fit quoque sine nostra oratione; sed rogamus hac petitione, ut etiam apud nos fiat.

11]

Qua ratione fit istud?

Responsio.

Cum Deus frangit ac impedit omne malum consilium, voluntatem et conatus, qui obstant, quominus nomen Dei sanctificemus, regnumque eius ad nos pervenire possit, ut est diaboli, mundi et carnis nostrae voluntas; deinde cum confortat et conservat nos firmiter in suo Verbo ac fide usque ad finem vitae nostrae: haec est misericors ac bona ipsius voluntas.

12]

IV. Petitio.

Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis hodie.

13] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Deus dat quidem omnibus panem quotidianum, quamvis non petamus, etiam malis hominibus. At nos precamur hac petitione, ut agnoscamus hoc beneficium, atque ita panem nostrum quotidianum cum gratiarum actione accipiamus.

14]

Quid autem significat panis quotidianus?

Responsio.

Significat omne, quod ad vitae nostrae necessitatem ac sustentationem pertinet, videlicet cibum, potum, vestes, calceos, domum,

The First Petition.

Hallowed be Thy name.

What does this mean? — Answer.

God's name is indeed holy in itself; but we pray in this petition that it may become holy among us also.

How is this done? — Answer.

When the Word of God is taught in its truth and purity, and we as the children of God also lead holy lives in accordance with it. To this end help us, dear Father in heaven. But he that teaches and lives otherwise than God's Word teaches profanes the name of God among us. From this preserve us, Heavenly Father.

The Second Petition.

Thy kingdom come.

What does this mean? — Answer.

The kingdom of God comes indeed without our prayer, of itself; but we pray in this petition that it may come unto us also.

How is this done? — Answer.

When our heavenly Father gives us His Holy Spirit, so that by His grace we believe His holy Word and lead a godly life here in time and yonder in eternity.

The Third Petition.

Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

What does this mean? — Answer.

The good and gracious will of God is done indeed without our prayer; but we pray in this petition that it may be done among us also.

How is this done? — Answer.

When God breaks and hinders every evil counsel and will which would not let us hallow the name of God nor let His kingdom come, such as the will of the devil, the world, and our flesh; but strengthens and keeps us steadfast in His Word and in faith unto our end. This is His gracious and good will.

The Fourth Petition.

Give us this day our daily bread.

What does this mean? — Answer.

God gives daily bread, even without our prayer, to all wicked men; but we pray in this petition that He would lead us to know it, and to receive our daily bread with thanksgiving.

What is meant by daily bread? — Answer.

Everything that belongs to the support and wants of the body, such as meat, drink, clothing, shoes, house, homestead, field, cattle, money, goods, a pious spouse, pious children, fromme Kinder, fromm Gefinde, fromme und treue Oberherren, gut Regiment, gut Wetter, Friede, Gesundheit, Frucht, Ehre, gute Freunde, getreue Nachbarn und dergleichen.

Die fünfte Bitte.

Und verlaß [erlaß, vergib] uns unsere Schuld, als wir verlassen unsern Schuldigern.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß der Vater im Himmel nicht ansehen wolle unsere Sünde und um derselben willen solche Bitte nicht versagen; denn wir sind der keines wert, das wir bitten, haben es auch nicht verdient; sondern er wolle es uns alles aus Gnaden geben, denn wir täglich viel sündigen und wohl eitel Strafe verdienen. So wollen wir zwar [„warten“, wahrlich, in Wahrheit] wiederum auch herzlich vergeben und gerne [* wohl!] tun denen, die sich an uns veründigen.

Die sechste Bitte.

Und führe uns nicht in Versuchung.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Gott versucht zwar niemand, aber wir bitten in diesem Gebet, daß uns Gott wolle behüten und erhalten, auf daß uns der Teufel, die Welt und unser Fleisch nicht betrüge noch verführe in Mißglauben, Verzweifeln und andere große Schande und Laster; und ob wir damit angefochten würden, daß wir doch endlich gewinnen und den Sieg behalten.

Die siebente Bitte.

Sondern erlöse uns von dem Übel.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Wir bitten in diesem Gebet als in der Summa, daß uns der Vater im Himmel von allerlei Übel Leibes und Seele, Gutes und Ehre erlöse und zulezt, wenn unser Stündlein kommt, ein seltsames Ende beschere und mit Gnaden von diesem Jammerthal zu sich nehme in den Himmel.

Amen.

Was ist das? — Antwort.

Daß ich soll gewiß sein, solche Bitten sind dem Vater im Himmel angenehm und erhört; denn er selbst hat uns geboten, also zu beten, und versprechen, daß er uns will erhören. Amen, Amen, das heißt: Ja, ja, es soll also geschehen.

aream, agros, pecudes, pecuniam, divitias, probam coniugem, probos liberos, probos servos, probum ac fidum magistratum, bonum reipublicae statum, salubrem aërem, pacem, sanitatem, modestiam, honorem, bonos amicos, fidos vicinos et id genus alia.

15]

V. Petitio.

Et remitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos remittimus debitoribus nostris.

16] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

[R. 375

Petimus hac precatone, ne Pater coelestis velit respicere et examinare peccata nostra et propter ista nostram orationem repudiare; quandoquidem nullis rebus, quas petimus, digni sumus, nec quidquam mereri possumus; sed ut velit nobis sua gratia et bonitate donare omnia, quia quotidie multifariam peccamus et nihil nisi poenas meremur. Viciassim autem ex corde condonabimus, quidquid in nos peccaverint alii, et pro maleficio libenter redemus beneficium.

17]

VI. Petitio.

Et ne nos inducas in tentationem.

18] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Deus quidem neminem tentat, sed tamen petimus hac petitione, ut ipse nos custodiat et conservet, ne Satanas, mundus et caro nostra nobis imponant et nos a recta fide seducant et in superstitionem, diffidentiam, desperationem atque alia gravia scelera et flagitia coniciant, et ut maxime eiusmodi tentationibus sollicitemur, ne succumbamus, sed ut tandem vincamus ac triumphemus.

19]

VII. Petitio.

Sed libera nos a malo.

20] Quae est huius petitionis sententia?

Responsio.

Oramus hac precatone tamquam in summa, ut Pater noster coelestis liberet nos ab omnibus malis ac periculis corporis et animae, bonorum et honorum, et ut tandem, [R. 376 cum hora mortis venerit, felicem vitae exitum nobis largiatur, nosque pro sua gratuita bonitate ex hac miseriarum valle ad se in coelum recipiat.

21]

Amen.

Quae est huius voculae [vocabuli] significatio?

Amen significat idem quod certe, ut scilicet ego sim certus, eiusmodi petitiones Patri nostro coelesti esse acceptas atque ab eo exauditas, quia ipse nobis mandavit, ut ad hunc modum oraremus [oremus], promisitque se nos exauditurum esse. Amen, Amen, id est, vere, certe, haec ita fient.

pious servants, pious and faithful magistrates, good government, good weather, peace, health, discipline, honor, good friends, faithful neighbors, and the like.

The Fifth Petition.

And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.

What does this mean? — Answer.

We pray in this petition that our Father in heaven would not look upon our sins, nor deny such petitions on account of them; for we are worthy of none of the things for which we pray, neither have we deserved them; but that He would grant them all to us by grace; for we daily sin much, and indeed deserve nothing but punishment. So will we verily, on our part, also heartily forgive and also readily do good to those who sin against us.

The Sixth Petition.

And lead us not into temptation.

What does this mean? — Answer.

God, indeed, tempts no one; but we pray in this petition that God would guard and keep us, so that the devil, the world, and our flesh may not deceive us, nor seduce us into misbelief, despair, and other great shame and vice; and though we be assailed by them, that still we may finally overcome and gain the victory.

The Seventh Petition.

But deliver us from evil.

What does this mean? — Answer.

We pray in this petition, as in a summary, that our Father in heaven would deliver us from all manner of evil, of body and soul, property and honor, and at last, when our last hour shall come, grant us a blessed end, and graciously take us from this vale of tears to Himself into heaven.

Amen.

What does this mean? — Answer.

That I should be certain that these petitions are acceptable to our Father in heaven and heard; for He Himself has commanded us so to pray, and has promised that He will hear us. Amen, Amen; that is, Yea, yea, it shall be so.

IV. Das Sacrament der heiligen Taufe, wie dasselbe ein Hausvater seinem Kinde soll einköstiglich verhalten.

Zum ersten.

Was ist die Taufe?
Antwort.

Die Taufe ist nicht allein schlecht Wasser, sondern sie ist das Wasser in Gottes Gebot gefaßt und mit Gottes Wort verbunden.

Welches ist denn solch Wort Gottes?
Antwort.

Da unser Herr Christus spricht Matthäi am letzten: Gehet hin in alle Welt, lehret alle Heiden und taufet sie im Namen des Vaters und des Sohnes und des Heiligen Geistes.

Zum andern.

Was gibt ober nützt die Taufe?
Antwort.

Sie wirkt Vergebung der Sünden, erlöst vom Tod und Teufel und gibt die ewige Seligkeit allen, die es glauben, wie die Worte und Verheißungen Gottes lauten.

Welches sind solche Worte und Verheißungen Gottes?
Antwort.

Da unser Herr Christus spricht Marci am letzten: Wer da glaubet und getauft wird, der wird selig [werden]; wer aber nicht glaubet, der wird verdammt [werden].

Zum dritten.

Wie kann Wasser solche große Dinge tun?
Antwort.

Wasser tut's freilich nicht, sondern das Wort Gottes, so mit und bei dem Wasser ist, und der Glaube, so solchem Worte Gottes im Wasser traut. Denn ohne Gottes Wort ist das Wasser schlecht Wasser und keine Taufe; aber mit dem Wort Gottes ist's eine Taufe, das ist, ein gnadenreich Wasser des Lebens und ein Bad der neuen Geburt im Heiligen Geist, wie St. Paulus sagt zu Titus am 3. Kapitel:

„Durch das Bad der Wieergeburt und Erneuerung des Heiligen Geistes, welchen er ausgegossen hat über uns reichlich durch Jesum Christum, unsern Heiland, auf daß wir durch desselben Gnade gerecht und Erben seien des ewigen Lebens nach der Hoffnung. Das ist je gewißlich wahr.“

Zum vierten.

Was bedeutet denn solch Wassertaufen?
Antwort.

Es bedeutet, daß der alte Adam in uns durch tägliche Reue und Buße soll ersäuft werden und sterben mit allen Sünden und bösen Lüsten, und wiederum täglich herauskommen und auferstehen ein neuer Mensch, der in Gerechtigkeit und Reinigkeit vor Gott ewiglich lebe.

IV. SACRAMENTUM BAPTISMI, quomodo de eo paterfamilias suam familiam simplicissime docere debeat.

Primum.

1] Quid est baptismus?
2] Responsio.

Baptismus non est simpliciter aqua, sed est aqua divino mandato comprehensa et verbo Dei obsignata.

3] Quod est illud verbum Dei?
Responsio.

4] Ubi Dominus noster Iesus Christus dicit Matthaei ultimo [28, 19]: Euntes docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.

Secundum.

[R. 377]

5] Quid praestat aut confert baptismus?
6] Responsio.

Operatur remissionem peccatorum, liberat a morte et a diabolo et donat aeternam beatitudinem omnibus et singulis, qui credunt hoc, quod verba et promissiones divinae pollicentur.

7] Quae sunt illa verba et promissiones divinae?
8] Responsio.

Ubi Dominus noster Iesus Christus dicit Marci ultimo [16, 16]: Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit. Qui vero non crediderit, condemnabitur.

Tertium.

9] Qui potest aqua tam magnas res efficere?
10] Responsio.

Aqua certe tantas res non efficit, sed verbum Dei, quod in et cum aqua est, et fides, quae verbo Dei aquae addito credit. Quia aqua sine verbo Dei est simpliciter aqua et non est baptismus, sed addito verbo Dei est baptismus, hoc est, salutaris aqua gratiae et vitae et lavacrum regenerationis in Spiritu Sancto, sicut Paulus ait ad Titum, 3, 5 sqq.:

Secundum suam misericordiam nos salvos fecit per lavacrum regenerationis ac renovationis Spiritus Sancti, quem effudit in nos opulenter per Iesum Christum, Salvatorem nostrum, ut iustificati illius gratia heredes efficeremur iuxta spem vitae aeternae. Fide hic sermo est.

11] Quantum.

12] Quid autem significat ista in aquam immersio?
Responsio.

Significat, quod vetus Adam, qui adhuc in nobis est, subinde per quotidianam mortificationem ac poenitentiam in nobis submergi et exstingui debeat una cum omnibus peccatis et malis concupiscentiis, atque rursus [R. 378] quotidie emergere ac resurgere novus homo, qui in iustitia et puritate coram Deo vivat in aeternum.

IV. THE SACRAMENT OF HOLY BAPTISM, as the Head of the Family Should Teach It in a Simple Way to His Household.

First.

What is Baptism? — Answer.

Baptism is not simple water only, but it is the water comprehended in God's command and connected with God's Word.

Which is that word of God? — Answer.

Christ, our Lord, says in the last chapter of Matthew: Go ye into all the world and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Secondly.

What does Baptism give or profit? — Answer.

It works forgiveness of sins, delivers from death and the devil, and gives eternal salvation to all who believe this, as the words and promises of God declare.

Which are such words and promises of God? — Answer.

Christ, our Lord, says in the last chapter of Mark: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

Thirdly.

How can water do such great things? — Answer.

It is not the water indeed that does them, but the word of God which is in and with the water, and faith, which trusts such word of God in the water. For without the word of God the water is simple water and no baptism. But with the word of God it is a baptism, that is, a gracious water of life and a washing of regeneration in the Holy Ghost, as St. Paul says, Titus, chapter three: By the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost, which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ, our Savior, that, being justified by His grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life. This is a faithful saying.

Fourthly.

What does such baptizing with water signify? — Answer.

It signifies that the old Adam in us should, by daily contrition and repentance, be drowned and die with all sins and evil lusts, and, again, a new man daily come forth and arise, who shall live before God in righteousness and purity forever.

Wo steht das geschrieben?
Antwort.

St. Paulus zu den Römern am 6. spricht: „Wir sind samt Christo durch die Taufe begraben in den Tod, daß, gleichwie Christus ist von den Toten auferweckt durch die Herrlichkeit des Vaters, also sollen wir auch in einem neuen Leben wandeln.“

V. Wie man die Einfältigen soll lehren beichten.

[Was ist die Beichte? — Antwort.]

Die Beichte begreift zwei Stücke in sich: eines, daß man die Sünde bekenne; das andere, daß man die absolutio oder Vergebung von dem Beichtiger empfangen als von Gott selbst und ja nicht daran zweifle, sondern fest glaube, die Sünden seien dadurch vergeben vor Gott im Himmel.

Welche Sünden soll man denn beichten?
[Antwort.]

Vor Gott soll man aller Sünden sich schuldig geben, auch die wir nicht erkennen, wie wir im Vaterunser tun; aber vor dem Beichtiger sollen wir allein die Sünden bekennen, die wir wissen und fühlen im Herzen.

Welche sind die?
[Antwort.]

Da siehe deinen Stand an nach den zehn Geboten: ob du Vater, Mutter, Sohn, Tochter, Herr, Frau, Knecht seiest; ob du ungehorsam, untreu, unfleißig gewesen seiest; ob du jemand Leid getan hast mit Worten oder Werken; ob du gestohlen, veräußert, verwahrloßt, Schaden getan hast.

Lieber, stelle mir eine kurze Weise zu beichten.

Antwort.

So sollst du zum Beichtiger sprechen:

Würdiger, lieber Herr, ich bitte Euch, wollet meine Beichte hören und mir die Vergebung sprechen um Gottes willen.

Sage an!

Ich armer Sünder bekenne mich vor Gott aller Sünden schuldig; insonderheit bekenne ich vor Euch, daß ich ein Knecht, Magd usw. bin; aber ich diene leider untreulich meinem Herrn; denn da und da habe ich nicht getan, was sie mich hießen, habe sie erzürnt und zu fluchen bewegt, habe veräußert und Schaden lassen geschehen; bin auch in Worten und Werken schamlos [schamlos, anstößig] gewesen, habe mit meinesgleichen gezürnt, wider meine Frau gemurrt und geschlucht usw. Das alles ist mir leid, und bitte um Gnade; ich will mich bessern.

Ein Herr oder Frau sage also:

Insonderheit bekenne ich vor Euch, daß ich mein Kind und Gefinde, Weib nicht treulich gezogen habe zu Gottes Ehren. Ich habe geschlucht, böse Exempel mit unzüchtigen [unanständigen] Worten und Werken gegeben, meinem Nachbar Schaden 13] Ubi hoc scriptum est?

14] Responsio.

Sanctus Paulus ad Romanos, 6, 4, dicit: Septus igitur sumus una cum Christo per baptismum in mortem, ut quemadmodum exortatus est Christus ex mortuis per gloriam Patris, ita et nos in novitate vitae ambulemus.

V. DE CONFESSIOE.

Quomodo simpliciores de ea erudiendi sint.

16] Quid est confessio?
Responsio.

Confessio duo comprehendit: unum est peccata confiteri, alterum est absolutionem sive remissionem a confessionario sive praecone evangelii accipere, tamquam ab ipso Deo, et non dubitare, sed firmiter credere peccata per illam absolutionem coram Deo in coelo remissa esse.

17] Quae peccata sunt confitenda?
18] Responsio.

Coram Deo omnium peccatorum reos nos sistere debemus, etiam eorum, quae nobis sunt abscondita, sicut in Oratione Dominica facimus. Coram ministro autem debemus tantum ea peccata confiteri, quae nobis cognita sunt et quae in corde sentimus.

19] Quanam sunt leta?
20] Responsio.

Hic unusquisque examinet vitae suae statum secundum Decalogum: an pater, mater, filius, filia, dominus, hera, servus sis; [R. 379 an contumax, infidelis, negligens fueris; an aliquem laeseris dictis, factis; an furtum commiseris aut iniuria, ignavia et segnitie damnum alicui intuleris.

21] Brevis Forma Confessionis pro Rudioribus.

In hunc modum alloqui debes ministrum Verbi:

Reverende et dilecte domine, rogo te, ut confessionem meam audias et mihi propter Deum remissionem annunties.

[Dicas.]

22] Miser ego peccator confiteor coram Deo me omnium peccatorum reum esse; imprimis confiteor coram te, me quidem servum, ancillam etc. esse, sed infideliter servire domino meo; non enim feci, non facio, quae mihi iniungit, irritavi et ad maledicendum commovi dominum vel dominam meam, multa neglexi et damno causam praebui etc., in verbis et factis petulantem me praebui, impatiens fui, obstrepui etc. Ideo doleo, gratiam imploro, emendationem promitto.

23] Herus aut hera sic dicant:

Imprimis confiteor coram te, me non diligenter fuisse in fideli educatione et institutione liberorum et familiae ad gloriam Dei, blasphemavi, nomine Dei abusus sum, malum exemplum prava loquens et faciens praebui,

Where is this written? — Answer.

St. Paul says Romans, chapter 6: We are buried with Christ by Baptism into death, that, like as He was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

V. HOW THE UNLEARNED SHOULD BE TAUGHT TO CONFESS.

[What is Confession? — Answer.]

Confession embraces two parts: the one is, that we confess our sins; the other, that we receive absolution, or forgiveness, from the confessor, as from God Himself, and in no wise doubt, but firmly believe, that our sins are thereby forgiven before God in heaven.

What sins should we confess? — [Answer.]

Before God we should plead guilty of all sins, even of those which we do not know, as we do in the Lord's Prayer. But before the confessor we should confess those sins alone which we know and feel in our hearts.

Which are these? — [Answer.]

Here consider your station according to the Ten Commandments, whether you are a father, mother, son, daughter, master, mistress, a man-servant or maid-servant; whether you have been disobedient, unfaithful, slothful; whether you have grieved any one by words or deeds; whether you have stolen, neglected, or wasted aught, or done other injury.

Pray, Propose to Me a Brief Form of Confession.

Answer.

You should speak to the confessor thus: Reverend and dear sir, I beseech you to hear my confession, and to pronounce forgiveness to me for God's sake.

Proceed!

I, a poor sinner, confess myself before God guilty of all sins; especially I confess before you that I am a man-servant, a maid-servant, etc. But, alas, I serve my master unfaithfully; for in this and in that I have not done what they commanded me; I have provoked them, and caused them to curse, have been negligent [in many things] and permitted damage to be done; have also been immodest in words and deeds, have quarreled with my equals, have grumbled and sworn at my mistress, etc. For all this I am sorry, and pray for grace; I want to do better.

A master or mistress may say thus:

In particular I confess before you that I have not faithfully trained my children, domestics, and wife [family] for God's glory. I have cursed, set a bad example by rude words and deeds, have done my neighbor harm getan und übel nachgeredet, zu teuer verkauft, falsche und nicht ganze Ware gegeben.

Und was er mehr wider die Gebote Gottes und seinen Stand getan usw.

Wenn aber jemand sich nicht befindet beschwert mit solcher oder größeren Sünden, der soll nicht sorgen oder weiter Sünde suchen noch erdichten und damit eine Marter aus der Beichte machen, sondern erzähle eine oder zwei, die du weißt; also: Insonderheit bekenne ich, daß ich einmal gesteuert; item, einmal unhöflich mit Worten gewesen, einmal dies R. veräußert habe usw. Also laß es genug sein.

Weißt du aber gar keine (welches doch nicht wohl sollte möglich sein), so sage auch keine insonderheit, sondern nimm die Vergebung auf die gesamte Beichte, so du vor Gott tust gegen den Beichtiger.

Darauf soll der Beichtiger sagen:

Gott sei dir gnädig und stärke deinen Glauben! Amen.

Weiter:

Glaubst du auch, daß meine Vergebung Gottes Vergebung sei?

Antwort.

Ja, lieber Herr.

Darauf spreche er:

Wie du glaubst, so geschehe dir. Und ich aus dem Befehl unsers Herrn Jesu Christi vergebe dir deine Sünden im Namen des Vaters und des Sohnes und des Heiligen Geistes. Amen. Gehe hin in Frieden!

Welche aber große Beschwerden des Gewissens haben oder betrübt und angefochten sind, die wird ein Beichtvater wohl wissen mit mehr Sprüchen zu trösten und zum Glauben [zu] reizen. Das soll allein eine gemeine Weise der Beichte sein für die Einfältigen.

VI. Das Sacrament des Altars, wie ein Hausvater dasselbe seinem Kinde einfältiglich verhalten soll.

Was ist das Sacrament des Altars?
Antwort.

Es ist der wahre Leib und Blut unsers Herrn Jesu Christi, unter dem Brod und Wein uns Christen zu essen und zu trinken, von Christo selbst eingesetzt.

Wo steht das geschrieben?
Antwort.

So schreiben die heiligen Evangelisten Matthäus, Markus, Lukas und St. Paulus:

Unser Herr Jesus Christus in der Nacht, da er verraten ward, nahm er das Brod, dankte und brach's und gab's seinen Jüngern und sprach: Nehmet hin, esset! Das ist mein Leib, der für euch gegeben wird. Solches tut zu meinem Gedächtnis!

Desßelbigengleichen nahm er auch den Kelch nach dem Abendmahl, dankte und gab ihnen den und vicinos laesi, multis obrectavi, pondera et mensuras violavi, decepi proximum vendendo merces etc.

Et si quid aliud contra praecepta Dei in cuiusque vocatione occurrit etc.

24] Si vero quis non sentit se onerari [R. 380 talibus aut gravioribus peccatis, is non sit sollicitus, nec quaerat aut fingat peccata, nec ex confessione carnificinam faciat sed unum atque alterum peccatum sibi notum recitet, ut: Imprimis confiteor me abusum esse nomine divino, verbis impudicis usum, hoc vel illud neglexisse etc. Sic sane quiescat animus.

25] Si vero plane nullius tibi conscius es (quod propemodum impossibile est), nullum etiam in specie recites, sed accipias remissionem, facta generali confessione, quam coram Deo ad ministrum pronuntias.

26] Respondeat autem minister:

Deus tibi sit propitius et confirmet fidem tuam. Amen.

27] Interroget etiam confidentem:

Num meam remissionem credis esse Dei remissionem?

[Responsio.

Ita, dilecte domine.]

Affirmanti et credenti porro dicat:

28] Fiat tibi, sicut credis. Et ego ex mandato Domini nostri Iesu Christi remitto tibi tua peccata in nomine Patris, Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen. Vade in pace!

29] Qui vero conscientias habent afflictas, tentatas, moestas, eos minister pluribus sententiis Scripturae facientibus ad fidei incrementum consolabitur. Haec, quam commemoravimus, tantum est puerilis et communis forma confessionis pro simplicioribus et rudioribus.

VI. SACRAMENTUM ALTARIS,

quomodo paterfamilias simplicissime
suam familiam de eo docere debeat.

1] Quid est sacramentum altaris?
2] Responsio.

Sacramentum altaris est verum corpus et verus sanguis Domini nostri Iesu Christi, sub pane et vino nobis Christianis ad manducandum ac bibendum ab ipso Christo institutum.

3] Ubi hoc scriptum est? [R. 381
Responsio.

4] Sic scribunt sancti Evangelistae, Matthaeus 26, 26, Marcus 14, 22, Lucas 22, 19, et Sanctus Paulus [1 Cor. 11, 23]:

Dominus noster Iesus Christus in ea nocte, qua traditus est, accepit panem et, postquam gratias egisset, fregit et dedit discipulis suis, dicens: Accipite, comedite. Hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis datur. Hoc facite in mei commemorationem.

Similiter et postquam coenavit, accepit calicem et, quum gratias egisset, dedit illis, and spoken evil of him, have overcharged and given false ware and short measure.

And whatever else he has done against God's command and his station, etc.

But if any one does not find himself burdened with such or greater sins, he should not trouble himself or search for or invent other sins, and thereby make confession a torture, but mention one or two that he knows. Thus: In particular I confess that I once cursed; again, I once used improper words, I have once neglected this or that, etc. Let this suffice.

But if you know of none at all (which, however, is scarcely possible), then mention none in particular, but receive the forgiveness upon the general confession which you make before God to the confessor.

Then shall the confessor say:

God be merciful to thee and strengthen thy faith! Amen.

Furthermore:

Dost thou believe that my forgiveness is God's forgiveness?

Answer.

Yes, dear sir.

Then let him say:

As thou believest, so be it done unto thee. And by the command of our Lord Jesus Christ I forgive thee thy sins, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. Depart in peace.

But those who have great burdens upon their consciences, or are distressed and tempted, the confessor will know how to comfort and to encourage to faith with more passages of Scripture. This is to be merely a general form of confession for the unlearned.

VI. THE SACRAMENT OF THE ALTAR, as the Head of a Family Should Teach It in a Simple Way to His Household.

What is the Sacrament of the Altar? — Answer.

It is the true body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, under the bread and wine, for us Christians to eat and to drink, instituted by Christ Himself.

Where is this written? — Answer.

The holy Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and St. Paul, write thus:

Our Lord Jesus Christ, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread: and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it to His disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is My body, which is given for you. This do in remembrance of Me.

After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, gave thanks, and gave sprach: Nehmet hin und trinket alle daraus! Dieser Kelch ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut, das für euch vergossen wird zur Vergebung der Sünden. Solches tut, sooft ihr's trinket, zu meinem Gedächtnis!

Was nützt denn solch Essen und Trinken?

Antwort.

Das zeigen uns diese Worte: „Für euch gegeben und vergossen zur Vergebung der Sünden“, nämlich daß uns im Sakrament Vergebung der Sünden, Leben und Seligkeit durch solche Worte gegeben wird; denn wo Vergebung der Sünden ist, da ist auch Leben und Seligkeit.

Wie kann leiblich Essen und Trinken solche große Dinge tun?

Antwort.

Essen und Trinken tut's freilich nicht, sondern die Worte, so da stehen: „Für euch gegeben und vergossen zur Vergebung der Sünden.“ Welche Worte sind neben dem leiblichen Essen und Trinken als das Hauptstück im Sakrament, und wer denselben Worten glaubt, der hat, was sie sagen und wie sie lauten, nämlich Vergebung der Sünden.

Wer empfängt denn solch Sakrament würdiglich?

Antwort.

Faßen und leiblich sich bereiten ist wohl eine feine äußerliche Zucht; aber der ist recht würdig und wohlgeschickt, wer den Glauben hat an diese Worte: „Für euch gegeben und vergossen zur Vergebung der Sünden.“

Wer aber diesen Worten nicht glaubt oder zweifelt, der ist unwürdig und ungeschickt; denn das Wort „Für euch“ fordert eitel gläubige Herzen.

dicens: Bibite ex hoc omnes. Hic calix novum testamentum est in meo sanguine, qui pro vobis effunditur in remissionem peccatorum. Hoc facite, quotiescunque biberitis, in mei commemorationem.

5) Quid vero prodest sic comedisse et bibisse?

6) Responsio.

Id indicant nobis haec verba: Pro vobis datur et effunditur in remissionem peccatorum, nempe quod nobis per verba illa in sacramento remissio peccatorum, vita, iustitia et salus donentur. Ubi enim remissio peccatorum est, ibi est et vita et salus.

7) Qui potest corporalis illa manducatio tantas res efficere?

8) Responsio.

Manducare et bibere ista certe non efficiunt, sed illa verba, quae hic ponuntur: Pro vobis datur et effunditur in remissionem peccatorum. Quae verba sunt una cum corporali manducatione caput et summa huius sacramenti. Et qui credit his verbis, ille habet, quod dicunt et sicut sonant, nempe remissionem peccatorum.

9) Quis utilis hoc sacramento dignus?

10) Responsio.

Ieiunare et corpus suum praeparare est quidem bona et externa disciplina. At ille est vere dignus ac probe paratus, qui habet fidem in haec verba: Pro vobis datur et effunditur in remissionem peccatorum.

Qui vero his verbis non credit aut de illis dubitat, ille est indignus ac imparatus, quia hoc verbum, Pro vobis, postulat omnino cor, quod Deo credat.

[Anhang I.]

Wie ein Hausvater

sein Gefinde soll lehren morgens und abends sich segnen.

Der Morgensegen.

Des Morgens, so du aus dem Bette fährst, sollst du dich segnen mit dem heiligen Kreuz und sagen:

Das wolle Gott Vater, Sohn und heiliger Geist! Amen.

Darauf kniend oder stehend den Glauben und Vaterunser. Willst du, so magst du dies Gebetlein dazusprechen:

Ich danke dir, mein himmlischer Vater, durch Jesum Christum, deinen lieben Sohn, daß du mich diese Nacht vor allem Schaden und [Ge-]fahr behütet hast, und bitte dich, du wollest mich diesen Tag auch behüten vor Sünden und allem Übel, daß dir alle mein Tun und Leben gefalle. Denn ich befehle mich, meinen Leib und Seele, und alles in deine Hände. Dein heiliger Engel sei mit mir, daß der böse Feind keine Macht an mir finde! Amen.

Und alsdann mit Freuden an dein Werk gegangen und etwa ein Lied gesungen, als die zehn Gebote, oder was deine Andacht gibt.

[Appendix I.]

QUO FACTO PATRESFAMILIAS

suam familiam formas benedictionis, unam mane, alteram vespri dicendam, simplicissime docere debeant.

[Benedictio Mane Dicenda.]

1) Mane cum surgis e lecto, signabis te signo sanctae crucis, dicens:

In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen.

2) Deinde innitens genibus vel stans dicas Symbolum et Orationem Dominicam. His potes et hanc precatiunculam addere:

Gratias ago tibi, mi Pater coelestis, per Iesum Christum, Filium tuum dilectum, quod me hac nocte ab omnibus incommodis [R. 383] ac periculis conservatum custodieris. Et oro te, ut me hac die quoque conservare et a peccato et omnibus malis custodire velis, ut tibi omnia mea facta atque adeo tota vita bene placeant. Quia ego me meumque corpus et animam ac omnia in manus tuas commendo. Tuus sanctus angelus sit mecum, ne diabolus quidquam in me possit. Amen.

3) Postea alacriter ad vocationis tuae operas accedendum est, cantato psalmo, Decalogo vel alio carmine, quo excitetur cor tuum.

it to them, saying, Take, drink ye all of it. This cup is the new testament in My blood, which is shed for you for the remission of sins. This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me.

What is the benefit of such eating and drinking?
Answer.

That is shown us in these words: Given, and shed for you, for the remission of sins; namely, that in the Sacrament forgiveness of sins, life, and salvation are given us through these words. For where there is forgiveness of sins, there is also life and salvation.

How can bodily eating and drinking do such great things? — Answer.

It is not the eating and drinking, indeed, that does them, but the words which stand here, namely: Given, and shed for you, for the remission of sins. Which words are, beside the bodily eating and drinking, as the chief thing in the Sacrament; and he that believes these words has what they say and express, namely, the forgiveness of sins.

Who, then, receives such Sacrament worthily?
Answer.

Fasting and bodily preparation is, indeed, a fine outward training; but he is truly worthy and well prepared who has faith in these words: Given, and shed for you, for the remission of sins.

But he that does not believe these words, or doubts, is unworthy and unfit; for the words For you require altogether believing hearts.

[Appendix I.]

HOW THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY Should Teach His Household to Bless Themselves in the Morning and in the Evening.

Morning Prayer.

In the morning, when you rise, you shall bless yourself with the holy cross and say:

In the name of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Amen.

Then, kneeling or standing, repeat the Creed and the Lord's Prayer. If you choose, you may, in addition, say this little prayer:

I thank Thee, my Heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ, Thy dear Son, that Thou hast kept me this night from all harm and danger; and I pray Thee to keep me this day also from sin and all evil, that all my doings and life may please Thee. For into Thy hands I commend myself, my body and soul, and all things. Let Thy holy angel be with me, that the Wicked Foe may have no power over me. Amen.

Then go to your work with joy, singing a hymn, as the Ten Commandments, or what your devotion may suggest.

Der Abendsegen.

Des Abends, wenn du zu Bette gehst, sollst du dich segnen mit dem heiligen Kreuz und sagen: Das wolle Gott Vater, Sohn und Heiliger Geist! Amen.

Darauf kniend oder stehend den Glauben und Vaterunser. Willst du, so magst du dies Gebetslein dazusprechen:

Ich danke dir, mein himmlischer Vater, durch Jesum Christum, deinen lieben Sohn, daß du mich diesen Tag gnädiglich behütet hast; und bitte dich, du wollest mir vergeben alle meine Sünden, wo ich unrecht getan habe, und mich diese Nacht gnädiglich behüten; denn ich befehle mich, meinen Leib und Seele, und alles in deine Hände. Dein heiliger Engel sei mit mir, daß der böse Feind keine Macht an mir finde! Amen.

Und alsdann flugs und frühlich geschlafen.

Wie ein Haushater

sein Gefinde soll lehren das Benedicite und Gratias sprechen.

[Das Benedicite.]

Die Kinder und Gefinde sollen mit gefalteten Händen und züchtig vor den Tisch treten und sprechen:

Alle Augen warten auf dich, Herr, und du gibst ihnen ihre Speise zu seiner Zeit. Du tust deine milde Hand auf und sättigst alles, was lebt, mit Wohlgefallen.

Scholia [Scholion].

Wohlgefallen heißt, daß alle Tiere so viel zu essen kriegen, daß sie frühlich und guter Dinge darüber sind; denn Sorgen und Geiz hindern solch Wohlgefallen.

Danach das Vaterunser und dies folgende Gebet:

Herr Gott, himmlischer Vater, segne uns und diese deine Gaben, die wir von deiner milden Güte zu uns nehmen, durch Jesum Christum, unsern Herrn. Amen.

Das Gratias.

Also auch nach dem Essen sollen sie gleicherweise tun, züchtig und mit gefalteten Händen sprechen:

Danket dem Herrn, denn er ist freundlich, und seine Güte währet ewiglich; der allem Fleische Speise gibt, der dem Vieh sein Futter gibt, den jungen Raben, die ihn anrufen. Er hat nicht Lust an der Stärke des Rosses noch Gefallen an jemandes Weinen; der Herr hat Gefallen an denen, die ihn fürchten, und die auf seine Güte warten.

Danach das Vaterunser und dies folgende Gebet:

Wir danken dir, Herr Gott Vater, durch Jesum Christum, unsern Herrn, für alle deine Wohlthat, der du lebst und regierest in Ewigkeit! Amen.

[Benedictio Vesperti Dicenda.]

4) Similiter vesperti, quum confers te cubitum, signabis te signo sanctae crucis, dicens: In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Amen.

5) Deinde flexis genibus vel stans dicas Symbolum et Orationem Dominicam. His potes et hanc precationunculam addere:

Gratias ago tibi, mi Pater coelestis, per Iesum Christum, Filium tuum dilectum, quod me hac die gratuita misericordia et bonitate tua custodieris. Et oro te, ut mihi omnia peccata mea, quae perpetravi et quibus offendi te, remittere et me hac nocte tua gratia benigne conservare velis. Quia ego me meumque corpus et animam ac omnia in manus tuas commendo. Tuus sanctus angelus sit mecum, ne diabolus quidquam in me possit. Amen.

Atque ita tandem placide et tranquille dormiendum est.

[R. 384]

6) QUO PACTO PATRESFAMILIAS

suam familiam benedictionem mensae et gratiarum actionem simplicissime docere debeant.

7) Benedictio Mensae.

Pueri una cum familia debent complicatis manibus, modestiam prae se ferentes, ad mensam accedere et sic orare:

Oculi omnium in te sperant, Domine, et tu das escam illorum in tempore opportuno. Aperis tu manum tuam et imple omne animal benedictione.

8) Scholion.

Benedictio hic significat largam distributionem Dei, qui omnibus animantibus tantum cibi suppeditat, ut inde hilariter et iucunde vivere possint. Hanc benedictionem et laetitiam ac acquiescentiam impediunt sollicitudo prohibita, cura, avaritia, tenacitas.

9) Deinde addant Orationem Dominicam cum oratione sequenti:

Domine Deus, Pater coelestis, benedic nobis et his donis tuis, quae de tua largitate sumimus, per Iesum Christum, Dominum nostrum. Amen.

10) Gratiarum Actio.

Sic quoque post cibum sumptum ad eundem modum modeste complicatis manibus ad mensam assistant et dicant:

Confitemini Domino, quoniam bonus, [R. 385] quoniam in aeternum misericordia eius, qui dat escam omni carni, qui dat iumentis escam ipsorum et pullis corvorum invocantibus eum. Non in fortitudine equi voluntatem habebit, neque in tibiis viri beneplacitum erit ei. Beneplacitum est Domino super timentes eum et in eis, qui sperant super misericordia eius.

11) Deinde addant Orationem Dominicam cum oratione sequenti:

Gratias agimus tibi, Domine Deus Pater, per Iesum Christum, Dominum nostrum, pro universis beneficiis tuis, qui vivis et regnas in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

Evening Prayer.

In the evening, when you go to bed, you shall bless yourself with the holy cross and say:

In the name of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Amen.

Then, kneeling or standing, repeat the Creed and the Lord's Prayer. If you choose, you may, in addition, say this little prayer:

I thank Thee, my Heavenly Father, through Jesus Christ, Thy dear Son, that Thou hast graciously kept me this day, and I pray Thee to forgive me all my sins, where I have done wrong, and graciously keep me this night. For into Thy hands I commend myself, my body and soul, and all things. Let Thy holy angel be with me, that the Wicked Foe may have no power over me. Amen.

Then go to sleep promptly and cheerfully.

HOW THE HEAD OF THE FAMILY

Should Teach His Household to Ask a Blessing and Return Thanks.

[Asking a Blessing.]

The children and servants shall go to the table with folded hands and reverently, and say:

The eyes of all wait upon Thee, O Lord; and Thou givest them their meat in due season; Thou openest Thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.

Note.

To satisfy the desire means that all animals receive so much to eat that they are on this account joyful and of good cheer; for care and avarice hinder such satisfaction.

Then the Lord's Prayer, and the prayer here following:

Lord God, Heavenly Father, bless us and these Thy gifts, which we take from Thy bountiful goodness, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Returning Thanks.

Likewise also after the meal they shall reverently and with folded hands say:

O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good; for His mercy endureth forever. He giveth food to all flesh; He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which cry. He delighteth not in the strength of the horse; He taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man. The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear Him, in those that hope in His mercy.

Then the Lord's Prayer and the prayer here following:

We thank Thee, Lord God, Father, through Jesus Christ, our Lord, for all Thy benefits, who livest and reignest forever and ever. Amen.

[Anhang II.]

[Appendix II.]

Die Wandtafel

etlicher Sprüche für allerlei heilige Orden und Stände, dadurch dieselben, als durch eigene Lektion, ihres Amtes und Dienstes zu vermahnen.

Den Bischöfen, Pfarrherren und Predigern.

„Ein Bischof soll unsträflich sein, ein es Weises Mann, nüchtern, sittig, mäßig, gastfrei, lehrhaftig, nicht ein Weinsäufer, nicht heissig, nicht unehrliche Hantierung treiben; sondern gelinde, nicht haberdastig, nicht geizig, der seinem eigenen Hause wohl vorstehe, der gehorsame Kinder habe, mit aller Ehrbarkeit, nicht ein Neuling; der ob dem Wort halte, das gewiß ist und lehren kann, auf daß er mächtig sei, zu ermahnen durch die heilsame Lehre und zu strafen die Widersprecher.“ In der 1. Epistel zu Timotheus am 3. Kapitel.

Quid Debeant Auditores Episcopis Suis.

3) Dominus ordinavit his, qui evangelium annuntiant, de evangelio vivere, 1 Cor. 9, 14. Communicet doctori in omnibus bonis is, qui docetur Verbo, Gal. 6, 6. Qui bene praesunt presbyteri, duplici honore digni habeantur, maxime qui laborant in Verbo et doctrina. Dicit enim Scriptura: Non obligabis os bovi trituranti. Et: Dignus est operarius mercede sua [1 Tim. 5, 17. 18]. Obedite praepositis vestris et cedite eis. Ipsi enim vigilant, quasi rationem pro animabus vestris reddituri, ut cum gaudio hoc faciant, et non gementes; hoc enim non expedit vobis [Ehr. 13, 17].

Von weltlicher Obrigkeit.

„Jedermann sei untertan der Obrigkeit; denn die Obrigkeit, so allenthalben ist, ist von Gott geordnet. Wer aber der Obrigkeit widerstrebt, der widerstrebt Gottes Ordnung; wer aber widerstrebt, wird sein Urteil empfangen; denn sie trägt das Schwert nicht umsonst, sie ist Gottes Dienerin, eine Rächerin zur Strafe über die, so Böses tun.“ Zu den Römern am 13. Kapitel.

Quid Subditi Magistratibus Debeant.

5) Reddite, quae sunt Caesaris, Caesari, Matth. 22, 21. Omnis anima potestatibus sublimioribus subdita sit etc. Ideoque necessitate subditi estote, non solum propter iram, sed [R. 387] etiam propter conscientiam. Ideo enim et tributa praestatis. Ministri enim Dei sunt, in hoc ipsum servientes. Reddite ergo omnibus debita: cui tributum, tributum; cui vectigal, vectigal; cui timorem, timorem; cui honorem, honorem, Rom. 13, 1. 5 sqq. Adhortor primum omnium fieri obsecrationes, orationes, interpellationes, gratiarum actiones pro omnibus hominibus, pro regibus et omnibus, qui in sublimitate constituti sunt, ut quietam et tranquillam vitam agamus cum omni pietate et gravitate, 1 Tim. 2, 1 sqq. Admone illos principibus et potestatibus subditos esse etc., Tit. 3, 1. Subditi estote omni humanae creaturae propter Dominum, sive regi tamquam praecellenti, sive ducibus tamquam ab eo missis etc., 1 Petr. 2, 13 sq.

Den Chemännern.

„Ihr Männer, wohnet bei euren Weibern mit Vernunft und gebet dem weiblichen [weiblichen] als dem schwächsten Werkzeug seine Ehre, als Rittern der Gnade des Lebens, auf daß euer Gebet nicht verhindert werde.“ In der ersten [Epistel] Petri am 3. Kapitel. „Und seid nicht bitter gegen sie.“ Zu den Kolossern am 3. Kapitel.

1) TABULA OECONOMICA, in qua proponuntur elegantes quaedam ex Sacra Scriptura sententiae, pro omnibus sanctis ordinibus ac statibus, per quas illi, tamquam propria quadam lectione, sui officii et muneris admonentur.

Episcopis, Parochis et Concionatoribus.

2) Oportet episcopum irreprehensibilem esse, unius uxoris maritum, vigilantem, sobrium, modestum, hospitalem, aptum ad docendum, non vinolentum, non percussorem, non turpis lucri cupidum, sed aequum, alienum [R. 386] a pugnis, alienum ab avaritia, qui suae domui bene praesit, qui liberos habeat in subiectione cum omni reverentia, non novitium, tenacem fidelis sermonis, qui secundum doctrinam est, ut potens sit exhortari doctrina sana, et eos, qui contradicunt, arguere etc. 1. ad Tim. 3, 2 sqq. et ad Titum 1, 6 sqq.

De Magistratibus.

4) Omnis anima potestatibus supereminentibus subdita sit. Non enim est potestas nisi a Deo. Quae vero sunt potestates, a Deo ordinatae sunt. Itaque quisquis resistit potestati, Dei ordinationi resistit. Qui autem restiterint, sibi ipsis iudicium accipient. Non enim frustra gladium gestat, nam Dei minister est, ultor ad iram ei, qui, quod malum est, fecerit. Rom. 13, 1 sqq.

Maritis.

6) Viri cohabitent cum uxoribus secundum scientiam, veluti infirmiori vasi muliebri impertientes honorem, tamquam etiam coheredibus gratiae vitae, ne interrumpantur preces vestrae. 1 Petr. 3, 7. Viri, diligite uxores et ne sitis amarulenti adversus illas. Col. 3, 19.

[Appendix II.]

TABLE OF DUTIES,

Consisting of Certain Passages of Scripture for Various Holy Orders and Stations, Whereby These are to be Admonished, as by a Special Lesson, Regarding Their Office and Service.

For Bishops, Pastors, and Preachers.

A bishop must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; not a novice; holding fast the faithful Word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers. 1 Tim. 3, 2 ff.; Titus 1, 6.

[What the Hearers Owe to Their Pastors.

Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel. 1 Cor. 9, 14. Let him that is taught in the Word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things. Gal. 6, 6. Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the Word and doctrine. For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn; and the laborer is worthy of his reward. 1 Tim. 5, 17, 18. Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves; for they watch for your souls as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy and not with grief; for that is unprofitable for you. Heb. 13, 17.]

Concerning Civil Government.

Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For the power which exists anywhere is ordained of God. Whosoever resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For he beareth not the sword in vain; for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Rom. 13, 1—4.

[What Subjects Owe to the Magistrates.

Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's. Matt. 22, 21. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers, etc. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience' sake. For, for this cause pay ye tribute also; for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom, to whom custom; fear, to whom fear; honor, to whom honor. Rom. 13, 1, 5 ff. I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men, for kings and for all that are in authority, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty. 1 Tim. 2, 1 f. Put them in mind to be subject to principalities and powers, etc. Titus 3, 1. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king as supreme, or unto governors as unto them that are sent by him, etc. 1 Pet. 2, 13 f.]

Concordia Triglotta.

For Husbands.

Ye husbands, dwell with your wives according to knowledge, giving honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not hindered. 1 Pet. 3, 7. And be not bitter against them. Col. 3, 9.

Den Eheweibern.

„Die Weiber seien untertan ihren Männern als dem Herrn, wie Sara Abraham gehorsam war und hieß ihn Herr, welcher Väter ihr worden seid, so ihr wohl tut und nicht so schüchtern seid.“ In der ersten [Epistel] Petri am 3. Kapitel.

Den Eltern.

„Ihr Väter, reizet eure Kinder nicht zu Zorn, daß sie nicht scheu werden, sondern ziehet sie auf in der Zucht und Ermahnung zu dem Herrn.“ Zu den Ephesern am 6. Kapitel.

Den Kindern.

„Ihr Kinder, seid gehorsam euren Eltern in dem Herrn, denn dies ist billig. Euer Vater und Mutter, das ist das erste Gebot, das Verheißung hat, nämlich: daß dir's wohl gehe, und [du] lange lebest auf Erden.“ Zu den Ephesern am 6.

Den Knechten, Mägden, Tagelöhnern und Arbeitern.

„Ihr Knechte, seid gehorsam euren leiblichen Herren mit Furcht und Zittern, in Einfältigkeit eures Herzens, als Christo selbst, nicht mit Dienst [allein] vor Augen, als [den] Menschen zu gefallen, sondern als die Knechte Christi, daß ihr solchen Willen Gottes tut von Herzen, mit gutem Willen. Laßt euch blenden, daß ihr dem Herrn und nicht den Menschen dienet, und wißt, was ein jeglicher Gutes tut, daß wird er empfangen, er sei Knecht oder frei.“

Den Hausherrn und Hausfrauen.

„Ihr Herren, tut auch daselbige gegen ihnen [gegen sie] und laßt euer Dräuen und wißt, daß ihr auch einen Herrn im Himmel habt, und ist bei ihm kein Ansehen der Person.“ Eph. 6.

Der gemeinen Jugend.

„Ihr Jungen, seid den Alten untertan und beweiset darin die Demut. Denn Gott widersteht den Hoffärtigen, aber den Demüthigen gibt er Gnade. So demüthiget euch nun unter die gewaltige Hand Gottes, daß er euch erhöhe zu seiner Zeit.“ 1 Petr. am 5. Kapitel.

Den Witwen.

„Welche eine rechte Witwe und einsam ist, die stellet ihre Hoffnung auf Gott und bleibet am Gebet Tag und Nacht. Welche aber in Wollüsten lebet, die ist lebendig tot.“ 1 Tim. am 5. Kapitel.

Der Gemeinde.

„Liebe deinen Nächsten als dich selbst; in dem Wort sind alle Gebote verfaßt.“ Zu den Römern am 13. Kapitel. „Und haltet an mit Beten für alle Menschen!“ In der 1. [Epistel an] Timotheus am 2. Kapitel.

15) Ein jeder lern' sein' Lektion,
So wird es wohl im Hause stohn.

16) Cuique sit imprimis magnae sua lectio curae,
Ut domus officiis stet decorata suis.

17) Πᾶς ἰδίην ἀνάγνωσιν ἧς προαίθεσιν ἀποθήσας,
Οἶκον ἔχει πυκνῶν εὐπορέοντα καλῶν.

Uxoribus.

7) Similiter, uxores, subditae sitis vestris viris tamquam Domino, quemadmodum Sara obedivit Abrahae, dominum illum appellans, cuius factae estis filiae, dum benefacitis, et non terimini ullo pavore. 1 Petr. 3, 6. Eph. 5, 22.

Parentibus.

8) Parentes, ne provocetis ad iram liberos vestros, sed educetis eos per eruditionem et correptionem Domini. Eph. 6, 4.

Liberis.

9) Filii, obedite parentibus vestris in [R. 388] Domino, nam id est iustum. Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, quod est praeceptum primum in promissione, ut bene tibi sit, et sis longaevus in terra. Eph. 6, 1 sq.

Servis, Ancillis, Mercenariis et Ceteris ad Laborem Conductis.

10) Servi, obedite iis, qui domini sunt secundum carnem, cum timore ac tremore, cum simplicitate cordis vestri, tamquam Christo, non ad oculum servientes, veluti hominibus placere studentes, sed tamquam servi Christi, facientes, quae vult Deus, ex animo cum benevolentia, servientes Domino et non hominibus, illud scientes, quod unusquisque, quod fecerit bonum, hoc reportaturus sit a Deo, sive servus fuerit sive liber. Eph. 6, 5 sqq. Col. 3, 22.

Patribusfamilias et Matribusfamilias.

11) Et vos, domini, eadem facite erga illos, remittentes minas, scientes, quod et vester ipsorum Dominus sit in coelis, nec personae respectus sit apud illum. Eph. 6, 9. Col. 4, 1.

Communi Iuventuti.

12) Similiter, iuniores, subditi estote senioribus, sic, ut omnes alii alii vicissim subiiciamini. Humilitatem animi vobis infixam habete, propterea quia Deus superbis resistit, humilibus autem dat gratiam. Humiliamini igitur sub potenti manu Dei, ut vos exaltet tempore opportuno. 1 Petr. 5, 5 sqq.

Viduis.

[R. 389]

13) Quae vere vidua est ac desolata, speret in Deo et perseveret in obsecrationibus ac precationibus noctu dieque. Quae vero in deliciis vivit, ea vivens mortua est. 1 Tim. 5, 5.

Omnibus in Commune.

14) Dilige proximum tuum sicut te ipsum. In hoc sermone omnia praecepta summatim comprehenduntur. Rom. 13, 8 sqq. Et ante omnia fiant deprecationes, obsecrationes, interpellationes, gratiarum actiones pro omnibus hominibus etc. 1 Tim. 2, 1 sq.

For Wives.

Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord, even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord; whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement. 1 Pet. 3, 6; Eph. 5, 22.

For Parents.

Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Eph. 6, 4.

For Children.

Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Honor thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise: that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth. Eph. 6, 1—3.

For Male and Female Servants, Hired Men, and Laborers.

Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ; not with eye-service, as men-pleasers, but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart; with good will doing service as to the Lord, and not to men; knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, whether he be bond or free. Eph. 6, 5 ff.; Col. 3, 22.

For Masters and Mistresses.

Ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening, knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with Him. Eph. 6, 9; Col. 4, 1.

For Young Persons in General.

Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility; for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God that He may exalt you in due time. 1 Pet. 5, 5. 6.

For Widows.

She that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and continueth in supplications and prayers night and day. But she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth. 1 Tim. 5, 5. 6.

For All in Common.

Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Herein are comprehended all the commandments. Rom. 13, 8 ff. And persevere in prayer for all men. 1 Tim. 2, 1. 2.

Let each his lesson learn with care,
And all the household well shall fare.

VI.

Der Große Katechismus,

Deutsch.

D. Martin Luther.

CATECHISMUS MAIOR

D. Martini Lutheri.

THE LARGE CATECHISM,

German.

D. Martin Luther.

Eine christliche, heilsame und nötige Vorrede und treue, ernstliche Vermahnung D. Martin Luthers an alle Christen, sonderlich aber an alle Pfarrherren und Prediger, daß sie sich täglich im Katechismo, so der ganzen Heiligen Schrift eine kurze Summa und Auszug ist, wohl üben und den immer treiben sollen usw.

Daß wir den Katechismus so fast treiben und zu treiben beide begehren und bitten, haben wir nicht geringe Ursachen, diemeil wir sehen, daß leider viele Pfarrherren und Prediger hierin sehr säumig sind und verachten beide ihr Amt und diese Lehre, etliche aus großer, hoher Kunst, etliche aber aus lauter Faulheit und Bauchsorge, welche stellen sich nicht anders zur Sache, denn als wären sie um ihres Bauchs willen Pfarrherren oder Prediger und müßten nichts tun [brauchten nichts zu tun], denn der Güter gebrauchen, weil [solange] sie leben, wie sie unter dem Papsttum gewohnt [waren].

Und wiewohl sie alles, was sie lehren und predigen sollen, jetzt so reichlich, klar und leicht vor sich haben in so viel heilsamen Büchern und, wie sie es vorgezeiten hießen, die rechten Sermones per se loquentes, Dormi secure, Paratos et Thesauros, noch [dennoch] sind sie nicht so fromm und redlich, daß sie solche Bücher kauften, oder, wenn sie dieselben gleich haben, dennoch nicht ansehen noch lesen. Ach! das sind zumal schändliche Freßlinge und Bauchdiener, die billiger Sauhirten und Hundesknechte sein sollten denn Seel[en]wärter und Pfarrherren.

Und daß sie doch so viel täten, weil sie des unnützen, schweren Geschwäzes der sieben Gezeiten [sieben Zeiten, kanonischen Stunden (Horen): Mette, Prim, Terz, Sext, Non, Vesper, Complet] nun los sind, an derselben Statt morgens, mittags und abends etwa ein Blatt oder zwei aus dem Katechismo, Betbüchlein, Neuen Testament oder sonst aus der Biblia läsen und ein Vaterunser für sich und ihre Pfarrkinder beteten, auf daß sie doch dem Evangelio wiederum eine Ehre und Dank erzeigten, durch welches sie denn von so mancherlei Last und Beschwerden erlebigt sind, und sich schämten ein wenig, daß sie, gleichwie die Säue und Hunde, nicht mehr vom Evangelio behielten denn solche faule, schändliche, schändliche, fleischliche Freiheit. Denn der Pöbel leider ohne das allzu geringe achtet des Evangelii, und wir nichts Sonderliches ausrichten, wenn wir gleich allen Fleiß vorwenden: was sollt's denn tun, wenn wir lässig und faul sein wollen, wie wir unter dem Papsttum gewesen sind?

Über das schlägt mit zu das schändliche Laster und heimlich böse Geschmeiß [Seuche] der Sicherheit und Überdruß, daß viele meinen, der Katechismus sei eine schlechte, geringe Lehre, welche sie mit einem Mal überlesen und dann alsbald können, das Buch in [den] Winkel werfen und gleich sich schämen, mehr drin zu lesen.

Pia, utilis et necessaria praefatio et fidelis ac seria cohortatio D. Martini Lutheri, (R. 390) scripta ad omnes pios, imprimis ad pastores et concionatores, ut quotidie se et alios in Catechismo tamquam in summa et ἐπιτομῇ totius Sacrae Scripturae diligenter exerceant et illum fideliter et assidue ecclesiae proponant etc.

1) Quod in concionibus non ipsi solum Catechismus urgemus, sed alios etiam, ut idem faciant, rogamus obtestamurque, non contemnendas sane causas habemus, maxime quum videamus et concionatores et parochos ipsos hic ut plurimum cessare, contemnentes et officium suum et doctrinam ipsam idque inde adeo, quod quidam illorum nimis alta, ut sibi quidem videntur, sapiunt, quidam etiam ipsa socordia ventrisque cura nihil prius habent, non aliter erga hoc negotium affecti, quam si ventris solummodo causa parochi et praecones Verbi constituentur, nec alia re occupatos esse conveniat, quam ut strenue prodigant consumantque, dum vivunt, omnia, perinde ut sub papatu consuevere.

2) Ac tametsi omnia, quae doceri atque praedicari debeant, hoc tempore abunde illis suppetant dilucideque ob oculos posita sint, tot praeclaris ac salutaribus ad hoc editis libris, quumque, ut olim nominare consueverunt, ita nunc re ipsa Sermones per se (R. 391) loquentes, Dormi secure, Paratos et Thesauros habeant: ita tamen sive inertes sive etiam perversi quidam sunt, ut haec scripta nec emere dignentur, nec si empta habeant, intueri saltem ac legere velint. Bone Deus, quam noxium detestandumque hoc hominum genus est, ventris gulaeque mancipia, quos rectius porcis aut canibus quam fidelium animabus praefeceris.

3) Ac optandum quidem foret, ut, cum inutilis laboriosaeque demurmurationes precularum canonicarum, ut vocantur, desierint, harum loco mane, meridie ac vespere aliquot saltem paginas vel in Catechismo vel in Praecationibus vel in Novo Testamento evolverent, aut denique aliud quidpiam ex Bibliis Sacris sibi sumerent, Orationemque Dominicam aliquando ad Deum Patrem et sua et gregis sui causa perorarent, quo tandem videlicet evangelio, cuius beneficio tot oneribus ac molestiis liberati sunt, vel aliquam rependant gratiam suppudeatque eos, quod instar canum ac suum non aliud ex evangelio addidicerint quam desidiosam, noxiam ac detestandam hanc carnaliam licentiam. Nam cum vulgus aliqui nimis frigide erga evangelium affectum sit, et nos etiam, cum omnia summa conamur, aut nihil aut parum efficiamus, quanto minus praecleari aliquid sperandum erit, si, quemadmodum sub papatu fuimus, ita nunc quoque desides ac negligentes esse coeperimus.

4) His accedit noxium atque pestiferum illud malum securitatis et satietatis, quod multorum animis iampridem latenter obrepit eosque ita inficit, ut sancte deierent nihil esse facilius ipsa Catechismi doctrina, adeo etiam, ut cum unica lectione illum percurrerint, statim velut ad summum provecti atque edocti librum ipsum in angulum aliquem abiiciant pudeatque eos quodammodo in manus sumere denuo.

A Christian, Profitable, and Necessary Preface, and Faithful, Earnest Exhortation of Dr. Martin Luther to All Christians, but Especially to All Pastors and Preachers, that They Should Daily Exercise Themselves in the Catechism, which is a Short Summary and Epitome of the Entire Holy Scriptures, and that They May Always Teach the Same.

We have no slight reasons for treating the Catechism so constantly [in sermons] and for both desiring and beseeching others to teach it, since we see to our sorrow that many pastors and preachers are very negligent in this, and slight both their office and this teaching; some from great and high art [giving their mind, as they imagine, to much higher matters], but others from sheer laziness and care for their paunches, assuming no other relation to this business than if they were pastors and preachers for their bellies' sake, and had nothing to do but to [spend and] consume their emoluments as long as they live, as they have been accustomed to do under the Papacy.

And although they have now everything that they are to preach and teach placed before them so abundantly, clearly, and easily, in so many [excellent and] helpful books, and the true Sermones per se loquentes, Dormi secure, Paratos et Thesauros, as they were called in former times; yet they are not so godly and honest as to buy these books, or even when they have them, to look at them or read them. Alas! they are altogether shameful gluttons and servants of their own bellies who ought to be more properly swineherds and dog-tenders than care-takers of souls and pastors.

And now that they are delivered from the unprofitable and burdensome babbling of the Seven Canonical Hours, oh, that, instead thereof, they would only, morning, noon, and evening, read a page or two in the Catechism, the Prayer-book, the New Testament, or elsewhere in the Bible, and pray the Lord's Prayer for themselves and their parishioners, so that they might render, in return, honor and thanks to the Gospel, by which they have been delivered from burdens and troubles so manifold, and might feel a little shame because like pigs and dogs they retain no more of the Gospel than such a lazy, pernicious, shameful, carnal liberty! For, alas! as it is, the common people regard the Gospel altogether too lightly, and we accomplish nothing extraordinary even though we use all diligence. What, then, will be achieved if we shall be negligent and lazy as we were under the Papacy?

To this there is added the shameful vice and secret infection of security and satiety, that is, that many regard the Catechism as a poor, mean teaching, which they can read through at one time, and then immediately know it, throw the book into a corner, and be ashamed, as it were, to read in it again.

Ja man findet wohl etliche Rülze [Bengel] und Fiße [Geißhölle], auch unter dem Adel, die vorgeben, man [be]dürfe hinfort weder Pfarrherren noch Prediger, man hab's in Büchern und könne es von ihm selber wohl lernen, und lassen auch die Pfarren getrost fallen und verwüsten, dazu beide Pfarrherren und Prediger weiblich Rot und Hunger leiden, wie sich denn gebührt zu tun den tolln Deutschen; denn wir Deutschen haben solch schändlich Völk und müssen's leiden.

Das sage ich aber für mich: Ich bin auch ein Doktor und Prediger, ja, so gelehrt und erfahren, als die alle sein mögen, die solche Vermessenheit und Eisertheit haben; noch tue ich wie ein Kind, das man den Catechismus lehrt, und lese und spreche auch von Wort zu Wort des Morgens, und wenn ich Zeit habe, die zehn Gebote, Glauben, das Vaterunser, Psalmen usw.; und muß noch täglich dazu lernen und studieren und kann dennoch nicht bestehen, wie ich gern wollte, und muß ein Kind und Schüler des Catechismi bleiben, und bleib's auch gerne. Und diese zarten, eßeln [dünnleibhaften] Gesellen wollen mit einem überlesenen flugs Doktor über alle Doktor sein, alles können und nichts mehr bedürfen. Wohlan, solches ist auch ein gewiß Anzeichen, daß sie beide, ihr Amt und des Volks Seelen, ja dazu Gott und sein Wort verachten und dürfen nicht [brauchen nicht zu] fallen, sondern sind schon allzu greulich gefallen, [be]dürften wohl, daß sie Kinder würden und das Abc anfangen zu lernen, daß sie meinen längt an den Schuhen zerrißen [zu] haben.

prorsus nec sui officii nec salutis populi rationem habeant, sed contemnunt et Deum pariter et Verbum ipsius. Nec est quod ruinam ultra metuant, cum iam horrendissimum casum fecerint, quin potius opus illis sit denuo repuerascere ac discere prima literarum elementa, quae aliqui etiam ipsis calceis (ut dicitur) sibi protrita esse existimant.

Derhalben bitte ich solche faule Wänste oder vermessene Heilige, sie wollten sich um Gottes willen bereden lassen und glauben, daß sie wahrlich, wahrlich nicht so gelehrt und so hohe Doctores sind, als sie sich lassen dünken, und nimmermehr gedenken, daß sie dieses Stüd ausgelehrt haben oder allerdinge genug wissen, ob sie es gleich dünkt, daß sie es allzu wohl können. Denn ob sie es gleich allerdings aufs allerbeste mühten und könnten (das doch nicht möglich ist in diesem Leben), so ist doch mancherlei Nuß und Frucht dahinten, so man's täglich liest und übt mit Gedanken und Reden, nämlich, daß der Heilige Geist bei solchem Lesen, Reden und Gedenken gegenwärtig ist und immer neu und mehr Licht und Andacht dazu gibt, daß es immerdar besser und besser schmeckt und eingeht; wie Christus auch verheißt Matth. 18: „Wo zwei oder drei in meinem Namen versammelt sind, da bin ich in ihrem Mittel“ [in ihrer Mitte].

Dazu hilft's aus der Maßen gewaltiglich wider den Teufel, Welt, Fleisch und alle bösen Gedanken, so man mit Gottes Wort umgeht, davon redet und dichtet, daß auch der erste Psalm selig preißt die, so Tag und Nacht vom Geheze Gottes handeln. Ohne Zweifel wirkt du seinen Weibrauch oder ander Geräusch starker wider den Teufel anrichten, 6] Imo, quod indignius est, reperiuntur hodie etiam ex nobilibus quidam adeo [R. 392] ignobilis animi, ut affirmare ausint nihil opus esse amplius sive parochis sive concionatoribus, sed sufficere libros, ex quibus eadem haec discere quilibet per se ac nullo tradente queat. Unde et ipsas parochias strenue ac fortiter collabi ac desolari patiuntur, parochos autem et concionatores tantum non fame interire sinunt, perinde ut decet stolidos ac insanos Germanos. Talem etenim populum Germani et habemus et tolerare cogimur.

7] Ego vero, ut de me ipso dicam scilicet, tametsi doctor ac praedicator sum, non minori, ut opinor, cum doctrina tum experientia praeditus quam ii, qui tanta de se praesumunt et ad tantam securitatem pervenerunt: haudquaquam tamen imitari me pueros pudet, sed quemadmodum illos Catechismum docemus, ita et ego mane aut quandocunque vacui aliquid temporis datur, ipsam Orationem Dominicam, decem praecepta, articulos fidei, psalmos aliquot etc. mecum ipse quasi ad verbum recito. Et quamquam adhuc quotidie lectionibus et studiis vaco, attamen ne sic quidem possum pervenire, quo cupio, aut praestare, 8] quae volo. Ita fit, ut puerum ac discipulum Catechismi etiam hodie me profiteri necesse habeam, profiteorque libenter. At delicatuli fastidiosulique isti vel unica tantum lectione assequuntur, ut repente omnes ubique doctores post se relinquant sciantque omnia, nec ullius doctrina aut institutione opus amplius habeant. Imo vero hoc ipso veluti certissimo argumento ostendunt, quod nullam

9] Rogo itaque hos ignavos ventres ac praesumptuosos sanctos, ut vel propter Deum hoc sibi persuaderi patiantur se ad [R. 393] eam eruditionem haudquaquam pervenisse, quam ipsi sibi tribuunt, deinde ut nec unquam in animum inducant se Catechismi partes omnino omnes perdidicisse perspectasque habere, etiamsi notissimae ac meditativissimae ipsis videantur. Nam ut maxime demus, eos omnia quam optime et perfectissime tenere ac scire (quod tamen in hac vita propemodum impossibile fuerit), non tamen neque illud praetereundum, multiplicem usum ac fructum ex eo consequi, si eadem illa rudimenta quotidie legantur, meditandoque et loquendo exerceantur. Nimirum quod Spiritus Sanctus adsit huic lectioni, sermoni ac meditationi, qui subinde novos motus excitet ac maius lumen suppediet, ut quotidie magis magisque hac doctrina afficiamur, ac maius operae pretium in ea faciamus, sicuti et Christus ipse promittit apud Matthaeum, cap. 18, 20, cum inquit: Ubique duo aut tres congregati fuerint in nomine meo, ero in medio eorum.

10] Adhaec nihil est efficacius contra diabolum, carnem et omnes pravas cogitationes, quam si sedulo tractetur Verbum Dei, de eo sit sermo et meditatio nostra, adeo ut psalmus primus eos pronuntiet ber-tos, qui in lege Dei meditantur die ac nocte. Nec est, quod thus praestantius aut odoramentum aliquod effica-

Yea, even among the nobility there may be found some louts and scrimps, who declare that there is no longer any need either of pastors or preachers; that we have everything in books, and every one can easily learn it by himself; and so they are content to let the parishes decay and become desolate, and pastors and preachers to suffer distress and hunger a plenty, just as it becomes crazy Germans to do. For we Germans have such disgraceful people, and must endure them.

But for myself I say this: I am also a doctor and preacher, yea, as learned and experienced as all those may be who have such presumption and security; yet I do as a child who is being taught the Catechism, and every morning, and whenever I have time, I read and say, word for word, the Ten Commandments, the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Psalms, etc. And I must still read and study daily, and yet I cannot master it as I wish, but must remain a child and pupil of the Catechism, and am glad so to remain. And yet these delicate, fastidious fellows would with one reading promptly be doctors above all doctors, know everything and be in need of nothing. Well, this, too, is indeed a sure sign that they despise both their office and the souls of the people, yea, even God and His Word. They do not have to fall, they are already fallen all too horribly; they would need to become children, and begin to learn their alphabet, which they imagine that they have long since outgrown.

Therefore I beg such lazy paunches or presumptuous saints to be persuaded and believe for God's sake that they are verily, verily! not so learned or such great doctors as they imagine; and never to presume that they have finished learning this [the parts of the Catechism], or know it well enough in all points, even though they think that they know it ever so well. For though they should know and understand it perfectly (which, however, is impossible in this life), yet there are manifold benefits and fruits still to be obtained, if it be daily read and practised in thought and speech; namely, that the Holy Ghost is present in such reading and repetition and meditation, and bestows ever new and more light and devoutness, so that it is daily relished and appreciated better, as Christ promises, Matt. 18, 20: Where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them.

Besides, it is an exceedingly effectual help against the devil, the world, and the flesh and all evil thoughts to be occupied with the Word of God, and to speak of it, and meditate upon it, so that the First Psalm declares those blessed who meditate upon the Law of God day and night. Undoubtedly, you will not start a stronger incense or other fumigation denn so du mit Gottes Geboten und Worten umgehst, davon redest, singst oder denkst. Das ist freilich das rechte Weihwasser und Zeichen, davor er flucht [flieht] und damit er sich [ver]jagen läßt.

Nun solltest du doch ja allein um deswillen solche Stüde gern lesen, reden, denken und handeln, wenn du sonst keine andere Frucht und Ruh davon hättest, denn daß du den Teufel und böse Gedanken damit kannst verjagen. Denn er kann Gottes Wort nicht hören noch leiden, und Gottes Wort ist nicht wie ein ander, loses Geschwätz, wie von Dieterich von Bern usw., sondern, wie St. Paulus Röm. 1 sagt, „eine Kraft Gottes“. Ja freilich eine Kraft Gottes, die dem Teufel das gebrannte Leid antut und uns aus der Noth stärkt, tröstet und hilft.

Und was soll ich viel sagen? Wo ich allen Ruh und Frucht sollte erzählen, so Gottes Wort wirkt, wo wollte ich Papier und Zeit genug nehmen? Den Teufel heißt man Tausendkünstiger; wie will man aber Gottes Wort heißen, das solchen Tausendkünstiger mit aller seiner Kunst und Macht verjagt und zunichte macht? Es muß freilich mehr denn hundert Tausendkünstiger sein. Und wir sollten solche Macht, Ruh, Kraft und Frucht so leichtfertiglich verachten, sonderlich die wir Pfarrer und Prediger sein wollen? So sollte man uns doch nicht allein nicht zu freffen geben, sondern auch mit Hunden ausgehen [mit Hunden hegend vertreiben] und mit Zungen auswerfen [mit Pferdequitten beweisend vertreiben], weil wir des alles nicht allein täglich bedürfen wie des täglichen Brots, sondern auch täglich haben müssen wider das tägliche und unruhige Anfechten und Quern des tausendkünstigen Teufels.

non minus quam quotidiani panis opus habeamus, ac plane iisdem contra quotidianas ac irrequietas tentationes et insidias mille istius artium artificis carere non possumus.

Und ob solches nicht genug wäre zur Vermahnung, den Catechismus täglich zu lesen, so sollte doch uns allein genugsam zwingen Gottes Gebot, welcher Deut. 6 ernstlich gebet [gebietet], daß man soll sein Gebot sitzend, gehend, stehend, liegend, aufstehend immer bedenken und gleich als ein stetiges Mal und Zeichen vor Augen und in Händen haben. Ohne Zweifel wird er solches umsonst nicht so ernstlich heißen und fordern, sondern weil er weiß unsere [Ge]fahr und Noth, dazu der Teufel stetiges und mütiges Stürmen und Anfechtung, will er uns davor warnen, rüsten und bewahren als mit gutem Harnisch wider ihre feurigen Pfeile und mit guter Arznei wider ihr giftiges, böses Geschmeiß und Eingeben.

armatura hoc modo paratos atque instructos esse, quo possumus, et ignita tela ac pravas pestiferasque illorum aggressiones repellere ac profigare. [R. 395]

O welche tolle, unsinnige Narren sind wir, daß wir unter solchen mächtigen Feinden, als die Teufel sind, wohnen oder herbergen je müssen und wollen dazu unsere Waffen und Wehre verachten und faul sein, dieselben anzusehen oder daran zu gedenken!

Und was tun solche überdrüssige, vermessene Heilige, so nicht wollen oder mögen den Catechismus täglich lesen und lernen, denn daß sie sich selbst viel gelehrter halten, denn Gott selbst ist cuius adversus daemones habiturum te speres, quam si Verbum et praecepta Dei multo usu tractes, de iis familiares misceas sermones, illa canas ac mediteris. Haec enim vere aqua illa sanctificata sunt verumque signum, quo Satan et fugatur, et quod fugit maxime.

11) Et si nulla alia utilitas hinc petenda sit, quam quod Satanam et pravas cogitationes depellat, certe vel sola haec tanti facienda erat, ut hanc doctrinae partem libenter disceres, legeres, meditareris et tractares. Non enim potest nec ferre nec audire Verbum Dei Satan. Et ipsum Verbum non est tale, quales sunt aniles fabulae aut carmina lyricorum, sed est, quemadmodum Paulus ait [Rom. 1, 16], potentia Dei ad salutem omni credenti. [R. 394] Ac revera potentia Dei, quae Satanam ut maxime affligit et premit, nos vero supra modum refocillat et reficit.

12) Et quid multis opus? Si fructum ac utilitatem omnem, quam Verbum Dei operatur, enumerare vellem, neque charta neque tempus suppeteret. Vulgo vocant Satanam mille artium opificem, hoc est, cuius potestas sit varia ac multiplex. At ipsum Dei sermonem, qui non solum variam ac multiplicem potestatem habet, verum etiam illum ipsum mille artium artificem cum omni potentia et arte sua opprimit et ad nihilum redigit, quo tandem nomine dignabimur? Nimirum non mille tantum artium, sed multarum myriadum

13) artificem merito dixeris. Quare nos quidem si tantam potentiam, tantam utilitatem, tantas vires, tantum denique usum illius adeo parvi aestimaremus, praesertim qui parochi et concionatores esse et perhiberi volumus, tum digni sane essemus, quibus non solum nullus suppeditaretur cibus, sed qui canibus etiam exagitaremur, praesertim cum illis omnibus exaltantur. [R. 395]

14) Quodsi neque haec satis sufficiant ad excitandos commonendosque animos ad diligentem Catechismi lectionem, ipsum tamen praeceptum Dei vel solum cogere nos debebat, quod exstat Deut. 6, 6 sqq., ut praecepta ipsius sedentes, ambulantes, stantes, iacentes, surgentes nunquam non meditemur, ac velut signum aliquod ob oculos ponamus ac manibus gestemus. Procul dubio non temere Deus hoc tam severiter et praecipit et exigit, sed cum non ignoret, quae nos pericula et necessitates urgant, adhaec quanta contentione, assiduitate et pertinacia maligni spiritus nullo non momento in perpetuam nostri perniciem sint instructi, voluit nos contra optimus ille Pater noster coelestis veluti solida et efficaci

15) Sed o stolidos ac insensatos nos, qui, cum necesse habeamus, diversari ac degere inter hostes adeo potentes, nempe daemones, nihilominus arma nostra contemnimus, desides atque stertentes ea ne aspicere quidem, aut ipsorum meminisse sustineamus!

16) Et quid, quaeso, saturi illi praesumptuosique sancti, Catechismi videlicet doctrinam respuentes ac longe abiectorem aestimantes, quam quae quotidie legi ac disci debeat, aliud against the devil than by being engaged upon God's commandments and words, and speaking, singing, or thinking of them. For this is indeed the true holy water and holy sign from which he flees, and by which he may be driven away.

Now, for this reason alone you ought gladly to read, speak, think and treat of these things, if you had no other profit and fruit from them than that by doing so you can drive away the devil and evil thoughts. For he cannot hear or endure God's Word; and God's Word is not like some other silly prattle, as that about Dietrich of Berne, etc., but as St. Paul says, Rom. 1, 16, the power of God. Yea, indeed, the power of God which gives the devil burning pain, and strengthens, comforts, and helps us beyond measure.

And what need is there of many words? If I were to recount all the profit and fruit which God's Word produces, whence would I get enough paper and time? The devil is called the master of a thousand arts. But what shall we call God's Word, which drives away and brings to naught this master of a thousand arts with all his arts and power? It must indeed be the master of more than a hundred thousand arts. And shall we frivolously despise such power, profit, strength, and fruit—we, especially, who claim to be pastors and preachers? If so, we should not only have nothing given us to eat, but be driven out, being baited with dogs, and pelted with dung, because we not only need all this every day as we need our daily bread, but must also daily use it against the daily and unabated attacks and lurking of the devil, the master of a thousand arts.

And if this were not sufficient to admonish us to read the Catechism daily, yet we should feel sufficiently constrained by the command of God alone, who solemnly enjoins in Deut. 6, 6 ff. that we should always meditate upon His precepts, sitting, walking, standing, lying down, and rising, and have them before our eyes and in our hands as a constant mark and sign. Doubtless He did not so solemnly require and enjoin this without a purpose; but because He knows our danger and need, as well as the constant and furious assaults and temptations of devils, He wishes to warn, equip, and preserve us against them, as with a good armor against their fiery darts and with good medicine against their evil infection and suggestion.

Oh, what mad, senseless fools are we that, while we must ever live and dwell among such mighty enemies as the devils are, we nevertheless despise our weapons and defense, and are too lazy to look at or think of them!

And what else are such supercilious, presumptuous saints, who are unwilling to read and study the Catechism daily, doing than esteeming themselves much more learned than mit allen seinen Heiligen, Engeln, Propheten, Aposteln und allen Christen? Denn weil sich Gott selbst nicht schämt, solches täglich zu lehren, als der nichts Besseres wisse zu lehren, und immer solches einerlei lehrt und nichts Neues noch anderes vornimmt, und alle Heiligen nichts Besseres noch anderes wissen zu lernen und nicht können auslernen, sind wir denn nicht die allerfeinsten Gesellschaften, die wir uns lassen dünken, wenn wir's einmal gelesen und gehört haben, daß wir's alles können und nicht mehr lesen noch lernen dürfen und können das auf eine Stunde auslernen, daß Gott selbst nicht kann auslehen, so er doch dran lehrt von Anfang der Welt bis zu Ende, und alle Propheten samt allen Heiligen dran zu lernen gehabt und noch immer Schüler sind [ge]blieben und noch bleiben müssen?

ad finem usque illius idem hoc agat; denique omnes prophetae ac sancti abunde semper habuerint hinc, quod discerent, nihilominus discipuli perpetuo manserint et manere necesse habuerint?

Denn das muß ja sein, wer die zehn Gebote wohl und gar kann, daß der muß die ganze Schrift können, daß er könne in allen Sachen und Fällen raten, helfen, trösten, urteilen, richten beide geistlich und weltlich Wesen und möge sein ein Richter über alle Lehre, Stände, Geister, Rechte, und was in der Welt sein mag. Und was ist der ganze Psalter denn eitel Gedanken und Übungen des ersten Gebots? Nun weiß ich ja fürwahr, daß solche faule Däuche oder vermessene Geister nicht einen Psalm verstehen, [ge]schweige denn die ganze Heilige Schrift, und wollen den Catechismus wissen und verachten, welcher der ganzen Heiligen Schrift kurzer Auszug und Abschrift ist.

Scripturam. Et interim tamen iidem illi Catechismi traditionem contemnunt, qui totius Scripturae quasi quoddam compendium est brevemque illius atque summariam descriptionem continet.

Darum bitte ich abermal alle Christen, sonderlich die Pfarrherren und Prediger, sie wollten nicht zu früh Doctores sein und alles [zu] wissen sich dünken lassen (es geht an Dünken und gespannen [ungenegtem] Tuch viel ab), sondern sich täglich wohl drin üben und immer treiben, dazu mit aller Sorge und Fleiß sich versehen vor dem giftigen Geschmeiß solcher Sicherheit oder Dünkelmeister, sondern stetig anhalten beide mit Lesen, Lehren, Lernen, Denken und Dichten und nicht also ablassen, bis solange sie erfahren und gewiß werden, daß sie den Teufel tot gelehrt und gelehrt [ge]worden sind, denn Gott selber ist und alle seine Heiligen.

Werden sie solchen Fleiß tun, so will ich ihnen zusagen, und sie sollen's auch innewerden, welche Frucht sie erlangen werden, und wie seine Leute Gott aus ihnen machen wird, daß sie mit der Zeit selbst sein bekennen sollen, daß, je länger und mehr sie den Catechismus treiben, je weniger sie davon wissen, und je mehr sie daran zu lernen haben, und wird ihnen als den Hungrigen und Durstigen dann allererst recht schmecken, daß sie jetzt vor großer Fülle und Überdruß nicht riechen mögen. Da gebe Gott seine Gnade zu! Amen.

agunt, quam quod se ipsos longe doctiores reputant Deo ipso, omnibus angelis, patriarchis, apostolis et omnibus Christianis? Nam cum non pudeat Deum ipsum haec quotidie docere, ut qui melius aut praestantius aliquid, quod doceatur, non habet, eademque illa saepius iteret atque inculcet, novi vero ac alienum ab hac doctrina nihil sibi sumat; addo etiam, cum omnes sancti nihil melius nec utilius sciant, quod discant, nec unquam ad plenum discere queant: an non scilicet egregii ac perbelli homines sumus, quod, cum semel hanc doctrinam vel legerimus vel audierimus, in eam persuasionem veniamus, quasi omnia sciamus, nec ulla amplius nobis opus sit lectione, adeoque una etiam hora illud perdiscere possimus, quod nec ipse Deus perdocere potuit, idque cum iam inde a condito mundo

17) Nam illud sane certum atque indubitatum est, quod, qui decem praecepta probe norit ac perdidicerit, is totam etiam Scripturam sciat, ut possit in quibuscumque negotiis et casibus consilio, auxilio, consolatione praesto esse, discernere ac iudicare civiles pariter et ecclesiasticas controversias, sitque iudex omnium doctrinarum, ordinum, spirituum, iuris et aequitatis ac quidquid in mundo esse possit.

18) Et quid, precor, totus psalmorum [R. 396] liber aliud quam meras cogitationes exercitiaque primi praecepti continet? Atqui persuasissimum habeo huiusmodi ignavos ventres ac praesumptuosos spiritus ne unicum quidem psalmum intelligere, nedum totam 20) Quodsi hanc diligentiam adhibuerint, sancte ipsis promitto, ac re ipsa iidem etiam experientur, quod magnum inde fructum sint consecuturi, et quod excellentes viros Deus ex ipsis facturus sit, adeo ut ipsi etiam aliquando fateantur, quod, quo magis Catechismi doctrinam repetunt iterantque, eo minus ipsam apprehendant ac sciant, sed necesse habeant perpetuo illam discere. Ex qua quidem re fiet, ut tum demum veluti esurientibus et sitientibus placere ac sapere illud incipiat, cuius nunc prae nimia saturitate ac fastidio ne olfactum quidem ferre sustinent. Quod ut fiat, Deum precamur, quo gratiam nobis suam largiatur! Amen.

19) Quare nunc iterum omnes Christianos obsecro obtestorque, imprimis vero parochos et concionatores, ne praemature doctores fieri velint sequi omnia scire falso sibi persuadeant. Nam ut falsis ponderibus atque mensuris, ita et vanis persuasionibus multum decedit, cum ad iustum examen exiguntur. Quin potius quotidie his studiis exerceantur eademque sedulo inculcent. Adhaec omni cura ac diligentia caveant, ne detestanda contagione securitatis praesumptionisque corripiantur, sed in hoc praecipue incumbant, ut legendo, docendo, discendo, cogitando et meditando omne tempus consumant, nec antea desistant, donec re ipsa compererint ac certi fiant, quod Satanam ad mortem perdidicerint doctoresque facti sint Deo et omnibus angelis eius.

God Himself with all His saints, angels, [patriarchs], prophets, apostles, and all Christians? For inasmuch as God Himself is not ashamed to teach these things daily, as knowing nothing better to teach, and always keeps teaching the same thing, and does not take up anything new or different, and all the saints know nothing better or different to learn, and cannot finish learning this, are we not the finest of all fellows to imagine, if we have once read or heard it, that we know it all, and have no further need to read and learn, but can finish learning in one hour what God Himself cannot finish teaching, although He is engaged in teaching it from the beginning to the end of the world, and all prophets, together with all saints, have been occupied with learning it, and have ever remained pupils, and must continue to be such?

For it needs must be that whoever knows the Ten Commandments perfectly must know all the Scriptures, so that, in all affairs and cases, he can advise, help, comfort, judge, and decide both spiritual and temporal matters, and is qualified to sit in judgment upon all doctrines, estates, spirits, laws, and whatever else is in the world. And what, indeed, is the entire Psalter but thoughts and exercises upon the First Commandment? Now I know of a truth that such lazy paunches and presumptuous spirits do not understand a single psalm, much less the entire Holy Scriptures; and yet they pretend to know and despise the Catechism, which is a compend and brief summary of all the Holy Scriptures.

Therefore I again implore all Christians, especially pastors and preachers, not to be doctors too soon, and imagine that they know everything (for imagination and cloth unshrunk [and false weights] fall far short of the measure), but that they daily exercise themselves well in these studies and constantly treat them; moreover, that they guard with all care and diligence against the poisonous infection of such security and vain imagination, but steadily keep on reading, teaching, learning, pondering, and meditating, and do not cease until they have made a test and are sure that they have taught the devil to death, and have become more learned than God Himself and all His saints.

If they manifest such diligence, then I will promise them, and they shall also perceive, what fruit they will obtain, and what excellent men God will make of them, so that in due time they themselves will acknowledge that the longer and the more they study the Catechism, the less they know of it, and the more they find yet to learn; and then only, as hungry and thirsty ones, will they truly relish that which now they cannot endure, because of great abundance and satiety. To this end may God grant His grace! Amen.

Kurze Vorrede [D. M. L.].

Diese Predigt ist dazu geordnet und angefangen, daß es sei ein Unterricht für die Kinder und Einfältigen, darum sie auch von alters her auf griechisch heißt Catechismus, das ist, eine Kinderlehre, so ein jeglicher Christ zur Not wissen soll, also daß, wer solches nicht weiß, nicht könnte unter die Christen gezählt und zu seinem Sacrament zugelassen werden [der Catechismus wurde in Wittenberg seit 1523 im Beichtverhör abgefragt]; gleichwie man einen Handwerksmann, der seines Handwerks Recht und Gebrauch nicht weiß, [hin]auswirft und für untüchtig hält. Derhalben soll man junge Leute die Stücke, so in den Catechismus oder Kinderpredigt gehören, wohl und fertig lernen lassen und mit Fleiß darin üben und treiben.

Darum auch ein jeglicher Hausvater schuldig ist, daß er zum wenigsten die Worte einmal seine Kinder und Gefinde umfrage und verhöre, was sie davon wissen oder lernen und, wo sie es nicht können, mit Ernst dazu halte. Denn ich denke wohl [ich erinnere mich gut] der Zeit, ja es begibt sich noch täglich, daß man grobe, alte, betagte Leute findet, die hieron gar nichts gewußt haben oder noch wissen, gehen doch gleichwohl zur Taufe und Sacrament und [ge]brauchen alles, was die Christen haben, so doch, die zum Sacrament gehen, billig mehr wissen und völligeren Verstand aller christlichen Lehre haben sollten denn die Kinder und neue Schüler. Wiewohl wir's für den gemeinen Haufen bei den dreien Stücken bleiben lassen, so von alters her in der Christenheit [ge]blieben sind, aber wenig recht gelehrt und getrieben, so lange bis man sich in denselben wohl übe und läufigt [bewandert] werde beide jung und alt, was Christen [Christ] heißen und sein will. Und sind nämlich diese:

usque saeculis recepta consuetudine in Christianismo permanserunt, tametsi perpauca ex his recte et sincere tradita sint populo, donec in iisdem probe triti et exercitati evaserint, cum senes tum iuvenes, quicunque Christiani esse aut dici contendunt. Sunt autem hae, quae sequuntur:

Zum ersten.Die zehn Gebote Gottes.

1. Du sollst keine andern Götter haben neben mir.
2. Du sollst den Namen Gottes nicht vergeblich führen.
3. Du sollst den Feiertag heiligen.
4. Du sollst Vater und Mutter ehren.
5. Du sollst nicht töten.
6. Du sollst nicht ehebrechen.
7. Du sollst nicht stehlen.
8. Du sollst kein falsch Zeugnis reden wider deinen Nächsten.

DOCT. MART. LUTHERI BREVIS PRAEFATIO.

1] Praesentis huius opusculi sermonem haud alio animo elaboravimus, quam ut esset [R. 397] institutio puerorum atque simplicium. Hinc apud veteres lingua Graeca catechismus dictus est, quae vox puerilem institutionem significat. 2] Haec vero cuius Christianorum necessario debet esse perspecta et cognita, ita ut, si quis huius cognitionem non habeat, in Christianorum numerum merito non sit referendus neque ad sacramentorum participationem admittendus. Quemadmodum opifex quispiam manuaris, qui artis aut officii sui rationem et usum non callet, iure optimo reprobandus et 3] minimi pretii habendus. Quapropter pueris articuli ad Catechismum seu puerilem institutionem pertinentes summo studio tradendi sunt, inque ipsis non segnitè exercenda eorundem industria.

4] Inde fidelis ac vigilantis patrisfamilias officium exigit, ut per hebdomadam ad minimum semel habito examine liberorum ac familiae periculum faciat ac audiens exacte perquirat, quid hisce de rebus intelligant aut didicerint, quibus ignoratis eosdem serio et graviter eo, ut ista perdiscant, adigat. Probe 5] enim commemini, atque adeo quotidie hoc ipsum usu venire videmus, ut usque adeo tardo atque hebeti ingenio inveniantur [R. 398] homines, iamque natu grandiores, quibus hac de re nihil prorsus compertum fuit, aut etiam hodie teneant, quamquam nihilo secius sacramentorum nobiscum fiant participes omnibusque illis utantur, quae peculiariter Christianis utenda data et instituta sunt, cum tamen ii, qui sacramentorum usum sibi vindicant, plus scire, neque non ampliore Christianarum rerum intelligentia praediti atque exculiti esse debeant quam pueri aut novitii scholastici. 6] Ceterum nos pro instituendo vulgo hisce tribus partibus contenti erimus, quae a priscis

[Primo.]DECEM PRAECEPTA. [R. 399]

- 1] I. Non habebis deos alienos coram me.
- 2] II. Non assumes nomen Domini Dei tui in vanum, quia non habebit Dominus Deus tuus insontem eum, qui assumpserit nomen eius in vanum.
- 3] III. Memento, ut diem sabbati sanctifices.
- 4] IV. Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, ut sis longaevus super terram.
- 5] V. Non occides.
- 6] VI. Non moechaberis.
- 7] VII. Non furtum facies.
- 8] VIII. Non loqueris contra proximum tuum falsum testimonium.

SHORT PREFACE OF DR. MARTIN LUTHER.

This sermon is designed and undertaken that it might be an instruction for children and the simple-minded. Hence of old it was called in Greek Catechism, i. e., instruction for children, what every Christian must needs know, so that he who does not know this could not be numbered with the Christians nor be admitted to any Sacrament, just as a mechanic who does not understand the rules and customs of his trade is expelled and considered incapable. Therefore we must have the young learn the parts which belong to the Catechism or instruction for children well and fluently and diligently exercise themselves in them and keep them occupied with them.

Therefore it is the duty of every father of a family to question and examine his children and servants at least once a week and to ascertain what they know of it, or are learning, and, if they do not know it, to keep them faithfully at it. For I well remember the time, indeed, even now it is a daily occurrence that one finds rude, old persons who knew nothing and still know nothing of these things, and who, nevertheless, go to Baptism and the Lord's Supper, and use everything belonging to Christians, notwithstanding that those who come to the Lord's Supper ought to know more and have a fuller understanding of all Christian doctrine than children and new scholars. However, for the common people we are satisfied with the three parts, which have remained in Christendom from of old, though little of it has been taught and treated correctly until both young and old, who are called and wish to be Christians, are well trained in them and familiar with them. These are the following:

First.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS OF GOD.

1. Thou shalt have no other gods before Me.
2. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain [for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain].
3. Thou shalt sanctify the holy-day. [Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy.]
4. Thou shalt honor thy father and mother [that thou mayest live long upon the earth].
5. Thou shalt not kill.
6. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
7. Thou shalt not steal.
8. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

9. Du sollst nicht begehren deines Nächsten Haus.

10. Du sollst nicht begehren seines Weibes [sein Weib], Knecht, Magd, Vieh oder was sein ist.

Zum zweiten.

Die Hauptartikel unsers Glaubens.

1. Ich glaube an Gott [den] Vater allmächtigen, Schöpfer Himmels und der Erden.

2. Und an Jesus Christum, seinen einzigen Sohn, unsern Herrn, der empfangen ist von dem Heiligen Geist, geboren aus Maria, der Jungfrau, gelitten hat unter Pontio Pilato, gekreuzigt, gestorben und begraben ist, niedergefahren zur Hölle, am dritten Tage wieder auferstanden von [den] Toten, aufgefahren gen Himmel, sitzend zur Rechten Gottes, des allmächtigen Vaters, von dannen er zukünftig ist, zu richten die Lebendigen und die Toten.

3. Ich glaube an den Heiligen Geist, eine heilige christliche Kirche, Gemeinschaft der Heiligen, Vergebung der Sünden, Auferstehung des Fleisches und ein ewiges Leben. Amen.

Zum dritten.

Das Gebet oder Vaterunser, so Christus gelehrt hat.

Vater unser, der du bist im Himmel.

1. Gheiligt werde dein Name.
2. Zukomme dein Reich.
3. Dein Wille geschehe, wie im Himmel, also auch auf Erden.
4. Unser täglich Brot gib uns heute.
5. Und verlaß [erlaß, vergib] uns unsere Schuld, als wir verlassen unsern Schuldigern.
6. Und führe uns nicht in Versuchung.
7. Sondern erlöse uns vom Übel. Amen.

Das sind die nötigsten Stücke, die man zum ersten lernen muß von Wort zu Wort erzählen und soll die Kinder dazu gewöhnen täglich, wenn sie des Morgens aufstehen, zu Tisch gehen und sich des Abends schlafen legen, daß sie es müssen auffagen, und ihnen nicht zu essen noch zu trinken geben, sie hätten's denn gesagt. Desgleichen ist auch ein jeglicher Hausvater schuldig, mit dem Gesinde, Knechten und Mägden, zu halten, daß er sie nicht bei sich halte, wo sie es nicht können oder lernen wollen. Denn es ist mitnichten zu leiden, daß ein Mensch so roh und wild sei und solches nicht lerne, weil in diesen dreien Stücken kürzlich, gröblich und auß einfältigste verfaßt ist alles, was wir in der Schrift haben; denn die lieben Väter oder Apostel (wer sie gewesen sind) haben also in eine Summa gestellt, was der Christen

9] IX. Non concupisces domum proximi tui.

10] X. Non desiderabis uxorem eius, non servum, non ancillam, non bovem, non asinum nec omnia, quae illius sunt.

Secundo.

[R. 400

ARTICULI CHRISTIANAE FIDEI.

11] I. Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, Creatorem coeli et terrae.

12] II. Et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuus et sepultus, descendit ad inferos, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad coelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei, Patris omnipotentis, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos.

13] III. Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam ecclesiam catholicam, sanctorum communionem, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem et vitam aeternam. Amen.

14]

Tertio.

ORATIO, QUAM NOBIS CHRISTUS TRADIDIT IN EVANGELIO.

Pater noster, qui es in coelis.

- I. Sanctificetur nomen tuum.
- II. Adveniat regnum tuum.
- III. Fiat voluntas tua, quemadmodum in coelo, sic etiam in terra.
- IV. Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis hodie.
- V. Et remitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos remittimus debitoribus nostris.
- VI. Et ne inducas nos in tentationem.
- VII. Sed libera nos a malo. Quia tuum est regnum et potentia et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.

15] Haec sunt capita summe necessariae, quae cuivis Christianorum primo perdiscenda sunt atque ad verbum recitanda. Sunt 16] autem ad hoc quotidie assuefaciendi pueri, ut, quoties mane e stratis surrexerint et ad capiendum cibum accesserint et sub vespere iterum dormitum ierint, memoriter recitent, neque ad cibum aut potum admittantur nisi his omnibus ante diligenter recitatis. Non 17] secus boni patrisfamilias officium herile exigit cum familia, nempe cum servis et ancillis, agere, neque quemquam in famulatio suo perferre, ista nescientem aut recusantem 18] discere. Neque enim ullo modo ferendum est, ut hominum aliquis usque adeo ferus sit et barbarus, qui haec nolit discere, cum in hisce tribus partibus summatim ac ruditer, et

9. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his cattle [ox, nor his ass], nor anything that is his.

Secondly.

THE CHIEF ARTICLES OF OUR FAITH.

1. I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth.

2. And in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord; who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried; He descended into hell; the third day He rose again from the dead; He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

3. I believe in the Holy Ghost, the holy Christian Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting. Amen.

Thirdly.

THE PRAYER, OR "OUR FATHER," WHICH CHRIST TAUGHT.

Our Father who art in heaven.

1. Hallowed be Thy name.
2. Thy kingdom come.
3. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.
4. Give us this day our daily bread.
5. And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.
6. And lead us not into temptation.
7. But deliver us from evil. [For Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, forever and ever.] Amen.

These are the most necessary parts which one should first learn to repeat word for word, and which our children should be accustomed to recite daily when they arise in the morning, when they sit down to their meals, and when they retire at night; and until they repeat them, they should be given neither food nor drink. Likewise every head of a household is obliged to do the same with respect to his domestics, man-servants and maid-servants, and not to keep them in his house if they do not know these things and are unwilling to learn them. For a person who is so rude and unruly as to be unwilling to learn these things is not to be tolerated; for in these three parts everything that we have in the Scriptures is comprehended in short, plain, and sancti patres aut apostoli (quicunque tandem illi fuerint) huiusmodi compendio complexi sunt Christianorum doctrinam, vitam, artem et sapientiam, qua de re loquantur et tractent, aut quid tandem id sit, quod exerceant.

Lehre, Leben, Weisheit und Kunst sei, wovon sie reden und handeln und womit sie umgehen.

Wenn nun diese drei Stücke gefaßt sind, gehört sich auch, daß man wisse zu sagen von unsern Sacramenten (so Christus selbst eingesetzt hat) der Taufe und des heiligen Leibes und Blutes Christi, als nämlich den Text, so Matthäus und Markus beschreiben am Ende ihres Evangeliums, wie Christus seinen Jüngern die Lehre [den Abschied] gab und sie abfertigte.

Von der Taufe.

Gehet hin und lehret alle Völker und taufet sie im Namen des Vaters und des Sohnes und des Heiligen Geistes. Wer da glaubet und getauft wird, der wird selig werden; wer aber nicht glaubet, der wird verdammt werden.

So viel ist genug einem Einfältigen aus der Schrift von der Taufe zu wissen; desgleichen auch vom andern Sacrament mit kurzen, einfältigen Worten, als nämlich den Text St. Pauli.

Vom Sacrament.

Unser Herr Jesus Christus in der Nacht, als er verraten ward, nahm das Brot, dankte und brach's und gab's seinen Jüngern und sprach: „Nehmet hin und esset; das ist mein Leib, der für euch gegeben wird. Solches tut zu meinem Gedächtnis!“

Desseßelbengleichen auch den Kelch nach dem Abendmahl und sprach: „Dieser Kelch ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut, das für euch vergossen wird zur Vergebung der Sünden. Solches tut, sooft ihr's trinket, zu meinem Gedächtnis!“

Also hätte man überall [im ganzen] fünf Stücke der ganzen christlichen Lehre, die man immerdar treiben soll und von Wort zu Wort fordern und verhören. Denn verlaß dich nicht drauf, daß das junge Volk allein aus der Predigt lerne und behalte. Wenn man nun solche Stücke wohl weiß, so kann man danach auch etliche Psalmen oder Gesänge, so darauf gemacht sind, vorlegen, zur Zugabe und Stärke desselben, und also die Jugend in die Schrift bringen und täglich weiterfahren.

Es soll aber nicht an dem genug sein, daß man's allein den Worten nach fasse und erzählen könne, sondern lasse das junge Volk auch zur Predigt gehen, sonderlich auf die Zeit, so dem Catechismo geordnet, daß sie es hören auslegen und verstehen lernen, was ein jeglich Stück in sich habe, also daß sie es auch können aufjagen, wie sie es gehört quoad eius fieri potuit, simplicissime comprehensa sint omnia, quidquid passim in sacris 19) literis longe lateque tractamus. Etenim 20) Perceptis itaque diligenter hisce tribus articulis, deinceps consentaneum est etiam nosse, quid de sacramentis nostris dicendum aut sentiendum sit, quae Christus ipse instituit, nempe de baptismo et de corpore et sanguine Iesu Christi. Cum primis vero refert scire verba Matthaei [28, 19 sq.] ac Marci [16, 15 sq.] postremis capitibus evangeliorum relata, quemadmodum Christus ex hoc mundo discedens, ultimo munere suos affecerit discipulos eosdemque a se donatos dimiserit.

21) DE BAPTISMO.

Ite, docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus [R. 402] erit; qui vero non crediderit, condemnabitur.

22) Tantum ex Scriptura Sacra de baptismo simplicem Christianum nosse sufficit. Similiter et de secundo sacramento paucis et simplicibus verbis, nempe ex Pauli prima ad Corinthios epistola, cap. 11, 23 sqq.

DE COENA DOMINI.

23) Dominus noster Iesus Christus, in qua nocte tradebatur, accepit panem et gratias agens, fregit, deditque discipulis suis et dixit: Accipite et manducate. Hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis tradetur. Hoc facite in meam commemorationem.

Similiter et calicem, postquam coenavit, dicens: Hic calix novum testamentum est in meo sanguine. Hoc facite, quotiescunque biberitis, in meam commemorationem.

24) Ita passim quinque partes esse videmus totius Christianae doctrinae, quas subinde exerceri atque ad verbum a pueris exigi et audiri oportet. Neque enim est, quod speres iuventutem ex solis concionibus ista comprehensuram, aut sensibus et memoriae reposituram. 25) His ergo probe perspectis et cognitis, non incommode atque intempestive aliquot etiam psalmi et hymni in hoc formati et expositi proponi possunt pueris, ut hisce prius perceptis quasi roborentur et confirmantur, utque hac ratione iuventus Scripturae legendae et exercendae assuescat ac quotidie maioribus incrementis aucta progrediatur.

26) Sed non in hoc contenti esse debemus, ut haec tantum verbotenus percipiantur ac recitentur, sed hoc etiam curae tibi sit, [R. 403] ut iuventus sedulo intersit concionibus, praesertim iis temporibus, quae exercendo Catechismo destinata sunt, ut haec exposita audiant, et quid singula in se comprehendant, non simple terms. For the holy Fathers or apostles (whoever they were) have thus embraced in a summary the doctrine, life, wisdom, and art of Christians, of which they speak and treat, and with which they are occupied.

Now, when these three parts are apprehended, it behooves a person also to know what to say concerning our Sacraments, which Christ Himself instituted, Baptism and the holy body and blood of Christ, namely, the text which Matthew [28, 19 ff.] and Mark [16, 15 f.] record at the close of their Gospels when Christ said farewell to His disciples and sent them forth.

OF BAPTISM.

Go ye and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

So much is sufficient for a simple person to know from the Scriptures concerning Baptism. In like manner, also, concerning the other Sacrament, in short, simple words, namely, the text of St. Paul [1 Cor. 11, 23 f.].

OF THE SACRAMENT.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it to His disciples and said, Take, eat; this is My body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of Me.

After the same manner also He took the cup, when He had supped, gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; this cup is the new testament in My blood, which is shed for you for the remission of sins: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me.

Thus we would have, in all, five parts of the entire Christian doctrine which should be constantly treated and required [of children], and heard recited word for word. For you must not rely upon it that the young people will learn and retain these things from the sermon alone. When these parts have been well learned, you may, as a supplement and to fortify them, lay before them also some psalms or hymns, which have been composed on these parts, and thus lead the young into the Scriptures, and make daily progress therein.

However, it is not enough for them to comprehend and recite these parts according to the words only, but the young people should also be made to attend the preaching, especially during the time which is devoted to the Catechism, that they may hear it explained, and may learn to understand what haben, und sein richtig antworten, wenn man sie fragt, auf daß es nicht ohne Ruß und Frucht gepredigt werde. Denn darum tun wir den Hyleiß, den Catechismus oft vorzupredigen, daß man solches in die Jugend bleue, nicht hoch noch scharf, sondern kurz und aufs einfältigste, auf daß es ihnen wohl eingehe und im Gedächtnis bleibe.

neque alto ingenii acumine, sed breviter et simplicissime, ut hoc facilius et fidelius dicta nostra percipiantur et tenacius memoriae infixae haereant.

Verhalben wollen wir nun die angezeigten Stücke nacheinander vor uns nehmen und aufs deutlichste davon reden, soviel not ist.

oscitantes discant intelligere, adeo ut prompte audita recitare calleant et interrogati scite respondere queant, ne citra fructum ista pro 27] concionibus doceantur. Eam enim ob rem nos hanc operam hoc diligentius sumimus, Catechismum subinde praedicantes, ut haec iuventuti diligenter inculcentur, nullo quidem orationis splendore aut apparatu rhetorico iam nunc singulatim tractandos in manus sumemus atque de iis, quantum fieri poterit et necessitas postulaverit, significantissime verba faciemus.

[Das erste Theil.]

Das erste Gebot.

Du sollst nicht andere Götter haben.

Das ist, du sollst mich allein für deinen Gott halten. Was ist das gesagt, und wie verstehet man's? Was heißt: einen Gott haben, oder was ist Gott? Antwort: Ein Gott heißt das, dazu man sich versehen soll alles Guten und Zukünftigen haben in allen Nöten, also daß einen Gott haben nichts anderes ist, denn ihm von Herzen trauen und glauben: wie ich oft gesagt habe, daß allein das Trauen und Glauben des Herzens macht beide, Gott und Abgott. Ist der Glaube und [das] Vertrauen recht, so ist auch dein Gott recht; und wiederum, wo das Vertrauen falsch und unrecht ist, da ist auch der rechte Gott nicht; denn die zwei gehören zu Hause: Glaube und Gott. Worauf du nun (sage ich) dein Herz hängt und verläßt, das ist eigentlich dein Gott.

Darum ist nun die Meinung dieses Gebots, daß es fordert rechten Glauben und Zuversicht des Herzens, welche den rechten einigen Gott treffe und an ihm allein hange. Und will so viel gesagt haben: Siehe zu und laß mich allein deinen Gott sein und suche je keinen andern; das ist, was dir mangelt an Gutem, des versiehe dich zu mir und suche es bei mir, und wo du Unglück und Not leidest, kreuch [kriech] und halte dich zu mir. Ich, ich will dir genug geben und aus aller Not helfen; laß nur dein Herz an keinem andern hangen noch ruhen.

atque etiam periclitantem ex omnibus malis eripiam. Tantum hoc cave sedulo, ne cor tuum ulli alteri apponas, nec ab eo pendeas, nec in eo conquiescas.

Das muß ich ein wenig grob austreichen, daß man's verstehe und merke bei gemeinen Exempeln des Widerspiels. Es ist mancher, der meint, er habe Gott und alles genug, wenn er Geld und Gut hat, verläßt und brüßet sich darauf so steif und sicher, daß er auf niemand nichts gibt. Siehe, dieser hat auch einen Gott, der heißt Mammon, das ist Geld und Gut, darauf er alle sein Herz setzt, welches auch der allgerneinste Abgott ist auf Erden. Wer Geld und Gut hat, der weiß sich

[Prima Pars.]

Praeceptum I.

Non habebis deos alienos coram me.

1] Hoc est, me solum pro Deo tuo habebis ac coles. Quid vero hisce verbis sibi vult, ac quomodo hoc intelligendum est? Quid est habere Deum, aut quid est Deus? Responsio: 2] Deus est et vocatur, de cuius bonitate et potentia omnia bona certo tibi pollicearis, et ad quem quibuscumque adversis rebus atque periculis ingruentibus confugas, ut Deum habere nihil aliud sit, quam illi ex toto corde fidere et credere; quemadmodum saepenumero a me dictum est, quod sola cordis fiducia Deum pariter atque idolum faciat et constituat. 3] Quodsi fides et fiducia recta et sincera est, Deum rectum habebis; contra, si falsa [R. 404] fuerit et mendax fiducia, etiam Deum tuum falsum et mendacem esse necesse est. Siquidem haec duo, fides et Deus, una copula coniungenda sunt. Iam in quacunque re animi tui fiduciam et cor fixum habueris, haec haud dubie Deus tuus est.

4] Quare huius praecepti sensus hic est, ut veram cordis fidem atque fiduciam exigit, a vero et unico Deo non aberrantem, sed illi soli constanter adhaerentem. Idem plane vult dicere: Hoc vide cures, ut me solum Deum tuum esse statuas, nec omnino extra me alium quaerere coneris, hoc est, quarumcunque rerum inopia laboraveris, easdem de mea munificentia tibi pollicearis et apud me quaeras, volo. Ac ubicunque pressus infortunio adversa pateris, ad me protinus opem imploraturus confugito. Ego, ego, inquam, affluente omnium rerum copia te implebo uberrime.

5] Hoc aliquanto planius ac rudius explicandum est, ut exemplis sumptis a contrario rectius intelligatur, quid haec sibi velint. Equidem permultos videre licet, existimantes sese et Deum et omnia abunde habere, quando divitiis abundant et opibus, quibus confisi adeo insolenter intumescunt, adeo constanter et secure his fruuntur, ut neminis rationem aut 6] respectum ullum habeant. Ecce, ii quoque Deum habent, sed cui nomen est Mammona, every part contains, so as to be able to recite it as they have heard it, and, when asked, may give a correct answer, so that the preaching may not be without profit and fruit. For the reason why we exercise such diligence in preaching the Catechism so often is that it may be inculcated on our youth, not in a high and subtile manner, but briefly and with the greatest simplicity, so as to enter the mind readily and be fixed in the memory.

Therefore we shall now take up the above-mentioned articles one by one and in the plainest manner possible say about them as much as is necessary.

Part First.

The First Commandment.

Thou shalt have no other gods before Me.

That is: Thou shalt have [and worship] Me alone as thy God. What is the force of this, and how is it to be understood? What does it mean to have a god? or, what is God? Answer: A god means that from which we are to expect all good and to which we are to take refuge in all distress, so that to have a God is nothing else than to trust and believe Him from the [whole] heart; as I have often said that the confidence and faith of the heart alone make both God and an idol. If your faith and trust be right, then is your god also true; and, on the other hand, if your trust be false and wrong, then you have not the true God; for these two belong together, faith and God. That now, I say, upon which you set your heart and put your trust is properly your god.

Therefore it is the intent of this commandment to require true faith and trust of the heart which settles upon the only true God, and clings to Him alone. That is as much as to say: "See to it that you let Me alone be your God, and never seek another," i. e.: Whatever you lack of good things, expect it of Me, and look to Me for it, and whenever you suffer misfortune and distress, creep and cling to Me. I, yes, I, will give you enough and help you out of every need; only let not your heart cleave to or rest in any other.

This I must unfold somewhat more plainly, that it may be understood and perceived by ordinary examples of the contrary. Many a one thinks that he has God and everything in abundance when he has money and possessions; he trusts in them and boasts of them with such firmness and assurance as to care for no one. Lo, such a man also has a god, Mammon by name, i. e., money and possessicher, ist fröhlich und unerschrocken, als säße er mitten im Paradies. Und wiederum, wer seines hat, der zweifelt und zagt, als wisse er von seinem Gott. Denn man wird ihrer gar wenig finden, die gutes Muths seien [sind] und nicht trauern noch klagen, wenn sie den Mammon nicht haben; es lebt und hängt der Natur an bis in die Grube.

8] mam. Contra, qui opibus et pecunia caret, ille animi dubius omnem spem abiicit, ac [R. 405 9] si nihil prorsus de ullo Deo vel tantillum sibi constet. Etenim paucos admodum invenias, qui sint bono animo, quique nihil tristentur aut conquerantur, si destituant eos Mammona. Haec enim rei pecuniariae cura atque cupiditas humanam naturam ad sepulcrum usque indivulsa comitatur.

Also auch, wer darauf traut und trögt, daß er große Kunst, Klugheit, Gewalt, Günst, Freundschaft und Ehre hat, der hat auch einen Gott, aber nicht diesen rechten einigen Gott. Das siehst du abermal dabei, wie vermessn, sicher und stolz man ist auf solche Güter, und wie verzagt, wenn sie nicht vorhanden [sind] oder entzogen werden. Darum sage ich abermal, daß die rechte Auslegung dieses Stücks sei, daß einen Gott haben heißt, etwas haben, darauf das Herz gänzlich traut.

huntur. Quare iterum dico, quod vera huius particulae interpretatio, Deum habere, nihil aliud sit, quam habere aliquid, cui cor humanum per omnia fidere soleat.

Item siehe, was wir bisher getrieben und getan haben in der Blindheit unter dem Papsttum. Wenn jemand ein Zahn weh tat, der fastete und feierte St. Apollonia; fürchtete er sich vor Feuersnot, so machte er St. Lorenz zum Rothelfer; fürchtete er sich vor Pestilenz, so gelobte er sich zu St. Sebastian oder Rochio, und des Greuels unzählig viel mehr, da ein jeglicher seinen Heiligen wählte, anbetete und anrief, in Räten zu helfen. Daher [hierher] gehören auch, die es gar zu grob treiben und mit dem Teufel einen Bund machen, daß er ihnen Geld genug gebe oder zur Buhlschaft [Liebschaft] helfe, ihr Vieh bewahre, verloren Gut wiedererschaffe usw., als die Zauberer und Schwarzkünstler [Schwarzkünstler]. Denn diese alle setzen ihr Herz und Vertrauen anderswo[hin] denn auf den wahrhaftigen Gott, verstehen sich kein Gutes zu ihm, suchen's auch nicht bei ihm.

faciat, aut pecus a contagione servet incolume, aut rem perditam restituat; cuius generis sunt incantatores, venefici et magicarum artium periti. Hi enim omnes cordis sui fiduciam alio collocant, quam in verum Deum, de quo nihil boni sibi persuadent, neque apud illum quaeritant quidquam boni.

Also verstehst du nun leichtlich, was und wieviel dies Gebot fordert, nämlich das ganze Herz des Menschen und alle Zubericht auf Gott allein und niemand anders. Denn Gott zu haben, kanst du wohl annehmen, daß man ihn nicht mit Fingern ergreifen und fassen, noch in Beutel stecken oder in Rasten schließen kann. Das heißt ihn aber gefaßt, wenn ihn das Herz ergreift und an ihm hängt. Mit dem Herzen aber an ihm hangen ist nichts anderes, denn sich gänzlich auf ihn verlassen. Darum will er uns von allem andern abwenden, daß außer ihm ist, und zu sich ziehen, weil er das einzige ewige Gut ist. Als sollte er sagen: Was du zuvor bei den Heiligen gesucht oder auf den Mammon und sonst vertraut hast, des versiehe dich alles zu mir und halte mich für den, der dir helfen und mit allem Guten reichlich überschützen will.

hoc est, opus et pecunia, cui totius cordis adhaerent fiducia, in quem omnem spei suae summam collocant, quique omnium communis-7] simum in terris idolum est. Qui pecunia aut opibus large instructus est, ille re sua probe constabilita securum se esse statuit, animo adeo laeto atque territo, quasi in medio paradiso vitam agat omnium felicissim-

10] Ita quoque, qui spei aut fiduciae suae summam in hoc sitam habet, quod ceteros ingenio, eruditione, sapientia, potentia, favore, multorum amicitia ac dignitate anteat, ille quoque Deum habet, sed non verum illum coelestem et unicum Deum. Hoc inde iterum haud difficulter perspicitur, quam confidenter, secure et insolenter hisce rebus abundantes agere soleant; rursus quam desperanter, quam abiecte et humiliter, quibus haec aut non adsunt aut aliquando casu fortuito subtra-

11] Ad haec considera, quales, quae nos rerum portenta sub papatu, horrenda coecitate percussi, admiserimus. Dolebat alicui denticulus, ille protinus ob honorem divae Apolloniae voluntario ieiunio carnem suam macerabat. Quodsi in metu erat, ne forte possessio sua aliquando conflagraret incendio, protinus in Laurentii clientelam ac patrocinium semet tradebat. Metuebant aliqui contagium pestilentiae, illico nuncupatis votis profectionem ad S. Sebastianum aut Rochium instituebant. Et id genus portenta atque abominaciones innumerabiles, quibus fiebat, ut quisque peculiarem divum sibi colendum eligeret, ad quem pressus necessitate preces fundebat currebatque. Huc pertinent etiam 12] illi, qui omnem modum hisce in rebus excedunt ac cum diabolo foedus ineunt, ut eos ampliter ditet, aut amicorum compotes [R. 406

13] Ad hunc modum iam haud obscure intelligis, quid et quantum hoc praecepto exigatur, nimirum totum cor hominis omnisque erga Deum et neminem alium fiducia. Quo pacto enim Deus haberi possit, ipse per facile aestimare potes, quod neque digitis apprehendi, nec in marsupium ut moneta condi, nec in cistam ut vasa argentea concludi possit.

14] Ita vero dicitur haberi et apprehendi Deum, quando corde apprehenditur eique soli hominis animus constanti atque inconcussa 15] adhaeret fiducia. Ceterum corde illi adhaerere nihil aliud est, quam eidem per omnia fidere. Eam ob rem ab omnibus aliis, quae extra illum sunt, nos conatur divellere atque abstrahere et ad se solum, quum unicum illud et immortale bonum sit, attrahere. Quasi ad hunc modum diceret: Quidquid antehac e divorum favore ac benevolentia tibi provensions, on which he sets all his heart, and which is also the most common idol on earth. He who has money and possessions feels secure, and is joyful and undismayed as though he were sitting in the midst of Paradise. On the other hand, he who has none doubts and is despondent, as though he knew of no God. For very few are to be found who are of good cheer, and who neither mourn nor complain if they have not Mammon. This [care and desire for money] sticks and clings to our nature, even to the grave.

So, too, whoever trusts and boasts that he possesses great skill, prudence, power, favor, friendship, and honor has also a god, but not this true and only God. This appears again when you notice how presumptuous, secure, and proud people are because of such possessions, and how despondent when they no longer exist or are withdrawn. Therefore I repeat that the chief explanation of this point is that to have a god is to have something in which the heart entirely trusts.

Besides, consider what, in our blindness, we have hitherto been practising and doing under the Papacy. If any one had toothache, he fasted and honored St. Apollonia [macerated his flesh by voluntary fasting to the honor of St. Apollonia]; if he was afraid of fire, he chose St. Lawrence as his helper in need; if he dreaded pestilence, he made a vow to St. Sebastian or Rochio, and a countless number of such abominations, where every one selected his own saint, worshiped him, and called for help to him in distress. Here belong those also, as, e. g., sorcerers and magicians, whose idolatry is most gross, and who make a covenant with the devil, in order that he may give them plenty of money or help them in love-affairs, preserve their cattle, restore to them lost possessions, etc. For all these place their heart and trust elsewhere than in the true God, look for nothing good to Him nor seek it from Him.

Thus you can easily understand what and how much this commandment requires, namely, that man's entire heart and all his confidence be placed in God alone, and in no one else. For to have God, you can easily perceive, is not to lay hold of Him with our hands or to put Him in a bag [as money], or to lock Him in a chest [as silver vessels]. But to apprehend Him means when the heart lays hold of Him and clings to Him. But to cling to Him with the heart is nothing else than to trust in Him entirely. For this reason He wishes to turn us away from everything else that exists outside of Him, and to draw us to Himself, namely, because He is the only eternal good. As though He would say: Whatever you have heretofore sought of the saints, or for whatever [things] you have trusted in turum pollicitus es, aut si quam in Mammona aut aliis rebus spem atque fiduciam reposuisti, omne illud iam tibi certa persuasionem de me pollicere, meque eum esse haud dubitanter exspectare, qui tibi laboranti opem laturus sit, teque omnibus rebus amplissime florentem et abundantem facturum.

Siehe, da hast du nun, was die rechte Ehre und Gottesdienst ist, so Gott gefällt, welchen er auch gebeut [gebietet] bei ewigem Zorn, nämlich daß das Herz keinen andern Trost noch Zuversicht wisse denn zu ihm, lasse sich auch nicht dabonreißten, sondern darüber wage und hintansetze alles, was auf Erden ist. Dagegen wirst du leichtlich sehen und urtheilen, wie die Welt eitel falschen Gottesdienst und Abgötterei treibt. Denn es ist nie kein Volk so ruchlos gewesen, das nicht einen Gottesdienst aufgerichtet und gehalten habe; da hat jedermann zum sonderlichen Gott aufgeworfen, dazu er sich Gutes, Hilfe und Trost versehen hat.

effera et ferina hominum natio, quae non aliquem Dei cultum constituerit et servavit. Omnes enim certatim eum Deum sibi colendum delegerunt, ex quo aliquid emolumenti, opis atque solatii speraverunt.

Als nämlich die Heiden, so ihr Datum [Vertrauen] auf Gewalt und Herrschaft stellten, warfen ihren Jupiter zum höchsten Gott auf, die andern, so nach Reichtum, Glück oder nach Lust und guten Tagen standen, Hercules, Merkur, Venus oder andere, die schwangeren Frauen Diana oder Lucina, und so fort machte ihm [sich] jedermann zum Gott, dazu ihn sein Herz trug, also daß eigentlich, auch nach aller Heiden Meinung, einen Gott haben heißt trauen und glauben. Aber daran feilet [fehlt] es, daß ihr Trauen falsch und unrecht ist; denn es ist nicht auf den einigen Gott gestellt, außer welchem wahrhaftig kein Gott ist im Himmel noch auf Erden. Darum die Heiden eigentlich ihren eigenen erdichteten Dünkel und Traum von Gott zum Abgott machen und sich auf eitel nichts verlassen. Also ist es um alle Abgötterei getan; denn sie steht nicht allein darin, daß man ein Bild aufrichtet und anbetet, sondern vornehmlich im Herzen, welches anderswo hingafset, Hilfe und Trost sucht bei den Creaturen, Heiligen oder Teufeln und sich Gottes nicht annimmt noch so viel Gutes zu ihm verzieht, daß er wolle helfen; glaubt auch nicht, daß von Gott komme, was ihm Gutes widerfährt.

erectum adoretur, sed in corde potissimum latet, apud creaturas, divos aut diabolos quaeritans, Deum non curans ac ne tantillum quidem benignitatis de illo sibi persuadens, quod velit opitulari. Multo minus credit Dei liberalitatem et munificentiam sibi contingere, quidquid bonarum rerum uspiam illi acciderit. [R. 401]

Darüber ist auch ein falscher Gottesdienst und die höchste Abgötterei, so wir bisher getrieben haben, und noch in der Welt regiert, darauf auch alle geistlichen Stände gegründet sind, welche allein das Gewissen betrifft, das da Hilfe, Trost und Seligkeit sucht in eigenen Werken, vermüht sich, Gott den Himmel abzuzwingen, und rechnet, wieviel es gestiftet, gesafet, Messe gehalten hat usw. Verläßt sich und pocht darauf, als wolle es nichts von ihm geschenkt nehmen, sondern selbst erwerben oder überflüssig verdienen, gerade als müßte er uns zu Dienst stehen und unser Schuldner, wir aber seine Lebeherrn sein. Was ist das anders, denn aus Gott einen Gözen, ja einen Apfalgott [Apostergott, aus Apfelfolz geschnitten] gemacht und sich selbst für Gott gehalten und aufgeworfen? Aber das ist ein wenig zu scharf, gehört nicht für die jungen Schüler.

16] Ecce, iam habes, quoniam verus Dei honor sit et cultus gratus illi et acceptus, quemque sub aeternae maledictionis poena praestandum praecipit, nimirum ut cor hominis nullam aliam consolationem, nullam aliam fiduciam sciat, quam ipsum solum, neque ullo pacto hoc se divelli patiatur, sed potius de omnibus quae sub sole sunt, semel in periculum veniat adeoque ipsius vitae citius iacturam faciat. 17] quam ut hunc Deum deserat. Iam vicissim facile videbis ac iudicabis, quomodo [R. 402] mundus nihil aliud quam falsum Dei cultum et idololatriam passim constituerit atque erceat. Nulla enim uspiam fuit usque adeo

18] Inde videmus gentiles, quorum proinde ac puppis, ut vulgato fertur proverbio, in opulentia, dominatu, imperiis sita fuit, pro summo Deo cumprimis coluisse suum Iovem. Porro alii, quorum scopus erant divitiae, tum propter rerum successus, aut qui sectabantur voluptates et delicias, Herculem, Mercurium Venerem aliosque religiose venerabantur. Multos sibi pro numine vindicabant. Atque ita dum inceptus quisque hunc sibi Deum venerandum proponebat, ad quem corde et animo ferebatur, Ita gentiliū quoque opinione Deum habere

19] nihil aliud est, quam fidere et credere. Iam hoc tamen errant et falluntur, quod eorum fiducia falsa et mendax est, neque enim a Deum verum recta tendit aut ordinata est extra quem pro certo constat nullum alium Deum esse, neque in coelo neque in terra.

20] Quocirca gentes plane suam propriam effectam persuasionem seu opinionem et summum, quod de Deo conceperunt, pro idolis sibi constituant, spemque suam prorsus

21] mere nihilo habent repositam. Ea plane omnis idololatriae est ratio. Neque enim hoc solum consistit, ut simulacrum aliquod, quod alio intentum est, opem ac consolationem Deum non curans ac ne tantillum quidem

22] Praeter haec alius adhuc superest falsus et erroneus Dei cultus, summam in se complectens idolatriam [idololatriam], quam hactenus strenue exercuimus, et adhuc passim in mundo viget ac regnat, in quem omnes religiosorum ordines fundati sunt, quique solatium attingit conscientiam, quae auxilium, consolationem et salutem quaerit ex propriis operibus, tantum sibi sumens, ut perverse conetur et temere, velit nolit Deus, in coelum percurrere, subducens secum rationem, quarum fundationum auctor extiterit, quantum ieiunaverit, quot missarum myriadas lectitaverit et spem suam in hoc reponens atque ferociter quasi nihil velit a Deo gratuito accipere, sed omnia sua opera ab ipso consequi et abundanter promereri, non secus ac si Deus nobis cogeretur obnoxius esse servitio et debito, et non 23] illius essemus domini. Quid hoc aliud

Mammon or anything else, expect it all of Me, and regard Me as the one who will help you and pour out upon you richly all good things.

Lo, here you have the meaning of the true honor and worship of God, which pleases God, and which He commands under penalty of eternal wrath, namely, that the heart know no other comfort or confidence than in Him, and do not suffer itself to be torn from Him, but, for Him, risk and disregard everything upon earth. On the other hand, you can easily see and judge how the world practises only false worship and idolatry. For no people has ever been so reprobate as not to institute and observe some divine worship; every one has set up as his special god whatever he looked to for blessings, help, and comfort.

Thus, for example, the heathen who put their trust in power and dominion elevated Jupiter as the supreme god; the others, who were bent upon riches, happiness, or pleasure, and a life of ease, Hercules, Mercury, Venus, or others; women with child, Diana or Lucina, and so on; thus every one made that his god to which his heart was inclined, so that even in the mind of the heathen to have a god means to trust and believe. But their error is this, that their trust is false and wrong; for it is not placed in the only God, besides whom there is truly no God in heaven or upon earth. Therefore the heathen really make their self-invented notions and dreams of God an idol, and put their trust in that which is altogether nothing. Thus it is with all idolatry; for it consists not merely in erecting an image and worshiping it, but rather in the heart, which stands gaping at something else, and seeks help and consolation from creatures, saints, or devils, and neither cares for God, nor looks to Him for so much good as to believe that He is willing to help, neither believes that whatever good it experiences comes from God.

Besides, there is also a false worship and extreme idolatry, which we have hitherto practised, and is still prevalent in the world, upon which also all ecclesiastical orders are founded, and which concerns the conscience alone, that seeks in its own works help, consolation, and salvation, presumes to wrest heaven from God, and reckons how many bequests it has made, how often it has fasted, celebrated Mass, etc. Upon such things it depends, and of them boasts, as though unwilling to receive anything from God as a gift, but desires itself to earn or merit it superabundantly, just as though He must serve us and were our debtor, and we His liege lords. What is this but reducing God to an idol, yea, [a fig image or] an apple-god, est, quam ex Deo sculneum simulacrum aut pomarium (quod aiunt) Deum facere ac semet ipsum pro Deo aestimare inque eius locum sufficere? Sed haec acutiora sunt, quam quae pueris ac tenerae aetati proponenda sint.

Daß sei aber den Einfältigen gesagt, daß sie den Verstand dieses Gebots wohl merken und behalten, daß man Gott allein trauen und sich eitel Gutes zu ihm versehen und von ihm erwarten soll, als der uns gibt Leib, Leben, Essen, Trinken, Nahrung, Gesundheit, Schutz, Frieden und alle Nothdurft zeitlicher und ewiger Güter, dazu bewahrt vor Unglück und, so uns etwas widersährt, rettet und aushilft, also daß Gott (wie genug gesagt) allein der ist, von dem man alles Gute empfängt und alles Unglücks los wird. Daher auch, achte ich, wir Deutschen Gott eben mit dem Namen von alters her nennen (seiner und artiger [treffender] denn keine andere Sprache) nach dem Wörtlein „Gut“, als der ein ewiger Quellbrunn ist, der sich mit eitel Güte übergeußt [übergießt], und von dem alles, was gut ist und heißt, ausfließt [ausfließt].

rius profecto et pulchrius quam ulla alia lingua) Deum (Gott) a bonitatis vocabulo (Gut) sermone nobis vernaculo vocamus, quippe qui fons perennis sit et perpetuo scaturiens, affluentissimis bonis exundans, et a quo omne, quidquid uspiam boni est et dicitur, emanat.

Denn ob uns gleich sonst viel Gutes von Menschen widerfährt, so heißt es doch alles von Gott empfangen, was man durch seinen Befehl und Ordnung empfängt. Denn unsere Eltern und alle Obrigkeit, dazu ein jeglicher gegen seinen Nächsten, haben den Befehl, daß sie uns allerlei Gutes tun sollen, also daß wir's nicht von ihnen, sondern durch sie von Gott empfangen. Denn die Creaturen sind nur die Hand, Röhre und Mittel, dadurch Gott alles gibt, wie er der Mutter Brüste und Milch gibt, dem Kinde zu reichen, Korn und allerlei Gewächs aus der Erde zur Nahrung, welcher Güter keine Creatur seines selbst machen kann.

infans lactandus et alendus est, et campo suam segetem et omnia fructuum genera, quibus vescimur, quorum nullum ulla creatura proprio conatu aut studio creare potest aut producere.

Verhalben soll sich kein Mensch unterstehen, etwas zu nehmen oder zu geben, es sei denn von Gott befohlen, daß man's erkenne für seine Gaben und ihm darum danke, wie dies Gebot fordert: darum auch solche Mittel, durch die Creaturen Gutes zu empfangen, nicht auszu schlagen sind, noch durch Vermessenheit andere Weise und Wege zu suchen, denn Gott befohlen hat. Denn das hieße nicht von Gott empfangen, sondern von ihm selbst gesucht.

Da sehe nun auf ein jeglicher bei sich selbst, daß man dies Gebot vor allen Dingen groß und hoch achte und in keinen Scherz schlage. Frage und forsche dein eigen Herz wohl, so wirst du wohl finden, ob es allein an Gott hänge oder nicht. Hast du ein solch Herz, das sich eitel Gutes zu ihm versehen kann, sonderlich in Nothen und Mangel, dazu alles geben und fahren lassen, was nicht Gott ist, so hast du den einigen rechten Gott. Wiederum, hängt es auf etwas anderes, dazu sich's mehr Gutes und Hilfe vertröset denn zu Gott, und nicht zu ihm läuft, sondern vor ihm flucht, wenn es ihm übel geht, so hast du einen andern Abgott.

24] Ceterum hoc dictum sit simplicioribus, quo huius praecepti sensum probe notent ac retineant, ut Deo soli fidamus, de eodem optima quaeque nobis polliceamur et exspectemus, tamquam de eo, qui nobis det corpus, donet vitam, largiatur victus alimoniam, offundat annonam, tribuat membrorum valetudinem, paret defensionem, conciliet pacem ac reliqua rerum temporalium et sempiternarum necessaria suppeditet; adhaec qui nos ab omnibus tueatur periculis et infortunio, et si quid adversi nobis evenerit, a malis nos clementer servet et potenter eripiat, ita ut Deus (quemadmodum abunde dictum est) solus ille pro certo habendus sit, a cuius bonitate omnia consequimur, tum cuius ope et [R. 409

25] opera ab omnibus malis eripimur. Atque hinc adeo est, ut mea fert opinio, quod nos Germani usque a maioribus nostris (praeclara

26] Nam quamquam aliqui multis bonis cumulemur et afficiamur ab hominibus, omnia tamen a Deo data et concessa dicuntur, quaecunque eius iussu et ordine undequaque percipimus. Maiores enim nostri et omnes, qui in magistratu sunt, adhaec quilibet erga proximum suum, hoc in mandatis a Deo acceperunt, ut omnis generis officia nobis ostendant et exhibeant, adeo ut haec non ab illis, sed per illos a Deo peculiariter accipiamus. Siquidem creaturae tantum manus sunt, canales, media et organa, quorum opera et adminiculo Deus omnia largitur hominibus. Quemadmodum matri dat ubera lacte secunda, quibus

27] Quapropter nemo conari debet, ut vel aliquid accipiat vel det, nisi a Deo praeceptum fuerit, ut pro Dei munere cognoscatur illique pro sua munificentia, prout hoc praeceptum exigit, agatur gratia. Quamobrem et haec media, videlicet per creaturas bona percipiendi, non sunt respuenda, neque temeraria praesumptione aliae rationes et viae investigandae, quam Deus praecipit. Hoc enim non esset a Deo accipere, sed a se ipso quaerere.

28] Iam quisque apud se exactam curam habeat, ut hoc praeceptum ante omnia magni faciat, neque locum esse existimet. Perquire et expiscare ipse cor tuum diligenter, [R. 410 et haud dubie invenies, num ex solo Deo pendeat necne. Quodsi eiusmodi tibi est animus, qui mera bona de divina bonitate persuadere ac polliceri sibi potest, praecipue vero tempore necessitatis et inopiae, adhaec, qui omnia potest contemnere, quidquid non est Deus: non est quod dubites te habere Deum illum verum et unicum. Contra, si ex alio quopiam pendet, de quo plus boni et opis sperat quam ab ipso Deo sese consequatur, nec ad illum confugit, sed potius aufugit rebus minime secundis, certum est te a Deo vero alienum esse et idolum aliud habere.

and elevating and regarding ourselves as God? But this is slightly too subtle, and is not for young pupils.

But let this be said to the simple, that they may well note and remember the meaning of this commandment, namely, that we are to trust in God alone, and look to Him and expect from Him naught but good, as from one who gives us body, life, food, drink, nourishment, health, protection, peace, and all necessities of both temporal and eternal things. He also preserves us from misfortune, and if any evil befall us, delivers and rescues us, so that it is God alone (as has been sufficiently said) from whom we receive all good, and by whom we are delivered from all evil. Hence also, I think, we Germans from ancient times call God (more elegantly and appropriately than any other language) by that name from the word Good, as being an eternal fountain which gushes forth abundantly nothing but what is good, and from which flows forth all that is and is called good.

For even though otherwise we experience much good from men, still whatever we receive by His command or arrangement is all received from God. For our parents, and all rulers, and every one besides with respect to his neighbor, have received from God the command that they should do us all manner of good, so that we receive these blessings not from them, but, through them, from God. For creatures are only the hands, channels, and means whereby God gives all things, as He gives to the mother breasts and milk to offer to her child, and corn and all manner of produce from the earth for nourishment, none of which blessings could be produced by any creature of itself.

Therefore no man should presume to take or give anything except as God has commanded, in order that it may be acknowledged as God's gift, and thanks may be rendered Him for it, as this commandment requires. On this account also these means of receiving good gifts through creatures are not to be rejected, neither should we in presumption seek other ways and means than God has commanded. For that would not be receiving from God, but seeking of ourselves.

Let every one, then, see to it that he esteem this commandment great and high above all things, and do not regard it as a joke. Ask and examine your heart diligently, and you will find whether it cleaves to God alone or not. If you have a heart that can expect of Him nothing but what is good, especially in want and distress, and that, moreover, renounces and forsakes everything that is not God, then you have the only true God. If, on the contrary, it cleaves to anything else, of which it expects more good and help than of God, and does not take refuge in Him, but in adversity flees from Him, then you have an idol, another god.

Derhalben, auf daß man sehe, daß Gott solches nicht will in [den] Wind geschlagen haben, sondern ernstlich drüber halten, hat er bei diesem Gebot zum ersten ein schrecklich Dräuen, danach eine schöne tröstliche Verheißung gesetzt, welche man auch wohl treiben soll und dem jungen Volk vorbleuen [wiederholt und eindringlich vortragen und erklären], daß sie es zu Sinne nehmen und behalten:

[Erklärung des Anhangs zum ersten Gebot.]

Denn ich bin der Herr, dein Gott, ein starker Eiferer, der da heimsucht der Väter Missethat an den Kindern bis ins dritte und vierte Glied, die mich hassen, und tue Barmherzigkeit an viel tausend, die mich liebhaben und meine Gebote halten.

Wiewohl aber diese Worte auf alle Gebote gehen (wie wir hernach hören werden), so sind sie doch eben zu diesem Hauptgebot gesetzt, darum daß daran am meisten liegt, daß ein Mensch ein recht Haupt habe; denn wo das Haupt recht geht, da muß auch das ganze Leben recht gehen, und wiederum [umgekehrt]. So lerne nun aus diesen Worten, wie zornig Gott ist über die, so sich auf irgend etwas außer ihm verlassen; wiederum, wie gütig und gnädig er ist denen, die ihm allein von ganzem Herzen trauen und glauben, also daß der Zorn nicht abläßt bis ins vierte Geschlecht oder Glied, dagegen die Wohlthat oder Güte geht über viel tausend, auf daß man nicht so sicher hingehet und sich in die Schanze schlage [sich dem Zufall überlasse], wie die rohen Herzen denken, es liege nicht große Macht dran. Er ist ein solcher Gott, der es nicht ungerochen läßt, daß man sich von ihm wendet, und nicht aufhört zu zürnen bis ins vierte Glied, so lange, bis sie durch und durch ausgerottet werden. Darum will er gefürchtet und nicht verachtet sein.

aut finem irascendi statuit, in quartam usque generationem, donec omnes funditus exstirpentur. Quamobrem vult esse formidini, non contemptui

Daß hat er auch beweiset [bewiesen] in allen Historien und Geschichten, wie uns die Schrift reichlich anzeigt, und noch tägliche Erfahrung wohl lehren kann. Denn er alle Abgötterei von Anfang her gar ausgerottet hat und um ihrer willen beide Heiden und Juden, wie er auch bei heutigem Tage allen falschen Gottesdienst fürzt, daß endlich alle, so darin bleiben, müssen untergehen. Darum, ob man gleich jetzt stolze, gewaltige und reiche Wänsche findet, die auf ihren Mammon tröhen, ungeachtet, Gott zürne oder lache, als die seinen Zorn wohl [ge]trauen auszustehen, so werden sie es doch nicht ausführen, sondern, ehe man sich's versteht, zu Scheitern gehen [in Stöße zer schlagen werden] mit allem, darauf sie getraut haben, wie alle anderen unter[ge]gangen sind, die sich wohl sicherer und mächtiger gewußt haben.

cui fidebant perperam, pessum ibunt, velut omnes ceteros periisse videmus, qui maiori freti potentia in utramvis, quod aiunt, aurem dormiebant.

Und eben um solcher harten Röpfe willen, die da meinen, weil er zusieht und läßt sie fest sitzen, 29] Ut autem videamus Dei voluntatem non esse, ut hoc suum praeceptum floccipendatur, sed certo statuatur, ipsum gravissime huius praecepti auctoritatem tueri velle, huic ipsi praecepto primum terribiles et horrendas minas adiecit, ac deinceps amabiles et consolatorias pollicitationes apposuit, quae quoque multoties repetendae et iuventutem etiam atque etiam inculcandae sunt, ut hasce imis sensibus reconditas tandem memori mente teneant.

Primi Praecepti Appendicis Expositio.

30] Quia ego sum Dominus Deus tuus fortis zelotes, visitans iniquitatem patrum in filios in tertiam et quartam generationem eorum, qui me oderunt, et faciens misericordiam in millia his, qui diligunt me et custodiunt praecepta mea.

31] Quamquam vero haec verba communiter ad omnia praecepta referenda sunt (ut infra audiemus), ea tamen huic praecepto, quod aliorum omnium caput est, peculiariter adiecta sunt, propterea quod permagni admodum referat hominem rectum habere caput. Salvis enim rebus capitis reliquam etiam [R. 411 vitam bene se habere necesse est, et contra.

32] Iam vero ex his verbis perdisce, quam implacabiliter Deus irascatur iis, qui rei cuiuspiam extra ipsum confidunt; et contra quanta clementia et misericordia eos prosequatur, qui ei soli toto corde fidunt et credunt, adeo ut iracundia sua nullum finem faciat saeviendi in tertiam et quartam generationem, et rursum, ut sua clementia multis millibus bene-
33] facere non desinat, ne tam securo ambulemus animo, nullam nostri aut harum rerum rationem habentes, quemadmodum impia illa planeque ferina corda cogitare consueverunt, non ita multum referre, qua ratione vixerint.

34] Eiusmodi Deus est, qui, si ab eo discedatur, inultum id non patitur, neque modum

35] Hoc ipsum multis etiam historiis et illis memorabilibus abunde testatum fecit, cuius rei nobis passim Scriptura facit indicium, atque etiamnum id ipsum in dies singulos quotidianis experimentis verissimum esse discimus. Siquidem iam inde ab initio omnem idololatriam funditus exstirpavit, huiusque gratia cum gentes tum Iudaeos, sicut adhuc hodie omnem falsum Dei cultum evertit, ut plane omnibus in ea permanentibus succumbendum sit. Quocirca, tametsi tam feroces et potentes inveniantur Sardanapali et Phalarides, qui ipsos Persas divitiis superant, quibus secure freti parum curant, irascaturne an arrideat Deus, ut, qui iram eius sustinere se posse confidunt, tamen tandem perniciem non effugient, sed dicto citius et praeter omnium expectationem cum tota sua pompa,

37] Et ob hos ipsos duos et prae fractos homines, qui existimant Deum, quia ad [R. 412

In order that it may be seen that God will not have this commandment thrown to the winds, but will most strictly enforce it, He has attached to it first a terrible threat, and then a beautiful, comforting promise which is also to be urged and impressed upon young people, that they may take it to heart and retain it:

[Exposition of the Appendix to the First Commandment.]

For I am the Lord, thy God, strong and jealous, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me and keep My commandments.

Although these words relate to all the commandments (as we shall hereafter learn), yet they are joined to this chief commandment because it is of first importance that men have a right head; for where the head is right, the whole life must be right, and vice versa. Learn, therefore, from these words how angry God is with those who trust in anything but Him, and again, how good and gracious He is to those who trust and believe in Him alone with the whole heart; so that His anger does not cease until the fourth generation, while, on the other hand, His blessing and goodness extend to many thousands, lest you live in such security and commit yourself to chance, as men of brutal heart, who think that it makes no great difference [how they live]. He is a God who will not leave it unavenged if men turn from Him, and will not cease to be angry until the fourth generation, even until they are utterly exterminated. Therefore He is to be feared, and not to be despised.

He has also demonstrated this in all history, as the Scriptures abundantly show and daily experience still teaches. For from the beginning He has utterly extirpated all idolatry, and, on account of it, both heathen and Jews; even as at the present day He overthrows all false worship, so that all who remain therein must finally perish. Therefore, although proud, powerful, and rich worldlings [Sardanapaluses and Phalarides, who surpass even the Persians in wealth] are now to be found, who boast defiantly of their Mammon, with utter disregard whether God is angry at or smiles on them, and dare to withstand His wrath, yet they shall not succeed, but before they are aware, they shall be wrecked, with all in which they trusted; as all others have perished who have thought themselves more secure or powerful.

And just because of such hardened heads who imagine because God connives and allows er wisse nichts drum oder nehme sich's nicht an, muß er also dreinschlagen und strafen, daß er's nicht vergeffen kann, bis auf ihre Kindeslinder, auf daß sich jedermann daran stoße und sehe, daß [es] ihm kein Scherz ist. Denn diese sind's auch, die er meint, als er spricht: „die mich hassen“, das ist, die auf ihrem Troß und Stolz beharren; was man ihnen predigt oder sagt, wollen sie nicht hören; straft man sie, daß sie sich erkennen und bessern, ehe die Strafe angeht, so werden sie toll und töricht, auf daß sie den Zorn redlich verdienen, wie wir auch jetzt an Bischöfen und Fürsten täglich erfahren.

rabiam vertuntur, ut ita omnibus modis iram Dei egregie promereantur. Quemadmodum hodie huius rei certissimum documentum in episcopis et principibus nostris experimur.

Wie schrecklich aber diese Dräwmorte sind, so viel mächtiger[er] Trost ist an der Verheißung, daß, die sich allein an Gott halten, sollen's gewiß sein, daß er Barmherzigkeit an ihnen erzeigen will, das ist, eitel Gutes und Wohlthat beweisen, nicht allein für sie, sondern auch an ihren Kindern bis ins tausend und abermal tausend Geschlecht. Solches sollte uns ja bewegen und treiben, unser Herz auf Gott zu erwägen [vertrauen zu lassen] mit aller Zuerberst, so wir begehrten, alles Gute zeitlich und ewig zu haben, weil sich die hohe Majestät so hoch erhebt [so große Verheißung gibt], so herzlich reizt und so reichlich verheißt.

Darum lasse es ihm [sich] ein jeglicher ernstlich zu Herzen gehen, daß man's nicht achte, als habe es ein Mensch geredet. Denn es gilt dir entweder ewigen Segen, Glück und Seligkeit oder ewigen Zorn, Unglück und Herzeleid. Was willst du mehr haben oder begehren, denn daß er dir so freundlich verheißt, er wolle dein sein mit allem Guten, dich schützen und [dir] helfen in allen Nöten?

plus etiam postulabis, quam quod tam amanter tibi pollicetur, nimirum, se tuum esse velle cum omni rerum copia, se tui defensorem et auxiliatorem in adversis futurum?

Es sieht aber leider daran, daß die Welt der keines nicht glaubt, noch für Gottes Wort hält, weil sie sieht, daß die, so Gott und nicht dem Mammon trauen, Kummer und Not leiden, und der Teufel sich wider sie sperrt und wehrt, daß sie kein Geld, Gunst noch Ehre, dazu kaum das Leben behalten: wiederum, die dem Mammon dienen, haben Gewalt, Gunst, Ehre und Gut und alle Gemach [Annehmlichkeiten] vor der Welt. Deshalb muß man solche Worte fassen, eben wider solchen Schein gestellt, und wissen, daß sie nicht lügen noch trügen, sondern wahr müssen werden.

tranquillitate mundo venerandi atque spectabiles. Eam ob rem talia verba memoriae infigenda sunt, ut huic rerum mundanarum larvae obtutui opponantur; neque ignorandum est haec non posse mentiri aut fallere, sed esse et fore veracissima.

Denke du selbst zurück oder frage ihm nach und sage mir: die alle ihre Sorge und Fleiß darauf gesetzt haben, daß sie groß Gut und Geld zusammenharrten, was haben sie endlich geschafft? So wirst du finden, daß sie Mühe und Arbeit verloren haben, oder, ob sie gleich große Schätze zu Hause [ge]bracht, doch zerstoßen und zerflogen sind, also daß sie selbst ihres Gutes nie sind froh tempus connivet eosque secure sua potentia frui permittit, vel ignarum plane esse istarum rerum, vel earum cura non affici, tanta necessario utitur plectendi saevitia, ut neque natorum natos oblivioni possit tradere, ut quisque haec repetens animo tantam animi securitatem et contemptum emendet et videat Deum [38] non iocari. Nam illi ipsi sunt, quos putat et perstringit, ita iniqui: Qui me oderunt, hoc est, qui propria freti fiducia insolenter intumescunt atque ferociunt, qui, quidquid pro concione illis dicatur, audire recusant, qui correpti, ut, priusquam obruantur supplicio, flagitiosam vitam emendent, in furorem ac

[39] Porro autem, quanto atrociores et terribiliores hae sunt comminationes, tanto potentior est promissionis consolatio, nempe quod Deus iis, qui semet ipsis totos omni tradunt fiducia, misericordiam suam certo ostensurus sit, hoc est, omnis generis benefacta exhibiturus, non tantum vero illis ipsis, sed ipsorum quoque natis, longa propagatione, in mille [40] usque et iterum mille generationes. Haec, inquam, commovere nos debent et impellere, ut totius cordis nostri cogitationem omni fiducia in Deum iactemus, postulantes, ut omnium rerum et temporalium et immortalium fiamus compotes, quando summa maiestas Dei tanta tam benigne et clementer nobis offert, tam amanter provocat, adeo ubertim pollicetur.

[41] Quare quisque Christianorum det operam, ut sibi haec verba cordi sint, neque in eam opinionem veniat, ut existimet haec dicta esse ab homine. Res tua agitur; semel enim hic de summa salutis tuae periclitaberis, ut aut perpetuo salvam, felicem et beatam [R. 413] vitam exigas, aut ut perpetuo damnatus Dei inclementia omnes calamitates et aerumnas ad inferos non dicendis cruciatibus torquendus exhaurias. Quid vero habebis amplius aut tibi pollicetur, nimirum, se tuum esse velle cum them to rest in security, that He either is entirely ignorant or cares nothing about such matters, He must deal a smashing blow and punish them, so that He cannot forget it unto children's children; so that every one may take note and see that this is no joke to Him. For they are those whom He means when He says: Who hate Me, i. e., those who persist in their defiance and pride; whatever is preached or said to them, they will not listen; when they are reprov'd, in order that they may learn to know themselves and amend before the punishment begins, they become mad and foolish so as to fairly merit wrath, as now we see daily in bishops and princes.

[42] Sed pro dolor! in hoc omnes fallimur, quod mundus horum verborum nullum verum esse credit, neque verba Dei esse existimat, videns eos, qui suam fiduciam in Deum et non in Mammonam receierunt, omni miseriarum genere affectos vix vitam trahere, diabolo illis ipsis reluctantante et obstante, ut nihil opum, nihil favoris, nihil dignitatis uspiam consequantur, imo vitam ipsam acre tueantur et obtineant. Contra illi, quorum summa spes atque fiducia est Mammon, ad amplissimos dignitatis gradus evecti in sublimi resident imperio, potentia, favore, dignitate et omni

[43] Iam vero paulisper retroversa cogitatione repete tecum animo, aut alioqui perquire ab aliis, mihi quae responde, quidnam illi, quorum omnis conatus, studium, cura et diligentia tantum eo destinata fuere, ut immensas opes per fas atque nefas cumulare atque reponerent, quidnam, inquam, illi tandem effecerint? Haud dubie invenies, eos omnes

But terrible as are these threatenings, so much the more powerful is the consolation in the promise, that those who cling to God alone should be sure that He will show them mercy, that is, show them pure goodness and blessing, not only for themselves, but also to their children and children's children, even to the thousandth generation and beyond that. This ought certainly to move and impel us to risk our hearts in all confidence with God, if we wish all temporal and eternal good, since the Supreme Majesty makes such sublime offers and presents such cordial inducements and such rich promises.

Therefore let every one seriously take this to heart, lest it be regarded as though a man had spoken it. For to you it is a question either of eternal blessing, happiness, and salvation, or of eternal wrath, misery, and woe. What more would you have or desire than that He so kindly promises to be yours with every blessing, and to protect and help you in all need?

But, alas! here is the failure, that the world believes nothing of this, nor regards it as God's Word, because it sees that those who trust in God and not in Mammon suffer care and want, and the devil opposes and resists them, that they have neither money, favor, nor honor, and, besides, can scarcely support life; while, on the other hand, those who serve Mammon have power, favor, honor, possessions, and every comfort in the eyes of the world. For this reason, these words must be grasped as being directed against such appearances; and we must consider that they do not lie or deceive, but must come true.

Reflect for yourself or make inquiry and tell me: Those who have employed all their care and diligence to accumulate great possessions and wealth, what have they finally attained? You will find that they have wasted their toil and labor, or even though they have amassed great treasures, they have been dis-vel cum pulvisculo comperies, ut neque ipsi unquam ex tantis opibus ullam voluptatem perciperint, neque postea quidquam ad tertium heredem pervenerit.

[ge]worden und [es] hernach nicht an die dritten Erben gereicht hat.

[R. 414]

Exempel wirst du genug finden in allen Historien, auch von alten erfahrenen Leuten; siehe sie nur an und habe Achtung drauf.

Saul war ein großer König, von Gott erwählt, und ein frommer Mann; aber da er eingeseffen war [da er sich festgesetzt hatte] und sein Herz lieb finten, hing sich an seine Krone und Gewalt, mußte er untergehen mit allem, das er hatte, daß auch seiner Kinder keins blieb.

Wiederum David war ein armer, verachteter
Mann, verjagt und gescheucht, daß er seines Lebens nirgends sicher war; noch [dennoch] mußte er vor dem Saul bleiben und König werden. Denn diese Worte mußten bleiben und wahr werden, weil
Gott nicht lügen noch trügen kann. Laß dich nur den Teufel und Welt mit ihrem Schein, der wohl eine Zeitlang währt, aber endlich nichts ist, nicht betrügen!

Darum laßt uns das erste Gebot wohl lernen, daß wir sehen, wie Gott keine Vermeessenheit noch Vertrauen auf einig ander Ding leiden will und nicht Höheres von uns fordert denn eine herzliche Zuversicht alles Guten, also daß wir richtig und stracks vor uns gehen und aller Güter, so Gott gibt, [ge]brauchen, nicht weiter, denn wie ein Schufter seiner Nadel, Ahle und Draht braucht zur Arbeit und danach hinweglegt, oder wie ein Gast der Herberge, Futter und Lager, allein zur zeitlichen Notdurft, ein jeglicher in seinem Stand nach Gottes Ordnung, und lasse nur keines seinen Herrn oder Abgott sein. Daß sei genug vom ersten Gebot, welches wir mit Worten haben müssen austreiben, weil daran allermeist die Macht liegt, darum daß (wie vor[hin] gesagt), wo das Herz wohl mit Gott dran ist und dies Gebot gehalten wird, so gehen die andern alle hernach.

fusioribus explanandum fuit, quando summa et quod (ut praedictum) ubi cordi cum Deo bene cetera omnia apte consequuntur.

Das zweite Gebot.

Du sollst Gottes Namen nicht vergeblich führen.

Gleichwie das erste Gebot das Herz unterweist und den Glauben gelehrt hat, also führt uns dies
Gebot heraus und richtet den Mund und die
Zunge gegen Gott. Denn das erste, so aus dem
Herzen bricht und sich erzeigt, sind die Worte.
Wie ich nun droben gelehrt habe zu antworten, was da heiße einen Gott haben, also muß du auch den Verstand dieses und aller Gebote lernen luisse et laborem et operam. Aut quamquam inaestimandos thesauros multo sudore partos accumulaverint, ita tamen evanuisse eos ipsos

44) Harum rerum exempla abunde multa omnes suppeditabunt historiae, et haec eadem a natu maioribus multarum rerum peritis audies; tantum vide, ut earundem curam et rationem non levem habere digneris.

45) Pro certo sane constat Saulem regem fuisse amplissimum, ab ipso Deo in regni ad-ministrationem surrogatum, vitae non improbare; sed iam consecutus imperium, quum a Deo suo declinasset animo omnemque suam fiduciam in potentia, corona ac sceptro suo collocatam haberet, succumbendum ac pereun-dum illi erat funditus, una cum rebus omnibus, quas possederat, adeo ut neque liberorum suorum ullus superstes maneret.

46) Contra David, infimae fortunae homo, erat abiectus et pastor, fugatus et passim actus insectationibus, ut ubique fere de vita veniret in periculum; attamen a Saulis im-petu et insidiis tuto custodiebatur inque eius locum rex creabatur. Oportebat enim haec verba manere et vera fieri, posteaquam Deus mentiri nescit aut fallere. Tantum vide, ne diabolus et mundus hac sua splendida facie, quae quidem ad tempus durat, sed profecto umbra aut somnio vanior est atque incertior, tibi imprudenti imponant.

47) Quamobrem primi praecepti sensum ex-acte nobis perdiscendum esse statuo, ut videamus, quam Deus nullo modo vanam animi praesumptionem aut falsam erga aliam rem extra se fiduciam tolerare queat. Nec quidquam tantopere a nobis postulat quam certam quandam et indubitam omnium bonarum rerum de se persuasionem, ita ut recta via porro progredientes rebus omnibus, quas Deus largiri nobis consuevit, non aliter utamur atque sutor quispiam acu, subula floque sutorio ad conficiendum opus suum, quo confecto illa deponit, aut quemadmodum hospites [R. 415 diversorio: ut de concessis opibus victum et amictum habeamus, prout diurni victus necessitas exegerit, quisque in suo statu, in quem divina vocatione et ordine constitutus est, nec quidquam rei nostrum dominum aut idolum 48) esse permittamus. Et haec de primo praecepto dicta sufficiant, quod verbis aliquanto caput totius pietatis in eo vertatur, propterea convenit, et hoc praeceptum servatum fuerit,

Praeceptum II.

49) Non assumes nomen Domini Dei tui in vanum.

50) Quemadmodum primo praecepto cor
hominis institutum est et fidei ratio tradita, ita hoc secundum foras nos producit, osque ac linguam erga Deum fingit ac format. Primum enim, quod natum e corde ebullit et progreditur seque ostendit, sermo est. Itaque quemadmodum supra respondendum docui, quid sit habere Deum, ita quoque huius et persed and scattered, so that they themselves have never found happiness in their wealth, and afterwards it never reached the third generation.

Instances of this you will find a plenty in all histories, also in the memory of aged and experienced people. Only observe and ponder them.

Saul was a great king, chosen of God, and a godly man; but when he was established on his throne, and let his heart decline from God, and put his trust in his crown and power, he had to perish with all that he had, so that none even of his children remained.

David, on the other hand, was a poor, despised man, hunted down and chased, so that he nowhere felt secure of his life; yet he had to remain in spite of Saul, and become king. For these words had to abide and come true, since God cannot lie or deceive. Only let not the devil and the world deceive you with their show, which indeed remains for a time, but finally is nothing.

Let us, then, learn well the First Commandment, that we may see how God will tolerate no presumption nor any trust in any other object, and how He requires nothing higher of us than confidence from the heart for everything good, so that we may proceed right and straightforward and use all the blessings which God gives no farther than as a shoemaker uses his needle, awl, and thread for work, and then lays them aside, or as a traveler uses an inn, and food, and his bed only for temporal necessity, each one in his station, according to God's order, and without allowing any of these things to be our lord or idol. Let this suffice with respect to the First Commandment, which we have had to explain at length, since it is of chief importance, because, as before said, where the heart is rightly disposed toward God and this commandment is observed, all the others follow.

The Second Commandment.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain.

As the First Commandment has instructed the heart and taught [the basis of] faith, so this commandment leads us forth and directs the mouth and tongue to God. For the first objects that spring from the heart and manifest themselves are words. Now, as I have taught above how to answer the question, what it is to have a god, so you must learn einfältig fassen und von dir sagen [auf dich anwenden].

Wenn man nun fragt: Wie verstehst du das andere Gebot, und was heißt Gottes Namen vergeblich führen oder mißbrauchen? antworte auf's kürzeste also: Das heißt Gottes Namen mißbrauchen, wenn man Gott den Herrn nennt, welcherlei Weise es geschehen mag, zur Lüge oder allerlei Untugend. Darum ist so viel geboten, daß man Gottes Namen nicht fälschlich anziehe oder in [den] Mund nehme, da das Herz wohl anders weiß oder je anders wissen soll; als unter denen, die vor Gericht schwören, und ein Teil dem andern leugt [lügt]. Denn Gottes Namen kann man nicht höher mißbrauchen, denn damit zu lügen und trügen. Das laß das Deutlich und leichtesten Verstand dieses Gebots bleiben.

Aus diesem kann nun jedermann selbst wohl ausrechnen, wann und wie mancherlei Gottes Name mißbraucht wird, wiewohl alle Mißbräuche zu erzählen nicht möglich ist. Doch kürzlich auszurichten, geschieht aller Mißbrauch göttlichen Namens erstlich in weltlichen Handeln und Sachen, so Geld, Gut, Ehre betreffen, es sei öffentlich vor Gericht, auf dem Markt oder sonst, da man schwört und falsche Eide tut auf Gottes Namen oder die Sache auf seine Seele nimmt. Und sonderlich ist solches viel ganghaftig in Ehesachen, da ihrer zwei hingehen, einander heimlich geloben und danach verschwören.

Allermeist aber geht der Mißbrauch in geistlichen Sachen, die das Gewissen betangen, wenn falsche Prediger aufstehen und ihren Lügentand für Gottes Wort dargeben [ausgeben, darlegen].

Siehe, das heißt sich alles mit Gottes Namen geschmückt oder schön wollen sein und recht haben, es geschehe in groben Welthandeln oder hohen, subtilen Sachen des Glaubens und der Lehre. Und unter die Lügner gehören auch die Lästermäuler, nicht allein die gar groben, jedermann wohl bekannt, die da ohne Scheu Gottes Namen schänden (welche nicht in unsere, sondern des Helleners Schule gehören), sondern auch die, so die Wahrheit und Gottes Wort öffentlich lästern und dem Teufel geben. Davon sezt nicht not, weiter zu sagen.

blasphema impietas non in nostra, sed carnificis schola emendanda est), verum etiam illi, qui veritatem et Verbum Dei propalam contumeliose lacerant ac diaboli verbum impudenter et impie esse confirmant. De quibus in praesentia amplius verba facienda non sunt.

Hier laß uns nun lernen und zu Herzen fassen, wie groß an diesem Gebot gelegen ist, daß wir uns mit allem Fleiß hüten und scheuen vor allerlei Mißbrauch des heiligen Namens, als vor der höchsten Sünde, so äußerlich geschehen kann. Denn lügen und trügen ist an ihm selbst große Sünde, wird aber viel schwerer, wenn man sie noch rechtfertigen will und, sie zu bestätigen, Gottes Namen anzuucht [anzieht] und zum Schandbedel macht, aliorum praeceptorum omnium intelligentiam simpliciter comprehendas atque pronunties necesse est.

51) Interrogatus ergo, quomodo secundum praeceptum intelligis, aut quid significat nomen Dei in vanum sumere sive eo abuti, responde ad hunc modum paucissimis: Hoc est divino abuti nomine, quando Dei nomen quacunque ratione ad confirmanda mendacia aut alia id genus vitia atque flagitia tuenda usurpamus. Hinc tantum valet huius praecepti constitutio, ne Dei nomen falso citemus, aut in os sumamus, quando cor longe aliter sibi conscium est, aut rem aliter habere non ignorat, aut omnino aliter scire debebat. Veluti iis persaepe solet contingere, qui lites in foro et curia sectantur et iudicia, et [R. 418] altera pars aliquid perfide abiurat alteri. 52) Neque enim alia ratione nomine Dei perinde abutimur, quam si eo ad mentiendum et fallendum turpiter abutamur. Et hic huius praecepti sensus sit facillimus et simplicissimus.

53) Ex his omnibus quivis facile colligere potest, quoties et quam multifariam divino nomine abutantur homines, tametsi omnes abusus perstringere impossibile sit. Ut tamen haec paucis expediamus, nominis divini abusus omnium maxime in negotiis consistit et causis saecularibus, illis nimirum, quae ad rem pecuniariam, opes aut honores pertinent. Sive illud propalam fiat in contentione forensi sive alibi, ubi iuratur divini nominis adducto testimonio, periuraturque, aut ipsa anima oppugnetur periurio. Cumprimis vero hoc vehementer locum habet in re connubiali, ubi duo furtim contracto inter se matrimonio, tandem quum ad iudices ventum est, datam fidem abiurat alter alteri.

54) Omnium vero maxime hic divini nominis abusus in rebus viget spiritualibus, quae pertingunt conscientiam, falsis doctoribus emergentibus, suaque mendacia divini Verbi loco venditantibus.

55) Ecce, omnibus hisce rationibus nihil aliud quaerunt aut agunt homines, quam ut semet divini nominis praetextu exornent perfide, pravo quodam consilio iusti esse contententes, sive illud in mundanis et carnalibus sive in sublimioribus et subtilioribus fidei et doctrinae negotiis fieri soleat. Iam in mentientium numerum etiam blasphematores referendi sunt, non illi quidem crassi et impudentes, vulgo noti omnibus, qui nullius prohibiti metu aut reverentia nomen Dei ore prorsus illoto, blasphemo et procaci subinde conspurcant et contaminant (quorum [R. 417]

56) Discamus itaque hoc loco diligenterque volumus animo, quantum intersit hoc praeceptum servare aut transgredi, ut omni studio diligentiaque caveamus vitemusque omnem sacratissimi nominis Dei abusus et contumeliam, tamquam peccatum omnium maximum et pessimum, quod externe designari potest. Nam tametsi mentiri et fallere per se satis grande sit flagitium, multo tamen to comprehend simply the meaning of this and all the commandments, and to apply it to yourself.

If, then, it be asked: How do you understand the Second Commandment, or what is meant by taking in vain, or misusing God's name? answer briefly thus: It is misusing God's name when we call upon the Lord God, no matter in what way, for purposes of falsehood or wrong of any kind. Therefore this commandment enjoins this much, that God's name must not be appealed to falsely, or taken upon the lips, while the heart knows well enough, or should know, differently; as among those who take oaths in court, where one side lies against the other. For God's name cannot be misused worse than for the support of falsehood and deceit. Let this remain the exact German and simplest meaning of this commandment.

From this every one can readily infer when and in how many ways God's name is misused, although it is impossible to enumerate all its misuses. Yet, to tell it in a few words, all misuse of the divine name occurs, first, in worldly business and in matters which concern money, possessions, honor, whether it be publicly in court, in the market, or wherever else men make false oaths in God's name, or pledge their souls in any matter. And this is especially prevalent in marriage affairs, where two go and secretly betroth themselves to one another, and afterward abjure [their plighted troth].

But the greatest abuse occurs in spiritual matters, which pertain to the conscience, when false preachers rise up and offer their lying vanities as God's Word.

Behold, all this is decking one's self out with God's name, or making a pretty show, or claiming to be right, whether it occur in gross, worldly business or in sublime, subtile matters of faith and doctrine. And among liars belong also blasphemers, not alone the very gross, well known to every one, who disgrace God's name without fear (these are not for us, but for the hangman to discipline); but also those who publicly traduce the truth and God's Word and consign it to the devil. Of this there is no need now to speak further.

Here, then, let us learn and take to heart the great importance of this commandment, that with all diligence we may guard against and dread every misuse of the holy name, as the greatest sin that can be outwardly committed. For to lie and deceive is in itself a great sin, but is greatly aggravated when we attempt to justify it, and seek to confirm also daß aus einer Lüge eine zweifältige, ja vielfältige Lüge wird.

Darum hat Gott diesem Gebot auch ein ernstlich Träumwort angehängt, das heißt also: „Denn der Herr wird den nicht unschuldig halten, der seinen Namen vergeblich führt.“ Das ist, es soll keinem geschenkt werden noch ungekraft abgehen. Denn so wenig er will ungerochen [ungerächt] lassen, daß man das Herz von ihm wende, so wenig will er leiden, daß man seinen Namen führe, die Lügen zu beschönen [schmücken]. Nun ist es leider eine gemeine Plage in aller Welt, daß ja so wenig find, die nicht Gottes Namen zur Lüge und aller Bosheit brauchen, so wenig als ihrer find, die allein von Herzen auf Gott vertrauen.

Denn diese schöne Tugend haben wir von Natur alle an uns, daß, wer eine Schalkheit getan hat, gerne wollte seine Schande bedecken [zudecken, verbergen] und schmücken, daß niemand [es] sähe noch wüßte, und ist keiner so verwegen, der sich begangener Bosheit vor jedermann rühme, wollen's alle heimlich [heimlich] getan haben, ehe [lieber als daß] man's gewahr wird. Greift man dann einen an, so muß Gott mit seinem Namen herhalten und die Büberei fromm, die Schande zu Ehren machen. Das ist der gemeine Weltlauf, wie eine große Sintflut eingerissen in allen Länden. Darum haben wir auch zu Lohn, was wir suchen und verbienen: Pestilenz, Krieg, Leuzung, Feuer, Wasser, ungeraten Weib, Kinder, Gefinde und allerlei Unrat. Wo sollte sonst des Jammers so viel herkommen? Es ist noch große Gnade, daß uns die Erde trägt und nährt.

cursus, quo veluti quodam diluvio omnes regiones orbis terrarum inundant. Hinc nostris meritis digna quoque praemia capimus, et quod nostra blasphemia procacissime quaerimus, hoc nobis plena manu effunditur, nempe pestilentia, motus bellici, annonae caritas, incendia, aquarum inundationes, degeneres uxores et liberi, perfida familia et id genus malorum examina innumerabilia. Unde enim tantum calamitatum alioqui nobis eveniret? Adhuc bene magna gratia haec est, quod terra nos ferat atque nutriet.

Darum sollte man vor allen Dingen das junge Volk ernstlich dazu halten und gewöhnen, daß sie dieses und andere Gebote hoch vor Augen hätten und, wo sie übertreten, flugs mit der Rute hinter ihnen her sein und das Gebot vorhalten und immer einbleuen [einprägen], auf daß sie also aufgezoogen würden nicht allein mit Strafe, sondern auch zur Schen und Furcht vor Gott.

So verstehst du nun, was Gottes Namen mißbrauchen heiße, nämlich (aufs kürzeste zu wiederholen) entweder bloß zur Lüge und etwas unter dem Namen ausgeben, das nicht ist, oder zu fluchen, schwören, zaubern und, Summa, wie man mag, Bosheit auszurichten.

Daneben mußt du auch wissen, wie man des Namens recht brauche [gebrauche]. Denn neben

gravius illud reddunt et maiori etiam cumulant flagitio, conantes illud defendere periurio, ac turpiter mentiendo divino nomine abutenes pro praetextu turpitudinis. Qua ratione fit, ut ex unico mendacio periurii accessione cumulato multiplicia pullulent mendacia.

57] Eam ob rem Deus huic quoque pracepto saevam comminationem annexuit, cuius haec sunt verba: Nec enim habebit insontem Dominus eum, qui assumpserit nomen Domini Dei sui in vanum. Hoc est, nemo hoc impune laturus est, sed poenas graves dabit blasphemiae. Quam enim inultum non patitur Deus, si quis cordis fiducia ab eo discedat, tam impunitum non sinet, si quis pro tuendis mendaciis falso usurpet nomen eius. Sed o Deum 58] immortalem, quae tam execranda consuetudo divinum nomen blasphemandi omnium hominum animos corripuit! Nam perinde pauci sunt, qui salutifero Dei nomine ad mendaciam, vanitatem et omnem iniquitatem suam tuendam non abutuntur, quam illorum, qui solum ex animo Deo credunt fiduntque.

59] Siquidem illa praeclara virtus (si Christo placet) omnibus nobis natura insita est, ut is, qui aliquod admisit criminose flagitium, suam turpitudinem summa ope celare [R. 418] studeat, ne cuius oculis pateat, aut aliquis designati facinoris sibi sit conscius. Usque adeo enim dissolutum aut sui negligentem et deploratae malitiae arbitror esse neminem, qui perpetrati flagitii sese iacet coram omnibus. Verum nemo non studet peccare clandestum et subdole, priusquam palam fiat, aut resciscant homines. Tum si quis eam ob rem invaditur aut insimulatur facinoris, protinus nomen Dei patet iniuriis estque obnoxium contumeliis. Hoc enim quisque suae culpa praetexit, cogiturque nomen illud omnibus modis venerandum e vitii virtutes, ex ignominia 60] gloriam, e dedecore honores facere. Et hic est iam totius mundi communis quidam

cursus, quo veluti quodam diluvio omnes regiones orbis terrarum inundant. Hinc nostris meritis digna quoque praemia capimus, et quod nostra blasphemia procacissime quaerimus, hoc nobis plena manu effunditur, nempe pestilentia, motus bellici, annonae caritas, incendia, aquarum inundationes, degeneres uxores et liberi, perfida familia et id genus malorum examina innumerabilia. Unde enim tantum calamitatum alioqui nobis eveniret? Adhuc bene magna gratia haec est, quod terra nos ferat atque nutriet.

61] Quamobrem summo studio iuventus eo perducenda est et assuefacienda sedulo, ut secundum hoc praceptum una cum primo praerenter habeat magnique faciat, proque transgressionem protinus emendetur ferulis, posito ante oculos pracepto et subinde inculcato, ut ita pueri non tantum educuntur disciplina et verberibus, sed Dei quoque metu et reverentia coercerantur.

62] Iam ergo intelligis, quid sit abuti divino nomine, nimirum (ut breviter decurram per capita) quando aut simpliciter pro tuendo mendacio abutimur, aut aliud quidpiam, quod non est, sub divini nominis praetextu molimur, quo alterum fraudulenter circumducimus, aut illud blasphemando, execrando, [R. 419] maledicendo, incantando ignominiose usurpamus. Breviter, quacunque ratione eius adminiculo perpetrari possunt flagitia.

63] Adhaec scitu quoque opus est, quomodo Dei nomine recte utamur. Hisce enim verbis, it by invoking the name of God and using it as a cloak for shame, so that from a single lie a double lie, nay, manifold lies, result.

For this reason, too, God has added a solemn threat to this commandment, to wit: For the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain. That is: It shall not be condoned to any one nor pass unpunished. For as little as He will leave it unavenged if any one turn his heart from Him, as little will He suffer His name to be employed for dressing up a lie. Now, alas! it is a common calamity in all the world that there are as few who are not using the name of God for purposes of lying and all wickedness as there are those who with their heart trust alone in God.

For by nature we all have within us this beautiful virtue, to wit, that whoever has committed a wrong would like to cover up and adorn his disgrace, so that no one may see it or know it; and no one is so bold as to boast to all the world of the wickedness he has perpetrated; all wish to act by stealth and without any one being aware of what they do. Then, if any one be arraigned, the name of God is dragged into the affair and must make the villainy look like godliness, and the shame like honor. This is the common course of the world, which, like a great deluge, has flooded all lands. Hence we have also as our reward what we seek and deserve: pestilences, wars, famines, conflagrations, floods, wayward wives, children, servants, and all sorts of defilement. Whence else should so much misery come? It is still a great mercy that the earth bears and supports us.

Therefore, above all things, our young people should have this commandment earnestly enforced upon them, and they should be trained to hold this and the First Commandment in high regard; and whenever they transgress, we must at once be after them with the rod, and hold the commandment before them, and constantly inculcate it, so as to bring them up not only with punishment, but also in the reverence and fear of God.

Thus you now understand what it is to take God's name in vain, that is (to recapitulate briefly), either simply for purposes of falsehood, and to allege God's name for something that is not so, or to curse, swear, conjure, and, in short, to practise whatever wickedness one may.

Besides this you must also know how to use the name [of God] aright. For when say-dem Wort, als er sagt: „Du sollst Gottes Namen nicht vergeblich brauchen“, gibt er gleichwohl zu verstehen, daß man sein wohl brauchen solle. Denn er ist uns eben darum offenbart und gegeben, daß er im Brauch und Ruß soll stehen. Darum schleußt [schließt] sich's nun selbst, weil hier verboten ist, den heiligen Namen zur Lüge oder Untugend zu führen, daß wiederum [umgekehrt] geboten ist, ihn zur Wahrheit und allem Guten zu brauchen, als nämlich, so man recht schwört, wo es not ist und gefordert wird; also auch, wenn man recht lehrt, item, wenn man den Namen anruft in Räten, lobt und dankt im Guten [in guten Tagen] usw. Welches alles zusammen gefaßt und geboten ist in dem Spruch, Ps. 50: „Rufe mich an zur Zeit der Not, so will ich dich erretten, so sollst du mich preisen.“ Denn das heißt alles ihn zur Wahrheit angezogen und seliglich gebraucht, und wird also sein Name geheiligt, wie das Vaterunser betet.

Also hast du die Summa des ganzen Gebots erklärt. Und aus diesem Verstand hat man die Frage leichtlich aufgelöst, damit sich viel Lehrer bekümmert haben: warum im Evangelio verboten ist zu schwören, so doch Christus, St. Paulus und andere Heilige oft geschworen haben. Und ist kürzlich diese Meinung: Schwören soll man nicht zum Bösen, das ist, zur Lüge, und wo es nicht not noch nützlich ist, aber zum Guten und des Nächsten Besserung soll man schwören. Denn es ist ein recht gut Werk, dadurch Gott gepreiset, die Wahrheit und Recht bekräftigt, die Lüge zurückgeschlagen, die Leute zufrieden[ge]bracht, Gehorsam gelehrt und Gader getragen wird. Denn Gott kommt selbst da ins Mittel und scheidet Recht und Unrecht, Böses und Gutes voneinander. Schwört ein Teil falsch, so hat es sein Urteil, daß [es] der Strafe nicht wird entlaufen, und ob es eine Weile lang ansteht, soll ihnen doch nichts gelingen, daß alles, so sie damit gewinnen, sich unter den Händen verschleisse [zerreißt, zertrümmert] und nimmer fröhlich genossen werde, wie ich an vielen erfahren habe, die ihr ehelich Gelübde geschworen haben, daß sie danach keine gute Stunde oder gesunden Tag gehabt haben und also beide an Leib, Seele und Gut dazu jämmerlich verdorben sind.

ipsum ego non obscuris argumentis in bene multis promissam abiurarunt, nunquam vel horulam iucundam habuerunt, aut saltem dieculam incolumi fuerunt valetudine, atque ita pariter et corpore et animo, bonis etiam amissis, calamitose perierunt.

Derhalben sage und vermahne ich wie vor, daß man die Kinder bezeit[en] angewöhne mit Warnen und Schreden, Wehren und Strafen, daß sie sich scheuen vor Lügen, und sonderlich, Gottes Namen dazu zu führen. Denn wo man sie so läßt hingehen, wird nichts Gutes daraus, wie jetzt vor Augen, daß die Welt böser ist, denn sie je gewesen, und kein Regiment, Gehorsam, Treue noch Glaube, sondern eitel verwegene, unbändige Leute, an denen kein Lehren noch Strafen hilft; welches alles Gottes Zorn und Strafe ist über solche mutwillige Verachtung dieses Gebots.

quibus praecepit: Non assumes nomen Domini Dei tui in vanum, etiam illud intelligendum nobis proponit, Dei nomine nos etiam recte et utiliter uti posse. Non enim aliam ob causam nobis revelatum est, quam ut utentibus sub-64 inde sit fructuosum et utile. Inde hoc ultro evincitur, quod quum hic praecepto cautum sit, ne mentientes aut aliqui flagitiose delinquentes sanctum Dei nomen prave usurpemus, contra praeceptum nobis esse arbitremur, ut eo ad confirmandam veritatem ac reliquas actiones honestas utamur, nempe, quando recte iuramus, quum aut necessitas postulat, aut a nobis iusiurandum exigitur; ita quoque quando recte et sincere docetur veritas evangelii; praeterea, quando in necessitatibus nomen Dei imploramus, aut idem rebus secundis laudamus et gratias agimus etc. Quae omnia summam comprehendens ac praecepta inveniuntur Ps. 50, 15: Invoca me in die tribulationis; eripiam te, et glorificabis me. Omnibus hisce rationibus vere et salubriter divino nomine utimur, atque ita eius nomen sanctificatur, quemadmodum in Oratione Dominica precamur.

65 Ita totam huius praecepti summam habes explicatam. Ex hac intelligentia haud difficulter ad quaestionem responderi potest, quae multorum doctorum non vulgariter torsit et conturbavit ingenia: quamobrem in evangelio nobis, ne iuremus, interdictum sit, cum pro certo constet Christum, Paulum alios-66 que sanctos iurasse saepenumero. Estque brevis haec sententia: Equidem nullo modo nobis ad mala iurandum est, hoc est, ad mendacia, et ubi neque utile neque necesse est. Verum ad bonum et proximi utilitatem licet nobis iurare. Est enim opus valde [R. 420] bonum, quo Deus laudatur, veritas et iustitia confirmatur, mendacium refellitur, homines dissidentes in concordiam rediguntur, obedientia exhibetur et lites componuntur. Nam Deus ipse hic intervenit, segregans iustitiam ab iniustitia ac bonos malosque disiungens. 67 Quodsi alterutra pars malitiose periurat, iam iudicii sententia pronuntiata est, quod poenam et supplicium periurii non sit effugitura. Et si fieret, ut ad tempus supplicii irrogatio protraheretur, nihil tamen illi cadet ex sententia, ita ut, quidquid periuri lucri fecerunt, sub manibus sensim evanescat, nec un-68 quam ea re ex animo laeti fruantur. Hoc ing: Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain, He gives us to understand at the same time that it is to be used properly. For it has been revealed and given to us for the very purpose that it may be of constant use and profit. Hence it is a natural inference, since using the holy name for falsehood or wickedness is here forbidden, that we are, on the other hand, commanded to employ it for truth and for all good, as when one swears truly where there is need and it is demanded. So also when there is right teaching, and when the name is invoked in trouble or praised and thanked in prosperity, etc.; all of which is comprehended summarily and commanded in the passage Ps. 50, 15: Call upon Me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify Me. For all this is bringing it into the service of truth, and using it in a blessed way, and thus His name is hallowed, as we pray in the Lord's Prayer.

69 Quapropter etiam atque etiam hortor et moneo, ut mature pueros properemus monitis detertere et verberibus compescere, ne assuescant mendacii, potissimum vero, ne ad haec confirmanda Dei nomen citent et adducant. Ubi enim ea iurandi licentia pueris impune permittitur, nulla spes amplius superest ullius bonae frugis ab illis expectandae, quemadmodum hodie videmus, ut ego existimem mundum nunquam fuisse deterius et perditis moribus corruptiorem, quam nunc est, quando ne facies quidem ullius reipublicae bene institutae, nullum obedientiae et fidei

Thus you have the sum of the entire commandment explained. And with this understanding the question with which many teachers have troubled themselves has been easily solved, to wit, why swearing is prohibited in the Gospel, and yet Christ, St. Paul, and other saints often swore. The explanation is briefly this: We are not to swear in support of evil, that is, of falsehood, and where there is no need or use; but for the support of good and the advantage of our neighbor we should swear. For it is a truly good work, by which God is praised, truth and right are established, falsehood is refuted, peace is made among men, obedience is rendered, and quarrels are settled. For in this way God Himself interposes and separates between right and wrong, good and evil. If one part swears falsely, he has his sentence that he shall not escape punishment, and though it be deferred a long time, he shall not succeed; so that all that he may gain thereby will slip out of his hands, and he will never enjoy it; as I have seen in the case of many who perjured themselves in their marriage-vows, that they have never had a happy hour or a healthful day, and thus perished miserably in body, soul, and possessions.

Therefore I advise and exhort as before that by means of warning and threatening, restraint and punishment, the children be trained betimes to shun falsehood, and especially to avoid the use of God's name in its support. For where they are allowed to do as they please, no good will result, as is even now evident that the world is worse than it has ever been, and that there is no government, no obedience, no fidelity, no faith, but amplius superest vestigium, verum omnia deploratissimis hominibus, qui nullo modo frenari aut coerceri possunt, et in quibus docendis et obiurgandis et oleum (quod aiunt) peritit et opera, omnia sunt refertissima. Quae omnia divinae irae et supplicii argumenta sunt certissima, quo nos obruit propter procacem et temerariam huius praecepti transgressionem. [R. 421]

Zum andern soll man sie auch wiederum treiben und zeigen, Gottes Namen zu ehren und stetig im Munde zu haben in allem, was ihnen begehen und unter Augen stoßen mag. Denn das ist die rechte Ehre des Namens, daß man sich alles Trostes zu ihm verseye und ihn darum anrufe, also daß das Herz (wie drohen gehört) zuvor durch den Glauben Gott seine Ehre gebe, danach der Mund durch das Bekenntnis.

Solches ist auch eine selige, nützliche Gewohnheit und sehr kräftig wider den Teufel, der immerdar um uns ist und darauf lauert, wie er uns möchte zu Sünde und Schande, Jammer und Not bringen, aber gar ungern hört und nicht lange bleiben kann, wo man Gottes Namen von Herzen nennt und anruft; und sollte uns mancher schredliche und greuliche Fall begegnen, wo uns Gott nicht durch Anrufen seines Namens erhalte. Ich habe es selbst versucht und wohl erfahren, daß oft plötzlicher großer Unfall gleich in solchem Rufen sich gewendet hat und ab[ge]gangen ist. Dem Teufel zuleid (sage ich) sollten wir den heiligen Namen immerdar im Munde führen, daß er nicht schaden könnte, wie er gerne wollte.

improvisum et terribilem aliquem casum aut cladem in ipsa nominis Dei invocatione in melius fuisse commutatum ac nihil damni dedisse. Ut diabolo aegre faceremus, inquam, hoc sacrum nomen semper in ore habendum esset, ne, quemadmodum cupit, nocere nobis possit et incommodare.

Dazu dient auch, daß man sich gewöhne, täglich [sich] Gotte zu befehlen mit Seele und Leib, Weib, Kind, Gefinde, und was wir haben, für alle zufällige Not; daher auch das Benedicite, Gratias und andere Segen abends und morgens [ge-]kommen und [ge]blieben sind; item, die Kinderübung, daß man sich segne, wenn man etwas Ungeheures und Schredliches sieht oder hört, und spreche: Herr Gott, behüte! Hilf, lieber Herr Christe! oder vergleiche. Also auch wiederum, wenn jemand etwas Gutes ungeachtet [unerwartet] widerfährt, wie gering es auch ist, daß man spreche: Gott sei gelobt und gedankt; das hat mir Gott beschenkt! usw. Wie man vormalß die Kinder gewöhnt hat, St. Niklaus und andern Heiligen zu fasten und [zu ihnen zu] beten. Solches wäre Gott angenehmer und gefälliger denn kein Klosterleben noch Kartäuserheiligkeit.

Siehe, also möchte man die Jugend kindlicher Weise und spiels [wie im Spiel] aufziehen in Gottesfurcht und Ehre, daß das erste und andere Gebot sein im Schwang und fester Übung gingen. Da könnte etwas Gutes bekleiben [sektleben, anwachsen], aufgehen und Frucht schaffen, daß solche Leute erwüßten, deren ein ganz Vand genießen und froh werden möchte. Das wäre auch die rechte Weise, Kinder wohl zu ziehen, weil man sie mit Gutem und Lust kann gewöhnen. Denn was man allein mit Ruten und Schlägen soll zwingen, da wird keine gute Art auß, und wenn man's weit

70] Secundo, viciissim eo alliciendi et assuefaciendi sunt pueri, ut Dei nomen reverenter colant et semper in ore habeant in omnibus, quidquid uspiam illis queat occurrere aut accidere. Hic enim rectus nominis divini cultus est, ut de eo omnem nobis omnium malorum levationem et consolationem polliceamur, eamque ob rem illum imploremus, ita ut cor prius (sicut supra diximus) per fidem Deo suum honorem tribuat, deinceps vero os honorifica confessione. idem faciat.

71] Atque haec divini nominis invocandi consuetudo vehementer salutaris est et utilis, ac cumprimis efficax adversus diaboli insidias, quas semper nobis molitur improbus, omnes adoriendi et invadendi occasiones venans et captans, quibus nos in peccatum et dedecus, in calamitates et aerumnas praecipitet. Sed perinvitus audit divini nominis implorationem, neque diu cunctatur aut cessat, ubicunque ex animo sacratissimum Dei nomen invocari carperit. Et profecto multiplicibus et horrendis casibus atque periculis saepenumero ex improvviso obrueremur, nisi Deus per nominis sui invocationem nobis in tempore ferret suppetias. Ipse propriis experimentis hoc verissimum esse didici, non raro

72] cari perceperit. Et profecto multiplicibus et horrendis casibus atque periculis saepenumero ex improvviso obrueremur, nisi Deus per nominis sui invocationem nobis in tempore ferret suppetias. Ipse propriis experimentis hoc verissimum esse didici, non raro

73] Eodem et conducit, si assuescamus quotidie nos et corpore et animo Deo commendare, inque eius tutelam ponere uxorem, liberos, familiam et quidquid rerum possidemus, adversus omnes casus et pericula. Unde [R. 422] etiam consecrati mensae et gratiarum actio aliaeque nocturnae et matutinae benedictiones 74] in usu permanserunt. Praeterea puorum illud exercitium, ut sese cruce vel precatiuncula muniant, audita re aliqua terrificata et horribili, dicentes: Custodiat nos, Deus Pater! Auxiliare, Domine Iesu Christe! aut tale quippiam. Ita quoque, si cui praeter spem aliquid boni contigerit, quantumcunque tandem sit, ut dicat: Deo sit laus et gratia, cuius munificentia hoc mihi obtigit etc. Quemadmodum quondam pueri parentum monitu consueverunt divum Nicolaum et ieiunio honorare et precibus invocare. Haec, inquam, si fierent, Deo multo essent gratiora et acceptiora quam ulla vita monastica aut fucata Carthusianorum sanctimonia.

75] Ecce, ad hunc modum iuventus puerili quadam ratione et per lusum in timore et cultu Dei educari posset, ut primum et secundum praeceptum assiduo quodam fervore in continuo versarentur exercitio. Inde alicuius bonae frugis aut indolis aliquando exorsuræ et immensum fructum pariturae spes esset, ut tales enascerentur homines, a quibus in 76] totam patriam emanare posset utilitas. Et haec ipsa quoque vera esset puerorum educandorum ratio, quando gratia quadam et voluptate eorum animi flecti possunt. Nam only daring, unbridled men, whom no teaching or reproof helps; all of which is God's wrath and punishment for such wanton contempt of this commandment.

On the other hand, they should be constantly urged and incited to honor God's name, and to have it always upon their lips in everything that may happen to them or come to their notice. For that is the true honor of His name, to look to it and implore it for all consolation, so that (as we have heard above) first the heart by faith gives God the honor due Him, and afterwards the lips by confession.

This is also a blessed and useful habit and very effectual against the devil, who is ever about us, and lies in wait to bring us into sin and shame, calamity and trouble, but who is very loath to hear God's name, and cannot remain long where it is uttered and called upon from the heart. And, indeed, many a terrible and shocking calamity would befall us if, by our calling upon His name, God did not preserve us. I have myself tried it, and learned by experience that often sudden great calamity was immediately averted and removed during such invocation. To vex the devil, I say, we should always have this holy name in our mouth, so that he may not be able to injure us as he wishes.

For this end it is also of service that we form the habit of daily commending ourselves to God, with soul and body, wife, children, servants, and all that we have, against every need that may occur; whence also the blessing and thanksgiving at meals, and other prayers, morning and evening, have originated and remain in use. Likewise the practise of children to cross themselves when anything monstrous or terrible is seen or heard, and to exclaim: "Lord God, protect us!" "Help, dear Lord Jesus!" etc. Thus, too, if any one meets with unexpected good fortune, however trivial, that he say: "God be praised and thanked; this God has bestowed on me!" etc., as formerly the children were accustomed to fast and pray to St. Nicholas and other saints. This would be more pleasing and acceptable to God than all monasticism and Carthusian sanctity.

Behold, thus we might train our youth in a childlike way and playfully in the fear and honor of God, so that the First and Second Commandments might be well observed and in constant practise. Then some good might take root, spring up and bear fruit, and men grow up whom an entire land might relish and enjoy. Moreover, this would be the true way to bring up children well as long as they

bringt, so bleiben sie doch nicht länger fromm, denn die Rute auf dem Raden liegt.

gentia, cura et opera in formandis ipsis adhibeatur, et quasi summum obtineatur, tamen tantisper tantummodo oderunt peccare, donec plagarum ac ferulae formido eorum oculis et animo observatur.

Aber hier wurzelt es ins Herz, daß man sich mehr vor Gott denn vor der Rute und Rüttel fürchtet. Daß sage ich so einfältig für die Jugend, daß es doch einmal eingehe; denn weil wir Kindern predigen, müssen wir auch mit ihnen lassen. Also haben wir den Mißbrauch göttlichen Namens verhütet und den rechten [Ge] Brauch gelehrt, welcher nicht allein in Worten, sondern auch in der Übung und Leben stehen soll, daß man wisse, daß solches Gotte herzlich wohlgefallt, und wolle es so reichlich belohnen, so greulich als er jenen Mißbrauch strafen will.

Das dritte Gebot.

Du sollst den Feiertag heiligen.

Feiertag haben wir genannt nach dem hebräischen Wörtlein Sabbath, welches eigentlich heißt feiern, das ist, müßig stehen von der Arbeit; daher wir pflegen zu sagen, Feierabend machen oder heiligen Abend geben. Nun hat Gott im Alten Testament den siebenten Tag ausgeordnet und aufgesetzt [eingesetzt, angeordnet] zu feiern, und geboten, denselben vor allen andern heilig zu halten, und dieser äußerlichen Feiertag nach ist dies Gebot allein den Juden gestellt, daß sie sollten von groben Werken stillstehen und ruhen, auf daß sich beide Mensch und Vieh wieder erholen und nicht von steter Arbeit geschwächt würden. Wiewohl sie es hernach allzuenge spannten und gröblich mißbrauchten, daß sie es auch an Christo lästerten und nicht leiden konnten solche Werke, die sie doch selbst daran taten, wie man im Evangelio liest; gerade als sollte das Gebot damit erfüllt sein, daß man gar kein äußerlich Werk täte, welches doch nicht die Meinung war, sondern endlich [lehtlich] die, daß sie den Feiertag oder Ruhetag heiligen, wie wir hören werden.

Darum geht nun dies Gebot nach dem groben Verstand uns Christen nichts an, denn es ein ganz äußerlich Ding ist, wie andere Satzungen des Alten Testaments an sonderliche Weise, Person, Zeit und Stätte gebunden, welche nun durch Christum alle freigelassen sind.

Aber einen christlichen Verstand zu fassen für die Einfältigen, was Gott in diesem Gebot von uns fordert, so merke, daß wir Feiertage halten nicht um der verständigen und gelehrten Christen willen, denn diese [be]dürfen's nirgend zu, sondern erstlich auch um leiblicher Ursache und Notdurft willen, welche die Natur lehrt und fordert, für den gemeinen Haufen, Knechte und Mägde, so die ganze Woche ihrer Arbeit und Gewerbe gewartet, daß sie sich auch einen Tag einziehen [zurückziehen], zu ruhen und [sich zu] erquiden.

qui tantum plagis et ferulis evincendi et cogendi sunt, hi mox sub initium deplorata ac desperata sunt indole, ac licet omnis dili-

77) Haec vero educationis ratio in corde agit radices, ut Deum plus metuant, quam ut ferulam aut fustem perhorrescant. Atque haec iuventutis causa tam simpliciter dico, ut vel tandem in animum penetrent ibique radices agant. Nam quum pueros doceamus, cum iisdem nobis quoque balbutiendum [R. 423] fuit. Ita quidem divini nominis abusum praecavimus et rectum usum tradidimus, qui non tantum in verbis, verum multo magis in exercitio et vita debet consistere, ut sciamus hunc Deo summe placere, quem etiam tam munifice remuneraturus est, quam horrendo in abusum sui nominis animadversurus est.

Praeceptum III.

78) Memento, ut diem Sabbatum sanctifices.

79) Sabbatum ab Hebraica dictione Sabbat nominatum est, quod proprie ferari, hoc est, a labore otiosum esse, significat. Hinc dicere solemus ferari seu vacare a labore, et sabbatum sanctificare. Iam Deus in veteri testamento diem septimum elegit, eundemque feriis et otio destinavit, et prae omnibus aliis sanctificandum praecepit. Eius itaque externa quietis gratia Iudaeis hoc praecceptum constitutum est, ut ab externis et manuariis operibus quiescentes indulgerent otio, quo et homines et pecora alterna quadam requie vires repararent, neque assiduo labore debilitati absumerentur. Quamquam poete nimis arcte suas ferias colebant ac vehementer iis abutebantur, adeo ut in Christo quoque ea opera damnarent et calumniarentur, quae ipsi quoque diebus festis faciebant, ut passim legitur in evangelio, quasi vero haec esset huius praeccepti perfecta completio, si nullum prorsus externum opus manibus conficeretur, cum tamen eius haec nunquam fuerit sententia, sed potius haec, ut diem festum sive Sabbatum sanctificarent, quemadmodum in sequentibus latius audiri sumus.

82) Quamobrem hoc praecceptum, quantum ad externum et crassum illum sensum attinet, ad nos Christianos non pertinet. Est enim externa quaedam res, sicut omnes [R. 424] aliae veteris testamenti constitutiones certis quibusdam ritibus, personis, temporibus et locis destinatae, quae omnes iam per Christum liberae factae sunt.

83) Ceterum, ut hinc Christianum aliquem intellectum hauriamus pro simplicibus, quidnam Deus hoc in praeccepto a nobis exigit, ita habe: Nos dies festos celebrare, non propter intelligentes et eruditos Christianos, hi enim nihil opus habent feriis, verum primo etiam corporalis cuiusdam causae et necessitatis gratia, quam et natura docet et exigit, nimirum communis multitudinis gratia, servorum, ancillarum, qui per totam hebdomadam laboribus servierunt, ut et ipsi diem habeant, quae ab operibus respirantes semet ex labore reficiant et corpora fessa quiete firmare queant.

can become trained with kindness and delight. For what must be enforced with rods and blows only will not develop into a good breed, and at best they will remain godly under such treatment no longer than while the rod is upon their back.

But this [manner of training] so spreads its roots in the heart that they fear God more than rods and clubs. This I say with such simplicity for the sake of the young, that it may penetrate their minds. For since we are preaching to children, we must also prattle with them. Thus we have prevented the abuse and have taught the right use of the divine name, which should consist not only in words, but also in practise and life, so that we may know that God is well pleased with this, and will as richly reward it as He will terribly punish the abuse.

The Third Commandment.

Thou shalt sanctify the holy day. [Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.]

The word holy day (Feiertag) is rendered from the Hebrew word sabbath which properly signifies to rest, that is, to abstain from labor. Hence we are accustomed to say, Feierabend machen [that is, to cease working], or heiligen Abend geben [sanctify the Sabbath]. Now, in the Old Testament, God separated the seventh day, and appointed it for rest, and commanded that it should be regarded as holy above all others. As regards this external observance, this commandment was given to the Jews alone, that they should abstain from toilsome work, and rest, so that both man and beast might recuperate, and not be weakened by unremitting labor. Although they afterwards restricted this too closely, and grossly abused it, so that they traduced and could not endure in Christ those works which they themselves were accustomed to do on that day, as we read in the Gospel; just as though the commandment were fulfilled by doing no external [manual] work whatever, which, however, was not the meaning, but, as we shall hear, that they sanctify the holy day or day of rest.

This commandment, therefore, according to its gross sense, does not concern us Christians; for it is altogether an external matter, like other ordinances of the Old Testament, which were attached to particular customs, persons, times, and places, and now have been made free through Christ.

But to grasp a Christian meaning for the simple as to what God requires in this commandment, note that we keep holy days not for the sake of intelligent and learned Christians (for they have no need of it [holy days]), but first of all for bodily causes and necessities, which nature teaches and requires; for the common people, man-servants and maid-servants, who have been attending to their work and trade the whole week, that for a day they may retire in order to rest and be refreshed.

Danach allermeist darum, daß man an solchem Ruhetage (weil man sonst nicht dazu kommen kann) Raum und Zeit nehme, [des] Gottesdienstes zu warten, also daß man zu Hause komme, Gottes Wort zu hören und handeln, danach Gott loben, singen und beten.

Solches aber (sage ich) ist nicht also an Zeit gebunden wie bei den Juden, daß es müsse eben dieser oder jener Tag sein; denn es ist keiner an ihm selbst besser denn der andere, sondern sollte wohl täglich geschehen, aber weil es der Hause nicht warten [beobachten, einhalten] kann, muß man je zum wenigsten einen Tag in der Woche dazu ausschließen [aussondern, auswählen]. Weil aber von alters her der Sonntag dazu gestellt ist, soll man's auch dabei bleiben lassen, auf daß es in einträglicher Ordnung gehe, und niemand durch unnötige Neuerungen eine Unordnung mache.

Also ist das die einfältige Meinung dieses Gebots, weil man sonst [ohnehin] Feiertage hält, daß man solche Feier anlege, Gottes Wort zu lernen, also daß dieses Tages eigentlich Amt sei das Predigtamt um des jungen Volks und armen Hausens willen; doch daß das Feiern nicht so enge gespannt [werde], daß darum andere zufällige Arbeit, so man nicht umgehen kann, verboten wäre.

Derhalben wenn man fragt, was da gesagt sei: „Du sollst den Feiertag heiligen“, so antworte: Den Feiertag heiligen heißt so viel, als heilig halten. Was ist denn heilig halten? Nichts anderes, denn heilige Worte, Werke und Leben führen. Denn der Tag [be]darf für sich selbst keines Heiligens nicht, denn er ist an ihm selbst heilig geschaffen; Gott will aber haben, daß er dir heilig sei. Also wird er deinethalben heilig und unheilig, so du heilig oder unheilig Ding daran treibst.

Wie geht nun solches Heiligen zu? Nicht also, daß man hinter dem Ofen sitze und keine grobe Arbeit tue oder einen Kranz aufsehe und seine besten Kleider anziehe, sondern (wie gesagt) daß man Gottes Wort handle und sich darin übe.

Und zwar [fürwahr] wir Christen sollen immerdar solchen Feiertag halten, eitel heilig Ding treiben, das ist, täglich mit Gottes Wort umgehen und solches im Herzen und Mund umtragen. Aber weil wir (wie gesagt) nicht alle Zeit und Ruhe haben, müssen wir die Woche etliche Stunden für die Jugend oder zum wenigsten einen Tag für den ganzen Haufen dazu [ge]brauchen, daß man sich allein damit bekümmere und eben [besonders] die zehn Gebote, den Glauben und Vaterunser treibe und also unser ganzes Leben und Wesen nach Gottes Wort richte. Welche Zeit nun das im Schwang und Übung geht, da wird ein rechter Feiertag gehalten; wo nicht, so soll es kein Christenfeiertag heißen. Denn feiern und müßig gehen können die Unchristen auch wohl, wie auch das ganze Geschwärm unserer Geistlichen täglich in der Kirche sehen, singen und klingen, heils-

84) Deinde eam ob rem potissimum, ut die Sabbati, quando alias ei rei vacare non licet, otium et tempus sumatur cultui divino serviendi, ita ut conveniamus ad audiendum et tractandum Dei Verbum, ac deinceps Deum hymnis, psalmis, canticis et precibus laudemus.

85) Sed hoc, inquam, apud nos non perinde certis temporibus sicut apud Iudaeos alligatum est, ut ei rei hic aut ille [dies] dictus aut praestitutus sit; nullus enim dies altero est melior aut praestantior; verum haec quidem quotidie fieri debebant, sed quando multitudo praepedita negotiis interesse nequeat, ad minimum unus aliquis dies per hebdomadam huic rei serviendae eligendus est. Porro autem, quum a maioribus nostris ad hoc dies dominica ordinata sit, non est immutanda temere haec innoxia veterum consuetudo iam recepta, ut unanimis et consentiens ordo consistat, ne quis sua non necessaria innovatione conturbet omnia.

86) Huius ergo praecepti hic simplex sensus est, quando alias dies festos agimus, ut hasce ferias Verbo Dei discendo destinemus, ita ut earundem dierum proprium munus sit [R. 425 officium concionandi, et hoc iuventutis et multitudinis instituendae gratia. Neque tamen tam arcte et superstitiose colantur feriae, ut earum gratia labores, qui vitari et intermittere non possunt, interdicantur.

87) Quare interrogatus, quid sit: Sabbatum sanctifices, responde: Sabbatum sanctificare idem est, quod Sabbatum sanctum habere. Quid ergo est, Sabbatum sanctum habere? Nihil aliud quam sanctis verbis, operibus et vitae vacare. Siquidem hic dies pro se non opus habet sanctificatione, iam enim inde ab initio creationis a suo conditore sanctificatus est. Hoc autem Deus a te contendit, ut tibi sit sanctus. Ita fit, ut tui gratia sanctus aut profanus reddatur, quatenus tu in eo sanctis aut profanis operibus vacaveris.

88) In quo ergo Sabbati sanctificatio sita est? Sane profecto non in hoc, ut post fornacem compressis (quod aiunt) manibus sed eas, aut nullum externum opus opereris, aut corona florea caput cingas, ut vestitu splendidiore te exornes, sed (ut dictum est) Verbum Dei tractes inque eodem, emendata in melius vita, temet exerceas.

89) Et profecto nobis Christianis subinde tales agenda essent feriae tantumque sacris rebus vacandum et incumbendum, hoc est, quotidie Verbum Dei exercendum et in ore ac corde ferendum. Verum, quia non omnibus, ut diximus, et tempus et otium suppetit, certis aliquot per hebdomadam horis pro iuventute aut ad minimum die quopiam pro tota ecclesia utamur oportet, ut tantum huic rei intenti simus, neque aliud quam Decem Praecepta, Symbolum Fidei et Orationem Dominicam exponendam et discendam proponamus. atque ita totam hanc vitam nostram ad divinorum verborum amussim et regulam instituamus. Quocunque ergo tempore [R. 426 ista communi et unanimi consensu tractantur et exercentur, ibi profecto rectum celebratur Sabbatum; sin non, neque Christianorum Sab-

Secondly, and most especially, that on such day of rest (since we can get no other opportunity) freedom and time be taken to attend divine service, so that we come together to hear and treat of God's Word, and then to praise God, to sing and pray.

However, this, I say, is not so restricted to any time, as with the Jews, that it must be just on this or that day; for in itself no one day is better than another: but this should indeed be done daily; however, since the masses cannot give such attendance, there must be at least one day in the week set apart. But since from of old Sunday [the Lord's Day] has been appointed for this purpose, we also should continue the same, in order that everything be done in harmonious order, and no one create disorder by unnecessary innovation.

Therefore this is the simple meaning of the commandment: since holidays are observed anyhow, such observance should be devoted to hearing God's Word, so that the special function of this day should be the ministry of the Word for the young and the mass of poor people; yet that the resting be not so strictly interpreted as to forbid any other incidental work that cannot be avoided.

Accordingly, when asked, What is meant by the commandment: Thou shalt sanctify the holy day? answer: To sanctify the holy day is the same as to keep it holy. But what is meant by keeping it holy? Nothing else than to be occupied in holy words, works, and life. For the day needs no sanctification for itself; for in itself it has been created holy [from the beginning of the creation it was sanctified by its Creator]. But God desires it to be holy to you. Therefore it becomes holy or unholy on your account, according as you are occupied on the same with things that are holy or unholy.

How, then, does such sanctification take place? Not in this manner, that [with folded hands] we sit behind the stove and do no rough [external] work, or deck ourselves with a wreath and put on our best clothes, but (as has been said) that we occupy ourselves with God's Word, and exercise ourselves therein.

And, indeed, we Christians ought always to keep such a holy day, and be occupied with nothing but holy things, i. e., daily be engaged upon God's Word, and carry it in our hearts and upon our lips. But (as has been said) since we do not at all times have leisure, we must devote several hours a week for the sake of the young, or at least a day for the sake of the entire multitude, to being concerned about this alone, and especially urge the Ten Commandments, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer, and thus direct our whole life and being according to God's Word. At whatever time, then, this is being observed and practised, there a true holy day is being kept; other-

gen aber keinen Feiertag nicht; denn sie kein Gotteswort predigen noch üben, sondern eben [gerade] darüber lehren und leben.

mollem turbam religiosorum nostrorum, qui quotidie in templis stantes cantillant et strenue tinniunt, boant et vociferantur, sed nullum sanctificant hac stentorea vociferatione et lupino illo ululatu suo Sabbatum. Neque enim ullum Dei Verbum docent aut exercent, sed plane diversum et contrarium, et doctrina et vita, exprimunt.

Denn das Wort Gottes ist das Heiligtum über alle Heiligtümer, ja, das einzige, das wir Christen wissen und haben. Denn ob wir gleich aller Heiligen Gebeine oder heilige und geweihte Kleider auf einem Haufen hätten, so wäre uns doch nichts damit geholfen; denn es ist alles tot Ding, das niemand heiligen kann. Aber Gottes Wort ist der Schatz, der alle Dinge heilig macht, dadurch sie selbst, die Heiligen, alle find geheiligt worden. Welche Stunde man nun Gottes Wort handelt, predigt, hört, liest oder bedenkt, so wird dadurch Person, Tag und Werk geheiligt, nicht des äußerlichen Werks halben, sondern des Wortes halben, so uns alle zu Heiligen macht. Derhalben sage ich allezeit, daß alle unser Leben und Werke in dem Wort Gottes gehen müssen, sollen sie Gott gefällig oder heilig heißen. Wo das geschieht, so geht dies Gebot in seiner Kraft und Erfüllung.

operis gratia, sed propter Verbum, quo omnes nos sancti reddimur et efficimur. Quocirca nunquam non dico, omnem vitam et opera nostra Verbi Dei ductu et auspicio gubernari debere atque institui, si volumus haec Deo placere et sancta esse; quodsi sit, constat huius praecepti fervere efficaciam et plenitudinem.

Wiederum, was für Wesen und Werk außer Gottes Wort geht, das ist vor Gott unheilig, es scheint und gleiche, wie es wolle, wenn man's mit eitel Heiligtum behinge, als da sind die erdichteten geistlichen Stände, die Gottes Wort nicht wissen und in ihren Werken Heiligkeit suchen.

Darum merke, daß die Kraft und Macht dieses Gebots steht nicht im Feiern, sondern im Heiligen, also daß dieser Tag eine sonderliche heilige Übung habe. Denn andere Arbeit und Geschäfte heißen eigentlich nicht heilige Übungen, es sei denn der Mensch zuvor heilig. Hier aber muß ein solch Werk geschehen, dadurch ein Mensch selbst heilig werde, welches allein (wie gehört) durch Gottes Wort geschieht, dazu denn gestiftet und geordnet sind Stätte, Zeit, Personen und der ganze äußerliche Gottesdienst, daß solches auch öffentlich im Schwang gehe.

Weil nun so viel an Gottes Wort gelegen ist, daß ohne dasselbe kein Feiertag geheiligt wird, sollen wir wissen, daß Gott dies Gebot streng will gehalten haben und strafen alle, die sein Wort verachten, nicht hören noch lernen wollen, sondern sich die Zeit [zu der Zeit], so dazu geordnet ist.

Darum sündigen wider dies Gebot nicht allein, die den Feiertag gräßlich mißbrauchen und verunheiligen, als die um ihres Geizes oder Leichtfertigkeit willen Gottes Wort nachlassen zu hören oder in Tabernen [Schenken] liegen, toll und voll sind wie die Säue, sondern auch der andere Gause, batum dicendum est. Quippe ferias et otium agere noverunt etiam ii, qui a Christo omni- que pietate sunt alienissimi. Quemadmodum videmus totum illud examen et otiosam ac

91] Siquidem Dei Verbum unicum illud sacrum est, quod omnes res sacras longe lateque sanctitate praecellit et exsuperat, imo potius unicum illud mysterium, quod nos Christiani et scimus et habemus. Nam tametsi omnes omnium sanctorum reliquias et ossa in acervum cumulata possideremus, aut in universum omnes sacras vestes haberemus, nihil tamen inde emolumenti caperemus aut sentiremus auxilii. Sunt enim res mortuae, neminem sanctificare valentes. Verum enim vero Dei Verbum thesaurus ille et gaza est pretiosissima, quae omnia sanctificat, cuius adminiculo etiam ipsi sancti omnes sancti-

92] moniam consecuti sunt. Iam quacunque hora Verbum Dei docetur, praedicatur, auditur, legitur, consideratur aut repetitur memoria, ea huius tractatione audientis persona, dies et opus sanctificatur, non externi quidem

93] Contra quaecunque res aut opera extra Dei Verbum feruntur et instituuntur, haec coram Deo profana sunt et immunda, [R. 427] quamlibet tandem praeclare et splendida, etiamsi meris sacris divorum reliquiis essent exornata. Cuius generis sunt ficti atque excogitati religiosorum ordines, Verbum Dei prorsus ignorantes et sanctitatem ex propriis operibus quaeritantes.

94] Quare ita habe, huius praecepti vim atque virtutem non consistere in otioso, sed in sanctificando, ita ut hic dies praecipuum aliquod sanctorum rerum exercitium habeat. Nam reliqui labores et exercitia proprie non dicuntur sancta exercitia, nisi homo prius sanctus fuerit. Hic vero ea fieri debent opera, per quae homo ipse sanctus fiat, id quod solum, ut dixi, Verbo Dei fieri potest. Ad quod etiam fundata et constituta sunt certa loca, tempora, personae et totus externus Dei cultus, ut haec propalam assiduo usu exercitata ferveant.

95] Cum itaque tanti momenti sit Verbum Dei, ut citra huius tractationem nullas ferias sanctas esse certum sit, scire debemus Deum hoc praecceptum severe atque adeo serio conservari velle, suppliciumque de his omnibus esse sumpturum, quotquot Verbum eius proterve contemnant, aut audire et discere recusant, eo praesertim tempore, quod huic audiendo et discendo destinatum est.

96] Quare adversus hoc praecceptum peccant non tantum ii, qui contumeliosis operibus abutuntur Sabbato, idemque irreligiose profanant, ut illi, qui dediti avaritiae aut prava rapti libidine Verbum Dei non audiunt, aut in tabernis vinariis poculis ac gulae indul-wise it shall not be called a Christians' holy day. For, indeed, non-Christians can also cease from work and be idle, just as the entire swarm of our ecclesiastics, who stand daily in the churches, singing, and ringing bells but keeping no holy day holy, because they neither preach nor practise God's Word, but teach and live contrary to it.

For the Word of God is the sanctuary above all sanctuaries, yea, the only one which we Christians know and have. For though we had the bones of all the saints or all holy and consecrated garments upon a heap, still that would help us nothing; for all that is a dead thing which can sanctify nobody. But God's Word is the treasure which sanctifies everything, and by which even all the saints themselves were sanctified. At whatever hour, then, God's Word is taught, preached, heard, read or meditated upon, there the person, day, and work are sanctified thereby, not because of the external work, but because of the Word, which makes saints of us all. Therefore I constantly say that all our life and work must be ordered according to God's Word, if it is to be God-pleasing or holy. Where this is done, this commandment is in force and being fulfilled.

On the contrary, any observance or work that is practised without God's Word is unholy before God, no matter how brilliantly it may shine, even though it be covered with relics, such as the fictitious spiritual orders, which know nothing of God's Word and seek holiness in their own works.

Note, therefore, that the force and power of this commandment lies not in the resting, but in the sanctifying, so that to this day belongs a special holy exercise. For other works and occupations are not properly called holy exercises, unless the man himself be first holy. But here a work is to be done by which man is himself made holy, which is done (as we have heard) alone through God's Word. For this, then, fixed places, times, persons, and the entire external order of worship have been created and appointed, so that it may be publicly in operation.

Since, therefore, so much depends upon God's Word that without it no holy day can be sanctified, we must know that God insists upon a strict observance of this commandment, and will punish all who despise His Word and are not willing to hear and learn it, especially at the time appointed for the purpose.

Therefore not only those sin against this commandment who grossly misuse and desecrate the holy day, as those who on account of their greed or frivolity neglect to hear God's Word or lie in taverns and are dead drunk like swine; but also that other crowd, so Gottes Wort hören als einen andern Tand [eitles Gerede] und nur aus Gewohnheit zur Predigt und wieder heraus gehen, und wenn das Jahr um ist, können sie heuer [dies Jahr] so viel als fern [vorn Jahr]. Denn bisher hat man gemeint, es wäre wohl gefeiert, wenn man des Sonntags eine Messe oder das Evangelium hätte hören lesen, aber nach Gottes Wort hat niemand gefragt, wie es auch niemand gelehrt hat. Jetzt, weil wir Gottes Wort haben, tun wir gleichwohl den Mißbrauch nicht ab, lassen uns immerdar predigen und vermahnen, hören's aber ohne Ernst und Sorge.

thesauri facti sumus compotes, quo maior aut amplior nullus reperiri potest, abusum nequaquam tollimus, sed sinimus quidem nobis multa praedicari ac nos moneri sedulo, ceterum nulla gravitate animique constantia et cura audimus.

Darum wisse, daß [es] nicht allein ums Hören zu tun ist, sondern [es] soll auch gelernt und behalten werden, und denke nicht, daß es in deiner Willkür stehe oder nicht große Macht dran liege, sondern daß [es] Gottes Gebot ist, der es fordern wird, wie du sein Wort gehört, gelernt und gelehrt hast.

Desgleichen sind auch zu strafen die eiteln [wählerischen] Geister, welche, wenn sie eine Predigt oder zwei gehört haben, sind sie es satt und überdrüssig, als die es selbst wohl können und keines Meisters mehr [be]dürfen. Denn das ist eben die Sünde, so man bisher unter die Todsünden gezählt hat, und heißt ἀνηδία, das ist, Trägheit oder Überdruß, eine feindselige, schädliche Plage, damit der Teufel vieler Herzen bezaubert und betreugt [betrügt], auf daß er uns übereile und das Wort Gottes wieder heimlich entziehe.

Denn das laß dir gesagt sein, ob du es gleich aufs beste könntest und aller Dinge Meister wärest, so bist du doch täglich unter des Teufels Reich, der weder Tag noch Nacht ruht, dich zu beschleichen [dir heimlich zu nahen], daß er in deinem Herzen Unglauben und böse Gedanken wider die vorigen und alle Gebote anzünde. Darum mußt du immerdar Gottes Wort im Herzen, Mund und vor den Ohren haben. Wo aber das Herz müßig steht und das Wort nicht klingt, so bricht er ein und hat den Schaden getan, es man's gewahrt wird. Wiederum hat es die Kraft, wo man's mit Ernst betrachtet, hört und handelt, daß es nimmer ohne Frucht abgeht, sondern allezeit neuen Verstand, Lust und Andacht erweckt, rein Herz und Gedanken macht; denn es sind nicht faule noch tote, sondern [ge]schäftige, lebendige Worte. Und ob uns gleich kein anderer Ruz und Not triebe, so soll doch das jedermann dazu reizen, daß dadurch der Teufel gescheucht und verjagt, dazu dieß Gebot erfüllt wird, und [es] Gott gefälliger ist denn alle andern gleichenden Heuchelwerke.

102] sed plane viva et efficacia. Adhaec, si nulla alia utilitas aut necessitas ad crebro et diligenter audiendum Dei Verbum nos provocaret, tamen haec una satis vehemens esse debebat, quae merito omnes nos excitaret, quod Verbi divini tractatione daemon fugatur et abigitur. et hoc praeeptum impletur, Deoque acceptius est sui Verbi exercitium, quam omnia alia splendida hypocritarum opera.

gentes ferinam atque suillam vitam exigunt, verum etiam illi, qui perinde Verbum Dei audiunt tamquam fabulam quandam et commentum anile, tantum pro more ac usitata quadam consuetudine auditum accedunt intrantes atque exeuntes, iamque anno elapso ne pilo doctiores aut meliores facti sunt. 97] Hactenus enim haec apud homines inveteravit opinio, ut existimarent per [R. 428] omnia satisfactum esse Sabbato, si die dominico missa ac evangelium audiretur. Ceterum, Verbum Dei nemo admodum requisivit, quem admodum nemo quoque praesto fuit, qui illud sincere docuisset. Iam vero, posteaquam tanti

98] Scias itaque non tantum referre, ut audias verum multo magis etiam, ut auditum Dei Verbum perdisceas et custodias. Neque in eam venias opinionem, ut haec tecum cogites in tua voluntate situm esse, aut non ita multum referre, audias necne, sed praeeptum Dei esse, qui aliquando auditi a te Verbi sui rationem tecum initurus est, quomodo illud didiceris, audieris aut quam reverenter habueris.

99] Pari quoque ratione oburgandi sunt illi delicati et fastidiosi spiritus, qui simul atque unam et alteram concionem audierunt, protinus saturi sunt, correptique nausea Verbum fastidiunt, utpote qui ipsi illud probe calleant, nec egeant magistro aut doctore amplius. Haec enim Verbi Dei nausea et fastidium ipsum illud peccatum est, quod inter mortalia peccata haecenus numeratum est, diciturque ἀνηδία, hoc est, socordia et taedium, odiosa profecto et damnosa pestis, qua diabolus hoc tempore multorum perstringit pectora, ut nos oscitantes opprimat ac Verbum Dei iterum nobis clanculum subtrahat.

100] Hoc enim tibi praedictum sit, quamquam Verbi divini omnium esses scientissimus, omnesque reliquos huius anteires cognitione et magisterio: quotidie tamen in Satanae potestate et regno positus es diu noctuque non desinentis tibi machinari perniciem, ut in corde tuo incredulitatem excitet, teque malis cogitationibus adversus priora et omnia praeepta incendat. Quare omnibus [R. 429] modis necessarium est, ut Verbum Dei in promptu habeas et, quod dici solet, in numerato, hoc est, in corde, in ore, in auribus. Quiescente autem corde, nec Verbo Dei personante, impressionem facit ac prius, quam anni- 101] madvertamus, damnum dedit. Contra, ea vis et virtus Verbi est, ut, ubi seria quadam animi agitatione revocatur in memoriam, aut auditur et tractatur, nunquam sine fructu evanescat, sed subinde nova quadam intelligentia, voluptate ac devotione auditorem afficiat, retineat ac excitet, pectusque et cogitationes purificet. Neque enim verba sunt putrida aut emortua, succo et vigore carentia, who listen to God's Word as to any other trifle, and only from custom come to preaching, and go away again, and at the end of the year know as little of it as at the beginning. For hitherto the opinion prevailed that you had properly hallowed Sunday when you had heard a mass or the Gospel read; but no one cared for God's Word, as also no one taught it. Now, while we have God's Word, we nevertheless do not correct the abuse; we suffer ourselves to be preached to and admonished, but we listen without seriousness and care.

Know, therefore, that you must be concerned not only about hearing, but also about learning and retaining it in memory, and do not think that it is optional with you or of no great importance, but that it is God's commandment, who will require of you how you have heard, learned, and honored His Word.

Likewise those fastidious spirits are to be reproved who, when they have heard a sermon or two, find it tedious and dull, thinking that they know all that well enough, and need no more instruction. For just that is the sin which has been hitherto reckoned among mortal sins, and is called ἀκηδία, i. e., torpor or satiety, a malignant, dangerous plague with which the devil bewitches and deceives the hearts of many, that he may surprise us and secretly withdraw God's Word from us.

For let me tell you this, even though you know it perfectly and be already master in all things, still you are daily in the dominion of the devil, who ceases neither day nor night to steal unawares upon you, to kindle in your heart unbelief and wicked thoughts against the foregoing and all the commandments. Therefore you must always have God's Word in your heart, upon your lips, and in your ears. But where the heart is idle, and the Word does not sound, he breaks in and has done the damage before we are aware. On the other hand, such is the efficacy of the Word, whenever it is seriously contemplated, heard, and used, that it is bound never to be without fruit, but always awakens new understanding, pleasure, and devoutness, and produces a pure heart and pure thoughts. For these words are not inoperative or dead, but creative, living words. And even though no other interest or necessity impel us, yet this ought to urge every one thereunto, because thereby the devil is put to flight and driven away, and, besides, this commandment is fulfilled, and [this exercise in the Word] is more pleasing to God than any work of hypocrisy, however brilliant.

Das vierte Gebot.

Bisher haben wir die ersten drei Gebote gelernt, die da gegen Gott gerichtet sind. Zum ersten, daß man ihm von ganzem Herzen vertraue, ihn fürchte und liebe in all unserm Leben. Zum andern, daß man seines heiligen Namens nicht mißbrauche zur Lüge noch einigem bösen Stüde, sondern zu Gottes Lob, Ruh und Seligkeit des Nächsten und seiner selbst. Zum dritten, daß man an der Feier und Ruhe Gottes Wort mit Fleiß handle und treibe, auf daß all unser Tun und Leben danach gehe. Folgen nun die andern sieben, gegen unsern Nächsten gestellt, unter welchen das erste und höchste ist:

Du sollst deinen Vater und deine Mutter ehren.

Diesem Vater- und Mutterband hat Gott sonderlich den Preis gegeben vor allen Ständen, die unter ihm sind, daß er nicht schlechtst gebeut [nicht bloß gebietet], die Eltern liebzuhaben, sondern zu ehren. Denn gegen Brüder, Schwestern und den Nächsten insgemein befiehlt er nichts Höheres, denn sie zu lieben, also daß er Vater und Mutter scheidet und auszucht [ausnimmt, auswählt] vor allen andern Personen auf Erden und neben sich setzt. Denn es ist viel ein höher Ding, ehren, denn lieben, als das nicht allein die Liebe begreift, sondern auch eine Zucht [Höflichkeit], Demut und Scheu, als gegen eine Majestät, allda verborgen, auch nicht allein fordert, daß man sie freundlich und mit Ehrerbietung anspreche, sondern allermeist, daß man sich beide von Herzen und mit dem Leibe also stelle und erzeige, daß man viel von ihnen halte und nach Gott für die Obersten ansehe. Denn welchen man von Herzen ehren soll, den muß man wahrlich für hoch und groß achten.

Also daß man dem jungen Volk einbilde [eindrücke], ihre Eltern an Gottes Statt vor Augen zu halten und also [zu] denken, ob sie gleich gering, arm, gebrechlich und wunderlich seien, daß sie dennoch Vater und Mutter sind, von Gott gegeben. Des Wandels oder Fehls [Gebrechens] halben sind sie der Ehren nicht beraubt. Darum ist nicht anzusehen die Person, wie sie sind, sondern Gottes Wille, der es also schafft und ordnet. Sonst sind wir zwar vor Gottes Augen alle gleich, aber unter uns kann es ohne solche Ungleichheit und ordentlichen Unterschied nicht sein, darum sie auch von Gott geboten ist zu halten, daß du mir als deinem Vater gehorsam seiest, und ich die Oberhand habe.

So lerne nun zum ersten, was die Ehre gegen den [die] Eltern heiße, in diesem Gebot gefordert, nämlich daß man sie vor allen Dingen herrlich und wert halte als den höchsten Schatz auf Erden, danach auch mit Worten sich züchtig [höflich] gegen sie stelle, [sie] nicht übel ansahre, noch mit ihnen poche noch poltere, sondern lasse sie recht haben und schweige, ob sie gleich zu viel tun. Zum dritten auch mit Werken, das ist, mit Leib und Gut, solche

Praeceptum IV.

103] Hactenus tria priora praecepta didicimus, quae erga Deum servanda nobis tradita sunt. Primum, ut ei ex toto corde fidamus, eum per omnem vitam nostram metuamus et diligamus. Deinde, ut eius sancto nomine nequaquam ad mendacia aut ullam aliam nequitiam tuendam abutamur, sed idem ad laudem Dei ac utilitatem et salutem proximi atque etiam nostram usurpemus. Tertio, ut diebus festis Verbum Dei diligenter audiatur et exerceatur, ut tota vita nostra ad eius gnomonem et regulam non discrepante amussi respondeat. Sequuntur nunc deinceps reliqua septem praecepta, quae erga proximum nobis conservanda sunt, quorum primum et summum hoc est:

104] Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, ut sis longaevus super terram. [R. 430]

105] Hunc parentum statum et ordinem Deus praecipue hoc ornavit elogio ante omnes alios, qui sub ipso sunt, status et ordines, ut non simpliciter praecipiat parentes esse amandos, sed honorandos. Nam erga fratres, sorores et proximum in genere nihil amplius praecipit, quam amore prosequendos esse, ita ut parentes ab omnibus aliis, qui in terra agunt, 106] segreget iuxtaque se collocet. Est enim honor res amore multis modis sublimior, utpote quae non tantum amorem in se complectatur, verum etiam singularem quandam modestiam, humilitatem et reverentiam, quae cuidam quasi maiestati hic occulte habenda 107] sit. Neque tantum exigit, ut amanter et cum honore parentes compellemus, sed omnium maxime, ut et corpore et animo ita nos geramus, exhibeamus, ut in existimatione magna apud nos sint, ac post Deum pro summis ac maximis inter homines intueamur. Cui enim non simulate, sed ex animo honorem dare volumus, hunc profecto maximi pretii hominem esse existimemus oportet.

108] Necessarium ergo est, ut pueris hoc identidem inculcetur, ut parentes suos Dei loco vereantur atque in honore habeant, itaque secum animo cogitent, quod, quamquam tenues, egeni, imbecilles, deficientes et morosi sint, nihilominus parentes sint, ab ipso Deo sibi dati. Nam conditionis aut defectus gratia debito honore privati non sunt. Quare parentum personae intuendae non sunt, sed Dei voluntas consideranda, ita iubentis et ordinantis. Alloqui coram Deo omnes quidem pares sumus, sed nos inter nos hoc dispari et ordinato discrimine non possumus non discrepare. Quamobrem a Deo praeeptum est, ut mihi tanquam tuo patri dicto sis audiens, egoque imperium in te obtineam.

109] Disce ergo sub initium, quinam [R. 431] honor parentibus habendus sit, hoc praeepto exactus, nimirum ut prae omnibus rebus reverenter habeantur et tractentur benefice veluti maximus et pretiosissimus in terris thesaurus. 110] Deinde, ut parem quoque in verbis humanitatem et modestiam a nobis sentiant, ne acerbè eos invadant liberi, neve cum iisdem agant elate et ferociter, sed illis de suo iure

The Fourth Commandment.

Thus far we have learned the first three commandments, which relate to God. First, that with our whole heart we trust in Him, and fear and love Him throughout all our life. Secondly, that we do not misuse His holy name in the support of falsehood or any bad work, but employ it to the praise of God and the profit and salvation of our neighbor and ourselves. Thirdly, that on holidays and when at rest we diligently treat and urge God's Word, so that all our actions and our entire life be ordered according to it. Now follow the other seven, which relate to our neighbor. among which the first and greatest is:

Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother.

To this estate of fatherhood and motherhood God has given the special distinction above all estates that are beneath it that He not simply commands us to love our parents, but to honor them. For with respect to brothers, sisters, and our neighbors in general He commands nothing higher than that we love them, so that He separates and distinguishes father and mother above all other persons upon earth, and places them at His side. For it is a far higher thing to honor than to love one, inasmuch as it comprehends not only love, but also modesty, humility, and deference as to a majesty there hidden, and requires not only that they be addressed kindly and with reverence, but, most of all, that both in heart and with the body we so act as to show that we esteem them very highly, and that, next to God, we regard them as the very highest. For one whom we are to honor from the heart we must truly regard as high and great.

We must, therefore, impress it upon the young that they should regard their parents as in God's stead, and remember that however lowly, poor, frail, and queer they may be, nevertheless they are father and mother given them by God. They are not to be deprived of their honor because of their conduct or their failings. Therefore we are not to regard their persons, how they may be, but the will of God who has thus created and ordained. In other respects we are, indeed, all alike in the eyes of God; but among us there must necessarily be such inequality and ordered difference, and therefore God commands it to be observed, that you obey me as your father, and that I have the supremacy.

Learn, therefore, first, what is the honor towards parents required by this commandment, to wit, that they be held in distinction and esteem above all things, as the most precious treasure on earth. Furthermore, that also in our words we observe modesty toward them, do not accost them roughly, haughtily, Ehre beweise, daß man ihnen diene, helfe und [sie] versorge, wenn sie alt, krank, gebrechlich oder arm sind, und solches alles nicht allein gern, sondern mit Demut und Ehrerbietung, als vor Gott getan. Denn wer das weiß, wie er sie im Herzen halten soll, wird sie nicht lassen Not noch Hunger leiden, sondern über und neben sich setzen und ihnen mittheilen, was er hat und vermag [besitzt].

humanitatis officia non solum libenter et benevole decrepitis parentibus, sed cum omni etiam humilitate et reverentia, tamquam coram Deo inspectante fiant, praestanda sunt. Qui enim novit, cuius modi existimationem de parentibus in corde circumferre debeat, ille non patietur eos laborare penuria, aut fame ac siti contabescere, sed eosdem supra iuxtaque se collocatos faciet discumbere, illisque de fortunulis suis, quidquid habebit, non gravate impertiet.

Zum andern siehe und merke, wie groß, gut und heilig Werk alhier den Kindern vorgelegt ist, welches man leider gar verachtet und in [den] Wind schlägt, und niemand wahrnimmt, daß es Gott geboten habe, oder daß es ein heilig, göttlich Wort und Lehre sei. Denn wenn man's dasfürgehalten hätte, hätte ein jeglicher daraus können nehmen, daß [es] auch heilige Leute müßten sein, die nach diesen Worten lebten. So hätte man kein Klostersleben noch geistliche Stände dürfen [brauchen] aufwerfen, wäre ein jeglich Kind bei diesem Gebot [ge]blieben und hätte sein Gewissen können richten gegen Gott und sprechen: Soll ich gute und heilige Werke tun, so weiß ich je kein besseres, denn meinen Eltern alle Ehre und Gehorsam zu leisten, weil es Gott selbst geheißen hat. Denn was Gott gebot [gebietet], muß viel und weit edler sein denn alles, was wir selbst mögen erdenken, und weil kein höherer noch besserer Meister zu finden ist denn Gott, wird freilich auch keine bessere Lehre sein, denn er von sich gibt. Nun lehrt er je reichlich, was man tun soll, wenn man rechtschaffen gute Werke will üben, und in dem, daß er's gebot, zeugt er, daß sie ihm wohlgefallen. Ist es denn Gott, der solches gebot und kein Besseres weiß zu stellen, so werde ich's je nicht besser machen.

ipse auctor et magister extiterit. Iam quidem abunde, quid faciendum sit, perdocet, si vere bona opera facere atque exercere cupimus, atque hoc ipso, quod haec facienda praecipit, satis indicat sibi quoque eadem mirifice probari. Quodsi ergo Deus est, qui ista mandat fieri, nec aliquid praecarius novit constituere, nulla spes est hisce meliora me inventurum.

Siehe, also hätte man ein frommes Kind recht gelehrt, seliglich erzogen und daheim behalten im Gehorsam und Dienst der Eltern, daß man Gutes und Freude daran gesehen hätte. Aber also hat man Gottes Gebot nicht müssen aufmußen [herausstreichen], sondern liegen lassen oder überhinausgehen, daß [es] ein Kind nicht bedenken [überlegen, verstehen] konnte und dieweil das Maul aufsperrten nach dem, daß wir aufgeworfen haben, und Gott einmal darum begrüßt [angesprochen].

Darum laßt uns einmal lernen um Gottes willen, daß das junge Volk, alle andern Dinge aus den Augen gesetzt, erstlich auf dies Gebot sehen, wenn sie Gott mit rechten guten Werken dienen wollen, daß sie tun, was Vater und Mutter, oder denen sie an ihrer Statt untertan sind, lieb ist. Denn welches Kind das weiß und tut, hat zum ersten den großen Trost im Herzen, daß es fröhlich sagen und rühmen kann (zum Trost und [zu]wider allen, die mit eigen erwähnten Werken umgehen): Siehe, das Werk gefällt meinem Gott im Himmel wohl, das weiß ich fürwahr.

nonnihil concedant et taceant, etiamsi non-
111] nunquam modum excesserint. Tertio, ut idem quoque opere comprobent, hoc est, amore et officiis corporis et fortunae talem honorem habeant, ut eos sublevit obsequio, iuvent munifice, eorumdem non difficilem curam habeant, ubi iam consenuerint ac per aetatem viribus destituti languescere coeperint, aut ad egestatem redacti fuerint. Atque haec omnia

112] Deinde vide, quaeso, et attende animu[m], quam magna et sancta opera hic liberis proposita sint; quorum, prohi dolor! nullus est respectus, sed quae plane negliguntur, nec quisquam est, qui animadvertat haec a Deo esse praecepta, aut Dei verbum esse et Scripturae Sacrae documenta. Quodsi enim alterutrum horum aestimatum esset ab hominibus, quivis ex hoc facile potuisset colligere, sanctos quoque oportere esse homines, qui secundum horum verborum praescriptum viverent. Neque monasticam vitam instituire aut religiosorum perversos ordines invenire [R. 432] necesse fuisset, sed quivis puer in hoc praeecepto mansisset, potuissetque quietam et salvam erga Deum obtinere conscientiam ac dicere: Si mihi bona ac sancta facienda sunt opera, nullum scio praestantius, quam ut parentibus meis omnem honorem et obedientiam exhibeam, quando Deus hoc ipsum mihi
113] faciendum tantopere praecipit. Quidquid enim Deus praecipit, necessario multo debet esse nobilior et praestantius quam omne illud, quidquid nos ipsi comminiscimur. Et quum non sit aliud ad inveniendum magister cum sublimior tum acutior, certum est neque doctrinam ullam esse potiore[m], quam cuius and defiantly, but yield to them and be silent, even though they go too far. Thirdly, that we show them such honor also by works, that is, with our body and possessions, that we serve them, help them, and provide for them when they are old, sick, infirm, or poor, and all that not only gladly, but with humility and reverence, as doing it before God. For he who knows how to regard them in his heart will not allow them to suffer want or hunger, but will place them above him and at his side, and will share with them whatever he has and possesses.

114] Ad hunc quidem modum probus puer docendus erat et salubriter educandus ac domi in parentum obsequio et obedientia iugiter retinendus, unde spectantes cepissent voluptatem et gaudium. Verum tanta cura ac diligentia divinum praeeceptum non fuit commendandum, sed posthabendum planeque dissimulanter praetereundum, ita ut puer ista animo cogitare non potuerit, sed interim veluti hians lupus illud captare, quod ipsi vix unquam consulto, aut semel salutato, quod dicitur, Deo, commenti adinvenimus.

115] Quare aliquando tandem discamus, obsecro, ut iuventus reliquis omnibus posthabitis cumprimis ad hoc praeeceptum inconcinniter intentos habeat oculos, cupiens Deo servire vere bonis operibus, ut faciat, quae parentibus aut his, quibus horum loco subiecta est, grata esse intellexerit. Quicunque enim puer haec comperta habet et facit, [R. 433] omnium primum hanc ingentem in corde consolationem obtinet, ut plenus gaudio dicere seque vere iactare possit adversus omnes, qui propriis et a se inventis operibus occupati

Secondly, notice how great, good, and holy a work is here assigned children, which is, alas! utterly neglected and disregarded, and no one perceives that God has commanded it, or that it is a holy, divine Word and doctrine. For if it had been regarded as such, every one could have inferred that they must be holy men who live according to these words. Thus there would have been no need of inventing monasticism nor spiritual orders, but every child would have abided by this commandment, and could have directed his conscience to God and said: "If I am to do good and holy works, I know of none better than to render all honor and obedience to my parents, because God has Himself commanded it. For what God commands must be much and far nobler than everything that we may devise ourselves; and since there is no higher or better teacher to be found than God, there can be no better doctrine, indeed, than He gives forth. Now, He teaches fully what we should do if we wish to perform truly good works; and by commanding them, He shows that they please Him. If, then, it is God who commands this, and who knows not how to appoint anything better, I will never improve upon it."

Behold, in this manner we would have had a godly child properly taught, reared in true blessedness, and kept at home in obedience to his parents and in their service, so that men should have had blessing and joy from the spectacle. However, God's commandment was not permitted to be thus [with such care and diligence] commended, but had to be neglected and trampled under foot, so that a child could not lay it to heart, and meanwhile gaped [like a panting wolf] at the devices which we set up, without once [consulting or] giving reverence to God.

Let us, therefore, learn at last, for God's sake, that, placing all other things out of sight, our youths look first to this commandment, if they wish to serve God with truly good works, that they do what is pleasing to their fathers and mothers, or to those to whom they may be subject in their stead. For every child that knows and does this has, in the first place, this great consolation in his heart, that he can joyfully say and boast (in spite of and against all who are occupied with works of their own choice): "Behold, this Daß sie mit ihren vielen, großen, sauren, schweren Werken alle auf einen Haufen hertreten und rühmen, laß sehen, ob sie irgends hervorbringen könnten, das größer und edler sei denn Vater und Mutter Gehorsam, so Gott nächst seiner Majestät Gehorsam gesetzt und befohlen hat, daß, wenn Gottes Wort und Willen geht und ausgerichtet wird, soll keiner mehr gelten denn der Eltern Wille und Wort, also daß er dennoch auch unter Gottes Gehorsam bleibe und nicht wider die vorigen Gebote gehe.

Derhalben sollst du von Herzen froh sein und Gott danken, daß er dich dazu erwählt und würdig gemacht hat, ihm solch köstlich, angenehmes Werk zu tun. Und halte es nur für groß und teuer, ob es gleich [als] das allgeringste und verachtetste angesehen wird, nicht unserer Würdigkeit halben, sondern daß es in dem Kleinod und Heiligtum, nämlich Gottes Wort und Gebot, gesetzt ist und geht. O wie teuer sollten's alle Kartäuser, Mönche und Nonnen kaufen, daß sie in all ihrem geistlichen Wesen ein einzig Werk vor Gott möchten bringen, aus seinem Gebot getan, und mit frühlichem Herzen vor seinen Augen sprechen: Nun weiß ich, daß dieß Werk wohlgefällt. Wo wollen sie, die armen elenden Leute, bleiben, wenn sie vor Gott und aller Welt schamrot mit allen Schanden stehen werden vor einem jungen Kind, so in diesem Gebot gelebt hat, und bekennen müssen, daß sie mit alle ihrem Leben nicht wert sind gewesen, ihm das Wasser zu reichen! Geschieht ihnen auch recht um der teuflischen Verlehrung willen, weil sie Gottes Gebot mit Füßen treten, daß sie sich vergeblich mit selbstverdachten Werken martern müssen, dazu Spott und Schaden zu Lohn haben.

Sollte nun nicht ein Herz springen und von Freuden zerfließen, wenn es zur Arbeit ginge und täte, was ihm befohlen wäre, daß es könnte sagen: Siehe, das ist besser denn aller Kartäuser Heiligkeit, ob sie sich gleich zu Tode fasten und ohne Unterlaß auf den Knien beten? Denn hier hast du einen gewissen Text und göttlich Zeugnis, daß er dies geheißsen hat, aber von jenem kein Wort befohlen. Aber das ist der Jammer und leidige Blindheit der Welt, daß solches niemand glaubt; so hat uns der Teufel bezaubert mit falscher Heiligkeit und [dem] Schein eigener Werke.

Derhalben wollte ich je gerne (sage ich abermal), daß man Augen und Ohren aufstele und solches zu Herzen nähme, auf daß wir nicht dermaleinst wieder von dem reinen Gotteswort auf des Teufels Argentand verleitet würden. So würde es auch wohl sehen, daß die Eltern desto mehr Freude, Liebe, Freundschaft und Eintracht in Häusern hätten; so könnten die Kinder den Eltern all ihr Herz nehmen [abgewinnen]. Wiederum, wo sie Herrlich sind und nicht eher tun, was sie sollen, man lege ihnen denn einen Knüttel auf den Rücken, so sunt: Ecce, certus sum, hoc opus Deo meo 116] acceptum esse. Sine vero illos cum suis multis, magnis, laboriosis, amaris et gravibus operibus omnes ad unum prodire in medium et iactare, videamus saltem, num unum aliquod producturi sint, quod maius sit aut praeclarior, quam obedire parentibus, quod Deus post suae maiestatis obedientiam primum esse voluit praecepitque, ita ut, si Dei Verbum et voluntas locum habet et effecta fuerit, nihil quidquam valere debeat amplius quam parentum verbum et voluntas, ita tamen, ut haec quoque divinae obedientiae subdita sit, neque contra priora praecepta feratur.

117] Quapropter vere atque ex animo tibi triumphandum esset gaudio, Deoque gratiae agenda, quod te dignatus ad hoc elegerit, ut illi tam grata et pretiosa faceres opera. Tantum vide, ut hoc magni aestimes, quamvis apud homines videatur levissimum et contemptissimum, et hoc non dignitatis nostrae gratia, quae nulla est, sed quod re omnium pretiosissima, nempe Dei Verbo, comprehen- 118] sum et conclusum sit. O quam magno emerent omnes Carmelitae et monachi et moniales, ut in omni religione sua vel unum opus possent producere, divinorum praeceptorum iussu factum, possentque coram Deo alacri animo dicere: Tam quidem certus sum hoc opus tibi bene placere. Ubi vero miserandi illi et aerumnosi manebunt homines, quando coram Deo et universo mundo extreme confundentur, collati ad unum aliquem puerum, qui hoc in praecepto vixerit, cogenturque fateri sese cum omni vitae suae ratione et operibus non dignos esse, qui illi vel matellam 119] porrigant! Sed et iure hoc illis accidit, propter perversitatem diabolicam, quia [R. 434] Dei praeceptum ita contumeliose pessundant, ut semet in cassum ultro excogitatis operibus excarnificatos disruciunt, nihil adhaec praemii inde aliud praeterquam ignominiam una cum damno reportent.

120] Quomodo ergo cor hominis non gestiret gaudio, aut laetitia diffunderet, quod labori se accingeret faceretque, quod sibi demandatum esset, possetque dicere: Ecce, hoc opus praestat ac potius est omnium Carthusianorum sanctimonia, etiamsi ad necem usque se ipsos macerarent ieiunio, ac citra intermissionem innixi genibus preculas ad Deum fundarent? Hic enim certum habes divini Verbi testimonium, quod haec facienda mandaverit, ceterum de illis ne iota quidem uspiam praeceptum invenitur. At deploranda haec mundi plaga et horrida caecitas est, quod haec omnia nemo credit; adeo diabolus simulata sanctitate et fucatis operibus nostros perstrinxit ac dementavit oculos.

121] Quamobrem percuperem (ut repetam), ut apertis oculis et auribus, serio tandem ista corde complecteremur, ne aliquando iterum a puro Dei Verbo abstracti et abalienati in diabolica mendacia prolaberemur. Quin etiam hac ratione futurum prospicerem, ut parentes maiori gaudio, amore, amicitia et concordia fruerentur in aedibus, et liberi parentes haberent summa devinctos benevolentia. Contra, 122] ubi pertinaces sunt, nec citius, quam fustibus adacti, iussa capessunt, Deum simul work is well pleasing to my God in heaven, that I know for certain." Let them all come together with their many great, distressing, and difficult works and make their boast; we will see whether they can show one that is greater and nobler than obedience to father and mother, to whom God has appointed and commanded obedience next to His own majesty; so that if God's Word and will are in force and being accomplished, nothing shall be esteemed higher than the will and word of parents; yet so that it, too, is subordinated to obedience toward God and is not opposed to the preceding commandments.

Therefore you should be heartily glad and thank God that He has chosen you and made you worthy to do a work so precious and pleasing to Him. Only see that, although it be regarded as the most humble and despised, you esteem it great and precious, not on account of our worthiness, but because it is comprehended in, and controlled by, the jewel and sanctuary, namely, the Word and commandment of God. Oh, what a high price would all Carthusians, monks, and nuns pay, if in all their religious doings they could bring into God's presence a single work done by virtue of His commandment, and be able before His face to say with joyful heart: "Now I know that this work is well pleasing to Thee." Where will these poor wretched persons hide when in the sight of God and all the world they shall blush with shame before a young child who has lived according to this commandment, and shall have to confess that with their whole life they are not worthy to give it a drink of water? And it serves them right for their devilish perversion in treading God's commandment under foot that they must vainly torment themselves with works of their own device, and, in addition, have scorn and loss for their reward.

Should not the heart, then, leap and melt for joy when going to work and doing what is commanded, saying: Lo, this is better than all holiness of the Carthusians, even though they kill themselves fasting and praying upon their knees without ceasing? For here you have a sure text and a divine testimony that He has enjoined this; but concerning the other He did not command a word. But this is the plight and miserable blindness of the world that no one believes these things; to such an extent the devil has deceived us with false holiness and the glamour of our own works.

Therefore I would be very glad (I say it again) if men would open their eyes and ears, and take this to heart, lest some time we may again be led astray from the pure Word of God to the lying vanities of the devil. Then, too, all would be well; for parents would have more joy, love, friendship, and concord in their houses; thus the children could captivate their parents' hearts. On the other hand, when they are obstinate, and will not do what they ought until a rod is laid upon their back, they anger both God and erzürnen sie beide Gott und Eltern, damit sie ihnen selbst solchen Schatz und Freude des Gewissens entziehen und eitel Unglück sammeln. Darum geht es auch jetzt in der Welt also, wie jebermann klagt, daß beide jung und alt gar wild und unbändig ist, keine Scheu noch Ehre hat, nichts tun, denn mit Schlägen getrieben, und hinter eines andern Rücken ausrichten [verleumdern] und abziehen [verkleinern], was sie könnten, darum auch Gott straft, daß sie in allen Unrat und Jammer kommen. So können die Eltern gemeinlich selbst nichts, zeucht [zieht] ein Tor den andern; wie sie gelebt haben, so leben die Kinder hinnach.

Das soll nun (sage ich) das Erste und Größte sein, das uns zu diesem Gebot soll treiben, um welches willen, wenn wir keinen Vater und Mutter hätten, sollten wir wünschen, daß uns Gott Holz und Stein vorstellte, die wir Vater und Mutter möchten heißen. Wieviel mehr, weil er uns lebendige Eltern [ge]geben hat, sollen wir froh werden, daß wir ihnen mögen Ehre und Gehorsam erzeigen, weil wir wissen, daß [es] der hohen Majestät und allen Engeln so wohl gefällt und alle Teufel verbrucht [verdrückt], dazu das höchste Wert ist, so man tun kann nach dem hohen Gottesdienst, in den vorigen Geboten gesagt, also daß Almosen geben und alle andern Werke gegen den Nächsten diesem noch [dennoch] nicht gleich sind. Denn Gott hat diesen Stand oben an gesetzt, ja, an seine Statt auf Erden gestellt. Solcher Wille Gottes und Gefallen soll uns Ursache und Reizung genug sein, daß wir mit Willen und Lust täten, was wir könnten.

evexit et extulit. Haec quidem Dei voluntas et stimulus nostram debet impulsisse negligentiam, ut cum quadam voluptate atque lubentia, quod officium nostrum postulat, faceremus.

Dazu sind wir's ja auch schuldig vor der Welt, daß wir der Wohlthat und allem Guten, so wir von den Eltern haben, dankbar seien. Aber da regiert abermal der Teufel in der Welt, daß die Kinder der Eltern vergessen, wie wir alle Gottes vergessen, und niemand denkt, wie uns Gott also nährt, [be]hütet und schützt und so viel Gutes gibt an Leib und Seele; sonderlich, wenn einmal eine böse Stunde kommt, da zürnen und murren wir mit Ungebuld, und ist alles dahin, was wir unser Leben lang Gutes empfangen haben. Eben also tun wir den Eltern auch, und ist kein Kind, das solches erkenne und bedenke, der Heilige Geist gebe es denn.

mensis bonis per omnem vitam a Deo acceptis nullum vel tantillum in memoria nostra residet amplius, sed prorsus expuncta omnia, oblivioni mandata sunt. Non secus quoque cum parentibus agimus, nec ullus puer est, qui difficultatem, quam parentes in nutricando et fovendo eo multifariam perpassi sunt, agnoscat aut perpendat, nisi hoc a Spiritu Sancto acceperit gratiae.

Solche Unart der Welt kennt Gott wohl; darum erinnert und treibt er sie mit Geboten, daß ein jeglicher denke [erwäge], was ihm die Eltern getan haben; so findet er, daß er Leib und Leben von ihnen habe, dazu auch ernährt und aufgezogen sei, da er sonst hundertmal in seinem Unflat ersiehet wäre. Darum ist's recht und wohl gesagt von alten weisen Leuten: Deo, parentibus et et parentes exasperant, eoque se ipsos tanto privant thesauro et gaudio conscientiae, omneque malum et infortunium sibi cumulant. At- 123] que hinc est, quod ea iam per totum orbem est rerum conditio, quemadmodum nemo non conqueritur, quod aequae et senes et iuvenes sint efferi et effrenes, in quibus nullum aut reverentiae aut honoris vestigium vel scintilla conspiciatur, nihil nisi verberibus evictum facientes, ac clanculum, quid- [R. 435] quid possunt, efficientes et subtrahentes. Eam ob rem Deus quoque punit eos, ut in omnem calamitatem prolapsi aerumnoae vitam exi- 124] gant. Fere etiam videmus, ut ipsi parentes quoque nihil sciant et omnium rerum ignari sint; ita fit, ut stultus stultum doceat, et quemadmodum parentes vixerunt, ad eum modum deinceps vivant et liberi.

125] Hoc, inquam, primum et maximum esse debet, quod ad huius praecepti observantiam nos merito provocaret, cuius gratia, etiamsi parentibus destitueremur, optandum tamen nobis fuerat, ut nobis Deus truncos et saxa proponeret, quae parentum vice coleremus, aut parentum appellatione dignaremur. Quanto magis, posteaquam vivos parentes nobis largitus est, laetitia nobis exsultandum est, ut illis honorem habere et obedientiae obsequium ostendere queamus, non ignorantes Deo optimo maximo ac omnibus angelis hoc summe placere et diabolo aegre esse, adhuc 126] maximum esse opus, quod ipsi facere possumus, post summum illum Dei cultum, in prioribus praeceptis comprehensum, adeo ut eleemosynis iuvare egentes, neque non omnia reliqua opera, quae proximo praestantur, huic nullo modo conferenda sint. Quippe Deus huic parentum ordini primas tribuit eundemque in terris plane in suam sedem colendum propterea nullum vel tantillum in memoria nostra residet amplius, sed prorsus expuncta omnia, oblivioni mandata sunt. Non secus quoque cum parentibus agimus, nec ullus puer est, qui difficultatem, quam parentes in nutricando et fovendo eo multifariam perpassi sunt, agnoscat aut perpendat, nisi hoc a Spiritu Sancto acceperit gratiae.

127] Adhaec coram mundo quoque in hoc astringimur, ut acceptorum a parentibus beneficiorum memores, mutuam officii vicem rependamus, utque parentes aetate fessos vicis- 128] sim alamus foveamusque. Sed hic rursum in mundo dominatur diabolus, ut liberi parentum obliviscantur, quemadmodum omnes nos Dei obliviscimur nec quisquam memoria repetit, quae sedulitate Deus nos alit, [R. 436] custodiat ac defendat, tum quanta bonorum copia corporis et animi nos cumulet et obruat. Praecipue vero, quando horulum paulo infeliciorem vix ostendentem se adversitate sustinemus, protinus malorum impatientes, in iram prorumpimus ac murmuramus, deque tot im-

129] Eiusmodi vitiosam mundi naturam et ingratitude Deum probe compertam habet, quare praeceptis nos subinde impellit et admonet, ut quisque animo secum repetat, quantum bonorum a parentibus acceperit, et inveniet se ab iisdem et corpus et vitae initium accepisse, atque item multo sudore et cura enutritum et educatum esse, ubi alias vel sextheir parents, whereby they deprive themselves of this treasure and joy of conscience, and lay up for themselves only misfortune. Therefore, as every one complains, the course of the world now is such that both young and old are altogether dissolute and beyond control, have no reverence nor sense of honor, do nothing except as they are driven to it by blows, and perpetrate what wrong and detraction they can behind each other's back; therefore God also punishes them, that they sink into all kinds of filth and misery. As a rule, the parents, too, are themselves stupid and ignorant; one fool trains [teaches] another, and as they have lived, so live their children after them.

This, now, I say should be the first and most important consideration to urge us to the observance of this commandment; on which account, even if we had no father and mother, we ought to wish that God would set up wood and stone before us, whom we might call father and mother. How much more, since He has given us living parents, should we rejoice to show them honor and obedience, because we know it is so highly pleasing to the Divine Majesty and to all angels, and vexes all devils, and is, besides, the highest work which we can do, after the sublime divine worship comprehended in the previous commandments; so that giving of alms and every other good work toward our neighbor are not equal to this. For God has assigned this estate the highest place, yea, has set it up in His own stead, upon earth. This will and pleasure of God ought to be a sufficient reason and incentive to us to do what we can with good will and pleasure.

Besides this, it is our duty before the world to be grateful for benefits and every good which we have of our parents. But here again the devil rules in the world, so that the children forget their parents, as we all forget God, and no one considers how God nourishes, protects, and defends us, and bestows so much good on body and soul; especially when an evil hour comes, we are angry and grumble with impatience, and all the good which we have received throughout our life is wiped out [from our memory]. Just so we do also with our parents, and there is no child that understands and considers this [what the parents have endured while nourishing and fostering him], except the Holy Ghost grant him this grace.

God knows very well this perverseness of the world; therefore He admonishes and urges by commandments that every one consider what his parents have done for him, and he will find that he has from them body and life, moreover, that he has been fed and reared when otherwise he would have perished magistris non potest satis gratiae rependi, daß ist: Gott, den Eltern und Schulmeistern kann man nimmer genugsam danken noch vergelten. Wer das anseht und bedenkt, der wird wohl ungetrieben seinen Eltern alle Ehre tun und sie auf den Händen tragen, als durch die ihm Gott alles Gute getan hat.

über das alles soll das auch eine große Ursache sein, uns desto mehr zu reizen, daß Gott an dieses Gebot eine leibliche Verheißung heftet und spricht: „Auf daß du langes Leben habest im Lande, da du wohnest.“

Da siehe selbst, wie großer Ernst [es] Gott sei über diesem Gebot, weil er nicht allein ausdrückt [ausdrückt], daß [es] ihm angenehm sei, [und daß er] Freude und Lust darin habe, sondern [daß es] solle auch uns wohl geraten und zum besten gedeihen, daß wir ein sanftes, süßes Leben mögen haben mit allem Guten. Darum auch St. Paulus Eph. 6 solches hoch anzeucht [anzieht] und rühmt, als er spricht: „Das ist das erste Gebot, das eine Verheißung hat: Auf daß dir's wohl gehe, und [du] lange lebest auf Erden.“ Denn inwiefern die andern auch ihre Verheißung eingeschlossen haben, ist's doch zu keinem so deutlich und ausgebrüht gekehrt.

Da hast du nun die Frucht und den Lohn, daß, wer es hält, soll gute Tage, Glück und Wohlfahrt haben; wiederum auch die Strafe, daß, wer ungehorsam ist, desto eher umkommen und des Lebens nicht froh werden soll. Denn langes Leben heißt die Schrift nicht allein wohl betagt werden, sondern alles haben, so zu langem Leben gehört, als nämlich Gesundheit, Weib und Kind, Nahrung, Frieden, gut Regiment usw., ohne welche dies Leben nicht fröhlich genossen werden noch die Länge bestehen kann. Willst du nun nicht Vater und Mutter gehorchen und dich lassen ziehen, so gehorche dem Hefner; gehorchst du dem nicht, so gehorche dem Stredebein, das ist der Tod. Denn das will Gott kurzum haben, entweder so du ihm gehorchst, Liebe und Dienst tußt, daß er dir's überschwenglich vergelte mit allem Guten, oder wo du ihn erzürnst, daß er über dich schide beide Tod und Hefner.

130] Hoc enim Deus, velis nolis, exigit, ut aut, si ipsi auscultaveris moremque gesseris, tibi largiter et assatim omnibus bonis penset praestiti obsequii promptitudinem, aut, si eius [R. 438] iracundiam tua pertinacia exasperaveris, te et morti et carnifici cruciandum obiciat.

Wo kommen so viele Schälle her, die man täglich hängen, löpfen und radbrechen muß, denn aus dem Ungehorsam, weil sie sich nicht mit Gutem ziehen lassen, daß sie es durch Gottes Strafe so ausrichten, daß man Unglück und Herzeleid an ihnen sieht. Denn gar selten geschieht, daß solche verruchte Leute eines rechten oder zeitigen [nicht zu frühen, natürlichen] Todes sterben.

centies in propriis sordibus sibi pereundum 130] fuisset. Quocirca praeclare et sapienter a veteribus dictum est: Deo, parentibus et magistris non potest satis gratiae rependi. Quicumque horum verborum recte memor fuerit, non exspectabit aliorum commonefactiones, ut erga parentes gratus appareat, sed sua sponte properabit eosdem et omni honore cumulare et in sinu (quod aiunt) gestare ut eos, quorum opera Deus illi omnium bonorum copiam pleno cornu affuderit.

131] Super haec omnia ad huius praecepti conservationem vel haec causa potissimum nos provocasse debebat, quod Deus huic praecepto corporalium bonorum promissionem annectit, inquit: Ut sis longaevus super terram, quam Dominus Deus tuus tibi dabit.

Hic ipse aestima, quanta severitate [R. 437] 132] hoc praeceptum Deo cordi sit, non solum aperte indicanti, illud sibi gratum esse aut gaudio ac voluptati, verum nobis etiam ipsis casurum esse felicissime, ac nonnisi in optimam partem eventurum, ut vitam tranquillam atque suavem exigamus omnibus rebus in ter- 133] ris affluentes. Hinc ipse quoque Paulus ad Ephesios sexto, v. 1. 2, hoc ipsum citans, pleno ore iactat, ubi inquit: Filii, obedite parentibus in Domino, hoc enim iustum est. Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, quod est mandatum primum in promissione, ut bene tibi sit et sis longaevus super terram. Nam tametsi et aliis praeceptis sua inclusa sit promissio, nulli tamen adeo significanter et expresse quam huic adiecta est.

134] Habes itaque huius praecepti fructum et praemium, ut ille, qui hoc transgressus non fuerit, dies felices exigit, nulla pressus inopia; contra quoque poenam, ut ille, qui parentibus dicto non erit audiens, hoc citius intereat, nec unquam sua vita cum voluptate fruatur. Esse enim aut fieri longaezum, non tantum ad decrepita usque aetatem vivere Scriptura nominat, sed omnia habere assatim, quae ad longaezam vitam traducendam pertinent, ut est prospera valetudo corporis, uxor et liberi, victus non tenuis aut sordidus, externa rerum pax, bona et aequabilis reipublicae administratio et huiusmodi, sine quibus haec vita neque iucunde peragi neque diu con- 135] sistere potest. Iam ergo si gravis auscultare parentibus, et ab iisdem emendari recusas, esto dicto audiens carnifici. Quodsi neque huic obedire sustines, obedito θανάτῳ πανδαμάτορι, τῶν κακῶν παλίων διδασκάλῳ.

si ipsi auscultaveris moremque gesseris, tibi largiter et assatim omnibus bonis penset praestiti obsequii promptitudinem, aut, si eius [R. 438] iracundiam tua pertinacia exasperaveris, te et morti et carnifici cruciandum obiciat. 137] Unde etiam agminatim pullulant et emergunt quotidie tot facinorosorum hominum examina, quae partim laqueo, partim gladio, partim etiam rota et igne plectenda et exstinguenda sunt, quam ex inobedientia erga parentes? Quandoquidem parentum obiurgationem, ex gratia et amore profectam, perferre nolunt, sit, ut Dei iracundia in omne facinus prolapsi, deinceps propalam excarnificati parentibus et dolori sint et dedecori. Perraro enim contingit, ut tam perdit et deplorati homines rectam aut maturam mortem oppetant.

a hundred times in his own filth. Therefore it is a true and good saying of old and wise men: Deo, parentibus et magistris non potest satis gratiae rependi, that is, To God, to parents, and to teachers we can never render sufficient gratitude and compensation. He that regards and considers this will indeed without compulsion do all honor to his parents, and bear them up on his hands as those through whom God has done him all good.

Over and above all this, another great reason that should incite us the more [to obedience to this commandment] is that God attaches to this commandment a temporal promise and says: That thou mayest live long upon the land which the Lord, thy God, giveth thee.

Here you can see yourself how much God is in earnest in respect to this commandment, inasmuch as He not only declares that it is well pleasing to Him, and that He has joy and delight therein; but also that it shall be for our prosperity and promote our highest good; so that we may have a pleasant and agreeable life, furnished with every good thing. Therefore also St. Paul greatly emphasizes the same and rejoices in it when he says, Eph. 6, 2, 3: This is the first commandment with promise: That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth. For although the rest also have their promises contained in them, yet in none is it so plainly and explicitly stated.

Here, then, you have the fruit and the reward, that whoever observes this commandment shall have happy days, fortune, and prosperity; and on the other hand, the punishment, that whoever is disobedient shall the sooner perish, and never enjoy life. For to have long life in the sense of the Scriptures is not only to become old, but to have everything which belongs to long life, such as health, wife, and children, livelihood, peace, good government, etc., without which this life can neither be enjoyed in cheerfulness nor long endure. If, therefore, you will not obey father and mother and submit to their discipline, then obey the hangman; if you will not obey him, then submit to the skeleton-man, i. e., death [death the all-subduer, the teacher of wicked children]. For on this God insists peremptorily: Either if you obey Him, rendering love and service, He will reward you abundantly with all good, or if you offend Him, He will send upon you both death and the hangman.

Whence come so many knaves that must daily be hanged, beheaded, broken upon the wheel, but from disobedience [to parents], because they will not submit to discipline in kindness, so that, by the punishment of God, they bring it about that we behold their misfortune and grief? For it seldom happens that such perverse people die a natural or timely death.

Die Frommen aber und Gehorsamen haben den Segen, daß sie lange in guter Ruhe leben und ihr Kindestind sehen (wie oben gesagt) ins dritte und vierte Glied.

Wie man auch erfährt, daß, wo seine alte Geschlechter sind, die da wohl stehen und viele Kinder haben, [solches] freilich daher [ge]kommen, daß ihrer etliche wohl gezogen und ihre Eltern vor Augen haben gehabt. Wiederum steht geschrieben von den Gottlosen Ps. 109: „Seine Nachkommen müssen ausgerottet werden, und ihr Name müsse im andern Glied untergehen.“ Derhalben laß dir's gesagt sein, wie groß Ding es ist bei Gott um den Gehorsam, weil er ihn so hoch setzt, ihm selbst so wohl gefallen läßt und reichlich belohnt, dazu jo streng darüber hält, zu strafen, die dawider tun.

Das rede ich alles, daß man's dem jungen Volk wohl einbleue [einpräge]. Denn niemand glaubt, wie dies Gebot so nötig ist, doch bisher unter dem Papsttum nicht geachtet noch gelehrt. Es sind schlechte [schlichte] und leichte Worte, meint jedermann, er könnte es wohlhin wohl; darum fährt man überhin und gafft nach andern Dingen, sieht und glaubt nicht, daß man Gott so hoch erzürnt, wenn man dies läßt anstehen, noch jo löbliche, angenehme Werke tut, so man dabei bleibt.

In dieses Gebot gehört auch weiter zu sagen von allerlei Gehorsam gegen Oberpersonen, die zu gebieten und zu regieren haben. Denn aus der Eltern Obrigkeit fließt [fließt] und breitet sich aus alle andere. Denn wo ein Vater nicht allein vermag sein Kind aufzuziehen, nimmt er einen Schulmeister dazu, der es lehre; ist er zu schwach, so nimmt er seine Freunde oder Nachbarn zu Hilfe; geht er abe [stirbt er], so befiehlt er und übergibt das Regiment und Oberhand andern, die man dazu ordnet. Item, so muß er auch Gesinde, Knechte und Mägde zum Hausregiment unter ihm [sich] haben, also daß alle, die man Herren heißt, an der Eltern Statt sind und von ihnen Kraft und Macht zu regieren nehmen müssen. Daher sie auch nach der Schrift alle Väter heißen, als die in ihrem Regiment das Vateramt treiben und väterlich Herz gegen die Ihren tragen sollen. Wie auch von alters her die Römer und andere Sprachen Herren und Frauen im Hause patres et matresfamilias, das ist, Hausväter und Hausmütter, genannt haben. Also auch ihre Landesfürsten und Oberherren haben sie patres patriae, das ist, Väter des ganzen Landes, geheißten, uns, die wir Christen sein wollen, zu großen Schanden, daß wir sie nicht auch also heißen oder zum wenigsten dafür halten und ehren.

magistratus et principes dixerunt patres patriae, nobis Christianis in dedecus et ignominiam, quod non eadem appellatione parentes et principes nostros dignamur, aut ad minimum eos pro talibus honoratos existimamus.

Was nun ein Kind Vater und Mutter schuldig ist, sind auch schuldig alle, die ins Hausregiment gesagt sind. Darum sollen Knechte und Ceterum probi et obediens benedictionem accipiunt, ut in multa tranquillitate belle et molliter consenescent, ac natos natorum (ut supra dictum est) videant in tertiam et quartam generationem usque procreatos.

138] Hoc ipsum experimentis quoque discimus, ut, ubi honestae et vetustae sunt familiae, divitiis et liberorum numerosa sobole abundantes, procul dubio inde incrementum longa quadam propagatione acceperint, quod illorum aliquot sancte educati fuerint, suisque maioribus reverenter auscultaverint. Rursum de impiis ita in sacris literis memoriae proditum legimus Ps. 109, 13: Nepotes eius eradicabuntur, in generationes altera deleatur nomen eorum. Sit ergo tibi aemel atque adeo dictum serio, quanti Deus faciat obedientiam, cum illi tantum tribuat, tantum ea delectetur, ut eius observationem amplissimis praemiis remuneret et rursus transgressores acerbè et immisericorditer puniat.

140] Haec omnia eo a me dicuntur, ut ista pueris sedulo inculcentur. Nemo enim facile credit, quam necessarium sit hoc praeeptum, hactenus tamen in papatu non magni aestimatum, ac ne traditum quidem unquam. Sunt quidem verba vulgaria et facilia, quae nemo non ante sibi probe cognita esse existimat, et haec ipsa causa est, cur tantopere negligentur, adeo ut ad alia nimium curiose intenti [R. 439] simus, ignorantes interim neque credentes, tam accendi et provocari iram Dei huius praeepti contemptu et negligentia nostra, et vicissim obedientia eius praeepti tam praecara et grata opera illi praestari.

141] In huius praeepti explanatione neque illud tacitum aut silentio praetereundum est, quod ad multiplicem obedientiam superiorum attinet, nempe eorum, qui versantur in imperio et reipublicae procuracionem sustinent. Siquidem e parentum potestate omnes aliae propagantur et manant. Ubi enim parens aliquis filium rebellem et dyscolum solus educare nequit, magistratum adiutorem sibi adhibet, qui literis ac disciplinis liberalibus pueri ferociam molliat ac mitiget. Quodsi huius quoque opera ad retundendam ferocientis ingenii barbariem parum fuerit efficax aut valida, adiungit sibi vicini auxilium. Quodsi diem suum obierit, commendat ac tradit filium educandum magistratibus aut tutoribus ad 142] hoc constitutus. Adhaec, ad rei familiaris administrationem servis quoque et ancillis opus est, ita ut omnes, quotquot domini appellatione censentur, vice parentum sint, ab iisdemque potestatem ac vim regnandi accipiant. Unde quoque secundum Scripturam omnes dicuntur patres, utpote qui in sua gubernatione officium patris obire, ergaque subditos patris animum inducere debeant. Quemadmodum et olim apud Romanos et alios plerosque populos heros herasque patres et matresfamilias nominabant. Ita quoque suos

143] Iam quaecunque liberi parentibus suis debent, eadem plane debent illis omnes, qui in oeconomia versantur. Quare et servi [R. 440]

But the godly and obedient have this blessing, that they live long in pleasant quietness, and see their children's children (as said above) to the third and fourth generation.

Thus experience also teaches, that where there are honorable, old families who fare well and have many children, they owe their origin to the fact, to be sure, that some of them were brought up well and were regardful of their parents. On the other hand, it is written of the wicked, Ps. 109, 13: Let his posterity be cut off; and in the generation following let their name be blotted out. Therefore heed well how great a thing in God's sight obedience is, since He so highly esteems it, is so highly pleased with it, and rewards it so richly, and besides enforces punishment so rigorously on those who act contrariwise.

All this I say that it may be well impressed upon the young. For no one believes how necessary this commandment is, although it has not been esteemed and taught hitherto under the papacy. These are simple and easy words, and everybody thinks he knew them afore; therefore men pass them lightly by, are gaping after other matters, and do not see and believe that God is so greatly offended if they be disregarded, nor that one does a work so well pleasing and precious if he follows them.

In this commandment belongs a further statement regarding all kinds of obedience to persons in authority who have to command and to govern. For all authority flows and is propagated from the authority of parents. For where a father is unable alone to educate his [rebellious and irritable] child, he employs a schoolmaster to instruct him; if he be too weak, he enlists the aid of his friends and neighbors; if he departs this life, he delegates and confers his authority and government upon others who are appointed for the purpose. Likewise, he must have domestics, man-servants and maid-servants, under himself for the management of the household, so that all whom we call masters are in the place of parents and must derive their power and authority to govern from them. Hence also they are all called fathers in the Scriptures, as those who in their government perform the functions of a father, and should have a paternal heart toward their subordinates. As also from antiquity the Romans and other nations called the masters and mistresses of the household patres et matres familiae, that is, housefathers and housemothers. So also they called their national rulers and overlords patres patriae, that is, fathers of the entire country, for a great shame to us who would be Christians that we do not likewise call them so, or, at least, do not esteem and honor them as such.

Now, what a child owes to father and mother, the same owe all who are embraced in the household. Therefore man-servants and aut in monasticae vitae lernam sceleratissimam semet praecipitavit, aut ad divos mercatum indulgentiarum decipulas abiit, magna iactura et temporis et nummorum et conscientiae.

Mägde zusehen, daß sie ihren Herren und Frauen nicht allein gehorsam seien, sondern auch sie in Ehren halten als ihre eigenen Väter und Mütter und tun alles, was sie wissen, daß man von ihnen haben will, nicht aus Zwang und Widerwillen, sondern mit Lust und Freuden, eben um voriger Ursachen willen, daß es Gottes Gebot ist, und ihm vor allen andern Werken wohlgefällt; um welches willen sie noch Lohn sollten zugeben und froh werden, daß sie Herren und Frauen möchten bekommen, solch fröhlich Gewissen zu haben, und wissen, wie sie rechte güldene Werke tun sollten; welches bisher verblieben und verachtet, und dafür [statt dessen] jedermann in's Teufels Namen in Klöster, zu Wallfahrten und Ablass gelaufen ist mit Schaden und bösem Gewissen.

Wenn man nun solches könnte dem armen Volk einbilden [einprägen], so würde ein Weiblin in allen Sprüngen gehen, Gott loben und danken und mit säuberlicher Arbeit, dafür sie sonst Nahrung und Lohn nimmt, solchen Schatz kriegen, den alle, die man für die Heiligsten achtet, nicht haben. Ist's nicht ein trefflicher Ruhm, daß zu wissen und [zu] sagen, wenn du deine tägliche Hausarbeit tußt, daß [es] besser ist denn aller Mönche Heiligkeit und strenges Leben? Und hast dazu die Zusagung, daß [es] dir zu allem Guten gedeihen soll und wohl gehen. Wie willst du seliger sein oder heiliger leben, soviel die Werke betrifft? Denn vor Gott eigentlich der Glaube heilig macht und allein ihm dient, die Werke aber den Leuten. Da hast du alles Gute, Schutz und Schirm unter dem Herrn, ein fröhlich Gewissen und gnädigen Gott dazu, der dir's hundertfältig vergelten will, und bist gar ein Junker, wenn du nur fromm und gehorsam bist. Wo aber nicht, [so] hast du erstlich eitel Zorn und Ungnade von Gott, keinen Frieden im Herzen, danach alle Plage und Unglück.

multis servitii tui rationem tibi pensaturus est. modo probitatis et obedientiae virtutem constanter retineas. Sin minus, primum quidem non nisi iram a Deo lucrafacis et inimicitias, postea amissa cordis tranquillitate omnes plagas incurris et infortunia.

Welchen nun solches nicht bewegen will und fromm machen, den befehlen wir dem Herten und Streckebein [dem Tod]. Darum denke ein jeglicher, der ihm [sich] will sagen lassen, daß [es] Gotte kein Scherz ist, und wisse, daß Gott mit dir redet und Gehorsam fordert. Gehorchtst du ihm, so bist du das liebe Kind; verachtest du es aber, so habe auch Schande, Jammer und Herzeleid zu Lohn.

Desgleichen ist auch zu reden vom Gehorsam weltlicher Obrigkeit, welche (wie gesagt) alle in den Vaterstand gehört und am allerweitesten um sich greift. Denn hier ist nicht ein einzelner Vater [ein Vater bloß etlicher], sondern so vieler Leute Vater, so viel er Landsassen, Bürger oder Untertanen hat; denn Gott gibt und erhält uns durch sie, als durch unsere Eltern, Nahrung, Haus und Hof, Schutz und Sicherheit. Darum, weil sie solchen Namen und Titel als ihren höchsten Preis mit allen Ehren führen, sind wir auch schuldig, et ancillae etiam atque etiam operam dare debent, ut non solum dominis ac dominabus suis libenter pareant, morem gerentes et obtemperantes, verum etiam veluti parentes suos honestent honoribus, non quidem coacte et invito animo, sed prompte et cum gaudio. Et hoc propter priorem causam, quod Deus honorandos eos et colendos praecipit, hacque obedientia prae omnibus aliis operibus imprimis [144] delectatur. Cuius rei gratia vel ipsi pretium impendere, planeque gestire gaudio debebant, si heros et heras consequantur, tamque pacata et hilari conscientia fruuntur et sciant, quomodo vere aurea opera praestare queant; quae hactenus prorsus rubigine et squalore obscurata et contempta ignoravimus, pro quibus faciendis nemo non impulsu diaboli

[145] Haec ergo quemadmodum dicta sunt, si misero vulgo iterum atque iterum incularentur, qui fieri possit, ut famula non exsiliaret gaudio, Deo gratias ageret eumque celebraret et mediocri labore, pro quo alias victum et mercedem accipit, eiusmodi thesaurum consequeretur, cuius illi, quos sanctissimos esse putamus, nunquam facti sunt participes? Nonne vero haec insignis et praeclara est iactantia nosse et posse dicere, te, si quotidie diurni laboris pensum diligenter absolveris, opus fecisse sanctius ac melius, quam omnium monachorum sanctitas ac vita est, quam dure et laboriose exigunt? Adhaec [146] annexam habes promissionem prospere ac feliciter tibi casurum esse. Qua ratione vis esse beator, aut sanctiorem vitam agere. [147] quantum ad opera attinet? Nam apud Deum sola fides vere iustificat eique soli [148] vit, opera vero hominibus. Ita fit, ut nihil non boni, protectionis et defensionis sub Domino tuo habeas, ad haec pacatam [R. 441] conscientiam et faventem Deum obtineas, qui Quid multis moror? Palam beatus es, dum amissa cordis tranquillitate omnes plagas in-maid-servants should be careful not only to be obedient to their masters and mistresses, but also to honor them as their own fathers and mothers, and to do everything which they know is expected of them, not from compulsion and with reluctance, but with pleasure and joy for the cause just mentioned, namely, that it is God's command and is pleasing to Him above all other works. Therefore they ought rather to pay wages in addition and be glad that they may obtain masters and mistresses to have such joyful consciences and to know how they may do truly golden works; a matter which has hitherto been neglected and despised, when, instead, everybody ran, in the devil's name, into convents or to pilgrimages and indulgences, with loss [of time and money] and with an evil conscience.

[149] Quem ergo ista non movebunt et prohum facient, hunc tamquam deploratae vitae hominem carnifici commendamus et morti. Quare quilibet, qui moneri se patitur, cogitet Deum hoc suo praecepto non ludos facere, aut iocos exercere, sciasque illum ipsum haec tecum loqui et obedientiam requirere. Quodsi illi morem gesseris, placebis ei, eiusque dilectus filius eris. Sin vero contempseris, age, et dedecus, aerumnas et dolores praemii loco tibi habeto.

[150] Similiter quoque dicendum est de obedientia, quae debetur magistratibus, quae, ut diximus, et ipsa in parentum ordinem pertinet et huc referenda est, omnium maxime longe lateque patens. Neque enim hic saltem unius familiae parens est, sed toties pater princeps existimandus est, quotquot cives aut subditos suae ditioni subiectos habuerit. Quippe Deus non secus per illos quam parentes nos alit ac sustinet, illorum opera victum nobis praestans, penates, tutelam, pacem atque securitatem.

If this truth, then, could be impressed upon the poor people, a servant-girl would leap and praise and thank God; and with her tidy work for which she receives support and wages she would acquire such a treasure as all that are esteemed the greatest saints have not obtained. Is it not an excellent boast to know and say that, if you perform your daily domestic task, this is better than all the sanctity and ascetic life of monks? And you have the promise, in addition, that you shall prosper in all good and fare well. How can you lead a more blessed or holier life as far as your works are concerned? For in the sight of God faith is what really renders a person holy, and alone serves Him, but the works are for the service of man. There you have everything good, protection and defense in the Lord, a joyful conscience and a gracious God besides, who will reward you a hundred-fold, so that you are even a nobleman if you be only pious and obedient. But if not, you have, in the first place, nothing but the wrath and displeasure of God, no peace of heart, and afterwards all manner of plagues and misfortunes.

Whoever will not be influenced by this and inclined to godliness we hand over to the hangman and to the skeleton-man. Therefore let every one who allows himself to be advised remember that God is not making sport, and know that it is God who speaks with you and demands obedience. If you obey Him, you are His dear child; but if you despise to do it, then take shame, misery, and grief for your reward.

The same also is to be said of obedience to civil government, which (as we have said) is all embraced in the estate of fatherhood and extends farthest of all relations. For here the father is not one of a single family, but of as many people as he has tenants, citizens, or subjects. For through them, as through our parents, God gives to us food, house and daß wir sie ehren und groß achten für den teuersten Schatz und [das] köstlichste Kleinod auf Erden.

Wer nun hier gehorsam, willig und dienstbar ist und gerne tut alles, was die Ehre belangt, der weiß, daß er Gott Gefallen tut, Freude und Glück zu Lohn kriegt. Will er's nicht mit Liebe tun, sondern verachten und sich sperren oder rumoren, so wisse er auch wiederum, daß er keine Gnade noch Segen habe, und wo er einen Gulden damit meint zu erlangen, anderswo zehnmal mehr dagegen verliere oder dem Hefer zuteil werde, durch Krieg, Pestilenz und Teuerung umkomme oder an seinen Kindern kein Gutes erlebe, vom Gefinde, Nachbarn oder Fremden und Tyrannen Schaden, Unrecht und Gewalt leiden müsse, auf daß uns bezahlt werde und heimkomme, was wir suchen und verdienen.

vicinia, hostibus, fisco et tyrannis certatim compilabitur, damnum accipiet et per iniuriam opprimetur, ut ita dignum ad nos redeat praemium, id quod per inobedientiam et quaerimus et meremur.

Wenn uns nur einmal zu sagen wäre, daß solche Werte Gott so angenehm sind und so reichliche Belohnung haben, würden wir in eitel überzühwenglichen Gütern sitzen und haben, was unser Herz begehrt. Weil man aber Gottes Wort und Gebot so gar verächtlich hält, als hätte es irgendein Hofsdiener [eitel Schwärzer] geredet, so laß auch sehen, ob du der Mann seiest, der ihm entzügen [Trog bieten] könnte. Wie schwer wird's ihm wohl werden, daß er dich wieder bezahle! Darum lebst du je so mehr [viel besser] mit Gottes Guld, Frieden und Glück als mit Ungnade und Unglück. Warum meinst du, daß jetzt die Welt so voll Untreue, Schande, Jammer und Mord ist, denn daß jedermann sein eigener Herr und talerfrei will sein, auf niemand nichts geben und alles tun, was ihn gelüftet? Darum straft Gott einen Buben mit dem andern, daß, wo du deinen Herrn betrugst [betrügst] oder verachtetest, ein anderer lomme, der dir wieder also mitfahre [der ebenso mit dir verführe], ja, daß du in deinem Haus von Weib, Kind oder Gefinde zehnmal mehr leiden müßtest.

genere calamitatum atque dedecoris, quam quod quisque liber, quisque sui iuris καὶ αὐτόνομος esse conatur, neminemque revereri aut [R. 443] metuere, sed, quodcumque animo suo visum aut libitum est, facere vult? Inde fit, ut Deus latronem latrone puniat, ut ubi domino tuo fraudulenter imposueris, aut eundem superbe spreveris, alius veniat, qui eadem mensura tibi remetietur, imo et in propriis laribus ab uxore, liberis et familia decuplo plus perferre cogaris.

Wir fühlen unser Unglück wohl, murren und klagen über Untreue, Gewalt und Unrecht, wollen aber nicht sehen, daß wir selbst Buben sind, die Strafe rechtlich verdient haben und nichts davon besser werden. Wir wollen keine Gnade und Glück haben, darum haben wir billig eitel Unglück ohne alle Barmherzigkeit. Es müssen noch etwa [irgendwo] fromme Leute auf Erden sein, daß uns Gott noch so viel Gutes läßt. Unserthalben sollten wir keinen Heller im Haus, keinen Strohhalbm auf dem Felde behalten. Das alles hab' ich müssen mit so viel Worten treiben, ob es einmal jemand wollte zu Herzen nehmen, daß wir der Blindheit und Jammers, darin wir so tief gelegen sind, möchten los werden, Gottes Wort und Willen recht er-

Quamobrem cum nomen et titulum illum uti summum decus et gloriam suam merito et dignissime gestent, vicissim et nos debemus eos, ut digni sunt, omni honore ostenso, magni facere ut thesaurum in terris omnium pretiosissimum.

151] Iam qui hic prompto ac lubenti animo obsequitur, neque gravatim ea, quae ad exhibendum honorem attinent, exsequitur, is scit se rem Deo gratam facere, praemii quoque loco gaudium ac felicitatem se consecuturum. Quodsi gravatur facere, aut magistratus etiam contemnit, aut concitato tumultu rebel- [R. 442] lat, rursus quoque ille sciat, nullius gratiae aut benedictionis divinae unquam sese futurum compotem, sed ab his omnibus excidisse planissime. Et ubi sperat hac sua inobedientia aureum se lucraturum, alibi in decuplo graviores iacturas faciet, aut in carnificis manus incidet, aut vel bello vel peste vel fame peribit, aut liberos suos degeneres omnique vitiorum genere coopertos videbit, a familia,

152] Proinde, si persuaderi saltem id nobis aliquando pateretur, ut crederemus in tantum haec opera placere Deo, tamque amplum praemium propositum sibi habere: equidem in exuberantissima omnium rerum copia felicissimam vitam degeremus, omnia, quaecumque humanus animus concupiscit, possidentes. Quia vero tam leviter et ne unius quidem assis Dei Verbum et praecceptum aestimare solemus, quasi Cares quispiam aut Thressis homuncio illud dixisset sanxissetque: videris quoque, num tu is vir sies [sis], qui aequo Marte cum illo possit in arenam descendere. Quam vero difficile factu hoc illi erit, ut te persolvens tuam contundat ferociam! Quare 153] multo quidem mihi videretur consultius et praestabilius, magisque in rem tuam foret, ut potius in Dei favore, pace ac gratia, neque non felici rerum successu viveres, quam eodem tibi hostiliter adversante et inimico existente. 154] Undenam putas universum iam orbem refertum esse perfidia, malitia, sceleribus, rapina, caede, periuriis, latrocinio omnique

nemo alieni imperii iugum ferre sustinet, quod facimus, iure ergo optimo nonnisi infortunium et acerbiter, omni sublata miseria 155] cordia, persentiscimus. Et profecto reor adhuc in humanis esse alicubi pios ac probos homines, quum tantum boni adhuc Deus nobis tribuere soleat. Nam nostri gratia ne terunhome, protection and security. Therefore, since they bear such name and title with all honor as their highest dignity, it is our duty to honor them and to esteem them great as the dearest treasure and the most precious jewel upon earth.

He, now, who is obedient here, is willing and ready to serve, and cheerfully does all that pertains to honor, knows that he is pleasing God and that he will receive joy and happiness for his reward. If he will not do it in love, but despises and resists [authority] or rebels, let him also know, on the other hand, that he shall have no favor nor blessing, and where he thinks to gain a florin thereby, he will elsewhere lose ten times as much, or become a victim to the hangman, perish by war, pestilence, and famine, or experience no good in his children, and be obliged to suffer injury, injustice, and violence at the hands of his servants, neighbors, or strangers and tyrants; so that what we seek and deserve is paid back and comes home to us.

If we would ever suffer ourselves to be persuaded that such works are pleasing to God and have so rich a reward, we would be established in altogether abundant possessions and have what our heart desires. But because the word and command of God are so lightly esteemed, as though some babbler had spoken it, let us see whether you are the man to oppose Him. How difficult, do you think, it will be for Him to recompense you! Therefore you would certainly live much better with the divine favor, peace, and happiness than with His displeasure and misfortune. Why, think you, is the world now so full of unfaithfulness, disgrace, calamity, and murder, but because every one desires to be his own master and free from the emperor, to care nothing for any one, and do what pleases him? Therefore God punishes one knave by another, so that, when you defraud and despise your master, another comes and deals in like manner with you, yea, in your household you must suffer ten times more from wife, children, or servants.

Indeed, we feel our misfortune, we murmur and complain of unfaithfulness, violence, and injustice, but will not see that we ourselves are knaves who have fully deserved this punishment, and yet are not thereby reformed. We will have no favor and happiness, therefore it is but fair that we have nothing but misfortune without mercy. There must still be somewhere upon earth some godly people because God continues to grant us so much good! On our own account we should not have a farthing in the house nor a straw in the field. All this I have been obliged to urge with so many words, in hope that some one corde conciperet, ut a miseranda ista caecitate et calamitate, in qua tam profunde immersi iacuumus, liberaremur, Dei Verbum ac voluntatem cognoscentes ac denique serio arripientes. Ex hoc enim disceremus, quo pacto gaudio, prosperitate et salute hic et in futuro saeculo frui possemus.

kennen und mit Ernst annehmen. Denn daraus würden wir lernen, wie wir könnten Freude, Glück und Heil zeitlich und ewig genug haben.

Also haben wir zweierlei [* dreierlei] Väter in diesem Gebot vorgestellt, des Geblüts und des Amts oder der Sorge und im Lande. Darüber sind auch noch geistliche Väter, nicht wie im Papsttum, die sich wohl also haben lassen nennen, aber kein väterlich Amt geführt; denn das heißen allein geistliche Väter, die uns durch Gottes Wort regieren und vorstehen, wie sich St. Paulus einen Vater rühmt 1 Cor. 4, da er spricht: „Ich habe euch gezeugt in Christo Jesu durch das Evangelium.“ Weil sie nun Väter sind, gebührt ihnen auch die Ehre, auch wohl vor allen andern. Aber da geht sie am wenigsten, denn die Welt muß sie so ehren, daß man sie aus dem Lande jage und [ihnen] nicht ein Stück Brots gönne, und Summa, sie müssen (wie Paulus sagt) der Welt Reichtum und jedermanns Schicksal [Abfall, Auswurf] und Fustuch sein.

in exilium, et ne frusto quidem panis pascantur citra invidiam, et in summa huius mundi purgamenta, ut Paulus eodem capite (v. 13) loquitur, et peripsemata omnium esse cogantur.

Noch ist not, solches auch in den Böbel [Volk] zu treiben, daß, die da Christen heißen wollen, vor Gott schuldig sind, die, so ihrer Seele warten, zweiseker Ehre wert zu halten, daß sie ihnen wohlthun und sie versorgen; da will dir Gott auch genug geben und keinen Mangel lassen. Aber da sperrt und wehrt sich jedermann, haben alle Sorge, daß der Bauch verschmache, und können jetzt nicht einen rechtschaffenen Prediger nähren, da wir zuvor zehn Maßbäuche gefüllt haben. Damit wir auch verdienen, daß uns Gott seines Wortes und Segens beraube und wiederum Lügenprediger aufstehen lasse, die uns zum Teufel führen, dazu unsern Schweiß und Blut ausaugen.

gratitudinis gratia privet atque defraudet, sinatque iterum mendaciorum doctores exoriri, qui suis imposturis recta ad orcum nos ducitent, neque non sudorem et sanguinem nostrum devorent.

Welche aber Gottes Willen und Gebot vor Augen halten, haben die Verheißung, daß ihnen reichlich soll vergolten werden, was sie beide an leibliche und geistliche Väter wenden und ihnen zu Ehren tun, nicht daß sie ein Jahr oder zwei Brot, Kleider und Geld haben sollen, sondern langes Leben, Nahrung und Frieden, und sollen ewig reich und selig sein. Darum tue nur, was du schuldig bist, und laß Gott dafür sorgen, wie er dich nähre und [dir] genug schaffe; hat er's verheißt und noch nie gelogen, so wird er dir auch nicht lügen.

prompte facias, omnemque curam in Deum reicias, quomodo te aliturus sit aut omni copia instructurus. Quodsi promisit, nec unquam cuiquam mendax aut deceptor inventus est, nec tibi mentietur.

Solches sollte uns je reizen und ein Herz machen, das zerschmelzen möchte vor Lust und Liebe gegen die, so wir Ehre schuldig sind, daß wir die Hände aufhüben, und fröhlich Gott dankcium quidem in aedibus aut stipulam in arvis 157] retinere debebamus. Haec omnia eam ob rem mihi percensenda fuere verbosius, si semel quispiam ista, vel tandem emollitus, et calamitate, in qua tam profunde immersi officium sunt exsecuti. Illi enim soli spirituales patres dici merentur, qui Verbo Dei nos pascunt, regunt ac docent et fideliter praesunt 159] gregi. Quo nomine S. Paulus se patrem iactat, scribens Corinthiis, 1 Cor. 4, 15: In Christo Iesu per evangelium vos genui. Cum 160] ergo patres eos esse constet, et his honor prae omnibus aliis deferendus est. Verum enim vero hic omnium minime cernitur. Ad hunc enim modum a mundo honorandi et honestandi sunt, ut passim eieci oppidis agantur

158] Ita triplices in hoc praecepto patres nobis praestitutos esse videmus. Primum quidem sanguinis, deinde praesidentes in aedibus, ultimo, quibus partes gubernandae reipublicae commendatae sunt. Praeter hos supersunt adhuc patres spirituales, non illi quidem, qui hactenus in papatu hoc nominis sibi falso arrogarunt, neque tamen ullum patris [R. 444 officium sunt exsecuti. Illi enim soli spirituales patres dici merentur, qui Verbo Dei nos pascunt, regunt ac docent et fideliter praesunt 159] gregi. Quo nomine S. Paulus se patrem iactat, scribens Corinthiis, 1 Cor. 4, 15: In Christo Iesu per evangelium vos genui. Cum 160] ergo patres eos esse constet, et his honor prae omnibus aliis deferendus est. Verum enim vero hic omnium minime cernitur. Ad hunc enim modum a mundo honorandi et honestandi sunt, ut passim eieci oppidis agantur

161] Verumtamen valde necessarium est, ut haec quoque summa diligentia vulgo inculcentur eos, qui Christiani esse contendunt, coram Deo debere pro officio, ut duplici honore illos afficiant, qui eorum animarum curam gerunt, ut eosdem vicissim alant ac foveant; ad quod iterum Deus abunde suppeditebit, ut nulla 162] premaris inopia. Sed hic rursus nemo non pertinacissime tenax est, metuens, ne forte venter fame effractus contabescat. Nec unum iam valemus doctum, probum atque fidelem concionatorem alere, ubi ante decem cucullatos porcos aut aleatores sacrificos tantum abdomini servientes opipare saginavimus. Qua 163] ratione etiam promeremur, ut suo Verbo et benedictione Deus nos iterum tantae in-may take it to heart, that we may be relieved of the blindness and misery in which we are steeped so deeply, and may truly understand the Word and will of God, and earnestly accept it. For thence we would learn how we could have joy, happiness, and salvation enough, both temporal and eternal.

164] Ceterum, qui Dei voluntatem et praeceptum reverentur, eam promissionem acceperunt, fore, ut illis affatim pensetur, quidquid in aliendis cum corporalibus, tum spiritualibus patribus insumpserint et ad amplificandum ipsorum honorem praestiterint, non [R. 445 quod per unius tantum anni spatium abunde habituri sint victum, vestitum et aliquantulum pecuniae possessuri, sed quod longaevi futuri sint, commeatu instructi splendido, pacis tranquillitate fruituri, breviter, perpetuo 165] divites ac beati. Quare etiam atque etiam cura, ut, quod officium tuum exigit,

166] Haec, inquam, nos provocare debebant, ac talem animum facere, qui se omnium amantissime effunderet erga eos, quibus honorem debemus, ita ut supinis manibus gaudentes

Thus we have two kinds of fathers presented in this commandment, fathers in blood and fathers in office, or those to whom belongs the care of the family, and those to whom belongs the care of the country. Besides these there are yet spiritual fathers; not like those in the Papacy, who have indeed had themselves called thus, but have performed no function of the paternal office. For those only are called spiritual fathers who govern and guide us by the Word of God; as St. Paul boasts his fatherhood 1 Cor. 4, 15, where he says: In Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the Gospel. Now, since they are fathers they are entitled to their honor, even above all others. But here it is bestowed least; for the way which the world knows for honoring them is to drive them out of the country and to grudge them a piece of bread, and, in short, they must be (as says St. Paul, 1 Cor. 4, 13) as the filth of the world and everybody's refuse and footrag.

Yet there is need that this also be urged upon the populace, that those who would be Christians are under obligation in the sight of God to esteem them worthy of double honor who minister to their souls, that they deal well with them and provide for them. For that, God is willing to add to you sufficient blessing and will not let you come to want. But in this matter every one refuses and resists, and all are afraid that they will perish from bodily want, and cannot now support one respectable preacher, where formerly they filled ten fat paunches. In this we also deserve that God deprive us of His Word and blessing, and again allow preachers of lies to arise to lead us to the devil, and, in addition, to drain our sweat and blood.

But those who keep in sight God's will and commandment have the promise that everything which they bestow upon temporal and spiritual fathers, and whatever they do to honor them, shall be richly recompensed to them, so that they shall have, not bread, clothing, and money for a year or two, but long life, support, and peace, and shall be eternally rich and blessed. Therefore only do what is your duty, and let God take care how He is to support you and provide for you sufficiently. Since He has promised it, and has never yet lied, He will not be found lying to you.

This ought indeed to encourage us, and give us hearts that would melt in pleasure and love toward those to whom we owe honor, so that we would raise our hands and joyfully ten, der uns solche Verheißung [ge]geben hat, danach wir bis an der Welt Ende laufen sollten. Denn obgleich alle Welt zusammentäte, vermöchte sie uns nicht ein Stündlein zum Leben zu[zu]legen oder ein Körnlein aus der Erde zu[zu]geben. Gott aber kann und will dir alles überschwenglich nach deines Herzens Lust geben. Wer nun solches verachtet und in [den] Wind schlägt, der ist je nicht wert, daß er ein Gotteswort höre. Das ist nun zum Überfluß gesagt allen, so unter dies Gebot gehören.

Daneben wäre auch wohl zu predigen den Eltern, und was ihr Amt führt, wie sie sich halten sollen gegen die, so ihnen befohlen sind zu regieren, welches, inwiefern es in [den] zehn Geboten nicht ausgedrückt steht, ist es doch sonst an vielen Orten der Schrift reichlich geboten. Auch will es Gott eben in diesem Gebot mit eingebunden haben, als er Vater und Mutter nennt. Denn er will nicht Buben noch Tyrannen zu diesem Amt und Regiment haben, gibt ihnen auch nicht darum die Ehre, daß ist, Macht und Recht zu regieren, daß sie sich anbeten lassen, sondern denken, daß sie unter Gottes Gehorsam sind und vor allen Dingen sich ihres Amtes herzlich und treulich annehmen, ihre Kinder, Gesinde, Untertanen ufm. nicht allein zu nähren und leiblich zu versorgen, sondern allermeist zu Gottes Lob und Ehre aufzuziehen. Darum denke nicht, daß solches zu deinem Gefallen und eigener Willkür stehe, sondern daß Gott streng geboten und aufgelegt hat, welchem du auch dafür wirst müssen antworten.

tuo arbitratu aut voluntate sita esse, ut statuas aut facias in his, quae tibi visa fuerint, sed quod Deus haec tibi graviter atque adeo serio facienda praeceperit, cui etiam aliquando exigenti harum rerum rationem redditurus es.

Da ist nun abermal die leidige Plage, daß niemand solches wahrnimmt noch achtet, gehen hin, als gäbe uns Gott Kinder, unsere Lust und Kurzweil daran zu haben, daß Gesinde wie eine Kuh oder Esel allein zur Arbeit zu [ge]brauchen oder mit den Untertanen unser Willkür zu leben, lassen sie gehen, als ging's uns nichts an, was sie lernen oder wie sie leben, und will niemand sehen, daß der hohen Majestät Befehl ist, die solches ernstlich wird fordern und rächen, noch daß so große Not tut (daß es so sehr not tut), daß man sich der Jugend mit Ernst annehme. Denn wollen wir seine, geschickte Leute haben, beide zu weltlichem und geistlichem Regiment, so müssen wir wahrlich keinen Fleiß, Mühe noch Kost an unsern Kindern sparen, sie zu lehren und erziehen, daß sie Gott und der Welt dienen mögen, und nicht allein denken, wie wir ihnen Geld und Gut sammeln; denn Gott kann sie wohl ohne uns nähren und reich machen, wie er auch täglich tut. Darum aber hat er uns Kinder gegeben und befohlen, daß wir sie nach seinem Willen aufziehen und regieren, sonst [be]dürfte er Vater und Mutter nirgend zu. Darum wisse ein jeglicher, daß er schuldig ist bei Verlust göttlicher Gnade, daß er seine Kinder vor allen Dingen zu Gottesfurcht und Erkenntnis ziehe und, wo sie geschickt sind, auch etwas lernen und studieren lasse, daß man sie, wozu es not ist, brauchen könnte.

Deo gratias ageremus, qui eiusmodi promissiones nobis tribuit, quarum gratia ad extremos Indos impigerrime cursitare debebamus. Nam tametsi totus mundus omnes suas vires conferret, ne horulam quidem ad summam vitae nostrae posset adiacere, aut unicum saltem granum e terra producere. Deus haec omnia et vult et potest tibi superabundanter et plena (quod aiunt) manu praestare, ex animi tui voto atque sententia. Iam qui talia negligit aut ventis et aurae discerpenda permittit, ille indignior est, quam ut ullum Dei verbum audiat. Haec velut auctarii loco iis, qui huic praecepto subiecti sunt, diximus.

167] Adhaec parentes quoque docendi essent, quanam illorum sint partes et officia, quomodo se gerere debeant erga eos, quos gubernandos et tuendos susceperunt. Quae res etsi lucide in Decalogo expressa non est, multis tamen aliis in locis Scripturae abunde praecepta invenitur ac tradita. Deus quoque hoc ipso praecepto haec vult subintelligi, ubi 168] parentum mentionem facit. Neque enim eius voluntas est, ut aut perditii nebulones aut enormes tyranni huius officii procuracionem obeant, neque in hoc illis ipsis honorem [R. 446] tribuit, hoc est, potentiam et ius regendi, ut se precibus tamquam numen aliquod adorari patiantur, sed cogitent potius, quod et ipsi Deo obedientiam debeant, ut officium suae fidei delegatum ipsis curae sit ac sollicitudini, utque liberos, familiam et subditos suos non tantum nutrant et corporalibus alimentis provideant, sed omnino maxime ad laudem et gloriam Dei propagandam educant. Quam- 169] obrem nequaquam fac cogites, haec in

170] Sed quam hic rursus miserandam plagam videmus, quod huius officii nemo respectum aut curam habere dignatur, perinde agentes, ac si Deus liberos tantum in hoc nobis dedisset, ut animi fallendi gratia nobis voluptati essent aut delectamento; praeterea familiam tantum in hoc, ut ea tamquam bove aut asino opere faciundo utamur, aut cum subditis pro animi nostri libidine agamus, non secus eos habentes neglectui, quam si ad nos non pertinerent, aut nostra nihil interesset, quid discant, aut quibus pietatis studiis suam 171] vitam traducant. Nec quisquam eo intendit animum, ut cogitet hoc divinae maiestatis esse praeceptum, hoc ipsum severe examinaturae et graviter ulturae, aut summam necessitatem hoc exigere, ut iuventutis recte educandae atque instituendae praecipua habe- 172] atur cura et ratio. Quodsi enim cum ad spiritualem tum mundanam rerum administrationem homines idoneos, promptos et appositos habere desideramus: profecto non erit ulli parcendum labori aut operae aut impensis, diligenter docendo atque instituendo liberos, ut et Deo servire et hominibus utiles esse 173] queant. Neque tantum nobis cogitandum est, quo pacto illis ipsis magnam [R. 447] saltem nummorum vim cumulemus ac reponeamus. Hos enim Deus citra nostram operam alere ac ditare novit, id quod etiam quotidie

thank God who has given us such promises, for which we ought to run to the ends of the world [to the remotest parts of India]. For although the whole world should combine, it could not add an hour to our life or give us a single grain from the earth. But God wishes to give you all exceeding abundantly according to your heart's desire. He who despises and casts this to the winds is not worthy ever to hear a word of God. This has now been stated more than enough for all who belong under this commandment.

In addition, it would be well to preach to the parents also, and such as bear their office, as to how they should deport themselves toward those who are committed to them for their government. For although this is not expressed in the Ten Commandments, it is nevertheless abundantly enjoined in many places in the Scriptures. And God desires to have it embraced in this commandment when He speaks of father and mother. For He does not wish to have in this office and government knaves and tyrants; nor does He assign to them this honor, that is, power and authority to govern, that they should have themselves worshiped; but they should consider that they are under obligations of obedience to God; and that, first of all, they should earnestly and faithfully discharge their office, not only to support and provide for the bodily necessities of their children, servants, subjects, etc., but, most of all, to train them to the honor and praise of God. Therefore do not think that this is left to your pleasure and arbitrary will, but that it is a strict command and injunction of God, to whom also you must give account for it.

But here again the sad plight arises that no one perceives or heeds this, and all live on as though God gave us children for our pleasure or amusement, and servants that we should employ them like a cow or ass, only for work, or as though we were only to gratify our wantonness with our subjects, ignoring them, as though it were no concern of ours what they learn or how they live; and no one is willing to see that this is the command of the Supreme Majesty, who will most strictly call us to account and punish us for it; nor that there is so great need to be so seriously concerned about the young. For if we wish to have excellent and apt persons both for civil and ecclesiastical government, we must spare no diligence, time, or cost in teaching and educating our children, that they may serve God and the world, and we must not think only how we may amass money and possessions for them. For God can indeed without us support and make them rich, as He daily does. But for this purpose He has given us children, and issued this command that we should train and govern them according to His will, else He would have no need of father and mother. Let every one know, therefore, that it is his duty, on peril of losing the divine favor, to bring up his children above all things in the fear and knowledge of factitat. Ideo vero liberos nobis largitus est et commendavit, ut eosdem iuxta voluntatem eius 174] educemus regamusque, alioqui nihil opus erat parentibus. Quapropter quisque indubitate ita habeat se debere pro officio, eoque astringi, qui modo nolit infensum et inclementem Deum suo malo experiri, ut ante omnia ad Dei timorem et agnitionem suos liberos educet. Atque ubi aliqua relucebit spes egregii ingenii aut non malae indolis, eosdem quoque bonis literis ac disciplinis imbuendos et formandos tradant, ut eorum opera ad politiam, et ad quamcunque rem opus fuerit, uti queant homines.

Wenn man nun solches täte, würde uns Gott auch reichlich segnen und Gnade geben, daß man solche Leute erzöge, der [durch die] Land und Leute gebessert möchten werden, dazu seine gezogene Bürger, züchtige und häusliche Frauen, die danach fortan fromme Kinder und Gefinde ziehen möchten. Da denke nun selbst, wie mörderlichen Schaden du tust, wo du dir darin versäumlich bist [wenn du darin etwas versäumst] und an dir lässest fehlen, daß dein Kind nützlich und seliglich erzogen werde, dazu alle Sünde und Zorn auf dich bringst und also die Hölle an deinen eigenen Kindern verdienst, ob du gleich sonst fromm und heilig wärest. Derhalben auch Gott, weil man solches verachtet, die Welt so greulich straft, daß man keine Zucht, Regiment noch Frieden hat, welches wir auch alle [be-]klagen, sehen aber nicht, daß es unjere Schuld ist; denn wie wir sie ziehen, so haben wir ungeratene und ungehorsame Kinder und Untertanen. Daß sei genug zur Vermahnung; denn solches in die Länge zu treiben, gehört auf eine andere Zeit.

ut nullius disciplinae et pacatae gubernationis vestigium apud nos cernatur amplius, quod non raro dolenter conquerimur, interim non videntes, tantarum tragoediarum culpam nostram esse. Quemadmodum enim regere consuevimus, ita rebelles ac degeneres subditos et liberos experimus. 175] Et haec monendi gratia in praesens sufficiant; haec enim tractare prolixius aliud tempus postulat.

Das fünfte Gebot.

Du sollst nicht töten.

Wir haben nun ausgerichtet beide geistlich und weltlich Regiment, das ist, göttliche und väterliche Obrigkeit und Gehorsam. Hier aber gehen wir nun aus unserm Haus unter die Nachbarn, zu lernen, wie wir untereinander leben sollen, ein jeglicher für sich selbst gegen seinen Nächsten. Darum ist in diesem Gebot nicht eingelegen Gott und die Obrigkeit, noch die Macht genommen, so sie haben, zu töten. Denn Gott sein Recht, Übeltäter zu strafen, der Obrigkeit an der Eltern Statt befohlen hat, welche vorzeiten (als man in Mose liest) ihre Kinder selbst mußten vor Gericht stellen und zum Tode [ver]urteilen. Derhalben was hier verboten ist, ist einem gegen den andern verboten und nicht der Obrigkeit.

Dies Gebot ist nun leicht genug und oft gehandelt, weil man's jährlich im Evangelio hört, Matth. 5, da es Christus selbst auslegt und in eine Summa faßt, nämlich daß man nicht töten soll, weder mit Hand, Herzen, Mund, Zeichen, Gebärden noch Hilfe und Rat. Darum ist darin jedermann verboten zu zürnen, ausgenommen (wie gesagt), die an Gottes Statt sitzen, das ist, Eltern und Obrigkeit. Denn Gott, und was im göttlichen Stand ist, gebühret zu zürnen, schelten und strafen, eben um derer willen, so dies und andere Gebote übertreten.

Ursache aber und Not dieses Gebots ist, daß Gott wohl weiß, wie die Welt böse ist, und dies

175] His peractis diligenter et strenue, Deus nobis haud dubie suam benedictionem et gratiam largiter impertiret, ut eiusmodi educarentur homines, a quibus cum ipsa patria tum populares praecipuum emolumentum caperent. Et huius quoque disciplinae sedulitate et studio brevi emergerent bene modesti et recte educati cives, tum pudicae beneque moratae matronae, rei familiaris diligentes et studiosae, qui deinceps indesinenter probos liberos et familiam 176] laudabilem procrearent. Iam ipse tecum animo repete, quam nefarium admittas facinus, quamque atrox damnum des, si hac in re negligenter agas, aut per te stet, quo minus liberi tui utiliter ac salubriter educantur. Ad haec omnibus peccatis et ira temet graves et oneras, ita ut liberorum tuorum ergo aeternam damnationem promerearis, tametsi alias sanctam atque inculpata vitam traduxeris. 177] Eam ob rem Deus quoque, quum ista tam omissio animo negliguntur, mundum inusitatis et non dicendis poenis afficit, [R. 448

Praeceptum V.

179]

Non occides.

180] Hactenus et spiritualem et mundanum magistratum, hoc est, cum Dei tum parentum ius et obedientiam, exsecuti sumus. Hoc vero in loco ex aedibus nostris ad vicinos egredimur, ad discendum, quo pacto nobis inter nos, cuique erga proximum, vita instituenda atque 181] exigenda sit. Quare hoc praeecepto Deus et magistratus non sunt comprehensi, neque illis et ius et facultas perimendi facinorosos, quam obtinent, sublata est. Siquidem Deus ius suum plectendi criminosos magistratus parentum loco commendavit ac credidit, qui antiquitus ipsi (ut in Mose legitur) suos ipsorum liberos in ius rapere ac iudicio condemnare cogebantur. Quapropter quidquid hic interdicatur, privatis personis peculiariter interdictum est et non magistratui.

182] Iam hoc praeeceptum est intellectu valde facile ac crebro declaratum, quando quotannis in evangelio, Matth. 5, 21 sqq., auditur, ubi illud Christus ipse interpretatur ac summam complectitur, scilicet neque manu neque cordis cogitationibus neque ore neque signis neque consilio et auxilio esse occidendum. Quare omnibus hic irasci interdictum est, exceptis his, ut diximus, qui Dei locum in terris obtinent, hoc est, parentibus et magistratui. Dei enim et illorum, qui in divinum ordinem cooptati sunt, interest irasci, indignari, obiurgare et punire, ob eos ipsos, qui hoc et [R. 449 alia praeepta flagitiose transgrediuntur.

183] Ceterum huius praeepti constituendi necessitas et causa haec fuit, quod Deo obscuro

God, and if they are talented, have them learn and study something, that they may be employed for whatever need there is [to have them instructed and trained in a liberal education, that men may be able to have their aid in government and in whatever is necessary].

If that were done, God would also richly bless us and give us grace to train men by whom land and people might be improved, and likewise well-educated citizens, chaste and domestic wives, who afterwards would rear godly children and servants. Here consider now what deadly injury you are doing if you be negligent and fail on your part to bring up your child to usefulness and piety, and how you bring upon yourself all sin and wrath, thus earning hell by your own children, even though you be otherwise pious and holy. And because this is disregarded, God so fearfully punishes the world that there is no discipline, government, or peace, of which we all complain, but do not see that it is our fault; for as we train them, we have spoiled and disobedient children and subjects. Let this be sufficient exhortation; for to draw this out at length belongs to another time.

The Fifth Commandment.

Thou shalt not kill.

We have now completed both the spiritual and the temporal government, that is, the divine and the paternal authority and obedience. But here now we go forth from our house among our neighbors to learn how we should live with one another, every one himself toward his neighbor. Therefore God and government are not included in this commandment, nor is the power to kill, which they have, taken away. For God has delegated His authority to punish evil-doers to the government instead of parents, who aforetime (as we read in Moses) were required to bring their own children to judgment and sentence them to death. Therefore, what is here forbidden is forbidden to the individual in his relation to any one else, and not to the government.

Now this commandment is easy enough, and has been often treated, because we hear it annually in the Gospel of St. Matthew, 5, 21ff., where Christ Himself explains and sums it up, namely, that we must not kill, neither with hand, heart, mouth, signs, gestures, help, nor counsel. Therefore it is here forbidden to every one to be angry, except those (as we said) who are in the place of God, that is, parents and the government. For it is proper for God and for every one who is in a divine estate to be angry, to reprove and punish, namely, on account of those very persons who transgress this and the other commandments.

But the cause and need of this commandment is that God well knows that the world

Geben viel Unglücks hat; darum hat er dies und andere Gebote zwischen Gute und Böse gestellt. Wie nun mancherlei Anfechtung [Anfeindung, Kampf] ist wider alle Gebote, also geht's hier auch, daß wir unter viel Leuten leben müssen, die uns Leid tun, daß wir Ursache kriegen, ihnen feind zu sein.

Als wenn dein Nachbar sieht, daß du besser Haus und Hof, mehr Guts und Glücks von Gott hast denn er, so verdreht's [verdrückt's] ihn, neidet dich und redet nichts Gutes von dir.

Also kriegst du viel Feinde durch des Teufels Anreizung, die dir kein Gutes weder leiblich noch geistlich gönnen. Wenn man denn solche sieht, so will unser Herz wiederum wüten und bluten und sich rächen. Da heßt sich denn wieder Fluchen und Schlagen, daraus endlich Jammer und Mord folgt. Da kommt nun Gott zuvor wie ein freundlicher Vater, legt sich ins Mittel und will den Hader geschieden haben, daß kein Unglück daraus entstehe, noch einer den andern verderbe. Und Summa, will er hiermit einen jeglichen beschränkt, befreit und befriedet haben vor jedermanns Frevel und Gewalt und dies Gebot zur Ringmauer, Feste und Freiheit gestellt haben um den Nächsten, daß man ihm kein Leid noch Schaden am Leibe tue.

So steht nun dies Gebot darauf, daß niemand seinen Nächsten beleidige um irgendeines bösen Stücks willen, ob er's gleich höchlich verdiente. Denn wo Totschlag verboten ist, da ist auch alle Ursache verboten, daher Totschlag entspringen mag. Denn mancher, ob er nicht tötet, so flucht er doch und wünscht [etwas, das ist, Unheil, die Pest], daß, wer es sollte am Halse haben, würde nicht weit laufen. Weil nun solches jedermann von Natur anhängt und in gemeinem Brauch ist, daß keiner [etwas] vom andern leiden will, so will Gott die Wurzel und Ursprung wegräumen, durch welche das Herz wider den Nächsten erbittert wird, und uns gewöhnen, daß wir allezeit dies Gebot vor Augen haben und uns darin spiegeln, Gottes Willen ansehen und ihm das Unrecht, so wir leiden, befehlen mit herzlichem Vertrauen und Anrufen seines Namens und also jene feindlich scharren [toben, sich ereifern] und zürnen lassen, daß sie tun, was sie könnten, also daß ein Mensch lerne den Zorn stillen und ein geduldiges, sanftes Herz tragen, sonderlich gegen die, die ihm Ursache zu zürnen geben, daß ist, gegen die Feinde.

possunt, faciant. Ut ad hunc modum homo discat sedare iracundiam ac patientem et mansuetum induere animum, cumprimis erga illos, qui causam irascendi ei suppeditant, hoc est, erga inimicos.

Darum ist die ganze Summa davon den Einfältigen aufs deutlichste einzubilden [einzuprägen], was da heiße „nicht töten“: zum ersten, daß man niemand Leid tue, erstlich mit der Hand oder Tat; danach die Zunge nicht [ge]brauchen lasse, dazu zu reden oder zu raten; über das keinerlei Mittel oder Weise [ge]brauche noch bewillige, da-rum non erat, quanta esset mundi malitia et iniquitas, et quam haec vita multis obnoxia esset periculis; eam ob rem Deus hoc praeceptum inter bonos et malos constituit. Iam quemadmodum multae sunt aliorum praeceptorum impugnationes, ita quoque huius non sunt paucae aut modicae, ut cum multis hominibus nobis vivendum sit, qui nos iniuria afficiunt, unde causas nascimur, inimico animo eosdem prosequendi.

184] Exempli causa: Si vicinus tuus viderit tibi esse aedes splendidiore, numerosiore familiam, pinguiore agros, plus opum atque fortunae a Deo esse quam sibi, statim aegre patitur, tibi quoque prosperos rerum successus invidere incipit, neque quidquam boni de te aut cogitat aut loquitur.

Ita impulsu mali genii multos consequeris inimicos, qui nihil boni neque spiritualiter neque corporaliter tibi faveant. Hos ergo cum videmus, animus noster vicissim ira exaestuat ac vindictae cupiditate ardere incipit. Inde maledictorum ac litium pullulant initia, ex quibus deinceps calamitates et caedes emergunt oriunturque. Hic vero Deus tamquam amicus ac clemens pater praeventit, seque interponit arbitrum, volens omnem discordiam componi ac praescindi, ne qua oriatur iniuria, aut alius perdat alium. Et in summa, hoc praecepto quemvis ab omni vi atque iniuria tutum, pacatum ac defensum, hocque praeceptum veluti murum, arcem, asylum et propugnaculum proximo esse vult, ne quam molestiam et damnum a quoquam corpore accipiat.

186] Est ergo huius praecepti sensus, ne quis ob ullum malefactum ulla conturbetur aut afficiatur iniuria, etiamsi hanc [R. 450] abunde promeruisse. Ubi enim caedes interdicta est aut homicidium, ibi quoque causae, unde oriri possit homicidium, interdictae sunt. Crebro enim fit, ut aliquis, tametsi manus caede non contaminet, ita cruento imprecando devoveat proximum, ut non diu superstes viveret, si effectus esset eius imprecationibus. 187] Quando ergo hoc natura omnibus nobis insitum est, et usitatum esse deprehenditur, ut nemo quidquam ab alio ferre sustineat, vult Deus radicem atque adeo ipsam stirpem evellere, unde cor hominis adversus proximum exacerbatum exulceratur, nosque assuefacere, ut nunquam non hoc praeceptum nostris oculis observetur, in quo tamquam in speculo vitam nostram contemplerur, voluntatem Dei intueamur, illiusque vindictae vim atque iniuriam, quam immerenter patimur, certa quadam animi fiducia ac nominis sui imploratione commendemus atque ita illos vehementer furere atque irasci permittamus, ut, quod

188] Quocirca tota huius praecepti summa haec est, ut simplicibus significantissime inculcetur, quid sit non occidere: Principio, ne quis afficiatur iniuria, primum quidem manu aut opere; deinde ne utamur lingua in hoc, ut consilium demus alicui incommodandi; insuper, ne qua utamur via aut medio, unde

is evil, and that this life has much unhappiness; therefore He has placed this and the other commandments between the good and the evil. Now, as there are many assaults upon all commandments, so it happens also in this commandment that we must live among many people who do us harm, so that we have cause to be hostile to them.

As when your neighbor sees that you have a better house and home [a larger family and more fertile fields], greater possessions and fortune from God than he, he is sulky, envies you, and speaks no good of you.

Thus by the devil's incitement you will get many enemies who cannot bear to see you have any good, either bodily or spiritual. When we see such people, our hearts, in turn, would rage and bleed and take vengeance. Then there arise cursing and blows, from which follow finally misery and murder. Here, now, God like a kind father steps in ahead of us, interposes and wishes to have the quarrel settled, that no misfortune come of it, nor one destroy another. And briefly, He would hereby protect, set free, and keep in peace every one against the crime and violence of every one else; and would have this commandment placed as a wall, fortress, and refuge about our neighbor, that we do him no hurt nor harm in his body.

Thus this commandment aims at this, that no one offend his neighbor on account of any evil deed, even though he have fully deserved it. For where murder is forbidden, all cause also is forbidden whence murder may originate. For many a one, although he does not kill, yet curses and utters a wish, which would stop a person from running far if it were to strike him in the neck [makes imprecations, which if fulfilled with respect to any one, he would not live long]. Now, since this inheres in every one by nature and it is a common practise that no one is willing to suffer at the hands of another, God wishes to remove the root and source by which the heart is embittered against our neighbor, and to accustom us ever to keep in view this commandment, always to contemplate ourselves in it as in a mirror, to regard the will of God, and with hearty confidence and invocation of His name to commit to Him the wrong which we suffer. Thus we shall suffer our enemies to rage and be angry, doing what they can, and we learn to calm our wrath, and to have a patient, gentle heart, especially toward those who give us cause to be angry, that is, our enemies.

Therefore the entire sum of what it means not to kill is to be impressed most explicitly upon the simple-minded. In the first place, that we harm no one, first, with our hand or by deed. Then, that we do not employ our tongue to instigate or counsel thereto. Fur-durch jemand möchte beleidigt werden; und endlich, daß das Herz niemand feind sei noch aus Zorn und Haß Böses gönne, also daß Leib und Seele unschuldig sei an jedermann, eigentlich [sonderlich] aber an dem, der dir Böses wünscht oder zufügt. Denn dem, der dir Gutes gönnt und tut, Böses tun, ist nicht menschlich, sondern teuflisch.

Zum andern ist auch dieses Gebots schuldig nicht allein, der da Böses tut, sondern auch, wer dem Nächsten Gutes tun, zuborkommen, wehren, ihn schützen und retten kann, daß ihm kein Leid noch Schaden am Leibe widerfahre, und tut es nicht. Wenn du nun einen Nächten lässest gehen und könntest ihn kleiden, so hast du ihn erfrieren lassen; siehst du jemand Hunger leiden und speisst ihn nicht, so lässest du ihn Hungers sterben; also, siehst du jemand unschuldig zum Tode verurteilt oder in gleicher Not und nicht rettest, so du Mittel und Wege dazu wüßtest, so hast du ihn getötet. Und wird nicht helfen, daß du vormendest, du habest keine Hilfe, Rat noch Rat dazu gegeben; denn du hast ihm die Liebe entzogen und [ihn] der Wohltat beraubt, dadurch er bei dem Leben [ge]blieben wäre.

in eius necem non consensisse, aut consilio et caritatem illi subtraxisti, iisque benefactis eum retinuisset.

Darum heißt auch Gott billig die alle Mörder, so in Räten und [Ge]fahr Leibes und Lebens nicht raten noch helfen, und wird gar ein schrecklich Urtheil über sie gehen lassen am jüngsten Tage, wie Christus selbst verkündigt, da er sprechen wird: „Ich bin hungrig und durstig gewesen, und ihr habt mich nicht gespeiset noch getränkt; ich bin ein Gast gewesen, und ihr habt mich nicht geherberget; ich bin nadsend gewesen, und ihr habt mich nicht bekleidet; ich bin krank und gefangen gewesen, und ihr habt mich nicht besucht.“ Daß ist: Ihr hättet mich und die Meinen wohl lassen Hungers, Dursts und Frosts sterben, die wilden Thiere zerreißen, im Gefängnis verfaulen und in Räten verderben lassen. Was heißt das anders denn Mörder und Bluthunde gescholten? Denn ob du solches nicht mit der That begangen hast, so hast du ihn doch im Unglück sterben und umkommen lassen, soviel an dir gelegen ist.

Und ist ebensoviel, als ob ich jemand sehe auf tiefem Wasser fahren und arbeiten [sich abmühen] oder in ein Feuer gefallen und könnte ihm die Hand reichen, [ihn] herausreißen und retten, und doch nicht täte, wie würde ich anders auch vor aller Welt bestehen denn ein Mörder und Bösewicht?

Darum ist die endliche Meinung Gottes, daß wir keinem Menschen Leid widerfahren lassen, sondern alles Gute und Liebe beweisen, und ist [wie gesagt] eigentlich gegen die gerichtet, so unsere Feinde sind. Denn daß wir Freunden Gutes tun, ist noch eine schlechte [bloße] heidnische Tugend, wie Christus Matth. am 5. sagt.

aliquis detrimentum possit accipere, neve aliiis utentibus consentiamus; ac denique, ut ipsum cor hostiliter infensum sit nemini aut irritatum iracundia male velit, ita ut et corpus et anima extra omnem sint noxam, cum de quovis tum peculiariter de eo, qui tibi mali quid vel precatur, vel etiam infert. Nam ei male facere, qui bene de te sit meritis, aut tuis rationibus optime consultum cupit, non humanum est, sed plane diabolicum.

189] Secundo, huius praecepti reus est non tantum is, qui male facit, sed etiam is, [R. 451] qui, cum proximo benefacere eiusque damnum aut iacturam antevertere, obstare, eum tueri et servare posset, ne quod malum aut iniuriam 190] accipiat corpore, non facit. Iam ergo quotiescunque nudum videris, eundemque non adiutum dimiseris, cum prae facultatibus eius nuditatem convestire possis ac tegere: hunc profecto frigore enecasti. Ita quoties videris famelicum, nec tamen pascis eum: hunc fame cruciatum intirire sinis. Non secus quoque si quem morte condemnatum videris, aut in simili quopiam casu periclitantem, nec eum servare approperas, cum neque viae neque occasiones illius eripiendi tibi sint incognitae: pro certo constat hunc te neci dedisse. Neque tibi proderit haec adducta excusatio, te auxilio non adiuvasse [adiutasse]: siquidem privasti, quibus adiutus non difficulter vitam ther, that we neither use nor assent to any kind of means or methods whereby any one may be injured. And finally, that the heart be not ill disposed toward any one, nor from anger and hatred wish him ill, so that body and soul may be innocent in regard to every one, but especially those who wish you evil or inflict such upon you. For to do evil to one who wishes and does you good is not human, but diabolical.

191] Quare Deus non iniuria omnes illos damnat homicidii, qui necessitate pressis aut de vita periclitantibus consilio aut ope non subveniunt. Hos in die novissimo horrenda quoque damnabit sententia, quemadmodum ipse Christus annuntiat, inquit [Matth. 25, 35 sq.]: Esurivi et sitii, et non dedistis mihi manducare aut bibere; hospes eram, et non collegistis me; nudus eram, et non cooperuistis me; infirmus et in carcere eram, et non visitastis me. Hoc est: Meque meoque fame, siti, frigore perire, a feris discerni, in carcere situ et aqualore putrescere inque omnibus necessitatibus foede succumbere sivistis. Quid 192] hoc aliud est, quam homicidas, et ἀνδροφόνους καὶ μαιφόνους (Bluthunde) culpasse? Nam tametsi hoc ipsum opere non perpetrasti, proximum tamen in periculis atque infortunio haerentem, quantum ad te attinebat, immiseri-corditer perire permisisti.

Et perinde est, ac si quem in profunda aqua navigantem et adversis ventis [R. 452] laborantem perspicierem aut in ignem prolabantem, possemque illum correcta manu e periculo eripere ac servare, et non facerem. Qui vero coram toto mundo aliter atque funestus homicida et cruentus latro probari aut perhiberi possem?

193] Quapropter haec decisiva Dei est sententia, ne quem hominem laedi aut damnum accipere patiamur, sed omnibus humanitatis et benevolentiae officii demereamur. Estque 194] hoc praeceptum peculiariter erga eos conservandum, cum quibus inimicitiae nobis intercesserunt. Ut enim amicis ac fautoribus nostris beneficiamus, virtus valde levis est et ethnica, quemadmodum Christus Matth. 5, 46 loquitur.

Secondly, under this commandment not only he is guilty who does evil to his neighbor, but he also who can do him good, prevent, resist evil, defend and save him, so that no bodily harm or hurt happen to him, and yet does not do it. If, therefore, you send away one that is naked when you could clothe him, you have caused him to freeze to death; if you see one suffer hunger and do not give him food, you have caused him to starve. So also, if you see any one innocently sentenced to death or in like distress, and do not save him, although you know ways and means to do so, you have killed him. And it will not avail you to make the pretext that you did not afford any help, counsel, or aid thereto, for you have withheld your love from him and deprived him of the benefit whereby his life would have been saved.

Therefore God also rightly calls all those murderers who do not afford counsel and help in distress and danger of body and life, and will pass a most terrible sentence upon them in the last day, as Christ Himself has announced when He shall say, Matt. 25, 42f.: I was an hungred, and ye gave Me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave Me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took Me not in; naked, and ye clothed Me not; sick and in prison, and ye visited Me not. That is: You would have suffered Me and Mine to die of hunger, thirst, and cold, would have suffered the wild beasts to tear us to pieces, or left us to rot in prison or perish in distress. What else is that but to reproach them as murderers and bloodhounds? For although you have not actually done all this, you have nevertheless, so far as you were concerned, suffered him to pine and perish in misfortune.

It is just as if I saw some one navigating and laboring in deep water [and struggling against adverse winds] or one fallen into fire, and could extend to him the hand to pull him out and save him, and yet refused to do it. What else would I appear, even in the eyes of the world, than as a murderer and a criminal?

Therefore it is God's ultimate purpose that we suffer harm to befall no man, but show him all good and love; and, as we have said, it is specially directed toward those who are our enemies. For to do good to our friends is but an ordinary heathen virtue, as Christ says Matt. 5, 46.

Da haben wir nun abermal Gottes Wort, damit er uns reizen und treiben will zu rechten, ehlen, hohen Werken, als Sanftmut, Geduld und, Summa, Liebe und Wohlthat gegen unsere Feinde, und will uns immerdar erinnern, daß wir zurückdenken des ersten Gebots, daß er unser Gott sei, daß ist, uns helfen, beistehen und schützen wolle, auf daß er die Luft, uns zu rächen, dämpfe.

Solches sollte man nun treiben und bleuen [wiederholen, einprägen], so würden wir gute Werke alle Hände voll zu tun haben. Aber das wäre nicht für die Mönche gepredigt, dem geistlichen Stande zu viel abgebrochen, der Kartäuser Heiligkeit zu nahe und sollte wohl eben gute Werke verboten und Klöster geräumt heißen. Denn mit der Weise würde der gemeine Christenstand gleich so viel, ja weit und viel mehr gelten und jeder mann sehen, wie sie die Welt mit falschem, heuchlerischem Schein der Heiligkeit äffen [zum Affen machen, verpöhlen] und verführen, weil sie dies und andere Gebote in [den] Wind geschlagen und für unnötig gehalten, als wären's nicht Gebote, sondern Räte, und daneben unverschämt ihren Heuchelstand und Werke für das vollkommenste Leben gerühmt und ausgeföhren, auf daß sie ja ein gut, sanftes Leben führten ohne Kreuz und Geduld, darum sie auch in die Klöster gelaufen sind, daß sie von niemand nichts leiden noch jemand Gutes tun dürften [brauchten]. Du aber wisse, daß dies die rechten, heiligen und göttlichen Werke sind, welcher er sich mit allen Engeln freut, dagegen alle menschliche Heiligkeit Stand und Unflat ist, dazu nichts anderes denn Zorn und Verdammnis verdient.

omnibus angelis exhilaratur, quibusque omnis humana sanctitas collata nonnisi foetor et stercus est, nec aliud quam iram et damnationem promeretur.

Das sechste Gebot.

Du sollst nicht ehebrechen.

Diese Gebote sind nun an ihnen selbst leicht zu verstehen aus dem nächsten [vorhergehenden]; denn sie gehen alle dahin, daß man sich hüte vor allerlei Schaden des Nächsten. Sind aber kein ordentlich gestellt. Zum ersten auf seine eigene Person. Danach fortgefahren auf die nächste Person oder das nächste Gut nach seinem Leibe, nämlich sein ehelich Gemahl, welches mit ihm ein Fleisch und Blut ist, also daß man ihm an keinem Gut höher Schaden tun kann. Darum auch deutlich hier ausgedrückt wird, daß man ihm keine Schande zufügen soll an seinem Eheweibe. Und lautet eigentlich auf den Ehebruch, darum daß im jüdischen Volk so geordnet und geboten war, daß jedermann mußte ehelich erfunden werden. Darum auch die Jugend aufs zeitlichste beraten [in die Ehe gebracht] ward, also daß Jungfrauenstand nichts galt, auch kein öffentlich Zurecht und Bubeneben (wie jetzt) gekattelt ward; darum ist der Ehebruch die gemeinste Unkeuschheit bei ihnen gewesen.

195] Hoc loco iterum verbum Dei habemus propositum, quo nos ad vera, praeclara ac summa opera, nempe mansuetudinem, patientiam, breviter ad amorem et benefacta inimicis nostris exhibenda pellicere ac provocare conatur. Vultque nos subinde commonefacere, ut retroflexa cogitatione prioris praecepti simus memores, illum esse Deum nostrum, hoc est, nobis velle suppetias ferre, assistere ac tueri, ut animum vindictae cupidum in nobis compescat atque coerceat.

196] Iam haec vulgo essent tradenda atque inculcanda; tum abunde bonorum esset opum. 197] rum, quae nos facere oportebat. Verum haec praedicatio non esset ex usu monachorum, sed plus iusto religiosorum ordinem defraudaret, inferretque insignem Carmelitarum sanctitati iniuriam, et fortasse hoc ipsum diceretur bona opera interdicere et monasteria desolare. Hac enim ratione vulgus tanti, imo potius multo maioris fieret eosque longo intervallo praecelleret, ac quisvis facile perspiceret, quomodo ipsi mundo tam foede hactenus imposuerint sua fucata et hypocritica sanctitate, quod et hoc praeceptum et alia praecepta omnia illiberaliter respuerint et inutilia existimarint, tamquam non praecepta [R. 453] fuissent, sed consilia; adhaec suos fictitios ordines et sectas tam perniciosas quam hypocriticas pro perfectissima vita impudenter iactarint et proclamarent, ut plane vitam suavem et tranquillam omnique et cruce vacantem et patientia, illi ventres et porci agerent. Quam ob causam se quoque in monasteria abdiderunt, ut a nemine quidquam paterentur molestiae, neve quemquam ulla in re 198] bona iuvarent. Tu vero scito haec vera, sancta et divina esse opera, quibus Deus cum

Praeceptum VI.

199] Non moechaberis.

200] Sequentia praecepta intellectu iam sunt facilia ex interpretatione antecedentis. Eo enim tendunt omnia, ut a damno et inferenda iniuria proximo caveamus. Sunt vero eleganti ordine posita. Primum enim de non laedenda proximi persona conditum est. Secundum respicit personam sibi proximam, aut post se rem sibi proximam, nempe suam coniugem, quacum unum corpus et una caro effectus est, ita ut nulla in re maiori possit affici iniuria. Quamobrem hoc in loco diserte ac significanter expressum est, ne quam ignominiam illi faciamus, afficientes contumelia 201] suam coniugem. Ac peculiariter de adulterio sonat, propterea quod in Iudaismo ita ordinatum et praeceptum fuerat, ut quisque ducta uxore matrimonium contraheret. Unde et iuvenes mature contrahebant, ita ut virginitatis status et coelibatus apud Iudaeos nullius haberetur momenti. Sed neque pro palam visabantur aut concedebantur meretricum ac scortatorum lustra, ut hodie apud nos solenne est. Quamobrem adulterium [R. 454] apud illos communissimum fuit peccatum impudicitiae.

Here we have again the Word of God whereby He would encourage and urge us to true noble and sublime works, as gentleness, patience, and, in short, love and kindness to our enemies, and would ever remind us to reflect upon the First Commandment, that He is our God, that is, that He will help, assist, and protect us, in order that He may thus quench the desire of revenge in us.

This we ought to practise and inculcate, and we would have our hands full doing good works. But this would not be preaching for monks; it would greatly detract from the religious estate, and infringe upon the sanctity of Carthusians, and would even be regarded as forbidding good works and clearing the convents. For in this wise the ordinary state of Christians would be considered just as worthy, and even worthier, and everybody would see how they mock and delude the world with a false, hypocritical show of holiness, because they have given this and other commandments to the winds, and have esteemed them unnecessary, as though they were not commandments, but mere counsels; and have at the same time shamelessly proclaimed and boasted their hypocritical estate and works as the most perfect life, in order that they might lead a pleasant, easy life, without the cross and without patience, for which reason, too, they have resorted to the cloisters, so that they might not be obliged to suffer any wrong from any one or to do him any good. But know now that these are the true, holy, and godly works, in which, with all the angels, He rejoices, in comparison with which all human holiness is but stench and filth, and, besides, deserves nothing but wrath and damnation.

The Sixth Commandment.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

These commandments now [that follow] are easily understood from [the explanation of] the preceding; for they are all to the effect that we [be careful to] avoid doing any kind of injury to our neighbor. But they are arranged in fine [elegant] order. In the first place, they treat of his own person. Then they proceed to the person nearest him, or the closest possession next after his body, namely, his wife, who is one flesh and blood with him, so that we cannot inflict a higher injury upon him in any good that is his. Therefore it is explicitly forbidden here to bring any disgrace upon him in respect to his wife. And it really aims at adultery, because among the Jews it was ordained and commanded that every one must be married. Therefore also the young were early provided for [married], so that the virgin state was held in small esteem, neither were public prostitution and lewdness tolerated (as now). Therefore adultery was the most common form of unchastity among them.

Weil aber bei uns ein solch schändlich Gemeng und Grundsuppe aller Untugenden und Lüberei ist, ist dies Gebot auch wider allerlei Unkeuschheit gestellt, wie man sie nennen mag, und nicht allein äußerlich die Tat verboten, sondern auch allerlei Ursache, Reizung und Mittel, also daß Herz, Mund und der ganze Leib keusch sei, keinen Raum, Hilfe noch Rat zur Unkeuschheit gebe, und nicht allein das, sondern auch wehre, schütze und rette, wo die [Ge]fahr und Not ist, und wiederum helfe und rate, daß sein Nächster bei Ehren bleibe. Denn wo du solches nachlässest, so du könntest dafür sein [es verhindern], oder durch die Finger siehst, als ginge dich's nicht an, bist du ebensovohl schuldig als der Täter selbst. Also ist, aufs kürzeste zu fassen, so viel gefordert, daß ein jeglicher beide für sich selbst keusch lebe und dem Nächsten auch dazu helfe, also daß Gott durch dies Gebot eines jeglichen ehelich Gemahl will umschränkt und bewahrt haben, daß sich niemand daran vergreife.

205] Tantum ergo hoc praeceptum, ut paucissimis complectamur, a nobis exigit, ut quisque tum pro se vitam castam exigit, tum proximo quoque in hac obtinenda et tuenda sit auxilio. Voluit enim Deus hoc praecepto cuiusque uxorem tamquam vallo circumsepire ac defendere, ne quis temere eam contractando semet adulterio reum faceret aut pollueret.

Diemeil aber dies Gebot so eben auf den Ehestand gerichtet ist und Ursache gibt, davon zu reden, sollst du wohl fassen und merken zum ersten, wie Gott diesen Stand so herrlich ehrt und preist damit, daß er ihn durch sein Gebot beide bestätigt und bewahrt. Bestätigt hat er ihn droben im vierten Gebot: „Du sollst Vater und Mutter ehren“; hier aber hat er ihn (wie gesagt) verwahrt und beschützt. Darum will er ihn auch von uns geehrt und also gehalten und geführt haben als einen göttlichen, seligen Stand, weil er ihn erstlich vor allen andern eingesetzt hat und darum unterschiedlich Mann und Weib geschaffen (wie vor Augen), nicht zur Lüberei, sondern daß sie sich zusammenhalten, fruchtbar seien, Kinder zeugen, nähren und aufziehen zu Gottes Ehren.

dinose exercendam spurcitiam atque lasciviam, sed ut legitime coniuncti fecundi essent, liberos procrearent, nutrent, eosdemque ad Dei gloriam ampliandam pie ac recte educarent.

Darum ihn auch Gott vor allen Ständen aufs reichlichste gesegnet hat, dazu alles, was in der Welt ist, darauf gewandt und ihm eingetan [eingeräumt, verliehen hat], daß dieser Stand je wohl und reichlich versorgt würde, also daß [es] kein Scherz noch Vorwitz [Reugier], sondern trefflich Ding und göttlicher Ernst ist um das eheliche Leben; denn es liegt ihm alle Macht daran, daß man Leute ziehe, die der Welt dienen und helfen zu Gottes Erkenntnis, seligem Leben und allen Tugenden, wider die Bosheit und den Teufel zu streiten.

. Darum habe ich immerdar gelehrt, daß man diesen Stand nicht verachte noch schimpflich halte, wie die blinde Welt und unsere falschen Geistlichen tun, sondern nach Gottes Wort ansehe, damit er geschmückt und geheiligt ist, also daß er nicht allein andern Ständen gleich gesetzt ist, sondern vor und über sie alle geht, es seien Kaiser, Fürsten, Bischöfe, und wer sie wollen. Denn was beide geistliche und weltliche Stände sind, müssen sich demütigen und alle in diesem Stande finden

202] Quoniam vero apud nos adeo foeda et nefanda omnium vitiorum et scortationum lerna cernitur, hoc praeceptum quoque adversus omnia impudicitiae genera et species constitutum est, quocunque tandem dici possunt 203] nomine. Et non solum externum opus interdicitur, verum omnis generis etiam causae, illectamenta et occasiones, ut cor, os, oculi, aures atque adeo totum corpus purum sit ac castum, nullum locum, opem, consilium 204] impudicitiae serviendae praebeat. Et non solum hoc, sed etiam hisce nefariis rebus summo conatu obstat, tueatur, prohibeat, ubi periculum et necessitatem viderit, ac contra praesto sit auxilio et consilio proximo suo nequam famae suae iacturam, accepta in coniuge contumelia, faciat. Nam ubicunque tale aliquid per negligentiam intermittit, cum possit persistere, aut dissimulanter connives, quasi tua nihil intersit, non secus eius flagitii culpa teneris quam is ipse, qui perpetravit.

206] *Cum autem de coniugio tam evidenter praeceptum hoc constitutum sit, ac nobis causam de eo disserendi suppeditet, probe tibi notandum et imis sensibus reponendum erit. Primo quidem, quomodo Deus hunc matrimonii statum ac ordinem amplissime honoret ac praedicet, ut eundem praecepto suo aequae confirmet et tueatur ab iniuria. Supra quidem quarto praecepto illum confirmavit: Honora patrem et matrem tuam. Hoc vero in loco, ut dictum est, ut in tuto esset, circumvallavit ac 207] *defendit eum. Quamobrem et a [R. 455] nobis requirit, ut eundem honoremus, servemus et traducamus veluti divinum ac beatum ordinem, quando illum initio ante omnes alios servandum instituit, eamque ob rem separatim masculum et feminam creavit, non ad libidinem exercendam spurcitiam atque lasciviam, sed ut legitime coniuncti fecundi essent, liberos procrearent, nutrent, eosdemque ad Dei gloriam ampliandam pie ac recte educarent.

208] Idcirco quoque Deus hunc matrimonii ordinem prae omnibus aliis tantis cumulavit benedictionibus, adhaec, quaecunque in mundo sunt, huic provehendo insumpsit eidemque utenda subdidit, tantum in hoc, ut hic ordo opulente et largiter esset constabillitus. Quae ex re facile liquet non iocum aut curiositatem, sed rem magnam et arduam atque adeo constantem Dei voluntatem esse matrimonium. Permagni enim sua refert, ut educantur homines, qui mundum sua opera ad Dei cognitionem et beatam ac virtutibus exornatam vitam exigendam queant perducere adversus malitiam et daemones pugnandi gratia.

209] Quocirca subinde docui, ne hunc ordinem contemnamus, aut tamquam iocularem leviter aestimemus, quem irridendi morem caeco mundo et pseudoreligiosis nostris hactenus fuisse vidimus, sed iuxta Dei Verbum, quo multis modis exornatus et sanctificatus est, eum intueamur, ita ut non solum ceteros pretio et dignitate aequare soleat, sed omnes ceteros longo intervallo post se relinquat, sive illi sint invicti caesares sive purpurati prin-

But because among us there is such a shameful mess and the very dregs of all vice and lewdness, this commandment is directed also against all manner of unchastity, whatever it may be called; and not only is the external act forbidden, but also every kind of cause, incitement, and means, so that the heart, the lips, and the whole body may be chaste and afford no opportunity, help, or persuasion to in chastity. And not only this, but that we also make resistance, afford protection and rescue wherever there is danger and need; and again, that we give help and counsel, so as to maintain our neighbor's honor. For whenever you omit this when you could make resistance, or connive at it as if it did not concern you, you are as truly guilty as the one perpetrating the deed. Thus, to state it in the briefest manner, there is required this much, that every one both live chastely himself and help his neighbor do the same, so that God by this commandment wishes to hedge round about and protect [as with a rampart] every spouse that no one trespass against them.

But since this commandment is aimed directly at the state of matrimony and gives occasion to speak of the same, you must well understand and mark, first, how gloriously God honors and extols this estate, inasmuch as by His commandment He both sanctions and guards it. He has sanctioned it above in the Fourth Commandment: Honor thy father and thy mother; but here He has (as we said) hedged it about and protected it. Therefore He also wishes us to honor it, and to maintain and conduct it as a divine and blessed estate; because, in the first place, He has instituted it before all others, and therefore created man and woman separately (as is evident), not for lewdness, but that they should [legitimately] live together, be fruitful, beget children, and nourish and train them to the honor of God.

Therefore God has also most richly blessed this estate above all others, and, in addition, has bestowed on it and wrapped up in it everything in the world, to the end that this estate might be well and richly provided for. Married life is therefore no jest or presumption; but it is an excellent thing and a matter of divine seriousness. For it is of the highest importance to Him that persons be raised who may serve the world and promote the knowledge of God, godly living, and all virtues, to fight against wickedness and the devil.

Therefore I have always taught that this estate should not be despised nor held in disrepute, as is done by the blind world and our false ecclesiastics, but that it be regarded according to God's Word, by which it is adorned and sanctified, so that it is not only placed on an equality with other estates, but that it precedes and surpasses them all, lassen, wie wir hören werden. Darum ist es nicht ein sonderlicher, sondern der gemeinste edelste Stand, so durch den ganzen Christenstand, ja durch alle Welt geht und reicht.

210] Quapropter matrimonium non privatus aliquis status habendum est, sed communis- [R. 436
simus et nobilissimus, cuius usus per totam Christianitatem, imo per totum mundum longe lateque patet.

Zum andern sollst du auch wissen, daß [es] nicht allein ein ehrlicher, sondern auch ein nütziger Stand ist und ernstlich von Gott geboten, daß sich in- gemein hindurch alle Stände [durch alle Stände hin], Manns- und Weibsbilbe, so dazu geschaffen sind, darin finden lassen, doch etliche (wiewohl wenig) ausgenommen, welche Gott sonderlich aus- gezogen [ausgenommen], daß sie zum ehelichen Stand nicht tüchtig sind, oder durch hohe über- natürliche Gabe befreit hat, daß sie außer dem Stande Keuschheit halten können. Denn wo die Natur geht, wie sie von Gott eingepflanzt ist, ist es nicht möglich, außer der Ehe keusch zu bleiben; denn Fleisch und Blut bleibt Fleisch und Blut, und geht die natürliche Reizung und Reizung un- geachtet und unverhindert, wie jedermann sieht und fühlt. Verhalben, auf daß desto leichter wäre, Unkeuschheit etlichermassen zu meiden, hat auch Gott den Ehestand befohlen, daß ein jeglicher sein beschreiben [zugemessen] Teil habe und ihm daran genügen lasse, wiewohl noch Gottes Gnade dazu gehört, daß das Herz auch keusch sei.

Daraus siehst du, wie unser päpstlicher Haufe, Pfaffen, Mönche, Nonnen, wider Gottes Ordnung und Gebot streben, so den Ehestand verachten und verbieten und sich ewige Keuschheit zu hal- ten vermaßen und geloben, dazu die Einfältigen mit süßhaftigen Worten und Schein betrügen. Denn niemand so wenig Liebe und Lust zur Keuschheit hat, als eben die den Ehestand vor großer Heiligkeit meiden und entweder öffentlich und unverschämmt in Hurerei liegen oder [es] heimlich noch ärger treiben, daß man's nicht sagen darf, wie man leider allzubiell erfahren hat. Und kürzlich, ob sie gleich des Werks sich enthalten, so fieden sie doch im Herzen voll unkeuscher Gedanken und böser Lüste, daß da ein ewiges Brennen und heimliches Leiden ist, welches man im ehelichen Leben umgehen kann. Darum ist durch dieß Ge- bot aller Unheiligen Keuschheitsgelübde verdammt und Urlaub gegeben, ja auch geboten allen armen gefangenen Geirissen, so durch ihre Klostergelübde betrogen sind, daß sie aus dem unkeuschen Stand ins eheliche Leben treten, angesehen, daß, ob sonst gleich das Klosterleben göttlich wäre, [es] doch nicht in ihrer Kraft steht, Keuschheit zu halten, und wo sie darin bleiben, nur mehr und weiter wider dieß Gebot sündigen müssen.

monasticis votis misere deceptae sunt, praeceptum est, ut deserto libidinoso et impuro ordine matrimonium arripiant, ita repudiantes, quod, quamquam aliqui monastica vita prorsus divina esset, tamen in viribus suis situm non sit coelibem vitam agere, in qua, si maneant, tantum magis atque magis libidine incensi adversus hoc praeceptum delinquere cogantur.

Solches rede ich nun darum, daß man das junge Volk dazu halte, daß sie Lust zum Ehestand ge- winnen und wissen, daß es ein seliger Stand und Gott gefällig ist. Denn damit könnte man's mit cipes aut infulati episcopi aut quicunque tan- dem. Quicunque enim aut spirituales aut saeculares (ut loquuntur) sunt ordines, his omnibus hic venerandus est, et omnibus hic quoque amplectendus, ut post audiemus latius.

211] Secundo sciendum est hunc ordinem non solum esse honestum, sed necessarium etiam, neque non serio a Deo praeceptum, ut in genere omnes status ac ordines, cum viri tum mulieres, quicunque ad hunc amplecten- dum natura sunt appositi, in eo versentur, ex- ceptis nonnullis, licet perpaucis, quos Deus singulari quodam consilio segregavit, ut ad iugum matrimonii minus reperiantur idonei, aut sublimi ac supernaturali gratia ea liber- tate donavit, quo possint extra hunc ordinem, servata vitae pudicitia, castitatem tueri. Ubi 212] enim natura, quemadmodum a Deo nobis insita est, fertur ac rapitur, fieri nullo modo potest, ut extra matrimonium caste vivatur. Siquidem caro ac sanguis naturam suam im- mutare non potest, ac naturalis ille appetitus et carnis inclinatio consuetum iter, nulla re obstante aut prohibente, sequitur, id quod omnibus liquet hominibus. Quare ut aliquate- nus libido carnis caveri posset, Deus matri- monium instituit, ut quisque sua parte legi- time destinata fruatur illaque contentus vi- vat; tametsi hic quoque gratia Dei opus est, ut cor quoque castum sit.

213] Ex hoc iam liquide perspicis, quam furiose illa turba papistica, sacrifici, monachi et monachae, huic ordinationi et praecepto Dei reluctentur, qui matrimonium contemnunt et prohibent, seque perpetuam castitatem ser- vaturos magna animi praesumptione polli- centur ac vovent, adhaec simplicium animos phaleratis dictis, hoc est, imposturis ac men- 214] daciis, impudenter seducunt. Nemo enim perinde castitatem exosam habet, aut in libidines est pronior ac illi, qui matrimonium prae magna sanctitate detrectant et aut propa- lam et impudenter scortationi et libidinibus indulgent, aut clanculum longe foediora, quae honeste commemorari non possunt, [R. 457] perpetrant, ut nimium, proh dolor! experti 215] sumus. Et breviter, quamquam ab ipso opere temperant, ipsum tamen cor impuris cogitationibus et pravis cupiditatibus plenum extrema flagrat libidine, ut plane perpetuo quodam incendio et occulto quodam vulnere carpantur et absumantur, quod in matrimonio constitutis nulla cum difficultate evitare licet. 216] Quare hoc praecepto omnium eorum, qui extra coniugium degunt, castitatis vota damnata et soluta sunt, imo quoque omnibus irretitis et miseris conscientis, quae suis whether they be that of emperor, princes, bishops, or whoever they please. For both ecclesiastical and civil estates must humble themselves and all be found in this estate, as we shall hear. Therefore it is not a peculiar estate, but the most common and noblest estate, which pervades all Christendom, yea, which extends through all the world.

217] Iam haec eo a me dicta sunt, ut iuven- tus crebris monitis in eam perducatur senten- tiam, ut incipiat voluptate quadam conplecti matrimonium, sciatque felicem et Deo ac-

In the second place, you must know also that it is not only an honorable, but also a necessary state, and it is solemnly commanded by God that, in general, in all conditions, men and women, who were created for it, shall be found in this estate; yet with some exceptions (although few) whom God has especially excepted, so that they are not fit for the married estate, or whom He has released by a high, supernatural gift that they can maintain chastity without this estate. For where nature has its course, as it is implanted by God, it is not possible to remain chaste without marriage. For flesh and blood remain flesh and blood, and the natural inclination and excitement have their course without let or hindrance, as everybody sees and feels. In order, therefore, that it may be the more easy in some degree to avoid in chastity, God has commanded the estate of matrimony, that every one may have his proper portion and be satisfied therewith; although God's grace besides is required in order that the heart also may be pure.

From this you see how this popish rabble, priests, monks, and nuns, resist God's order and commandment, inasmuch as they despise and forbid matrimony, and presume and vow to maintain perpetual chastity, and, besides, deceive the simple-minded with lying words and appearances [impostures]. For no one has so little love and inclination to chastity as just those who because of great sanctity avoid marriage, and either indulge in open and shameless prostitution, or secretly do even worse, so that one dare not speak of it, as has, alas! been learned too fully. And, in short, even though they abstain from the act, their hearts are so full of unchaste thoughts and evil lusts that there is a continual burning and secret suffering, which can be avoided in the married life. Therefore all vows of chastity out of the married state are condemned by this commandment, and free permission is granted, yea, even the command is given, to all poor ensnared consciences which have been deceived by their monastic vows to abandon the unchaste state and enter the married life, considering that even if the monastic life were godly, it would nevertheless not be in their power to maintain chastity, and if they remain in it, they must only sin more and more against this commandment.

Now, I speak of this in order that the young may be so guided that they conceive a liking for the married estate, and know that it is a blessed estate and pleasing to God. For in this way we might in the course of time bring it about that married life be der Zeit wiederum dahin bringen, daß er wieder zu seinen Ehren käme und des unflätigen, wüsten, unordnigen [unordentlichen] Wesens weniger würde, so jetzt allenthalben in der Welt zu Götzen geht [wie verflochtenes Haar wirr durcheinander geht] mit öffentlicher Hurerei und andern schändlichen Lastern, so aus Verachtung des ehelichen Lebens gefolgt sind. Darum sind hier die Eltern und Obrigkeit auch schuldig, auf die Jugend zu sehen, daß man sie zur Zucht und Ehrbarkeit aufziehe und, wenn sie erwachsen, mit Gott und Ehren be-rate [verheirate]; dazu würde er seinen Segen und Gnade geben, daß man Lust und Freude davon hätte.

Concordia Triglotta.

Aus dem allem sei nun zu beschließen gesagt, daß dies Gebot nicht allein fordert, daß jedermann mit Werken, Worten und Gedanken keusch lebe in seinem, das ist, allermeist im ehelichen Stande, sondern auch sein Gemahl, von Gott gegeben, lieb und wert halte. Denn wo eheliche Keuschheit soll gehalten werden, da müssen Mann und Weib vor allen Dingen in Liebe und Eintracht beieinander wohnen, daß eins das andere von Herzen und mit ganzer Treue meine. Denn das ist der vornehmste Stille eines, das Liebe und Lust zur Keuschheit macht, welches, wo es geht, wird auch Keuschheit wohl von ihr selbst folgen, ohne alles Gebieten; deshalben auch St. Paulus so fleißig die Eheleute vermahnt, daß eins das andere liebe und ehre. Da hast du nun abermal ein köstlich, ja viele und große gute Werke, welche du fröhlich rühmen kannst wider alle geistlichen Stände, ohne Gottes Wort und Gebot erwählt.

Das siebente Gebot.

Du sollst nicht stehlen.

Nach deiner Person und ehelichem Gemahl ist zeitlich Gut das nächste; das will Gott auch vermehrt haben und geboten, daß niemand dem Nächsten das Seine abbreche noch verkürze. Denn stehlen heißt nichts anderes, denn eines andern Gut mit Unrecht zu sich bringen, damit kürzlich begriffen ist allerlei Vorteil mit des Nächsten Nachteil in allerlei Handeln. Das ist nun gar ein weitläufig, gemein Laster, aber so wenig geachtet und wahrgenommen, daß über die Mäßen ist, also daß, wo man sie alle an Galgen hängen sollte, was Diebe sind und doch nicht heißen wollen, sollte die Welt bald wüste werden und beide an Hängern und Galgen gebrochen. Denn es soll, wie jetzt gesagt, nicht allein gestohlen heißen, daß man Rasten und Taschen räumt, sondern um sich greifen auf dem Markt, in allen Krämen, Scharren [Verkaufsläden], Wein- und Bierkellern, Werkstätten, und kürzlich, wo man hantiert, Geld um Ware oder Arbeit nimmt und gibt.

Als nämlich, daß wir's für den gemeinen Hausen ein wenig grob ausstreichen, daß man doch sehe, wie fromm wir sind: wenn ein Knecht oder Magd im Hause nicht treulich dient und Schaden tut oder gesehen läßt, den sie wohl verwahren [verwehren] könnte, oder sonst ihr Gut verwahrloßt und verdammt aus Faulheit, Unfleiß oder ceptum esse ordinem. Hac enim ratione temporis progressu tantum effici posset, ut illi suus iterum honos redderetur, et foeda illa et manifestarum scortationum et aliorum turpissimorum vitiorum, quae contemptum matrimonii consecuta sunt, lerna passim nunc in [218] mundo regnans diminueretur. Quare hoc quoque parentum ac magistratus est officium, iuventutis rationem habere, ut pudicitiam et honestatem perdiscant, atque ubi adoleverint, mature honesto iungantur matrimonio, quam rem haud dubie sua gratia et benedictione prosperare dignaretur Deus, ut voluptas et gaudium inde perciperetur.

[219] Ultimo, ex his omnibus epilogi vice hoc adiciatur, hoc praecipuum non solum exigere, ut quisque operibus, verbis et [R. 458] cogitationibus caste vivat in suo, hoc est, coniugali imprimis statu, sed etiam, ut comparem et coniugem a Deo sibi concessam in pretio habeat ac amore prosequatur. Ubi enim volumus coniugali castitati locum esse, ibi necessum est ante omnia, ut vir et mulier in amore concordēs converſentur, ut alter alterum ex animo mutua quadam benevolentia et fide complectatur. Hoc enim unum est ex praecipuis, quae amorem et studium castitatis accendunt; quodsi praesto fuerit, ipsa quoque castitas sua sponte sine mandato consequetur. [220] Inde quoque divus Paulus tanta diligentia eos, qui sunt in matrimonio, admonet, ut mutuo amore se diligant et venerentur. [221] Habes ergo hic iterum opus valde pretiosum, imo potius multa magna et praeclara opera, quae alacri animo iactare ac omnibus religiosorum ordinibus, citra Verbi Dei auctoritatem institutis et electis, opponere potes.

Praeceptum VII.

[222] Non furtum facies.

[223] Post tuam tuaeque coniugis personam proximum est res familiaris; hanc quoque Deus vult esse in tuto, praecipitque, ne quis alterius fortunam invadat, aut clanculum committit. [224] Furari enim nihil aliud est aut dicitur, quam fortunam alterius pro iniuria sibi vindicare, qua re breviter omnis generis in omnibus negotiis proximi defraudationes comprehensae sunt. Iam hoc vitium admodum commune est et longe lateque patet, at tam parum curatur, ut omnem plane modum excedat, adeo ut si omnes, quotquot fures sunt, fures tamen dici nolunt, suspendendi essent, cito totus mundus desolaretur, neque cruces aut carnifices sufficerent. Neque enim [R. 459] hoc tantum furtum dicendum est, ut diximus, cistas et marsupia clanculum evacuare, sed in foro quoque locum habet, in tabernis, ubi res venales prostant, in cella vinaria et cerevisiaria, in officinis. Breviter, ubicunque tractantur commercia, ubi pecunia vel pro mercibus vel labore datur et accipitur.

[225] Exempli causa, ut pro simplicibus aliquanto fusius ac rudius explanemus, ut saltem videamus, quam probi simus: quando servus aut ancilla suo servitio non fideliter praeest, heroque suo damnum dat aut fieri permittit, cui obviare potuisset, aut quominus fieret, antevertere, aut alioqui rem herilem restored to honor, and that there might be less of the filthy, dissolute, disorderly doings which now run riot the world over in open prostitution and other shameful vices arising from disregard of married life. Therefore it is the duty of parents and the government to see to it that our youth be brought up to discipline and respectability, and when they have come to years of maturity, to provide for them [to have them married] in the fear of God and honorably; He would not fail to add His blessing and grace, so that men would have joy and happiness from the same.

Let me now say in conclusion that this commandment demands not only that every one live chastely in thought, word, and deed in his condition, that is, especially in the estate of matrimony, but also that every one love and esteem the spouse given him by God. For where conjugal chastity is to be maintained, man and wife must by all means live together in love and harmony, that one may cherish the other from the heart and with entire fidelity. For that is one of the principal points which enkindle love and desire of chastity, so that, where this is found, chastity will follow as a matter of course without any command. Therefore also St. Paul so diligently exhorts husband and wife to love and honor one another. Here you have again a precious, yea, many and great good works, of which you can joyfully boast, against all ecclesiastical estates, chosen without God's Word and commandment.

The Seventh Commandment.

Thou shalt not steal.

After your person and spouse temporal property comes next. That also God wishes to have protected, and He has commanded that no one shall subtract from, or curtail, his neighbor's possessions. For to steal is nothing else than to get possession of another's property wrongfully, which briefly comprehends all kinds of advantage in all sorts of trade to the disadvantage of our neighbor. Now, this is indeed quite a wide-spread and common vice, but so little regarded and observed that it exceeds all measure, so that if all who are thieves, and yet do not wish to be called such, were to be hanged on gallows, the world would soon be devastated, and there would be a lack both of executioners and gallows. For, as we have just said, to steal is to signify not only to empty our neighbor's coffer and pockets, but to be grasping in the market, in all stores, booths, wine- and beer-cellars, workshops, and, in short, wherever there is trading or taking and giving of money for merchandise or labor.

As, for instance, to explain this somewhat grossly for the common people, that it may be seen how godly we are: When a man-servant or maid-servant does not serve faithfully in the house, and does damage, or allows it to be done when it could be prevented, or Bosheit, zu Troß und Verdrüß Herren und Frauen, und wie solches mutwillig geschehen kann (denn ich rede nicht von dem, daß versehen und ungern getan ist), da kannst du ein Jahr einen Gulden dreißig oder vierzig und mehr entwenden, welches, so ein anderer heimlich genommen oder enttragen [weggetragen] hätte, müßte er am Strid erwürgen. Aber hier darfst du noch troßen und pöchen, und darfst dich niemand einen Dieb heißen.

Desgleichen rede ich auch von Handwerksleuten, Arbeitern, Tagelöhnern, so alle ihren Mutwillen brauchen und nicht wissen, wie sie die Leute überlegen [überfordern] sollen, und doch lässig und untreu in der Arbeit sind. Diese alle sind weit über die heimlichen Diebe, vor denen man Schloß und Riegel legen kann, oder wo man sie begreift [ergreift], also mitfährt, daß sie es nicht mehr tun. Vor diesen aber kann sich niemand hüten, darfst du auch niemand sauer ansehen oder einiges Diebstahls zeihen, daß einer zehnmal lieber aus dem Beutel verlieren sollte. Denn da sind meine Nachbarn, gute Freunde, mein eigen Gefinde, dazu ich mich Gutes verlasse, die mich am allerersten bezüden [überlisten, betrügen].

Also auch fort [ferner] auf dem Markt und [in] gemeinen Händeln geht es mit voller Macht und Gewalt, da einer den andern öffentlich mit falscher Ware, Maß, Gewicht, Münze betrügt und mit Behendigkeit und seltsamen Finanzen [Betrügereien] oder geschwinden Fündlein [geschickten Kniffen] übervorteilt; item mit dem Kauf überlegt und nach seinem Mutwillen beschwert, schindet und plagt. Und wer kann solches alles erzählen oder erdenken? Summa, das ist das gemeinste Handwerk und die größte Kunst auf Erden, und wenn man die Welt jetzt durch alle Stände ansieht, so ist sie nichts anderes denn ein großer, weiter Stall voll großer Diebe.

Darum heißen sie auch die Stuhlräuber [Bucherer, die daheim auf dem Stuhl sitzen, rauben und stehlen mit einem guten Schein], Land- und Strahendiebe, nicht Raftenräuber noch Meuchel-diebe, so aus der Varschaft machen, sondern die auf dem Stuhl sitzen und heißen große Junker und ehrsame, fromme Bürger und mit gutem Schein rauben und stehlen.

Ja, hier wäre noch zu schweigen von geringen einzelnen Dieben, wenn man die großen, gewaltigen Erzdiebe sollte angreifen, mit welchen Herren und Fürsten Gesellschaft machen, die nicht eine Stadt oder zwei, sondern ganz Deutschland täglich ausstehlen. Ja, wo bliebe das Haupt und oberster Schutzherr aller Diebe, der heilige Stuhl zu Rom mit aller seiner Zugehör, welcher aller Welt Güter mit Dieberei zu sich [ge]bracht und bis auf diesen Tag innehat?

male tractat, aut propter socordiam, indiligentiam aut malitiam negligit, ut hero ac herae aegre atque moleste faciat, et quocunque pacto hoc prava animi libidine fieri potest. Neque enim loquor de his, quae per incogitantiam invito fiunt animo. Sic, inquam, quotannis herum tuum triginta aut quadraginta aureis defraudare potes, quos si alius clanculum convassasset, huius gula esset perfringenda laqueo. Verum tu tanti furti tibi conscius adhuc ferocire audes et insolenter agere, neque quisquam te audet furti accusare at alienae pecuniae condemnare.

226] Non secus quoque loquor de fabris sive opificibus et mercenariis, qui sua utuntur libidine, neque sciunt, quo pacto eos, qui suam sibi locant operam, satis exhauriant, quum nihilo secius in opere frigeant, segniter et infideliter laborantes. Hi omnes longo superant intervallo nocturnos illos et clancularios fures, qui vel seris ac repagulis caveri, vel comprehensi ita coerceri possunt, ut amplius id non faciant. Horum autem improbitatem nemo, quamlibet perspicax, cavere potest, nec quisquam audet eos vultu aliquanto obliquiore contueri, aut ullius furti accusare, ita ut aliquis decies libentius aes suum et crumena amittere sustineret. Nam hi mei vicini sunt, mihi amici, mei proprii ministri, de [R. 460] quibus mihi omnia fidei et diligentiae officia polliceor, illi primi sunt, a quibus indigne compilor.

227] Ita quoque in foro, in emporiis, in mercatibus, in publicis commerciis omnium potentissime hoc furti genus regnat et locum obtinet, ubi alius alium vitiosa merce, falsa mensura, iniquo pondere, adulterina moneta defraudat ac decipit, neque non versipelli quadam astutia et miris imposturis atque decipulis circumductum dispoliat. Adhaec, si quis alium pro libidine sua gravat commerciis, ad vivum usque tondens et crucians. Et quis haec omnia fando enumerare valet aut ex- 228] cogitare? In summa, haec communissima omnium ars est et omnium numerosissima in terris sodalitas. Nam si quis mundum per omnes vagatus ordines recto iudicio contemplabitur, nihil videbit aliud quam ingens aliquid et spatiosum stabulum, quod magnis furibus est refertissimum.

229] Unde quoque archipiratae, latrocinio quaquaversum grassantes, recte dicuntur, non cistarum compilatores aut fures clancularii, qui substantiam alicuius furto imminuunt, sed qui domi desident, magni dicuntur proceres ac cives probi et integri, sub honestatis praetextu furtum exercentes et latrocinium.

230] Sed possent praeteriri silentio, quae de parvis et nullius momenti furibus memoravimus, prae illis, quae de maximis illis furum antesignanis dicenda essent, quibuscumque potentes et summi principes societatem ineunt, qui non unam atque alteram solum civitatem compilare solent, sed totam Germaniam quotidie compilant atque denudant. Imo ubi maneret, quae totius mundi opes furtim ad se rapuit et in hunc usque diem possidet, defensatrix illa et caput furum omnium, sancta, si Deo placet, sedes Romana?

otherwise ruins and neglects the goods entrusted to him, from indolence, idleness, or malice, to the spite and vexation of master and mistress, and in whatever way this can be done purposely (for I do not speak of what happens from oversight and against one's will), you can in a year abscond thirty, forty florins, which if another had taken secretly or carried away, he would be hanged with the rope. But here you [while conscious of such a great theft] may even bid defiance and become insolent, and no one dare call you a thief.

The same I say also of mechanics, workmen, and day-laborers, who all follow their wanton notions, and never know enough ways to overcharge people, while they are lazy and unfaithful in their work. All these are far worse than sneak-thieves, against whom we can guard with locks and bolts, or who, if apprehended, are treated in such a manner that they will not do the same again. But against these no one can guard, no one dare even look awry at them or accuse them of theft, so that one would ten times rather lose from his purse. For here are my neighbors, good friends, my own servants, from whom I expect good [every faithful and diligent service], who defraud me first of all.

Furthermore, in the market and in common trade likewise, this practise is in full swing and force to the greatest extent, where one openly defrauds another with bad merchandise, false measures, weights, coins, and by nimbleness and queer finances or dexterous tricks takes advantage of him; likewise, when one overcharges a person in a trade and wantonly drives a hard bargain, skins and distresses him. And who can recount or think of all these things? To sum up, this is the commonest craft and the largest guild on earth, and if we regard the world throughout all conditions of life, it is nothing else than a vast, wide stall, full of great thieves.

Therefore they are also called swivel-chair robbers, land- and highway-robbers, not picklocks and sneak-thieves who snatch away the ready cash, but who sit on the chair [at home] and are styled great noblemen, and honorable, pious citizens, and yet rob and steal under a good pretext.

Yes, here we might be silent about the trifling individual thieves if we were to attack the great, powerful arch-thieves with whom lords and princes keep company, who daily plunder not only a city or two, but all Germany. Yea, where should we place the head and supreme protector of all thieves, the Holy Chair at Rome with all its retinue, which has grabbed by theft the wealth of all the world, and holds it to this day?

Kürzlich, so geht's in der Welt, daß, wer öffentlich stehlen und rauben kann, geht sicher und frei dahin, von jedermann ungestraft, und will dazu geehrt sein. Demeil müssen die kleinen, heimlichen Diebe, so sich einmal vergriffen haben, die Schande und Strafe tragen, jene fromm und zu Ehren machen. Doch sollen sie wissen, daß sie vor Gott die größten Diebe sind, der sie auch, wie sie wert sind und verdienen, strafen wird.

Weil nun dieß Gebot so weit um sich greift, wie jezt angezeigt, ist's not, dem Böbel [dem einfältigen Volk] wohl vorzuhalten und auszukreichen, daß man sie nicht so frei und sicher hingehen lasse, sondern [ihnen] immer Gottes Zorn vor Augen stelle und einbleue. Denn wir solches nicht Christen, sondern allermeist Buben und Schälken predigen müssen, welchen wohl billiger Richter, Stodmeister oder Reister Hans [der Hentler] predigen sollte. Darum wisse ein jeglicher, daß er schuldig ist bei Gottes Ungnaden, nicht allein seinem Nächsten keinen Schaden zu tun, noch seinen Vorteil zu entweihen, noch im Kauf oder irgendeinem Handel einerlei [irgendwelche] Untreue oder Lüge zu beweisen, sondern auch sein Gut treulich zu verwahren, seinen Nutzen zu verschaffen und fördern, sonderlich so er Geld, Lohn und Nahrung dafür nimmt.

Wer nun solches mutwillig verachtet, mag wohl hingehen und dem Hentler entlaufen, wird aber Gottes Zorn und Strafe nicht entgehen und, wenn er seinen Trost und Stolz lang treibt, doch ein Landläufer und Bettler bleiben, alle Plage und Unglück dazu haben. Jezt gehst du hin, da du solltest deines Herrn oder Frauen Gut bewahren, dafür du deinen Trost und Rauch füllst, nimmst deinen Lohn als ein Dieb, läßt dich dazu feiern als ein Junker, als ihrer viel sind, die Herren und Frauen noch tröhen und ihnen ungeru zu Lieb und Dienst täten, einen Schaden zu verwahren [verhüten].

contenti omnia perfide et maligne agere, insuper cum heris suis etiam superbe et ferociter delitigant, neque tantum humanitatis aut fidei lubentes ostenderent, ut damnum aliquod antevertendo praecaverent.

Siehe aber zu, was du daran gewinnst, daß, wo [wenn] du dein Eigenes überkommst und zu Hause sitzt, dazu Gott mit allem Unglück helfen wird, soll sich's wieder finden und heimkommen, daß, wo du einen Heller abgebrochen oder Schaden getan hast, [du] dreißigfältig bezahlen müßest.

Desgleichen soll es Handwerksleuten und Tageslöhnern geben, von welchen man jezt unleidlichen Mutwillen hören und leiden muß, als wären sie Junker im fremden Gut, und jedermann müsse ihnen wohl geben, wieviel sie wollen. Solche laß nur getrost schinden, solange sie können, aber Gott wird seines Gebotes nicht vergessen und ihnen auch lohnen, wie sie gebieten haben, und hängen nicht an einen grünen, sondern bürren kalten Galgen, daß sie ihr Leben lang nicht gedeihen noch etwas vor sich bringen. Und zwar, wenn ein recht geordnet Regiment in Landen [im Lande] wäre, könnte

231] Breviter, ita iam in mundo comparatum est, ut qui propalam furari ac [R. 461] praedari novit, is concessa impunitate ab omnibus libere et secure agat, quin et honorem sibi deferri postulet; parvi interim et clancularii illi fures, semel in furto deprehensi, dedecus et poenam perferre, illorumque honestatem confirmare cogantur. Verumtamen sciant illi se coram Deo fures esse omnium maximos, cui et dignas, quas meriti sunt, poenas sunt daturi.

232] Cum itaque hoc praeceptum tam multa, ut ostensum est modo, complectatur, necessarium est, ut haec vulgo diligenter proponantur et explanentur, neve tam secure et libere eos abire patiamur, sed subinde iram Dei eis ob oculos ponamus et inculcemus. Neque enim talia Christianis, verum omnium maxime nebulonibus praedicamus, quibus multo iustius iudex aut minister carceris aut 233] carnifex praedicaret. Quapropter quilibet sciat, qui quidem iratum Deum experiri nolit, sibi praeceptum esse, ut non solum proximo non damnum inferat aut eius intervertat commodum, neque in commercii aut contractibus ulla perfidia, simulatione aut dolo malo eundem circumducatur, sed etiam ut eius bona magna cum fide tueatur, eius commoditatem, quoad eius fieri potest, promoveat, praecipue quando suam operam argento, mercede ac victu pensandam locavit proximo.

234] Iam quicumque haec temere contempserit, effugerit ille fortasse manus carnificis, at ipsius Dei iram et poenam nunquam effugiet. Et quamquam ad tempus hac sua utatur ferocia, circumforaneus erro tamen et mendicus manebit, omnes plagas et infortunia ex 235] perturus. Iam quidem alio te vocat animi tui prolubium, ubi res herilis singulari quadam fide tibi procuranda fuerat, tu gulae interim ac ventri tuo servis, non secus ac fur mercedem tuam accipiens, contendens etiam ob istam tuam perfidiam negligentiam coli et honorari. Huius generis permultos est videre iam ministros ac famulos, qui non [R. 462]

236] Sed attende, precor, animus, quidnam hac ratione lucris sis consecuturus, nempe ut, ubi ducta uxore ipse propriae domus curam susceperis (ad quod tibi Deus omnium inauspicatissime opem suam non denegabit), haec tua perfidia ad te ipsum redeat, fiatque, ut ubi hero tuo prius vel unius oboli fraudem feceris aut damnum dederis, trigesies id tuo maximo malo persolvas.

237] Pari ratione artificibus quoque et mercenariis sua pensabitur perfidia, a quibus iam non dicendam planeque intolerabilem libidinem et audire et perferre cogimur, quasi in alienis bonis obtinerent dominium, aut quivis, quodcumque postulassent, citra contradictio- 238] nem mox numerare cogeretur. Hisce omnibus permitte sane, ut audacter proximum iniquissimis exactionibus deglubant ac tondeant, quamdiu poterunt: equidem Deus sui praecepti non erit immemor, illisque ipsis debita praemia redditurus est, eosque non in

This is, in short, the course of the world: whoever can steal and rob openly goes free and secure, unmolested by any one, and even demands that he be honored. Meanwhile the little sneak-thieves, who have once trespassed, must bear the shame and punishment to render the former godly and honorable. But let them know that in the sight of God they are the greatest thieves, and that He will punish them as they are worthy and deserve.

Now, since this commandment is so far-reaching [and comprehensive], as just indicated, it is necessary to urge it well and to explain it to the common people, not to let them go on in their wantonness and security, but always to place before their eyes the wrath of God, and inculcate the same. For we have to preach this not to Christians, but chiefly to knaves and scoundrels, to whom it would be more fitting for judges, jailers, or Master Hannes [the executioner] to preach. Therefore let every one know that it is his duty, at the risk of God's displeasure, not only to do no injury to his neighbor, nor to deprive him of gain, nor to perpetrate any act of unfaithfulness or malice in any bargain or trade, but faithfully to preserve his property for him, to secure and promote his advantage, especially when one accepts money, wages, and one's livelihood for such service.

He now who wantonly despises this may indeed pass along and escape the hangman, but he shall not escape the wrath and punishment of God; and when he has long practised his defiance and arrogance, he shall yet remain a tramp and beggar, and, in addition, have all plagues and misfortune. Now you are going your way [wherever your heart's pleasure calls you] while you ought to preserve the property of your master and mistress, for which service you fill your crop and maw, take your wages like a thief, have people treat you as a nobleman; for there are many that are even insolent towards their masters and mistresses, and are unwilling to do them a favor or service by which to protect them from loss.

But reflect what you will gain when, having come into your own property and being set up in your home (to which God will help with all misfortunes), it [your perfidy] will bob up again and come home to you, and you will find that where you have cheated or done injury to the value of one mite, you will have to pay thirty again.

Such shall be the lot also of mechanics and day-laborers of whom we are now obliged to hear and suffer such intolerable maliciousness, as though they were noblemen in another's possessions, and every one were obliged to give them what they demand. Just let them continue practising their exactions as long as they can; but God will not forget His commandment, and will reward them according as they have served, and will hang them, not upon a green gallows, but upon a dry one, so that all their life they shall neither pros-man solchem Mutwillen bald steuern und wehren, wie vorzeiten bei den Römern gewesen ist, da man solchen flugs auf die Haube griff [sie beim Schopf nahm], daß sich andere daran stoßen mußten.

modi hominum libido atque temeritas coerceri posset atque infringi, qualem olim apud Romanos morem fuisse legimus, ubi talium homuncionum improbitatem acerbissimis poenis, ut alii inde exemplum sibi sumerent, coercabant.

Also soll es allen andern gelingen, so aus dem offenen, freien Markt nichts denn ein Schindelkei [einen Schindanger] und Raubhaus machen, da man täglich die Armen überseht [überfordert], neue Beschwerung und Keurung macht, und jeglicher des Markts braucht nach seinem Mutwillen, troget und stolzet dazu, als habe er gut Fug und Recht, daß Seine so teuer zu geben, als ihn gelüftet, und soll ihm niemand dreinreden. Denen wollen wir zwar zusehen, [sie] schinden, ziwaden und geizen lassen, aber Gott vertrauen (der es doch ohnedas tun wird), daß er, wenn du lange geschunden und geschreppelt [mühsam zusammengescharrt] hast, einen Segen darüber spreche, daß dir dein Korn auf dem Boden, dein Vier im Keller, dein Vieh im Stall verderbe; ja, wo du jemand um einen Gulden täuschest und verborteilst, soll dir's den ganzen Haufen wegstoßen und freffen, daß du sein nimmer froh werdest.

speret, ut frumentum tuum in horreo, cerevisia tua in cellario, pecus tuum in stabulo pereat, imo potius, ubi proximum tuum vel aureo defraudaveris, tu de tota summa ac sorte periclitans in dubium venias, ut ita absumpta et ablata evanescat etiam cum pulvisculo, ut nunquam ullam ex ea voluptatem capias.

Solches sehen und erfahren wir zwar vor Augen täglich erfüllt werden, daß kein gestohlen und fälschlich gewonnen Gut gedeiht. Wieviel sind ihrer, so Tag und Nacht scharren und fragen und doch keines Hellers reicher werden, und ob sie viel sammeln, doch so viel Plage und Unglück müssen haben, daß sie es nicht mit Freuden genießen noch auf ihre Kinder erben können. Aber weil sich niemand daran lehrt, und [wir] hingehen, als ging's uns nichts an, muß er uns anders heimjucken und mores lehren, daß er eine Landtschätzung über die andere über uns schide, oder einen Haufen Landtsknechte zu Gaste lade, die uns auf eine Stunde Rasten und Beutel räumen und nicht aufhören, weil [solange] wir einen Keller behalten, dazu zu Dank Haus und Hof verbrennen und verheeren, Weib und Kinder schänden und umbringen.

faciant, quam nobis nullus obolus maneat reliquus; adhaec vastata passim patria aedes nobis exurant etiam, neque non uxores et liberos nostros affectos ignominia perimant.

Und Summa, stiehst du viel, so versee dich gewißlich, daß dir noch so viel [noch einmal so viel] gestohlen werde, und wer mit Gewalt und Unrecht raubt und gewinnt, einen andern leide, der ihm auch also mißspiele. Denn die Kunst kann Gott meisterlich, weil jedermann den andern beraubt und stiehlt, daß er einen Dieb mit dem andern strafft; wo[her] wollte man sonst Galgen und Stride genug nehmen?

Wer ihm nun will sagen lassen, der wisse, daß [es] Gottes Gebot ist und für seinen Scherz will gehalten sein. Denn ob du uns verachtest, betrügst [betrügst], stiehst und raubst, wollen wir's virentem crucem, sed plane in aridam furcam suspensurus, ut per omnem aetatem infelices nihil unquam bonorum consequantur. Et pro[239] fecto, si rempublicam haberemus bonis legibus institutam, facile ac citra moram eius-

240] Nihil felicius aliis quoque sua debet cadere avaritia et milvina rapacitas, qui e foro et macello publico, quod omnibus servire debebat, lustra praedonum et locum latrocinii constituunt, ubi quotidie indignis modis gravantur miseri, novis subinde inductis oneribus et caritatis rationibus. Ac quisque [R. 463] foro pro sua libidine, utque illi visum fuerit, abutitur, ad hoc intolerabiliter superbiens atque ferociens, quasi iure sibi hoc liceat, sua, quam maximo velit pretio, divendere, tantum abest, ut aliquis eam ob rem illi oblique ob- 241] murmuret. Horum omnium spectatores erimus, permixturi, ut pro arbitrato suo alios deglubant, spoliunt, mutilent, lacerent, rapiant ac omnibus modis suae avaritiae serviant. In 242] Deo tamen fiduciam nostram habebimus, alioqui etiam hoc ipsum facturo, ut ea benedictione, ubi diu multumque alios degluberis, neque parum boni corraseris, tuas opes pro-

243] Hoc verum esse equidem quotidianis experimentis discimus, nullam rem aut furto aut fraude paratam possessori lucro esse. Quot enim esse putas, qui diu noctuque corradendis et cumulandis opibus se excruciant, qui tamen ne teruncio quidem ditiores evadunt? Et quamquam multum cumulent, tot tamen plagis et calamitatibus affecti sunt, ut cum voluptate ac gaudio rebus partis frui nequeant, neque liberis suis eam hereditatem 244] relinquunt. Verum enim vero cum neminem haec moveant atque non secus, ac si nostra nihil interesset, agamus, necesse est, ut alia ratione nos invisat et sapere doceat, ut nempe novis subinde exactionibus exugamur, aut numeroso quodam peregrinorum militum exercitu nos adoriatur, qui in unius horulae spatio ita cistas et marsupia nostra exenterent, nec ante depraedandi finem [R. 464]

245] Et ut summatim dicam, multum furans certo tibi pollicere, multo plura te furto amissurum. Tum qui per vim atque iniuriam rapto vivit et lucro servit, ut alteri incommodet, ille alium nanciscetur, a quo paria accepturus est. Deus enim huius artis est scientissimus, quandoquidem quisque alterum rapinis ac furto compilat, ut furem fure, latronem latrone puniat. Ubi alias sufficiens nobis suppetet ad puniendos fures et patibulorum et laqueorum copia?

246] Iam qui amicis dictis commonetur, ille certum habet Dei esse praeceptum, quod in iocum converti nolit. Nam etsi nos de- ceperis, contempseris aut furto et rapinis per nor accumulate anything. And indeed, if there were a well-ordered government in the land, such wantonness might soon be checked and prevented, as was the custom in ancient times among the Romans, where such characters were promptly seized by the paterfamilias in a way that others took warning.

No more shall all the rest prosper who change the open free market into a carrion-pit of extortion and a den of robbery, where the poor are daily overcharged, new burdens and high prices are imposed, and every one uses the market according to his caprice, and is even defiant and brags as though it were his fair privilege and right to sell his goods for as high a price as he please, and no one had a right to say a word against it. We will indeed look on and let these people skin, pinch, and hoard, but we will trust in God, — who will, however, do this of His own accord, — that, after you have been skinning and scraping for a long time, He will pronounce such a blessing on your gains that your grain in the garner, your beer in the cellar, your cattle in the stalls shall perish; yea, where you have cheated and overcharged any one to the amount of a florin, your entire pile shall be consumed with rust, so that you shall never enjoy it.

And indeed, we see and experience this being fulfilled daily before our eyes, that no stolen or dishonestly acquired possession thrives. How many there are who rake and scrape day and night, and yet grow not a farthing richer! And though they gather much, they must suffer so many plagues and misfortunes that they cannot relish it with cheerfulness nor transmit it to their children. But as no one minds it, and we go on as though it did not concern us, God must visit us in a different way and teach us manners by imposing one taxation after another, or billeting a troop of soldiers upon us, who in one hour empty our coffers and purses, and do not quit as long as we have a farthing left, and in addition, by way of thanks, burn and devastate house and home, and outrage and kill wife and children.

And, in short, if you steal much, depend upon it that again as much will be stolen from you; and he who robs and acquires with violence and wrong will submit to one who shall deal after the same fashion with him. For God is master of this art, that since every one robs and steals from the other, He punishes one thief by means of another. Else where should we find enough gallows and ropes?

Now, whoever is willing to be instructed, let him know that this is the commandment of God, and that it must not be treated as war noch zukommen [bulden] und deinen Hochmut austreten, leiden und dem Vaterunser nach vergeben und [uns deiner] erbarmen: denn wir wissen, daß die Frommen doch genug haben müssen, und du dir selbst mehr denn einem andern Schaden tust.

Aber da hüte dich vor, wenn das liebe Armut (welches jetzt viel ist) kommt, so um den täglichen Pfennig laufen und zehren muß, und du zusiehst, als müßte jedermann deiner Gnade leben, schindest und schabst bis auf den Grat [Knochen], dazu mit Stolz und Übermut abweist, dem du solltest geben und schenken, so geht es dahin elend und betrübt, und weil es [solches] niemandem flagen kann, schreit und ruft es gen Himmel — da hüte dich (sage ich abermal) als vor dem Teufel selbst. Denn solch Seufzen und Rufen wird nicht schmerzen, sondern einen Nachdruck haben, der dir und aller Welt zu schwer werden wird. Denn es wird den treffen, der sich der armen, betrübten Herzen annimmt und nicht will ungerochen [ungerächt] lassen. Verachtest du es aber und trodest, so siehe, wen du auf dich geladen hast; wird dir's gelingen und wohl gehen, sollst du Gott und mich vor aller Welt Lügner schelten.

Quodsi haec superbe contempseris aut etiam irriseris, tum vide, quem inimicum tibi feceris. Si enim prospere tibi ceciderit, tum Deum et me coram mundo universo mendacii coarguas licet.

Wir haben genug vermahnt, gewarnt und gehöhrt; wer es nicht achten noch glauben will, den lassen wir gehen, bis er's erfahre. Doch muß man dem jungen Volk solches einbilden [einprägen], daß sie sich hüten und dem alten, unbändigen Haufen nicht nachfolgen, sondern Gottes Gebot vor Augen halten, daß nicht Gottes Zorn und Strafe auch über sie gehe. Uns gebührt nicht weitre, denn zu sagen und zu strafen mit Gottes Wort; aber daß man solchem öffentlichen Mutwillen steure, da gehören Fürsten und Obrigkeit zu, die selbst Augen und den Mut hätten, Ordnung zu stellen und zu halten in allerlei Handel und Kauf, auf daß das Armut nicht beschwert und verdrückt [unterdrückt] würde, noch sie sich mit fremden Sünden beladen dürften.

Das sei genug davon gesagt, was fehlen heiße, daß man's nicht so eng spanne, sondern gehen lasse, so weit als wir mit dem Nächsten zu tun haben. Und kurz in eine Summa, wie in den vorigen, zu fassen, ist dadurch verboten, erstlich dem Nächsten Schaden und Unrecht zu tun (wie mancherlei Weise zu erdenken sind, hab' und Gut abzubrechen, [zu] verhindern und vorzuhalten [vorzuhalten]), auch solches nicht bewilligen noch gestatten, sondern wehren und vorkommen, und wiederum geboten, sein Gut [zu] fördern, bessern und, wo er Not leidet, helfen, mitteilen, vorstrecken beide Freunden und Feinden.

251] Contra vero praeceptum est, ut eius bona necessitate pressus est, eius inopiam benigne sublevemus, illi impertiamus, prae manu aliquid demus, quo fruatur, cum amicis tum inimicis.

Wer nun gute Werke sucht und begehrt, wird hier übrig genug finden, die Gott von Herzen ancompilaveris; tuam quidem iniuriam aequo animo tolerabimus, fortasse propterea non illico fame perituri, tibi, quemadmodum nos docet Oratio Dominica, omnium iniuriarum concessa venia condonabimus tuique miseremur. Probi enim et iusti non possunt non exuberare copia, tuque tibi longe maius detrimentum quam alteri concillas.

247] Sed hic, obsecro, fac attentio sis animo tibi, ubi pauperes (quorum iam magnus est numerus) venerint, quibus nummis diurno labore partis omnia mercanda sunt, tuque non secus agis, quam si omnibus e tua gratia pendendum sit, ad vivum usque deglubens ac rodens, quos etiam superbe a te dimissos abigis inhumanissime, quibus dare debebas et largiri gratuito. Illi quidem misere a te abeunt et affecti tristitia, et cum neminem habeant, cui ista conquerantur, sublata in coelum voce Deum ultorem invocant. Haec, inquam, iterum atque iterum repetens moneo, ut caveas tamquam ipsum cacodaemonem. Tales pauperum gemitus et implorationes ioculares non erunt, sed vim in se habebunt, quae et tibi et universo mundo erit [R. 465] intolerabilis, atque ad eum pertingent, qui egenorum et afflictorum cura afficitur ac iniuriam illis illatam non patitur inultam.

248] Nos abunde satis admonuimus ac dehortati sumus; qui ista neglexerit, aut non crediderit, hunc missum faciemus, donec suo malo harum rerum fecerit periculum. Iuventuti tamen haec studiose inculcanda sunt, ut sibi caveat, nec veteris et indomitae multitudinis insequatur vestigia, sed mandatum Dei in conspectu habeat, ne et ipsam comprehendat [249] dat ira et poenae divinae. Nostrium officium non latius protenditur, quam ut hominum flagitia indicemus eademque Verbo Dei puniamus. Verum ut tam aperta et manifesta depraedandi ac furandi libido coerceatur, principum et magistratus interest, qui si ipsi oculos haberent et animum, in omnibus negotiis atque commerciis certam rationem atque ordinem constituendi et conservandi, neque pauperes gravarentur et opprimerentur, neque semet ipsos alienis peccatis onerarent.

250] Sed iam satis superque dictum est, quid sit furari, ne tam angustis id metis concludatur, sed eo usque sinatur protendi, quousque nostra cum proximo exercenda negotia protenduntur. Et ut compendio quodam rei summam, sicut in aliis praeceptis factitavimus, perstringam, illud hoc praecepto cautum est: primum, ne quam iniuriam inferamus proximo (qualescunque tandem et quam multiplices rationes excogitari possunt opes atque substantiam alienam imminuendi, decurtandi, impediendi, alienandi) neque his consensiamus aut haec fieri patiamur, sed prohibeamus ac omnibus modis eius damnum antevertamus.

promoveamus augeamusque, atque, ubi [R. 466] 252] Iam qui bona opera quaerit aut cupit facere, hic abunde satis inveniet, quae Deo ex

a jest. For although you despise us, defraud, steal, and rob, we will indeed manage to endure your haughtiness, suffer, and, according to the Lord's Prayer, forgive and show pity; for we know that the godly shall nevertheless have enough, and you injure yourself more than another.

But beware of this: When the poor man comes to you (of whom there are so many now) who must buy with the penny of his daily wages and live upon it, and you are harsh to him, as though every one lived by your favor, and you skin and scrape to the bone, and, besides, with pride and haughtiness turn him off to whom you ought to give for nothing, he will go away wretched and sorrowful, and since he can complain to no one, he will cry and call to heaven, — then beware (I say again) as of the devil himself. For such groaning and calling will be no jest, but will have a weight that will prove too heavy for you and all the world. For it will reach Him who takes care of the poor sorrowful hearts, and will not allow them to go un-avenged. But if you despise this and become defiant, see whom you have brought upon you: if you succeed and prosper, you may before all the world call God and me a liar.

We have exhorted, warned, and protested enough; he who will not heed or believe it may go on until he learns this by experience. Yet it must be impressed upon the young that they may be careful not to follow the old lawless crowd, but keep their eyes fixed upon God's commandment, lest His wrath and punishment come upon them too. It behooves us to do no more than to instruct and reprove with God's Word; but to check such open wantonness there is need of the princes and government, who themselves would have eyes and the courage to establish and maintain order in all manner of trade and commerce, lest the poor be burdened and oppressed nor they themselves be loaded with other men's sins.

Let this suffice as an explanation of what stealing is, that it be not taken too narrowly, but made to extend as far as we have to do with our neighbors. And briefly, in a summary, as in the former commandments, it is herewith forbidden, in the first place, to do our neighbor any injury or wrong (in whatever manner supposable, by curtailing, forestalling, and withholding his possessions and property), or even to consent or allow such a thing, but to interpose and prevent it. And, on the other hand, it is commanded that we advance and improve his possessions, and in case he suffers want, that we help, communicate, and lend both to friends and foes.

Whoever now seeks and desires good works will find here more than enough such as are heartily acceptable and pleasing to God, and genehm und gefällig find, dazu mit trefflichem Segen begnadet und überschüttet, daß es reichlich soll vergolten werden, was wir unsern Nächsten zu Nutz und Freundschaft thun, wie auch der König Salomo lehrt Prov. 19: „Wer sich des Armen erbarmt, der leihet dem Herrn; der wird ihm wieder vergelten seinen Lohn.“ Da hast du einen reichen Herrn, der dir gewiß genug ist und nichts wird gebrechen noch mangeln lassen; so kannst du mit fröhlichem Gewissen hundertmal mehr genießen, denn du mit Untreue und Unrecht erschleppst [erscheinst, zusammenscharrst]. Wer nun des Segens nicht mag, der wird Zorn und Unglück genug finden.

Das achte Gebot.

Du sollst nicht falsch Zeugnis reden wider deinen Nächsten.

Über unsern eigenen Leib, ehelich Gemahl und zeitlich Gut haben wir noch einen Schatz, nämlich Ehre und gut Gerücht, welches wir auch nicht entbehren können. Denn es gilt nicht, unter den Leuten in öffentlicher Schande, von jedermann verachtet, zu leben. Darum will Gott des Nächsten Gevund, Glimpf [guten Namen] und Gerechtigkeit so wenig als Geld und Gut genommen oder verkürzt haben, auf daß ein jeglicher vor seinem Weibe, Kind, Gefinde und Nachbar ehrlich bestehe [in Ehren bestehe]. Und zum ersten ist der größte Verstand dieses Gebots, wie die Worte lauten: „Du sollst nicht falsch Zeugnis reden“, auf öffentlich Gericht gestellt, da man einen armen unschuldigen Mann verklagt und durch falsche Zeugen unterdrückt, damit er gestraft werde an Leib, Gut oder Ehre.

Das scheint nun jetzt, als gehe es uns wenig an, aber bei den Juden ist's gar ein trefflich, gemein Ding gewesen. Denn das Volk war in seinem, ordentlichem Regiment gefaßt, und wo noch ein solch Regiment ist, da geht's ohne diese Sünde nicht ab. Ursache ist diese: denn wo Richter, Bürgermeister, Fürst oder andere Obrigkeit sitzt, da fehlt es nimmer, es geht nach der Welt Lauf, daß man niemand gerne beleidigen will, heuchelt und redet nach Gunst, Geld, Hoffnung oder Freundschaft; darüber muß ein armer Mann mit seiner Sache verdrißt [unterdrückt werden], unrecht haben und Strafe leiden. Und ist eine gemeine Plage in der Welt, daß im Gericht selten fromme Leute sitzen.

Denn es gehört vor allen andern Dingen ein frommer Mann zu einem Richter und nicht allein ein frommer, sondern auch ein weiser, bescheidener, ja auch ein kühner und fester Mann; also auch gehört ein fester, dazu vornehmlich ein frommer Mann zum Zeugen. Denn wer alle Sachen recht richten und mit dem Urtheil hindurchreichen soll, wird oftmals gute Freunde, Schwäger, Nachbarn, Reiche und Gewaltige erzürnen, die ihm viel dieanimo perplacent et grata sunt, adhaec quae incredibili quadam benedictione remuneratur et amplissime cumulat, ut abunde compensetur nobis, quicquid officii ac humanitatis proximo exhibuerimus. Quemadmodum sapientissimus etiam docet Salomon Prov. 19, 17: Foeneratur Domino, qui miseretur pauperis, et vicissitudinem suam reddet ei. Habes hic 253] opulentum Dominum, qui tibi procul dubio solvendo est, nec patietur ulla te premi aut urgeri penuria, quo adiutore tranquilla conscientia in centuplo plus frui potes, quam cum perfidia aut iniuria proximi corrudere. Iam qui hanc benedictionem nauseabundus fastidit, ille irarum et infortunii abunde inveniet.

Praeceptum VIII.

254] Non loqueris contra proximum tuum falsum testimonium.

255] Praeter corpus proprium, legitimam coniugem et rem familiarem adhuc alius thesaurus nobis superest, nempe nominis et famae aequabilis atque inviolatae praeclarum testimonium, quo nequaquam carere possumus. Neque enim praestat, ut fama parum secunda vivamus inter homines, aperte infamia nota- 256] biles et contempti omnibus. Quocirca Deus proximi famam, nomen et iustitiam nihilo magis vult imminui aut decurtari quam argentum et opes eius patere furto aut depraedationibus, ne quis aut uxoris aut liberorum aut familiae aut etiam vicini laboret 257] infamia. Ac primum quidem crassior huius praecepti sensus, quemadmodum [R. 467] ipsa verba sonant (Non loqueris contra proximum tuum falsum testimonium), ad negotia forensia referendus est, ubi miser aliquis et innocens accusatur falsisque testibus opprimitur, ut luendo poenas aut corporis aut rei aut famae in periculum veniat.

258] Iam hoc perinde apparet, quasi parum ad nos pertineat. Ceterum apud Iudaeos res fuit vehementer usitata et communis, siquidem populus optimis legibus gubernabatur. Et ubi etiam hodie est respublica ad hunc modum instituta, non potest non ei peccato locus esse. Cuius rei haec causa est: Ubi enim pro tribunali iudices, consules, principes aut alii magistratus cognoscendis causis dant operam, hic fieri non potest, quin pro huius mundi usitata consuetudine res agatur; nemo libenter potentiolem laedere sustinet, sed quisque assentatur et loquitur ad gratiam, victus aut nummis aut spe aut amicitia. Unde fit, ut miser aliquis victus et oppressus causa cadere ac poenas pendere cogatur. Estque communis quaedam in mundo clades atque calamitas, quod iudicio perraro praesunt viri boni et integri.

259] Neque enim quivis ei rei invenitur appositus, sed cumprimis necesse est, ut is, qui iudicis functurus est officio, vir sit probus et pius, et non tantum probus, verum etiam prudens sit et perspicax, nec minori audacia et animi fortitudine praeditus. Non secus quoque operae pretium, ut, qui testem acturus est, vir sit fortis ac vitae inculpatae. Qui enim in omnibus causis semper iuste iudicare, in addition are favored and crowned with excellent blessings, that we are to be richly compensated for all that we do for our neighbor's good and from friendship; as King Solomon also teaches Prov. 19, 17: He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He pay him again. Here, then, you have a rich Lord, who is certainly sufficient for you, and who will not suffer you to come short in anything or to want; thus you can with a joyful conscience enjoy a hundred times more than you could scrape together with unfaithfulness and wrong. Now, whoever does not desire the blessing will find wrath and misfortune enough.

The Eighth Commandment.

Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.

Over and above our own body, spouse, and temporal possessions, we have yet another treasure, namely, honor and good report [the illustrious testimony of an upright and unsullied name and reputation], with which we cannot dispense. For it is intolerable to live among men in open shame and general contempt. Therefore God wishes the reputation, good name, and upright character of our neighbor to be taken away or diminished as little as his money and possessions, that every one may stand in his integrity before wife, children, servants, and neighbors. And in the first place, we take the plainest meaning of this commandment according to the words (Thou shalt not bear false witness), as pertaining to the public courts of justice, where a poor innocent man is accused and oppressed by false witnesses in order to be punished in his body, property, or honor.

Now, this appears as if it were of little concern to us at present; but with the Jews it was quite a common and ordinary matter. For the people were organized under an excellent and regular government; and where there is still such a government, instances of this sin will not be wanting. The cause of it is that where judges, burgomasters, princes, or others in authority sit in judgment, things never fail to go according to the course of the world; namely, men do not like to offend anybody, flatter, and speak to gain favor, money, prospects, or friendship; and in consequence a poor man and his cause must be oppressed, denounced as wrong, and suffer punishment. And it is a common calamity in the world that in courts of justice there seldom preside godly men.

For to be a judge requires above all things a godly man, and not only a godly, but also a wise, modest, yea, a brave and bold man; likewise, to be a witness requires a fearless and especially a godly man. For a person who is to judge all matters rightly and carry nen oder schaden können; darum muß er gar blind sein, Augen und Ohren zugetan, nicht sehen noch hören denn stracks vor sich, was ihm vorkommt, und dem nach schließen.

Darum ist nun erstlich dies Gebot gestellt, daß ein jeglicher seinem Nächsten helfe zu seinem Rechten und daselbe nicht hindern noch beugen lasse, sondern fördere und stracks darüber halte, Gott gebe [gleichviel ob] es sei Richter oder Zeuge, und treffe an [betreffe], was es wolle. Und sonderlich ist hiermit unsern Herren Juristen ein Ziel gesetzt, daß sie zusehen, recht und ausgerichtet [aufrichtig] mit den Sachen umgehen, was recht ist, recht bleiben lassen und wiederum nicht verdrehen noch vermanteln oder [ver]schweigen, unangesehen Geld, Gut, Ehre oder Herrschaft. Das ist ein Stück und der größte Verstand dieses Gebots von allem, das vor Gericht geschieht.

Danach greift es gar viel weiter, wenn man's soll ziehen ins geistliche Gericht oder Regiment; da geht's also, daß ein jeglicher wider seinen Nächsten fälschlich zeugt. Denn wo fromme Prediger und Christen sind, die haben vor der Welt das Urtheil, daß sie Reher, abtrünnige, ja aufrührerische und verzweifelte Bösewichte heißen. Dazu muß sich Gottes Wort außs schändlichste und giftigste verfolgen, lästern, lügenstrafen, verlehren und fälschlich ziehen und deuten lassen. Aber das gehe seinen Weg; denn es ist der blinden Welt Art, daß sie die Wahrheit und Gottes Kinder verdammt und verfolgt und doch für keine Sünde achtet.

Zum dritten, so uns allzumal belanget, ist in diesem Gebot verboten alle Sünde der Zunge, dadurch man dem Nächsten mag Schaden tun oder zu nahe sein. Denn falsch Zeugnis reden ist nichts anderes denn Mundwerk. Was man nun mit Mundwerk wider den Nächsten tut, das will Gott gewehrt haben, es seien falsche Prediger mit der Lehre und Lästern, falsche Richter und Zeugen mit dem Urtheil oder sonst außer dem Gericht mit Lügen und Übelreden. Daher gehört sonderlich das leidige, schändliche Vaster: afterreden oder verleumben, damit uns der Teufel reitet, davon viel zu reden wäre. Denn es ist eine gemeine schädliche Plage, daß jedermann lieber Böses denn Gutes von dem Nächsten hört sagen, und wiewohl wir selbst so böse sind, daß wir nicht leiden können, daß uns jemand ein böß Stück nachsage, sondern jeglicher gerne wolle, daß alle Welt Goldenes von ihm redete, doch können wir nicht hören, daß man das Beste von andern sage.

Derhalben sollen wir merken, solche Untugend zu meiden, daß niemand zugelassen [erlaubt] ist, seinen Nächsten öffentlich zu [ver]urtheilen und

neque vim aut iniuriam inferre iustitiae voluerit, ei saepicula amici, affines, cognati, vicini, potentes ac divites laedendi erunt et offendendi, qui multum illi aut obesse aut prodesse queant. Quocirca omnino caecus sit oportet, ut clausis et auribus et oculis nihil audiat aut videat, praeterquam quae illi exponuntur, ut secundum illa ferat sententiam.

260] Primum ergo eo tendit huius praeccepti constitutio, ut quivis proximo in [R. 468] eius iure tuendo ferat suppetias neque obstat, neve alio malitiose torqueat aut torqueri sinat, verum omnibus modis promoveat illique interrite patrocinetur, sive iudicis sive testis personam obtinuerit, quaecunque tandem res 261] in contentionem venerit. Cumprimis vero hoc loco iureperitis meta praefixa est, quo diligenter videant, ut causas forenses iuste tractent atque integre, ut, quod iustum est, iustum esse patiantur, et contra, ne suis imposturis et technis nigra in candida vertant et prava recta faciant, aut verum reticentes tacitum praetereant, nullo respectu pecuniarum, opum, dignitatis atque potentiae habito. Et haec est una pars huius praeccepti et sensus aliquanto crassior de omnibus, quae aguntur in iudicio.

262] Deinde multo latius patet, si in spirituale iudicium aut regimen referatur, ubi ita agitur, ut quivis adversus proximum suum falsum loquatur testimonium. Ubiunque enim gentium probi agunt Christiani et praedicatores, eo iam damnati sunt coram mundo iudicio, ut pro haereticis et apostatis habeantur, imo potius ut seditiosi et perditissimi latrones dicantur et aestimentur. Adhaec Dei quoque Verbum turpissime et virulentissime insectationem patitur, blasphematur, mendacii arguitur, malitiose pervertitur et falso huc et illuc torquetur ac depravatur. Sed haec in praesentia quidem missa faciamus. Ea enim caeci mundi natura est, ut veritatem et filios Dei improbe condemnet et iniuriose insectetur, neque tamen hoc factum peccati loco aestimet.

263] Tertio, quod ad nos omnes pertinet, omne peccatum linguae, quo famam proximi denigrare aut laedere possumus, hoc praeccepto interdictum est. Nam loqui falsum testimonium nihil aliud quam oris et linguae opus est. Iam quaecunque ratione linguae operibus proximus offenditur, hoc Deus prohibet, [R. 469] sive illud fiat per falsos doctores, perversa doctrina et blasphemias, sive per iniquos testes et iudices, falso iudicio, sive extra forum 264] daciis et linguae virulentia. Huicque imprimis pertinet detestabile illud vitium detractionis sive calumniae, quod diabolus penitus nobis insevit et inspiravit, de quo perquam multa verba facienda forent. Est enim haec quaedam pernicioiosa et communis calamitas, ut quivis mala de proximo quam bona audire malit. Et quamquam ipsi tam sumus mali, ut, si quis mali quid de nobis referat, ferre id non possimus, sed quivis optaret, ut nemo non optima et aurea quaeque de se praedicaret, audire tamen non possumus, ut et de aliis optima praedicentur.

Quare ad devitandum hoc vitium discamus 265] nemini videlicet concessum esse proximum suum propalam iudicare et obiurgare, them through with his decision will often offend good friends, relatives, neighbors, and the rich and powerful, who can greatly serve or injure him. Therefore he must be quite blind, have his eyes and ears closed, neither see nor hear, but go straight forward in everything that comes before him, and decide accordingly.

Therefore this commandment is given first of all that every one shall help his neighbor to secure his rights, and not allow them to be hindered or twisted, but shall promote and strictly maintain them, no matter whether he be judge or witness, and let it pertain to whatsoever it will. And especially is a goal set up here for our jurists that they be careful to deal truly and uprightly with every case, allowing right to remain right, and, on the other hand, not perverting anything [by their tricks and technical points turning black into white and making wrong out to be right], nor glossing it over or keeping silent concerning it, irrespective of a person's money, possession, honor, or power. This is one part and the plainest sense of this commandment concerning all that takes place in court.

Next, it extends very much further, if we are to apply it to spiritual jurisdiction or administration; here it is a common occurrence that every one bears false witness against his neighbor. For wherever there are godly preachers and Christians, they must bear the sentence before the world that they are called heretics, apostates, yea, seditious and desperately wicked miscreants. Besides, the Word of God must suffer in the most shameful and malicious manner, being persecuted, blasphemed, contradicted, perverted, and falsely cited and interpreted. But let this pass; for it is the way of the blind world that she condemns and persecutes the truth and the children of God, and yet esteems it no sin.

In the third place, what concerns us all, this commandment forbids all sins of the tongue whereby we may injure or approach too closely to our neighbor. For to bear false witness is nothing else than a work of the tongue. Now, whatever is done with the tongue against a fellow-man God would have prohibited, whether it be false preachers with their doctrine and blasphemy, false judges and witnesses with their verdict, or outside of court by lying and evil-speaking. Here belongs particularly the detestable, shameful vice of speaking behind a person's back and slandering, to which the devil spurs us on, and of which there would be much to be said. For it is a common evil plague that every one prefers hearing evil to hearing good of his neighbor; and although we ourselves are so bad that we cannot suffer that any one should say anything bad about us, but every one would much rather that all the world should speak of him in terms of gold, yet we cannot bear that the best is spoken about others.

Therefore, to avoid this vice we should note that no one is allowed publicly to judge and [zu] strafen, ob er ihn gleich sieht sündigen, er habe denn Befehl zu richten und [zu] strafen. Denn es ist gar ein großer Unterschied zwischen den zweien: Sünde richten und Sünde wissen. Wissen magst du sie wohl, aber richten sollst du sie nicht. Sehen und hören kann ich wohl, daß mein Nächster sündigt, aber gegen andere nachzusagen habe ich keinen Befehl. Wenn ich nun zusähe, richte und urteile, so fälle ich in eine Sünde, die größer ist denn jene. Weißt du es aber, so tue nicht anders, denn mache aus den Ohren ein Grab und scharre es zu, bis daß dir befohlen werde. Richter zu sein und von Amts wegen zu strafen.

Das heißen nun Aferreder, die es nicht bei dem Wissen bleiben lassen, sondern fortfahren und ins Gericht greifen, und wenn sie ein Stücklein von einem andern wissen, tragen sie es in alle Winkel, kigeln und trauen [tragen] sich, daß sie mögen eines andern Unlust rühren wie die Säue, so sich im Kot wälzen und mit dem Rüssel darin wühlen. Das ist nichts anderes, denn Gott in sein Gericht und Amt fallen, urteilen und strafen mit dem schärfsten Urteil. Denn kein Richter höher strafen kann noch weiter fahren, denn daß er jage: Dieser ist ein Dieb, Mörder, Verräter usw. Darum wer sich solches untersteht, dem Nächsten zu sagen, greift ebenso weit als Kaiser und alle Obrigkeit. Denn ob du das Schwert nicht führst, so brauchst du doch deiner giftigen Zunge, dem Nächsten zu Schand' und Schaden.

evomere, ille tantum sibi sumit potestatis, quantum Caesar et omnes magistratus sibi vindicant. Nam quamquam gladii potestatem non usurpes, tua tamen maledica, mordaci et virulenta lingua uteris, qua bacchans in proximum eius famae perpetuas maculas inuris.

Darum will Gott gewehrt haben, daß niemand dem andern übel nachrede, wenn er's gleich schuldig ist, und dieser [es] wohl weiß; viel weniger, so er's nicht weiß und allein vom Hörensagen genommen hat. Sprichst du aber: Soll ich's denn nicht sagen, wenn es die Wahrheit ist? Antwort: Warum trägt du es nicht vor ordentliche Richter? Ja, ich kann's nicht öffentlich bezeugen [mit Zeugen beweisen]; so möchte man mir vielleicht übers Maul fahren und [mich] übel abweisen. Ei, lieber, reuchst du [riechst du] den Braten, traust du nicht [getraust du dich nicht], vor geordneten Personen zu stehen und zu beantworten, so halte auch das Maul; weißt du es aber, so wisse es für dich, nicht für einen andern; denn wo du es weiter sagst, ob es gleich wahr ist, so bestehst du doch wie ein Lügner, weil du es nicht kannst wahr machen, tußt dazu wie ein Bösewicht. Denn man soll niemand seine Ehre und Gerücht nehmen, es sei ihm denn zuvor genommen öffentlich.

Also heißt nun falsch Gezeugnis [Zeugnis] alles, was man nicht, wie sich's gehört, überweisen [beweisen] kann. Darum, was nicht mit genügsamer Beweisung offenbar ist, soll niemand offenbar machen noch für Wahrheit sagen, und Summa: was heimlich ist, soll man heimlich bleiben lassen oder je heimlich strafen, wie wir hören werden.

tametsi eundem peccantem videat, nisi prius iudicandi et puniendi potestatem concreditam 266] acceperit. Multo enim haec duo seuncta sunt discrimine: peccatum iudicare et peccati esse conscium. Nosse quidem potes peccatum, verum tuum non est idem quoque iudicare. Proximum meum peccantem audire et videre possum, verum ut eundem quoque traducam apud alios, sua peccata palam faciendo, in mandatis non habeo. Iudicans ergo alium et condemnans in maius et gravius delictum pro-labor, quam ille erat obnoxius. Itaque si alicuius delicti conscius es, nihil aliud facies, quam ut obstructis ore et auribus sepultum relinquis in pectore, donec iudicis provincia tibi tradita fuerit et officium puniendi commissum.

267] Iam illi dicuntur obtractatores seu quadruplatores, qui non contenti sunt se alienorum delictorum esse conscios, verum iudicandi quoque partes sibi sumunt, atque, ubi quidpiam de alio resciverint, in omnes id diffundunt angulos passim deferentes, [R. 470 semet voluptuose titillantes et perfricantes alterius sordes movendo, quemadmodum lutulenta sus in suo coeno se volutat et rostrum 268] foede immergit. Et hoc nihil aliud est, quam Deo in iudicium et officium eius procaciter irrupere, ac iudicio omnium acerbissimo condemnare atque punire. Neque enim ullus iudex quempiam graviore potest punire supplicio, quam si dixerit: Hic fur est, hic homicida est, proditor est etc. Quare quicumque tantum sibi sumpserit audaciae, ut non vereatur de proximo quidvis petulanter reprove his neighbor, although he may see him sin, unless he have a command to judge and to reprove. For there is a great difference between these two things, judging sin and knowing sin. You may indeed know it, but you are not to judge it. I can indeed see and hear that my neighbor sins, but I have no command to report it to others. Now, if I rush in, judging and passing sentence, I fall into a sin which is greater than his. But if you know it, do nothing else than turn your ears into a grave and cover it, until you are appointed to be judge and to punish by virtue of your office.

269] Eam ob rem Deus prohibet, ne quis alterum maledico dente carpat, aut alteri probrose detrahat, etiamsi reus sit ille, et hic rem probe compertam habeat; multo minus vero, quando rei ipsius ignarus ex aliorum tantum relatu quid accepit. Dices autem:

270] Cur vero reticeam, cum verum esse certus sim? Respondeo: Cur non defers eum ad legitimum iudicem? Sed, inquis, hoc ipsum certo testimonio non possum evincere, unde periculum est, ne falso intentatae calumniae poenas incurram. Hinc illae lacrimae, hoc illud est, quod pertimescis. Quodsi non tantum tibi fides, ut coram ordinatis personis rem transigas atque respondeas, vide, ut os tuum etiam privatim compescas digito. Sin autem conscius es, tibi scias, non alteri. Ubi enim latius sparseris, etsi verum fuerit, non nisi impudenter mendax eris, cum verum id esse evincere nequeas: adhaec sceleratum nebulo-nem et sycophantam agis. Nemo enim per calumniam suo nomine aut fama fraudandus est, nisi ante propalam damnatus iudicis sententia ea dispoliatus est.

271] Proinde falsum loqui testimonium omne illud loqui dicitur, quod aliquem [R. 471 fecisse aperte, et quemadmodum decet, non 272] possumus evincere. Quocirca quidquid sufficienti testimonio nondum satis manifestum est, hoc nemini revelandum est aut pro vero referendum. Et in summa, quidquid occultum

Those, then, are called slanderers who are not content with knowing a thing, but proceed to assume jurisdiction, and when they know a slight offense of another, carry it into every corner, and are delighted and tickled that they can stir up another's displeasure [base-ness], as swine roll themselves in the dirt and root in it with the snout. This is nothing else than meddling with the judgment and office of God, and pronouncing sentence and punishment with the most severe verdict. For no judge can punish to a higher degree nor go farther than to say: "He is a thief, a murderer, a traitor," etc. Therefore, whoever presumes to say the same of his neighbor goes just as far as the emperor and all governments. For although you do not wield the sword, you employ your poisonous tongue to the shame and hurt of your neighbor.

God therefore would have it prohibited, that any one speak evil of another even though he be guilty, and the latter know it right well; much less if he do not know it, and have it only from hearsay. But you say: Shall I not say it if it be the truth? Answer: Why do you not make accusation to regular judges? Ah, I cannot prove it publicly, and hence I might be silenced and turned away in a harsh manner [incur the penalty of a false accusation]. "Ah, indeed, do you smell the roast?" If you do not trust yourself to stand before the proper authorities and to make answer, then hold your tongue. But if you know it, know it for yourself and not for another. For if you tell it to others, although it be true, you will appear as a liar, because you cannot prove it, and you are, besides, acting like a knave. For we ought never to deprive any one of his honor or good name unless it be first taken away from him publicly.

False witness, then, is everything which cannot be properly proved. Therefore, what is not manifest upon sufficient evidence no one shall make public or declare for truth; and, in short, whatever is secret should be allowed to remain secret, or, at any rate, should be ctione diffunderet, eas notas ac maculas inustus, quas aegre aut nunquam possis eluere. Praeclari enim nominis ac integrae famae testimonium cito alicui eripitur, sed semel ereptum non perinde facile recuperatur.

Darum, wo dir ein unnütz Maul vorkommt, daß einen andern austrägt und verleumdet, so rede ihm frisch unter Augen, daß er schamrot werde, so wird mancher das Maul halten, der sonst einen armen Menschen ins Gefängniß bringt, daraus er schwerlich wieder kommen kann. Denn Ehre und Glimpf [guter Name] ist bald genommen, aber nicht bald wieder[ge]geben.

Also siehst du, daß kurzum verboten ist, von dem Nächsten etwas Böses zu reden, doch ausgenommen weltliche Obrigkeit, Prediger, Vater und Mutter, daß man dennoch dies Gebot so verstehe, daß das Böse nicht ungestraft bleibe. Wie man nun laut des fünften Gebots niemand schaden soll am Leibe, doch ausgezogen [besonders ausgenommen] Meister Hansen [den Henter], der seines Amtes halben dem Nächsten kein Gutes, sondern nur Schaden und Böses tut und nicht wider Gottes Gebot sündigt, darum daß Gott solch Amt von seinetwegen geordnet hat; denn er ihm die Strafe seines Gefallens vorbehalten hat, wie er im ersten Gebot bräuet: also auch, wiewohl ein jeglicher für seine Person niemand richten noch verdammen soll, doch, wo es die nicht tun, denen es befohlen ist, sündigen sie ja so wohl, als der's außer dem Amt von sich selbst täte. Denn hier fordert die Not, von dem Übel zu reden, Klagen vor[zu]bringen, [zu] fragen und zeugen, und geht nicht anders zu denn mit einem Arzt, der zuweilen dem, den er heilen soll, an heimliche Orte sehen und greifen muß. Also sind Obrigkeit, Vater und Mutter, ja auch Brüder und Schwestern und sonst gute Freunde untereinander schuldig, wo es not und nütze ist, Böses zu strafen.

Das wäre aber die rechte Weise, wenn man die Ordnung nach dem Evangelio hielte Matth. 18, da Christus spricht: „Sündiget dein Bruder an dir, so gehe hin und strafe ihn zwischen dir und ihm allein.“ Da haßt du eine löbliche, feine Lehre, die Zunge wohl zu regieren, die wohl zu merken ist wider den leidigen Mißbrauch. Danach richte dich nun, daß du nicht so bald den Nächsten anderswo austragest und ihm nachredest, sondern ihn heimlich vermahnest, daß er sich bessere. Desgleichen auch wenn dir ein anderer etwas zu Ohren trägt, was dieser oder jener getan hat, lehre ihn auch also, daß er hingehe und strafe ihn selbst, wo er's gesehen hat; wo nicht, daß er das Maul halte.

Solches magst du auch lernen aus täglichem Hausregiment. Denn so tut der Herr im Haus; wenn er sieht, daß der Knecht nicht tut, was er soll, so spricht er ihm selbst zu. Wenn er aber so toll wäre, ließe den Knecht daheim sitzen und ginge heraus auf die Gassen, den Nachbarn über ihn zu klagen, würde er freilich müssen hören: Du Narr, was geht's uns an? Warum sagst du et arcanum est, hoc in occulto sinendum est, aut occulte, quemadmodum audiemus, redar- 273] guendum. Quare ubicunque in detractorem incideris, alterius dicta ac facta contumeliose deferentem ac petulanter in quempiam debacchantem, audacter huic in os obsiste, ut pudore suffundatur. Ita futurum est, ut crebro quis os suum obstruat, qui alioqui miserum aliquem in ora hominum pestifera detra-

274] Ita vides, in universum interdictum esse mali quidpiam loqui de proximo, exceptis tamen magistratibus, concionatoribus et parentibus, ut hoc praeceptum ita intelligatur, ne vitia impunita maneant. Iam quemadmodum quinto praecepto neminem iubemus laedere, excepto tamen carnifice, qui ex officio nemini commodat, sed irrogatis suppliciiis officit omnibus, neque tamen praeceptum Dei transgreditur, propterea quod Deus huius officii procuracionem sua gratia constituerit; nam poenarum irrogacionem, suae voluntati reservavit, ut in praecepto primo minatur: ita quoque, quamquam nemo, quantum ad propriam personam attinet, alium iudicare neque damnare debeat, tamen ubi hoc non faciunt ii, quibus hoc demandatum est, eequidem ii non minus peccant ob negligentiam quam illi, qui extra officium hoc iniussi faciunt. Hic enim exigit necessitas, ut de vitiiis sermo habeatur, ut accusentur, deferantur in iudicio, perquirantur et testimonio comprobentur. [R. 472 275] Neque secus agitur, quam cum medico, qui nonnunquam aegroti, quem curandum suscepit, loca arcana contueri et contrectare necessitate cogitur. Ita quoque magistratus, parentes, fratres atque sorores, tum qui amici sunt inter se, hoc mutuo obstringuntur officio, ut, ubi utile fuerit ac necessarium, alter alterius vicissim reprehendat vitia.

276] Ceterum haec recta esset ratio obliurgandi vitia, si ordinem praescriptum in evangelio observaremus, ubi Christus inquit Matth. 18, 15: Si peccaverit in te frater tuus, vade et corripue eum inter te et ipsum solum. Vides hic praeclaram doctrinam tibi propositam, qua linguam gubernabis, quae etiam diligenter animadvertenda est contra perniciosum detrahendi abusum et vitium. Ad huius itaque doctrinae amussim tuam vitam institue, ne tam cito proximi tui famam in vulgus efferas, eumque foede ac turpiter traducas, sed occulte corripas ac moneas, ut mutata vita resipiscat. Similiter alium quoque aliquid tibi susurrantem aut deferentem, quid hic aut alter flagitiose designaverit, doce facere, ut eat illumque ipsum corripas, si viderit; sin minus, ut os a detractatione clausum teneat.

277] Hoc etiam discere potes ex quotidiana rei familiaris procuracione. Ita enim agere solet paterfamilias, videns servum suum cessare aut suo non fungentem graviter officio, ipse per se eundem obliurgat et admonet officii. Verum si tam vecors esset et amens animi, ut, relicto domi compressis (quod aliunt) manibus desidente servo, in forum progressus servilem secretly reproved, as we shall hear. Therefore, if you encounter an idle tongue which betrays and slanders some one, contradict such a one promptly to his face, that he may blush; thus many a one will hold his tongue who else would bring some poor man into bad repute, from which he would not easily extricate himself. For honor and a good name are easily taken away, but not easily restored.

Thus you see that it is summarily forbidden to speak any evil of our neighbor, however, the civil government, preachers, father and mother excepted, on the understanding that this commandment does not allow evil to go unpunished. Now, as according to the Fifth Commandment no one is to be injured in body, and yet Master Hannes [the executioner] is excepted, who by virtue of his office does his neighbor no good, but only evil and harm, and nevertheless does not sin against God's commandment, because God has on His own account instituted that office; for He has reserved punishment for His own good pleasure, as He threatens in the First Commandment,—just so also, although no one has a right in his own person to judge and condemn anybody, yet if they to whose office it belongs fail to do it, they sin as well as he who would do so of his own accord, without such office. For here necessity requires one to speak of the evil, to prefer charges, to investigate and testify; and it is not different from the case of a physician who is sometimes compelled to examine and handle the patient whom he is to cure in secret parts. Just so governments, father and mother, brothers and sisters, and other good friends, are under obligation to each other to reprove evil wherever it is needful and profitable.

But the true way in this matter would be to observe the order according to the Gospel, Matt. 18, 15, where Christ says: If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone. Here you have a precious and excellent teaching for governing well the tongue, which is to be carefully observed against this detestable misuse. Let this, then, be your rule, that you do not too readily spread evil concerning your neighbor and slander him to others, but admonish him privately that he may amend [his life]. Likewise, also, if some one report to you what this or that one has done, teach him, too, to go and admonish him personally, if he have seen it himself; but if not, that he hold his tongue.

The same you can learn also from the daily government of the household. For when the master of the house sees that the servant does not do what he ought, he admonishes him personally. But if he were so foolish as to let the servant sit at home, and went on the streets to complain of him to his neighbors, es ihm selbst nicht? Siehe, das wäre nun recht brüderlich gehandelt, daß dem übel geraten würde und dein Nächster bei Ehren bliebe. Wie auch Christus daselbst sagt: „Höret er dich, so hast du deinen Bruder gewonnen.“ Da hast du ein groß, trefflich Werk getan; denn meinst du, daß ein gering Ding sei, einen Bruder gewinnen? Daß alle Mönche und heiligen Orden mit allen ihren Werken zu Hause geschmelzt hervortreten, ob sie den Ruhm können aufbringen, daß sie einen Bruder gewonnen haben.

lucrifacere? Sine vero omnes monachos ac sacros ordines ad unum in unam massam conflatos prodire, num tantam sibi laudem vindicare possint, se suis operibus vel unum lucratos esse fraterculum.

Weiter lehrt Christus: „Will er dich aber nicht hören, so nimm noch einen oder zweien zu dir, auf daß alle Sache bestehe auf zweier oder dreier Zeugen Mund“, also daß man je mit dem selbst handle, den es belangt, und nicht hinter seinem Wissen ihm nachrede. Will aber solches nicht helfen, so trage es dann öffentlich vor die Gemeinde, es sei vor weltlichem oder geistlichem Gericht. Denn hier steht du nicht allein, sondern hast jene Zeugen mit dir, durch welche du den Schuldigen überweisen kannst, darauf der Richter gründen, urteilen und strafen kann. So kann man ordentlich und recht dazu kommen, daß man dem Bösen wehrt oder bessert; sonst, wenn man einen andern mit dem Maul umträgt durch alle Winkel und den Unflat rührt, wird niemand gebessert, und danach, wenn man stehen und zeugen soll, will man's nicht gesagt haben. Darum geschähe solchen Mäulern recht, daß man ihnen den Kegel wohl blühte [die Lust zum Verleumben entgelten ließe und so austriebe], daß sich andere daran stießen. Wenn du es deinem Nächsten zur Besserung oder aus Liebe der Wahrheit täteist, würdest du nicht heimlich schleichen noch den Tag und Licht scheuen.

luentes omnem maledicendi et obrectandi voluntatem amitterent, ut alii inde exemplum sumen-283 tes linguae virulentiam dediscerent. Si haec fierent a te in rem proximi, aut veritatis amore faceres, clandestinis ac furtivis calumniis rem non ageres, neque diem et solem lucifugae instar vitares.

Daß alles ist nun von heimlichen Sünden gesagt. Wo aber die Sünde ganz öffentlich ist, daß Richter und jedermann wohl weiß, so kannst du ihn ohne alle Sünde meiden und fahren lassen, als der sich selbst zuschanden gemacht hat, dazu auch öffentlich von ihm zeugen. Denn was offenbar am Tage ist, da kann kein Aferreden noch falsch Richter oder Zeugen sein; als, daß wir jetzt den Papst mit seiner Lehre strafen, so öffentlich in Büchern an [den] Tag gegeben und in aller Welt ausgeschrien ist. Denn wo die Sünde öffentlich ist, soll auch billig öffentliche Strafe folgen, daß sich jedermann davor wisse zu hüten.

Also haben wir nun die Summa und gemeinen Verstand von diesem Gebot, daß niemand seinem Nächsten, beide Freund und Feind, mit der Zunge schädlich sein noch Böses von ihm reden soll, Gott gebe, es sei wahr oder erlogen, so es nicht aus Befehl oder zur Besserung geschieht; sondern seine Zunge brauchen und dienen lassen, von jedermann das Beste zu reden, des Nächsten Sünde und Ge-socordiam vicinis conquereretur, haud dubie ab iisdem audire cogeretur: Quid vero hoc nostra interest, o caput multis modis ridicu-278 lum? Cur illi ipsi ista non exprobras? Ecce, ad hunc quidem modum fraterne ageres, ut emendarent [emendarentur] vitia, et proximi tui fama maneret salva atque integra. Sicut etiam Christus ipse eodem loco testatur, inquit: Si te audierit, animam fratris tui lucratus es. Ita quidem magni ac [R. 473] memorabilis operis auctor exstitisses. Aut tu forte rem leviculum esse existimas fratrem

279 Eodem loco Christus docet ulterius: Si autem te non audierit, adiunge tibi adhuc unum vel duos, ut in ore duorum vel trium
testium stet omne verbum, ita ut semper res ipsa cum eo transigatur, cuius maxime interest, ne quid prorsus absenti maledice detra-280 hatur. Porro, si haec omnia ad emendandum fratrem parum erunt valida aut efficacia, defer haec omnia propalam iudicanda ecclesiae sive spiritualibus sive secularibus magistratibus. Neque enim hic solus causam agis, sed habes duos illos testes tibi coniunctos, accusationem tuam comprobantes, cui innixus iudex intrepide iudicare et poenam irrogare potest. Ac tum quidem legitimo iure ac ordine eo perveniri potest, ut malorum improbitas aut coerceretur aut in melius emen-
281 detur. Alioqui quando alius passim detractionibus infamatus passim per omnes urbis angulos traducitur, tantumque sordes commoventur, nemo emendatur, ac deinceps, ubi res comprobanda erit testimonio, quisque
282 a se dictum esse pernegat. Quapropter rectissime cum hisce detractoribus ageretur, ut gravissimas intemperantis linguae poenas

284 Haec omnia hactenus de occultis peccatis dicta sunt. Ceterum ubi peccatum plane manifestum est, ut neque iudici neque [R. 474] cuiquam obscurum sit, tunc sine omni peccato illius commercium vitare eumque missum facere potes, ut eum, qui se ultro exposuerit dedecori. Ubi enim res manifeste liquet omnibus, ibi neque obrectationi neque falso iudicio neque improbis testibus locus relinquitur; veluti quum hodie Romanum pontificem tamquam antichristum falsae doctrinae coarguimus, quam editis in lucem libris passim divulgavit et per totum orbem infinitarum animarum exitio proclamata disseminavit. Ubi enim peccatum manifestum est, ibi non iniuria et poena manifesta illud consequitur, ut quis exemplis monitus illud cavere possit.

285 Ita iam huius praeepti summam et communem intellectum paucis explicatum habemus, ne quis suo proximo, aequae amico atque inimico, linguae maledica petulantia noceat, neve male de eo loquatur, sive verum illud sive fictum, cum neque ex mandato id faciat, neque in usum aut aedificationem proximi; sed ita sua lingua utatur, ut eius

he would no doubt be told: "You fool, what does that concern us? Why do you not tell it to him?" Behold, that would be acting quite brotherly, so that the evil would be stayed, and your neighbor would retain his honor. As Christ also says in the same place: If he hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. Then you have done a great and excellent work; for do you think it is a little matter to gain a brother? Let all monks and holy orders step forth, with all their works melted together into one mass, and see if they can boast that they have gained a brother.

Further, Christ teaches: But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. So he whom it concerns is always to be treated with personally, and not to be spoken of without his knowledge. But if that do not avail, then bring it publicly before the community, whether before the civil or the ecclesiastical tribunal. For then you do not stand alone, but you have those witnesses with you by whom you can convict the guilty one, relying on whom the judge can pronounce sentence and punish. This is the right and regular course for checking and reforming a wicked person. But if we gossip about another in all corners, and stir the filth, no one will be reformed, and afterwards when we are to stand up and bear witness, we deny having said so. Therefore it would serve such tongues right if their itch for slander were severely punished, as a warning to others. If you were acting for your neighbor's reformation or from love of the truth, you would not sneak about secretly nor shun the day and the light.

All this has been said regarding secret sins. But where the sin is quite public so that the judge and everybody know it, you can without any sin avoid him and let him go, because he has brought himself into disgrace, and you may also publicly testify concerning him. For when a matter is public in the light of day, there can be no slandering or false judging or testifying; as, when we now reprove the Pope with his doctrine, which is publicly set forth in books and proclaimed in all the world. For where the sin is public, the reproof also must be public, that every one may learn to guard against it.

Thus we have now the sum and general understanding of this commandment, to wit, that no one do any injury with the tongue to his neighbor, whether friend or foe, nor speak evil of him, no matter whether it be true or false, unless it be done by commandment or for his reformation, but that every brechen zudeken, entschuldigen und mit seiner Ehre beschöner [beschönigen] und schmücken. Ursache soll sein allermeist diese, so Christus im Evangelio angeucht [angiehet] und damit alle Gebote gegen den Nächsten will gesagt haben: „Alles, was ihr wollet, daß euch die Leute tun sollen, das tut ihr ihnen auch.“

Auch lehrt solches die Natur an unserm eigenen Leibe, wie St. Paulus 1 Cor. 12 sagt: „Die Glieder des Leibes, so uns dünken die schwächsten sein, sind die nötigsten, und die uns dünken die unschwerlichsten sein, denselbigen legen wir am meisten Ehre an, und die uns übel ansehn, die schmückt man am meisten.“ Das Angesicht, Augen, Nase und Mund deckt niemand zu, denn sie [bedürfen's nicht, als an ihm selbst die ehrlichsten Glieder, so wir haben; aber die allergebrechlichsten, deren wir uns schämen, deckt man mit allem Fleiß; da muß Hände, Augen samt dem ganzen Leibe helfen bedecken und verhüllen. Also sollen auch wir alle untereinander, was an unserm Nächsten unehrlich und gebrechlich ist, schmücken und mit allem, so wir vermögen, zu seinen Ehren dienen, helfen und förderlich sein; und wiederum wehren, was ihm mag zu Unehren [ge]reichen. Und ist sonderlich eine feine, edle Tugend, wer alles, was er vom Nächsten hört reden (so nicht öffentlich böse ist), wohl auslegen und aufs beste deuten oder je zutun halten kann wider die giftigen Mäuler, die sich fleißen [beseßigen], wo sie etwas ergröbeln [aus]spionieren] und erschöpfen können, am Nächsten zu tabeln, und aufs ärgste auslegen [auslegen] und verkehren, wie jezt vornehmlich dem lieben Gotteswort und seinen Predigern geschieht.

linguas venenatas atque pestiferas, quibus unice studio est, ut, si quid expiscentur et arripiant, quod in proximo reprehendere queant, illud pessime interpretentur aut malitiose pervertant, quemadmodum iam omnium maximo Dei Verbo eiusque doctoribus solet contingere.

Darum sind in diesem Gebot gar mächtig viel gute Werke gesagt, die Gott aufs höchste wohlgefallen und überflüssig Gut und Segen mit sich bringen, wenn sie nur die blinde Welt und falschen Heiligen erkennen wollten. Denn es ist nichts an [am] und im ganzen Menschen, das mehr und weiter beide Gutes schaffen und Schaden tun kann in geistlichen und weltlichen Sachen denn die Zunge, so doch das kleinste und schwächste Glied ist.

Das neunte und zehnte Gebot.

Du sollst nicht begehren deines Nächsten Haus. Du sollst nicht begehren seines Weibes [sein Weib], Knecht, Magd, Vieh, oder was sein ist.

Diese zwei Gebote sind fast den Juden sonderlich gegeben, inwieviel sie uns dennoch auch zum Teil betreffen. Denn sie legen sie nicht aus von Unkeuschheit noch Diebstahl, weil davon drohen genug verboten ist, hielten's auch dafür, sie hätten jene alle gehalten, wenn sie äußerlich die Werke getan oder nicht getan hätten. Darum hat Gott patrocinium prosit ac serviat aequè omnibus, de universis ac item singulis honorificam mentionem faciendo, ut illorum peccata atque defectus officiose contegat, amice excuset atque 288] ipsius honore amanter exornet. Ad quod hac potissimum causa provocandi essemus, quam Christus ipse indicat in evangelio, quaque quodam quasi compendio omnia praecepta erga proximum observanda comprehensa voluit, inquit [Matth. 7, 12]: Quidquid volueritis, ut faciant vobis homines, hoc etiam facite illis.

287] Quin etiam natura ipsa in proprio quemque corpore hoc docet, quemadmodum Paulus 1 Cor. 12, 22 sq. inquit: Membra corporis, quae videntur infirmiora esse, necessaria sunt, et quae putamus ignobiliora esse membra corporis, his honorem abundantiorum circumdamus, et quae inhonesta sunt nostra, abundantiorum honestatem habent. Faciem, oculos, nares, os nemo contegit, neque [R. 475 enim egent, ut velentur, ut quae per se membra sunt honestissima omnium, quae habemus. Ceterum infirmissima quaeque, quorum nos pudet, si conspicerentur, illa omni studio conteguntur, atque hic quidem manus, oculi una cum universo corpore in hisce tegendis et 288] velandis occupati sunt. Non secus nobis quoque inter nos faciendum est, ut, quidquid in proximo nostro parum fuerit honorificum et infirmum, hoc accurate exornemus ac omnibus viribus eius honori tuendo serviamus, opitulemur, eius famam ampliore faciamus et contra, quidquid illi possit aut ignominiae aut dedecori esse, studiosè propulsemus. Est- 289] que praecipue haec praeclara virtus et illustris, qui omnia, quaecumque de proximo dicta audierit (si non manifesta fuerint flagitia), in optimam partem interpretari noverit, aut aequi bonique consulere, contra 290] Sunt itaque in hoc praecepto valde multa bona opera, quae et Deo summe placent et abunde multum benedictionis et bonorum secum apportant, si modo ea perdita huius mundi caecitas et falsi illi sanctuli agnoscere 291] vellent. Neque enim quidquam est in toto homine, quod longe lateque perinde plus bonorum, ac itidem plus malorum, aequè cum in spiritualibus tum in mundanis negotiis operari potest, atque lingua, quamquam omnium membrorum et minimum sit et invalidissimum.

Praeceptum IX. et X.

292] Non concupisces domum proximi tui. Nec desiderabis uxorem eius, non servum, non ancillam, non bovem, non asinum nec [R. 476 omnia, quae illius sunt.

293] Haec duo posteriora praecepta Iudaeis peculiariter data sunt, quamquam ad nos quoque nonnulla ex parte pertineant. Neque enim de prava carnis libidine aut furto illa interpretantur aut intelligunt, quae supra abunde interdicta sunt. Putabant quoque alia omnia sancte se servasse, si externe fecissent one employ his tongue and make it serve for the best of every one else, to cover up his neighbor's sins and infirmities, excuse them, palliate and garnish them with his own reputation. The chief reason for this should be the one which Christ alleges in the Gospel, in which He comprehends all commandments respecting our neighbor, Matt. 7, 12: Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.

Even nature teaches the same thing in our own bodies, as St. Paul says, 1 Cor. 12, 22: Much more, those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary; and those members of the body which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness. No one covers his face, eyes, nose, and mouth, for they, being in themselves the most honorable members which we have, do not require it. But the most infirm members, of which we are ashamed, we cover with all diligence; hands, eyes, and the whole body must help to cover and conceal them. Thus also among ourselves should we adorn whatever blemishes and infirmities we find in our neighbor, and serve and help him to promote his honor to the best of our ability, and, on the other hand, prevent whatever may be discreditable to him. And it is especially an excellent and noble virtue for one always to explain advantageously and put the best construction upon all he may hear of his neighbor (if it be not notoriously evil), or at any rate to condone it over and against the poisonous tongues that are busy wherever they can pry out and discover something to blame in a neighbor, and that explain and pervert it in the worst way; as is done now especially with the precious Word of God and its preachers.

There are comprehended therefore in this commandment quite a multitude of good works which please God most highly, and bring abundant good and blessing, if only the blind world and the false saints would recognize them. For there is nothing on or in entire man which can do both greater and more extensive good or harm in spiritual and in temporal matters than the tongue, though it is the least and feeblest member.

The Ninth and Tenth Commandments.

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man-servant, nor his maid-servant, nor his cattle, nor anything that is his.

These two commandments are given quite exclusively to the Jews; nevertheless, in part they also concern us. For they do not interpret them as referring to unchastity or theft, because these are sufficiently forbidden above. They also thought that they had kept all those when they had done or not done the diese zwei hinzugesetzt, daß man's auch halte für Sünde und verboten, des Nächsten Weib oder Gut [zu] begehren und einerlei Weise [auf irgendeine Weise] danach zu stehen, und sonderlich darum, weil in dem jüdischen Regiment Knechte und Mägde nicht, wie jetzt, frei waren, um Lohn zu dienen, wie lang sie wollten, sondern des Herrn eignen mit Weib, und was sie hatten, wie das Vieh und ander Gut; dazu auch ein jeglicher über sein Weib die Macht hatte, sie durch einen Scheidebrief öffentlich von sich zu lassen und eine andere zu nehmen. Da mußten sie nun untereinander die Fähr stehen [auf die Gefahr gefaßt sein], wenn jemand eines andern Weib gerne gehabt hätte, daß er irgendeine Ursache nehme, beide sein Weib von sich zu tun und dem andern seines auch zu entfremden, daß er's mit gutem Fug [Recht] zu sich brächte. Das war nun bei ihnen keine Sünde noch Schande, so wenig als jetzt mit dem Gefinde, wenn ein Hausherr seinem Knecht oder Magd Urlaub gibt oder einer dem andern sonst abdringt.

Darum haben sie nun (sage ich) diese Gebote also gedeutet, wie es auch recht ist (wiewohl es auch etwas weiter und höher geht), daß niemand dem andern das Seine, als Weib, Gefinde, Haus und Hof, Ader, Wiesen, Vieh, denke und vornehme, an sich zu bringen, auch mit gutem Schein und Behelf, doch mit des Nächsten Schaden. Denn droben im siebenten Gebot ist die Untugend verboten, da man fremdes Gut zu sich reißt oder dem Nächsten vorhält [vorenthält], dazu man kein Recht haben kann. Hier aber ist auch gewehrt, dem Nächsten nichts abzuspannen [abspenstig zu machen, abzuladen], ob man gleich mit Ehren vor der Welt dazu kommen kann, daß dich niemand zeigen noch tadeln darf, als habest du es mit Unrecht erobert.

Denn die Natur so geschickt [geartet] ist, daß niemand dem andern so viel als ihm selbst gönnt, und ein jeglicher, soviel er immer kann, zu sich bringt, ein anderer bleibe, wo er kann. Und wollen noch dazu fromm sein, können uns aufs feinste schmüden und den Schall bergen, suchen und dichten so behende Fündlin [Kniffe] und schwinde [listige] Griffe (wie man jetzt täglich aufs beste erdenkt), als aus den Rechten gezogen, dürfen uns darauf ledlich berufen und trogen und wollen solches nicht Schalkheit, sondern Geschicklichkeit [Geschicktheit] und Vorsichtigkeit genannt haben. Dazu helfen auch Juristen und Rechtssprecher, so das Recht lenken und dehnen, wie es zur Sache helfen will, die Worte zucken und zu Behelf nehmen, unangesehen Billigkeit und des Nächsten Nothdurft. Und Summa, wer in solchen Sachen der geschickteste und geschickteste ist, dem hilft das Recht am besten, wie sie auch sprechen: Vigilantibus iura subveniunt.

cerpentes, posthabita et aequitate et proximi necessitate. Atque ut in summa dicam, qui hac in re omnium fuerit ingeniosissimus et exercitissimus, huic iura omnium fortissime suffragantur, ut et inquit ipsi: Vigilantibus iura subveniunt.

Darum ist dies letzte Gebot nicht für die bösen Buben vor der Welt, sondern eben für die Frömmsten gestellt, die da wollen gelobt sein, redaut non fecissent opera. Eam ob rem Deus haec duo aliis praeceptis adiecit, ut haec quoque pro peccatis aestimentur: uxorem aut rem proximi concupiscere aut aliquo pacto 294] pro ea potiunda conari. Et hoc eam ob causam potissimum, cum in Iudaismo servi et ancillae non, ut nunc, erant liberi, ut huic aut illi mercede conducti pro suo arbitratu, quamdiu libuisset, serviissent; sed domino erant proprie mancipati, una cum corpore et rebus omnibus, quemadmodum pecora et re- 295] liqua substantia. Adhaec ea quoque potestas in uxorem suam cuique erat libera, ut illam dato libello repudiū a se posset dimittere ac aliam ducere. Iam in hoc vicissim inter se periclitabantur, ne quis alterius uxoris cupidus, sumpta alicubi occasione, et suae repudium renuntiaret et alteri suam ereptam ipse aliquo modo et praetextu ficto consequeretur. Iam hoc apud Iudaeos non habebatur dedecorosum, multo minus, quam quod apud nos iam cum mancipiis agitur, quando paterfamilias servum aut ancillam e servitio repudiat aut alius alium alio quovis modo suis ministris privat.

296] Proinde haec praecepta ita, inquam, interpretati sunt, et recte quidem (tametsi et latius aliquanto pateant), ne quis cogitaret vel in animum induceret rem alterius, nempe uxorem, familiam, domum, agros, prata, pecora, sibi vindicare, etiamsi ea res cum aliquo honestatis praetextu fieri possit, neque [R. 477] tamen citra damnum proximi. Supra enim praecepto septimo illud interdictum est vitium, quo aliena bona alteri eripiuntur et per vim possidentur, id quod nullo iure fieri potest. Hic vero ea quoque animi pravitas et versutia interdicta est, ne quid proximo persuasionem aliqua et manibus auferamus, etiamsi coram mundo illud honeste fieri possit, ne quis exprobrare tibi queat, te per vim et iniuriam id esse consecutum.

297] Ita enim natura comparatum est, ut nemo tantum faveat alteri quantum sibi, et quisque, quantum potest, tantum ad se per fas atque nefas rapiat, non valde sollicitus, quid 298] relinquatur alteri. Adhaec probi etiam haberi volumus, eamque animi versutiam atque improbitatem pulcherrime ornare atque tegere novimus, diu noctuque tam ingeniosas technas atque imposturas inquirimus atque fingimus (quemadmodum quotidie iam acutissime excogitantur et inveniuntur), quasi e iure ac legibus petitas. Neque veremur, iis freti decipulis e iure falso citatis, ferociter et superbe omnibus obistere, neque improbitatem aut nequitiam hanc, sed industriam ac 299] providentiam nominari volumus. His omnibus suffragantur et opitulantur quoque iuris periti atque legum doctores, qui, si qua spes improbi nummi affulserit, ius per vim torquent ac trahunt, prout causae servire posse videtur, verba in commodum suum ex-

300] Quare postremum hoc praeceptum non improbis in mundo nebulonibus conditum est, sed iis, qui volunt esse vita inculpatisima, external act. Therefore God has added these two commandments in order that it be esteemed as sin and forbidden to desire or in any way to aim at getting our neighbor's wife or possessions; and especially because under the Jewish government man-servants and maid-servants were not free as now to serve for wages as long as they pleased, but were their master's property with their body and all they had, as cattle and other possessions. Moreover, every man had power over his wife to put her away publicly by giving her a bill of divorce, and to take another. Therefore they were in constant danger among each other that if one took a fancy to another's wife, he might allege any reason both to dismiss his own wife and to estrange the other's wife from him, that he might obtain her under pretext of right. That was not considered a sin nor disgrace with them; as little as now with hired help, when a proprietor dismisses his man-servant or maid-servant, or takes another's servants from him in any way.

Therefore (I say) they thus interpreted these commandments, and that rightly (although their scope reaches somewhat farther and higher), that no one think or purpose to obtain what belongs to another, such as his wife, servants, house and estate, land, meadows, cattle, even with a show of right or by a subterfuge, yet with injury to his neighbor. For above, in the Seventh Commandment, the vice is forbidden where one wrests to himself the possessions of others, or withholds them from his neighbor, which he cannot do by right. But here it is also forbidden to alienate anything from your neighbor, even though you could do so with honor in the eyes of the world, so that no one could accuse or blame you as though you had obtained it wrongfully.

For we are so inclined by nature that no one desires to see another have as much as himself, and each one acquires as much as he can; the other may fare as best he can. And yet we pretend to be godly, know how to adorn ourselves most finely and conceal our rascality, resort to and invent adroit devices and deceitful artifices (such as now are daily most ingeniously contrived) as though they were derived from the law codes; yea, we even dare impertinently to refer to it, and boast of it, and will not have it called rascality, but shrewdness and caution. In this lawyers and jurists assist, who twist and stretch the law to suit it to their cause, stress words and use them for a subterfuge, irrespective of equity or their neighbor's necessity. And, in short, whoever is the most expert and cunning in these affairs finds most help in law, as they themselves say: Vigilantibus iura subveniunt [that is, The laws favor the watchful].

This last commandment therefore is given not for rogues in the eyes of the world, but just for the most pious, who wish to be praised liche und aufrichtige Leute heißen, als die wider die vorigen Gebote nichts verschulden, wie vornehmlich die Zuben sein wollten und noch viel große Junker, Herren und Fürsten. Denn der andere gemeine Haufe gehört noch weit herunter in das siebente Gebot, als die nicht viel danach fragen, wie sie das Ihre mit Ehren und Recht gewinnen.

So begibt sich nun solches am meisten in den Händeln, so auf Recht gestellt werden, dadurch man vornimmt, dem Nächsten etwas abzugewinnen und ihn von dem Seinen abzuschnüpfen [wegzustoßen]. Als (daß wir Exempel geben) wenn man habert und handelt um groß Erbsfall, liegende Güter usw., da führt man herzu und nimmt zu Hilfe, was einen Schein des Rechts haben will, muß und schmückt's also hervor, daß das Recht diesem zufallen muß, und behält das Gut mit solchem Titel, daß niemand keine Klage noch Anspruch dazu hat. Item, wenn jemand gern ein Schloß, Stadt, Grafschaft oder sonst etwas Großes hätte und treibt so viel Finanzerei [Betrug, Ränke] durch Freundschaft und womit er kann, daß es einem andern ab- und ihm zugesprochen wird, dazu mit Brief und Siegel bekätigt, daß [es] mit fürstlichem Titel und redlich gewonnen heiße.

Desgleichen auch in gemeinen Rauffhändeln, wo einer dem andern etwas behendiglich aus der Hand rückt, daß jener muß hinnach sehen, oder ihn überlist und betrugt [betrügt], woran er seinen Vortheil und Genieß ersieht, daß jener vielleicht aus Not oder Schuld nicht erhalten noch ohne Schaden lösen kann, auf daß er's halb oder mehr gefunden habe, und muß gleichwohl nicht mit Unrecht genommen oder entwendet, sondern redlich gekauft sein. Da heißt's: Der erste, der beste, und: Jeglicher sehe auf seine Schanz [Gelegenheit, Vortheil]; ein anderer habe, was er kann! Und wer wollte so klug sein, alles zu erdenken, wieviel man mit solchem hübschen Schein kann zu sich bringen? Daß die Welt für kein Unrecht hält und nicht sehen will, daß damit der Nächste einhinderbracht [zurückgebracht, benachtheiligt] wird und lassen muß, daß er nicht ohne Schaden entbehren kann, so doch niemand ist, der ihm [sich] solches wollte getan haben; daran wohl zu spüren ist, daß solcher Behelf und Schein falsch ist.

Quod tamen mundi iudicio ut inique actum aut inonestum non existimatur, neque legibus vindicatur; sed neque videt quisquam ita proximum opprimi eidemque eripi, quo citra singulare dispendium carere non potest; cum tamen ab alio fieri velit aut aequo animo sustineat, ut mala esse et improba.

Also ist's nun vorgehen auch mit den Weibern zu[ge]gangen; da konnten [konnten, kannten] sie solche Fündlein [klug erfundenen Kniffe], wenn einem eine andere gefiel, daß er durch sich oder andere (wie denn mancherlei Mittel und Wege zu erdenken waren) zurichtete, daß ihr Mann einen Unwillen auf sie warf, oder sie sich gegen ihn sperrte und so stellte, daß er sie mußte von sich tun und diesem lassen. Solches hat ohne Zweifel stark regiert im Gesehe [im alten Testament], wie man auch im Evangelio liest von dem qui laudari cupiunt et videri longe omnium optimi et integerrimi, ut qui adversus priora praecepta nihil prorsus deliquerint. Quales praecipue Iudaei esse contendebant, et [R. 478] nunc multi adhuc magni procures, nobiles et principes. Etenim alia illa communis turba et fex popularis ad locum multo inferiorem, nempe praeceptum septimum, releganda est, ut cui non nimium curae est, qua laude aut integritate sua bona sibi paraverit.

301] Iam haec potissimum in his negotiis usu venire solent, quae in contentionem forensam perducta sunt, quibus decretum est proximo a nonnulla parte bonorum excusso aliquid eripere. Veluti exempli gratia, cum de pingui atque opulenta aliqua hereditate contentio est, aut si quando aliae res magnae in medium vocantur. Hic quisque ad tuendam suae causae aequitatem adducit, quidquid uspiam vel speciem iusti obtinet, quod tanto verborum apparatu exornat, ut illi ius suffragari cogatur, eoque titulo erepta bona retinet, ut nemo posthac iis de rebus cum eo pedem 302] (quod aiunt) conferre audeat. Praeterea si quis aut arci aut civitati aut comitatu aut alioqui rei magnae adiecit oculum, ac tantum largitionibus vel per amicos vel quavis ratione alia efficere potest, ut alio inde pulso sibi adiudicaretur possessio, eademque ad haec litteris et sigillis confirmetur, ut titulo principali et honeste acquisita esse dicatur.

303] Similiter quoque in vulgaribus illis et publicis commerciis et contractibus, ubi alter alteri e manibus aliquid prompta quadam astutia eripit, ut alteri illi tamquam lupohianti discedendum sit, aut alioqui alterum iniqua contractione urget et obruit, nonnulla spe lucri aut emolumenti ad se redituri conspecta, quam alter ille aut pressus necessitate aut aeris alieni magnitudine victus sine dispendio obtinere aut assequi non potest, ut dimidium aut etiam amplius dimidio invenerit et lucrificerit. Neque tamen hoc inique partum aut vi ereptum, verum iustus contractus dicendus est. Hoc non est aliud, quam [R. 479] quod dicitur: Potior est, qui prior ad dandum est. Et quisque sui emolumenti rationem habeat, foroque utatur, non admodum sollicitus, quibus honesta quadam specie aliquid insidiosae eripientes alteri nobis vindicamus?

304] tus, quid proximus habeat. Et quis velit esse tam solers ac perspicax, ut omnes defraudandi ac imponendi rationes ac vias excogitaret, quibus honesta quadam specie aliquid insidiosae eripientes alteri nobis vindicamus?

305] Ad hunc quoque modum apud antiquos agebatur in re uxoria, ubi tales technas comminiscabantur, adlubescente et aridente alicuius oculis alterius coniuge, ut per se aut alios (velut multiplices erant harum fraudum struendarum viae) tantum efficere, ut maritus cum uxore simulatam suscipere, aut illa marito adversaretur neque in omnibus eius voluntati esset morigera, ita ut repudiatam cogeretur a sese dimittere ac alteri concedere. Hic abducendarum uxorum mos haud dubie and be called honest and upright people, since they have not offended against the former commandments, as especially the Jews claimed to be, and even now many great noblemen, gentlemen, and princes. For the other common masses belong yet farther down, under the Seventh Commandment, as those who are not much concerned whether they acquire their possessions with honor and right.

Now, this occurs most frequently in cases that are brought into court, where it is the purpose to get something from our neighbor and to force him out of his own. As (to give examples), when people quarrel and wrangle about a large inheritance, real estate, etc., they avail themselves of, and resort to, whatever has the appearance of right, so dressing and adorning everything that the law must favor their side, and they keep the property with such title that no one can make complaint or lay claim thereto. In like manner, if any one desire to have a castle, city, duchy, or any other great thing, he practises so much financiering through relationships, and by any means he can, that the other is judicially deprived of it, and it is adjudicated to him, and confirmed with deed and seal and declared to have been acquired by princely title and honestly.

Likewise also in common trade where one dexterously slips something out of another's hand, so that he must look after it, or surprises and defrauds him in a matter in which he sees advantage and benefit for himself, so that the latter, perhaps on account of distress or debt, cannot regain or redeem it without injury, and the former gains the half or even more; and yet this must not be considered as acquired by fraud or stolen, but honestly bought. Here they say: First come, first served, and every one must look to his own interest, let another get what he can. And who can be so smart as to think of all the ways in which one can get many things into his possession by such specious pretexts? This the world does not consider wrong [nor is it punished by laws], and will not see that the neighbor is thereby placed at a disadvantage, and must sacrifice what he cannot spare without injury. Yet there is no one who wishes this to be done to him; from which we can easily perceive that such devices and pretexts are false.

Thus it was done formerly also with respect to wives: they knew such devices that if one were pleased with another woman, he personally or through others (as there were many ways and means to be invented) caused her husband to conceive a displeasure toward her, or had her resist him and so conduct herself that he was obliged to dismiss her and leave her to the other. That sort of thing undoubtedly prevailed much under the Law, as Könige Herodes, daß er seines eigenen Bruders Weib noch bei seinem Leben freite, welcher doch ein ehrbarer, frommer Mann sein wollte, wie ihm auch St. Markus Zeugnis gibt. Aber solch Exempel, hoffe ich, soll bei uns nicht statthaben, weil im neuen Testament den Eheleichen verboten ist, sich voneinander zu scheiden, es wäre denn in solchem Fall, daß einer dem andern eine reiche Braut mit Behendigkeit entrißte. Das ist aber bei uns nicht seltsam [selten], daß einer dem andern seinen Knecht oder Dienstmagd abspannt [abspenktig, abwendig macht] und entfremdet oder sonst mit guten Worten abdringt.

Es geschehe nun solches alles, wie es wolle, so sollen wir wissen, daß Gott nicht haben will, daß du dem Nächsten etwas, das ihm gehört, also entziehst, daß er's entbehre und du deinen Geiz füllst, ob du es gleich mit Ehren vor der Welt behalten kannst; denn es ist eine heimliche, meuchlinge Schalkheit und, wie man spricht, unter dem Hütlein gespielt, daß man's nicht merken soll. Denn ob du gleich hingehst, als habest du niemand unrecht getan, so bist du doch deinem Nächsten zu nahe [getreten], und heißt es nicht gekohlen noch betrogen, so heißt es dennoch des Nächsten Guts begehrt, das ist, danach gestanden und ihm abwendig gemacht ohne seinen Willen, und nicht wollen gönnen, das ihm Gott beschied hat. Und ob dir's der Richter und jedermann lassen muß, so wird dir's doch Gott nicht lassen; denn er sieht das Schalksgerz und der Welt Tüde wohl, welche, wo man ihr einen Finger breit einräumt, nimmt sie eine Elle lang dazu, und auch öffentlich Unrecht und Gewalt folgt.

Also lassen wir diese Gebote bleiben in dem gemeinen Verstand, daß erstlich geboten sei, daß man des Nächsten Schaden nicht begehre, auch nicht dazu helfe noch Ursache gehe, sondern ihm gönne und lasse, was er hat, dazu fördere und erhalte, was ihm zu Nutz und Dienst geschehen mag, wie wir wollten uns getan haben, also daß es sonderlich wider die Abgunst und den leidigen Geiz gestellt sei, auf daß Gott die Ursache und Wurzel aus dem Wege räume, daher alles entspringt, dadurch man dem Nächsten Schaden tut, darum er's auch deutlich mit den Worten seht: „Du sollst nicht begehren“ usw. Denn er will vornehmlich das Herz rein haben, wiewohl wir's, solange wir hier leben, nicht dahin bringen können, also daß dies wohl ein Gebot bleibt wie die andern alle, das uns ohne Unterlaß beschuldigt und anzeigt, wie fromm wir vor Gott sind.

mus, nunquam consequemur. Ita ut hoc praeceptum cum ceteris omnibus facile praeceptum maneat, quod citra intermissionem nos accuset iudicetque, quam probi coram Deo simus.

Beschluß der zehn Gebote.

So haben wir nun die zehn Gebote, einen Ausbund [das Beste, Vorzüglichste] göttlicher Lehre, was wir tun sollen, daß unser ganzes Leben Gott gefalle, und den rechten Born und Röhre, aus und in welchen quellen und gehen müssen [muß] alles, apud Iudaeos frequens fuit et usitatus; quem admodum in evangelio quoque de Herode legitur, qui uxorem fratris sui adhuc vivi sibi ducebat, qui tamen aliqui vir iustus et integer vitae haberi contendebat, sicut Marcus (6, 20) illi quoque fert testimonium. Ceterum 306] eiusmodi exempla spero apud nos locum non habitura, cum in novo testamento legibus intercepta sit et antiquata repudiandi licentia, nisi fortasse quispiam alteri sponsam egregie dotatam quadam versipelli vafrities e faucibus praeiperet. Porro autem, ut alter alteri servos aut ancillas abalienet aut aliqui blandis verbis persuasus [persuados] abducatur, equidem apud nostrates non est rarum aut insolens.

307] Iam quocunque modo hic dolus [R. 480] malus fieri potest, sciendum est Deum nolle pati, ut tu aliquid detrahas proximo, quod suum est, ut ille egeat tuque tuae servias avaritiae, etai illud non contradicente mundo honorifice retinere posses. Est enim occulta quaedam et insidiosa sycphantia, qua (quem admodum dicitur) fucum fecisti proximo, ne animadverti ac deprehendi possit. Nam tametsi perinde te geras, quasi nemini feceris iniuriam, plus iusto tamen onerosus exstitisti proximo. Etsi neque furti neque fraudis insimulandus es, certum tamen est te rem proximi concupuisse, hoc est, pro ea consequenda laborasse, praeter voluntatem eius abalienasse, eidemque, quod divina liberalitate consecutus 308] est, invidiose non fuisse. Et quamquam neque iudex neque quisquam alius tibi id audeat eripere vicissim, neque tamen Deus itidem eo te pacate frui permittet. Ipse enim fraudulentum pectus et mundi huius vafritem acute perspicit, quae, ubi vel lati digiti libertatem atque licentiam consecuta fuerit, mox omnem modum excedit ac denique in apertam vim atque iniuriam prorumpit.

309] Huius ergo praecepti communis intellectus est: primum, ut hoc cautum sit, ne damnum proximi desideremus, neque ad id adiutores simus, vel re vel consilio causam nocendi proximo suppeditantes, verum ei, quidquid habuerit, candide faveamus sinamusque. Adhaec, ut omnibus officiis promoves ab iniuria quoque res suas defendamus, quemadmodum cupimus idem ab alio nobis 310] fieri et contingere. Ita ut praeceptum hoc praeceptum ad invidiam et foedam insatiabilemque habendi cupidinem respiciat, quo Deus causam atque adeo ipsam radicem funditus evulsam auferat e medio, unde omnes proximo nocendi viae ac rationes pullulant. Unde illud quoque hisce verbis expresse [R. 481] et significanter extulit: Non desiderabis etc. Cordis enim puritatem cumprimis quaeritat, tametsi eandem plene, quoad in humanis agemus, nunquam consequemur. Ita ut hoc praeceptum cum ceteris omnibus facile praeceptum maneat, quod citra intermissionem nos accuset iudicetque, quam probi coram Deo simus.

Conclusio Decalogi.

311] Iam ergo explanata utcunque habemus decem praecepta, potiorum divinae doctrinae summam indicantia, quid nobis faciendum sit, ut tota vita nostra Deo probetur et placeat. Praeterea fontem ipsum ac scaturiginem, ex also we read in the Gospel of King Herod that he took his brother's wife while he was yet living, and yet wished to be thought an honorable, pious man, as St. Mark also testifies of him. But such an example, I trust, will not occur among us, because in the New Testament those who are married are forbidden to be divorced, except in such a case where one [shrewdly] by some stratagem takes away a rich bride from another. But it is not a rare thing with us that one estranges or alienates another's man-servant or maid-servant, or entices them away by flattering words.

In whatever way such things happen, we must know that God does not wish that you deprive your neighbor of anything that belongs to him, so that he suffer the loss and you gratify your avarice with it, even if you could keep it honorably before the world; for it is a secret and insidious imposition practised under the hat, as we say, that it may not be observed. For although you go your way as if you had done no one any wrong, you have nevertheless injured your neighbor; and if it is not called stealing and cheating, yet it is called coveting your neighbor's property, that is, aiming at possession of it, enticing it away from him without his will, and being unwilling to see him enjoy what God has granted him. And although the judge and every one must leave you in possession of it, yet God will not leave you therein; for He sees the deceitful heart and the malice of the world, which is sure to take an ell in addition wherever you yield to her a finger's breadth, and at length public wrong and violence follow.

Therefore we allow these commandments to remain in their ordinary meaning, that it is commanded, first, that we do not desire our neighbor's damage, nor even assist, nor give occasion for it, but gladly wish and leave him what he has, and, besides, advance and preserve for him what may be for his profit and service, as we should wish to be treated. Thus these commandments are especially directed against envy and miserable avarice, God wishing to remove all causes and sources whence arises everything by which we do injury to our neighbor, and therefore He expresses it in plain words: Thou shalt not covet, etc. For He would especially have the heart pure, although we shall never attain to that as long as we live here; so that this commandment will remain, like all the rest, one that will constantly accuse us and show how godly we are in the sight of God!

Conclusion of the Ten Commandments.

Thus we have the Ten Commandments, a compend of divine doctrine, as to what we are to do in order that our whole life may be pleasing to God, and the true fountain and channel from and in which everything must was gute Werke sein sollen, also daß außer den zehn Geboten kein Werk noch Wesen gut und Gott gefällig kann sein, es sei so groß und köstlich vor der Welt, wie es wolle. Daß nun sehen, was unsere großen Heiligen rühmen können von ihren geistlichen Orden und großen, schweren Werken, die sie erdacht und aufgeworfen haben, und diese fahren lassen, gerade als wären diese viel zu gering oder außereit längst ausgerichtet.

quae ipsi ultro excogitarunt sibi facienda faciunt, quasi leviora et viliora aut iamdudum praestita essent.

Ich meine je, man sollte hier alle Hände voll zu schaffen haben, daß man diese hielte: Sanftmut, Geduld und Liebe gegen Feinde, Keuschheit, Wohlthat usw., und was solche Stücke mit sich bringen. Aber solche Werke gelten und scheinen nicht vor der Welt Augen; denn sie sind nicht seltsam und ausgeblasen, an sonderliche eigene Zeit, Stätte, Weise und Gebärde geheftet, sondern gemeine tägliche Hauswerke, so ein Nachbar gegen den andern treiben kann; darum haben sie kein Ansehen.

Jene aber sperrten Augen und Ohren auf, dazu helfen sie selbst mit großem Gepränge, Rost [Aufwand] und herrlichem Gebäu und schmüden sie hervor, daß alles gleißen und leuchten muß. Da räuchert man, da singt und klingt man, da zündet man Kerzen und Lichter an, daß man vor diesen keine andern hören noch sehen könne. Denn daß da ein Pfaff in einer gülden Kasel [in einem goldenen Meßkleid] steht, oder ein Vate den ganzen Tag in der Kirche auf den Knien liegt, das heißt ein köstlich Werk, das niemand genug loben kann. Aber daß ein armes Weiblin [Mädchen] eines jungen Kindes wartet und treulich tut, was ihr befohlen ist, das muß nichts heißen; was sollten sonst Mönche und Nonnen in ihren Klöstern suchen?

ac fideliter, quod illi demandatum est, facit, illud vero nullius pretii habendum est. Quid enim aliud ventrosi monachi et lascivae ac prurientes libidine moniales in monasteriis suis quaeritarent?

Siehe aber, ist das nicht eine verfluchte Vermessenheit der verzweifeltsten Heiligen, so da sich untersehen, höher und besser Leben und Stände zu finden, denn die zehn Gebote lehren, geben vor (wie gesagt), es sei ein schlecht [ein ordinäres, geringes] Leben für den gemeinen Mann, ihres aber sei für die Heiligen und Vollkommenen, und sehen nicht, die elenden, blinden Leute, daß kein Mensch [es] so weit bringen kann, daß er eins von den zehn Geboten halte, wie es zu halten ist, sondern noch beide der Glaube und das Vaterunser zu Hilfe kommen muß (wie wir hören werden), dadurch man solches suche und bitte und ohne Unterlaß empfangen? Darum ist ihr Rühmen geradeso viel, als wenn ich rühmte und sagte: Ich habe zwar nicht einen Groschen zu bezahlen, aber zehn Gulden traue ich wohl zu bezahlen.

qua ebulliant et in quam redeant vicissim omnia, quaecunque bonorum operum nomine censenda sunt, ita ut extra decem praecepta nullum bonum opus, quod quidem Deo placere possit, esse existimandum sit, quamlibet tandem coram mundo aut bonum aut magnum [312] aut speciosum esse videatur. Sine iam vicissim videamus, quid nostri magni illi heroes sanctitate spectabiles iactare possint de spiritualibus suis et difficillimis operibus, proposuerunt, et haec a Deo praecepta missa praestita essent.

[313] Ego equidem in ea sum sententia, cuivis abunde hic praescriptum esse, quod efficiat, ὅσον τις δύναται χερσὶν τε ποσὶν τε nempe ut haec diligenter servaremus mansuetudinem, patientiam et amicum erga inimicos animum, castitatem, commodandi promptitudinem atque id genus alia, quae his virtutibus annexa sunt. Verum eiusmodi opera nihil splendoris et auctoritatis coram mundo habent. Neque enim rara et nova sunt et fastu turgida, certis temporibus, locis, personis, ritibus, habitibus destinata, sed communia, protrita et domestica, quae vicinus erga vicinum exercere potest; eam ob rem nullius sunt auctoritatis et pretii.

[314] Porro autem illa alia hominum [R. 482 et ora et oculos in se convertunt, quae ipsi quoque sumptuosissimis ceremoniis, magnis, impensis regis aedificiis provehunt atque ita exornant, ut omnia summe niteant ac splendeant. Ibi thura incenduntur ac thymiamata, ibi pulsatur et cantillatur planeque omnia concentu perstrepunt. Alibi incenduntur cerei, ut prae his alia neque videri neque audiri queant. Nam quod sacrificus quispiam picturata auro casula amictus conspicitur, aut laicus quispiam per totum diem flexis innititur genibus in ecclesia, secum, nescio quid, murmurans, hoc vero opus speciosum et praeclarum dicitur, quod a nemine sufficienter laudari potest. Ceterum, quod misera aliqua puellula infanti in cunis posito sedulo servit

illud vero nullius pretii habendum est. Quid enim aliud ventrosi monachi et lascivae ac prurientes libidine moniales in monasteriis suis quaeritarent?

[315] Vide vero, an non haec detestabilis quaedam sit istorum desperatorum hominum praesumptio, qua sibi tantum sumunt, ut audeant sublimiorem vitam et ordines invenire, quam decem praecepta docent, affirmantes, ut dictum est, vitam esse simplicem ac leviculam, tantumque vulgo observandam et sectandam, suam vero sanctis et perfectis convenientem [316] et propositam. Neque vident calamitosi illi et talis longe caeciores homines nullum hominem eo rem deducere posse, ut vel uni praeceptorum perfecte satisfaciat, ut satisfaciendum est, sed subvenire nobis necesse sit, sicut audiemus, et fidem et orationem, qua praeceptorum servandorum vim atque virtutem quaeramus ac precemur indesinenterque accipiamus. Quapropter eorum iactantia non est alia, quam si lacterem et dicerem: [R. 483 Equidem neque grossum habeo, quem debitoribus meis numerem, decem tamen aureos perfacile exsolvam.

arise and flow that is to be a good work, so that outside of the Ten Commandments no work or thing can be good or pleasing to God, however great or precious it be in the eyes of the world. Let us see now what our great saints can boast of their spiritual orders and their great and grievous works which they have invented and set up, while they let these pass, as though they were far too insignificant, or had long ago been perfectly fulfilled.

I am of opinion, indeed, that here one will find his hands full, [and will have enough] to do to observe these, namely, meekness, patience, and love towards enemies, chastity, kindness, etc., and what such virtues imply. But such works are not of value and make no display in the eyes of the world; for they are not peculiar and conceited works, and restricted to particular times, places, rites, and customs, but are common, every-day domestic works which one neighbor can practise toward another; therefore they are not of high esteem.

But the other works cause people to open their eyes and ears wide, and men aid to this effect by the great display, expense, and magnificent buildings with which they adorn them, so that everything shines and glitters. There they waft incense, they sing and ring bells, they light tapers and candles, so that nothing else can be seen or heard. For when a priest stands there in a surplice embroidered with gilt, or a layman continues all day upon his knees in church, that is regarded as a most precious work which no one can sufficiently praise. But when a poor girl tends a little child and faithfully does what she is told, that is considered nothing; for else what should monks and nuns seek in their cloisters?

But see, is not that a cursed presumption of those desperate saints who dare to invent a higher and better life and estate than the Ten Commandments teach, pretending (as we have said) that this is an ordinary life for the common man, but that theirs is for saints and perfect ones? And the miserable blind people do not see that no man can get so far as to keep one of the Ten Commandments as it should be kept, but both the Apostles' Creed and the Lord's Prayer must come to our aid (as we shall hear), by which that [power and strength to keep the commandments] is sought and prayed for and received continually. Therefore all their boasting amounts to as much as if I boasted and said: To be sure, I have not a penny to make payment with, but I confidently undertake to pay ten florins.

Daß rede und treibe ich darum, daß man doch des leidigen Mißbrauchs, der so tief eingewurzelt hat und noch jebermann anhängt, los werde und sich gewöhne, in allen Ständen auf Erden allein hierher zu sehen und sich damit zu bekümmern. Denn man wird noch lange keine Lehre noch Stände aufbringen, die den zehn Geboten gleich sind, weil sie so hoch sind, daß sie niemand durch Menschenkraft erlangen kann, und wer sie erlangt, ist ein himmlischer, engelischer Mensch, weit über alle Heiligkeit der Welt. Nimm sie nur vor und versuche dich wohl, lege alle Kraft und Macht daran, so wirst du wohl so viel zu schaffen gewinnen, daß du keine andern Werte ober Heiligkeit suchen noch achten wirst.

ter facias, omnes virium tuarum nervos intendens et exercens, ac illico senties tantum tibi superesse negotii, ut supervacaneum existimaveris alia sanctitatis aut praestantioris vitae opera ambitiose curare atque quaerere.

Daß sei genug von dem ersten Teil der gemeinen christlichen Lehre, soviel not ist, beide zu lehren und vermahren; doch müssen wir, zu beschließen, wiederholen den Text, so dazu gehört, welchen wir auch droben im ersten Gebot gehandelt haben, auf daß man lerne, was Gott darauf will gewendet haben, daß man die zehn Gebote wohl lerne treiben und üben.

Ich, der Herr, dein Gott, bin ein eifriger Gott, der über die, so mich hassen, die Sünde der Väter heimsucht an den Kindern bis ins dritte und vierte Glied; aber denen, so mich lieben und meine Gebote halten, tue ich wohl in tausend Glied.

Dieser Zusatz, wiewohl er (wie oben gehört) zuvörderst zum ersten Gebot angehängt ist, so ist er doch um aller Gebote willen gesetzt, als die sich sämtlich hierher ziehen und darauf gerichtet sollen sein. Darum habe ich gesagt, man solle der Jugend auch solches vorhalten und einbleuen [einprägen], daß sie es lerne und behalte, auf daß man sehe, was uns dringen und zwingen soll, solche zehn Gebote zu halten, und soll es nicht anders ansehen, denn als sei dies Stück zu einem jeglichen sonderlich gesetzt, also daß es in und durch sie alle gehe.

Run ist (wie vor[hin] gesagt) in diesen Worten zusammengefaßt beide ein zornig Dräuwort und freundliche Verheißung, uns zu schrecken und warnen, dazu zu loden und reizen, auf daß man sein Wort als einen göttlichen Ernst annehme und groß achte, weil er selbst ausdrückt, wie groß ihm daran gelegen sei und wie hart er darüber halten wolle; nämlich daß er greulich und schrecklich strafen will alle, die seine Gebote verachten und übertreten, und wiederum, wie reichlich er's belohnen will, wohlthun und alles Gute geben denen, die sie groß achten und gerne danach tun und leben. Damit er will gefordert haben, daß sie alle aus solchem Herzen gehen, daß alleine Gott fürchtet und vor Augen hat und aus solcher Furcht alles läßt, das wider seinen Willen ist, auf daß [es] ihn nicht erzürne, und dagegen auch ihm allein vertraut und ihm zu Liebe tut, was er haben will, weil er sich so freundlich als ein Vater hören läßt und uns alle Gnade und Gutes anbietet [anbietet].

317] Haec propterea hoc diligentius dico et inculco identidem, ut tandem a miserando illo abusu, qui usque adeo invaluit actis profundissime radicibus et adhuc adhaeret omnibus, liberemur et assuescamus ex omnibus totius orbis ordinibus huc tantum intentos habere oculos, deque his esse solliciti. Nullo enim unquam tempore ullam doctrinam aut vitae ordines invenimus, quae decem praeceptis aut pares sint aut conferendi, cum ita sint sublimia, ut ea nullus homo unquam suis viribus assequi queat. Et qui eadem assecutus fuerit, coelestis et angelicus homo perhibendus est, longe lateque omnem mundi sanctitatem ex-318] cedens. Tantum vide, ut ea tibi proponas, tuique in iis ipsis periculum non signi-

319] Et haec de prima parte cum ad monendum tum docendum dicta sufficiant. Ut tamen aptius ei rei finis imponatur, illa nobis verba hic repetenda sunt, quae supra quoque in primo praecepto explanavimus, ut discamus, quantum operis Deus impendi velit decem praeceptis probe perdiscendis, inculcandis et exercendis.

320] Ego sum Dominus Deus tuus fortis zelotes, visitans iniquitatem patrum in filios in tertiam et quartam generationem, qui me oderunt, et faciens misericordiam in millia his, qui diligunt me et custodiunt praecepta mea.

321] Haec appendix quamquam, ut supra audivimus, sub initium primo praecepto annexa est, omnium tamen praeceptorum [R. 484] gratia positum esse negare non possumus, ut quae coniunctim omnia huc referenda et dirigenda sint. Quare dixi haec quoque iuventuti proponenda et identidem occinenda esse, ut discat et tenaciter retineat, quo certum nobis fiat, quare ad huiusmodi praeceptorum observationem et adigendi et impellendi essemus. Neque aliter haec verba intuenda sunt, quam si ad unumquodque singillatim adiecta sint, ita ut in his et per haec proficiantur omnia.

322] Iam (ut praedictum est) haec verba uno quasi fasce et terribiles minas et amicam promissionem in se complectuntur, ut nos partim et terreant et admoneant, partim amanter provocent et pelliciant, ut eius verba perinde ut divinam quandam severitatem arripiamus ac magni faciamus: quandoquidem ipse hoc tacitum non praeterit, quanti sua verba faciat aut a nobis fieri velit, tum quam severe eadem tueri decreverit, nempe quod acerbissimis suppliciis terribiliter excruciaturs sit omnes eos, qui sua praecepta contempserint ac violave-323] rint, et vicissim, quam largiter remunerari, benefacere et omnia bona largiri velit iis, qui magni ea faciunt et libenter iuxta praescriptum eorum vivunt et agunt. Quare hoc a nobis exigit, ut omnia e tali proficiantur pectore, quod Deum tantummodo metuat, eum unice in oculis habeat, quodque hoc metu inductum omnia illa accurate caveat, quae eius voluntati repugnare videntur, ne Deum ad

All this I say and urge in order that men might become rid of the sad misuse which has taken such deep root and still cleaves to everybody, and in all estates upon earth become used to looking hither only, and to being concerned about these matters. For it will be a long time before they will produce a doctrine or estates equal to the Ten Commandments, because they are so high that no one can attain to them by human power; and whoever does attain to them is a heavenly, angelic man, far above all holiness of the world. Only occupy yourself with them, and try your best, apply all power and ability, and you will find so much to do that you will neither seek nor esteem any other work or holiness.

Let this be sufficient concerning the first part of the common Christian doctrine, both for teaching and urging what is necessary. In conclusion, however, we must repeat the text which belongs here, of which we have treated already in the First Commandment, in order that we may learn what pains God requires to the end we may learn to inculcate and practise the Ten Commandments:

For I the Lord, thy God, am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate Me, and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love Me and keep My commandments.

Although (as we have heard above) this appendix was primarily attached to the First Commandment, it was nevertheless [we cannot deny that it was] laid down for the sake of all the commandments, as all of them are to be referred and directed to it. Therefore I have said that this, too, should be presented to and inculcated upon the young, that they may learn and remember it, in order to see what is to urge and compel us to keep these Ten Commandments. And it is to be regarded as though this part were specially added to each, so that it inheres in, and pervades, them all.

Now, there is comprehended in these words (as said before) both an angry word of threatening and a friendly promise to terrify and warn us, and, moreover, to induce and encourage us to receive and highly esteem His Word as a matter of divine earnestness, because He Himself declares how much He is concerned about it, and how rigidly He will enforce it, namely, that He will horribly and terribly punish all who despise and transgress His commandments; and again, how richly He will reward, bless, and do all good to those who hold them in high esteem, and gladly do and live according to them. Thus He demands that all our works proceed from a heart which fears and regards God alone, and from such fear avoids everything that is contrary to His will, lest it should move Him to wrath; and, on the other hand, also trusts iracundiam provocet, et contra, quod illi unice fidat quodque in eius gratiam faciat omnia, quaecunque animo eius grata esse intelligit, quandoquidem tam amicum et paternum erga nos animum prae se fert nobisque omnibus ultro offert omnes totius inexhaustae gratiae ac bonitatis suae divitias.

Das ist auch eben die Meinung und rechte Auslegung des ersten und vornehmsten Gebots, daraus alle andern quellen und gehen sollen, also daß dies Wort: „Du sollst nicht andere Götter haben“ nichts anderes aufs einfältigste will gesagt haben, denn so viel hier gefordert: Du sollst mich als deinen einigen, rechten Gott fürchten, lieben und mir vertrauen. Denn wo ein solches Herz gegen Gott ist, das hat dieses und alle andern erfüllt. Wiederum, wer etwas anderes im Himmel und auf Erden fürchtet und liebt, der wird weder dieses noch keines halten. Also hat die ganze Schrift überall dies Gebot gepredigt und getrieben, alles auf die zwei Stüde, Gottesfurcht und Vertrauen, gerichtet; und vornehmlich der Prophet David im Psalter durch und durch, als da er spricht: „Der Herr hat Gefallen an denen, die ihn fürchten und auf seine Güte warten“; als wäre das ganze Gebot mit einem Vers ausgestrichen [erklärt] und ebensoviel gesagt: Der Herr hat Gefallen an denen, die keine andern Götter haben.

Also soll nun das erste Gebot leuchten und seinen Glanz geben in die andern alle. Darum mußt du auch dies Stück lassen gehen durch alle Gebote, als die Schale [Schale] oder Hölz [Holen, Reif] im Kranz, daß [es] Ende und Anfang zu Hause füge und alle zusammenhalte, auf daß man's immer wiederhole und nicht vergesse, als nämlich im andern Gebot, daß man Gott fürchte und seines Namens nicht mißbrauche zu fluchen, lügen, trügen und anderer Verführung oder Missethat, sondern recht und wohl [ge]brauche mit Anrufen, Beten, Loben und Danken, aus Liebe und Vertrauen nach dem ersten Gebot geschöpft. Desgleichen soll solche Furcht, Liebe und Vertrauen treiben und zwingen, daß man sein Wort nicht verachte, sondern lerne, gerne höre, heilig halte und ehre.

Danach weiter durch die folgenden Gebote gegen den Nächsten auch also, alles aus Kraft des ersten Gebots, daß man Vater und Mutter, Herren und alle Obrigkeit ehre, [ihnen] untertan und gehorsam sei, nicht um ihretwillen, sondern [um] Gottes willen. Denn du darfst weder Vater noch Mutter ansehen noch fürchten noch [solches] ihnen zulieb tun oder lassen. Siehe aber zu, was Gott von dir haben will und gar getrost fordern wird; lässest du es, so hast du einen zornigen Richter oder wiederum [umgekehrt] einen gnädigen Vater.

Item, daß du deinem Nächsten kein Leid, Schaden noch Gewalt tußt, noch einerlei Weise [in irgendeiner Weise] zu nahe siehest, es treffe seinen Leib, Gemahl, Gut, Ehre oder Recht an, wie es nacheinander geboten ist, ob du gleich Raum und 324] Et haec quoque primi ac praecipui praecepti, ex quo cetera omnia manant [R. 485 et ebulliunt, sententia est et vera ac genuina interpretatio, ita ut hoc verbum (Non habebis Deos alienos) nihil aliud simplicissime expositum in se complectatur quam hoc ipsum, quod hic exigitur, nempe: Tu me velut unicum et verum Deum tuum metuas, me ames, tuam fiduciam in me solum reicias, volo. Ubi enim eiusmodi erga Deum cor erectum est, hoc et praesens et reliqua praecepta omnia ad unum complevit. Contra quicumque aliud in coelis aut in terra pertimescit et amat, neque hoc 325] neque alia ulla servabit. Ita tota Scriptura passim hoc unum praeceptum docuit et subinde inculcavit, neque non omnia ad haec duo, nempe timorem Dei et fiduciam, retulit. Cumprimis vero propheta David nihil aliud paene per omnes psalmos docet, velut cum inquit Ps. 147, 11: Beneplacitum est Domino super timentes eum et in eis, qui sperant super misericordia eius. Quasi totum praeceptum unico versiculo explicatum esset, eiusque haec summa foret: Illi Deo summe placent, quibus non sunt dii alieni.

326] Ad eum modum primum praeceptum lucere debet deque se splendorem emittere, ut aliis omnibus lucem praebeat. Quamobrem haec verba per omnia praecepta penetrare debent, veluti ligneus in aertis circulus, ut finem cum principio copulent et omnia uno quasi fasce complectantur, ut subinde repetantur animo, ne memoriae excidant, nempe in secundo praecepto, ut Deum metuamus, eius nomine non foede ac impie abutamur ad execrandum, maledicendum, mentiendum, fallendum aliasque improbitates et vitia exercenda, verum bene et recte eo utamur, invocando, precando, laudando et gratias agendo, amore ac fiducia Dei incitati, iuxta primi praecepti constitutionem. Similiter eo ipso metu, amore atque fiducia incitandi sumus, ut eius verbum non contemptum respiciamus aut delicati fastidiamus, sed avide discamus, libenter audiamus, sacrosanctum, pretiosum et honorificum habeamus.

327] Ita quoque deinceps per reliqua praecepta, virtute primi erga proximum [R. 486 observanda, gradus faciendi sunt, ut parentes, dominos ac omnes magistratus honorantes habeamus in pretio, libenter eisdem obediennes obsequamur, non quidem ob illorum, sed divinae voluntatis auctoritatem. Neque enim tibi parentes respiciendi sunt, neque quidquam illis gratificandum aut omittendum, sed eo fac respicias, quidnam rei Deus a te exigit, quod fidenter a te postulaturus est. Qua in re, si negligens fueris, iratum ac saevum iudicem, sin feceris, clementem Patrem experiere.

328] Praeterea ne quam proximo tuo iniuriam aut damnum inferas, vel vim facias, neve ulla in re illi incommodas, sive corpus eius sive coniugem sive opes, honorem aut ius spectes, veluti omnia haec ordine sunt man-in Him alone, and from love to Him does all He wishes, because he speaks to us as friendly as a father, and offers us all grace and every good.

Just this is also the meaning and true interpretation of the first and chief commandment, from which all the others must flow and proceed, so that this word: Thou shalt have no other gods before Me, in its simplest meaning states nothing else than this demand: Thou shalt fear, love, and trust in Me as thine only true God. For where there is a heart thus disposed towards God, the same has fulfilled this and all the other commandments. On the other hand, whoever fears and loves anything else in heaven and upon earth will keep neither this nor any. Thus the entire Scriptures have everywhere preached and inculcated this commandment, aiming always at these two things: fear of God and trust in Him. And especially the prophet David throughout the Psalms, as when he says [Ps. 147, 11]: The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear Him, in those that hope in His mercy. As if the entire commandment were explained by one verse, as much as to say: The Lord taketh pleasure in those who have no other gods.

Thus the First Commandment is to shine and impart its splendor to all the others. Therefore you must let this declaration run through all the commandments, like a hoop in a wreath, joining the end to the beginning and holding them all together, that it be continually repeated and not forgotten; as, namely, in the Second Commandment, that we fear God and do not take His name in vain for cursing, lying, deceiving, and other modes of leading men astray, or rascality, but make proper and good use of it by calling upon Him in prayer, praise, and thanksgiving, derived from love and trust according to the First Commandment. In like manner such fear, love, and trust is to urge and force us not to despise His Word, but gladly to learn, hear, and esteem it holy, and honor it.

Thus continuing through all the following commandments towards our neighbor likewise, everything is to proceed by virtue of the First Commandment, to wit, that we honor father and mother, masters, and all in authority, and be subject and obedient to them, not on their own account, but for God's sake. For you are not to regard or fear father or mother, or from love of them do or omit anything. But see to that which God would have you do, and what He will quite surely demand of you; if you omit that, you have an angry Judge, but in the contrary case a gracious Father.

Again, that you do your neighbor no harm, injury, or violence, nor in any wise encroach upon him as touching his body, wife, property, honor, or rights, as all these things are commanded in their order, even though you have Ursache dazu hättest, und dich kein Mensch darum strafe, sondern jedermann wohlthut, helfst und fördest, wie und wo du kannst, allein Gott zu lieb und Gefallen, in dem Vertrauen, daß er dir alles reichlich will erstatten. Also siehst du, wie das erste Gebot das Haupt und Quellborn ist, so durch die andern alle geht, und wiederum alle sich zurückziehen und hangen an diesem, daß Ende und Anfang alles ineinandergeknüpft und gebunden ist.

Solches (sage ich nun) ist nützlich und not, dem jungen Volk immer vorzuhalten, vermahren und erinnern, auf daß sie nicht allein wie das Vieh mit Schlägen und Zwang, sondern in Gottesfurcht und Ehre aufgezogen werden. Denn wo man solches bedenkt und zu Herzen nimmt, daß es nicht Menschenhand, sondern der hohen Majestät Gebote sind, der mit solchem Ernst drüber hält, zürnt und straft, die sie verachten, und wiederum so überschwenglich vergilt denen, die sie halten, da selbst wird sich's selbst reizen und treiben, gerne Gottes Willen zu tun. Darum ist nicht umsonst im alten Testament geboten, daß man sollte die zehn Gebote schreiben an alle Wände und Ecken, ja auch an die Kleider, nicht daß man's allein lasse da geschrieben stehen und [zur] Schau trage, wie die Juden thaten, sondern daß man's ohne Unterlaß vor Augen und in stetem Gedächtnis habe, in alle unserm Tun und Wesen treibe, und ein jeglicher lasse es seine tägliche Übung sein in allerlei Fällen, Geschäften und Händeln, als stünde es an allen Orten geschrieben, wo er hinsieht, ja, wo er geht oder steht. So würde man beide für sich daheim in seinem Hause und gegen Nachbarn Ursache genug finden, die zehn Gebote zu treiben, daß niemand weit danach laufen dürfte [brauchte].

vestigio steterit. Ita fiet, ut aequae et domi et foris erga vicinos semper sufficientem causam inveniamus decem praecepta exercendi, ut nemini ea incumbat necessitas illa procul petendi.

Aus dem sieht man abermal, wie hoch diese zehn Gebote zu heben und preisen sind, über alle Stände, Gebote und Werke, so man sonst lehrt und treibt. Denn hier können wir trohen und sagen: Daß auftreten alle Weisen und Heiligen, ob sie könnten ein Werk hervorbringen als diese Gebote, so Gott mit solchem Ernst fordert, und befiehlt bei seinem höchsten Zorn und Strafe, dazu so herrliche Verheißung dazu seht, daß er uns mit allen Gütern und Segen überschütten will. Darum soll man sie je vor allen andern lehren, teuer und wert halten als den höchsten Schatz, von Gott gegeben.

promissiones pollicitus, se nimirum inexhaustis benedictionis suae divitiis tantum non obitutum eos. Quocirca non iniuria haec praecepta omnibus aliis doctrinis antefenda sunt, inque magno habenda pretio, tamquam thesaurus, quem a Deo accepimus, omnium pretiosissimus.

data, etsi ad haec commode perpetranda neque locus tibi deesset neque occasio, adhaec nullius hominis reprehensionem eo nomine incurreres; sed de omnibus bene merearis, omnes officiose iuves ac promoveas, quacunque ratione et ubicunque potes, tantum in hoc, ut Deo obedias, hac fiducia, eum ipsum omnia 329] haec largiter tibi compensaturum. Ita vides, quomodo primum praeceptum caput ac fons sit, unde reliqua omnia suam trahunt originem, quodque rursus omnia alia retro pertrahat ex se pendencia, ut et finis et principium uno indissolubili nodo colligata et copulata sint.

330] Talia, inquam, operae pretium est, ut iuventuti nunquam non proponantur, monendo inculcentur et in memoriam assidue repetendo revocentur, ut non tantum fuste ac plagis, quemadmodum pecora rationis expertia, sed etiam in timore ac cultu Dei pia quadam ratione educantur. Quicunque enim haec considerant et animi seria quadam cogitatione perpendunt, esse videlicet haec non humanae rationis commenta, sed summae maiestatis mandata, quae tanta severitate contemptores eorum punire, contra vero factores eorum inaeestimabilibus bonitatis suae divitiis [R. 487 remunerari velit: illi sua sponte ad faciendam Dei voluntatem satis erunt propensi.

331] Quare in veteri testamento non temere mandatum erat, ut decem praecepta omnibus inscriberentur parietibus, angulis et vestibus, non in hoc, ut tantum inscripta spectanda circumferrentur, quemadmodum facit Iudaei consueverant, sed ut citra intermissionem obversarentur oculis et memoriae occurrerent in omnibus nostris negotiis et actionibus. Sint 332] ergo cuique haec quotidiana exercitia et studia, in omnibus casibus, negotiis et officiis, ac si omnibus insculpta locis legenda occurrerent, quocunque oculorum aciem flexerit, imo potius ubicunque inceserit, aut presso opportunity and cause to do so and no man would reprove you; but that you do good to all men, help them, and promote their interest, howsoever and wherever you can, purely from love of God and in order to please Him, in the confidence that He will abundantly reward you for everything. Thus you see how the First Commandment is the chief source and fountainhead which flows into all the rest, and again, all return to that and depend upon it, so that beginning and end are fastened and bound to each other.

333] Ex his omnibus iam facile existimare licet aut videre, quousque haec praecepta extollenda, aut quanti tandem faciendi sint prae omnibus et operibus et ordinibus, qui doceri consueverunt. Hic enim confidenter dicere possumus, ut ad unum prodeant omnes sapientes et quotquot sanctimoniae titulo superbiunt, num unum queant opus quamlibet pusillum producere, quod vel extremo horum praeceptorum opusculo equiparandum sit, quod tanta severitate Deus a suis exigit et faciendum praecipit, tantam tamque intolerabilem transgressoris interminatus iracundiam et contra factoribus adeo splendidas

This (I say) it is profitable and necessary always to teach to the young people, to admonish them and to remind them of it, that they may be brought up not only with blows and compulsion, like cattle, but in the fear and reverence of God. For where this is considered and laid to heart that these things are not human trifles, but the commandments of the Divine Majesty, who insists upon them with such earnestness, is angry with, and punishes those who despise them, and, on the other hand, abundantly rewards those who keep them, there will be a spontaneous impulse and a desire gladly to do the will of God. Therefore it is not in vain that it is commanded in the Old Testament to write the Ten Commandments on all walls and corners, yea, even on the garments, not for the sake of merely having them written in these places and making a show of them, as did the Jews, but that we might have our eyes constantly fixed upon them, and have them always in our memory, and that we might practise them in all our actions and ways, and every one make them his daily exercise in all cases, in every business and transaction, as though they were written in every place wherever he would look, yea, wherever he walks or stands. Thus there would be occasion enough, both at home in our own house and abroad with our neighbors, to practise the Ten Commandments, that no one need run far for them.

From this it again appears how highly these Ten Commandments are to be exalted and extolled above all estates, commandments, and works which are taught and practised aside from them. For here we can boast and say: Let all the wise and saints step forth and produce, if they can, a [single] work like these commandments, upon which God insists with such earnestness, and which He enjoins with His greatest wrath and punishment, and, besides, adds such glorious promises that He will pour out upon us all good things and blessings. Therefore they should be taught above all others, and be esteemed precious and dear, as the highest treasure given by God.

Das zweite Teil.

Von dem Glauben.

Bisher haben wir gehört das erste Stück christlicher Lehre und darin gesehen alles, was Gott von uns will getan und gelassen haben. Darauf folgt nun billig der Glaube, der uns vorträgt alles, was wir von Gott erwarten [erwarten] und empfangen müssen, und, aufs kürzeste zu reden, ihn ganz und gar erkennen lehrt. Welches eben dazu dienen soll, daß wir daselbe tun können, so wir laut der zehn Gebote tun sollen. Denn sie sind (wie oben gesagt) so hoch gestellt, daß aller Menschen Vermögen viel zu gering und schwach ist, dieselben zu halten. Darum ist dies Stück ja so nötig als jenes zu lernen, daß man wisse, wie man dazu komme, woher und wodurch solche Kraft zu nehmen sei. Denn so wir könnten aus eigenen Kräften die zehn Gebote halten, wie sie zu halten sind, [be]dürften wir nichts weiter, weder Glauben noch Vaterunser. Aber ehe man solchen Ruh und Trost des Glaubens ausstreicht, ist genug ersichtlich für die gar Einfältigen, daß sie den Glauben an ihm selbst fassen und verstehen lernen.

4) est, et fide et precatione haud difficulter careremus. Prius vero quam eiusmodi et utilitas et necessitas fidei explanetur, initio sufficit pro rudibus plane, ut fidem per se comprehendant et intelligere discant.

Aufs erste hat man bisher den Glauben geteilt in zwölf Artikel, wiewohl, wenn man alle Stücke, so in der Schrift stehen und zum Glauben gehören, einzeln fassen sollte, gar viel mehr Artikel sind, auch nicht alle deutlich mit so wenig Worten mögen ausgedrückt werden. Aber daß man's aufs leichteste und einfältigste fassen könnte, wie es für die Kinder zu lehren ist, wollen wir den ganzen Glauben kürzlich fassen in drei Hauptartikel nach den dreien Personen der Gottheit, dahin alles, was wir glauben, gerichtet ist, also daß der erste Artikel, von Gott dem Vater, erkläre die Schöpfung, der andere, von dem Sohn, die Erlösung, der dritte, von dem Heiligen Geist, die Heiligung. Als wäre der Glaube aufs aller kürzeste in so viel Worte gesagt: Ich glaube an Gott Vater, der mich geschaffen hat; ich glaube an Gott den Sohn, der mich erlöst hat; ich glaube an den Heiligen Geist, der mich heiligt macht. Ein Gott und ein Glaube, aber drei Personen, darum auch drei Artikel oder Bekenntnisse. So wollen wir nun kürzlich die Worte überlaufen.

Der erste Artikel.

Ich glaube an Gott den Vater allmächtigen, Schöpfer Himmels und der Erden.

Da ist aufs aller kürzeste abgemalt und vorgebildet, was Gottes des Vaters Wesen, Wille, Tun und Werk sei. Denn weil die zehn Gebote haben vorgehalten, man solle nicht mehr denn einen Gott haben, möchte man nun fragen: Was ist denn Gott für ein Mann? Was tut er? Wie kann man ihn preisen oder abmalen und beschreiben, daß man ihn kenne? Das lehrt nun dieser und folgende Artikel, also daß der Glaube nichts anderes ist denn eine Antwort und Be-

Secunda Pars Catechismi. [R. 488]

SYMBOLUM FIDEI.

1) Hactenus Catechismi, hoc est, Christianae doctrinae, primam partem audivimus, in qua, quid facere, quid omittere nos Deus velit, vidimus. Hanc deinceps iusto ordine fides subsequitur, qua nobis summam, quid a Deo nobis expectandum et accipiendum sit, proponitur, atque ut paucis dicam, eundem nos 2) per omnia docet cognoscere. Quae eo nobis servire ac prodesse debet, ut id, quod praecepta exigunt, facere queamus, dum ea exigentibus praeceptis facere cogimur. Nam (ut supra dictum) adeo sublimis et alta eorum est constitutio, ut omnium hominum vires longe leviores sint et invalidiores, quam ut eandem possint assequi aut contingere et ei satisfacere. Eam ob rem nihilominus necessarium est hanc partem perdiscere quam priorem, ut sciamus, quomodo praeceptis satisfacere queamus, et unde tanta vis ac virtus 3) petenda aut impetranda sit. Etenim si propriis viribus divinis praeceptis satisfacere possemus, quemadmodum illis satisfaciendum

5) Principio theologi nostri fidem hactenus in duodecim articulos diviserunt; quamquam, si omnes particulae, quas tradit Scriptura et ad fidem referendae sunt, singillatim comprehenderentur, multo plures sunt articuli, [R. 489] sed neque tam paucis verbis satis significandi 6) ter possunt exprimi. Verumtamen ut quam facillime et simplicissime comprehendantur, veluti pueris tradendi sunt, totum fidei Symbolum tribus tantum principalibus articulis complectemur, iuxta tres divinitatis personas, ad quas omnia, quae credimus, referuntur et ordinantur, ita ut primus articulus, de Deo Patre, creationem explicet, secundus, de Filio, redemptionem, tertius, de Spiritu Sancto, sanctificationem. Quasi fides quam brevissime tot verbis comprehensa esset: Credo in Deum Patrem, qui me creavit; credo in Deum Filium, qui me liberavit; credo in Spiritum Sanctum, qui me sanctificat. Unus Deus et una fides, verum tres personae, quare tres 8) etiam articuli et confessiones. Iam ergo ipsa fidei verba breviter percurramus.

Articulus I.

9) Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, Creatorem coeli et terrae.

10) Quenam sit Dei Patris essentia, voluntas et opus, hisce verbis compendiosissime adumbratum et propositum est. Cum enim decem praecepta docuerint non esse nisi unum Deum habendum et colendum, in quaestione venire posset, quid Deus esset, quid operis faceret, quibus denique rebus laudandus sit aut depingendus, ut cognoscatur. Hoc iam sequens docet articulus, fidem nihil aliud esse quam responsionem quandam et confessionem

Part Second.OF THE CREED.

Thus far we have heard the first part of Christian doctrine, in which we have seen all that God wishes us to do or to leave undone. Now, there properly follows the Creed, which sets forth to us everything that we must expect and receive from God, and, to state it quite briefly, teaches us to know Him fully. And this is intended to help us do that which according to the Ten Commandments we ought to do. For (as said above) they are set so high that all human ability is far too feeble and weak to [attain to or] keep them. Therefore it is as necessary to learn this part as the former in order that we may know how to attain thereto, whence and whereby to obtain such power. For if we could by our own powers keep the Ten Commandments as they are to be kept, we would need nothing further, neither the Creed nor the Lord's Prayer. But before we explain this advantage and necessity of the Creed, it is sufficient at first for the simple-minded that they learn to comprehend and understand the Creed itself.

In the first place, the Creed has hitherto been divided into twelve articles, although, if all points which are written in the Scriptures and which belong to the Creed were to be distinctly set forth, there would be far more articles, nor could they all be clearly expressed in so few words. But that it may be most easily and clearly understood as it is to be taught to children, we shall briefly sum up the entire Creed in three chief articles, according to the three persons in the Godhead, to whom everything that we believe is related, so that the First Article, of God the Father, explains Creation, the Second Article, of the Son, Redemption, and the Third, of the Holy Ghost, Sanctification. Just as though the Creed were briefly comprehended in so many words: I believe in God the Father, who has created me; I believe in God the Son, who has redeemed me; I believe in the Holy Ghost, who sanctifies me. One God and one faith, but three persons, therefore also three articles or confessions. Let us briefly run over the words.

Article I.

I believe in God the Father Almighty,
Maker of heaven and earth.

This portrays and sets forth most briefly what is the essence, will, activity, and work of God the Father. For since the Ten Commandments have taught that we are to have not more than one God, the question might be asked, What kind of a person is God? What does He do? How can we praise, or portray and describe Him, that He may be known? Now, that is taught in this and in the following article, so that the Creed is kenntnis der Christen, auf das erste Gebot gestellt. Als wenn man ein junges Kind fragte: Lieber, was hast du für einen Gott, was weißt du von ihm? daß es könnte sagen: Das ist mein Gott: zum ersten der Vater, der Himmel und Erde geschaffen hat; außer diesem einigen halte ich nichts für Gott, denn sonst keiner ist, der Himmel und Erde schaffen könnte.

Für die Gelehrten aber, und die etwas lästigt [bewandert, fortgeschritten] sind, kann man die Artikel alle drei weit ausstreichen und teilen in so viel Stücke, als es Worte sind. Aber jetzt für die jungen Schüler sei genug, das Nötigste anzuzeigen, nämlich, wie gesagt, daß dieser Artikel verlangt die Schöpfung, daß man stehe auf dem Wort „Schöpfer Himmels und der Erden“. Was ist's nun gesagt, oder was meinst du mit dem Wort: „Ich glaube an Gott Vater allmächtigen, Schöpfer“ usw.? Antwort: Das meine und glaube ich, daß ich Gottes Geschöpf bin, das ist, daß er mir gegeben hat und ohne Unterlaß erhält Leib, Seele und Leben, Gliedmaßen klein und groß, alle Sinne, Vernunft und Verstand, und so fort an, Essen und Trinken, Kleider, Nahrung, Weib und Kind, Gefinde, Haus und Hof usw., dazu alle Creaturen zu Ruh und Nothdurft des Lebens dienen läßt, Sonne, Mond und Sterne am Himmel, Tag und Nacht, Luft, Feuer, Wasser, Erde, und was sie trägt und vermag, Vögel, Fische, Thiere, Getreide und allerlei Gewächse; item, was mehr leibliche und zeitliche Güter sind, gut Regiment, Friede, Sicherheit, also daß man aus diesem Artikel lerne, daß unser keiner das Leben noch alles, was jetzt erzählt ist und erzählt mag werden, von ihm selbst hat noch erhalten kann, wie klein und gering es ist; denn es alles gesagt ist in das Wort „Schöpfer“.

16] Ita ut ex hoc articulo discamus, nostrum neminem vitam omniaque alia iam enumerata, et quae adhuc enumerari possent, a se habere neque retinere posse, quamlibet pusillum aut leve fuerit. Haec enim omnia nomine Creatoris comprehensa sunt.

Darüber bekennen wir auch, daß Gott der Vater nicht allein solches alles, was wir haben und vor Augen sehen, uns gegeben hat, sondern auch täglich vor allem Übel und Unglück [uns] behütet und beschützt, allerlei Fährlichkeit und Unfall abwendet, und solches alles aus lauter Liebe und Güte, durch uns unverdient, als ein freundlicher Vater, der für uns sorgt, daß uns kein Leid widerfahre. Aber davon weiter zu sagen, gehört in die andern zwei Stücke dieses Artikels, da man spricht: „Vater allmächtigen“.

Hieraus will sich's nun selbst schließen und folgen, weil uns das alles, so wir vermögen [besitzen], dazu was im Himmel und [auf] Erden ist, täglich von Gott gegeben, erhalten und bewahrt wird, so sind wir ja schuldig, ihn darum ohne Unterlaß zu lieben, loben und danken, und kürzlich, ihm ganz und gar damit zu dienen, wie er durch die zehn Gebote fordert und befohlen hat.

Hier wäre nun viel zu sagen, wenn man's sollte ausstreichen, wie wenig ihrer sind, die diesen Ar-

Christianorum ad primum praeceptum ordinatam. Velut puer interrogatus a quopiam: Quemnam Deum habes, aut quid de illo compertum tenes? respondere possit: Primum quidem hoc Deus meus est, videlicet Pater, qui coelum ac terram condidit; extra hunc unum nullum alium Deum esse credo, [R. 490] praeter hunc enim nemo est, qui sua virtute atque potentia coelum ac terram possit condere.

12] Ceterum pro doctis, et qui aliquam Scripturae cognitionem sibi paraverunt, ii tres articuli aliquanto fusius et locupletius declarari possunt inque tot partes dividi, quot verbis fidei Symbolum contextum est. Verum in praesentia pro novitiis scholasticis maxime cognitui necessaria indicasse sufficiat, nempe hunc articulum, ut diximus, ad rerum creationem pertinere, ut huic verbo innitatur: Cre- 13] ator coeli et terrae. Quid ergo haec sibi verba volunt, aut his tu significari putas: Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, Creatorem etc.? Responsio: Hoc significari puto et credo, me Dei esse creaturam, hoc est, quod ille mihi dederit quotidieque alat sustentetque corpus, animam, vitam, membra corporis, cum parva tum magna, omnes sensus, rationem, rationis usum virtutemque intelligentiae, ac deinceps cibum et potum, amictum, commectum, uxorem, liberos, familiam, aedes, prae- 14] dia etc. Adhaec qui omnes creaturas ad vitae meae utilitatem et necessitatem servire mihi sinit, solem, lunam et sidera coelestia, diem et noctem, aërem, ignem, aquam, terram et omnes fructus terrae, quos sua fecunditate producit, volucres, pisces et omnia frumen- 15] torum et fructuum genera. Insuper si quae sunt alia rerum corporalium et temporalium bona, ut est aequabilis reipublicae status et administratio, pax, tranquilla securitas.

17] Praeter haec ingenue quoque confitemur Deum Patrem non solum haec omnia, quae habemus, possidemus, coramque oculis intuemur, nobis dedisse, sed quotidie etiam [R. 491] eius tutela nos ab omnibus malis atque periculis custodiri, omnes incommoditates, ruinas atque discrimina a nobis abigente et propulsante. Quae omnia mera humanitate et bonitate sua pellectus nobis immerentibus exhibet, tamquam lenis ac clemens Pater, cui nos curae sumus, ne quid mali aut adversi nobis accidat. 18] Verum ea verbosius persequi ad reliquas duas partes pertinet, ubi dicimus: Patrem omnipotentem.

19] Ex his iam demonstratis facile evictum consequitur et colligitur, cum omnia, quae possidemus quaeque in coelo et in terra sunt, quotidie a Deo concessa sustententur et custodiantur, debere nos eundem indesinenter diligere, laudibus extollere, agendisque gratiis acceptorum beneficiorum esse memores, et, ut uno verbo dicam, illi prorsus atque per omnia hisce gratuito datis muneribus servire, quemadmodum hoc ipsum decem praeceptis a nobis exigit et faciendum praecepit.

20] Iam hic multis dicendum esset, si illustrare id quis vellet, quam pauci sint, qui nothing else than the answer and confession of Christians arranged with respect to the First Commandment. As if you were to ask a little child: My dear, what sort of a God have you? What do you know of Him? he could say: This is my God: first, the Father, who has created heaven and earth; besides this only One I regard nothing else as God; for there is no one else who could create heaven and earth.

But for the learned, and those who are somewhat advanced [have acquired some Scriptural knowledge], these three articles may all be expanded and divided into as many parts as there are words. But now for young scholars let it suffice to indicate the most necessary points, namely, as we have said, that this article refers to the Creation: that we emphasize the words: Oreator of heaven and earth. But what is the force of this, or what do you mean by these words: I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker, etc.? Answer: This is what I mean and believe, that I am a creature of God; that is, that He has given and constantly preserves to me my body, soul, and life, members great and small, all my senses, reason, and understanding, and so on, food and drink, clothing and support, wife and children, domestics, house and home, etc. Besides, He causes all creatures to serve for the uses and necessities of life — sun, moon, and stars in the firmament, day and night, air, fire, water, earth, and whatever it bears and produces, birds and fishes, beasts, grain, and all kinds of produce, and whatever else there is of bodily and temporal goods, good government, peace, security. Thus we learn from this article that none of us has of himself, nor can preserve, his life nor anything that is here enumerated or can be enumerated, however small and unimportant a thing it might be, for all is comprehended in the word Creator.

Moreover, we also confess that God the Father has not only given us all that we have and see before our eyes, but daily preserves and defends us against all evil and misfortune, averts all sorts of danger and calamity; and that He does all this out of pure love and goodness, without our merit, as a benevolent Father, who cares for us that no evil befall us. But to speak more of this belongs in the other two parts of this article, where we say: Father Almighty.

Now, since all that we possess, and, moreover, whatever, in addition, is in heaven and upon the earth, is daily given, preserved, and kept for us by God, it is readily inferred and concluded that it is our duty to love, praise, and thank Him for it without ceasing, and, in short, to serve Him with all these things, as He demands and has enjoined in the Ten Commandments.

Here we could say much if we were to expatiate, how few there are that believe this tifel glauben. Denn wir gehen alle überhin [drüber hin], hören's und sagen's, sehen aber und bedenken nicht, was uns die Worte vortragen. Denn wo wir's von Herzen glaubten, würden wir auch danach tun und nicht so stolz [ein]hergehen, trohen und uns brüsten, als hätten wir das Leben, Reichthum, Gewalt und Ehre usw. von uns selbst, daß man uns fürchten und dienen müßte, wie die unselige, verkehrte Welt tut, die in ihrer Blindheit erschaffen ist, aller Güter und Gaben Gottes allein zu ihrer Hoffart, Geiz, Lust und Wohlthaten [Freude, Genuß] mißbraucht und Gott nicht einmal ansehe [anseht], daß sie ihm danke oder für einen Herrn und Schöpfer erkenne.

bus divinitus datis tantum ad superbiam, avaritiam, voluptates et delicias turpissime abutens, neque Deum vel semel respiciens, ut illi gratias ageret, aut pro Domino ac Creatore suo eum agnosceret.

Darum sollte uns dieser Artikel alle demüthigen und erschrecken, wo wir's glaubten. Denn wir sündigen täglich mit Augen, Ohren, Händen, Leib und Seele, Geld und Gut und mit allem, das wir haben, sonderlich diejenigen, so noch wider Gottes Wort stehen. Doch haben die Christen den Vortheil, daß sie sich des schuldig erkennen, ihm dafür zu dienen und gehorsam zu sein.

stiani hanc praerogativam habent, quod se Deo Creatori suo id debere agnoscunt, ut pro acceptis bonis ipsi aerviant atque obtemperant, id quod mundus facere nescit.

Verhasen sollen wir diesen Artikel täglich üben, einbilden [einprägen] und uns erinnern in allem, was uns vor Augen kommt und Gutes widerfährt, und wo wir aus Räten oder Fährlichkeit kommen, wie uns Gott solches alles gibt und tut, daß wir daran spüren und sehen sein väterlich Herz und überschwengliche Liebe gegen uns; davon würde das Herz erwärmt und entzündet werden, dankbar zu sein und aller solcher Güter zu Gottes Ehre und Lob zu [ge]brauchen.

Also haben wir aufs kürzeste die Meinung dieses Artikels, soviel den Einfältigen erstlich not ist zu lernen, beide was wir von Gott haben und empfangen, und was wir dafür schuldig sind, welches gar eine große, treffliche Erkenntnis ist, aber viel ein höherer Schatz. Denn da sehen wir, wie sich der Vater uns gegeben hat samt allen Creaturen und [uns] aufs allerreichlichste in diesem Leben versorgt, ohne daß er uns sonst auch mit unaussprechlichen ewigen Gütern durch seinen Sohn und Heiligen Geist überschüttet, wie wir hören werden.

Der zweite Artikel.

Und an Jesum Christum, seinen einzigen Sohn, unsern Herrn, der empfangen ist vom Heiligen Geist, geboren von der Jungfrau Maria, gelitten unter Pontio Pilato, gekreuzigt, gestorben und begraben, niedergefahren zur Hölle, am dritten Tage auferstanden von den Toten, aufgefahren gen hunc articulum credunt. Hunc enim omnes praetervolumus, audientes quidem et memorantes, sed nequaquam videntes aut animo expendentes, quid ipsa verba nobis non oscitanter aut somnulosè expendendum proponant. 21) Quodsi enim haec ex animo crederemus, horum verborum iussa haud dubie capessere-mus, neque tam superbe incederemus, insolenter intumesceremus, quasi a nobismet ipsis aut nostra opera partis, vita, divitiis, potentia, dignitate, honoribus etc. frueremur, ut alii servitute nobis obnoxii nos pertimescere co-gerentur, quemadmodum infelix ac perversus mundus facilitate consuevit, qui in caecitate sua submersus est, omnibus bonis et muneribus

22) Quocirca hic articulus omnes nos [R. 492] humiliare ac conterere debebat, si haec vera esse certo et constanter crederemus: siquidem quotidie victi carnis affectibus peccamus oculis, auribus, manibus, corpore et anima, opibus atque divitiis, breviter omnibus rebus, quascunque possidemus. Praecipue vero illi, qui etiamnum impietate instigati divino Verbo repugnant ac reluctantur. Verumtamen Christi-

23) Proinde hic articulus nobis quotidie ex-ercendus, menti infigendus et in memoriam subinde revocandus est in omnibus, quae-cunque nobis obiciuntur, quando vel bene et feliciter quae nobis eveniunt, vel quando e periculis et necessitatibus liberati emergimus, sicut Deus haec omnia nobis largitur et facit, ut in hoc certis experimentis animad-vertentes discamus paternum eius erga nos animum et inaestimabilem caritatem. Ex hoc certe pectus incalcescit et ad gratiarum actionem prompte agendam mirifice inflammabitur, ut omnibus eiusmodi rebus ad Dei laudem et gloriam utatur.

24) Ita quidem paucissimis erutum atque expressum huius articuli sensum habemus, quantum simplicibus initio scire ac discere necesse est, et quid a Deo habeamus et acceperimus, et quid pro acceptis bonis eidem vicissim debeamus. Quae ingens et paene inae-stimabilis est cognitio, thesaurus tamen multo praestantior. Etenim hic plane vide-mus, quomodo Pater cum omnibus creaturis se nobis tradiderit, quamque nos, quamdiu hac vita fruimur, rebus omnibus opulentis-sime instruat, praeterquam quod ineffabilibus et aeternis bonis per Filium suum ac Spiritum Sanctum amplissime cumularit, ut in se-quentibus audiemus.

Articulus II.

[R. 493]

25) Et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuus et sepultus, descendit ad inferos [inferna], tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad

article. For we all pass over it, hear it and say it, but neither see nor consider what the words teach us. For if we believed it with the heart, we would also act accordingly, and not stalk about proudly, act defiantly, and boast as though we had life, riches, power, and honor, etc., of ourselves, so that others must fear and serve us, as is the practise of the wretched, perverse world, which is drowned in blindness, and abuses all the good things and gifts of God only for its own pride, avarice, lust, and luxury, and never once regards God, so as to thank Him or acknowledge Him as Lord and Creator.

Therefore, this article ought to humble and terrify us all, if we believed it. For we sin daily with eyes, ears, hands, body and soul, money and possessions, and with everything we have, especially those who even fight against the Word of God. Yet Christians have this advantage, that they acknowledge themselves in duty bound to serve God for all these things, and to be obedient to Him [which the world knows not how to do].

We ought, therefore, daily to practise this article, impress it upon our mind, and to remember it in all that meets our eyes, and in all good that falls to our lot, and wherever we escape from calamity or danger, that it is God who gives and does all these things, that therein we sense and see His paternal heart and His transcendent love toward us. Thereby the heart would be warmed and kindled to be thankful, and to employ all such good things to the honor and praise of God.

Thus we have most briefly presented the meaning of this article, as much as is at first necessary for the most simple to learn, both as to what we have and receive from God, and what we owe in return, which is a most excellent knowledge, but a far greater treasure. For here we see how the Father has given Himself to us, together with all creatures, and has most richly provided for us in this life, besides that He has overwhelmed us with unspeakable, eternal treasures by His Son and the Holy Ghost, as we shall hear.

Article II.

And in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the Virgin Mary; suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried; He descended into hell; the third day He rose again from the dead; He ascended into heaven, and sitteth on the right

Himmel, sitgend zur Rechten Gottes, des allmächtigen Vaters, von dannen er kommen wird, zu richten die Lebendigen und die Toten.

Hier lernen wir die andere Person der Gottheit kennen, daß wir sehen, was wir über die vorigen zeitlichen Güter von Gott haben, nämlich, wie er sich ganz und gar ausgeschüttet hat und nichts behalten, daß er nicht uns gegeben habe. Dieser Artikel ist nun sehr reich und weit; aber daß wir's auch kurz und kindlich handeln, wollen wir ein Wort vor uns nehmen und darin die ganze Summa davon fassen, nämlich (wie gesagt), daß man hieraus lerne, wie wir erlöst sind, und soll stehen auf diesen Worten: „an Jesum Christum, unsern Herrn“.

Wenn man nun fragt: Was glaubst du im andern Artikel von Jesu Christo? antworte aufs kürzeste: Ich glaube, daß Jesus Christus, wahrhaftiger Gottessohn, sei mein Herr geworden. Was ist nun das: ein Herr werden? Das ist's, daß er mich erlöst hat von Sünden, vom Teufel, vom Tode und allem Unglück. Denn zuvor hab' ich seinen Herrn noch König gehabt, sondern bin unter des Teufels Gewalt gefangen, zum Tode verdammt, in der Sünde und Blindheit verstrickt gewesen.

Denn da wir geschaffen waren und allerlei Gutes von Gott dem Vater empfangen hatten, kam der Teufel und brachte uns in Ungehorsam, Sünde, Tod und alles Unglück, daß wir in seinem Jorn und Ungnade lagen, zu ewigem [ewiger] Verdamnis verurtheilt, wie wir verurteilt und verdient hatten. Da war kein Rat, Hilfe noch Trost, bis daß sich dieser einige und ewige Gottessohn unsern Jammers und Elends aus grundloser Güte erbarmte und vom Himmel kam, uns zu helfen. Also find nun jene Thronen und Stodmeister alle vertrieben, und ist an ihre Statt getreten Jesus Christus, ein Herr des Lebens, Gerechtigkeit, alles Gutes und Seligkeit, und hat uns arme verlorne Menschen aus der Hölle Rachen gerissen, gewonnen, freigemacht und wiederbracht [zurückgebracht] in des Vaters Haus und Gnade und als sein Eigentum unter seinen Schirm und Schutz genommen, daß er uns regiere durch seine Gerechtigkeit, Weisheit, Gewalt, Leben und Seligkeit.

vitae, iustitiae, salutis, iustificationis ac omnium bonorum Auctor et Dominus, qui nos miseros, aerumnosos peccatores ex inferorum faucibus eripuit, asseruit inque libertatem vindicavit, irati Patris favorem et gratiam placata indignatione conciliavit ac tamquam possessionem suam in tutelam suam nos suscepit, ut nos per suam iustitiam, sapientiam, potestatem, vitam et beatitatem regat et gubernet.

Daß sei nun die Summa dieses Artikels, daß das Wörtlein „Herr“ aufs einfältigste so viel heiße als ein Erlöser, das ist, der uns vom Teufel zu Gott, vom Tode zum Leben, von [der] Sünde zur Gerechtigkeit [gebracht] hat und dabei erhält. Die Stücke aber, so nacheinander in diesem Artikel folgen, tun nichts anderes, denn daß sie solche Erlösung erklären und ausdrücken, wie und wodurch sie geschehen sei, das ist, was ihm gestanden [was es ihn gelostet], und was er daran gewendet und gewant hat, daß er uns gewönne und zu seiner Herrschaft brächte, nämlich daß er Mensch [ge-]

[in] coelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos.

26] Hoc loco secundam Divinitatis personam discimus cognoscere, ut videamus, quid praeter bona temporalia prius enumerata Deus nobis largiri soleat, nempe quomodo omnes bonitatis suae ac divitiarum thesauros semel nobis effuderit, nihilque sibi reliquum fecerit, quod nobis utendum fruendumque non imperierit. Iam hic articulus quoque late patet estque plane fecundissimus. Verum ut et hunc breviter ac pueriliter discutiamus, unum verbum aumemus, quo totius rei summam complectemur, nempe (sicut dictum est) ut ex hoc discamus, quomodo per Christum ab omni maledictione liberati simus, quod hisce verbis nititur: Et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum etc.

27] Iam ergo interrogatus a quopiam: Quid credis in Secundo Articulo de Iesu Christo? ad hunc modum responde paucissimis: Ego credo Iesum Christum, verum Dei Filium, Dominum meum esse factum. Quid hoc sibi vult: fieri Dominum? Hoc est, quod me liberavit sanguine suo a peccatis, diabolo, morte et omni exitio. Ante enim neque regem habebam, neque dominum, sed sub diaboli potestate atque imperio captivus tenebar, ad mortem condemnatus inque peccatis ac caecitate irretitus.

Iam enim a Deo creati cum omnis [R. 494 28] generis inaeestimabilia bona a Patre accepissemus, venit diabolus, nostrae felicitati invidens, et nos suis technis in apertam Dei rebellemque inobedientiam, mortem et omnia pericula pertractos iniecit, adeo ut in eius indignatione iaceremus, perpetuae damnationi adiudicati, veluti culpa nostra promerueramus.

29] Hic nulla erat amplius relicta aut spes recuperandae gratiae aut consilium adipiscendae salutis aut auxilium placandi Patris aut consilium ignoscendi delicti, donec ille immortalis Patris immortalis Filius calamitosam miseriam et exitium nostrum sua profundissima bonitate miseratus de coelo nobis opem laturus descendit, nosque ab omni et peccati et mortis ac diaboli captivitate in 30] libertatem adoptionis suae asseruit. Ita quidem omnium illorum tyrannorum atque exactorum potestas profligata et oppressa est, quorum in locum successit Iesus Christus,

31] Sit itaque haec huius articuli summa, ut haec vocula Dominus simplicissime tantum significet atque Salvator seu Redemptor. hoc est, qui a diabolo ad Deum, e morte ad vitam, a peccatis ad iustitiam reduxit, in quibus et nos conservat. Porro reliquae huius articuli partes, ordine semet consequentes, nihil faciunt aliud, quam quod talem redemptionem per Christum nobis partam declarant ac expriment, quomodo et per quem confecta sit, hoc est, quanti Christum constituerit, et quid pro ea impetranda insumperit, ut nos [R. 495 hand of God the Father Almighty; from thence He shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

Here we learn to know the Second Person of the Godhead, so that we see what we have from God over and above the temporal goods aforementioned; namely, how He has completely poured forth Himself and withheld nothing from us that He has not given us. Now, this article is very rich and broad; but in order to expound it also briefly and in a childlike way, we shall take up one word and sum up in that the entire article, namely (as we have said), that we may here learn how we have been redeemed; and we shall base this on these words: In Jesus Christ, our Lord.

If now you are asked, What do you believe in the Second Article of Jesus Christ? answer briefly: I believe that Jesus Christ, true Son of God, has become my Lord. But what is it to become Lord? It is this, that He has redeemed me from sin, from the devil, from death, and all evil. For before I had no Lord nor King, but was captive under the power of the devil, condemned to death, enmeshed in sin and blindness.

For when we had been created by God the Father, and had received from Him all manner of good, the devil came and led us into disobedience, sin, death, and all evil, so that we fell under His wrath and displeasure and were doomed to eternal damnation, as we had merited and deserved. There was no counsel, help, or comfort until this only and eternal Son of God in His unfathomable goodness had compassion upon our misery and wretchedness, and came from heaven to help us. Those tyrants and jailers, then, are all expelled now, and in their place has come Jesus Christ, Lord of life, righteousness, every blessing, and salvation, and has delivered us poor lost men from the jaws of hell, has won us, made us free, and brought us again into the favor and grace of the Father, and has taken us as His own property under His shelter and protection, that He may govern us by His righteousness, wisdom, power, life, and blessedness.

Let this, then, be the sum of this article that the little word Lord signifies simply as much as Redeemer, i. e., He who has brought us from Satan to God, from death to life, from sin to righteousness, and who preserves us in the same. But all the points which follow in order in this article serve no other end than to explain and express this redemption, how and whereby it was accomplished, that is, how much it cost Him, and what He spent and risked that He might win us and bring us under His dominion, namely, that worden, von dem Heiligen Geist und der Jungfrau ohne alle Sünde empfangen und geboren, auf daß er der Sünden Herr wäre; dazu gelitten, gekreuzigt und begraben, daß er für mich genügt hätte und bezahlte, was ich verschuldet habe, nicht mit Silber noch Gold, sondern mit seinem eigenen theuren Blut. Und dies alles darum, daß er mein Herr würde; denn er für sich der seines gethan noch bedurft hat. Danach wieder auferstanden, den Tod verschlungen und gefressen und endlich den Himmel gefahren und das Regiment genommen zur Rechten des Vaters, daß ihm Teufel und alle Gewalt muß untertan sein und zu den Füßen liegen so lange, bis er uns endlich am jüngsten Tage gar scheide und sondere von der bösen Welt, Teufel, Tod, Sünde usw.

Aber diese einzelnen Stücke alle sonderlich [heraus] auszureichen, gehört nicht in die kurze Kinderpredigt, sondern in die großen Predigten über das ganze Jahr, sonderlich auf die Zeiten, so dazu geordnet sind, einen jeglichen Artikel in die Länge zu handeln, von der Geburt, Leiden, Auferstehen, Himmelfahrt Christi usw.

Auch steht das ganze Evangelium, so wir predigen, darauf, daß man diesen Artikel wohl fasse, als an dem all unser Heil und Seligkeit liegt, und [der] so reich und weit ist, daß wir immer genug daran zu lernen haben.

Der dritte Artikel.

Ich glaube an den Heiligen Geist, eine heilige christliche Kirche, die Gemeinde der Heiligen, Vergebung der Sünden, Auferstehung des Fleisches und ein ewiges Leben. Amen.

Diesen Artikel kann ich nicht besser ordern [besser ordnen, mit passenderer Überschrift versehen] denn (wie gesagt) von der Heiligung, daß dadurch der Heilige Geist mit seinem Amt ausgedrückt und abgemalt werde, nämlich daß er heilig macht. Darum müssen wir suchen auf das Wort „Heiligen Geist“, weil es so kurz gesagt ist, daß man kein anderes haben kann. Denn es sind sonst mancherlei Geister in der Schrift, als Menschengeist, himmlische Geister und böse Geister. Aber Gottes Geist heißt allein ein heiliger Geist, daß ist, der uns geheiligt hat und noch heiligt. Denn wie der Vater ein Schöpfer, der Sohn ein Erlöser heißt, so soll auch der Heilige Geist von seinem Werk ein Heiliger oder Heilmacher heißen. Wie geht aber solch Heiliger zu? Antwort: Gleichwie der Sohn die Herrschaft überkommt, dadurch er uns gewinnt, durch seine Geburt, Sterben und Auferstehen usw., also richtet der Heilige Geist die Heiligung aus durch die folgenden Stücke, daß ist, durch die Gemeinde der Heiligen oder christliche Kirche, Vergebung der Sünden, Auferstehung des Fleisches und das ewige Leben, daß ist, daß er uns endlich in seine heilige Gemeinde und in der Kirche Schoß legt, dadurch er uns predigt und [uns] zu Christo bringt.

luerificeret suaeque ditioni subiiceret, nempe quod homo factus et e Spiritu Sancto ac Maria virgine sine omni labe peccati conceptus et natus sit, ut esset peccati Dominus; adhaec passus, mortuus et sepultus, ut pro me satisfaceret meamque culpam, quae mihi luenda fuerat, persolveret, non auro neque argento, sed proprio et pretioso suo sanguine; et haec omnia, non ob aliam rem ullam, quam ut meus fieret Dominus. Neque enim sui gratia harum rerum quidquam fecit aut opus habuit. Post id iterum surrexit devicta atque absorpta morte, ac denique coelos conscendit, suscepta imperii administratione, sedens ad dexteram Patris, ut diaboli ac omnes potestates ad illius pedes proiectae obedire cogantur, donec nos in die novissimo prorsus ab hoc pravo saeculo, diabolo, morte, peccatis liberatos separet ac segreget.

32] Ceterum hasce partes singillatim tractare huic compendioso et pro pueris instituto sermoni non convenit, sed prolixius concionibus, quae per totius anni circulum habentur, praesertim iis temporibus, quae talibus prolixiore sermone tractandis destinata sunt, de nativitate, passione, resurrectione, ascensione Christi etc.

33] Quin etiam totum evangelium, quod praedicamus, eo tendit, ut hunc articulum probe percipiamus, ut in quo totius salutis et felicitatis nostrae summa sita est, quemque ob usum et fecunditatem suam longe lateque patentem nunquam satis perdiscere possumus.

Articulus III.

34] Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam ecclesiam catholicam, communionem sanctorum, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem et vitam aeternam. Amen.

Hunc articulum non alio commodius [B. 496 35] quam, sicut dictum, ad sanctificationem referre possum, quod videlicet per hunc Spiritum Sanctus eiusque officium, nempe quod sanctificet, adumbratur et depingatur. Quare huic verbo nitendum est: Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, quod tam stricte et breviter comprehensum sit, ut aliud habere nequeamus.

36] Sunt enim aliqui multiplices in Scriptura spiritus, veluti humani, coelestes et mali spiritus. Verum enim vero Spiritus Dei solus Sanctus Spiritus dicitur, hoc est, qui nos sanctificavit et adhuc sanctificat. Nam quemadmodum Pater creator, Filius redemptor aut salvator dicitur, ita quoque Spiritus Sanctus ab officii sui opere sanctus aut sanctificator 37] dicendus est. Quae vero huius sanctificationis est ratio? Respondeo: Quemadmodum Filius dominum suum, quo nos sibi peculiariter vindicavit, per suam nativitatem, mortem, resurrectionem etc. consequitur, ita quoque Spiritus Sanctus sanctificationis munus exsequitur per sequentia, hoc est, per communionem sanctorum aut ecclesiam Christianorum, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem et vitam aeternam. Hoc est, primum nos ducit Spiritus Sanctus in sanctam communionem suam, ponens in sinum ecclesiae, per quam nos docet et Christo adducit.

He became man, conceived and born without [any stain of] sin, of the Holy Ghost and of the Virgin Mary, that He might overcome sin; moreover, that He suffered, died and was buried, that He might make satisfaction for me and pay what I owe, not with silver nor gold, but with His own precious blood. And all this, in order to become my Lord; for He did none of these for Himself, nor had He any need of it. And after that He rose again from the dead, swallowed up and devoured death, and finally ascended into heaven and assumed the government at the Father's right hand, so that the devil and all powers must be subject to Him and lie at His feet, until finally, at the last day, He will completely part and separate us from the wicked world, the devil, death, sin, etc.

But to explain all these single points separately belongs not to brief sermons for children, but rather to the ampler sermons that extend throughout the entire year, especially at those times which are appointed for the purpose of treating at length of each article — of the birth, sufferings, resurrection, ascension of Christ, etc.

Ay, the entire Gospel which we preach is based on this, that we properly understand this article as that upon which our salvation and all our happiness rest, and which is so rich and comprehensive that we never can learn it fully.

Article III.

I believe in the Holy Ghost; the holy Christian Church, the communion of saints; the forgiveness of sins; the resurrection of the body; and the life everlasting. Amen.

This article (as I have said) I cannot relate better than to Sanctification, that through the same the Holy Ghost, with His office, is declared and depicted, namely, that He makes holy. Therefore we must take our stand upon the word Holy Ghost, because it is so precise and comprehensive that we cannot find another. For there are, besides, many kinds of spirits mentioned in the Holy Scriptures, as, the spirit of man, heavenly spirits, and evil spirits. But the Spirit of God alone is called Holy Ghost, that is, He who has sanctified and still sanctifies us. For as the Father is called Creator, the Son Redeemer, so the Holy Ghost, from His work, must be called Sanctifier, or One that makes holy. But how is such sanctifying done? Answer: Just as the Son obtains dominion, whereby He wins us, through His birth, death, resurrection, etc., so also the Holy Ghost effects our sanctification by the following parts, namely, by the communion of saints or the Christian Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting; that is, He first leads us into His holy congregation, and places us in the bosom of the Church, whereby He preaches to us and brings us to Christ.

Denn weder du noch ich könnten immermehr [je] etwas von Christo wissen noch an ihn glauben und [ihn] zum Herrn kriegen, wo es nicht durch die Predigt des Evangelii von dem Heiligen Geist würde angetragen und uns in Bosern [in den Bufen] geschenkt. Das Wort ist geschehen und ausgerichtet; denn Christus hat uns den Schatz erworben und gewonnen durch sein Leiden, Sterben und Auferstehen usw. Aber wenn das Wort verborgen bliebe, daß niemand [es] wüßte, so wäre es umsonst und verloren. Daß nun solcher Schatz nicht begraben bliebe, sondern angelegt und genossen würde, hat Gott das Wort ausgehen und verkündigen lassen, darin den Heiligen Geist [ge-] geben, uns solchen Schatz und Erlösung heimzubringen und zu[zu]eignen. Darum ist das Heilige nichts anderes, denn zu dem Herrn Christo bringen, solch Gut zu empfangen, dazu wir von uns selbst nicht kommen könnten.

So lerne nun diesen Artikel aufs deutlichste verstehen. Wenn man fragt: Was meinst du mit den Worten: Ich glaube an den Heiligen Geist? daß du könntest antworten: Ich glaube, daß mich der Heilige Geist heilig macht, wie sein Name ist. Womit tut er aber solches? oder was ist seine Weise und Mittel dazu? Antwort: Durch die christliche Kirche, Vergebung der Sünden, Auferstehung des Fleisches und das ewige Leben. Denn zum ersten hat er eine sonderliche Gemeinde in der Welt, welche ist die Mutter, so einen jeglichen Christen zeugt und trägt durch das Wort Gottes, welches er offenbart und treibt, die Herzen erleuchtet und anzündet, daß sie es fassen, annehmen, daran hängen und dabei bleiben.

Denn wo er's nicht predigen läßt und im Herzen erweckt, daß man's faßt, da ist's verloren, wie unter dem Papsttum geschehen ist, da der Glaube ganz unter die Asche gesteckt und niemand Christum für einen Herrn erkannt hat, noch den Heiligen Geist für den, der da heilig macht, daß ist, niemand hat geglaubt, daß Christus also unser Herr wäre, der uns ohne unsere Werke und Verdienste solchen Schatz gewonnen hätte, und uns dem Vater angenehm gemacht. Woran hat es denn gemangelt? Daran, daß der Heilige Geist nicht ist dagewesen, der solches hätte offenbart und predigen lassen, sondern Menschen und böse Geister sind dagewesen, die uns haben gelehrt, durch unsere Werke selig zu werden und Gnade [zu] erlangen. Darum ist's auch keine christliche Kirche; denn wo man nicht von Christo predigt, da ist kein Heiliger Geist, welcher die christliche Kirche macht, beruft und zusammenbringt, außer welcher niemand zu dem Herrn Christo kommen kann.

Daß sei genug von der Summa dieses Artikels. Weil aber die Stüde, so darin erzählt, für die Einfältigen nicht so gar klar sind, wollen wir sie auch überlaufen.

Die heilige christliche Kirche heißt der Glaube communionem sanctorum, eine Gemeinschaft der 38] Siquidem neque ego neque tu quidquam de Christo scire possemus, aut in eum credere aut pro Domino consequi, nisi per evangelii praedicationem Spiritus Sancti opera nobis offerretur et ultro donaretur. Opus quidem ipsum completum est. Christus enim thesaurum nobis impetravit et peperit sua passione, morte et resurrectione etc. Verum si in occulto manens delitesceret, nec quisquam aliquid de eo exploratum haberet, nemini esset usui, sed plane inutilis et deperditus. Ne ergo eiusmodi thesaurus sepultus iaceat, sed eo in usum verso fruantur homines, [R. 497] Deus Verbum suum emisit praedicandum et invulgandum omnibus, in quo Spiritum Sanctum largitus est, ut eiusmodi thesauri nos 39] faceret compotes. Quare sanctificare nihil aliud est, quam ad Christum adducere, ad suscipiendum bona per Christum nobis parta, ad quae per nosmet ipsos nunquam pervenire possemus.

40] Iam ergo quam fieri potest significantissime, hunc articulum discere intelligere, ut interrogatus, quid hisce verbis significari putas: Credo in Spiritum Sanctum? prompte respondere possis: Credo Spiritus Sancti opera me sanctificari, cui rei nomen eius 41] testimonio est. Qua autem re illud facit, aut qua ratione quoque medio ad hoc utitur? Responso: Per Christianorum communionem, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectione 42] nem et vitam aeternam. Primum enim singularem in mundo communionem obtinet; haec mater est, haec quemlibet Christianum parturit ac alit per Verbum, quod Spiritus Sanctus revelat et praedicat, et per quod pectora illuminat et accendit, ut Verbum accipiant, amplectantur, illi adhaerescant inque eo perseverent.

43] Ubique enim gentium Spiritus Sanctus Verbum Dei praedicare non sinit inque corde excitat, ut accipiat, ibi frustra est ac deperditum. Quemadmodum dominante papatu accidit, ubi fides prorsus neglecta et obscurata iacuit, nemo Christum pro Domino cognovit, neque Spiritum Sanctum pro eo, qui sanctificaret, habuit, hoc est, nemo credidit Christum eum esse Dominum, qui sine operibus et meritis nostris tantum thesaurum nobis peperisset, nosque Patri reconciliasset. Et 44] quid tandem in causa fuit? Hoc scilicet, quod Spiritus Sanctus praesto non fuerit, qui talia de Christo revelasset et praedicare svisset; verum homines et mali daemones praesto fuerunt, qui docuerunt propriis [R. 498] operibus consequendam esse salutem et irati 45] Patris gratiam impetrandam. Eam ob rem neque Christianorum fuit communio. Ubi enim de Christo nihil docetur, ibi neque ullus est Spiritus Sanctus, qui Christianorum communionem solet constituere, convocare ac in unum cogere, citra cuius opem et operam nemo ad Christum Dominum pervenire potest.

46] Haec quidem de summa huius articuli sufficiunt. Cum vero partes ac membra in eo enumerata pro captu simplicium non omnino clara sint, ea quoque paucis percurramus.

47] Sanctam Christianorum ecclesiam communionem sanctorum fides nominat. Utrum-

For neither you nor I could ever know anything of Christ, or believe on Him, and obtain Him for our Lord, unless it were offered to us and granted to our hearts by the Holy Ghost through the preaching of the Gospel. The work is done and accomplished; for Christ has acquired and gained the treasure for us by His suffering, death, resurrection, etc. But if the work remained concealed so that no one knew of it, then it would be in vain and lost. That this treasure, therefore, might not lie buried, but be appropriated and enjoyed, God has caused the Word to go forth and be proclaimed, in which He gives the Holy Ghost to bring this treasure home and appropriate it to us. Therefore sanctifying is nothing else than bringing us to Christ to receive this good, to which we could not attain of ourselves.

Learn, then, to understand this article most clearly. If you are asked: What do you mean by the words: I believe in the Holy Ghost? you can answer: I believe that the Holy Ghost makes me holy, as His name implies. But whereby does He accomplish this, or what are His method and means to this end? Answer: By the Christian Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the body, and the life everlasting. For, in the first place, He has a peculiar congregation in the world, which is the mother that begets and bears every Christian through the Word of God, which He reveals and preaches, [and through which] He illumines and enkindles hearts, that they understand, accept it, cling to it, and persevere in it.

For where He does not cause it to be preached and made alive in the heart, so that it is understood, it is lost, as was the case under the Papacy, where faith was entirely put under the bench, and no one recognized Christ as his Lord or the Holy Ghost as his Sanctifier, that is, no one believed that Christ is our Lord in the sense that He has acquired this treasure for us, without our works and merit, and made us acceptable to the Father. What, then, was lacking? This, that the Holy Ghost was not there to reveal it and cause it to be preached; but men and evil spirits were there, who taught us to obtain grace and be saved by our works. Therefore it is not a Christian Church either; for where Christ is not preached, there is no Holy Ghost who creates, calls, and gathers the Christian Church, without which no one can come to Christ the Lord. Let this suffice concerning the sum of this article. But because the parts which are here enumerated are not quite clear to the simple, we shall run over them also.

The Creed denominates the holy Christian Church, communione sanctorum, a communion of saints; for both expressions, taken to-

Heiligen; denn es ist beides einerlei zusammengefaßt, aber vorzeiten [ist] das eine Stüd nicht dabeygewesen, ist auch übel und unverständlich verdeutsch: „eine Gemeinschaft der Heiligen“. Wenn man's deutlich geben sollte, müßte man's auf deutsche Art gar anders reden [ausdrücken]; denn das Wort ecclesia heißt eigentlich auf deutsch eine Versammlung. Wir sind aber gewohnt des Wörtleins „Kirche“, welches die Einfältigen nicht von einem versammelten Haufen, sondern von dem geweihten Hause oder Gebäu verstehen, wiewohl das Haus nicht sollte eine Kirche heißen, ohne allein darum, daß der Hause darin zusammenkommt; denn wir, die zusammenkommen, machen und nehmen uns einen sonderlichen Raum und geben dem Hause nach dem Haufen einen Namen.

Also heißt das Wörtlein „Kirche“ eigentlich nichts anderes denn eine gemeine Sammlung und ist von Art nicht deutsch, sondern griechisch (wie auch das Wort ecclesia), denn sie heißen's auf ihre Sprache kyria, wie man's auch lateinisch curiam nennt. Darum sollt's auf recht deutsch und unsere Muttersprache heißen: eine christliche Gemeinde oder Sammlung oder aufs allerbeste und klärste: eine heilige Christenheit.

Also auch das Wort communio, das daran hängt ist, sollte nicht „Gemeinschaft“, sondern „Gemeinde“ heißen. Und ist nichts anderes denn die Glosse oder Auslegung, da jemand hat wollen deuten, was die christliche Kirche heiße. Dafür haben die Unsern, so weder Lateinisch noch Deutsch gekonnt haben, gemacht: „Gemeinschaft der Heiligen“, so doch keine deutsche Sprache so redet noch versteht. Aber recht deutsch zu reden, sollte es heißen: „eine Gemeinde der Heiligen“, das ist, eine Gemeinde, darin eitel Heilige sind, oder noch klärlicher: „eine heilige Gemeinde“. Das rede ich darum, daß man die Worte „Gemeinschaft der Heiligen“ verstehe, weil es so in die Gewohnheit eingerissen ist, daß schwerlich wieder herauszureißen ist, und muß bald [sofort] Reheret sein, wo man ein Wort ändert.

Das ist aber die Meinung und Summa von diesem Zusatz: Ich glaube, daß da sei ein heiliges Häuflein und Gemeinde auf Erden eilser Heiligen, unter einem Haupt, Christo, durch den Heiligen Geist zusammenberufen in einem Glauben, Sinn und Verstand, mit mancherlei Gaben, doch einträchtig in der Liebe, ohne Rotten und Spaltung. Derselben bin ich auch ein Stüd und Glied, aller Güter, so sie hat, theilhaftig und Mitgenosse, durch den Heiligen Geist dahin gebracht und eingeleibt dadurch, daß ich Gottes Wort gehört habe und noch höre, welches ist der Anfang hineinzukommen. Denn vorhin, ehe wir dazu [ge]kommen sind, sind wir gar des Teufels gewesen, als die von Gott und von Christo nichts gewußt haben. So bleibt der Heilige Geist bei der heiligen Gemeinde oder Christenheit bis auf den jüngsten Tag, dadurch er uns holt, und braucht sie dazu, das Wort zu führen und zu treiben, dadurch er die Heiligung macht und mehrt, que enim idem coniunctim significat. Olim vero alterum adiectum non erat, planeque male et inepte lingua nobis vernacula expositum est. Quodsi significanter enuntiandum esset, Germanico sermone prorsus aliter proferendum foret. Siquidem haec vox ecclesia proprie nihil aliud quam congregationem significat. Porro nos Germani hanc dictionem Kirche usurpare consuevimus, quam simplices non de congregata multitudo, sed de consecratis templis aut aedificiis intelligunt. Tametsi sacra domus ecclesia dicenda non est, nisi propterea quod hominum multitudo in ea convenire soleat. Nos enim, qui convenimus praecipuum locum confuendi nobis delegimus, atque ita domui secundum multitudinem nominis quoque appellationem imponimus.

Ita haec Germanica vocula Kirche proprie nihil aliud significat quam congregationem, neque vox Germana est, sed Graeca, sicut etiam ἐκκλησία. Illi enim sua lingua κυρία, quemadmodum Latini curiam, nominant. Quamobrem recto Germanorum sermone Christianorum communio seu congregatio (eine christliche Gemeinde oder Sammlung) [R. 499] aut omnium optime et clarissime sancta Christianitas (eine heilige Christenheit) dicenda fuerat.

49] Ita quoque haec dictiuncula communio, quae alteri annexa est, non Gemeinschaft, sed Gemeinde interpretanda fuerat. Neque aliam ob rem, quam interpretandi gratia, priori adiecta est, qua quispiam haud dubie exponere voluit, quid Christianorum esset ecclesia. Pro quo nostri, qui et Germanae et Latinae linguae iuxta imperiti fuere, transtulerunt Gemeinschaft der Heiligen, cum tamen nulla Germanorum lingua ita loquatur aut intelligat. Verum recta et genuina Germanorum lingua vertenda erat: eine Gemeinde der Heiligen, sanctorum communio, hoc est, eiusmodi communio, in qua nonnisi sancti versantur, aut adhuc significantius, eine heilige Gemeinde, 50] hoc est, sancta communio. Haec ideo dico, ut verba sane et recte intelligantur, cum haec consuetudo usque adeo usu recepta inveteraverit, ut vix unquam ex hominum animis evelli possit et statim haeresin esse oporteat, ubi verbulum aliquod immutatum fuerit.

51] Huius autem appendicis haec summa est: Credo in terris esse quandam sanctorum congregatiunculam et communionem ex mere sanctis hominibus coactam, sub uno capite Christo, per Spiritum Sanctum convocatam in una fide, eodem sensu et sententia, multiplicibus dotibus ornata, in amore tamen unanimem et per omnia concordem, sine sectis 52] et schismatibus. Horum me quoque partem et membrum esse constanter credo, omnium bonorum, quaecunque habent, participem ac municipem, Spiritus Sancti opera eo perductum, iisdem uno corpore unitum, per hoc, quod Verbum Dei audierim atque etiamnum audio, quod principium est in hanc communionem ingrediendi. Ante enim, quam ad hanc pervenimus, penitus sub potestate eramus diaboli, ut ii, quibus de Deo ac Christo prorsus nihil comperte exploratum fuerat. 53] Quin etiam Spiritus Sanctus a sanctorum gether, are identical. But formerly the one [the second] expression was not there, and it has been poorly and unintelligibly translated into German eine Gemeinschaft der Heiligen, a communion of saints. If it is to be rendered plainly, it must be expressed quite differently in the German idiom; for the word ecclesia properly means in German eine Versammlung, an assembly. But we are accustomed to the word church, by which the simple do not understand an assembled multitude, but the consecrated house or building, although the house ought not to be called a church, except only for the reason that the multitude assembles there. For we who assemble there make and choose for ourselves a particular place, and give a name to the house according to the assembly.

Thus the word Kirche (church) means really nothing else than a common assembly, and is not German by idiom, but Greek (as is also the word ecclesia); for in their own language they call it kyria, as in Latin it is called curia. Therefore in genuine German, in our mother-tongue, it ought to be called a Christian congregation or assembly (eine christliche Gemeinde oder Sammlung), or, best of all and most clearly, holy Christendom (eine heilige Christenheit).

So also the word communio, which is added, ought not to be rendered communion (Gemeinschaft), but congregation (Gemeinde). And it is nothing else than an interpretation or explanation by which some one meant to explain what the Christian Church is. This our people, who understood neither Latin nor German, have rendered Gemeinschaft der Heiligen (communion of saints), although no German language speaks thus, nor understands it thus. But to speak correct German, it ought to be eine Gemeinde der Heiligen (a congregation of saints), that is, a congregation made up purely of saints, or, to speak yet more plainly, eine heilige Gemeinde, a holy congregation. I say this in order that the words Gemeinschaft der Heiligen (communion of saints) may be understood, because the expression has become so established by custom that it cannot well be eradicated, and it is treated almost as heresy if one should attempt to change a word.

But this is the meaning and substance of this addition: I believe that there is upon earth a little holy group and congregation of pure saints, under one head, even Christ, called together by the Holy Ghost in one faith, one mind, and understanding, with manifold gifts, yet agreeing in love, without sects or schisms. I am also a part and member of the same, a sharer and joint owner of all the goods it possesses, brought to it and incorporated into it by the Holy Ghost by having heard and continuing to hear the Word of God, which is the beginning of entering it. For formerly, before we had attained to this, we were altogether of the devil, knowing nothing of God and of Christ. Thus, until the last day, the Holy Ghost abides with the holy congregation daß sie täglich zunehme und stark werde im Glauben und seinen Früchten, so er schafft.

eiusque in hoc utitur adminiculo, ut Verbum praedicet atque exerceat, per quod sanctificationem efficit, communionem amplificans, ut quotidianis incrementis crescat et in fide eiusque fructibus, quos producit, corroborata fortis evadat.

Danach weiter glauben wir, daß wir in der Christenheit haben Vergebung der Sünden, welches geschieht durch die heiligen Sacramente und Absolution, dazu allerlei Trostsprüche des ganzen Evangelii. Darum gehört hierher, was von den Sacramenten zu predigen ist, und, Summa, das ganze Evangelium und alle Ämter der Christenheit, welches auch not ist, daß [es] ohne Unterlaß gehe. Denn wiewohl Gottes Gnade durch Christum erworben ist, und die Heiligkeit durch den Heiligen Geist gemacht, durch Gottes Wort in der Vereinigung der christlichen Kirche, so sind wir doch nimmer ohne Sünde unsers Fleisches halben, so wir noch am Halbe tragen.

Darum ist alles in der Christenheit dazu geordnet, daß man da täglich eitel Vergebung der Sünden durchs Wort und Zeichen hole, unser Gewissen zu trösten und aufzurichten, solange wir hier leben. Also macht der Heilige Geist, daß, ob wir gleich Sünde haben, doch sie uns nicht schaden kann, weil wir in der Christenheit sind, da eitel Vergebung der Sünden ist, beide daß uns Gott vergibt, und wir untereinander vergeben, tragen und aufhelfen.

Außer der Christenheit aber, da das Evangelium nicht ist, ist auch keine Vergebung nicht, wie auch keine Heiligkeit da sein kann. Darum haben sich alle selbst herausgeworfen und gesondert, die nicht durchs Evangelium und Vergebung der Sünden, sondern durch ihre Werke Heiligkeit suchen und verdienen wollen.

Indes aber, weil die Heiligkeit angefangen ist und täglich zunimmt, warten wir, daß unser Fleisch hingerichtet [getödtet] und mit allem Unflat beschartt [verscharrt, begraben] werde, aber herrlich hervorkomme und auferstehe zu ganzer und völliger Heiligkeit in einem neuen ewigen Leben. Denn jetzt bleiben wir halb und halb rein und heilig, auf daß der Heilige Geist immer an uns arbeite durch das Wort und täglich Vergebung austheile bis in jenes Leben, da nicht mehr Vergebung wird sein, sondern ganz und gar reine und heilige Menschen, voller Frömmigkeit und Gerechtigkeit, entnommen und ledig von Sünde, Tod und allem Unglück, in einem neuen unsterblichen und verklärten Leibe.

Siehe, das alles soll des Heiligen Geistes Amt und Werk sein, daß er auf Erden die Heiligkeit anfangt und täglich mehr durch die zwei Stücke, communione seu Christianitate non [R. 506] discedit, sed cum ea usque ad consummationem saeculi perseverat, per quam nos adducit, 54] Praeterea cernimus etiam nobis in hac Christianitate esse remissionem peccatorum propositam, quae fit per sacramenta et absolutionem ecclesiae, adhaec multiplices totius evangelii sententias, bonae spei ac consolationis plenissimas. Quare huc ea pertinent, quae de sacramentis et deinde de sacramentorum usu atque praestantia tradenda sunt et in summa totum evangelium ac omnia Christianitatis officia, quae, ut assidue exerceantur et sedulo, summe necessarium est. Etenim quamquam Dei gratia per Christum impetrata est et sanctificatio per Spiritum Sanctum facta, per Verbum divinum in unitate ecclesiae catholicae, nunquam tamen nos a peccatis sumus vacui, et hoc carnis nostrae gratia, quam adhuc adhaerentem humeris nostris circumferimus.

55] Quocirca omnia in Christianitate eo adornata sunt, ut quotidie meras peccatorum condonationes auferamus, et verbis et signis ad hoc constitutis, ad consolandam et erigendam conscientiam, quamdiu in hac vita futuri sumus. Ita facit Spiritus Sancti gratia, ut, quamquam peccatis simus contaminati, non tamen nobis noceant in Christianitate constitutis, ubi nihil aliud quam assidua et indesinens est peccatorum remissio, cum quam nobis Deus largitur, tum qua nobis inter nos vicissim utimur, ignoscentes, sufferentes et erigentes nos invicem.

56] Sed etiam extra hanc Christianitatem, ubi huic evangelio locus non est, neque [R. 501] ulla est peccatorum remissio, quemadmodum nec ulla sanctificatio adesse potest. Quocirca ab hac ecclesia omnes li semet sua sponte abalienarunt, qui non per evangelii gratiam et peccatorum condonationem, sed propriis operibus sanctificationem quaerunt ac venantur ac promereri contendunt.

57] Sed enim in hoc, quando sanctificationis opus inchoatum est et quotidie augetur, exspectamus, ut haec nostra caro cum omnibus suis sordibus et vitiis abolita et sepulta computrescat, verum praeclare et magnifice iterum prodeat et exsurgat a mortuis ad perfectam et absolutam sanctitatem, nova atque 58] immortalis vita animata. Iam enim tantum ex dimidio puri ac sancti quod, ut Spiritus Sanctus subinde habeat, quod divini Verbi praedicatione in nobis eluat ac purificet, tum in dies singulos remissionem peccatorum distribuat, usque in futuram vitam, ubi remissioni locus non erit amplius, sed homines in universum ab omni peccatorum contagio puri et sancti, pleni omni probitate atque iustitia, subtracti et liberati a peccatis, morte et omni exitio, in novam, perpetuam, glorificatam et transfiguratam vitam traduntur.

59] Ecce, haec omnia Spiritus Sancti sunt officia et opera, ut hic in terris sanctificationem exordietur, eandemque quotidie per haec or Christendom, by means of which He fetches us to Christ and which He employs to teach and preach to us the Word, whereby He works and promotes sanctification, causing it [this community] daily to grow and become strong in the faith and its fruits which He produces.

We further believe that in this Christian Church we have forgiveness of sin, which is wrought through the holy Sacraments and Absolution, moreover, through all manner of consolatory promises of the entire Gospel. Therefore, whatever is to be preached concerning the Sacraments belongs here, and, in short, the whole Gospel and all the offices of Christianity, which also must be preached and taught without ceasing. For although the grace of God is secured through Christ, and sanctification is wrought by the Holy Ghost through the Word of God in the unity of the Christian Church, yet on account of our flesh which we bear about with us we are never without sin.

Everything, therefore, in the Christian Church is ordered to the end that we shall daily obtain there nothing but the forgiveness of sin through the Word and signs, to comfort and encourage our consciences as long as we live here. Thus, although we have sins, the [grace of the] Holy Ghost does not allow them to injure us, because we are in the Christian Church, where there is nothing but [continuous, uninterrupted] forgiveness of sin, both in that God forgives us, and in that we forgive, bear with, and help each other.

But outside of this Christian Church, where the Gospel is not, there is no forgiveness, as also there can be no holiness [sanctification]. Therefore all who seek and wish to merit holiness [sanctification], not through the Gospel and forgiveness of sin, but by their works, have expelled and severed themselves [from this Church].

Meanwhile, however, while sanctification has begun and is growing daily, we expect that our flesh will be destroyed and buried with all its uncleanness, and will come forth gloriously, and arise to entire and perfect holiness in a new eternal life. For now we are only half pure and holy, so that the Holy Ghost has ever [some reason why] to continue His work in us through the Word, and daily to dispense forgiveness, until we attain to that life where there will be no more forgiveness, but only perfectly pure and holy people, full of godliness and righteousness, removed and free from sin, death, and all evil, in a new, immortal, and glorified body.

Behold, all this is to be the office and work of the Holy Ghost, that He begin and daily increase holiness upon earth by means of these christliche Kirche und Vergebung der Sünden. Wenn wir aber verniesen, wird er's ganz auf einen Augenblick vollführen und uns ewig dabei erhalten durch die letzten Worte.

Daß aber hier steht „Auferstehung des Fleisches“, ist auch nicht wohl deutsch geredet. Denn wo wir Deutschen Fleisch hören, denken wir nicht weiter denn in die Scherren [an die Fleischläden]. Aufrecht deutsch aber würden wir also reden: „Auferstehung des Leibes“ oder Leichnams. Doch liegt nicht große Macht dran, so man nur die Worte recht versteht.

Das ist nun der Artikel, der da immerdar im Werk gehen und bleiben muß. Denn die Schöpfung haben wir nun hinweg, so ist die Erlösung auch ausgerichtet; aber der Heilige Geist treibt sein Werk ohne Unterlaß bis auf den jüngsten Tag, dazu er verordnet eine Gemeinde auf Erden, dadurch er alles redet und tut. Denn er seine Christenheit noch nicht zusammen[ge]bracht noch die Vergabung ausgeteilt [hat]. Darum glauben wir an den, der uns täglich herzuholet durch das Wort und den Glauben gibt, mehrt und stärkt durch dasselbe Wort und Vergabung der Sünden, auf daß er uns, wenn das alles ausgerichtet, und wir dabei bleiben, der Welt und allem Unglück absterben, endlich gar und ewig heilig mache, welches wir jetzt durchs Wort im Glauben warten.

Siehe, da hast du das ganze göttliche Wesen, Willen und Werk, mit ganz kurzen und doch reichen Worten aufs allerfeinste abgemalt, darin all unsere Weisheit steht, so über aller Menschen Weisheit, Sinne und Vernunft geht und schwebt. Denn alle Welt, wiewohl sie mit allem Fleiß danach getrachtet hat, was doch Gott wäre, und was er im Sinn hätte und täte, so hat sie doch der keines je erlangen mögen [können]. Hier aber hast du es alles aufs allerreichste; denn da hat er selbst offenbart und aufgetan den tiefsten Abgrund seines väterlichen Herzens und eitel unaussprechlicher Liebe in allen drei Artikeln. Denn er hat uns eben dazu geschaffen, daß er uns erlöste und heiligte, und über das, daß er uns alles [ge]geben und eingenommen [eingeräumt] hatte, was im Himmel und auf Erden ist, hat er uns auch seinen Sohn und Heiligen Geist [ge]geben, durch welche er uns zu sich brächte. Denn wir könnten (wie droben erzählt) nimmermehr dazu kommen, daß wir des Vaters Ruhm und Gnade erkennen ohne durch den Herrn Christum, der ein Spiegel ist des väterlichen Herzens, außer welchem wir nichts sehen denn einen zornigen und schrecklichen Richter. Von Christo aber könnten wir auch nichts wissen, wo es nicht durch den Heiligen Geist offenbart wäre.

nostrum, qui paterni animi erga nos speculum est, extra quem nihil nisi iratum et truculentum videmus iudicem. Sed neque de Christo quidquam scire possemus, si non per Spiritum Sanctum nobis revelatum esset.

Darum scheiden und sondern diese Artikel des Glaubens uns Christen von allen andern Leuten auf Erden. Denn was außer der Christenheit ist, duo augeat, nempe per sanctorum ecclesiam et peccatorum remissionem. Porro ubi iam soluti in cinerem computruerimus, hoc ipsum in momento oculi plene absoluturus est et purificaturus, in qua perpetuo nos retinebit duobus articulis posterioribus.

60] Quod autem hic ponitur (Auferstehung des Fleisches, carnis resurrectionem), ne hoc quidem valde apte et bene lingua nostra vernacula expressum est. Etenim carnem audientes non ulterius cogitamus quam de macello. Verum recte et genuine loquendo Germanice diceremus Auferstehung des Leibes oder Leichnams, hoc est, corporis resurrectionem. (R. 502) Attamen res est momenti non magni, dummodo verborum sensum recte percipiamus.

61] Iam hic ille est articulus, cuius opus semper fervere debet et efficax persistere. Rerum enim creationem accepimus, sed et redemptionem iam effectam habemus. Porro autem Spiritus Sanctus citra intermissionem nobis sanctificandis opus suum perficit usque in extremum diem, ad quod communionem destinat, per quam omnia facit et loquitur.

62] Nondum Christianos suos omnes coegit, neque remissionis distribuendae officio prorsus perfunctus est. Eam ob rem in hunc credimus, qui quotidie nos divini Verbi praedicatione attrahit et adsciscit, fidemque impertit, augeat atque corroborat per Verbum illud et remissionem peccatorum, ut nos his omnibus perfecte absolutis, nobisque iisdem constanter adhaerentibus et mundo ac omnibus periculis iam mortuis, denique prorsus per omnia sanctos faciat, id quod iam per Verbum in fide exspectamus.

63] Ecce, hoc loco totam Divinitatis essentiam, voluntatem et operationem verbis equidem admodum brevibus, attamen opulentis et fecundis, artificiose depictam habes, in quibus omnis nostra sapientia sita est, omnem humanam sapientiam, rationem ac sensum longe lateque excedens ac superans. Nam universus mundus, quamquam sedula pervestigatione iam inde ab initio elaborarit, quidnam Deus esset, aut quid haberet animi, seu cui operi intentus esset, nihil tamen harum rerum unquam intelligentia aut ratione assequi potuit; hic vero omnia haec copiosissime in numerato

64] habes. Hic enim ipse in omnibus tribus articulis profundissimam abyssum paterni sui pectoris et meras ardentissimi et ineffabilis amoris sui flammam manifestavit reservavitque. Quippe ob id ipsum nos creavit, (R. 503) ut nos redimeret et sanctificaret, et praeterea, quae nobis possidenda et utenda subiecit, quaecunque uspiam in coelo et in terra cernuntur, Filium quoque suum et Spiritum Sanctum nobis largitus est, per quos nos ad se

65] attraheret. Neque enim unquam (ut supra ostensum est) eo propriis viribus pervenire possemus, ut Patris favorem ac gratiam cognosceremus, nisi per Iesum Christum, Dominum two things, the Christian Church and the forgiveness of sin. But in our dissolution He will accomplish it altogether in an instant, and will forever preserve us therein by the last two parts.

66] Proinde ii articuli nostrae fidei nos Christianos ab omnibus aliis, qui sunt in terris, hominibus separant. Quicunque enim

But the term Auferstehung des Fleisches (resurrection of the flesh) here employed is not according to good German idiom. For when we Germans hear the word Fleisch (flesh), we think no farther than of the shambles. But in good German idiom we would say Auferstehung des Leibes, or Leichnams (resurrection of the body). However, it is not a matter of much moment, if we only understand the words aright.

This, now, is the article which must ever be and remain in operation. For creation we have received; redemption, too, is finished. But the Holy Ghost carries on His work without ceasing to the last day. And for that purpose He has appointed a congregation upon earth by which He speaks and does everything. For He has not yet brought together all His Christian Church nor dispensed forgiveness. Therefore we believe in Him who through the Word daily brings us into the fellowship of this Christian Church, and through the same Word and the forgiveness of sins bestows, increases, and strengthens faith, in order that when He has accomplished it all, and we abide therein, and die to the world and to all evil, He may finally make us perfectly and forever holy; which now we expect in faith through the Word.

Behold, here you have the entire divine essence, will, and work depicted most exquisitely in quite short and yet rich words, wherein consists all our wisdom, which surpasses and exceeds the wisdom, mind, and reason of all men. For although the whole world with all diligence has endeavored to ascertain what God is, what He has in mind and does, yet has she never been able to attain to [the knowledge and understanding of] any of these things. But here we have everything in richest measure; for here in all three articles He has Himself revealed and opened the deepest abyss of his paternal heart and of His pure unutterable love. For He has created us for this very object, that He might redeem and sanctify us; and in addition to giving and imparting to us everything in heaven and upon earth, He has given to us even His Son and the Holy Ghost, by whom to bring us to Himself. For (as explained above) we could never attain to the knowledge of the grace and favor of the Father except through the Lord Christ, who is a mirror of the paternal heart, outside of whom we see nothing but an angry and terrible Judge. But of Christ we could know nothing either, unless it had been revealed by the Holy Ghost.

These articles of the Creed, therefore, divide and separate us Christians from all other es seien Heiden, Türken, Juden oder falsche Christen und Heuchler, ob sie gleich nur einen wahren Gott glauben und anbeten, so wissen sie doch nicht, was er gegen ihnen [wie er gegen sie] gefinnt ist, können sich auch keiner Liebe noch Gütes zu ihm versehen, darum sie im ewigen Zorn und Verdammnis bleiben. Denn sie den Herrn Christum nicht haben, dazu mit seinen Gaben durch den Heiligen Geist erleuchtet und begnabet sind.

Aus dem siehst du nun, daß der Glaube gar viel eine andere Lehre ist denn die zehn Gebote; denn diese lehrt wohl, was wir tun sollen, jene aber sagt, was uns Gott tue und gebe. Die zehn Gebote sind auch sonst in aller Menschen Herzen geschrieben, den Glauben aber kann keine menschliche Klugheit begreifen, und muß allein vom Heiligen Geist gelehrt werden. Darum macht jene Lehre noch keinen Christen, denn es bleibt noch immer Gottes Zorn und Unnade über uns, weil wir's nicht halten können, was Gott von uns fordert; aber diese bringt eitel Gnade, macht uns fromm und Gott angenehm. Denn durch diese Erkenntnis kriegen wir Lust und Liebe zu allen Geboten Gottes, weil wir hier sehen, wie sich Gott ganz und gar mit allem, das er hat und vermag [besetzt], uns gibt, zu Hilfe und Steuer, die zehn Gebote zu halten: der Vater alle Creaturen, Christus alle seine Werke, der Heilige Geist alle seine Gaben.

sciendis praeceptis nos subleuet, Pater quidem suis operibus, porro autem Spiritus Sanctus omnibus

Das sei jetzt genug vom Glauben, einen Grund zu legen für die Einfältigen, daß man sie nicht überlade, auf daß [sie], wenn sie die Summa davon verstehen, danach selbst weiter nachtrachten, und was sie in der Schrift lernen, hierher ziehen und immerdar in reicherem Verstand zunehmen und wachsen; denn wir haben doch täglich, solange wir hier leben, daran zu predigen und zu lernen.

extra Christianitatem sunt, sive gentiles sive Turcae sive Iudaei aut falsi etiam Christiani et hypocritae, quamquam unum tantum et verum Deum esse credant et invocent, neque tamen certum habent, quo erga eos animatus sit animo, neque quidquam favoris aut gratiae de Deo sibi polliceri audent aut possunt, quamobrem in perpetua manent ira et damnatione. Neque enim habent Christum Dominum, neque ullis Spiritus Sancti donis et dotibus illustrati et donati sunt.

67] Ex hoc iam clare vides et cognoscis fidem longe aliam esse doctrinam, quam sunt decem praecepta. Nam haec docent quidem, quid faciendum sit, illa vero indicat, quid Deus nobis fecerit et praestiterit. Decem praecepta alioqui etiam omnium hominum cordibus inscripta sunt, ceterum fides nulli humanae sapientiae est comprehensibilis, sed a solo Spiritu Sancto tradenda et docenda est.

68] Eam ob rem praeceptorum doctrina nondum ullum Christianum facit. Semper [R. 504 enim Dei ira atque indignatio nobis incumbit, quamdiu servare nequimus, quod Deus praeceptis suis a nobis exigit. Haec vero, nempe fidei doctrina, meram gratiam secum appor- tat, et haec iustos Deoque nos acceptos facit.

69] Per huius doctrinae cognitionem amorem ac voluptatem Dei praeceptorum faciendorum consequimur, videntes hic, quomodo Deus prorsus se nobis tradiderit cum omnibus, quae possidet, ut praesenti ope et auxilio in per- omnibus suis creaturis, Christus vero omnibus dotibus.

70] Haec quidem in praesentia de fide, fundamenti pro simplicibus locandi gratia, dicta sufficiunt, ne obruantur multitudine, ut huius rei intellecta iam probe summa ipsi postea hanc rem latius indagent et, quidquid in Scripturis didicerint, huc referant, ac subinde locupletiores intellectum quotidianis incrementis consequantur. Quotidie enim haec, quamdiu hic vivimus, docentes et discentes vix unquam satis discemus aut docebimus.

Das dritte Teil, vom Gebet.

Tertia Catechismi Pars.

Das Vaterunser.

ORATIO DOMINICA.

Wir haben nun gehört, was man tun und glauben soll, darin das beste und seligste Leben steht. Folgt nun das dritte Stück, wie man beten soll. Denn weil es mit uns also getan ist, daß kein Mensch die zehn Gebote vollkommen halten kann, ob er gleich angefangen hat zu glauben, und sich der Teufel mit aller Gewalt samt der Welt und unserm eigenen Fleisch dawider sperrt, ist nichts so not, denn daß man Gott immerdar in [den] Ohren liege, rufe und bitte, daß er den Glauben und Erfüllung der zehn Gebote uns gebe, erhalte und mehre und alles, was uns im Wege liegt und daran hindert, hinwegräume. Daß wir aber wüßten, was und wie wir beten sollen, hat uns unser Herr Christus selbst Weise und Worte gelehrt, wie wir sehen werden.

nobis obscurum foret, quid et quomodo orare debeamus, Dominus noster, Iesus Christus, ipse nos rationem et verba orandi docuit, quemadmodum mox audiemus.

1] Hactenus audivimus, quid nobis cum faciendum tum credendum sit, quibus in rebus optima et felicissima vita sita sit. Sequitur iam deinceps pars tertia, docens, quomodo

2] orandum sit. Cum enim ita nobiscum comparatum esse videamus, ut nemo hominum decem praecepta plene et perfecte servare queat, tametsi credere inceperit, et diabolus huic nostro conatui summo studio, una [R. 505 cum mundi ac propriae carnis nostrae illecebris, oblectetur ac renitatur, nihil perinde necessarium est, quam ut assiduis precibus divinas aures fatigemus et obtundamus, ut fidem et praeceptorum satisfactionem nobis largiri, sustentare atque adaugere, tum et quidquid ad eam nobis impediendum est, omne people upon earth. For all outside of Christianity, whether heathen, Turks, Jews, or false Christians and hypocrites, although they believe in, and worship, only one true God, yet know not what His mind towards them is, and cannot expect any love or blessing from Him; therefore they abide in eternal wrath and damnation. For they have not the Lord Christ, and, besides, are not illumined and favored by any gifts of the Holy Ghost.

3] hoc e medio tollere dignetur. Sed enim, ne

From this you perceive that the Creed is a doctrine quite different from the Ten Commandments; for the latter teaches indeed what we ought to do, but the former tells what God does for us and gives to us. Moreover, apart from this, the Ten Commandments are written in the hearts of all men; the Creed, however, no human wisdom can comprehend, but it must be taught by the Holy Ghost alone. The latter doctrine [of the Law], therefore, makes no Christian, for the wrath and displeasure of God abide upon us still, because we cannot keep what God demands of us; but this [namely, the doctrine of faith] brings pure grace, and makes us godly and acceptable to God. For by this knowledge we obtain love and delight in all the commandments of God, because here we see that God gives Himself entire to us, with all that He has and is able to do, to aid and direct us in keeping the Ten Commandments—the Father, all creatures; the Son, His entire work; and the Holy Ghost, all His gifts.

Let this suffice concerning the Creed to lay a foundation for the simple, that they may not be burdened, so that, if they understand the substance of it, they themselves may afterwards strive to acquire more, and to refer to these parts whatever they learn in the Scriptures, and may ever grow and increase in richer understanding. For as long as we live here, we shall daily have enough to do to preach and to learn this.

Part Third.

OF PRAYER.

The Lord's Prayer.

We have now heard what we must do and believe, in which things the best and happiest life consists. Now follows the third part, how we ought to pray. For since we are so situated that no man can perfectly keep the Ten Commandments, even though he have begun to believe, and since the devil with all his power, together with the world and our own flesh, resists our endeavors, nothing is so necessary as that we should continually resort to the ear of God, call upon Him, and pray to Him, that He would give, preserve, and increase in us faith and the fulfilment of the Ten Commandments, and that He would remove everything that is in our way and opposes us therein. But that we might know what and how to pray, our Lord Christ has Himself taught us both the mode and the words, as we shall see.

Eshe wir aber das Vaterunser nacheinander erklären, ist wohl am nötigsten, vorhin die Leute zu vermahren und reizen zum Gebet, wie auch Christus und die Apostel getan haben, und soll nämlich das erste sein, daß man wisse, wie wir um Gottes Gebots willen schuldig sind zu beten. Denn so haben wir gehört im andern Gebot: „Du sollst Gottes Namen nicht unnützlich führen“, daß darin gefordert werde, den heiligen Namen preisen und in aller Not anrufen oder beten. Denn anrufen ist nichts anderes denn beten, also daß es streng und ernstlich geboten ist, so hoch als alle andern [Gebote]: keinen andern Gott haben, nicht töten, nicht stehlen usw.; daß niemand denke, es sei gleich so viel [es sei einerlei], ich bete oder bete nicht; wie die groben Leute hingehen in solchem Wahn und Gedanken: Was sollte ich beten? Wer weiß, ob Gott mein Gebet achtet oder hören will? Bete ich nicht, so betet ein anderer; und kommen also in die Gewohnheit, daß sie nimmermehr beten, und nehmen zu Behelf [zum Vorwand unserer Worte], da wir falsche und Heuchelgebete verwerfen, als lehrten wir, man solle oder dürfe nicht beten.

quo tandem in eam consuetudinem deveniunt, ut nunquam quidquam orent, praetextentes tandem suae pigritiae aut ignaviae impietati potius, nos falsas et hypocriticas oratiunculas [R. 506] reicere, quasi vero nos unquam docuissimus, non esse orandum.

Daß ist aber je wahr, was man bisher für Gebete getan hat, geplärrt und getönt in der Kirche usw., ist freilich kein Gebet gewesen; denn solch äußerlich Ding, wo es recht geht, mag eine Übung für die jungen Kinder, Schüler und Einfältigen sein und mag gesungen oder gelesen heißen, es heißt aber nicht eigentlich gebetet. Das heißt aber gebetet, wie das andere Gebot lehrt: „Gott anrufen in allen Nöten“. Das will er von uns haben, und soll nicht in unser[er] Willkür stehen, sondern [wir] sollen und müssen beten, wollen wir Christen sein, sowohl als wir sollen und müssen Vater und Mutter und der Obrigkeit gehorham sein; denn durch das Anrufen und Bitten wird der Name Gottes geehrt und nützlich gebraucht. Das sollst du vor allen Dingen merken, daß man damit schweige [zum Schweigen bringe] und zurücksetze solche Gedanken, die uns davonhalten und abschreden. Denn gleichwie es nichts gilt, daß ein Sohn zum Vater sagen wollte: Was liegt an meinem Gehorham? Ich will hingehen und tun, was ich kann, es gilt doch gleich so viel; sondern da steht das Gebot: du sollst und mußt es tun: also auch hier steht es nicht in meinem Willen zu tun und zu lassen, sondern soll und muß gebetet sein [* bei Gottes Zorn und Ungnade.

Daß soll man nun vor allen Dingen fassen und merken, daß man damit schweige und zurückschlage die Gedanken, so uns davonhalten und abschreden, als liege keine große Macht daran, ob wir nicht beten, oder sei denen befohlen, die heiliger und mit Gott besser daran sind denn wir; wie denn das menschliche Herz von Natur so verzweifelt ist, daß es immer vor Gott flucht [flieht] und denkt, er wolle und möge unser Gebets nicht, weil wir Sünder sind und nichts denn Zorn verdient haben. Wider solche Gedanken (sage ich) sollen wir dies Gebot ansehen und uns zu Gott kehren, auf daß wir ihn durch solchen Ungehorsam nicht höher er-

4) Prius tamen, quam ipsam orationem particulatim tractandam aggrediamur, vehementer operae pretium esse videtur, homines ad orandum ostensis nonnullis argumentis et persuasionibus hortari et provocare, veluti Christus quoque et apostoli fecisse leguntur. Et 5) hoc quidem primo loco recensendum est, ut non ignoremus divini praecepti iussu nobis orandum esse. Ita enim in secundo praecepto audivimus: Non assumes nomen Domini Dei tui in vanum, quibus verbis hoc simul exigitur, ut sanctum Dei nomen laudemus, idemque in omnibus necessitatibus precando invocemus. Invocare enim nihil aliud est, quam preces ad 6) Deum fundere, ita ut severe atque adeo serio praeceptum sit, quam omnia alia minaciter interdicta: non habendos esse alienos deos, non occidendum, non furandum etc., ne quis temere in eam opinionem veniat, ut existimet, perinde esse, oret necne; quemadmodum nonnulli crassi et inculti homines factitare consueverunt, in eiusmodi cogitationes descendentes: Quid vero multis orarem, cum nesciam, num Deus preces meas curet et audiat necne? Quodsi non oravero, oret alius. Ex

7) Quamquam hoc diffiteri non possumus, eas orationes, quae hactenus factae sunt, stentoreis clamoribus in ecclesiis vociferando et tonando etc., non fuisse orationes. Eiusmodi enim res externae, ubi harum rectus est usus, puerorum, scholasticorum ac simplicium esse possunt exercitia, legendo aut cantando consistentia, proprie tamen orationes aut 8) preces existimandae non sunt. Sed enim hoc denique orare dicitur, quemadmodum secundum praeceptum docet, Deum tempore necessitatis invocare. Hoc a nobis exigit, neque res est nostri arbitrii, verum orare debemus et cogimur, si modo Christiani perhiberi volumus, aequae atque parentibus et magistratibus omnibus obedientiae officiis obtemperare cogimur. Siquidem invocando et precando nomen 9) Dei colitur et utiliter usurpatur. Quemadmodum enim hoc non valet, si filius ad patrem diceret: Quid Deus meam obedientiam curat, et quid commodi mea tibi praestare potest obedientia? Ego vadam facturus, quod potero, perinde est, sive morigerus sim necne. Verum hic exstat praeceptum Dei; velis, nolis, facias oportet. Ita quoque hic, ut omittas aut facias, in tuo arbitratu situm non est, sed omnino orandum est, nisi Dei iram et indignationem incurrere velis.

10) Atque haec diligenter et ante omnia sunt notanda, ut his reprimamus et expellamus cogitationes, quibus ab orando abstrahimur et deterremur, quasi parum [parvi] momenti res sit non orare, aut quasi, ut orent, mandatum sit iis tantum, qui sanctitate excellant et in maiore apud Deum gratia sint quam nos; quemadmodum humanum cor tam desperatum et natura perversum esse experimur, ut semper Deum fugiat et cogitet Deum aversari nostras preces, cum simus [R. 507] peccatores et nihil aliud quam iram meriti 11) simus. Ad has cogitationes repellendas

But before we explain the Lord's Prayer part by part, it is most necessary first to exhort and incite people to prayer, as Christ and the apostles also have done. And the first matter is to know that it is our duty to pray because of God's commandment. For thus we heard in the Second Commandment: Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord, thy God, in vain, that we are there required to praise that holy name, and call upon it in every need, or to pray. For to call upon the name of God is nothing else than to pray. Prayer is therefore as strictly and earnestly commanded as all other commandments: to have no other God, not to kill, not to steal, etc. Let no one think that it is all the same whether he pray or not, as vulgar people do, who grope in such delusion and ask, Why should I pray? Who knows whether God heeds or will hear my prayer? If I do not pray, some one else will. And thus they fall into the habit of never praying, and frame a pretext, as though we taught that there is no duty or need of prayer, because we reject false and hypocritical prayers.

But this is true indeed that such prayers as have been offered hitherto when men were babbling and bawling in the churches were no prayers. For such external matters, when they are properly observed, may be a good exercise for young children, scholars, and simple persons, and may be called singing or reading, but not really praying. But praying, as the Second Commandment teaches, is to call upon God in every need. This He requires of us, and has not left it to our choice. But it is our duty and obligation to pray if we would be Christians, as much as it is our duty and obligation to obey our parents and the government; for by calling upon it and praying the name of God is honored and profitably employed. This you must note above all things, that thereby you may silence and repel such thoughts as would keep and deter us from prayer. For just as it would be idle for a son to say to his father, "Of what advantage is my obedience? I will go and do what I can; it is all the same"; but there stands the commandment, Thou shalt and must do it, so also here it is not left to my will to do it or leave it undone, but prayer shall and must be offered at the risk of God's wrath and displeasure.

This is therefore to be understood and noted before everything else, in order that thereby we may silence and repel the thoughts which would keep and deter us from praying, as though it were not of much consequence if we do not pray, or as though it were commanded those who are holier and in better favor with God than we; as, indeed, the human heart is by nature so despondent that it always flees from God and imagines that He does not wish or desire our prayer, because we are sinners and have merited nothing but wrath. Against such thoughts (I say) we should rejürnen. Denn durch solch Gebot gibt er genugsam zu verstehen, daß er uns nicht von sich stoßen noch verjagen will, ob wir gleich Sünder sind, sondern vielmehr zu sich ziehen, daß wir uns vor ihm demüthigen, solchen unsern Jammer und Noth klagen, um Gnade und Hilfe bitten. Daher ließt man in der Schrift, daß er auch jürnt über die, so um ihrer Sünde willen geschlagen worden, daß sie sich nicht wieder zu ihm lehrten und durch das Gebet wider seinen Zorn gelegt und Gnade gesucht haben].

Daraus sollst du nun schließen und denken, weil es so hoch geboten ist zu beten, daß heileibe niemand sein Gebet verachten soll, sondern groß und viel davon halten, und nimm immer das Gleichniß von den andern Geboten. Ein Kind soll heileibe nicht seinen Gehorsam gegen Vater und Mutter verachten, sondern immer gedenken: Das Werk ist ein Werk des Gehorsams, und daß ich tue, tue ich nicht anderer Meinung, denn daß [es] in dem Gehorsam und Gottes Gebot geht, darauf ich könnte gründen und fußen und solches groß achten, nicht um meiner Würdigkeit willen, sondern um des Gebots willen. Also auch hier; was und wofür wir bitten, sollen wir so ansehen, als von Gott gefordert und in seinem Gehorsam getan, und also denken: Meinethalben wäre es nichts, aber darum soll es gelten, daß [es] Gott geboten hat. Also soll ein jeglicher, was er auch zu bitten hat, immer vor Gott kommen mit dem Gehorsam dieses Gebots.

Darum bitten wir und vermahnen aufs fleißigste jedermann, daß man solches zu Herzen nehme und in seinem Weg unser Gebet verachte. Denn man bisher also gelehrt hat in's Teufels Namen, daß niemand solches geachtet hat und gemeint, es wäre genug, daß das Werk getan wäre, Gott erhört's oder hört's nicht. Das heißt das Gebet in die Schanze geschlagen [auf gut Glück gebetet] und auf Abenteuer hin gemurrt [aufs Geratewohl hergeleiert]; darum ist es ein verlorene Gebet. Denn wir uns solche Gedanken lassen irren [irremachen] und abschreden: Ich bin nicht heilig noch würdig genug; wenn ich so fromm und heilig wäre als St. Petrus oder Paulus, so wollte ich beten. Aber nur weit hinweg mit solchen Gedanken! Denn eben das Gebot, das St. Paulus [ge]troffen hat, das trifft mich auch, und ist ebenjowohl um meinethalben das andere Gebot gestellt als um seinethalben, daß er kein besser noch heiliger Gebot zu rühmen hat.

lus orare iussus est, etiam nos orare iubemus. secundum praeceptum constitutum est, ut non praestantius.

Darum sollst du so sagen: Mein Gebet, das ich tue, ist ja so köstlich, heilig und Gott gefällig, als St. Paulus' und der Allerheiligsten. Ursache: denn ich will ihn gerne lassen heiliger sein der Person halben, aber des Gebots halben nicht, weil Gott das Gebet nicht der Person halben ansieht, sondern seines Wortes und Gehorsams halben.

rursum dico hoc praeceptum nobis esse considerandum, ut ad Deum convertamur, ne ista inobedientia gravius eum iritemus. Hoc enim mandato (ut scilicet oremus) satis ipse ostendit se non velle nos et preces nostras reicere, a se abigere et pellere, etiamsi simus peccatores, sed magis allicere ad se, ut coram ipso humiliemur et nostras miseras et aerumnas ipsi aperiamus, et gratiam opemque eius imploremus. Hinc in Scriptura Sacra legitur Deum etiam irasci iis, qui propter peccata sua percussi et puniti ad Deum converti et oratione sua irae eius se quasi opponere et gratiam implorare noluerunt.

12] Ex hoc iam ita collige ac cogita, cum tantopere nobis iniunctum sit, ut oremus, ne quo modo quispiam suas preces contemnat, sed magni aestimet et magnifice de illis sentiat. Ac subinde similitudinem ex aliis praeceptis petas. Puer nequaquam suam erga parentes obedientiam leviter ducere debet, verum semper cogitare: Hoc opus obedientiae est, et quidquid facio, non alio animo facio, quam quod in obedientia et praecepto Dei versor, cui inniti possum, atque hoc ipsum magni pendere, non quidem meae dignitatis gratia, sed propter praeceptum. Ad eundem plane modum et hic, quidquid et pro quacunque re Deum oraverimus, ita intuendum est, quasi a Deo exactum inque eius obedientia factum, atque ita cogitare oportet: Quantum ad me quidem attinet, haec oratio nullius est habenda momenti aut pretii, quia peccator sum; verum ob id respuenda non est, cum Deus orare mihi praeceperit. Ita cuique, quamcunque tandem rem precibus impetrare statuit, semper ad Deum huius praecepti obedientia veniendum est.

14] Quocirca omnes homines per Christum obtestamur et hortamur, quam fieri [R. 508] potest diligentissime, ut haec denique nobis cordi sint, neve ullo pacto nostras orationes tamquam rem nihili aspernemur. Ita enim hactenus in mali generis nomine docti sunt homines, ut nemo harum rerum ullam curam susceperit, aestimaritque satis superque actum esse, modo opus orandi factum esset; Deus hoc exaudiret necne, non magnopere laborabatur. Sed hoc est orationem et invocationem nauci facere, aut loqui ventis ac litori, ita nequiquam murmurando; ob id inutilis 15] quoque et infrugifera fuit oratio. Eius enim generis cogitationibus conturbamur et absterremur: Ego quidem sanctus non sum neque satis dignus; quodsi tanta probitate ac vitae sanctimonia praeclerem, ut divus Petrus aut Paulus, libenter orare vellem. Sed procul hinc aufer ex animo istiusmodi cogitationes. Nam hoc ipso praecepto, quo Paulus Neque minus in mei gratiam quam eius hoc liceat illi sanctius iactare praeceptum aut

16] Quare ita tibi dicendum est: Meae preces, quas ad Deum fundo, nihilo sunt deteriores aut profaniores aut Deo minus acceptae, quam fuere Pauli et omnium etiam sanctissimorum. Ratio est: Perlibenter illis, quantum ad personam attinet, cedam vitae sanctimonia, verum praecepto nequaquam. Certum

gard this commandment and turn to God, that we may not by such disobedience excite His anger still more. For by this commandment He gives us plainly to understand that He will not cast us from Him nor chase us away, although we are sinners, but rather draw us to Himself, so that we might humble ourselves before Him, bewail this misery and plight of ours, and pray for grace and help. Therefore we read in the Scriptures that He is angry also with those who were smitten for their sin, because they did not return to Him and by their prayers assuage His wrath and seek His grace.

Now, from the fact that it is so solemnly commanded to pray, you are to conclude and think, that no one should by any means despise his prayer, but rather set great store by it, and always seek an illustration from the other commandments. A child should by no means despise his obedience to father and mother, but should always think: This work is a work of obedience, and what I do I do with no other intention than that I may walk in the obedience and commandment of God, on which I can settle and stand firm, and esteem it a great thing, not on account of my worthiness, but on account of the commandment. So here also, what and for what we pray we should regard as demanded by God and done in obedience to Him, and should reflect thus: On my account it would amount to nothing; but it shall avail, for the reason that God has commanded it. Therefore everybody, no matter what he has to say in prayer, should always come before God in obedience to this commandment.

We pray, therefore, and exhort every one most diligently to take this to heart and by no means to despise our prayer. For hitherto it has been taught thus in the devil's name that no one regarded these things, and men supposed it to be sufficient to have done the work, whether God would hear it or not. But that is staking prayer on a risk, and murmuring it at a venture; and therefore it is a lost prayer. For we allow such thoughts as these to lead us astray and deter us: I am not holy or worthy enough; if I were as godly and holy as St. Peter or St. Paul, then I would pray. But put such thoughts far away, for just the same commandment which applied to St. Paul applies also to me; and the Second Commandment is given as much on my account as on his account, so that he can boast of no better or holier commandment.

Therefore you should say: My prayer is as precious, holy, and pleasing to God as that of St. Paul or of the most holy saints. This is the reason: For I will gladly grant that he is holier in his person, but not on account of the commandment; since God does not regard prayer on account of the person, but on account of His word and obedience thereto. For Denn auf das Gebot, darauf alle Heiligen ihr Gebet setzen, setze ich meines auch; dazu bete ich eben das, darum sie allzumal bitten oder gebeten haben; so ist mir's ja so hoch und mehr nöthigen denn jenen großen Heiligen.

Das sei das erste und nötigste Stück, daß all unser Gebet sich gründen und stehen soll auf Gottes Gehorsam, nicht angesehen unsere Person, wir seien Sünder oder fromm, würdig oder unwürdig. Und sollen wissen, daß Gott [es] in keinen Scherz will geschlagen haben, sondern zürnen und strafen, wo wir nicht bitten, sowohl als er allen andern Ungehorsam straft; danach, daß er unser Gebet nicht will lassen umsonst und verloren sein. Denn wo er dich nicht erhören wollte, würde er dich nicht heißen beten und so streng Gebot darauf schlagen.

Zum andern soll uns desto mehr treiben und reizen, daß Gott auch eine Verheißung dazu getan und zugesagt hat, daß es soll ja und gewiß sein, was wir bitten, wie er spricht im 50. Psalm: „Rufe mich an zur Zeit der Noth, so will ich dich erretten.“ Und Christus im Evangelio Matth. 7: „Bittet, so wird euch gegeben usw.; denn ein jeglicher, wer da bittet, der empfähet.“ Solches sollte je unser Herz erwecken und anzünden, mit Lust und Liebe zu beten, weil er mit seinem Wort bezeugt, daß ihm unser Gebet herzlich wohlgefalle, dazu gewißlich erhört und gewährt sein soll, auf daß wir's nicht verachten noch in [den] Wind schlagen und auf ungewiß bitten.

Solches kannst du ihm aufrücken [vorhalten] und sprechen: Hier komme ich, lieber Vater, und bitte, nicht aus meinem Vornehmen noch auf eigene Würdigkeit, sondern auf dein Gebot und Verheißung, so mir nicht fehlen noch lügen kann. Wer nun solcher Verheißung nicht glaubt, soll abermal wissen, daß er Gott erzürnt, als der ihn aufs höchste unehrt und lügen straft.

Aber das soll uns auch loden und ziehen, daß Gott neben dem Gebot und Verheißung zubor-sommt und selbst die Worte und Weise stellt und uns in [den] Mund legt, wie und was wir beten sollen, auf daß wir sehen, wie herzlich er sich unserrer Noth annimmt, und je nicht daran zweifeln, daß ihm solch Gebet gefällig sei und gewißlich erhört werde, welches gar ein großer Vorteil ist vor allen andern Gebeten, so wir selbst erdenken möchten. Denn da würde das Gewissen immer in Zweifel stehen und sagen: Ich habe gebeten, aber wer weiß, wie es ihm gefällt, oder ob ich die [das] rechte Maß und Weise [ge]troffen habe. Darum ist auf Erden kein edler Gebet zu finden denn das tägliche Vaterunser, weil es solch trefflich Zeugnis hat, daß [es] Gott herzlich gerne hört, dafür wir nicht der Welt Gut sollten nehmen.

inveniri precatio, cum tam praeclara habeat testimonia, quod Deo tam ex animo arrideat, pro qua totius orbis divitias commutare non debeamus.

Und ist auch darum also vorgeschrieben, daß wir sehen und bedenken die Noth, so uns bringen und zwingen soll, ohne Unterlaß zu beten. Denn wer da bitten will, der muß etwas bringen, vortragen enim habeo Deum nequaquam orationem personae gratia respicere, sed propter verbum suum atque obedientiam sibi praestitam atque exhibitam. Ei enim praecepto, cui omnes sancti orando innixi sunt, ego quoque precans innitor; adhaec eadem ipsa precor, quae ipsi omnes ad unum precantur aut precati sunt.

17] Haec quidem prima huius exhortationis pars sit et omnium maxime necessaria, ut omnis nostra oratio divinae obedientiae innitatur, nullo nostrae personae respectu, sive iusti simus sive peccatores, digni an [R. 509 18] indigni. Et sciendum est Deum nullo modo aequale laturum, ut ista in iocum convertantur, sed graviter nos et acerbè puniaturum, si segnes in orando fuerimus, non secus ac omnem aliam inobedientiam punire solet; deinde, quod nostras preces frustra ac temere effundi non patietur. Si enim te audire nolle, ut orares, nunquam tam severe tibi praecepisset.

19] Alterum, quod nos ad orandum hoc impensus instigare debebat, hoc est, quod Deus orationi quoque promissionem adiunxerit, pollicitus certo fore, quidquid orantes petierimus. Quemadmodum hoc testatur Psalmus 50, 15: Invoca me in die tribulationis, et eripiam te. Et Christus Matth. 7, 7: Petite et dabitur vobis etc. Quicumque enim petit, accipit. His 20] utique promissionibus pectora nostra excitanda erant et inflammanda, ut cum voluptate et amore Deum invocaremus, cum ipse suomet verbo testatum faciat, sibi nostras orationes impense placere easque exaudiri, ne ipsi eas respiciamus aut nihili pendamus, in incertum orantes.

21] Haec igitur illi potes obicere, ita dicens: Venio ad te, carissime Pater, oratum, non quidem ex proprio arbitrio aut proposito aut propria dignitate adductus, sed tuo praecepto ac promisso incitatus, quae mihi nequaquam mentientur. Iam qui tali promissioni fidem non habet, iterum sciat se Deum ad iracundiam provocasse, ut qui summa eum afficit contumelia ac mendacii insinulat.

22] Praeter haec etiam hoc ipso ad orandum non mediocriter pellicendi et pertrahendi essemus, quod Deus iuxta praeceptum et promissionem etiam antevertit nos, ipse verba ac modum orandi nobis praescribens, ac velut praemansum in os inserens, quomodo et quid nos orare oporteat, ut videamus, quam amanter necessitas nostra sibi curae sit, neque ullo pacto dubitemus nostras orationes sibi [R. 510 23] placere, easque certo exaudiri. Quare sane dominica seu ab ipso Domino praescripta nobis oratio longe antecellit omnes reliquas, quas ipsi excogitare possemus. Etenim in his conscientia semper futura esset in dubio atque dictura: Oravi quidem, ceterum ignoro, quomodo illi placuerit, aut num legitimum modum ac mensuram orandi assecutus sim.

Quapropter hac nobilior in terris non potest

24] Quin etiam eam ob rem certis verbis praescripta est, ut videamus et in animum revocemus necessitatem, qua ad indesinenter orandum adigendi et impellendi essemus.

on the commandment on which all the saints rest their prayer I, too, rest mine. Moreover, I pray for the same thing for which they all pray and ever have prayed; besides, I have just as great a need of it as those great saints, yea, even a greater one than they.

Let this be the first and most important point, that all our prayers must be based and rest upon obedience to God, irrespective of our person, whether we be sinners or saints, worthy or unworthy. And we must know that God will not have it treated as a jest, but be angry, and punish all who do not pray, as surely as He punishes all other disobedience; next, that He will not suffer our prayers to be in vain or lost. For if He did not intend to answer your prayer, He would not bid you pray and add such a severe commandment to it.

In the second place, we should be the more urged and incited to pray because God has also added a promise, and declared that it shall surely be done to us as we pray, as He says Ps., 50, 15: Call upon Me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee. And Christ in the Gospel of St. Matthew, 7, 7: Ask, and it shall be given you. For every one that asketh receiveth. Such promises ought certainly to encourage and kindle our hearts to pray with pleasure and delight, since He testifies with His [own] word that our prayer is heartily pleasing to Him, moreover, that it shall assuredly be heard and granted, in order that we may not despise it or think lightly of it, and pray at a venture.

This you can hold up to Him and say: Here I come, dear Father, and pray, not of my own purpose nor upon my own worthiness, but at Thy commandment and promise, which cannot fail or deceive me. Whoever, therefore, does not believe this promise must know again that he excites God to anger as a person who most highly dishonors Him and reproaches Him with falsehood.

Besides this, we should be incited and drawn to prayer because in addition to this commandment and promise God anticipates us, and Himself arranges the words and form of prayer for us, and places them upon our lips as to how and what we should pray, that we may see how heartily He pities us in our distress, and may never doubt that such prayer is pleasing to Him and shall certainly be answered; which [the Lord's Prayer] is a great advantage indeed over all other prayers that we might compose ourselves. For in them the conscience would ever be in doubt and say: I have prayed, but who knows how it pleases Him, or whether I have hit upon the right proportions and form? Hence there is no nobler prayer to be found upon earth than the Lord's Prayer which we daily pray, because it has this excellent testimony, that God loves to hear it, which we ought not to surrender for all the riches of the world.

And it has been prescribed also for this reason that we should see and consider the distress which ought to urge and compel us to und nennen, des er begehrt; wo nicht, so kann es kein Gebet heißen.

Darum haben wir billig der Mönche und Pfaffen Gebete verworfen, die Tag und Nacht feindselig [wie Feinde] heulen und murren; aber ihrer keiner denkt um ein Haar breit zu bitten, und wenn man alle Kirchen samt den Geistlichen zusammenbrächte, so müßten sie bekennen, daß sie nie von Herzen um ein Tröpflein Weins gebeten hätten. Denn ihrer keiner je hat aus Gottes Gehorsam und Glauben der Verheißung vorgenommen zu beten, auch keine Not angesehen, sondern nicht weiter gedacht (wenn man's aufs beste ausgerichtet hat), denn ein gut Werk zu tun, damit sie Gott bezahlten, als die nicht von ihm nehmen, sondern nur ihm geben wollten.

Wo aber ein recht Gebet sein soll, da muß ein Ernst sein, daß man seine Not fühle, und solche Not, die uns drückt und treibt zu rufen und schreien; so geht denn das Gebet von sich selbst, wie es gehen soll, daß man keines Lehrens [be-] darf, wie man sich dazu bereiten und Andacht schöpfen soll. Die Not aber, so uns beide für uns und jedermann anliegen soll, wirfst du reichlich genug im Vaterunser finden; darum soll es auch dazu dienen, daß man sich derselben daraus erinnere, sie betrachte und zu Herzen nehme, auf daß wir nicht laß werden zu beten. Denn wir haben alle genug, daß uns mangelt; es fehlt aber daran, daß wir's nicht fühlen noch sehen. Darum auch Gott haben will, daß du solche Not und Anliegen klagest und anziehst, nicht daß er's nicht wisse, sondern daß du dein Herz entzündest, desto stärker und mehr zu begehren, und nur den Mantel weit ausbreitest und aufstust, viel zu empfangen.

Darum sollten wir uns von Jugend auf gewöhnen, ein jeglicher für alle seine Not, wo er nur etwas fühlt, das ihn ankocht, und auch anderer Leute, unter welchen er ist, täglich zu bitten, als für Prediger, Obrigkeit, Nachbarn, Gefinde, und immer (wie gesagt) Gott sein Gebot und Verheißung aufrufen (vorhalten) und wissen, daß er's nicht will verachtet haben. Daß sage ich darum, denn ich wollte gerne, daß man solches wieder in die Leute brächte, daß sie lernten recht beten und nicht so roh und laß hingehen, davon sie täglich ungeschickter werden zu beten; welches auch der Teufel haben will und mit allen Kräften dazu hilft; denn er fühlt wohl, was [es] ihm für Leid und Schaden tut, wenn das Gebet recht im Schwange geht.

Denn das sollen wir wissen, daß all unser Schirm und Schutz allein in dem Gebet steht.

Etenim qui orare voluerit, necessum est, ut is aliquid apportet, exponat et nominatim perstringat, quod petit; quod nisi fit, non potest dici precatio.

25] Merito itaque reieciimus omnium monachorum ac sacerdotum hactenus factas orationes, qui diu quidem ac noctu laboriose admodum ululant et murmurant, at interim nullus eorum unquam vel pro titivillio orare decrevit, et si in unum locum omnes ecclesiae rudentium asinorum officinae una cum toto omnium religiosorum examine congregarentur, non possent non fateri se nunquam ex corde vel pro minima vini guttula Deum orasse. Neque enim quisquam illorum unquam aut Dei obedientia adductus aut fide promissionis pellectus orare statuit, neque ullam necessitatem intuitus est, sed non ultra cogitavit (quando preculae vel optime demurmurae sunt), quam bonum opus facere, quo diurnum pensum Deo persolveret, ut qui non ab eo accipiunt, sed tantum illi dare volunt.

26] Ceterum ubi oratio recte instituta esse debet, necessum est, ut seria sit precatio, ut quis necessitatem sentiat, qua premitur [R. 511 et ad invocandum et clamandum impellitur. Atque ita demum fit, ut recta, quemadmodum par est, ad Deum fundatur oratio, ut nullo doctore opus sit, quomodo aliquis ad orandum se praeparet aut unde devotionem hauriat. 27] Necessitatem vero, quae cum pro nobis tum pro aliis nobis cordi esse debet, abunde satis in oratione a Christo nobis praescripta invenies, quae etiam ad hanc rem nobis servire debet, ut ex illa necessitatis saepe admoneamur, ne ad orandum segnes reddamur. Sunt enim non parum multa, quae desunt nobis omnibus; hoc tamen unum cumprimis in omnibus desideratur, quod nemo nostrum ea videat aut sentiat. Quare Deus a nobis hoc summe contendit, ut eam necessitatem, qua premeris, orans conqueraris atque exponas, non quod ignores ipse, verum ut tu cor tuum accendas ad impensius ac fortius petendum, utque sinum pallii tui saltem quam latissime distendas et aperias ad multa percipiendum.

28] Quocirca statim a pueritia assuescere conveniebat, ut quisque privatim pro sua necessitate, quamcumque tandem sibi obiectam persentisceret, tum etiam pro aliis hominibus, quibuscum versatur, quotidie precaretur, veluti pro concionatoribus, magistratibus, vicinis, familia et aliis; semperque Deum (ut dictum est) sui praecepti promissionisque admoneret, nihil haesitans eundem suas preces 29] exaudire. Haec propterea dico, perlibenter enim velim, ut his probe perceptis homines iterum recte orare perdiscerent, neque tam horridam et incultam atque ab omni devotionis affectu alienam vitam viverent, a qua in dies singulos ad preces faciendas ineptiores evadunt, quod et diabolus anxie desiderat, omnibus viribus eo instigans et iuvans; neque enim obscure sentit, quantum detrimenti sibi afferre soleat oratio fervens et sedula.

30] Hoc enim scire debemus, omnem [R. 512 tutelam ac defensionem nostram unice adeo in pray without ceasing. For whoever would pray must have something to present, state, and name which he desires; if not, it cannot be called a prayer.

Therefore we have rightly rejected the prayers of monks and priests, who howl and growl day and night like fiends; but none of them think of praying for a hair's breadth of anything. And if we would assemble all the churches, together with all ecclesiastics, they would be obliged to confess that they have never from the heart prayed for even a drop of wine. For none of them has ever purposed to pray from obedience to God and faith in His promise, nor has any one regarded any distress, but (when they had done their best) they thought no further than this, to do a good work, whereby they might repay God, as being unwilling to take anything from Him, but wishing only to give Him something.

But where there is to be a true prayer, there must be earnestness. Men must feel their distress, and such distress as presses them and compels them to call and cry out; then prayer will be made spontaneously, as it ought to be, and men will require no teaching how to prepare for it and to attain to the proper devotion. But the distress which ought to concern us most, both as regards ourselves and every one, you will find abundantly set forth in the Lord's Prayer. Therefore it is to serve also to remind us of the same, that we contemplate it and lay it to heart, lest we become remiss in prayer. For we all have enough that we lack, but the great want is that we do not feel nor see it. Therefore God also requires that you lament and plead such necessities and wants, not because He does not know them, but that you may kindle your heart to stronger and greater desires, and make wide and open your cloak to receive much.

Therefore, every one of us should accustom himself from his youth daily to pray for all his wants, whenever he is sensible of anything affecting his interests or that of other people among whom he may live, as for preachers, the government, neighbors, domestics, and always (as we have said) to hold up to God His commandment and promise, knowing that He will not have them disregarded. This I say because I would like to see these things brought home again to the people that they might learn to pray truly, and not go about coldly and indifferently, whereby they become daily more unfit for prayer; which is just what the devil desires, and for what he works with all his powers. For he is well aware what damage and harm it does him when prayer is in proper practise.

For this we must know, that all our shelter and protection rest in prayer alone. For we Denn wir sind dem Teufel viel zu schwach samt seiner Macht und Anhang, so sich wider uns legen, daß sie uns wohl könnten mit Füßen zertreten. Darum müssen wir denken und zu den Waffen greifen, damit die Christen sollen gerüstet sein, wider den Teufel zu bestehen. Denn was meinst du, daß bisher so große Dinge ausgerichtet habe, unserer Feinde Ratschlagen, Vornehmen, Mord und Aufruhr gewehrt oder gedämpft, dadurch uns der Teufel samt dem Evangelio gedacht hat unterzudrücken [zu unterdrücken], wo nicht etlicher frommer Leute Gebet als eine eiserne Mauer auf unserer Seite dazwischen[ge]kommen wäre? Sie sollten sonst selbst gar viel ein ander Spiel gesehen haben, wie der Teufel ganz Deutschland in seinem eigenen Blut verderbt hätte. Jetzt aber mögen sie es getroßt verlassen und ihren Spott haben; wir wollen aber dennoch beide ihnen und dem Teufel allein durch das Gebet Manns genug sein, wo wir nur fleißig anhalten und nicht laß werden. Denn wo irgendein frommer Christ bittet: Lieber Vater, laß doch deinen Willen geschehen! so spricht er droben: Ja, liebes Kind, es soll ja sein und geschehen dem Teufel und aller Welt zu Trost.

enim probus ac pius Christianus orat: Coelestis ac omnipotens Pater, precor, ut tuam voluntatem fieri sinas, illico in sublimi respondet Deus: Optime fili, plane hoc tibi persuadeas futurum, ad retundendam diaboli mundique ferociam.

Daß set nun zur Vermahnung gesagt, daß man vor allen Dingen lerne das Gebet groß und teuer achten und einen rechten Unterschied wisse zwischen dem Klappern und etwas bitten. Denn wir vermehren nichtnichts das Gebet, sondern das laute unnütze Geheule und Gemurre verworfen wir; wie auch Christus selbst lange Gewässer verwirft und verheut [verbietet]. Nun wollen wir das Vaterunser aufs kürzeste und klärlichste handeln. Da sind nun in sieben Artikel oder Bitten nacheinander gesagt alle Not, so uns ohne Unterlaß belangt [so ohne Unterlaß an uns herantritt], und eine jegliche so groß, daß sie uns treiben sollte, unser Leben lang daran zu bitten.

Die erste Bitte.

Gehelligt werde dein Name.

Daß ist nun etwas finster und nicht wohl deutsch geredet; denn auf unsere Muttersprache würden wir also sprechen: Himmlischer Vater, hilf, daß nur dein Name möge heilig sein. Was ist's nun gebetet, daß sein Name heilig werde? Ist er nicht dorthin heilig? Antwort: Ja, er ist allezeit heilig in seinem Wesen, aber in unserm [Ge]brauch ist er nicht heilig. Denn Gottes Name ist uns gegeben, weil wir Christen [ge]worden und getauft sind, daß wir Gottes Kinder heißen und die Sacramente haben, dadurch er uns mit ihm verleiht, also daß alles, was Gottes ist, zu unserm Brauch dienen soll.

Da ist nun die große Not, dafür wir am meisten sorgen sollen, daß der Name seine Ehre habe, heilig und hehr gehalten werde als unser höchster Schatz und Heiligtum, so wir haben, und daß wir als die frommen Kinder darum bitten, daß sein oratione sitam esse. Multo enim viribus imbecilliores sumus, quam ut cum diabolo eiusque sociis auxiliariis nos infestantibus aequo Marte depugnare queamus, adeo ut nos profligatos tantum pedibus conculcare possent. Ideo nobis impense danda est opera, ut ea arma manibus arripiamus, quibus instructi 31] Christiani diabolo queant resistere. Quid enim putas hactenus tam magnas res effecisse, inimicorum, nostrorum consiliis discutiendis, insidiis detegendis, caedibus tollendis, seditionibus clanculariis opprimendis et exstinguendis, quibus diabolus nos una cum evangelio penitus opprimere cogitabat, nisi aliquot proborum ac piorum hominum obstitisset oratio ac tamquam murus aeneus se interposuisset et nos defendisset? Alioqui et ipsi adversarii nostri longe cruentiorem tragoediam vidissent, quomodo nempe diabolus totam Germaniam in suo proprio sanguine submersisset. Nunc vero salse haec illi et confidenter rideant licet et pro ludibrio habeant; nos tamen et ipsi et diabolo solius orationis adminiculo sat fortes erimus, dummodo diligenter oraverimus, 32] nec segnes facti fuerimus. Ubicunque

33] Hactenus haec monendi gratia dicta sint, ut ante omnia discamus orationem magni facere, veroque discrimine discernere verbum multiloquium ab oratione aliquid petente. Nequaquam enim precationes reiicimus, verum nonnisi mere inutilem illum boatum ac murmur damnamus; quemadmodum ipse quoque Christus in oratione molestam et ad ostentationem compositam battologiam damnat [R. 513 34] ac prohibet. Iam vero ipsam orationem ab eodem nobis traditam paucis tractabimus, et quam fieri potest clarissime. Sunt autem in his septem articulis sive precationibus omnes necessitates ordine comprehensae, quae nobis subinde contingunt, et unaquaeque harum ita magna est et vehemens, ut ea per omnem vitam nostram ad orandum impellendi essemus.

Prima Precatio [Petitio].

35] Sanctificetur nomen tuum.

36] Hoc aliquanto obscurius dictum est, nec significanter expressum. Lingua enim nobis vernacula ita diceremus: Coelestis Pater, fac, quaesio, ut tantum nomen tuum sanctum sit. 37] Quid ergo sibi vult haec oratio, ut nomen eius sanctum fiat? Annon antea sanctum est? Responsio: Imo vero nunquam non sanctum est in sua essentia, at in usu nostro sanctum non est. Dei enim nomen nobis datum et inditum est, posteaquam Christiani facti et baptizati sumus, ut filii Dei vocemur et sacramenta habeamus, per quae illi uniti et copulati sumus, ita ut omnia, quaecunque Dei sunt, usui nostro servire debeant.

38] Ceterum hic iam nobis magna necessitas incumbit et imponitur, quae nobis cum primis curae esse debet, et nomini divino suus honor habeatur, ut sancte ac reverenter tractetur, veluti thesaurus noster unicus, quo are far too feeble to cope with the devil and all his power and adherents that set themselves against us, and they might easily crush us under their feet. Therefore we must consider and take up those weapons with which Christians must be armed in order to stand against the devil. For what do you think has hitherto accomplished such great things, has checked or quelled the counsels, purposes, murder, and riot of our enemies, whereby the devil thought to crush us, together with the Gospel, except that the prayer of a few godly men intervened like a wall of iron on our side? They should else have witnessed a far different tragedy, namely, how the devil would have destroyed all Germany in its own blood. But now they may confidently deride it and make a mock of it; however, we shall nevertheless be a match both for themselves and the devil by prayer alone, if we only persevere diligently and not become slack. For whenever a godly Christian prays: Dear Father, let Thy will be done, God speaks from on high and says: Yes, dear child, it shall be so, in spite of the devil and all the world.

Let this be said as an exhortation, that men may learn, first of all, to esteem prayer as something great and precious, and to make a proper distinction between babbling and praying for something. For we by no means reject prayer, but the bare, useless howling and murmuring we reject, as Christ Himself also rejects and prohibits long palavers. Now we shall most briefly and clearly treat of the Lord's Prayer. Here there is comprehended in seven successive articles, or petitions, every need which never ceases to relate to us, and each so great that it ought to constrain us to keep praying it all our lives.

The First Petition.

Hallowed be Thy name.

This is, indeed, somewhat obscure, and not expressed in good German, for in our mother-tongue we would say: Heavenly Father, help that by all means Thy name may be holy. But what is it to pray that His name may be holy? Is it not holy already? Answer: Yes, it is always holy in its nature, but in our use it is not holy. For God's name was given us when we became Christians and were baptized, so that we are called children of God and have the Sacraments, by which He so incorporates us in Himself that everything which is God's must serve for our use.

Here now the great need exists for which we ought to be most concerned, that this name have its proper honor, be esteemed holy and sublime as the greatest treasure and sanctuary

Name, der sonst im Himmel heilig ist, auch auf Erden bei uns und aller Welt heilig sei und bleibe.

Wie wird er nun unter uns heilig? Antwort, aufs deutlichste, so man's sagen kann: Wenn beide unsere Lehre und Leben göttlich und christlich ist. Denn weil wir in diesem Gebet Gott unsern Vater heißen, so sind wir schuldig, daß wir uns allenthalben halten und stellen wie die frommen Kinder, daß er unser nicht Schande, sondern Ehre und Preis habe.

Nun wird er von uns entweder mit Worten oder mit Werken verunheiliget (denn was wir auf Erden machen, muß entweder Wort oder Werk, Reden oder Thun sein). Zum ersten also, wenn man predigt, lehrt und redet unter Gottes Namen, das doch falsch und verführerisch ist, daß sein Name die Lüge schmüden und verkaufen [annehmbar aufputzen] muß. Das ist nun die größte Schande und Unehre göttliches Namens; danach auch, wo man göttlich den heiligen Namen zum Schandbedel führt mit Schwören, Fluchen, Zaubern usw. Zum andern auch mit öffentlichem bösen Leben und Werken, wenn die, so Christen und Gottes Volk heißen, Ehebrecher, Säuffer, geizige Wänste, neidisch und Axtreder sind; da muß abermal Gottes Name um unsern Willen mit Schanden bestehen und gelästert werden. Denn gleichwie es einem leiblichen Vater eine Schande und Unehre ist, der ein böses, ungerathenes Kind hat, das mit Worten und Werken wider ihn handelt, daß er um seinetwillen muß verachtet und geschmäht werden, also auch [ge]reicht es auch zu Gottes Unehre, so wir, die nach seinem Namen genannt sind und allerlei Güter von ihm haben, anders lehren, reden und leben denn fromme und himmlische Kinder, daß er hören muß, daß man von uns sagt, wir müssen nicht Gottes, sondern des Teufels Kinder sein.

gena bona accepimus, aliter docuerimus, locuti filios Dei decet, adeo ut ob hoc ipsum male audire cogatur, nos videlicet non esse filios Dei, sed filios diaboli.

Also siehst du, daß wir eben das in diesem Stück bitten, so Gott im andern Gebot fordert, nämlich, daß man seines Namens nicht mißbrauche zu Schwören, Fluchen, Lügen, trügen usw., sondern nützlich brauche zu Gottes Lob und Ehre. Denn wer Gottes Namen zu irgendeiner Untugend braucht, der entheiliget und entweiht diesen heiligen Namen, wie man vorzeiten eine Kirche entweiht hieß, wenn ein Mord oder andere Vöberei darin begangen war, oder wenn man eine Monstranz oder Heiligtum unehrte, als das wohl an ihm selbst heilig und doch im [Ge]brauch unheilig ward. Also ist dies Stück leicht und klar, wenn man nur die Sprache versteht, daß heiligen heißt so viel, als auf unsere Weise loben, preisen und ehren, beide mit Worten und Werken.

Da siehe nun, wie hoch solch Gebet vonnöten ist. Denn weil wir sehen, wie die Welt so voll Motten und falscher Lehrer ist, die alle den heiligen Namen nobis non maior est aut amplior; utque nos tamquam probi liberi ab hoc Patre precibus contendamus, ut nomen suum, quod aliqui in coelis per omnia sanctum est, etiam in terris apud nos inque universo orbe sanctum sit ac maneant.

39) Porro autem nomen eius quomodo inter nos sanctificatur aut sanctum fit? Responsio, ut quam apertissime potero dicam: Cum et doctrina et vita nostra divina et Christiana fuerit. Cum enim hac oratione Deum [R. 514] Patrem nostrum compellemus, utique debemus, ut in omnibus ita nos geramus, quemadmodum probos liberos aequum est, ne illi simus dedecori, sed laudi atque honori.

40) Iam vero eius nomen a nobis aut verbis aut factis indigne violatum profanatur (quidquid enim in terris agimus, aut verbo aut 41) facto comprehenditur). Ac primum quidem ad hunc modum, quando sub divini nominis praetextu id praedicatur, docetur ac dicitur, quod falsum est atque erroneum, et quo seducuntur homines, ita ut eius nomine comandum ac exornandum sit mendacium, atque etiam venalium faciendum. Hoc iam summum dedecus est et contumelia, qua sacratissimum nomen Dei Patris nostri indignissimis modis 42) contaminari et afficitur. Deinde quoque quoties foede ac turpiter nomine Dei abutimur peierando, execrando, maledicendo, in- 43) cantando etc. Tercio quoque vita et operibus manifeste malis ac nefariis, cum ii, qui Christiani et populus Dei vocantur, sunt adulteri, vinolenti, avari, invidiosi, obrectatores, maledici. Hic iterum gloriosum Dei nomen nostri gratia contumeliae ac dedecori exponi- 44) tur. Sicut enim corporali patri filius male moratus ac degener infamiae est ac turpitudini, qui et dictis et factis praecepta paterna transgreditur, nobilitans semet flagitiis, ut eius gratia ab omnibus contemptus notetur ignominia: ita quoque Deo vergit in contumeliam, si nos, qui iuxta nominis eius appellationem vocati sumus atque ab eodem omnifuerimus, vixerimus, atque pios ac coelestes 45) Ita clare vides hoc articulo idem nos orare, quod in secundo praecepto Deus a nobis exigit, nimirum ne eius nomine prave [R. 515] abutamur iurando, detestando, mentiendo, fallendo etc., sed utiliter idem ad Dei honorem et gloriam usurpemus. Quicumque enim divino nomine alicuius vitii tegendi gratia abutitur, ille hoc sanctum nomen profanat, violat, conspurcat atque contaminat, non secus atque olim sacrae domus profanatae dicebantur caede humana conspersae, aut alioqui foeda aliqua turpitudine in iisdem flagitiose perpetrata dehonestatae, aut si res sacra contumeliose afficeretur, ut quae per se quidem sancta esset, 46) ipso tamen usu profana fieret. Est ergo hic articulus iam intellectu facilis, tantum verbis recte perceptis, ut sanctificare tantum significet ac laudare, extollere, honorem habere cum verbis tum operibus.

47) Iam vero ipse vide, quam ista precatio omnibus modis sit necessaria. Cum enim haud obscure videamus, quam mundus refer-that we have; and that as godly children we pray that the name of God, which is already holy in heaven, may also be and remain holy with us upon earth and in all the world.

But how does it become holy among us? Answer, as plainly as it can be said: When both our doctrine and life are godly and Christian. For since in this prayer we call God our Father, it is our duty always to deport and demean ourselves as godly children, that He may not receive shame, but honor and praise from us.

Now the name of God is profaned by us either in words or in works. (For whatever we do upon the earth must be either words or works, speech or act.) In the first place, then, it is profaned when men preach, teach, and speak in the name of God what is false and misleading, so that His name must serve to adorn and to find a market for falsehood. That is, indeed, the greatest profanation and dishonor of the divine name. Furthermore, also when men, by swearing, cursing, conjuring, etc., grossly abuse the holy name as a cloak for their shame. In the second place, also by an openly wicked life and works, when those who are called Christians and the people of God are adulterers, drunkards, misers, envious, and slanderers. Here again must the name of God come to shame and be profaned because of us. For just as it is a shame and disgrace to a natural father to have a bad, perverse child that opposes him in words and deeds, so that on its account he suffers contempt and reproach, so also it brings dishonor upon God if we who are called by His name and have all manner of goods from Him teach, speak, and live in any other manner except as godly and heavenly children, so that people say of us that we must be not God's, but the devil's children.

Thus you see that in this petition we pray just for that which God demands in the Second Commandment; namely, that His name be not taken in vain to swear, curse, lie, deceive, etc., but be usefully employed to the praise and honor of God. For whoever employs the name of God for any sort of wrong profanes and desecrates this holy name, as aforetime a church was considered desecrated when a murder or any other crime had been committed in it, or when a pyx or relic was desecrated, as being holy in themselves, yet become unholy in use. Thus this point is easy and clear if only the language is understood, that to hallow is the same as in our idiom to praise, magnify, and honor both in word and deed.

Here, now, learn how great need there is of such prayer. For because we see how full the world is of sects and false teachers, who all zum Dadel und Schein ihrer Teufelslehre führen, sollten wir billig ohne Unterlaß schreien und rufen wider solche alle, beide, die fälschlich predigen und glauben, und was unser Evangelium und reine Lehre ansieht, verfolgt und dämpfen will, als Bischöfe, Tyrannen, Schwärmer usw.; item auch für uns selbst, die wir Gottes Wort haben, aber nicht dankbar dafür sind noch danach leben, wie wir sollen. Wenn du nun solches von Herzen bittest, kannst du gewiß sein, daß [es] Gott wohlgefällt; denn Lieberes wird er nicht hören, denn daß seine Ehre und Preis vor und über alle Dinge gehe, sein Wort rein gelehrt, teuer und wert gehalten werde.

tuam orationem. Neque enim quidquam audiet gratius aut amantius, quam quod eius honor et gloria prae omnibus rebus passim unice floreat ac vigeat, eius Verbum sincere doceatur ac carum et pretiosum aestimetur.

Die zweite Bitte.

Dein Reich komme.

Wie wir im ersten Stück gebeten haben, daß Gottes Ehre und Namen betrifft, daß Gott wehre, daß die Welt nicht ihre Lüge und Bosheit darunter schüttele, sondern hehr und heilig halte beide mit Lehre und Leben, daß er an uns gelobt und geprieset werde: also bitten wir hier, daß auch sein Reich kommen solle. Aber gleichwie Gottes Name an ihm selbst heilig ist, und wir doch bitten, daß er bei uns heilig sei, also kommt auch sein Reich ohne unser Bitten von sich selbst; doch bitten wir gleichwohl, daß es zu uns komme, daß ist, unter uns und bei uns gehe, also daß wir auch ein Stück seien, darunter sein Name geheiligt werde und sein Reich im Schwange gehe.

Was heißt nun Gottes Reich? Antwort: Nichts anderes, denn wie wir oben im Glauben gehört haben, daß Gott seinen Sohn, Christum, unsern Herrn, in die Welt geschickt, daß er uns erlöste und freimachte von der Gewalt des Teufels und zu sich brächte und regierte als ein König der Gerechtigkeit, des Lebens und Seligkeit wider Sünde, Tod und böses Gewissen. Dazu er auch seinen Heiligen Geist [ge]geben hat, der uns solches heimbrächte durch sein heiliges Wort und [uns] durch seine Kraft im Glauben erleuchtete und stärkte.

Derhalben bitten wir nun hier zum ersten, daß solches bei uns kräftig werde, und sein Name so geprieset durch das heilige Wort Gottes und christlich Leben, beide, daß wir, die es angenommen haben, dabei bleiben und täglich zunehmen, und daß es bei andern Leuten einen Zufall [Beifall] und Anhang gewinne und gewaltiglich durch die Welt gehe, auf daß ihrer viele zu dem Gnadenreich kommen, der Erlösung theilhaftig werden, durch den Heiligen Geist herzu[ge]bracht, auf daß wir also allesamt in einem Königtum, jetzt angefangen, ewiglich bleiben.

Denn „Gottes Reich zu uns kommen“ geschieht auf zweierlei Weise, einmal hier zeitlich durch das Wort und den Glauben, zum andern ewig, durch die Offenbarung. Nun bitten wir solches beides, Secunda Precatio [Petitio].

Adveniat regnum tuum. [R. 518]

49) Quemadmodum primo articulo precati sumus ea, quae ad honorem et gloriam nominis Dei pertinent, ut prohibeat Deus, ne sui nominis praetextu mundus sua mendacia atque malitiam insidiose celet ac tegat, sed ipse eius gloriam claram habeat et inviolabilem cum in doctrina tum in vita, ut per nos celebretur et extollatur laudibus: ita quoque hic pre- 50) camur, ut regnum eius veniat. Verum sicut nomen Dei per se sanctum est, nos tamen oramus, ut apud nos quoque sanctum sit, ita quoque regnum eius ultro venit citra nostram precationem; nihilominus tamen precamur, ut ad nos veniat, id est, inter nos et apud nos versetur, ita ut nos quoque pars simus eorum, inter quos nomen eius sanctificetur et eius regnum floreat.

51) Quid autem regnum Dei dicitur? Responsio: Nihil aliud, quam quod supra in Symbolo fidei audivimus, quod Deus Filium suum Iesum Christum in mundum miserit, ut nos a diaboli potentia et captivitate redimeret inque libertatem assereret et ad se perductos regeret, veluti rex iustitiae, vitae, salutis et felicitatis, adversus peccatum, mortem et malam conscientiam. Ad quod etiam Spiritum Sanctum largitus est, qui talia nobis offerret per sanctum Verbum suum, perque virtutem suam nos in fide illuminaret et fortificaret.

52) Eam ob rem hic primum precamur, ut id, quod Christus nobis impetravit, apud nos fiat efficax, ut eius nomen celebretur per sanctum Dei Verbum et vitam pie et Christiane institutam, ut et nos, qui accepimus, illud constanter retineamus et quotidie in eo crescamus, ac idem ab aliis certatim arripiatur et potenter per mundum contineatur, ut multi ad regnum gratiae perveniant, redemptionis fiant participes, per Spiritum Sanctum [R. 517] adducti, ut omnes ita in huius regis regno hic inchoato perpetuo maneamus.

53) Siquidem regnum Dei duplici ratione ad nos venire dicitur, semel in hoc mundo temporaliter per Verbum et fidem, deinde aeternaliter, et hoc per revelationem. Iam wear the holy name as a cover and sham for their doctrines of devils, we ought by all means to pray without ceasing, and to cry and call upon God against all such as preach and believe falsely and whatever opposes and persecutes our Gospel and pure doctrine, and would suppress it, as bishops, tyrants, enthusiasts, etc. Likewise also for ourselves who have the Word of God, but are not thankful for it, nor live as we ought according to the same. If now you pray for this with your heart, you can be sure that it pleases God; for He will not hear anything more dear to Him than that His honor and praise is exalted above everything else, and His Word is taught in its purity and is esteemed precious and dear.

The Second Petition.

Thy kingdom come.

As we prayed in the First Petition concerning the honor and name of God that He would prevent the world from adorning its lies and wickedness with it, but cause it to be esteemed sublime and holy both in doctrine and life, so that He may be praised and magnified in us, so here we pray that His kingdom also may come. But just as the name of God is in itself holy, and we pray nevertheless that it be holy among us, so also His kingdom comes of itself, without our prayer, yet we pray nevertheless that it may come to us, that is, prevail among us and with us, so that we may be a part of those among whom His name is hallowed and His kingdom prospers.

But what is the kingdom of God? Answer: Nothing else than what we learned in the Creed, that God sent His Son Jesus Christ, our Lord, into the world to redeem and deliver us from the power of the devil, and to bring us to Himself, and to govern us as a King of righteousness, life, and salvation against sin, death, and an evil conscience, for which end He has also bestowed His Holy Ghost, who is to bring these things home to us by His holy Word, and to illumine and strengthen us in the faith by His power.

Therefore we pray here in the first place that this may become effective with us, and that His name be so praised through the holy Word of God and a Christian life that both we who have accepted it may abide and daily grow therein, and that it may gain approbation and adherence among other people and proceed with power throughout the world, that many may find entrance into the Kingdom of Grace, be made partakers of redemption, being led thereto by the Holy Ghost, in order that thus we may all together remain forever in the one kingdom now begun.

For the coming of God's Kingdom to us occurs in two ways; first, here in time through the Word and faith; and secondly, in eternity forever through revelation. Now daß es komme zu denen, die noch nicht darin sind, und zu uns, die es überkommen haben, durch tägliche Zunehmen und künftig in dem ewigen Leben. Daß alles ist nichts anderes denn so viel gesagt: Lieber Vater, wir bitten, gib uns erstlich dein Wort, daß das Evangelium rechtschaffen durch die Welt gepredigt werde; zum andern, daß [es] auch durch den Glauben angenommen werde, in uns wirke und lebe, daß also dein Reich unter uns gehe durch das Wort und Kraft des Heiligen Geistes und des Teufels Reich niedergelegt werde, daß er kein Recht noch Gewalt über uns habe, so lange, bis es endlich gar zerstört, die Sünde, Tod und Hölle vertilgt werde, daß wir ewig leben in voller Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit.

Aus dem siehst du, daß wir hier nicht um eine Partikel [ein geringes Almosen] oder zeitlich, vergänglich Gut bitten, sondern um einen ewigen, überschwenglichen Schatz und alles, was Gott selbst vermag [besitzt], das viel zu groß ist, daß ein menschlich Herz solches dürfte in [den] Sinn nehmen zu begehren, wo er's nicht selbst geboten hätte zu bitten. Aber weil er Gott ist, will er auch die Ehre haben, daß er viel mehr und reichlicher gibt, denn jemand begreifen kann, als ein ewiger, unvergänglich Quell, der, je mehr er ausfließt [ausfließt] und übergeht, je mehr er von sich gibt und nichts höher von uns begehrt, denn daß man viel und große Dinge von ihm bitte, und wiederum zürnt, wenn man nicht getrost bittet und fordert.

Denn gleich als wenn der reichste, mächtigste Kaiser einen armen Bettler hieße bitten, was er nur begehren möchte, und bereit wäre, groß kaiserlich Geschenk zu geben, und der Narr nicht mehr denn eine Kossuppe [Bettelsuppe, wie sie auf dem Hofe verteilt wird] bettelte, würde er billiger als ein Schelm und Bösewicht gehalten, als der aus kaiserlicher Majestät Befehl seinen Hohn und Spott triebe und nicht wert wäre, vor seine Augen zu kommen. Also [ge]reicht es auch Gott zu großer Schmach und Unehre, wenn wir, denen er so viele unaussprechliche Güter anbeut [anbietet] und zusagt, solches verachten, oder nicht getrauen zu empfangen und kaum um ein Stück Brots [uns] unterwinden zu bitten.

Das ist alles des schändlichen Unglaubens Schuld, der sich nicht so viel Gutes zu Gott versteht, daß er ihm den Bauch ernähre, [ge]schweige, daß er solche ewige Güter sollte ungezweifelt von Gott erwarten. Darum sollen wir uns dawider stärken und dies lassen das erste sein zu bitten, so wird man freilich alles andere auch reichlich haben, wie Christus lehrt: „Trachtet am ersten nach dem Reich Gottes, so soll euch solches alles zufallen.“ Denn wie sollte er uns an Zeitlichem mangeln und darben lassen, weil er das Ewige und Unvergängliche verheißt?

utrumque hoc precamur, ut et ad eos veniat, qui nondum in eo versantur, et ad nos, qui illud consecuti sumus, quotidianis incrementis auctum, et in futuro in vita aeterna et immortali consummandum. Horum omnium non alius quam hic sensus est: Coelestis ac omnipotens Pater, precamur te, ut nobis initium tuum Verbum impertire digneris, ut evangelium pure ac sincere per mundum praedicetur. Deinde, ut per fidem quoque susceptum in nobis operetur ac vivat, ut ita regnum tuum inter nos erectum vigeat per Verbum ac virtutem Spiritus Sancti, ut regnum diaboli abolitum prorsus extirpetur, ne quid iuris aut potestatis illi in nos relinquantur, donec prorsus subversum fuerit, peccatis, morte et orco extinctis, ut nos perpetuo in perfecta iustitia ac felicitate vivamus.

55] Ex his omnibus vides nos hoc loco non pro frusto panis aut re aliqua temporali et transitoria precari, sed pro aeterno thesauro, cuius pretium est inestimabile. Breviter pro omnibus iis, quae Deus ipse possidet, quae multo maiora sunt, quam ut homo animo concipere auderet eam fiduciam tanta postulandi, nisi ipse haec petenda nobis in mandatis de 56] disset. Verum quoniam Deus est, et quidem omnipotens, eum etiam honorem sibi vindicat, ut multo plura ac magnificentiora largiatur, quam ullus queat mente comprehendere, veluti fons perennis et indesinens, qui, quo largius ac copiosius manando exundat, hoc liberalius semet effundit. Nec quidquam impensius a nobis flagitat, quam ut multa et magna ab eo postulemus, et contra [R. 518] nobis infensus est, nihil audacter et confidenter a sua benignitate petentibus et postulantibus.

57] Nam veluti cum opulentissimus et potentissimus caesar alicui mendico eam optionem et precandam libertatem offerret, ut, quodcumque eius ferret animus, a se optaret et peteret, se paratum esse munera plane regia et magnifica largiri petenti, ille vero stolidus non plus sordido postularet sorbitio: merito utique ille pro scelerato nebulone et homine nequam haberetur, qui caesarea maiestatis mandatum ludibrio haberet, neque dignus esset amplius, qui in conspectum caesaris admitteretur. Ita quoque Deo extreme contumeliosum est tanta tamque ineffabilia bona nobis offerenti et pollicitanti, si eius inexhaustam benignitatem contemnamus, aut nos certo consecuturos non speremus, ac vix pro frusto panis impetrando precari sustineamus.

58] Verum enim vero omnis haec culpa impii incredulitatis nostrae assignanda est, non tantum bonitatis de Deo sibi met pollicenti, ut crederet ventrem a Deo nutritum iri, omitto, ut indubie speraret aliquando eiusmodi bona immortalia se consecuturum. Quare contra nos muniamus, hocque imprimis petamus, atque ita demum reliqua quoque omnia abunde habebimus, veluti Christus ipse docet [Matth. 6, 33]: Quaerite primum regnum Dei, et cetera omnia adicientur vobis. Quomodo enim patretur rerum temporalium nos urgeri inopia, cum aeterna et coelestia bona se nobis certo daturum persancte receperit?

we pray for both these things, that it may come to those who are not yet in it, and, by daily increase, to us who have received the same, and hereafter in eternal life. All this is nothing else than saying: Dear Father, we pray, give us first Thy Word, that the Gospel be preached properly throughout the world; and secondly, that it be received in faith, and work and live in us, so that through the Word and the power of the Holy Ghost Thy kingdom may prevail among us, and the kingdom of the devil be put down, that he may have no right or power over us, until at last it shall be utterly destroyed, and sin, death, and hell shall be exterminated, that we may live forever in perfect righteousness and blessedness.

From this you perceive that we pray here not for a crust of bread or a temporal, perishable good, but for an eternal inestimable treasure and everything that God Himself possesses; which is far too great for any human heart to think of desiring if He had not Himself commanded us to pray for the same. But because He is God, He also claims the honor of giving much more and more abundantly than any one can comprehend,—like an eternal, unfailing fountain, which, the more it pours forth and overflows, the more it continues to give,—and He desires nothing more earnestly of us than that we ask much and great things of Him, and again is angry if we do not ask and pray confidently.

For just as when the richest and most mighty emperor would bid a poor beggar ask whatever he might desire, and were ready to give great imperial presents, and the fool would beg only for a dish of gruel, he would be rightly considered a rogue and a scoundrel, who treated the command of his imperial majesty as a jest and sport, and was not worthy of coming into his presence: so also it is a great reproach and dishonor to God if we, to whom He offers and pledges so many unspeakable treasures, despise the same, or have not the confidence to receive them, but scarcely venture to pray for a piece of bread.

All this is the fault of the shameful unbelief which does not look to God for as much good as will satisfy the stomach, much less expects without doubt such eternal treasures of God. Therefore we must strengthen ourselves against it, and let this be our first prayer; then, indeed, we shall have all else in abundance, as Christ teaches [Matt. 6, 33]: Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. For how could He allow us to suffer want and to be straitened in temporal things when He promises that which is eternal and imperishable?

Die dritte Bitte.

Dein Wille geschehe, wie im Himmel, also auch auf Erden.

Bisher haben wir gebeten, daß sein Name von uns geehrt werde und sein Reich unter uns gehe; in welchen zweien ganz begriffen ist, was Gottes Ehre und unsere Seligkeit belangt, daß wir Gott samt allen seinen Gütern zu eigen kriegen. Aber hier ist nun ja so große Not, daß wir solches festhalten und uns nicht lassen davonreißen. Denn wie in einem guten Regiment nicht allein müssen sein, die da bauen und wohl regieren, sondern auch die da wehren, schützen und fest darüber halten, also auch hier: wenn wir gleich für die höchste Not gebeten haben, um das Evangelium, Glauben und Heiligen Geist, daß er uns regiere, aus des Teufels Gewalt erlöse, so müssen wir auch bitten, daß er seinen Willen geschehen lasse. Denn es wird sich gar wunderbar anlassen, wenn wir dabei bleiben sollen, daß wir viel Anstöße und Püffe darüber müssen leiden von dem allem, so sich untersteht, die zwei vorigen Stücke zu hindern und zu wehren.

compotes, neque non fidei ac Spiritus Sancti participes, qui nos regat, e diaboli potestate liberet, illud tamen nobis quoque nihilo segnius orandum est, ut voluntatem suam fieri patiatur Deus. Ut enim in cognita veritate persistamus, mirae exorientur tragoediae, multaeque impugnationes et casus nobis erunt sufferendi ab omnibus iis, qui duo priora summa ope impedire nituntur atque subvertere.

Denn niemand glaubt, wie sich der Teufel da widersteht und sperrt, als der nicht leiden kann, daß jemand recht lehre oder glaube, und tut ihm über die Maßen weh, daß er muß seine Lügen und Greuel, unter dem schönsten Schein göttlichen Namens geehrt, aufdecken lassen und mit allen Schanden stehen, dazu aus dem Herzen getrieben werden und einen solchen Riß in sein Reich lassen geschehen. Darum tobt und wüthet er als ein zorniger Feind mit aller seiner Macht und Kraft, hängt an sich alles, was unter ihm ist; dazu nimmt er zu Hilfe die Welt und unser eigen Fleisch. Denn unser Fleisch ist an ihm selbst faul und zum Bösen geneigt, ob wir gleich Gottes Wort angenommen haben und glauben. Die Welt aber ist arg und böse; da heßt er an, bläst und schürt zu, daß er uns hindere, zurücktreibe, fälle und wieder unter seine Gewalt bringe. Das ist all sein Wille, Sinn und Gedanken, danach er Tag und Nacht trachtet und keinen Augenblick feiert, braucht alle Künste, Lüge, Weise und Wege dazu, die er immer erdenken kann.

tas est, has cogitationes versat in animo, hoc diu indulget et otio, omnibus suis artibus, dolis, insidiis, rationibus, modis viisque utens, quacunque excogitare poterit.

Darum müssen wir uns gewißlich des versehen und erwägen, so wir Christen sein wollen, daß wir den Teufel samt allen seinen Engeln und die Welt zu Feinden haben, die uns alles Unglück und Herzeleid anlegen. Denn wo Gottes Wort gepredigt, angenommen oder geglaubt wird und Frucht schafft, da soll das liebe heilige Kreuz auch nicht außen bleiben. Und denke nur niemand, daß er Frieden haben werde, sondern hinansetzen müsse, was er auf Erden hat: Gut, Ehre, Haus und Hof, Weib und Kind, Leib und Leben. Das tut nun unserm Fleisch und alten Adam weh; denn es heißt festhalten und mit Geduld leiden, wie man Tertia Petitio.

59] Fiat voluntas tua, sicut in coelo, sic etiam in terra.

60] Hactenus, ut nomen eius a nobis [R. 519 sanctificetur et colatur, tum praeterea, ut eius regnum inter nos vigeat, precati sumus; quibus duobus plene comprehensum est, quidquid ad Dei honorem et nostram salutem pertinet, ut Deum cum omnibus suis divitiis peculiariter consequamur. Verum hic alia rursus nobis incumbit et vehemens quidem necessitas, ut tantas una cum Deo acceptas divitias constanter ac firmiter retineamus, neque nos

61] ullo modo avelli inde patiamur. Nam quemadmodum in republica bonis legibus constituta non tantum eos esse oportet, qui aedilium, praetorum et praefectorum partes obeant, hoc est, qui publicis praesint aedificiis et officiorum procuracionibus, sed etiam qui imperatores agant, qui hostiles incursiones propellant, qui ab omni vi atque iniuria patriam tueantur sedulo: ita quoque hic, quamquam pro eo, quod nobis summe necessarium est, oravimus, nempe ut evangelii fieremus

62] Nemo enim facile credit, quam diabolus omnibus repugnet viribus, ut qui ferre non potest quemquam recte docere aut sincere credere, neque illi quidquam potest accidere aegrius atque dolentius, quam quod videt nugaces et abominabiles doctrinas suas sub speciosissimo Dei nomine adoratas, iam exorta luce evangelii, detegi, atque ita turpiter subannari, insuper e pectoribus hominum evelli, talique clade regni sui pomeria imminui. Quocirca tamquam inimicus ira percitus fremit insaniens, omni exerecitus sui robore [R. 520 nos incurrit et adoritur. Praeterea omnium

63] suorum copias sibi adiungens, mundi quoque et propriae carnis nostrae socia arma auxilio sibi deposcit. Et enim caro nostra per se pigra est et prona ad malum, tametsi Verbum Dei apprehenderimus et credamus. Porro autem mundus extreme malus et improbus. Hunc in nos omnibus modis incitat, instigans ac provocans, ut obiecto impedimento nos retrahat, prosternat ac denuo victos iterum suo

64] imperio subiciat. Haec tota sua voluntas noctuque molitur, nec momento quidem quieti

65] Quare non est, quod quidquam certius nobis futurum polliceamur, si nobis animus est esse Christianis, quam cum diabolo et omnibus angelis eius, neque non cum mundo, nobis suscipiendas esse inimicitias, nos omnibus modis et omni molestiae genere vexaturis et infestaturis. Ubique enim gentium evangelium praedicatum, acceptum aut creditum fuerit et fructus produxerit, ibi necessario crucis quoque persecutiones consequuntur. Neque est, quod quisquam cogitet se pacate et tranquille victurum, sed semel iacta alea periclitandum esse de omnibus, quae

The Third Petition.

Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

Thus far we have prayed that God's name be honored by us, and that His kingdom prevail among us; in which two points is comprehended all that pertains to the honor of God and to our salvation, that we receive as our own God and all His riches. But now a need just as great arises, namely, that we firmly keep them, and do not suffer ourselves to be torn therefrom. For as in a good government it is not only necessary that there be those who build and govern well, but also those who make defense, afford protection and maintain it firmly, so here likewise, although we have prayed for the greatest need, for the Gospel, faith, and the Holy Ghost, that He may govern us and redeem us from the power of the devil, we must also pray that His will be done. For there will be happenings quite strange if we are to abide therein, as we shall have to suffer many thrusts and blows on that account from everything that ventures to oppose and prevent the fulfilment of the two petitions that precede.

For no one believes how the devil opposes and resists them, and cannot suffer that any one teach or believe aright. And it hurts him beyond measure to suffer his lies and abominations, that have been honored under the most specious pretexts of the divine name, to be exposed, and to be disgraced himself, and, besides, be driven out of the heart, and suffer such a breach to be made in his kingdom. Therefore he chafes and rages as a fierce enemy with all his power and might, and marshals all his subjects, and, in addition, enlists the world and our own flesh as his allies. For our flesh is in itself indolent and inclined to evil, even though we have accepted and believe the Word of God. The world, however, is perverse and wicked; this he incites against us, fans and stirs the fire, that he may hinder and drive us back, cause us to fall, and again bring us under his power. Such is all his will, mind, and thought, for which he strives day and night, and never rests a moment, employing all arts, wiles, ways, and means whichever he can invent.

If we would be Christians, therefore, we must surely expect and reckon upon having the devil with all his angels and the world as our enemies, who will bring every possible misfortune and grief upon us. For where the Word of God is preached, accepted, or believed, and produces fruit, there the holy cross cannot be wanting. And let no one think that he shall have peace; but he must risk whatuns angreift, und fahren lassen, was man uns nimmt.

66] Hoc iam nostrae carni, nempe Adamo veteri, vehementer dolet, neque tamen malis cedendum est, sed magno animo constanter perseverandum et contra fortius eundem, ut invicta animi tolerantia, quibuscunque iniuriis impugnati fuerimus, perferamus eaque aequo animo mittamus, quaecunque per vim nobis erepta fuerint.

Darum ist je so große Not als in allen andern [Bitten], daß wir ohne Unterlaß bitten: Lieber Vater, dein Wille geschehe, nicht des Teufels und unserer Feinde Wille, noch alles des, so dein heiliges Wort verfolgen und dämpfen will oder dein Reich hindern; und gib uns, daß wir alles, was drüber zu leiden ist, mit Geduld tragen und überwinden, daß unser armes Fleisch aus Schwachheit oder Trägheit nicht weiche noch abfalle!

Siehe, also haben wir aufs einfältigste in diesen drei Stücken die Not, so Gott selbst betrifft, doch alles um unfertwillen; denn es gilt allein uns, was wir bitten, nämlich also, wie gesagt, daß auch in uns geschehe, das sonst außer uns geschehen muß. Denn wie auch ohne unser Bitten sein Name geheiligt werden und sein Reich kommen muß, also muß auch sein Wille geschehen und durchdringen, obgleich der Teufel mit all seinem Anhang fast [sehr] dawider rumoren, zürnen und toben und sich unterstehen, das Evangelium ganz auszutügel. Aber um unfertwillen müssen wir bitten, daß sein Wille auch unter uns wider solch ihr Toben unterhindert gehe, daß sie nichts schaffen [ausrichten] können, und wir wider alle Gewalt und Verfolgung fest dabei bleiben und solchen Willen Gottes uns gefallen lassen.

Solch Gebet soll nun jetzt unser Schutz und Wehr sein, die zurückschlage und niederlege alles, was der Teufel, Papp, Bischöfe, Tyrannen und Reher wider unser Evangelium vermögen. Daß sie allzumal zürnen und ihr Höchstes versuchen, ratschlagen und beschließen, wie sie uns dämpfen und ausrotten wollen, daß ihr Wille und Rat fortgehe; dawider soll ein Christ oder zwei mit diesem einigen Stück unsere Mauer sein, daran sie anlaufen und zu Scheitern gehen. Den Trost und Trost haben wir, daß des Teufels und aller unserer Feinde Wille und Vornehmen soll und muß untergehen und zunichte werden, wie stolz, sicher und gewaltig sie sich wissen; denn wo ihr Wille nicht gebrochen und gehindert würde, so könnte sein Reich auf Erden nicht bleiben noch sein Name geheiligt werden.

corum nostrorum voluntas atque consilium facta insolescant, aut semet securos et potentes esse confidant. Nisi enim illorum voluntas intercepta infringeretur, regnum Dei locum in terris non haberet, sed neque nomen eius sanctificaretur.

Die vierte Bitte.

Unser täglich Brot gib uns heute.

Hier bedenten wir nun den armen Brotkorb, unsers Leibes und zeitlichen Lebens Notdurft, und ist ein kurz, einfältig Wort, greift aber auch sehr cunque in terris uspiam possidet, de fortuna, honore, fama, aedibus, coniuge, liberis, familia, denique etiam de vita et capite proprio.

67] Eam ob rem aequae necessarium est, ut in omnibus aliis indesinenter oremus: [R. 521] Tua voluntas, precor, fiat, optime Pater, non diaboli neque inimicorum nostrorum neque omnium illorum, qui tuum sacratissimum Verbum insectantur quaerentes illud opprimere, aut regnum tuum impedire. Largire quoque nobis eam animi patientiam, ut, quaecunque nobis propterea toleranda sunt, patienter sufferamus atque vincamus, ne miseranda nostra caro, victa imbecillitate aut pigritia, repudiata cruce turpiter tergiversetur.

68] Ecce, ita simplicissime his tribus petitionibus necessitatem ipsi Deo incumbentem habemus, verumtamen propter nos. Nobis enim tantum seritur ac metitur, si quid oraverimus, nempe ita (sicut dictum est), ut in nobis quoque illud fiat, quod alioqui etiam extra nos fieri oportet. Nam quemadmodum eius nomen etiam nobis non orantibus sanctificari et regnum eius venire debet, ita quoque voluntas eius non potest non fieri, quamquam diabolus cum omnibus suis auxiliariis copiis ei repugnet, irascatur et insanit summa opem nitens totum evangelium subvertere. Verum propter nosmet ipsos nobis orandum est, ut eius voluntas inter nos etiam adversus eiusmodi illorum insanias completa locum inveniat, ut omnis illorum conatus frustra sit, et nos adversus omnem iniuriam vim atque insectationem inconcussi perseveremus ac talem Dei voluntatem nobis nunquam displicere sinamus.

69] Talis, inquam, oratio iam nunc nostra debet esse tutela et propugnatio, quae fuget prosterneatque omne, quicquid diabolus, episcopi, tyranni et haeretici adversus evangelium nostrum insidiosae moluntur. Permite sane, ut omnes magno erga nos irascantur stomacho, omnem (quod aiunt) moventes lapidem, ut collatis in unum consiliis decernant, quomodo nos velint opprimere, subvertere, evellere, ut suae voluntatis et consilii fiant compotes. Horum omnium improbis consiliis et perfidis conspirationibus unum atque [R. 522] alterum Christianum hac armatum precatuncula non verebor opponere, ille noster murus erit et propugnaculum, quo victi ac profligati 70] foede succumbent. Hanc equidem consolationem habemus et hanc fiduciam obtinemus, certo fore, ut diaboli ac omnium inimici irrita evanescent, quamlibet tandem ferociter

Quarta Petitio.

71] Panem nostrum quotidianum da nobis hodie.

72] Hoc loco χοῖνικος καὶ καρδόνιον memores sumus, hoc est, victus nostri alendo corpori et temporali vitae sustentandae necesse ever he has upon earth — possessions, honor, house and estate, wife and children, body and life. Now, this hurts our flesh and the old Adam; for the test is to be steadfast and to suffer with patience in whatever way we are assailed, and to let go whatever is taken from us.

Hence there is just as great need, as in all the others, that we pray without ceasing: "Dear Father, Thy will be done, not the will of the devil and of our enemies, nor of anything that would persecute and suppress Thy holy Word or hinder Thy kingdom; and grant that we may bear with patience and overcome whatever is to be endured on that account, lest our poor flesh yield or fall away from weakness or sluggishness."

Behold, thus we have in these three petitions, in the simplest manner, the need which relates to God Himself, yet all for our sakes. For whatever we pray concerns only us, namely, as we have said, that what must be done anyway without us, may also be done in us. For as His name must be hallowed and His kingdom come without our prayer, so also His will must be done and succeed, although the devil with all his adherents raise a great tumult, are angry and rage against it, and undertake to exterminate the Gospel utterly. But for our own sakes we must pray that even against their fury His will be done without hindrance also among us, that they may not be able to accomplish anything and we remain firm against all violence and persecution, and submit to such will of God.

Such prayer, then, is to be our protection and defense now, is to repel and put down all that the devil, Pope, bishops, tyrants, and heretics can do against our Gospel. Let them all rage and attempt their utmost, and deliberate and resolve how they may suppress and exterminate us, that their will and counsel may prevail: over and against this one or two Christians with this petition alone shall be our wall against which they shall run and dash themselves to pieces. This consolation and confidence we have, that the will and purpose of the devil and of all our enemies shall and must fail and come to naught, however proud, secure, and powerful they know themselves to be. For if their will were not broken and hindered, the kingdom of God could not abide on earth nor His name be hallowed.

The Fourth Petition.

Give us this day our daily bread.

Here, now, we consider the poor bread-basket, the necessities of our body and of the temporal life. It is a brief and simple word, weit um sich. Denn wenn du täglich Brod nennst und bittest, so bittest du alles, was dazu gehört, das tägliche Brod zu haben und genießen, und dagegen auch wider alles, so dasselbe hindert. Darum mußt du deine Gedanken wohl aufsun und ausbreiten, nicht allein in [den] Backofen oder Mehlfasten, sondern ins weite Feld und ganze Land, so das tägliche Brod und allerlei Nahrung trägt und uns bringt. Denn wo es Gott nicht wachsen ließe, segnete und auf dem Lande erhielte, würden wir nimmer fein Brod aus dem Backofen [* nehmen] noch auf den Tisch zu legen haben.

Und daß wir's kürzlich fassen, so will diese Bitte mit eingeschlossen haben alles, was zu diesem ganzen Leben in der Welt gehört, weil wir allein um deswillen das tägliche Brod haben müssen. Nun gehört nicht allein zum Leben, daß unser Leib sein Futter und Decke und andere Nothdurft habe, sondern auch, daß wir unter den Leuten, mit welchen wir leben und umgehen, in täglichem Handel und Wandel und allerlei Wesen mit Ruhe und Frieden hinkommen; Summa, alles, was beide häuslich und nachbarlich oder bürgerlich Wesen und Regiment belangt. Denn wo diese zwei gehindert werden, daß sie nicht gehen, wie sie gehen sollen, da ist auch des Lebens Nothdurft gehindert, daß [es] endlich nicht kann erhalten werden. Und ist wohl das Allenröthigste, für weltliche Obrigkeit und Regiment zu bitten, als durch welches uns Gott allermeist unser täglich Brod und alle Gemach [alle Annehmlichkeiten] dieses Lebens erhält. Denn ob wir gleich aller Güter von Gott die Fülle haben überkommen, so können wir doch desselben [derselben] keines behalten noch sicher und fröhlich [ge]brauchen, wo er uns nicht ein beständig, friedlich Regiment gäbe. Denn wo Unfriede, Haß und Krieg ist, da ist das tägliche Brod schon genommen oder je gemeßert.

possumus, neque etiam cum securitate frui et gaudio, nisi constantem et pacatam reipublicae administrationem nobis tribuerit. Ubi enim motus vigent et tumultus fervent bellici, hic quoque panis quotidianus subtractus est aut ad minimum impeditus.

Darum möchte man billig in eines jeglichen frommen Fürsten Schild ein Brod setzen für einen Reuen [Admen] oder Rautenfranz [Raubfranz im sächsischen Wappen aus Rautenblättern] oder auf die Münze für das Gepräge schlagen, zu erinnern beide, sie und die Untertanen, daß wir durch ihr Amt Schutz und Frieden haben und ohne sie das liebe Brod nicht essen noch behalten können. Darum sie auch aller Ehren wert sind, daß man ihnen dazu gebe, was wir sollen und können, als denen, durch welche wir alles, was wir haben, mit Frieden und Ruhe genießen, da wir sonst keinen Helder behalten würden; dazu, daß man auch für sie bitte, daß Gott desto mehr Segen und Gutes durch sie uns gebe.

Also sei aufs kürzeste angezeigt und entworfen, wie weit dies Gebet geht durch allerlei Wesen auf Erden. Daraus möchte nun jemand ein lang Gebet machen und mit vielen Worten alle solche Stücke, so darcin gehören, erzählen [aufzählen], sarii. Est autem verbum perbreve ac simplex, sed tamen late patens. Ubi enim panem quotidianum precaris ac nominas, ibi omnia, quae ad quotidiani panis fruitionem pertinent, precaris, et rursus eadem opera deprecaris etiam omnia, quae huic impedimento esse possunt. Quare cogitationes tuae tibi probe aperiendae sunt et dilatandae, ne tantum in angustiis mactrae ac clibani consistas, sed in spatiosum campum evageris, panem quotidianum et omnis generis alimenta nobis producentem. Nisi enim Deus e terris fruges sineret excrescere, insuper easdem benediceret et a calamitate defenderet, nunquam pistum panem e clibano extraheremus aut discumbentibus proponeremus.

73] Ut autem compendiose dicamus, haec petitio conclusa in se complectitur omnia, quaecunque ad hanc vitam in hoc [R. 523] saeculo traducendam pertinent, cuius solius gratia quotidiano pane opus habemus. Iam non tantum ad hanc vitam sufficit, ut corpori nostro prospectum sit, unde alatur et tegatur aliaque habeat necessaria, verum etiam, ut cum iis hominibus, quibuscum conversamur et vivimus, quibuscum commercia et omnis generis negotia et contractus sociamus et exerceamus, pacata ac tranquilla temporis conditione fruamur, et in summa, quidquid ad politicam, civilem et domesticam rerum administrationem pertinet. Etenim ubicunque locorum et domesticae et civilis administrationis usus interceptus aut conturbatus fuerit, ut perpetuum tenorem quietis obtinere nequeat, ibi quoque vitae alimenta intercepta sunt, planeque de victu nostro actum est.

74] que prorsus res omnium maxime necessaria, diligenter orare pro magistratibus, quippe quorum tutela et opera Deus nobis potissimum victus copiam huiusque vitae tranquillam conditionem conservat. Nam quamquam omnibus rebus a Deo datis abundanter affluentiissime, harum tamen nullam retinere possimus, nisi constantem et pacatam reipublicae

75] Quare culusque boni et vigilantis principis insignia multo iustius pane insignirentur quam leonis imagine aut sertis rutae, aut ipsa moneta imaginis loco panes insculpto [insculpti] aptius cuderentur, admonendi gratia cum eos tum ipsorum quoque subditos, esse videlicet principes, quorum officio tutelam ac pacem haberemus, neque sine illis aut panem edere aut eundem nos servare posse. Cuius rei gratia omni etiam honore digni sunt, ut illis per nos benigne detur, quidquid ex officio dare debemus et possumus, veluti iis, [R. 524] quorum beneficio omnibus, quaecunque possidemus, molliter ac quiete fruimur, cum aliqui ne assem quidem eramus servaturi. Adhaec, ut pro illis ipsis quoque oremus, nostri est officii, ut per eos Deus plus benedictionis et bonorum nobis largiri dignetur.

76] Sit ergo ita paucissimis indicatum et delineatum, quousque haec protendatur oratio, nempe per omnia huius vitae negotia atque commercia. Ex his iam aliquis prolixas preculas posset componere ac multis verbis omnes but it has a very wide scope. For when you mention and pray for daily bread, you pray for everything that is necessary in order to have and enjoy daily bread and, on the other hand, against everything which interferes with it. Therefore you must open wide and extend your thoughts not only to the oven or the flour-bin, but to the distant field and the entire land, which bears and brings to us daily bread and every sort of sustenance. For if God did not cause it to grow, and bless and preserve it in the field, we could never take bread from the oven or have any to set upon the table.

To comprise it briefly, this petition includes everything that belongs to our entire life in the world, because on that account alone do we need daily bread. Now for our life it is not only necessary that our body have food and covering and other necessities, but also that we spend our days in peace and quiet among the people with whom we live and have intercourse in daily business and conversation and all sorts of doings, in short, whatever pertains both to the domestic and to the neighborly or civil relation and government. For where these two things are hindered [intercepted and disturbed] that they do not prosper as they ought, the necessities of life also are impeded, so that ultimately life cannot be maintained. And there is, indeed, the greatest need to pray for temporal authority and government, as that by which most of all God preserves to us our daily bread and all the comforts of this life. For though we have received of God all good things in abundance, we are not able to retain any of them or use them in security and happiness, if He did not give us a permanent and peaceful government. For where there are dissension, strife, and war, there the daily bread is already taken away, or at least checked.

Therefore it would be very proper to place in the coat-of-arms of every pious prince a loaf of bread instead of a lion, or a wreath of rue, or to stamp it upon the coin, to remind both them and their subjects that by their office we have protection and peace, and that without them we could not eat and retain our daily bread. Therefore they are also worthy of all honor, that we give to them for their office what we ought and can, as to those through whom we enjoy in peace and quietness what we have, because otherwise we would not keep a farthing; and that, in addition, we also pray for them that through them God may bestow on us the more blessing and good.

Let this be a very brief explanation and sketch, showing how far this petition extends through all conditions on earth. Of this any one might indeed make a long prayer, and with many words enumerate all the things als nämlich, daß wir bitten, daß uns Gott gebe Essen und Trinken, Kleider, Haus und Hof und gesunden Leib, dazu das Getreide und Früchte auf dem Felde wachsen und wohl geraten lasse; danach auch daheim wohl haushalten helfe, fromm Weib, Kinder und Gefinde gebe und bewahre, unsere Arbeit, Handwerk oder was wir zu tun haben, gedeihen und gelingen lasse, treue Nachbarn und gute Freunde beschere usw.; item, Kaiser, Könige und allen Ständen und sonderlich unserm Landesfürsten, allen Räten, Oberherren und Amtsleuten Weisheit, Stärke und Glück gebe, wohl zu regieren und wider Türken und alle Feinde zu siegen, den Untertanen und gemeinem Haufen Gehorsam, Frieden und Eintracht untereinander zu leben; und wiederum, daß er uns behüte vor allerlei Schaden des Leibes und Nahrung, Ungewitter, Hagel, Feuer, Wasser, Gift, Pestilenz, Viehsterben, Krieg und Blutvergießen, teurer Zeit, schädlichen Tieren, bösen Leuten usw. Welches alles gut ist, den Einfältigen einzubilden [einzuprägen], daß solches und dergleichen von Gott muß gegeben und von uns gebeten sein.

aquarum inundationibus, a veneno, ab annis pestiferis, a pecorum letali contagio, a belli saevitia et caedibus, ab annonae difficultate, ab exitiosis bestiis, a pravis hominibus, a virulentis ⁷⁹ linguis etc. Haec enim omnia diligenter inculcare simplicibus non est inutile, haec videlicet atque similia a Deo dari oportere et ab eodem precibus impetranda esse. [R. 525]

Vornehmlich aber ist dies Gebet auch gestellt wider unsern höchsten Feind, den Teufel. Denn das ist all sein Sinn und Begehren, solches alles, was wir von Gott haben, zu nehmen oder [zu] hindern, und läßt ihm nicht genügen, daß er das geistliche Regiment hindere und zerstöre, damit daß er die Seelen durch seine Lügen verführe und unter seine Gewalt bringe, sondern wehrt und hindert auch, daß kein Regiment noch ehrbarlich und friedlich Wesen auf Erden bestehe. Da richtet er so viel Haber, Mord, Aufruhr und Krieg an, item Ungewitter, Hagel, das Getreide und Vieh zu verderben, die Luft zu vergiften usw. Summa, es ist ihm leid, daß jemand einen Bissen Brots von Gott habe und mit Frieden esse; und wenn es in seiner Macht stünde, und unser Gebet (nächst Gott) nicht wehrete, würden wir freilich keinen Halm auf dem Felde, keinen Heller im Hause, ja nicht eine Stunde das Leben behalten, sonderlich die, so Gottes Wort haben und gerne wollten Christen sein.

agris servaremus incolumem, neque saluum obolum ad vivendum nobis concederet, cumprimis vero iis, qui Verbum Dei habent et vere Christiani esse ex animo cupiunt.

Siehe, also will uns Gott anzeigen, wie er sich aller unserer Not annimmt und so treulich auch für unsere zeitliche Nahrung sorgt; und wiewohl er solches reichlich gibt und erhält, auch den Gottlosen und Bösen, doch will er, daß wir darum bitten, auf daß wir erkennen, daß wir's von seiner Hand empfangen und darin seine väterliche Güte gegen uns spüren. Denn wo er die Hand abzieht [abzieht], so kann es doch nicht endlich gedeihen noch erhalten werden, wie man wohl täglich sieht und fühlt. Was ist jetzt für eine Plage in der Welt allein mit der bösen Münze, ja mit täglicher Beschränkung und Aufsehen [Daraufschlagen, Wucher] in gemeinem Handel, Kauf und Arbeit beret, die nach ihrem Mutwillen das liebe Armut [die lieben Armen] brüden und ihr tägpartes, quae huc referendae sunt, singillatim percensere, nimirum haec nos orare, ut Deus nobis praestet victus et amictus copiam, domum, prosperam corporis valetudinem, utque fruges in agris magno cum foenore laetas provenire sinat. Deinde ut domi quoque rei familiaris procuracionem adjuvet, ut uxorem pudicam, probos liberos, bene moratam det familiam et servet incolumem, nostrum laborem, opificium aut quamcunque tandem rem efficiendam habemus, prosperet atque promoveat, fideles vicinos ac bonos amicos nobis ⁷⁷ iungat et offerat etc. Praeterea ut caesari, regibus et omnibus ordinibus, cumprimis vero nostrae ditionis principi eiusque consiliariis, proceribus atque praefectis sapientiam, fortitudinem et prosperitatem bene regnandi suppeditet atque adversus Turcas et omnes inimicos victoriam, subditis vero et communi plebeculae obedientiam, pacem et mutuam ⁷⁸ inter sese vivendi concordiam. Contra, ut nos ab omnibus detrimentis victus ac vitae custodiat, a perniciosis tempestatibus, a saeva grandine, a calamitosis incendiis, a tristibus

⁸⁰ Potissimum autem haec oratio contra hostem etiam nobis infensissimum, nempe diabolum, adornata est. Haec enim omnis eius est cogitatio et desiderium, ut haec omnia, quaecunque a Deo impertita habemus, nobis auferat. Neque contentus est rerum spiritualium procuracionem foede conturbare, ut animas suis nugis seductas suo imperio subiiciat, verum manibus pedibusque obstat etiam enixe studendo, ne qua in terris externarum rerum administratio aut civilis status honeste et pacate institutus diu consistat, unde tot passim lites, iurgia, caedes, motus, seditiones, tumultus et bella concitat. Insuper tempestates et grandines emittit e nubibus aut contagione pecus inficit aut corrupto coeli tractu ⁸¹ aërem reddit pestilentem et tabificum. In summa, maxime discruciatur animo, unum aliquem vel bolum panis nos a Deo habere reliquum eoque pacate vesci. Et si in illius potestate esset constitutum, nec post Deum oratio nostra obstaret, sane ne culum quidem in nostrum in marsupio, imo nec unius horulae usuram

⁸² Ecce, ad hunc quidem modum Deus nobis indicat, quomodo omnes necessitates nostrae sibi curae sint, tum quam fideliter etiam temporalis victus nostri rationem habeat. Et ⁸³ quamquam hunc impiis etiam hominibus et improbis nebulonibus affatim suppeditare soleat atque tueri, nihilominus tamen vult, ut pro eo consequendo oremus, ut certo cognoscamus nos haec omnia ab eius munificentia et liberalitate accipere, quo ita eius paternam bonitatem erga nos propensam non dubiis argumentis perspiciamus. Ubi enim manum suam aut clausit aut subtraxerit, [R. 526] nihil feliciter provenire potest aut denique retineri, id quod quotidie verissimum esse ex ⁸⁴ perimur. Quam enim hodie miseriam non

that are included therein, as that we pray God to give us food and drink, clothing, house, and home, and health of body; also that He cause the grain and fruits of the field to grow and mature well; furthermore, that He help us at home towards good housekeeping, that He give and preserve to us a godly wife, children, and servants, that He cause our work, trade, or whatever we are engaged in to prosper and succeed, favor us with faithful neighbors and good friends, etc. Likewise, that He give to emperors, kings, and all estates, and especially to the rulers of our country and to all counselors, magistrates, and officers, wisdom, strength, and success that they may govern well and vanquish the Turks and all enemies; to subjects and the common people, obedience, peace, and harmony in their life with one another; and on the other hand, that He would preserve us from all sorts of calamity to body and livelihood, as lightning, hail, fire, flood, poison, pestilence, cattle-plague, war and bloodshed, famine, destructive beasts, wicked men, etc. All this it is well to impress upon the simple, namely, that these things come from God, and must be prayed for by us.

But this petition is especially directed also against our chief enemy, the devil. For all his thought and desire is to deprive us of all that we have from God, or to hinder it; and he is not satisfied to obstruct and destroy spiritual government in leading souls astray by his lies and bringing them under his power, but he also prevents and hinders the stability of all government and honorable, peaceable relations on earth. There he causes so much contention, murder, sedition, and war, also lightning and hail to destroy grain and cattle, to poison the air, etc. In short, he is sorry that any one has a morsel of bread from God and eats it in peace; and if it were in his power, and our prayer (next to God) did not prevent him, we would not keep a straw in the field, a farthing in the house, yea, not even our life for an hour, especially those who have the Word of God and would like to be Christians.

Behold, thus God wishes to indicate to us how He cares for us in all our need, and faithfully provides also for our temporal support. And although He abundantly grants and preserves these things even to the wicked and knaves, yet He wishes that we pray for them, in order that we may recognize that we receive them from His hand, and may feel His paternal goodness toward us therein. For when He withdraws His hand, nothing can prosper nor be maintained in the end, as, indeed, we daily see and experience. How much trouble there is now in the world only on account of bad coin, yea, on account of daily

lich Brod entziehen! Welches wir zwar müssen leiden; sie aber mögen sich vorsehen, daß sie nicht das gemeine Gebet [die Fürbitte der Christen] verlieren und sich hüten, daß dies Stüdklein im Waterunser nicht wider sie gehe.

perferendum est; ceterum illi sibi prospiciant, ne communis orationis iacturam faciant, sibi etiam atque caventes, ne hanc Orationis Dominicae particulam sibi adversam habeant.

Die fünfte Bitte.

Und verlaß [erlaß, vergib] uns unsere Schuld, als wir verlassen [vergeben] unsern Schuldigern.

Dies Stüd trifft nun unser armes und elendes Leben an, welches, ob wir gleich Gottes Wort haben, glauben, seinen Willen tun und leiden und uns von Gottes Gabe und Segen nähren, geht es doch ohne Sünde nicht ab; denn wir noch täglich straucheln und zu viel tun [nicht Maß halten], weil wir in der Welt leben unter den Leuten, die uns viel zuleide tun und Ursache geben zu Ungebulb, Zorn, Rache usw.; dazu den Teufel hinter uns haben, der uns auf allen Seiten ansetzt und ficht (wie gehört) wider alle vorigen Stücke, daß nicht möglich ist, in solchem steten Kampf allezeit festzustehen.

Darum ist hier abermal große Not zu bitten und rufen: Lieber Vater, verlaß uns unsere Schuld! Nicht daß er auch ohne und vor unserm Bitten nicht die Sünde vergebe (denn er hat uns das Evangelium, darin eitel Vergebung ist, geschenkt, ehe wir darum gebeten oder jemals danach gesonnen haben); es ist aber darum zu tun, daß wir solche Vergebung erkennen und annehmen. Denn weil das Fleisch, darin wir täglich leben, derart ist, daß es Gott nicht traut und glaubt und sich immerdar regt mit bösen Lüsten und Lügen, daß wir täglich mit Worten und Werken, mit Tun und Lassen sündigen, dabon das Gewissen zu Unfrieden kommt, daß [es] sich vor Gottes Zorn und Ungnade fürchtet und also den Trost und Zuversicht aus dem Evangelio sinken läßt, so ist ohne Unterlaß bonnöten, daß man hierher laufe und Trost hole, das Gewissen wieder aufzurichten.

Solches aber soll nun dazu dienen, daß uns Gott den Stolz breche und [uns] in der Demut halte. Denn er hat ihm [sich] vorbehalten das Vorteil [das Vorrecht], ob jemand wollte auf seine Frömmigkeit pochen und andere verachten, daß er sich selbst ansehe und dieß Gebet vor Augen stelle, so wird er finden, daß er ebenso fromm ist [daß er nicht frömmere ist] als die andern, und müssen alle vor Gott die Federn [wie der stolze Pfau] niederschlagen und froh werden, daß wir zu der Vergebung kommen. Und denke es nur niemand, so lange wir hier leben, dahin zu bringen, daß er solcher Vergebung nicht [bedürfe]. Summa, wo er nicht ohne Unterlaß vergibt, so sind wir verloren.

So ist nun die Meinung dieser Bitte, daß Gott nicht wollte unsere Sünde ansehen und vorhalten, patimur, adulterina saltem moneta, imo potius quotidianis aggravationibus et exactionibus in publicis commerciis, contractibus, negotiis, laboribus, eorum videlicet, qui pauperes pro sua libidine opprimunt, eorundemque victum decurtant et imminuunt? Quod quidem nobis

Quinta Petitio.

85] Et remitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos remittimus debitoribus nostris.

86] Hic articulus miseram et aerumnosam vitam nostram attingit, quae, quamquam Dei Verbum habeamus, credamus, eius voluntatem faciamus et perferamus, eiusque donis ac benedictionibus alimur, peccatis tamen vacua et immunis non est, adeo ut adhuc quotidie prolabamur modumque excedamus, in mundo viventes cum hominibus, multa nobis aegre facientibus, causamque impatientiae, iracundiae, ultionis et similium exhibentibus. Ad- 87] haec diabolus a tergo nos infestantem habemus, qui ab omni parte nos impugnat, contraque priores (ut dictum est) articulos omnibus modis decertat, ita ut non sit possibile in tam frequenti et assiduo certamine non quandoque succumbere.

88] Quamobrem hic iterum magna necessitudo orandi nobis incumbit: Optime Pater, remitte nobis debita nostra! Non quod non ante aut citra nostram precationem [R. 527] peccata nobis non remiserit (siquidem evangelium nobis dono dedit, in quo merae peccatorum condonationes continentur, priusquam pro illo impetrando oravimus, aut illud nobis in animum venit). Verum propterea nobis orandum est, ut talem remissionem agnosca- 89] mus et accipiamus. Cum enim carnis, in qua vivimus quotidie, ea sit indoles et ingenium, ut Deo non fidat et credat, semper pravis sit dedita concupiscentiis, ut in dies singulos dictis ac factis, faciendo et omitendo peccemus, quare conscientiae tranquillitas conturbatur, ut Dei iram atque indignationem perhorrescat, et ita consolationem et fiduciam evangelii amittat, peropus est quotidie atque adeo citra intermissionem huc cursitare, consolationis petendae gratia, qua conscientiam iterum erectam sublevemus.

90] Verum enim vero hoc eo valere debet, ut Deus insolescentis animi tumorem nobis infringat, inque humilitate retineat. Eam enim sibi praerogativam soli praeservavit, ut, si quis ob suam probitatem sibi nimium placere, eam confidenter iactare velit, aliosque arroganter contemnere, ad se reversus semet ipsum intueatur, hancque orationem sibi ante oculos ponat, ita fore, ut mox inveniat se aliis nihilo meliorem esse. Omnibus enim nobis coram Deo cristae demittendae et contrahendae sunt, ac gaudendum, ut remissionis fiamus parti- 91] cipes. Nec quisquam inducat animum eo se rem perducturum, ut, quamdiu hic vivimus, non opus habeat ea remissione. In summa, nisi citra intermissionem remittat Deus, actum est de nobis.

92] Iam itaque huius precationis hic est sensus, ne Deus peccata nostra intueatur, neve oppression and raising of prices in common trade, bargaining and labor on the part of those who wantonly oppress the poor and deprive them of their daily bread! This we must suffer indeed; but let them take care that they do not lose the common intercession, and beware lest this petition in the Lord's Prayer be against them.

The Fifth Petition.

And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us.

This part now relates to our poor miserable life, which, although we have and believe the Word of God, and do and submit to His will, and are supported by His gifts and blessings, is nevertheless not without sin. For we still stumble daily and transgress because we live in the world among men who do us much harm and give us cause for impatience, anger, revenge, etc. Besides, we have Satan at our back, who sets upon us on every side, and fights (as we have heard) against all the foregoing petitions, so that it is not possible always to stand firm in such a persistent conflict.

Therefore there is here again great need to call upon God and to pray: Dear Father, forgive us our trespasses. Not as though He did not forgive sin without and even before our prayer (for He has given us the Gospel, in which is pure forgiveness before we prayed or ever thought about it). But this is to the intent that we may recognize and accept such forgiveness. For since the flesh in which we daily live is of such a nature that it neither trusts nor believes God, and is ever active in evil lusts and devices, so that we sin daily in word and deed, by commission and omission, by which the conscience is thrown into unrest, so that it is afraid of the wrath and displeasure of God, and thus loses the comfort and confidence derived from the Gospel; therefore it is ceaselessly necessary that we run hither and obtain consolation to comfort the conscience again.

But this should serve God's purpose of breaking our pride and keeping us humble. For in case any one should boast of his godliness and despise others, God has reserved this prerogative to Himself, that the person is to consider himself and place this prayer before his eyes, and he will find that he is no better than others, and that in the presence of God all must lower their plumes, and be glad that they can attain forgiveness. And let no one think that as long as we live here he can reach such a position that he will not need such forgiveness. In short, if God does not forgive without ceasing, we are lost.

It is therefore the intent of this petition that God would not regard our sins and hold was wir täglich verdienen, sondern mit Gnaden gegen uns handeln und vergeben, wie er verheißt hat, und also ein fröhlich und unverzagt Gewissen geben, vor ihm zu stehen und zu bitten. Denn wo das Herz nicht mit Gott recht steht und solche Zuversicht schöpfen kann, so wird es nimmermehr sich dürfen unterstehen zu beten. Solche Zuversicht aber und fröhlich Herz kann nirgend herkommen, es wisse denn, daß ihm die Sünden vergeben seien.

Es ist aber dabei ein nötiger und doch tröstlicher Zusatz angehängt: „als wir vergeben unsern Schuldigern“. Er hat's verheißt, daß wir sollen sicher sein, daß uns alles vergeben und geschenkt sei, doch sofern, daß wir auch unsern Nächsten vergeben. Denn wie wir gegen Gott täglich viel verschulden, und er doch aus Gnaden alles vergibt, also müssen auch wir unsern Nächsten immerdar vergeben, so uns Schaden, Gewalt und Unrecht tut, böse Lide beneist ujm. Vergibst du nun nicht, so denke auch nicht, daß dir Gott vergebe; vergibst du aber, so hast du den Trost und Sicherheit, daß dir im Himmel vergeben wird, nicht um deines Vergebens willen; denn er tut es frei umsonst, aus lauter Gnade, weil er's verheißt hat, wie das Evangelium lehrt; sondern daß er uns solches zur Stärke und Sicherheit als zum Wahrzeichen setze neben der Verheißung, die mit diesem Gebete stimmt, Lucä 6. 1.: „Vergebet, so wird euch vergeben.“ Darum sie auch Christus bald nach dem Vaterunser wiederholt und spricht Matthäi 6. 1.: „Denn so ihr den Menschen ihre Fehle vergebet, so wird euch euer himmlischer Vater auch vergeben“ ujm.

promissione proposito, quae huic orationi consonat Luc. 6, 37: Remittite, et remittetur vobis. Kam ob rem Christus quoque Matth. 6, 14 illico post traditam orandi rationem repetit, inquit: Si enim remiseritis hominibus peccata eorum, remittet et vobis Pater vester coelestis delicta vestra.

Darum ist nun solches Zeichen bei diesem Gebet mit angeheftet, daß, wenn wir bitten, [wir] uns der Verheißung erinnern und also denken: Lieber Vater, darum komme und bitte ich, daß du mir vergebest, nicht daß ich mit Werken genugtu oder verdienen könne, sondern weil du es verheißt hast und das Siegel dran gehängt, daß [es] so gewiß sein solle, als habe ich eine Absolution, von dir selbst gesprochen. Denn wieviel die Taufe und Sakrament, äußerlich zum Zeichen gestellt, schaffen, so viel vermag auch dieß Zeichen, unser Gewissen zu stärken und fröhlich zu machen, und ist vor andern eben darum gestellt, daß wir's alle Stunde könnten brauchen und üben, als das wir allezeit bei uns haben.

Die sechste Bitte.

Und führe uns nicht in Versuchung.

Wir haben nun genug gehört, was [es] für Mühe und Arbeit will haben, daß man das alles, so man bittet, erhalte und dabei bleibe, daß [es] dennoch nicht ohne Gebrechen und Straucheln abgeht. Dazu, ob wir gleich Vergebung und gut Gewissen überkommen haben und ganz losgesprochen sind, so ist es doch mit dem Leben so getan, daß einer heute steht und morgen davonfällt. Darum müssen wir abermal bitten, ob wir nun fromm meritis nostris debita praemia reddat, sed nobiscum clementer agat, peccatorum concedens veniam, quemadmodum pollicitus est. atque ita nobis laetam ac interritam largiatur conscientiam, qua animati coram eo et stare et precari queamus. Ubi enim cordi cum [R. 528] Deo non recte convenit, neque talem haurire potest fiduciam, nunquam in perpetuum aliquid ab eo precari sustinebit. Porro autem eiusmodi fiducia et animus laetitia gestiens non aliunde venire potest, quam si certo sciat peccata sibi esse remissa.

93] Verum huic precationi necessarium, attamen consolationis plenum, adiectum est auctarium: Sicut et nos remittimus debitoribus nostris. Pollicitus est, ut securi essemus, omnia peccata nobis esse remissa et condonata, ita tamen, ut nos vicissim proximo nostro offensiunculas, quibus ab eo laesi sumus, benigne remittamus. Nam quemadmodum nos quotidie nostris peccatis Deum offendimus, et tamen ille omnia nobis benigne ignoscendo condonat, ita nostri quoque erit officii proximo subinde dare veniam, qui damno, vi atque iniuria nos afficit, dolo malo nobiscum agit etc. Si gravaris ignoscere proximo, non est, quod tibi pollicearis aut cogites, Deum tibi tua peccata condonaturum. Sin autem benigne ignoveris aliis, ea tibi consolatio et securitas proposita est, ut in coelo quoque certo tibi ignoscatur. Et hoc quidem non propter tuam ignoscentiam aut veniam, quam largiris proximo; libere enim facit et gratuito ex mera gratia, cum illud se facturum receperit, quemadmodum docet evangelium: verum ut nos certos ac securos faciat, tamquam symbolo seu certo signo una cum

97] Proinde huic orationi tale signum annexum est, ut nos orantes promissionis admoveat, ut ita cogitemus: Optime Pater. ideo ad te oratum venio, ut mihi ignoscas [R. 529] propitius, non quod operibus queam satisfacere aut veniam a te promereri, sed cum tu hoc nobis promiseris, adiecta etiam sphragide, ut tam certus sim veniae, ac si dictam a te 98] absolutionem accepissem. Quantum enim baptismus et sacramentum, pro externo signo constitutum, praestat, tantum etiam hoc signum conscientiam nostram corroborare atque exhilarare potest, estque ideo institutum pro aliis, ut hoc omnibus horis uti et frui queamus, ut re, quam semper nobiscum in parato habeamus.

Sexta Petitio.

99] Et ne inducas nos in tentationem.

100] Iam quidem satis superque audivimus, quantum requirat laboris et operis omnia, quaecunque precamur, retinere et in illis constanter perseverare, tamen vel sic vix fieri posse, ut non labamur et hallucinemur. Adhaec quamquam errorum veniam et conscientiae tranquillitatem consequamur, ac per omnia a peccatis purgati simus, ita tamen vitae nostrae ratio comparata est, ut hodie up to us what we daily deserve, but would deal graciously with us, and forgive, as He has promised, and thus grant us a joyful and confident conscience to stand before Him in prayer. For where the heart is not in right relation towards God, nor can take such confidence, it will nevermore venture to pray. But such a confident and joyful heart can spring from nothing else than the [certain] knowledge of the forgiveness of sin.

But there is here attached a necessary, yet consolatory addition: As we forgive. He has promised that we shall be sure that everything is forgiven and pardoned, yet in the manner that we also forgive our neighbor. For just as we daily sin much against God, and yet He forgives everything through grace, so we, too, must ever forgive our neighbor who does us injury, violence, and wrong, shows malice toward us, etc. If, therefore, you do not forgive, then do not think that God forgives you; but if you forgive, you have this consolation and assurance, that you are forgiven in heaven, not on account of your forgiving, — for God forgives freely and without condition, out of pure grace, because He has so promised, as the Gospel teaches, — but in order that He may set this up for our confirmation and assurance for a sign alongside of the promise which accords with this prayer, Luke 6, 37: Forgive, and ye shall be forgiven. Therefore Christ also repeats it soon after the Lord's Prayer, and says, Matt. 6, 14: For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you, etc.

This sign is therefore attached to this petition, that, when we pray, we remember the promise and reflect thus: Dear Father, for this reason I come and pray Thee to forgive me, not that I can make satisfaction, or can merit anything by my works, but because Thou hast promised and attached the seal thereto that I should be as sure as though I had absolution pronounced by Thyself. For as much as Baptism and the Lord's Supper, appointed as external signs, effect, so much also this sign can effect to confirm our consciences and cause them to rejoice. And it is especially given for this purpose, that we might use and practise it every hour, as a thing that we have with us at all times.

The Sixth Petition.

And lead us not into temptation.

We have now heard enough what toil and labor is required to retain all that for which we pray, and to persevere therein, which, however, is not achieved without infirmities and stumbling. Besides, although we have received forgiveness and a good conscience and are entirely acquitted, yet is our life of such a nature that one stands to-day and to-morrow sind und mit gutem Gewissen gegen Gott stehen, daß er uns nicht lasse zurückfallen und der Anfechtung oder Versuchung weichen.

Die Versuchung aber oder (wie es unsere Sächsen von alters her nennen) Weldrunga [Versuchung durch Zureden] ist dreierlei: des Fleisches, der Welt und des Teufels. Denn im Fleisch wohnen wir und tragen den alten Adam am Halse, der regt sich und reizt uns täglich zur Unzucht, Faulheit, Essen und Saufen, Geiz und Täuscherei, den Nächsten zu betrügen und übersehen [zu überfordern] und, Summa, zu allerlei bösen Lüsten, so uns von Natur anleben, und dazu [wir] erregt werden durch anderer Leute Gesellschaft, Gemüth, Hören und Sehen, welche oftmals auch ein unschuldiges Herz verwunden und entzünden.

Danach ist [kommt] die Welt, so uns mit Worten und Werken beleidigt und treibt zu Zorn und Ungebuld. Summa, da ist nichts denn Haß und Reid, Feindschaft, Gewalt und Unrecht, Untreue, Rächen, Fluchen, Schelten, Aferreden, Hoffart und Stolz mit überflüssigem Schmutz, Ehre, Ruhm und Gewalt, da niemand will der Geringsste sein, sondern obenan sitzen und vor jedermann gesehen sein.

Dazu kommt nun der Teufel, hegt und bläst auch allenthalben zu; aber sonderlich treibt er, was das Gewissen und geistliche Sachen betrifft, nämlich daß man beide Gottes Wort und Werk in [den] Wind schlage und verachte, daß er uns vom Glauben, Hoffnung und Liebe reiße und bringe zu Mißglauben, falscher Vermessenheit und Verstockung oder wiederum [umgekehrt] zur Verzweiflung, Gottes Verleugnung und Lästung und andern unzähligen greulichen Stücken. Das sind nun Stride und Rehe, ja die rechten feurigen Pfeile, die nicht Fleisch und Blut, sondern der Teufel aus allergeringsten ins Herz schenket [schlekt].

Das sind je große, schwere Fahr [Gefahren] und Anfechtungen, so ein jeglicher Christ tragen muß, wenn auch jegliche für sich alleine wäre; auf daß wir je getrieben werden, alle Stunden zu rufen und bitten, weil [solange] wir in dem schändlichen Leben sind, da man uns auf allen Seiten zuseht, jagt und treibt, daß uns Gott nicht lasse matt und müde werden und wieder zurückfallen in Sünde, Schande und Unglauben; denn sonst ist's unmöglich, auch die allergeringsten Anfechtungen zu überwinden.

Solches heißt nun: „nicht einführen in Versuchung“, wenn er uns Kraft und Stärke gibt zu widerstehen, doch die Anfechtung nicht wegenommen noch aufgehoben. Denn Versuchung und Reizung kann niemand umgehen, weil wir im Fleisch leben und den Teufel um uns haben, und wird nichts anderes drauß, wir müssen Anfechtung unus aliquis stet, postero die cadat. Quapropter iterum nobis orandum est, ne nos iam probitatem et iustitiam consecutos, et pacata erga Deum conscientia versantes, retro prolabi ac tentationum impugnationibus cedere sinat.

101] Est autem triplex tentatio seu (ut Saxones nostri iam olim locuti sunt) conversio [persuasio, seductio], videlicet carnis, 102] mundi et diaboli. Siquidem in carne versamur ac veterem Adamum humeris nostris circumferimus, hic suis movetur affectibus, et nos subinde provocat ac pellicit ad turpitudinem, ad socordiam, ad crapulam et ingluviem, ad avaritiam et fraudulentiam, ad decipiendum et defraudandum proximum, et, ut in summa dicam, ad omnes pravas cupiditates, quae natura nobis insitae sunt, quaeque in nobis saepenumero excitantur, ab aliis [R. 530 videlicet sodalibus, perniciosis exemplis, audiendo et videndo; quae non raro vel Davidis animum, vel si uspiam adhuc fuit incorruptior, possint inflammare atque corrumpere.

103] Deinde huic succedit mundus, a quo et dictis et factis offendimur, ac plane ad iracundiam et impatientiam compellimur. Atque ut summatim virtutes mundanas perstringam, hic nihil aliud videre est quam odium et invidentiam, inimicitias, simulas, iurgia, vim, iniurias, perfidiam, ultionem, maledicentiam, convicia, contumelias, superbiam et insolentiam, nimio ornatu, honore, iactantia atque potentia semet efferentem, ubi nemo posteriores ferre sustinet, sed reliquos omnes sua pompa post se relinquere studet.

104] Hic succenturiatus accedit nunc diabolus, passim instigans ac provocans. Verum praecipue in his perturbandis occupatus est, quae ad conscientiam et spiritualia negotia pertinent, nimirum ut ex aequo et Verbum et opera Dei ventis et aurae, quod dicitur, committamus et contemnamus, ut a fide et caritate nos avellat et in superstitionem, pravam nostri fiduciam et cordis indurationem aut in extremam desperationem et Dei abnegationem et execrationem aliaque innumera et detestanda piacula iterum nos praecipitet. Hi iam sunt laquei et retia, imo potius illa ignita tela, quae nequaquam caro et sanguis, verum diabolus in corda humana omnium venenatissime torquet et iaculatur.

105] Haec equidem magna sunt et ardua pericula nec levium tentationum impugnationes, quae cuicque Christianorum perferendae sunt, graves abunde, si harum una sola tantum toleranda esset. Inde omnibus horis ad orandum Deumque invocandum compellimur, quamdiu in hac calamitosa vita constituti ab omnibus partibus impugnamur, infestamur et fugamur, ne Deus nos defessos patiatur occumbere atque ita demum iterum in [R. 531 peccata, dedecus et incredulitatem prolabi. Absque hoc enim impossibile est vel levissimam tentatiunculam vincere.

106] Iam hoc dicitur non in tentationem inducere, quoties vim ac robur resistendi nobis suppeditat, neque tamen tentatione sublata aut adempta. Neque enim quisquam tentationem aut illectamenta devitare potest, donec in carne vitam egerit, et diaboli copiis circumvallatus fuerit. Et velimus nolimus, tenta-falls. Therefore, even though we be godly now and stand before God with a good conscience, we must pray again that He would not suffer us to relapse and yield to trials and temptations.

Temptation, however, or (as our Saxons in olden times used to call it) Bekoerunge, is of three kinds, namely, of the flesh, of the world, and of the devil. For in the flesh we dwell and carry the old Adam about our neck, who exerts himself and incites us daily to in chastity, laziness, gluttony and drunkenness, avarice and deception, to defraud our neighbor and to overcharge him, and, in short, to all manner of evil lusts which cleave to us by nature, and to which we are incited by the society, example and what we hear and see of other people, which often wound and inflame even an innocent heart.

Next comes the world, which offends us in word and deed, and impels us to anger and impatience. In short, there is nothing but hatred and envy, enmity, violence and wrong, unfaithfulness, vengeance, cursing, railery, slander, pride and haughtiness, with superfluous finery, honor, fame, and power, where no one is willing to be the least, but every one desires to sit at the head and to be seen before all.

Then comes the devil, inciting and provoking in all directions, but especially agitating matters that concern the conscience and spiritual affairs, namely, to induce us to despise and disregard both the Word and works of God, to tear us away from faith, hope, and love, and bring us into misbelief, false security, and obduracy, or, on the other hand, to despair, denial of God, blasphemy, and innumerable other shocking things. These are indeed snares and nets, yea, real fiery darts which are shot most venomously into the heart, not by flesh and blood, but by the devil.

Great and grievous, indeed, are these dangers and temptations which every Christian must bear, even though each one were alone by himself, so that every hour that we are in this vile life where we are attacked on all sides, chased and hunted down, we are moved to cry out and to pray that God would not suffer us to become weary and faint and to relapse into sin, shame, and unbelief. For otherwise it is impossible to overcome even the least temptation.

This, then, is leading us not into temptation, to wit, when He gives us power and strength to resist, the temptation, however, not being taken away or removed. For while we live in the flesh and have the devil about us, no one can escape temptation and allure-leiden, ja darin steden; aber da bitten wir für, daß wir nicht hineinfallen und darin erjaufen.

Darum ist's viel ein ander Ding, Anfechtung fühlen und darein verwilligen oder ja dazu sagen. Fühlen müssen wir sie alle, wiewohl nicht alle einerlei, sondern etliche mehr und schwerer, als die Jugend vornehmlich vom Fleisch; danach was erwachsen und alt wird, von der Welt; die andern aber, so mit geistlichen Sachen umgehen, das ist, die starken Christen, vom Teufel. Aber solch Fühlen, weil es wider unsern Willen ist und wir sein lieber los wären, kann niemand schaden. Denn wo man's nicht fühlte, könnte es keine Anfechtung heißen. Verwilligen aber ist, wenn man ihm den Zaum läßt [ihm die Zügel schießen läßt], nicht dawider steht noch bittet.

Derhalben müssen wir Christen des gerüstet sein und täglich gewarten, daß wir ohne Unterlaß angefochten werden, auf daß niemand so sicher und unachtsam hingehe, als sei der Teufel weit von uns, sondern allenthalben der Streiche gewarten und ihm versehen [entgegentreten, den Streich parieren]. Denn ob ich jezt keusch, geduldig, freundlich bin und in festem Glauben stehe, soll [so kann] der Teufel noch diese Stunde einen solchen Pfeil ins Herz treiben, daß ich taum bestehen bleibe. Denn er ist ein solcher Feind, der nimmer abläßt noch müde wird, daß, wo eine Anfechtung aufhört, gehen immer andere und neue auf.

Darum ist kein Rat noch Trost denn hierher gelaufen, daß man das Vaterunser ergreife und von Herzen mit Gott rede: Lieber Vater, du hast mich heißen beten, laß mich nicht durch die Versuchung zurücksinken! so wirst du sehen, daß sie ablassen muß und sich endlich gewonnen geben. Sonst, wo du mit deinen Gedanken und eigenem Rat [dich] unterstehst, dir zu helfen, wirst du es nur ärger machen und dem Teufel mehr Raum geben. Denn er hat einen Schlangentopf, welcher, wo er eine Lücke gewinnt, darein er schliefen [schlüpfen] kann, so geht der ganze Leib hinnaß unaufgehalten; aber das Gebet kann ihm wehren und ihn zurücktreiben.

Die siebente und letzte Bitte.

Sondern erlöse uns von dem Übel. Amen.

Im Griechischen lautet das Stücklein also: Erlöse oder behüte uns von dem Argen oder Boshaften, und sieht eben, als rede er vom Teufel, als wollte er alles auf einen Haufen fassen, daß die ganze Summa alles Gebets geht wider unsern Hauptfeind. Denn er ist der, so solches alles, was wir bitten, unter uns hindert, Gottes Namen oder Ehre, Gottes Reich und Willen, das tägliche Brot, fröhlich, gut Gewissen usw.

Darum schlagen wir solches endlich zusammen und sagen: Lieber Vater, hilf doch, daß wir des Unglücks alles los werden! Aber nichtsdestowenig-tionen nobis sufferendae sunt, atque etiam in illis ipsis nobis versandum est. Porro autem hoc deprecamur, ne in easdem prolabamur et in iis submergamur.

107] Quare longe alia res est, tentationes persentire et iisdem consentire. Persentire omnes cogimur, neque tamen easdem omnes, sed nonnulli plures et graviores; veluti iuventus praecipue carnis tentationibus infestatur; deinde, qui ad maturam et constantem aetatem pervenerunt, iam grandiores facti, a mundo tentantur; alii vero, qui rebus spiritualibus sunt impliciti, nimirum fortes illi 108] Christiani, a diabolo. Verum eiusmodi tentationum sensus, quando praeter voluntatem nostram nobis obiciuntur, nemini nocere possunt. Nisi enim sentirentur, tentationes dici non possent. Porro tum demum consentimus illis, quando laxatis habenis iisdem indulgemus, neque vi neque oratione repugnantes.

109] Quapropter convenit nos Christianos esse instructos ac quotidie assiduum tentationum pugnam expectare, ne quis tam oscitanter et secure in utramvis (quod aiunt) aurem dormiat, quasi diabolus procul a nobis absit, sed, ubi ictus praevidendi et declinandi sunt, diligenter advigilet. Quippe quamquam modo purus et castus sim, sipe etiam patiens, mitis et dulcis, stans firma fide munitus, fieri tamen potest, ut hac hora diabolus tam pestifero et violento telo cor meum configat, ut vix queat persistere. Eiusmodi enim hostis est, qui nunquam cessat aut defatigatur, adeo ut, ubi una tentationis procella impugnandi finem [R. 532] fecerit, subinde decem aliae suboriantur.

110] Quapropter in tanta difficultate non aliud relinquitur consilium aut remedium, quam ad hanc orationem confugiendi, ac cum Deo ex corde ita loquendi: Tu me orare iussisti, optime Pater; fac, precor, ne victus tentationibus retro in antiquam flagitiorum lernam prolabar. Hoc facto videbis ac senties eas desinere ac minui, easdemque victas her- 111] bam tibi porrecturas. Alioqui si tuis cogitationibus et proprio consilio tibi opem ferre annisus fueris, rem malam tantum deteriorem facies, ac diabolo maiorem te impugnandi occasionem praebebis. Siquidem serpentium caput habet, quod ubi foramen, per quod irrepere poterit, nactum fuerit, totum corpus nemine obstante illico subsequitur; ceterum oratione fugari ac repelli potest.

Ultima Petitio.

112] Sed libera nos a malo. Amen.

113] Graeci codices hoc loco ita habent: ἀλλὰ ῥῖσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ. Quae verba perinde sonare videntur, quasi loquatur de diabolo, quasi velit unum fascem omnia perstringere, ut huius orationis summa adversus hostem nostrum capitalissimum instituta sit. Ille enim is est, qui ea omnia, quae oramus, summo studio impedire conatur, nempe Dei nomen seu gloriam, Dei regnum et voluntatem, panem quotidianum, pacatam et laetam conscientiam etc.

114] Quamobrem haec omnia summam complectemur orantes: Carissime Pater, da, precor, ut ab omni malo atque infortunio libe-ments; and it cannot be otherwise than that we must endure trials, yea, be engulfed in them; but we pray for this, that we may not fall and be drowned in them.

To feel temptation is therefore a far different thing from consenting or yielding to it. We must all feel it, although not all in the same manner, but some in a greater degree and more severely than others; as, the young suffer especially from the flesh, afterwards, they that attain to middle life and old age, from the world, but others who are occupied with spiritual matters, that is, strong Christians, from the devil. But such feeling, as long as it is against our will and we would rather be rid of it, can harm no one. For if we did not feel it, it could not be called a temptation. But to consent thereto is when we give it the reins and do not resist or pray against it.

Therefore we Christians must be armed and daily expect to be incessantly attacked, in order that no one may go on in security and heedlessly, as though the devil were far from us, but at all times expect and parry his blows. For though I am now chaste, patient, kind, and in firm faith, the devil will this very hour send such an arrow into my heart that I can scarcely stand. For he is an enemy that never desists nor becomes tired, so that when one temptation ceases, there always arise others and fresh ones.

Accordingly, there is no help or comfort except to run hither and to take hold of the Lord's Prayer, and thus speak to God from the heart: Dear Father, Thou hast bidden me pray; let me not relapse because of temptations. Then you will see that they must desist, and finally acknowledge themselves conquered. Else if you venture to help yourself by your own thoughts and counsel, you will only make the matter worse and give the devil more space. For he has a serpent's head, which if it gain an opening into which he can slip, the whole body will follow without check. But prayer can prevent him and drive him back.

The Seventh and Last Petition.

But deliver us from evil. Amen.

In the Greek text this petition reads thus: Deliver or preserve us from the Evil One, or the Malicious One; and it looks as if He were speaking of the devil, as though He would comprehend everything in one, so that the entire substance of all our prayer is directed against our chief enemy. For it is he who hinders among us everything that we pray for: the name or honor of God, God's kingdom and will, our daily bread, a cheerful good conscience, etc.

Therefore we finally sum it all up and say: Dear Father, pray, help that we be rid of all these calamities. But there is nevertheless ger ist auch mit eingeschlossen, was uns Böses widerfahren mag unter des Teufels Reich: Armut, Schande, Tod und kürzlich aller unseliger Jammer und Herzeleid, so auf Erden unzählig viel ist. Denn der Teufel, weil er nicht allein ein Mörder, sondern auch ein Totschläger ist, ohne Unterlaß auch nach unserm Leben trachtet und sein Mitlein kühlt, wo er uns zu Unfall und Schaden am Leibe bringen kann. Daher kommt's, daß er manchem den Hals bricht oder [ihn] von Sinnen bringt, etliche im Wasser ersäuft und viele dahintreibt, daß sie sich selbst umbringen, und zu viel andern schrecklichen Fällen. Darum haben wir auf Erden nichts zu tun, denn ohne Unterlaß wider diesen Hauptfeind zu bitten; denn wo uns Gott nicht erhielte, wären wir keine Stunde vor ihm sicher.

Daher siehst du abermal, wie Gott für alles, was uns auch leiblich ansticht, will gebeten sein, daß man nirgend keine Hilfe denn bei ihm suche und gewarte. Solches hat er aber zum letzten gestellt; denn sollen wir von allem übel beklüet und los werden, muß zuvor sein Name in uns geheiligt [werden], sein Reich bei uns sein und sein Wille geschehen. Danach will er uns endlich vor Sünden und Schanden beklüeten, daneben von [vor] allem, was uns weh tut und schädlich ist.

Also hat uns Gott aufs kürzeste vorgelegt alle Not, die uns immer anliegen mag, daß wir je keine Entschuldigung haben [nicht] zu beten. Aber da steigt die Macht an, daß wir auch lernen „Amen“ dazu sagen, das ist, nicht zweifeln, daß es gewißlich erhört sei und geschehen werde. Denn es ist nichts anderes denn eines ungezweifelten Glaubens Wort, der da nicht auf Abenteuer [auf gut Glück, aufs Geratewohl] betet, sondern weiß, daß ihm Gott nicht leugt [lügt], weil er's verheißten hat zu geben. Wo nun solcher Glaube nicht ist, da kann auch kein recht Gebet sein.

Darum ist's ein schädlicher Wahn derer, die also beten, daß sie nicht dürfen von Herzen ja dazu sagen und gewißlich schließen, daß Gott erhört, sondern bleiben in dem Zweifel und sagen: Wie sollte ich so kühn sein und rühmen, daß Gott mein Gebet erhöhe? Bin ich doch ein armer Sünder ufm.

Das macht, daß sie nicht auf Gottes Verheißung, sondern auf ihre Werke und eigene Würdigkeit sehen, damit sie Gott verachten und Lügen krasen; deshalb sie auch nichts empfangen, wie St. Jakobus sagt: „Wer da betet, der bete im Glauben und zweifle nicht. Denn wer da zweifelt, ist gleich wie eine Woge des Meeres, so vom Winde getrieben und geweht [bewegt] wird. Solcher Mensch denke nur nicht, daß er etwas von Gott empfangen werde.“ Siehe, so viel ist Gott daran gelegen, daß wir gewiß sollen sein, daß wir nicht umsonst bitten und in keinem Wege unser Gebet verachten.

115] remur. Nihilominus tamen ea quoque una inclusa sunt, quaecunque mala sub regno diaboli nobis possunt contingere, cuius generis sunt egestas, dedecus, mors et brevier omnium calamitatum et miseriarum tragoedia, quae in terris multiplex et immensa est. Nam [R. 533] diabolus, cum non tantum mendax, verum etiam homicida sit, nunquam non nobis insidiose necem machinatur, ut animo suo morem gerat, nobis in periculosos casus praecipitatis aut damno corporis affectis. Inde fit, ut complures fracta cervice perimat, multos immissa insania rationis usu privet, nonnullos in undis submersos suffocet ac multos ad mortem voluntariam sibi met consciscendam adigat aut alios quospiam casus terribiles subire compellat. 116] Quare nihil aliud in terris nobis superest operis, quam ut indesinenter adversus capitalem hunc hostem oremus. Nisi enim divinitus conservaremur, ne unicam quidem horam ab insidiis eius tuti essemus.

117] Ex his iam dictis facile perspicis, quomodo Deus pro omnibus rebus, etiam iis, quae corporales sunt, rogari postulat, ut nusquam alibi quam apud eum unice ullum quaeratur 118] aut exspectetur auxilium. Ceterum hoc ultimo loco posuit. Si enim ab omnibus malis custodiri et liberari cupimus, necessum est, ut antea nomen eius in nobis sanctificetur, regnum eius penes nos sit, voluntas eius fiat. His, inquam, ante peractis, tum demum nos a peccatis, ab ignominia custodiet, praeterea ab omnibus aliis, quae aut dolori aut perniciose nobis esse queant.

119] Ita nobis Deus omnes necessitates nostras, quibus premimur, compendiosissime proposuit, ne qua nobis relinqueretur negligendae orationis excusatio. Verum in hoc summa vis orationis sita est, ut dicere quoque discamus Amen, hoc est, non haesitare, orationem nostram certo esse exauditam et futurum esse, quod precati sumus. Nihil enim aliud est, quam non haesitantis fidei verbum, non orantis temere, sed scientis Deum non mentiri, 120] posteaquam audiendi facilitatem et certitudinem pollicitus est. Iam ubicunque talis fides non est, hic neque verae orationi [R. 534] locus esse potest.

121] Quare perniciose quaedam illorum est opinio ita orantium, ut non audeant Amen quoque ad finem orationis adiacere, hoc est, certo concludere se exaudiri, verum in dubio perseverant dicentes: Qui vero tantum mihi sumerem, ut iactarem Deum meas preces exaudivisse, cum me peccatorem esse non ignorem etc.?

122] Huius rei causa est, quod non ad promissionem Dei, sed ad opus proprium suamque dignitatem respiciant. Unde fit, ut suis orationibus Deum tantum subsannent et mendacii 123] coarguant. Hinc quoque quamlibet prolixo orantes consequuntur nihil, quemadmodum divus Iacobus inquit [1, 6]: Qui orat, in fide oret, nihil haesitans. Qui enim haesitat, similis est fluctui maris, qui a vento movetur et circumfertur; non ergo existimet homo ille, quod accipiat aliquid a Domino. Ecce, tanti 124] refert apud Deum, ut certi simus nos non frustra orare, et ut nullo modo preces nostras vilipendamus.

also included whatever evil may happen to us under the devil's kingdom — poverty, shame, death, and, in short, all the agonizing misery and heartache of which there is such an unnumbered multitude on the earth. For since the devil is not only a liar, but also a murderer, he constantly seeks our life, and wreaks his anger whenever he can afflict our bodies with misfortune and harm. Hence it comes that he often breaks men's necks or drives them to insanity, drowns some, and incites many to commit suicide, and to many other terrible calamities. Therefore there is nothing for us to do upon earth but to pray against this arch-enemy without ceasing. For unless God preserved us, we would not be safe from him even for an hour.

Hence you see again how God wishes us to pray to Him also for all the things which affect our bodily interests, so that we seek and expect help nowhere else except in Him. But this matter He has put last; for if we are to be preserved and delivered from all evil, the name of God must first be hallowed in us, His kingdom must be with us, and His will be done. After that He will finally preserve us from sin and shame, and, besides, from everything that may hurt or injure us.

Thus God has briefly placed before us all the distress which may ever come upon us, so that we might have no excuse whatever for not praying. But all depends upon this, that we learn also to say Amen, that is, that we do not doubt that our prayer is surely heard, and [what we pray] shall be done. For this is nothing else than the word of undoubting faith, which does not pray at a venture, but knows that God does not lie to him, since He has promised to grant it. Therefore, where there is no such faith, there cannot be true prayer either.

It is, therefore, a pernicious delusion of those who pray in such a manner that they dare not from the heart say yea and positively conclude that God hears them, but remain in doubt and say, How should I be so bold as to boast that God hears my prayer? For I am but a poor sinner, etc.

The reason for this is, they regard not the promise of God, but their own work and worthiness, whereby they despise God and reproach Him with lying, and therefore they receive nothing. As St. James says [1, 6]: But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord. Behold, such importance God attaches to the fact that we are sure we do not pray in vain, and that we do not in any way despise our prayer.

Das vierte Theil.

Von der Taufe.

Wir haben nun ausgerichtet die drei Hauptstücke der gemeinen christlichen Lehre. Über dieselbe [außer diesen] ist noch zu sagen von unsern zwei Sacramenten, von Christo eingesetzt, davon auch ein jeglicher Christ zum wenigsten einen gemeinen kurzen Unterricht haben soll, weil ohne dieselben kein Christ sein kann, wiewohl man leider bisher nichts davon gelehrt hat. Zum ersten aber nehmen wir vor uns die Taufe, dadurch wir erstlich in die Christenheit genommen werden. Daß man's aber wohl fassen könne, wollen wir's ordentlich handeln und allein dabei bleiben, was uns nötig ist zu wissen. Denn wie man's erhalten und verfechten müsse wider die Ketzer und Kotten, wollen wir den Gelehrten befehlen.

Auß erste muß man vor allen Dingen die Worte wohl wissen, darauf die Taufe gegründet ist, und dahin alles geht, was davon zu sagen ist, nämlich da der Herr Christus spricht Matthäi am letzten:

Gehet hin in alle Welt, lehret alle Heiden und tauft sie im Namen des Vaters und des Sohnes und des Heiligen Geistes.

Item, Marci am letzten Kapitel:

Wer da glaubet und getauft wird, der wird selig. Wer aber nicht glaubet, der wird verdammt.

In diesen Worten sollst du zum ersten merken, daß hier steht Gottes Gebot und Einsetzung, daß man nicht zweifle, die Taufe sei ein göttlich Ding, nicht von Menschen erdacht noch erfunden. Denn so wohl als ich sagen kann: die zehn Gebote, Glauben und Vaterunser hat kein Mensch aus seinem Kopf gesponnen, sondern sind von Gott selbst offenbart und gegeben, so kann ich auch rühmen, daß die Taufe kein Menschentand sei, sondern von Gott selbst eingesetzt, dazu ernstlich und streng geboten, daß wir uns müssen taufen lassen, oder sollen nicht selig werden, daß man nicht denke, es sei so leichtfertig [gleichgültig] Ding, als einen neuen roten Rock anziehen. Denn da liegt die höchste Macht an, daß man die Taufe trefflich, herrlich und hoch halte, darüber wir allermeist streiten und streiten, weil die Welt jetzt so voll Kotten ist, die da schreien, die Taufe sei ein äußerlich Ding, äußerlich Ding aber sei kein nütze. Aber laß äußerlich Ding sein, als es immer kann; da steht aber Gottes Wort und Gebot, so die Taufe einsetzt, gründet und befähigt. Was aber Gott einsetzt und gebietet [gebietet], muß nicht vergeblich, sondern eitel köstlich Ding sein, wenn es auch dem Ansehen nach geringer denn ein Strohhalbm wäre. Hat man bisher können großachten, wenn der Papst mit seinen Briefen und Bullen Ablass ausstelte, Altar oder Kirchen befähigte, allein um der Briefe und Siegel willen, so sollen wir die Taufe viel höher und köstlicher halten, weil es Gott befohlen hat, dazu in seinem Namen geschieht; denn also lauten die Worte: „Gehet hin, Quarta Pars Catechismi.

DE BAPTISMO.

1] Hactenus tres principales communis Christianae doctrinae partes exsecuti sumus. Praeter has superest, ut de duobus quoque sacramentis ab ipso Christo institutis disse-ramus, de quibus cuivis Christiano ad minimum brevis quaedam institutio tenenda est: quandoquidem his ignoratis nemo Christianus esse potest, tametsi hactenus nihil prorsus recti, nihil sani de his traditum est populo. 2] Primum vero ipsum baptismum tractandum nobis proponemus, per quem pri- [R. 535] mitus in Christianorum communionem cooptamur. Ut vero recte percipiamur, ordine cuncta explicabimus, tantum ea tradituri, quae cognitu erunt necessaria. Quomodo enim adversus haereticos baptismum defendendus sit, hoc doctis relinquentes commendabimus.

3] Principio operae pretium est ipsa verba exacte nosse, in quibus fundatus est baptismus, et ad quae omnia respiciunt, quae de baptismo tractanda sunt, nempe ubi Christus inquit, Matthaei ultimo, v. 16:

4] Euntes in mundum universum, docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.

Item Marci ultimo, v. 16:

5] Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit. Qui vero non crediderit, condemnabitur.

6] In his verbis primum tibi notandum et expendendum venit, hic exstare Dei mandatum et institutionem, ne dubitemus baptismum rem divinam esse, non ab hominibus excogitatum aut inventum. Nam quemadmodum pro certo dicere possum, Decem Praecepta, Symbolum Fidei, Orationem Dominicam nullum hominem e suo capite produxisse, sed ab ipso Deo data et manifestata esse: ita non minus vere iactare possum baptismum non esse humanae rationis commentum, sed ab ipso Deo institutum, adhaec severe praeceptum, ut nosmet baptizandos offeramus aut non salvari nos posse, ne quis in eam cogitationem forte veniat, rem esse tam leviculam, ac rubeam 7] novam tunicam induere. In hoc enim summa vis et virtus pendet, ut baptismum veluti rem praeclaram ac pretiosam [R. 536] magni aestimemus. De eo enim vel maxime pugnamus et dimicamus: siquidem iam mundus ita refertus est sectis vociferantibus baptismum esse rem externam, rem externam 8] vero nullius esse usus aut momenti. Verum pone esse rem quomodocunque externam; hic autem exstat Dei verbum et mandatum, quo baptismus instituitur, fundatur et confirmatur. Quidquid autem Deus instituit et faciendum praecipit, certe non rem nihili, sed rem pretiosam et utilem esse necesse est, tametsi quoad externam faciem stramineo culmo vilior 9] esset. Potuimus hactenus per multa saecula magni facere papam literis ac bullis suis

Part Fourth.

OF BAPTISM.

We have now finished the three chief parts of the common Christian doctrine. Besides these we have yet to speak of our two Sacraments instituted by Christ, of which also every Christian ought to have at least an ordinary, brief instruction, because without them there can be no Christian; although, alas! hitherto no instruction concerning them has been given. But, in the first place, we take up Baptism, by which we are first received into the Christian Church. However, in order that it may be readily understood, we will treat of it in an orderly manner, and keep only to that which it is necessary for us to know. For how it is to be maintained and defended against heretics and sects we will commend to the learned.

In the first place, we must above all things know well the words upon which Baptism is founded, and to which everything refers that is to be said on the subject, namely, where the Lord Christ speaks in the last chapter of Matthew, v. 19:

Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

Likewise in St. Mark, the last chapter, v. 16:

He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

In these words you must note, in the first place, that here stand God's commandment and institution, lest we doubt that Baptism is divine, not devised nor invented by men. For as truly as I can say, No man has spun the Ten Commandments, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer out of his head, but they are revealed and given by God Himself, so also I can boast that Baptism is no human trifle, but instituted by God Himself, moreover, that it is most solemnly and strictly commanded that we must be baptized or we cannot be saved, lest any one regard it as a trifling matter, like putting on a new red coat. For it is of the greatest importance that we esteem Baptism excellent, glorious, and exalted, for which we contend and fight chiefly, because the world is now so full of sects clamoring that Baptism is an external thing, and that external things are of no benefit. But let it be ever so much an external thing, here stand God's Word and command which institute, establish, and confirm Baptism. But what God institutes and commands cannot be a vain, but must be a most precious thing, though in appearance it were of less value than a straw. If hitherto people could consider it a great thing when the Pope with his letters and bulls dispensed indulgences and confirmed altars and churches, solely because of the letters and seals, we taufet", aber nicht in eurem, sondern in Gottes Namen.

pretio atque existimatione nobis baptismus habendus est, cuius ipse Christus auctor exstitit, quem ipse praecepit, instituit ac in cuius nomine administratur. Ita enim verba sonant: Ite et baptizate, sed non in vestro, verum in Dei nomine.

Denn „in Gottes Namen getauft werden“ ist nicht von Menschen, sondern von Gott selbst getauft werden. Darum ob es gleich durch des Menschen Hand geschieht, so ist es doch wahrhaftig Gottes eigen Werk, daraus ein jeglicher selbst wohl schließen kann, daß es viel höher ist denn kein Werk, von einem Menschen oder Heiligen getan. Denn was kann man für Werke größer machen denn Gottes Werk?

Aber hier hat der Teufel zu schaffen, daß er uns mit falschem Schein blende und von Gottes Werk auf unser Werk führe. Denn das hat viel einen köstlicheren Schein, daß ein Kartäuser viel schwere große Werke tut, und halten alle viel mehr von dem, das wir selbst tun und verdienen. Aber die Schrift lehrt also: wenn man gleich aller Mönche Werke auf einen Haufen schütze, wie köstlich sie gleichen mögen, so wären sie doch nicht so edel und gut, als wenn Gott einen Strohhalme aufhübe. Warum? Darum, daß die Person edler und besser ist. Nun muß man hier nicht die Person nach den Werken, sondern die Werke nach der Person achten, von welcher sie ihren Adel nehmen müssen. Aber das will die tolle Vernunft nicht achten, und weil es nicht gleicht wie die Werke, so wir tun, so soll es nicht gelten.

verse ac praepostere iudicans ita existimat, cum se ferre soleat atque opera, quae ipsa facit, nullius etiam momenti esse baptismum.

Aus diesem lerne nun einen richtigen Verstand fassen und antworten auf die Frage, was die Taufe sei, nämlich also, daß sie nicht ein bloß, schlecht Wasser ist, sondern ein Wasser in Gottes Wort und Gebot gefaßt und dadurch geheiligt, daß [sic] nichts anderes ist denn ein Gotteswasser; nicht daß das Wasser an ihm selbst edler sei denn andere Wasser, sondern daß Gottes Wort und Gebot dazukommt.

Darum ist's ein lauter Bubenstreich und des Teufels Geißpöck, daß jetzt unsere neuen Geister, die Taufe zu lästern, Gottes Wort und Ordnung davonlassen und nicht anders ansehen denn das Wasser, das man aus dem Brunnen schöpft, und danach dahergeifern: Was sollte eine Hand voll Wassers der Seele helfen? Ja, Lieber, wer weiß das nicht, daß Wasser Wasser ist, wenn es Voneinandertrennens soll gelten? Wie darfst du aber so in Gottes Ordnung greifen und das beste Kleinod davonreißen, damit es Gott verbunden und eingefast hat und nicht will getrennt haben? Denn das ist der Kern in dem Wasser, Gottes Wort oder Gebot und Gottes Name, welcher Schatz größer und edler ist denn Himmel und Erde.

Also fasse nun den Unterschied, daß viel ein ander Ding ist Taufe denn alle andern Wasser: nicht des natürlichen Wesens halben, sondern daß hier etwas Edleres dazukommt; denn Gott selbst seine Ehre hinansetzt, seine Kraft und Macht daran legt. Darum ist es nicht allein ein natürvanissimis distribuentem indulgentias, altaria aut templa confirmantem, tantum propter concessa sigilla et literas. Quanto maiore in 10 Siquidem baptizari in nomine Dei non est ab hominibus, sed ab ipso Deo baptizari. Quapropter, quamquam manu hominis administratur, revera tamen proprium Dei opus censendum et habendum est. Ex quo quivis haud difficulter potest colligere baptismi opus multo esse sublimius et praestantius quam ullum opus factum ab ullo divorum aut hominum. Quae enim opera possunt esse dicive maiora quam Dei opera?

11] Sed enim hic omni studio occupatus est diabolus, ut factitia quadam larva et facie nos decipiat et a Dei opere ad nostrum opus nos abducatur. Multo enim splendidius et praeclarior esse videtur, Carmelitam quempiam magna et laboriosa quaedam facere opera, et nos ipsi multo maioris opera et merita nostra 12] quam Dei aestimamus. Verum Scriptura ita docet: quamquam omnium monachorum opera, quantumvis nitentia, in unum [R. 537 conflata cumulerentur, neque tamen tam pretiosa habenda forent, quam si Deus tantum stipulam humo sustulerit. Quid ita? Propterea, quod persona nobilior est atque excellentior. Iam vero hoc loco persona nequaquam iuxta opera, verum opera iuxta personam aestimanda sunt, a qua dignitatem mutantur 13] et pretium. Verum hic insana ratio per-ought to esteem Baptism much more highly and more precious, because God has commanded it, and, besides, it is performed in His name. For these are the words, Go ye, baptize; however, not in your name, but in the name of God.

14] Ex his iam memoratis sanum intellectum percipe atque interrogatus, quid baptismus sit, ita responde: non esse prorsus aquam simplicem, sed eiusmodi, quae verbo et praecepto Dei comprehensa et illi inclusa sit et per hoc sanctificata, ita ut nihil aliud sit quam Dei seu divina aqua; non quod aqua haec per sese quavis alia sit praestantior, sed quod ei verbum ac praeceptum Dei accesserit.

15] Quocirca mera sycophantia est et diaboli illusio, quod hodie nostri novi spiritus, ut blasphemant et contumelia afficiant baptismum, verbum et institutionem Dei ab eo divellunt, nec aliter intuentur eum, quam aquam e puteo haustam ac deinceps ita blasphemio ore blaterant: Quid vero utilitatis manus aquae plena praestaret animae? Quis 16] vero adeo vecors et inops animi est, qui hoc ignoret, divulsis baptismi partibus aquam esse aquam? Quia vero fronte tu tibi tantum sumis, ut non verearis ab ordinatione Dei pretiosissimum κεφάλιον avellere, quo Deus illam constrinxit et includit, neque inde divelli vult aut seungi? Quippe verbum Dei aut praeceptum, item nomen Dei in aqua ipse solet esse nucleus, qui thesaurus ipso coelo et terra omnibus modis nobilior est et praestantior.

17] Ad hunc ergo modum ita discernere, longe aliam rem esse baptismum atque omnes alias aquas: non naturalis essentiae gratia, sed quod huic aliquid praestantioris rei [R. 538 adiungitur. Ipse enim Deus baptismum suo honestat nomine suaeque virtute confirmat.

For to be baptized in the name of God is to be baptized not by men, but by God Himself. Therefore, although it is performed by human hands, it is nevertheless truly God's own work. From this fact every one may himself readily infer that it is a far higher work than any work performed by a man or a saint. For what work greater than the work of God can we do?

But here the devil is busy to delude us with false appearances, and lead us away from the work of God to our own works. For there is a much more splendid appearance when a Carthusian does many great and difficult works; and we all think much more of that which we do and merit ourselves. But the Scriptures teach thus: Even though we collect in one mass the works of all the monks, however splendidly they may shine, they would not be as noble and good as if God should pick up a straw. Why? Because the person is nobler and better. Here, then, we must not estimate the person according to the works, but the works according to the person, from whom they must derive their nobility. But insane reason will not regard this, and because Baptism does not shine like the works which we do, it is to be esteemed as nothing.

From this now learn a proper understanding of the subject, and how to answer the question what Baptism is, namely thus, that it is not mere ordinary water, but water comprehended in God's Word and command, and sanctified thereby, so that it is nothing else than a divine water; not that the water in itself is nobler than other water, but that God's Word and command are added.

Therefore it is pure wickedness and blasphemy of the devil that now our new spirits, to mock at Baptism, omit from it God's Word and institution, and look upon it in no other way than as water which is taken from the well, and then blather and say: How is a handful of water to help the soul? Aye, my friend, who does not know that water is water if tearing things asunder is what we are after? But how dare you thus interfere with God's order, and tear away the most precious treasure with which God has connected and enclosed it, and which He will not have separated? For the kernel in the water is God's Word or command and the name of God, which is a treasure greater and nobler than heaven and earth.

Comprehend the difference, then, that Baptism is quite another thing than all other water; not on account of the natural quality, but because something more noble is here added; for God Himself stakes His honor, His power and might on it. Therefore it is lich Wasser, sondern ein göttlich, himmlisch, heilig und selig Wasser, und wie man's mehr loben kann, alles um des Wort's willen, welches ist ein himmlisch, heilig Wort, daß niemand genug preisen kann; denn es hat und vermag alles, was Gottes ist. Daher hat es auch sein Wesen, daß es ein Sacrament heißt, wie auch St. Augustinus gelehrt hat: Accedat verbum ad elementum et fit sacramentum; das ist, wenn das Wort zum Element oder natürlichen Wesen kommt, so wird ein Sacrament daraus, daß ist, ein heilig, göttlich Ding und Zeichen.

Darum lehren wir allezeit, man solle die Sacramente und alle äußerlichen Dinge, so Gott ordnet und einsetzt, nicht ansehen nach der groben äußerlichen Farbe, wie man die Schalen von der Ruß sieht, sondern wie Gottes Wort darein geschlossen ist. Denn also reden wir auch vom Vater- und Mutterstand und weltlicher Obrigkeit. Wenn man die will ansehen, wie sie Nasen, Augen, Haut und Haar, Fleisch und Bein haben, so sehen sie Türken und Heiden gleich, und möchte auch jemand zufahren und spreken: Warum sollte ich mehr von diesen halten denn von andern? Weil aber das Gebot dazukommt: „Du sollst Vater und Mutter ehren“, so sehe ich einen andern Mann, geschmückt und angezogen mit der Majestät und Herrlichkeit Gottes. Das Gebot (sage ich) ist die güldene Kette, so er am Hals trägt, ja die Krone auf seinem Haupt, die mir anzeigt, wie und warum man die's Fleisch und Blut ehren soll.

Also und viel mehr sollst du die Taufe ehren und herrlich halten um des Wort's willen, als die er selbst beide mit Worten und Werken geehrt hat, dazu mit Wundern vom Himmel bestätigt. Denn meinst du, daß ein Scherz war, da sich Christus taufen ließ, der Himmel sich aufthat, der Heilige Geist sichtlich herabfuhr und war eitel göttliche Herrlichkeit und Majestät?

Derhalben vermahne ich abermal, daß man beileibe die zwei, Wort und Wasser, nicht voneinander scheiden und trennen lasse. Denn wo man das Wort davon sondert, so ist's nicht ander Wasser, denn damit die Magd kocht, und mag wohl eine Badertaufe heißen; aber wenn es dabei ist, wie es Gott geordnet hat, so ist's ein Sacrament und heißt Christus' Taufe. Das sei das erste Stück von dem Wesen und Würde des heiligen Sacraments.

Aufs andere, weil wir nun wissen, was die Taufe ist und wie sie zu halten sei, müssen wir auch lernen, warum und wozu sie eingesetzt sei, daß ist, was sie nütze, gebe und schaffe. Solches kann man auch nicht besser denn aus den Worten Christi, oben angezogen, fassen, nämlich: „Wer da glaubet und getauft wird, der wird selig.“ Darum lasse es aufs allereinfältigste also, daß die's der Taufe Kraft, Wert, Nuß, Frucht und Ende ist, daß sie selig mache. Denn man taufte niemand darum, daß er ein Fürst werde, sondern, wie die Worte lauten, daß er selig werde. Selig werden aber weiß man wohl, daß [es] nichts anderes heiße, denn von Sünden, Tod, Teufel er-

Eam ob rem non tantum naturalis aqua, sed etiam divina, coelestis, sancta et salutifera aqua, quocunque alio laudis titulo nobilitari potest, habenda et dicenda est; hocque non nisi verbi gratia, quod coeleste ac sanctum verbum est, neque a quoquam satis ampliter, digne et cumulate laudari potest, siquidem omnem Dei virtutem et potentiam in se habet 18] comprehensam. Inde quoque baptismus suam accipit essentiam, ut sacramenti appellationem mereatur, quemadmodum sanctus etiam docet Augustinus: Accedat, inquit, verbum ad elementum, et fit sacramentum, hoc est, res sancta atque divina.

19] Quocirca nunquam non docemus, sacramenta et omnes res externas, a Deo ordinatas et institutas, non intueudas esse iuxta crassam illam et externam larvam, veluti nucis putamina intuemur, sed quemadmodum hisce ver- 20] bum Dei inclusum sit. Neque secus de parentum statu et magistratibus loquimur, quos si eatenus intueri volumus, quatenus nares, oculos, aures, cutem, pilos, carnem et ossa habeant, tum Turcis et gentilibus sunt similes, ac aliquis dicere posset: Cur hos maioris facerem quam alios? Atqui accedente praecepto: Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, alium virum video, divina maiestate et gloria indutum et exornatum. Praeceptum, inquam, aureus ille torques est, quem collo circumfert, imo potius corona in capite, indicans, quomodo et quamobrem haec caro et sanguis honorandi sint.

21] Ita quoque ac multo quidem vehementius baptismus honor habendus est propter verbum, quippe quem ipse Deus et verbo et facto honoravit, adhaec miraculis coelitus ostensis confirmavit. Num enim putas rem fuisse iocularem, cum Christus semet ipsum Iohanni baptizandum offerret, coelum simul aperiretur, et Spiritus Sanctus propalam ex coelo (R. 539 columbina specie descenderet, nec quidquam aliud adesset, quod non certissimis documentis divinam maiestatem et gloriam repraesentaret)?

22] Quare iterum atque iterum repetens moneo, ne haec duo, verbum et aquam, ullo modo disjungi atque divelli patiamur. Separato enim inde verbo, non alia est aqua atque illa, qua in culina ad elixandas carnes culinae praefecta utitur, potestque non male balneatorum dici baptismus. Ceterum coniuncto verbo, sicut Christus ordinavit et instituit, tum sacramentum est, ac Christi baptismus dicitur. Et haec prima huius institutionis pars sit de essentia et dignitate huius sacramenti.

23] Deinde, posteaquam certi sumus, quid sit baptismus et quid de eo sentiendum, etiam illud nobis discendum venit, quamobrem et in quem usum baptismi ratio instituta sit, hoc est, quid utilitatis baptizatis afferat, conferat et pariat. Verum neque hoc melius atque compertius, quam ex verbis Christi supra citatis, sciri potest ac percipi, nimirum: Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit. Quare 24] rei summam ita simplicissime complectere, hanc videlicet baptismi virtutem, opus, fructum et finem esse, ut homines salvos faciat. Nemo enim in hoc baptizatur, ut princeps evadat, verum, sicut verba sonant, ut salvus not only natural water, but a divine, heavenly, holy, and blessed water, and in whatever other terms we can praise it, — all on account of the Word, which is a heavenly, holy Word, that no one can sufficiently extol, for it has, and is able to do, all that God is and can do [since it has all the virtue and power of God comprised in it]. Hence also it derives its essence as a Sacrament, as St. Augustine also taught: Accedat verbum ad elementum et fit sacramentum. That is, when the Word is joined to the element or natural substance, it becomes a Sacrament, that is, a holy and divine matter and sign.

Therefore we always teach that the Sacraments and all external things which God ordains and institutes should not be regarded according to the coarse, external mask, as we regard the shell of a nut, but as the Word of God is included therein. For thus we also speak of the parental estate and of civil government. If we propose to regard them in as far as they have noses, eyes, skin, and hair, flesh and bones, they look like Turks and heathen, and some one might start up and say: Why should I esteem them more than others? But because the commandment is added: Honor thy father and thy mother, I behold a different man, adorned and clothed with the majesty and glory of God. The commandment (I say) is the chain of gold about his neck, yea, the crown upon his head, which shows to me how and why one must honor this flesh and blood.

Thus, and much more even, you must honor Baptism and esteem it glorious on account of the Word, since He Himself has honored it both by words and deeds; moreover, confirmed it with miracles from heaven. For do you think it was a jest that, when Christ was baptized, the heavens were opened and the Holy Ghost descended visibly, and everything was divine glory and majesty?

Therefore I exhort again that these two, the water and the Word, by no means be separated from one another and parted. For if the Word is separated from it, the water is the same as that with which the servant cooks, and may indeed be called a bath-keeper's baptism. But when it is added, as God has ordained, it is a Sacrament, and is called Christ-baptism. Let this be the first part, regarding the essence and dignity of the holy Sacrament.

In the second place, since we know now what Baptism is, and how it is to be regarded, we must also learn why and for what purpose it is instituted; that is, what it profits, gives, and works. And this also we cannot discern better than from the words of Christ above quoted: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. Therefore state it most simply thus, that the power, work, profit, fruit, and end of Baptism is this, namely, to save. For no one is baptized in order that he may become a prince, but, as the words declare, that he be saved. But to be saved, we know, is löst, in Christus' Reich kommen und mit ihm ewig leben.

Da siehst du abermal, wie teuer und wert die Taufe zu halten sei, weil wir solchen unaussprechlichen Schatz darin erlangen, welches auch wohl anzeigt, daß [sie] nicht kann ein schlecht lauter Wasser sein. Denn lauter Wasser könnte solches nicht tun; aber das Wort tut's, und daß (wie oben gesagt) Gottes Name darin ist. Wo aber Gottes Name ist, da muß auch Leben und Seligkeit sein, daß es wohl ein göttlich, selig, fruchtbarlich und gnadenreich Wasser heißt; denn durchs Wort kriegt sie die Kraft, daß sie ein Bad der Wiebergeburt ist, wie sie auch St. Paulus nennt an Titum 3.

Daß aber unsere Klüglinge, die neuen Geister, vorgeben: der Glaube macht allein selig, die Werke aber und äußerliche Dinge tun nichts dazu, antworten wir, daß [es] freilich nichts in uns tut denn der Glaube, wie wir noch weiter hören werden. Das wollen aber die blinden Leiter nicht sehen, daß der Glaube etwas haben muß, das er glaube, das ist, daran er sich halte und darauf er stehe und fuße. Also hängt nun der Glaube am Wasser und glaubt, daß [es] die Taufe sei, darin eitel Seligkeit und Leben ist, nicht durchs Wasser (wie genug gesagt), sondern dadurch, daß [es] mit Gottes Wort und Ordnung verleiht [verbunden] ist und sein Name darin steht. Wenn ich nun solches glaube, was glaube ich anders denn an Gott, als an den, der sein Wort darein gegeben und gepflanzt hat und uns dies äußerlich Ding vorschlägt [vorlegt], darin wir solchen Schatz ergreifen könnten?

Nun sind sie so toll, daß sie voneinander scheiden den Glauben und das Ding, daran der Glaube haftet und gebunden ist, ob es gleich äußerlich ist. Ja, es soll und muß äußerlich sein, daß man's mit Sinnen fassen und begreifen [bettaffen] und dadurch ins Herz bringen könne, wie denn das ganze Evangelium eine äußerliche mündliche Predigt ist. Summa, was Gott in uns tut und wirkt, will er durch solche äußerliche Ordnung wirken. Wo er nun redet, ja, wohin oder wodurch er redet, da soll der Glaube hinschauen und sich daran halten. Nun haben wir hier die Worte: „Wer da glaubt und getauft wird, der wird selig.“ Worauf sind sie geredet anders denn auf die Taufe, das ist, daß Wasser, in Gottes Ordnung gesagt? Darum folgt, daß, wer die Taufe verwirft, der verwirft Gottes Wort, den Glauben und Christus, der uns dahin weist und an die Taufe bindet.

Aufs dritte, weil wir den großen Nutzen und Kraft der Taufe haben, so laß nun weiter sehen, wer die Person sei, die solches empfange, was die Taufe gibt und nützt. Das ist abermal aufs feinste und klärlichste ausgedrückt eben mit den 25] fiat. Ceterum saluum fieri scimus nihil aliud esse, quam a peccati, mortis et diaboli tyrannide liberari, in Christi regnum deferri, ac cum eo immortalem vitam agere.

26] Ex hoc iterum non obscure perspicia, quanti momenti ac pretii baptismus habendus sit, in quo tam inestimabilem tamque ineffabilem thesaurum consequimur. Atque hoc ipsum sufficienter indicat, baptismum solam ac simplicem aquam esse non posse. Eius enim virtutis simplex aqua esse non potest, verum enim vero Dei verbum facit, tum quod (ut supra diximus) Dei nomen in illo sit. 27] Iam ubicunque Dei nomen est, ibi [R. 540] vitam quoque et summam felicitatem esse necesse est, ut non iniuria divina, beata, fructuosa et omnis gratiae plena aqua dici possit. Etenim verbi divini accessione eam virtutem consequitur, ut λουτρόν παλιγγενεσίας, lavacrum regenerationis sit, sicuti nominat Paulus ad Titum tertio, v. 5.

28] Quod autem nasutuli nostri μωροόσοφοι, novi illi spiritus, superciliosae admodum fabulantur, fidem solam esse, quae salvos faciat, opera vero et res externas ad salutem consequendam nihil praestare aut facere: respondeo sane in nobis nihil aliud facere aut operari salutem quam fidem, qua de re mox infra 29] latius. Atqui hoc caecorum duces videre nolunt, fidem necessario aliquid habere, quod credat, hoc est, cui innitatur, et qua re suffulta persistat. Ita iam fides aquae adhaeret creditque baptismum esse, in quo mera beatitudo et vita est, non aquae virtute (ut abunde dictum est), sed per hoc, quod baptismus verbo et ordinatione divina unitus et confirmatus est, eiusque nomine nobilitatus. Iam haec credens, quid aliud quam in Deum credo, ut in eum, qui suum verbum baptismum indidit et inseruit, ac nobis externas res proponit, in quibus tantarum rerum thesaurum comprehendere queamus?

30] Iam usque adeo insaniunt novi illi spiritus, ut disjungere non vereantur fidem et rem, cui fides adhaerescit et alligata est, tametsi externa sit. Verum haec non potest non externa esse, ut sensibus percipi et comprehendi possit, atque ita deinceps animo infigi, quem admodum totum evangelium externa quaedam et corporalis est praedicatio. In summa, quidquid Deus in nobis facit et operatur, tantum externis istiusmodi rebus et constitutionibus operari dignatur. Ubicunque iam loquitur, imo potius quocunque aut per quemcunque locutus fuerit, eo fidei dirigendi sunt oculi, 31] eique adhaerendum. Iam hic verbum Dei in promptu habemus [Marc. 16, 16]: Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit. [R. 541] Quorsum ista verba alias quam de baptismo dicta sunt, hoc est, de aqua divino ordine fundata et confirmata? Ex hoc sequitur, ut is, qui baptismum contemnit et reiciit, verbum Dei, fidem et Christum quoque reiiciat eo nos ducentem et baptismum alligantem.

32] Tertio, cognita iam ingenti cum virtute tum utilitate baptismi, videamus ulterius, quae persona sit talia accipiens, quae per 33] baptismum offeruntur. Hoc iterum pulcherrime et clarissime in his verbis expressum nothing else than to be delivered from sin, death, and the devil, and to enter into the kingdom of Christ, and to live with Him forever.

Here you see again how highly and precious we should esteem Baptism, because in it we obtain such an unspeakable treasure, which also indicates sufficiently that it cannot be ordinary mere water. For mere water could not do such a thing, but the Word does it, and (as said above) the fact that the name of God is comprehended therein. But where the name of God is, there must be also life and salvation, that it may indeed be called a divine, blessed, fruitful, and gracious water; for by the Word such power is imparted to Baptism that it is a laver of regeneration, as St. Paul also calls it, Titus 3, 5.

But as our would-be wise, new spirits assert that faith alone saves, and that works and external things avail nothing, we answer: It is true, indeed, that nothing in us is of any avail but faith, as we shall hear still further. But these blind guides are unwilling to see this, namely, that faith must have something which it believes, that is, of which it takes hold, and upon which it stands and rests. Thus faith clings to the water, and believes that it is Baptism, in which there is pure salvation and life; not through the water (as we have sufficiently stated), but through the fact that it is embodied in the Word and institution of God, and the name of God inheres in it. Now, if I believe this, what else is it than believing in God as in Him who has given and planted His Word into this ordinance, and proposes to us this external thing wherein we may apprehend such a treasure?

Now, they are so mad as to separate faith, and that to which faith clings and is bound, though it be something external. Yea, it shall and must be something external, that it may be apprehended by the senses, and understood and thereby be brought into the heart, as indeed the entire Gospel is an external, verbal preaching. In short, what God does and works in us He proposes to work through such external ordinances. Wherever, therefore, He speaks, yea, in whichever direction or by whatever means He speaks, thither faith must look, and to that it must hold. Now here we have the words: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. To what else do they refer than to Baptism, that is, to the water comprehended in God's ordinance? Hence it follows that whoever rejects Baptism rejects the Word of God, faith, and Christ, who directs us thither and binds us to Baptism.

In the third place, since we have learned the great benefit and power of Baptism, let us see further who is the person that receives what Baptism gives and profits. This is again most beautifully and clearly expressed in the Worten: „Wer da glaubet und getauft wird, der wird selig.“ Das ist, der Glaube macht die Person allein würdig, das heilsame, göttliche Wasser nützlich zu empfangen. Denn weil solches alhier in den Worten bei und mit dem Wasser vorge tragen und verheißen wird, kann es nicht anders empfangen werden, denn daß wir solches von Herzen glauben. Ohne Glauben ist es nichts nütz, ob es gleich an ihm selbst ein göttlicher, überschwenglicher Schatz ist. Darum vermag das einige Wort („wer da glaubet“) so viel, daß es ausschleußt [ausschließt] und zurücktreibt alle Werke, die wir tun können der Meinung, als dadurch Seligkeit zu erlangen und verdienen. Denn es ist beschlossen, was nicht Glaube ist, das tut nichts dazu, empfängt auch nichts.

Sprechen sie aber, wie sie pflegen: Ist doch die Taufe auch selbst ein Werk; so sagt du, die Werke gelten nichts zur Seligkeit, wo bleibt denn der Glaube? Antwort: Ja, unsere Werke tun freilich nichts zur Seligkeit, die Taufe aber ist nicht unser, sondern Gottes Werk (Denn du wirkst, wie gesagt, Christus' Taufe gar weit müssen scheiden von der Wadertaufe); Gottes Werke aber sind heilsam und not zur Seligkeit und schließen nicht aus, sondern fordern den Glauben; denn ohne Glauben könnte man sie nicht fassen. Denn damit, daß du läßt das Wasser über dich gießen, hast du die Taufe noch nicht also empfangen, daß sie dir etwas nütze; aber davon wird sie dir nütze, wenn du dich der Meinung läßt taufen, als aus Gottes Befehl und Ordnung, dazu in Gottes Namen, auf daß du in dem Wasser die verheißene Seligkeit empfangest. Nun kann solches die Taufe noch der Leib nicht tun, sondern das Herz muß es glauben.

Also siehst du klar, daß da kein Werk ist, von uns getan, sondern ein Schatz, den er uns gibt und der Glaube ergreift: so wohl als der Herr Christus am Kreuz nicht ein Werk ist, sondern ein Schatz, im Wort gesagt und uns vorgetragen und durch den Glauben empfangen. Darum tun sie uns Gewalt, daß sie wider uns schreien, als predigten wir wider den Glauben, so wir doch allein darauf treiben, als der so nötig dazu ist, daß ohne ihn [der Nutzen der Taufe] nicht empfangen noch genossen mag werden.

Also haben wir die drei Stücke, so man von diesem Sacrament wissen muß, sonderlich daß Gottes Ordnung ist in allen Ehren zu halten, welches allein genug wäre, ob es gleich ganz ein äußerlich Ding ist wie das Gebot: „Du sollst Vater und Mutter ehren“, allein auf ein leiblich Fleisch und Blut gestellt, da man nicht das Fleisch und Blut, sondern Gottes Gebot ansieht, darin es gesagt ist und um welches willen das Fleisch Vater und Mutter heißt: also auch, wenn wir gleich nicht mehr hätten denn diese Worte: „Gehet hin und taufet“ usw., müßten wir's dennoch als Gottes Ordnung annehmen und tun. Nun ist nicht allein das Gebot und Befehl da, sondern auch die Verheißung. Darum ist es noch viel herrlicher, denn was Gott sonst geboten und geordnet hat; Summa, so voll Trosts und Gnade, daß [es] Himmel und Erde nicht kann begreifen. Aber da gehört Kunst zu, daß man solches glaube; denn es est: Qui crediderit et baptizatus fuerit, salvus erit. Hoc est, sola fides personam dignam facit, ut hanc salutarem et divinam aquam utiliter suscipiat. Cum enim hoc in verbis una cum aqua nobis offeratur et proponatur, non alia ratione potest suscipi, quam ut hoc 34] ex animo credamus. Citra fidem nihil prodest baptismus, tametsi per sese coelestis et inestimabilis thesaurus esse negari non possit. Ideo unicum illud verbum (qui crediderit) tantum potest, ut excludat atque reiiciat omnia opera, quaecunque facere poterimus hoc animo, ut per ea salutem consequamur et promereamur. Iam enim ita irrevocabiliter decretum est, quidquid fides non est, illud ad consequendam salutem nihil futurum neque tantillum consecuturum.

35] Quodsi, ut solent, dixerint: Tamen ipse quoque baptismus opus est, et tu dicis opera ad salutem consequendam nullius esse momenti, ubi tunc manet fides? Responde: Sane vero nostra opera ad salutem nihil faciunt; porro autem baptismus non nostrum, sed Dei opus est. Dei enim baptismus, ut dictum est, longe lateque a balneatoris baptismo tibi discernendus est. Dei autem opera salutifera sunt et ad salutem consequendam necessaria, neque excludunt, sed fidem requirunt, citra 36] quam comprehendere non possent. Eo enim, quod te aqua perfundi sinis, baptismum nondum percepisti aut servasti, ut inde [R. 542] aliquid emolumenti ad te redeat. Verum inde primum tibi proderit, si hoc consilio temet baptizandum obtuleris, ut Dei mandato et institutioni satisfacias, ut in nomine Domini baptizatus promissam in aqua salutem consequaris. Iam hoc neque manus neque corpus efficere potest, sed corde credendum est.

37] Ita vides liquido hic nullum esse opus, quod a nobis fiat, sed thesaurum, quem ille nobis largitur, sola fides apprehendit; non secus atque Dominus Iesus in cruce nullum opus est, sed thesaurus verbo comprehensus nobisque oblat, quem sola fides apprehendit et consequitur. Iniuriam itaque nobis faciunt, cum adversus nos vociferantur, quasi contra fidem doceamus, cum tamen unice illam urgeamus et inculcemos, ut quae tam sit necessaria, ut sine illa nihil quidquam possimus apprehendere aut consequi.

38] Ita quidem habemus tres huius sacramenti partes, quas quivis Christianus tenere debet, praecipue vero, quod baptismus Dei sit constitutio, in omni honore ac pretio habenda. Quae una abunde satis nos movere debet, tametsi res prorsus sit externa. Quemadmodum quartum praeceptum: Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, tantum de corporali carne et sanguine honorandis constitutum est, in quo non carnem et sanguinem, sed Dei praeceptum intuemur, cui illa inclusa sunt, cuiusque gratia caro et sanguis pater ac mater dicuntur: ita quoque, si praeter haec verba: Ite et baptizate etc. nihil nobis esset aliud, attamen nobis illa, ut Dei constitutio, arripienda essent et 39] facienda. Iam hic non tantum adest praeceptum et mandatum faciendi, verum etiam promissio. Quare multo praestantior est atque sublimior baptismi constitutio quam alia, words: He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. That is, faith alone makes the person worthy to receive profitably the saving, divine water. For, since these blessings are here presented and promised in the words in and with the water, they cannot be received in any other way than by believing them with the heart. Without faith it profits nothing, notwithstanding it is in itself a divine superabundant treasure. Therefore this single word (He that believeth) effects this much that it excludes and repels all works which we can do, in the opinion that we obtain and merit salvation by them. For it is determined that whatever is not faith avails nothing nor receives anything.

But if they say, as they are accustomed: Still Baptism is itself a work, and you say works are of no avail for salvation; what, then, becomes of faith? Answer: Yes, our works, indeed, avail nothing for salvation; Baptism, however, is not our work, but God's (for, as was stated, you must put Christ-baptism far away from a bath-keeper's baptism). God's works, however, are saving and necessary for salvation, and do not exclude, but demand, faith; for without faith they could not be apprehended. For by suffering the water to be poured upon you, you have not yet received Baptism in such a manner that it benefits you anything; but it becomes beneficial to you if you have yourself baptized with the thought that this is according to God's command and ordinance, and besides in God's name, in order that you may receive in the water the promised salvation. Now, this the fist cannot do, nor the body; but the heart must believe it.

Thus you see plainly that there is here no work done by us, but a treasure which He gives us, and which faith apprehends; just as the Lord Jesus Christ upon the cross is not a work, but a treasure comprehended in the Word, and offered to us and received by faith. Therefore they do us violence by exclaiming against us as though we preach against faith; while we alone insist upon it as being of such necessity that without it nothing can be received nor enjoyed.

Thus we have these three parts which it is necessary to know concerning this Sacrament, especially that the ordinance of God is to be held in all honor, which alone would be sufficient, though it be an entirely external thing, like the commandment, Honor thy father and thy mother, which refers to bodily flesh and blood. Therein we regard not the flesh and blood, but the commandment of God in which they are comprehended, and on account of which the flesh is called father and mother; so also, though we had no more than these words, Go ye and baptize, etc., it would be necessary for us to accept and do it as the ordinance of God. Now there is here not only God's commandment and injunction, but also the promise, on account of which it is still far more glorious than whatever else God has mangelt nicht am Schatz, aber da mangelt's an, daß man ihn fasse und festhalte.

40] assequi nequeant. Verum hic arte opus est, ut thesauro quidquam desiderari potest, in hoc vis sita est, ut comprehendatur et comprehensus firmiter retineatur.

Darum hat ein jeglicher Christ sein Leben lang genug zu lernen und zu üben an der Taufe; denn er hat immerdar zu schaffen, daß er festiglich glaube, was sie zusagt und bringt: Überwindung des Teufels und Todes, Vergebung der Sünden, Gottes Gnade, den ganzen Christum und Heiligen Geist mit seinen Gaben. Summa, es ist so überschwenglich, daß, wenn's die blöde Natur könnte bedenken, sollte sie wohl zweifeln, ob es könnte wahr sein. Denn rechne du: Wenn etwo [irgendwo] ein Arzt wäre, der die Kunst könnte, daß die Leute nicht stürben oder, ob sie gleich stürben, doch bald wieder lebend würden und danach ewig lebten, wie würde die Welt mit Geld zuschneiden und regnen, daß vor den Reichen niemand könnte zukommen [herankommen]? Nun wird hier in der Taufe jedermann umsonst vor die Tür gebracht ein solcher Schatz und Arznei, die den Tod verschlingt und alle Menschen beim Leben erhält.

in baptismo parvis et amplis, hoc est, omnibus, gratuito ad fores usque offertur eiusmodi thesaurus et medicina, quae mortem absorbet ac homines in vita conservat.

Also muß man die Taufe ansehen und uns nütze [zunutze] machen, daß wir uns des stärken und trösten, wenn uns unsere Sünde und Gewissen beschwert, und sagen: Ich bin dennoch getauft; bin ich aber getauft, so ist mir zugesagt, ich solle selig sein und das ewige Leben haben beide an Seele und Leib. Denn darum geschieht solches beides in der Taufe, daß der Leib begossen wird, welcher nicht mehr fassen kann denn das Wasser, und dazu das Wort gesprochen wird, daß [es] die Seele auch könne fassen. Weil nun beide Wasser und Wort eine Taufe ist, so muß auch beide Leib und Seele selig werden und ewig leben: die Seele durchs Wort, daran sie glaubt, der Leib aber, weil er mit der Seele vereinigt ist und die Taufe auch ergreift, wie er's ergreifen kann. Darum haben wir an unserm Leib und Seele kein größter Kleinod; denn dadurch werden wir gar heilig und selig, welches sonst kein Leben, kein Wert auf Erden erlangen kann.

Daß sei nun genug gesagt von dem Wesen, Nutz und [Ge]brauch der Taufe, soviel hiether dient.

Von der Kindertaufe.

Hierbei fällt nun eine Frage ein, damit der Teufel durch seine Rotten die Welt verwirrt: von der Kinder Taufe, ob sie auch glauben und recht getauft werden. Dazu sagen wir kürzlich: Wer einfältig ist, der schlage die Frage von sich und weise sie zu den Gelehrten. Wißt du aber antworten, so antworte also:

Daß die Kindertaufe Christo gefalle, beweist sich genugsam aus seinem eigenen Werk, nämlich, daß

quae a Deo praecepta et ordinata sunt; in summa, adeo plena est consolationis et gratiae, ut eius sublimitatem coelum ac terra sita est, ut comprehendatur et comprehensus

Quapropter quivis Christianus per omnem 41] vitam suam abunde satis habet, ut baptismum recte perdiscat atque exerceat. Sat enim habet negotii, ut credat firmiter, quaecunque baptismum promittuntur et offeruntur, victoriam nempe mortis ac diaboli, remissionem peccatorum, gratiam Dei, Christum cum omnibus suis operibus et Spiritum Sanctum 42] cum omnibus suis dotibus. Breviter, ista omnia, quae baptismum secum apportat, omnem humanam cogitationem exsuperant, ita ut, si imbecilla natura animo repeteret, non iniuria in dubium veniret, num vera esse possint. 43] Ipse enim aestima: Quodsi uspiam gentium esset medicus ea arte praeditus, quae posset efficere, ne homines morerentur, aut si mortem oppeterent, postea tamen perpetuo viverent, quam non ad eundem maximi minime certatim et undarum instar multis cum opibus cursitarent, ita ut prae divitum turba nulla daretur accedendi copia! Iam hic

44] Ita baptismus intuendus est et nobis fructuosus faciendus, ut hoc freti corroboremur et confirmemur, quoties peccatis aut conscientia gravamur, ut dicamus: Ego tamen baptizatus sum; quodsi baptizatus, certum est ea promissa mihi data esse, me beatum fore ac vitam immortalem et animam et cor- 45] pore possessurum. Ideo enim haec duo in baptismo sunt, ut et corpus aqua perfundatur, quod praeter aquam nihil plus potest capere, et ad haec verba proferuntur, ut haec anima 46] capiat. Iam vero quoniam et aquam et verba unum baptismum esse constat, sequitur, ut et corpus et anima salva fiant ac in [R. 544] aeternum vivant: anima quidem per verbum, cui credit; corpus autem, quoniam animae unitum est et baptismum quoque apprehendit, qua ratione potest apprehendere. Quare neque in anima neque in corpore uspiam rem pretiosorem habemus; siquidem baptismi auxilio prorsus sancti ac felices reddimur, id quod alioqui nulla vita, nullum uspiam opus potest assequi.

Haec quidem de baptismi essentia, utilitate et usu, quaecunque scitu erant necessaria, dicta sufficiunt.

[DE PUERORUM BAPTISMO.]

47] Hoc vero loco occurrit quaestio, quae hodie diabolus per sectas suas mundum varie illaqueat, nempe de puerorum baptismo, num illi quoque credant aut recte baptizentur. Ad 48] hanc nos ita breviter respondemus: Qui simplici intelligentia praeditus est, ille hanc quaestionem indiscussam a se removeat ac doctoribus discutiendam relinquat. Quodsi 49] tamen respondere volueris, ita responde:

Puerorum baptismum Christo placere et gratum esse, suo ipsius opere abunde osten-commanded and ordained, and is, in short, so full of consolation and grace that heaven and earth cannot comprehend it. But it requires skill to believe this, for the treasure is not wanting, but this is wanting that men apprehend it and hold it firmly.

Therefore every Christian has enough in Baptism to learn and to practise all his life; for he has always enough to do to believe firmly what it promises and brings: victory over death and the devil, forgiveness of sin, the grace of God, the entire Christ, and the Holy Ghost with His gifts. In short, it is so transcendent that if timid nature could realize it, it might well doubt whether it could be true. For consider, if there were somewhere a physician who understood the art of saving men from dying, or, even though they died, of restoring them speedily to life, so that they would thereafter live forever, how the world would pour in money like snow and rain, so that because of the throng of the rich no one could find access! But here in Baptism there is brought free to every one's door such a treasure and medicine as utterly destroys death and preserves all men alive.

Thus we must regard Baptism and make it profitable to ourselves, that when our sins and conscience oppress us, we strengthen ourselves and take comfort and say: Nevertheless I am baptized; but if I am baptized, it is promised me that I shall be saved and have eternal life, both in soul and body. For that is the reason why these two things are done in Baptism, namely, that the body, which can apprehend nothing but the water, is sprinkled, and, in addition, the word is spoken for the soul to apprehend. Now, since both, the water and the Word, are one Baptism, therefore body and soul must be saved and live forever: the soul through the Word which it believes, but the body because it is united with the soul and also apprehends Baptism as it is able to apprehend it. We have, therefore, no greater jewel in body and soul, for by it we are made holy and are saved, which no other kind of life, no work upon earth, can attain.

Let this suffice respecting the nature, blessing, and use of Baptism, for it answers the present purpose.

Of Infant Baptism.

Here a question occurs by which the devil, through his sects, confuses the world, namely, Of Infant Baptism, whether children also believe, and are justly baptized. Concerning this we say briefly: Let the simple dismiss this question from their minds, and refer it to the learned. But if you wish to answer, then answer thus:—

That the Baptism of infants is pleasing to Christ is sufficiently proved from His own Gott deren viele heilig macht und den Heiligen Geist gegeben hat, die also getauft sind, und heutigestags noch viel sind, an denen man spürt, daß sie den Heiligen Geist haben, beide der Lehre und Lebens halben; als uns von Gottes Gnaden auch gegeben ist, daß wir ja können die Schrift auslegen und Christum erkennen, welches ohne den Heiligen Geist nicht geschehen kann. Wo aber Gott die Kindertaufe nicht annähme, würde er derer keinem den Heiligen Geist noch ein Stück davon geben; Summa, es müßte so lange Zeit her bis auf diesen Tag kein Mensch auf Erden Christ sein [ein Christ gewesen sein]. Weil nun Gott die Taufe bestätigt durch Eingeben [durch die Gabe und Mitteilung] seines Heiligen Geistes, als man in [an] elischen Vätern, als St. Bernhard, Gerson, Johann Hus und andern, so in der Kindheit getauft sind, wohl spürt, und die heilige christliche Kirche nicht untergeht bis ans Ende der Welt, so müssen sie bekennen, daß solche Kindertaufe Gott gefällig sei. Denn er kann je nicht wider sich selbst sein oder der Mitleid und Barmherzigkeit, noch seine Gnade und Geist dazu geben. Dies ist fast die beste und stärkste Beweisung für die Einfältigen und Ungelehrten. Denn man wird uns diesen Artikel: „Ich glaube eine heilige christliche Kirche, die Gemeinde der Heiligen“ usw. nicht nehmen noch umstoßen.

Danach sagen wir weiter, daß uns nicht die größte Macht daran liegt, ob, der da getauft wird, glaube oder nicht glaube; denn darum wird die Taufe nicht unrecht; sondern an Gottes Wort und Gebot liegt es alles. Das ist nun wohl ein wenig scharf, steht aber gar darauf, daß ich gesagt habe, daß die Taufe nichts anderes ist denn Wasser und Gottes Wort bei- und miteinander; das ist, wenn das Wort bei dem Wasser ist, so ist die Taufe recht, obschon der Glaube nicht dazukommt. Denn mein Glaube macht nicht die Taufe, sondern empfängt die Taufe. Nun wird die Taufe davon nicht unrecht, ob sie gleich nicht recht empfangen oder gebraucht wird, als die (wie gesagt) nicht an unsern Glauben, sondern an das Wort gebunden ist.

Denn wenngleich diesen Tag ein Jude mit Schallheit und bösem Vorsatz herzukäme, und wir ihn mit ganzem Ernst taufte, sollen wir nichtsdestoweniger sagen, daß die Taufe recht wäre. Denn da ist das Wasser samt Gottes Wort, ob er sie gleich nicht empfängt, wie er soll; gleich als die unwürdig zum Sakrament gehen, das rechte Sakrament empfangen, ob sie gleich nicht glauben.

Also siehst du, daß der Rottengeister Einrede nichts taugt. Denn (wie gesagt), wenngleich die Kinder nicht glaubten, welches doch nicht ist, als jetzt beweiset [bewiesen], so wäre doch die Taufe recht und soll sie niemand wieder taufen; gleich als dem Sakrament [des Altars] nichts abgebrochen wird, ob jemand mit bösem Vorsatz hinzuge, und nicht zu leiden wäre, daß er's um des Mißbrauchs willen auf dieselbe Stunde abermal nehme, als hätte er zuvor nicht wahrhaftig das ditur, nempe quod Deus illorum non paucos sanctificavit, eosdemque Spiritu Sancto imperavit, qui statim a partu infantes baptizati sunt. Sunt etiam hodie non parum multi, quos certis indicis animadvertimus Spiritum Sanctum habere, cum doctrinae eorum tum etiam vitae nomine; sicut et nobis gratia Dei datum et concessum est nosse Scripturas interpretari et Christum cognoscere, quod citra Spiritum Sanctum nullo modo fieri posse nemo 50] dubitat. At si puerorum baptismus Christo non probaretur, nulli horum Spiritum Sanctum aut ne particulam quidem eius impertiret, atque ut summam, quod sentio, eloquar, per tot saecula, quae ad hunc usque diem elapsa sunt, nullus hominum Christianus perhibendus esset. Quoniam vero Deus baptismum sui Sancti Spiritus donatione confirmat, id quod in nonnullis patribus, divo Bernhardo, Gerson, Iohanne Huss et in aliis, non obscuris argumentis intelligitur, [R. 545 neque sancta Christianorum ecclesia usque ad consummationem saeculi interibit, fateri coguntur Deo baptismum non displicere. Neque enim sibi ipse potest esse contrarius, aut mendacis et nequitiae suffragari, neque huic promovendae gratiam suam ac Spiritum suum 51] impertire. Et haec fere optima et firmissima est pro simplicibus et indoctis comprobatio. Neque enim hunc articulum: Credo ecclesiam catholicam, communionem sanctorum etc., nobis eripiant aut subvertent unquam.

52] Deinde hoc quoque dicimus, nobis non summam vim in hoc sitam esse, num ille, qui baptizatur, credat necne; per hoc enim baptismus nihil detrahitur. Verum summa rei in 53] verbo et praecepto Dei consistit. Hoc quidem aliquanto est acutius, verumtamen in hoc totum versatur, quod dixi baptismum nihil aliud esse quam aquam et verbum Dei simul iuncta; hoc est, accedente aquae verbo, baptismus rectus habendus est, etiam non accedente fide. Neque enim fides mea facit baptismum, sed baptismum percipit et apprehendit. Iam baptismus non vitatur aut corrumpitur, hominibus eo abutentibus aut non recte suscipientibus, qui (ut dictum est) non fidei nostrae, sed verbo Dei alligatus est.

54] Nam quamquam hodierno die Iudaeus quispiam fraudulentus quapiam simulatione et malitioso proposito veniret, se baptizandum offerens, nosque eundem serio omni studio baptizarem, nihilominus nobis dicendum esset baptismum verum et rectum esse. Hic enim aqua una cum verbo Dei praesto est, tametsi ille non recto animo, ut debebat, suscepit; sicut illi, qui indigne ad coenam Domini accedunt, verum corpus Domini accipiunt, quamquam non crediderint.

55] Ita vides Rottensium πατισμοματιῶν obiectionem vanam esse et nullius roboris. Nam quemadmodum diximus, quamquam pueri non crederent, quod nullo modo affirmandum est (ut iam ostensum est), tamen [R. 546 baptismus verus esset, neque quisquam eos rebaptizare debet; veluti sacramento nihil detrahitur, tametsi aliquis ad eius participationem improbo animo accedit, neque ferendum esset, ut eadem hora propter priorem abusum

work, namely, that God sanctifies many of them who have been thus baptized, and has given them the Holy Ghost; and that there are yet many even to-day in whom we perceive that they have the Holy Ghost both because of their doctrine and life; as it is also given to us by the grace of God that we can explain the Scriptures and come to the knowledge of Christ, which is impossible without the Holy Ghost. But if God did not accept the baptism of infants, He would not give the Holy Ghost nor any of His gifts to any of them; in short, during this long time unto this day no man upon earth could have been a Christian. Now, since God confirms Baptism by the gifts of His Holy Ghost, as is plainly perceptible in some of the church fathers, as St. Bernard, Gerson, John Hus, and others, who were baptized in infancy, and since the holy Christian Church cannot perish until the end of the world, they must acknowledge that such infant baptism is pleasing to God. For He can never be opposed to Himself, or support falsehood and wickedness, or for its promotion impart His grace and Spirit. This is indeed the best and strongest proof for the simple-minded and unlearned. For they shall not take from us or overthrow this article: I believe a holy Christian Church, the communion of saints.

Further, we say that we are not so much concerned to know whether the person baptized believes or not; for on that account Baptism does not become invalid; but everything depends upon the Word and command of God. This now is perhaps somewhat acute, but it rests entirely upon what I have said, that Baptism is nothing else than water and the Word of God in and with each other, that is, when the Word is added to the water, Baptism is valid, even though faith be wanting. For my faith does not make Baptism, but receives it. Now, Baptism does not become invalid even though it be wrongly received or employed; since it is not bound (as stated) to our faith, but to the Word.

For even though a Jew should to-day come dishonestly and with evil purpose, and we should baptize him in all good faith, we must say that his baptism is nevertheless genuine. For here is the water together with the Word of God, even though he does not receive it as he should, just as those who unworthily go to the Sacrament receive the true Sacrament, even though they do not believe.

Thus you see that the objection of the sectarians is vain. For (as we have said) even though infants did not believe, which, however, is not the case, yet their baptism as now shown would be valid, and no one should rebaptize them; just as nothing is detracted from the Sacrament though some one approach it with evil purpose, and he could not be allowed on account of his abuse to take it a second time the selfsame hour, as though Sacrament empfangen; denn das heie das Sacrament aufs hchste gelstert und geschndet. Wie kmen wir dazu, da Gottes Wort und Ordnung darum sollte unrecht sein und nichts gelten, da wir's unrecht [ge]brauchen?

Darum sage ich: Hast du nicht geglaubt, so glaube noch und sprich also: Die Taufe ist wohl recht gewesen, ich habe sie aber leider nicht recht empfangen. Denn auch ich selbst und alle, so sich taufen lassen, mssen vor Gott also sprechen: Ich komme her in meinem Glauben und auch der andern, noch [dennoch] kann ich nicht darauf bauen, da ich glaube, und viele Leute fr mich bitten, sondern darauf baue ich, da es dein Wort und Befehl ist; gleichwie ich zum Sacrament gehe, nicht auf meinen Glauben, sondern auf Christus' Wort, ich sei stark oder schwach, da lasse ich Gott walten. Das wei ich aber, da er mich heit hingehen, essen und trinken usw. und mir seinen Leib und Blut schenkt; das wird mir nicht lgen noch trgen.

Also tun wir nun auch mit der Kindertaufe: Das Kind tragen wir herzu der Meinung und Hoffnung, da es glaube, und bitten, da ihm Gott den Glauben gebe; aber darauf taufen wir's nicht, sondern allein darauf, da [es] Gott befohlen hat. Warum das? Darum, da wir wissen, da Gott nicht lgt [lgt]: ich und mein Nchster und, Summa, alle Menschen mgen fehlen und trgen, aber Gottes Wort kann nicht fehlen.

Darum find es je vermessene, tlpische Geister, die also folgern und schlieen: wo der Glaube nicht recht ist, da msse auch die Taufe nicht recht sein. Gerade als [wie wenn] ich wllte schlieen: Wenn ich nicht glaube, so ist Christus nichts; oder also: Wenn ich nicht gehorsam bin, so ist Vater, Mutter und Obrigkeit nichts. Ist das wohl geschlossen, wo jemand nicht tut, was er tun soll, da darum das Ding an ihm selbst nichts sein noch gelten soll? Lieber, lehre es um und schleu [schliee] vielmehr also: Eben darum ist die Taufe etwas und recht, da man sie unrecht empfangen hat. Denn wo sie an ihr selbst nicht recht wre, knnte man ihrer nicht mibrauchen noch daran sndigen. Es heit also: Abusus non tollit, sed confirmat substantiam, Mibrauch nimmt nicht hinweg das Wesen, sondern besttigt's. Denn Gold bleibt nichts weniger Gold, ob es gleich eine Bibin mit Snden und Schanden trgt.

Darum sei beschlossen, da die Taufe allezeit recht und in vollem Wesen bleibt, wenngleich nur ein Mensch getauft wrde und dazu nicht rechtschaffen glaubte. Denn Gottes Ordnung und Wort lt sich nicht von Menschen wandelbar machen noch ndern. Sie aber, die Schwrmergeister, sind so verblindet, da sie Gottes Wort und Gebot nicht sehen und die Taufe und Obrigkeit nicht weiter ansehen denn als Wasser im Bach und Tpfen oder als einen andern Menschen, und weil sie keinen Glauben noch Gehorsam sehen, soll es an ihm selbst auch nichts gelten. Da ist ein heimlicher, aufrhrerischer Trufel, der gerne die Krone von der Obrigkeit reien wllte, da man ad sumendum accedat denuo, quasi initio verum sacramentum non percepisset. Hoc enim esset summa contumelia et ignominia sacramentum efficere. Qua vero ratione verbum et institutio Dei propterea irrita esse debebunt, quia nos non recte utimur?

56] Propterea dico, si non recte credidisti prius, tamen adhuc crede, atque ita dicas: Baptismus quidem rectus fuit, ego vero miser eundem non recte suscepi. Nam ego ipse quoque et omnes alii, qui baptizantur, coram Deo ita coguntur dicere: Venio huc in mea et aliorum fide, neque tamen asseveranter affirmare audeo me certo credere, et multi pro me precantur, sed huic fidens innot, quod hoc verbum et praeceptum tuum sit. Quemadmodum ad coenam corporis et sanguinis Domini accedo, non mea fide, sed Christi verbo fretus, sive iam firmo sive infirmo sim animo, illud ego Deo meo commendo. Hoc tamen comperte teneo, quod iussu Dei mihi accedendum, edendum et bibendum est etc., quodque mihi suum corpus et sanguinem donat; quae res nunquam mihi mentietur aut me decipiet.

57] Ad hunc modum cum puerorum baptismum quoque facimus. Puerum ecclesiae ministro baptizandum apportamus hac spe atque animo, quod certo credat, et precamur, ut Deus eum fide donet; verum propterea non baptizamus, sed potius quod Deus ita faciendum nobis praeceperit. Cur ita? Ideo quod certi simus Deum non mentiri. Ego et proximus meus et in summa omnes homines errare possunt et fallere, porro autem Verbum Dei nec potest errare nec fallere.

58] Quocirca nimium utique confidentes et crassi sunt spiritus illi, qui ita concludentes inferunt: Ubi fides non est, ibi nec [R. 547] baptismus rectus esse potest. Quasi ita velim concludere: Si fidem non habuero, sequitur Christum nihil esse; aut sic: Si maiorum iussis morem non gessero, nec parentes nec magistratus quidquam sunt. Rectene ac bene colligitur, ubi quis non facit, quod illi faciendum fuerat, propterea sequi rem per se nihil 59] esse aut valere? Qui potius argumentum inverte atque ita collige: Sane ob id ipsum baptismum quantivis pretii et rectus habendus est, quod non recte ab hominibus susceptus est. Si enim per se baptismus rectus non esset, eo nullo modo possemus abuti, aut abutendo delinquere. Abusus non tollit, sed confirmat substantiam, vulgo dici solet. Si quidem aurum nihilominus manet aurum, quantumvis illud meretricula cum scelere et dedecore gestet ac circumferat.

60] Quare tandem semel conclusum esto, baptismum omni tempore rectum esse ac plenam permanere eius substantiam, etiamsi vel unus hominum baptizaretur, neque tamen recte crederet. Neque enim id, quod semel Deus ordinavit et locutus est, ab hominibus

61] mutari sinit aut perverti. Verum enim vero usque adeo excaecati sunt fanatici illi spiritus, ut Dei praeceptum ac verbum perpicere nequeant, neque baptismum et magistratus aliter intuentur atque aquam in fluviiis ac olla aut alium quempiam hominem, et cum nullam fidem aut obedientiam videant, et baptismus et magistratus nihil esse cogitur.

he had not received the true Sacrament at first; for that would mean to blaspheme and profane the Sacrament in the worst manner. How dare we think that God's Word and ordinance should be wrong and invalid because we make a wrong use of it?

Therefore I say, if you did not believe, then believe now and say thus: The baptism indeed was right, but I, alas! did not receive it aright. For I myself also, and all who are baptized, must speak thus before God: I come hither in my faith and in that of others, yet I cannot rest in this, that I believe, and that many people pray for me; but in this I rest, that it is Thy Word and command. Just as I go to the Sacrament trusting not in my faith, but in the Word of Christ; whether I am strong or weak, that I commit to God. But this I know, that He bids me go, eat and drink, etc., and gives me His body and blood; that will not deceive me or prove false to me.

Thus we do also in infant baptism. We bring the child in the conviction and hope that it believes, and we pray that God may grant it faith; but we do not baptize it upon that, but solely upon the command of God. Why so? Because we know that God does not lie. I and my neighbor and, in short, all men, may err and deceive, but the Word of God cannot err.

Therefore they are presumptuous, clumsy minds that draw such inferences and conclusions as these: Where there is not the true faith, there also can be no true Baptism. Just as if I would infer: If I do not believe, then Christ is nothing; or thus: If I am not obedient, then father, mother, and government are nothing. Is that a correct conclusion, that whenever any one does not do what he ought, the thing in itself shall be nothing and of no value? My dear, just invert the argument and rather draw this inference: For this very reason Baptism is something and is right, because it has been wrongly received. For if it were not right and true in itself, it could not be misused nor sinned against. The saying is: Abusus non tollit, sed confirmat substantiam, Abuse does not destroy the essence, but confirms it. For gold is not the less gold though a harlot wear it in sin and shame.

Therefore let it be decided that Baptism always remains true, retains its full essence, even though a single person should be baptized, and he, in addition, should not believe truly. For God's ordinance and Word cannot be made variable or be altered by men. But these people, the fanatics, are so blinded that they do not see the Word and command of God, and regard Baptism and the magistrates only as they regard water in the brook or in pots, or as any other man; and because they do not see faith nor obedience, they conclude ſie danach mit Füßen trete, dazu alle Gotteswerke und -ordnungen uns verlehren und zunichte machen. Darum müſſen wir wider [wachſam] und gerüſtet ſein und uns von dem Wort nicht laſſen weiſen noch wenden, daß wir die Taufe nicht laſſen ein bloß lebzig Zeichen ſein, wie die Schwärmer träumen.

Auſs letzte iſt auch zu wiſſen, was die Taufe bedeutet und warum Gott eben ſolch äußerlich Zeichen und Gebärde ordnet zu dem Sacrament, dadurch wir erſtlich in die Chriſtenheit genommen werden. Das Werk aber oder Gebärde iſt das, daß man uns ins Waſſer ſenkt, das über uns hergeht, und danach wieder herauszeucht [herauszieht]. Dieſe zwei Stüde, unter das Waſſer ſinken und wieder herauskommen, [be]deutet die Kraft und [das] Werk der Taufe, welches nichts anderes iſt denn die Tötung des alten Adams, danach die Auferſtehung des neuen Menſchen, welche beide unſer Leben lang in uns gehen ſollen, alſo daß ein Chriſtlich Leben nichts anderes iſt denn eine tägliche Taufe, einmal angefangen und immer darin gegangen. Denn es muß ohne Unterlaß alſo getan ſein, daß man immer ausſe, was des alten Adams iſt, und hervorſomme, was zum neuen gehört. Was iſt denn der alte Menſch? Das iſt er, ſo uns angeboren iſt von Adam: zornig, [ge]häßig, neidiſch, unleiſch, geizig, faul, hoffärtig, ja ungläubig, mit allen Laſtern beſetzt, und von Art ſein Gutes an ihm hat. Wenn wir nun in Chriſtus' Reich kommen, ſoll ſolches täglich abnehmen, daß wir je länger, je milder, geduldiger, ſanftmütiger werden, dem Unglauben, Geiz, Haß, Neid, Hoffart je mehr abbrechen.

dum est, ut subinde magis atque magis mitiores, semper aliquid avaritiae, odio, invidentiae, superbiae atque id genus vitiis detrahentes.

Das iſt der rechte [Ge]brauch der Taufe unter den Chriſten, durch das Waſſertaufen bedeutet. Wo nun ſolches nicht geht, ſondern dem alten Menſchen der Zaum gelaffen wird, daß er nur ſtärker wird, das heißt nicht der Taufe gebraucht, ſondern wider die Taufe geſtrebt. Denn die außer Chriſto ſind, können nichts anderes tun, denn täglich ärger werden, wie auch das Sprichwort lautet und die Wahrheit iſt: Immer je ärger; je länger, je böſer. Iſt einer vorm Jahr ſtolz und geizig geweſen, ſo iſt er heuer [dieſes Jahr] viel geiziger und ſtolzer, alſo daß die Untugend von Jugend auf mit ihm wächst und fortfährt. Ein junges Kind hat keine ſonderliche Untugend an ſich; wo es aber erwächſt [aufwächſt], ſo wird es unzuchtig und unleiſch; kommt es zu ſeinem vollen Mannesalter, ſo gehen die rechten Laſter an, je länger, je mehr.

Darum geht der alte Menſch in ſeiner Natur unaufgehalten, wo man nicht durch der Taufe Kraft wehrt und dämpft. Wiederum, wo Chriſten [ge]worden ſind, nimmt er täglich ab, ſo lange, biß er gar untergeht. Das heißt recht in die Taufe gekrochen und täglich wieder hervor[ge]kommen. Alſo iſt das äußerliche Zeichen ge-

62] Hic vero clandestinus et seditiosus latitat diabolus, qui perlubenter coronam magistratui eriperet, ut deinceps oppressus conculcetur pedibus, adhaec omnia Dei opera et ordinationes redactae in nihilum subvertentur funditus. Ideo nobis advigilandum est naviter omni panoplia instructis, ne a Verbo Dei divelli et abstrahi nos patiamur, ut baptismum non nudum et solum signum esse credamus, quemadmodum nostri spermolgi seu suermeri somniant.

64] Ultimo neque illud praetereundum aut ignorandum est, quid baptismi significetur, tum quamobrem Deus talibus externis [R. 548] signis et gestibus hoc sacramentum celebrandum instituerit, per quod primum in Christianorum communionem cooptamur. Opus vero aut gestus est, quod baptizandi in aquam mergimur, qua prorsus contegimur, et postea mersi iterum extrahimur. Hae duae res, in aquam mergi et iterum emergere, virtutem et opus baptismi significant, quae non sunt alia quam veteris Adami mortificatio et postea novi hominis resurrectio. Quae duo per omnem vitam nobis indesinenter exercenda sunt, ita ut Christiani vita nihil aliud sit quam quotidianus quidam baptismus, semel quidem inceptus, sed qui semper exercendus sit. Ita enim fieri necesse est, ut subinde veteris Adami sordes repurgentur atque eluantur, ut novi hominis nitor et forma prodeat. Quid 66] autem est vetus homo? Hoc nimirum est, quod ab Adamo, patre nostro, nobis successione quadam hereditaria innatum est, scilicet quod sumus iracundi, immites, invidi, luxuriosi, avari, pigri, superbi, increduli, breviter omnibus vitiis contaminati, et in quibus na- 67] tura nihil boni inest. Iam in Christi regnum delati, hisce vitiis quotidie decrescentes, liberaliores, patientiores, mansuetiores fiamus, 68] Et hic est rectus baptismi usus inter Christianos, per aquae mersionem significatus. Ceterum ubi baptismi exercitium non viget, sed Adamo veteri habenae laxantur, ut in dies fiat ferocior, hoc non dicitur, uti baptismus, 69] sed eidem reluctari. Qui enim extra Christum sunt, non possunt non quotidie in peius degenerare, sicut et vulgato eoque vero dicitur proverbio: Nunquam non deteriores; quo seniores eo peiores (Immer je aerger; je laen- 70] ger, je boeser). Quodsi quis anno [R. 549] superiore nonnihil coepit fastu insolescere et ad rem attentus esse, ille mox anno sequente multo fit insolentior et ad rem attentior, ita ut vitia ab incunabulis cum eo certis quibusdam incrementis progrediantur. Infans puer nullis singularibus vitiis infectus est; sed ubi adoleverit, immodestae, intemperantis et lascivae vitae inquinamenti contaminatur, mox constantem ac virilem aetatem consecutus, tum demum magis atque magis vera illa vitiorum seges erumpit.

71] Quare vetus homo naturam suam nemine obstante sequitur, si non baptismi virtute coercitus et refrenatus fuerit. Contra, ubicunque Christiani facti sunt, decrescit quotidie ac imminuitur, donec prorsus abolitus fuerit. Et hoc est vere in baptismis mergi et 72] iterum quotidie emergere. Itaque hoc conthat they are to be regarded as invalid. Here lurks a concealed seditious devil, who would like to tear the crown from the head of authority and then trample it under foot, and, in addition, pervert and bring to naught all the works and ordinances of God. Therefore we must be watchful and well armed, and not allow ourselves to be directed nor turned away from the Word, in order that we may not regard Baptism as a mere empty sign, as the fanatics dream.

Lastly, we must also know what Baptism signifies, and why God has ordained just such external sign and ceremony for the Sacrament by which we are first received into the Christian Church. But the act or ceremony is this, that we are sunk under the water, which passes over us, and afterwards are drawn out again. These two parts, to be sunk under the water and drawn out again, signify the power and operation of Baptism, which is nothing else than putting to death the old Adam, and after that the resurrection of the new man, both of which must take place in us all our lives, so that a truly Christian life is nothing else than a daily baptism, once begun and ever to be continued. For this must be practised without ceasing, that we ever keep purging away whatever is of the old Adam, and that that which belongs to the new man come forth. But what is the old man? It is that which is born in us from Adam, angry, hateful, envious, unchaste, stingy, lazy, haughty, yea, unbelieving, infected with all vices, and having by nature nothing good in it. Now, when we are come into the kingdom of Christ, these things must daily decrease, that the longer we live we become more gentle, more patient, more meek, and ever withdraw more and more from unbelief, avarice, hatred, envy, haughtiness.

This is the true use of Baptism among Christians, as signified by baptizing with water. Where this, therefore, is not practised, but the old man is left unbridled, so as to continually become stronger, that is not using Baptism, but striving against Baptism. For those who are without Christ cannot but daily become worse, according to the proverb which expresses the truth, "Worse and worse — the longer, the worse." If a year ago one was proud and avaricious, then he is much prouder and more avaricious this year, so that the vice grows and increases with him from his youth up. A young child has no special vice; but when it grows up, it becomes unchaste and impure, and when it reaches maturity, real vices begin to prevail the longer, the more.

Therefore the old man goes unrestrained in his nature if he is not checked and suppressed by the power of Baptism. On the other hand, where men have become Christians, he daily decreases until he finally perishes. That is stellt, nicht allein, daß es solle kräftiglich wirken, sondern auch etwas [be]deuten. Wo nun der Glaube geht mit seinen Früchten, da ist's nicht eine lose [Be] Deutung, sondern das Werk dabet; wo aber der Glaube nicht ist, da bleibt ein bloß unfruchtbar Zeichen.

Und hier siehst du, daß die Taufe beide mit ihrer Kraft und [Be] Deutung begreift auch das dritte Sakrament [vgl. 578, 20; 732, 1: „von unsern zwei Sakramenten“], welches man genennet [genannt] hat die Buße, als die eigentlich nichts anderes ist denn die Taufe. Denn was heißt Buße anders, denn den alten Menschen mit Ernst angreifen und in ein neues Leben treten? Darum, wenn du in der Buße lebst, so gehst du in der Taufe, welche solch neues Leben nicht allein [be-] deutet, sondern auch wirkt, anhebt und treibt; denn darin wird [ge]geben Gnade, Geist und Kraft, den alten Menschen zu unterdrücken, daß der neue hervorkomme und stark werde.

Darum bleibt die Taufe immerdar stehen, und obgleich jemand davon fällt und sündigt, haben wir doch immer einen Zugang dazu, daß man den alten Menschen wieder unter sich werfe. Aber mit Wasser darf man uns nicht mehr begießen; denn ob man sich gleich hundertmal liege ins Wasser senken, so ist's doch nicht mehr denn eine Taufe; das Werk aber und [Be] Deutung geht und bleibt. Also ist die Buße nichts anderes denn ein Wiebergang und Zutreten [eine Rückkehr und ein Hinzutreten] zur Taufe, daß man das wiederholt und treibt, so man zuvor angefangen und doch davon gelassen hat.

Das sage ich darum, daß man nicht in die Meinung komme, darin wir lange Zeit gewesen sind und gewöhnt haben, die Taufe wäre nun hin [mit der Taufe wäre es nun vorbei], daß man ihrer nicht mehr [ge]brauchen könnte, nachdem wir wieder in Sünde gefallen sind. Das macht, daß man's nicht weiter ansieht denn nach dem Werk, so einmal geschehen ist. Und ist zwar daher [ge]kommen, daß St. Hieronymus geschrieben hat: „Die Buße sei die andere Tafel [tabula, Brett], damit wir müssen [her]auschwimmen und [hin]überkommen, nachdem das Schiff gebrochen ist, darein wir treten und [hin]überfahren, wenn wir in die Christenheit kommen.“ Damit ist nun der [Ge-]brauch der Taufe weggenommen, daß sie uns nicht mehr nützen kann. Darum ist's nicht recht geredet oder je nicht recht verstanden; denn das Schiff zerbricht nicht, weil es (wie gesagt) Gottes Ordnung und nicht unser Ding ist; aber das geschieht wohl, daß wir gleiten und herausfallen; fällt aber jemand heraus, der sehe, daß er wieder hinzuschwimme und sich daran halte, bis er wieder hineinkomme und darin gehe, wie vorhin angefangen.

Also sieht man, wie ein hoch, trefflich Ding es ist um die Taufe, so uns dem Teufel aus dem Halse reiht, Gott zu eigen macht, die Sünde dämpft und wegnimmt, danach täglich den neuen Menschen stärkt und immer geht und bleibt, bis wir aus diesem Elend zur ewigen Herrlichkeit kommen.

silio externum signum nobis propositum est, non tantum, ut efficaciter operetur, verum 73) etiam, ut aliquid significet. Iam ubicunque fides fructibus secunda viget, hic baptismus non tantum inanem significationem repraesentat, sed mortificandae carnis opera coniuncta habet. Porro autem absente fide nudum et inefficax signum tantummodo permanet.

74) Ex his iam clare vides, baptismum aequae et virtute et significatione sua tertium quoque sacramentum comprehendere, quod poenitentiam appellare consueverunt, quae pro 75) prie nihil aliud est quam baptismus aut eius exercitium. Quid enim poenitentia dici potest aliud, quam veterem hominem magno adoriri animo, ut eius concupiscentiae coercerentur ac novam vitam amplecti? Quare vivens in poenitentia in baptismo versaris, hanc novam vitam non solum significante, verum etiam operante, incipiente et exercente. 76) In hoc enim baptizatus datur et gratia et spiritus et virtus veterem hominem compescendi, ut novus prodeat ac confirmetur.

77) Hinc baptismus semper substituit, et quamquam aliquis ab eo peccatorum (R. 550) procellis abreptus excidat, nobis tamen subinde ad eum regressus patet, ut veterem hominem resipiscentiae iugo iterum subiiciamus. 78) Verum ut iterum aqua perfundamur, non est necesse. Nam etsi centies in aquam mergeremur, non tamen nisi unus baptismus est. Ceterum opus et significatio durat et perma- 79) net. Ita resipiscentia aut poenitentia nihil aliud est quam regressus quidam et reditus ad baptismum, ut illud iterum petatur et exerceatur, quod ante quidem inceptum et tamen negligentia intermissum est.

80) Haec ideo a me dicuntur, ne in eam veniamus opinionem, in qua permultos iam annos fuimus, opinati baptismum iam completum esse, ut eo amplius uti nequeamus, posteaquam iterum in peccata prolapsi sumus. Cuius rei causa exstitit, quod eundem ulterius non sumus intuiti nisi secundum externum opus, quod semel factum atque completum 81) est. Atque hoc inde quoque evenit, quod divus Hieronymus scriptum reliquit: Poenitentiam secundam esse tabulam, qua nobis ex huius mundi pelago natandum et traiciendum est fracta iam navi, in quam transcendimus atque traicimus, delati in 82) Christianitatem. Sed hisce verbis baptismi usum Hieronymus nobis sustulit, ut nobis amplius utilis esse nequeat. Quamobrem nequaquam recte docuit, neque enim navis frangitur, quando (ut diximus) Dei ordo seu constitutio et non nostrum opus est. Illud vero non raro fieri solet, ut labentes excidamus. Jam si quis exciderit, ille det operam, ut iterum annatet, huicque adhaereat, donec iterum in navem recipiatur, inque ea iterum perinde versetur, ut primum incepterat.

83) Ita iam liquido omnibus compertum esse arbitror, quam praeclara ac mirifica res sit baptismus, eripiens nos a rictu diabólico, Deum nobis proprium faciens, peccatum (R. 551) opprimens et auferens, deinde in dies singulos novum hominem fortificans, semper etiam durans et permanens, donec ex hoc exilio erepti ad immortalem gloriam migraverimus.

truly to be buried in Baptism, and daily to come forth again. Therefore the external sign is appointed not only for a powerful effect, but also for a signification. Where, therefore, faith flourishes with its fruits, there it has no empty signification, but the work [of mortifying the flesh] accompanies it; but where faith is wanting, it remains a mere unfruitful sign.

And here you see that Baptism, both in its power and signification, comprehends also the third Sacrament, which has been called repentance, as it is really nothing else than Baptism. For what else is repentance but an earnest attack upon the old man [that his lusts be restrained] and entering upon a new life? Therefore, if you live in repentance, you walk in Baptism, which not only signifies such a new life, but also produces, begins, and exercises it. For therein are given grace, the Spirit, and power to suppress the old man, so that the new man may come forth and become strong.

Therefore our Baptism abides forever; and even though some one should fall from it and sin, nevertheless we always have access thereto, that we may again subdue the old man. But we need not again be sprinkled with water; for though we were put under the water a hundred times, it would nevertheless be only one Baptism, although the operation and signification continue and remain. Repentance, therefore, is nothing else than a return and approach to Baptism, that we repeat and practise what we began before, but abandoned.

This I say lest we fall into the opinion in which we were for a long time, imagining that our Baptism is something past, which we can no longer use after we have fallen again into sin. The reason is, that it is regarded only according to the external act once performed [and completed]. And this arose from the fact that St. Jerome wrote that repentance is the second plank by which we must swim forth and cross over after the ship is broken, on which we step and are carried across when we come into the Christian Church. Thereby the use of Baptism has been abolished so that it can profit us no longer. Therefore the statement is not correct, or at any rate not rightly understood. For the ship never breaks, because (as we have said) it is the ordinance of God, and not a work of ours; but it happens, indeed, that we slip and fall out of the ship. Yet if any one fall out, let him see to it that he swim up and cling to it till he again come into it and live in it, as he had formerly begun.

Thus it appears what a great, excellent thing Baptism is, which delivers us from the jaws of the devil and makes us God's own, suppresses and takes away sin, and then daily strengthens the new man; and is and remains ever efficacious until we pass from this estate of misery to eternal glory.

Darum soll ein jeglicher die Taufe halten als ein täglich Kleid, darin er immerdar gehen soll, daß er sich allezeit in dem Glauben und seinen Früchten finden lasse, daß er den alten Menschen dämpfe und im neuen erwache. Denn wollen wir Christen sein, so müssen wir das Werk treiben, davon wir Christen sind; fällt aber jemand davon, so komme er wieder hinzu. Denn wie Christus, der Gnadenstuhl, darum nicht weicht noch uns wehrt, wieder zu ihm zu kommen, ob wir gleich sündigen, also bleibt auch alle sein Schatz und Gabe. Wenn [* wie] nun einmal in der Taufe Vergebung der Sünden überkommen ist, so bleibt sie noch täglich, solange wir leben, das ist, den alten Menschen am Halse tragen.

torum condonationem assecuti sumus, ita ea adhuc quotidie permanet, quamdiu vivimus, hoc est, donec in terris veterem hominem collo circumferimus.

[Das fünfte Teil.]

Von dem Sacrament des Altars.

Wie wir von der heiligen Taufe gehört haben, also müssen wir von dem andern Sacrament auch reden, nämlich die drei Stücke: was es sei, was es nütze, und wer es empfangen soll. Und solches alles aus den Worten gegründet, dadurch es von Christo eingesetzt ist, welche auch ein jeglicher wissen soll, der ein Christ will sein und zum Sacrament gehen. Denn wir sind's nicht gesinnt, dazuzulassen und [es] zu reichen denen, die nicht wissen, was sie da suchen oder warum sie kommen [daher die schon 1523 zu Wittenberg eingeführte Anmeldung mit Beichtverhör]. Die Worte aber sind diese:

Unser Herr Jesus Christus in der Nacht, als er verraten ward, nahm er das Brod, dankete und brach's und gab's seinen Jüngern und sprach: Nehmet hin, esset, das ist mein Leib, der für euch gegeben wird; solches tut zu meinem Gedächtnis!

Desseßbigengleichen nahm er auch den Kelch nach dem Abendmahl, dankete und gab ihnen den und sprach: Nehmet hin und trinket alle daraus; dieser Kelch ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut, das für euch vergossen wird zur Vergebung der Sünden; solches tut, sooft ihr's trinket, zu meinem Gedächtnis!

Hier wollen wir uns auch nicht in die Haare legen und sechten mit den Hästern und Schändern dieses Sacraments, sondern zum ersten lernen, da die Nacht an liegt (wie auch von der Taufe), nämlich daß das vornehmste Stück sei Gottes Wort und Ordnung oder Befehl; denn es ist von keinem Menschen erdacht noch auf[ge]bracht, sondern ohne jemandes Rat und Bedacht von Christo eingesetzt. Derhalben, wie die zehn Gebote, Vaterunser und Glaube bleiben in ihrem Wesen und Würden, ob du sie gleich nimmermehr

84] Eam ob rem cuique baptismus ita habendus est, ut amictus quotidianus, quo indutus semper debet incedere, ut nunquam non in fide eiusque fructibus inveniatur, ut coercitis veteris hominis concupiscentiis in novo 85] adolescat. Si enim Christiani perhiberi contendimus, baptismi opus sedulo nobis exercendum est, unde Christiani appellationem 86] promeremur. Si quis autem exciderit, ille accedat vicissim. Nam quemadmodum Christus, omnis gratiae et misericordiae sedes, non cedit neque obstat nobis prohibens iterum ad sese accedere, quamquam peccantes hallucinemur, ita quoque universorum bonorum suorum et donorum thesaurus inconcussus permanet. Iam quemadmodum semel in baptismo pecca-

[Quinta Pars.]

DE SACRAMENTO ALTARIS.

1] Quemadmodum hactenus de baptismo disseruimus, ita iam nobis deinceps de secundo quoque sacramento disserendum est, nempe de his tribus partibus: quid sit, quid utilitatis afferat amentibus, insuper quibus fruendum aut sumendum sit. Atque haec omnia ipsius Scripturae verbis confirmata comprobabimus, quibus a Christo iam inde ab initio institutum est. Haec equidem cuius Christiano cognoscenda sunt, qui quidem Christianus esse contendit et huius sacramenti cupit (R. 552 esse particeps. Neque enim nobis est animus posthac admittendi quemlibet aut quibuslibet illud administrandi, ignorantibus, quid hic quaerant aut quamobrem accedant. Ceterum verba haec sunt:

3] Dominus noster Iesus Christus, in qua nocte tradebatur, accepit panem, et gratias agens fregit et dixit: Accipite et manducate. Hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis traditur. Hoc facite in mei commemorationem.

Similiter et calicem, postquam coenavit, cum gratias egisset, dedit illis, dicens: Hic calix novum testamentum est in meo sanguine, qui pro vobis et multis effunditur in remissionem peccatorum. Hoc facite, quotiescunque biberitis, in mei commemorationem.

4] Principio nequaquam decretum est nobis hic cum quoquam pedem conferre aut contentionis gratia cum huius sacramenti detestandis blasphematoribus suscepto bello in arenam descendere, verum sub initium potius discere, qua in re huius sacramenti vis et virtus (ut in baptismo fecimus) omnis sita sit, nimirum, ut sciamus caput et nervum in hoc esse Dei verbum, ordinem et mandatum. Neque enim a quoquam homine excogitatum aut inventum, sed citra cuiusvis consilium et deliberationem

For this reason let every one esteem his Baptism as a daily dress in which he is to walk constantly, that he may ever be found in the faith and its fruits, that he suppress the old man and grow up in the new. For if we would be Christians, we must practise the work whereby we are Christians. But if any one fall away from it, let him again come into it. For just as Christ, the Mercy-seat, does not recede from us or forbid us to come to Him again, even though we sin, so all His treasure and gifts also remain. If, therefore, we have once in Baptism obtained forgiveness of sin, it will remain every day, as long as we live, that is, as long as we carry the old man about our neck.

[Part Fifth.]

OF THE SACRAMENT OF THE ALTAR.

In the same manner as we have heard regarding Holy Baptism, we must speak also concerning the other Sacrament, namely, these three points: What is it? What are its benefits? and, Who is to receive it? And all these are established by the words by which Christ has instituted it, and which every one who desires to be a Christian and go to the Sacrament should know. For it is not our intention to admit to it and to administer it to those who know not what they seek, or why they come. The words, however, are these:

Our Lord Jesus Christ, the same night in which He was betrayed, took bread; and when He had given thanks, He brake it, and gave it to His disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is My body, which is given for you: this do in remembrance of Me.

After the same manner also He took the cup when He had supped, gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; this cup is the new testament in My blood, which is shed for you for the remission of sins: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me.

Here also we do not wish to enter into controversy and contend with the traducers and blasphemers of this Sacrament, but to learn first (as we did regarding Baptism) what is of the greatest importance, namely, that the chief point is the Word and ordinance or command of God. For it has not been invented nor introduced by any man, but without any one's counsel and deliberation it has hältst, beteßt noch glaubst, also bleibt auch dies hochwürdige Sacrament unverrückt, daß ihm nichts abgebrochen noch genommen wird, ob wir's gleich unwürdig [ge]brauchen und handeln. Was meinst du, daß Gott nach unserm Tun oder Glauben fragt, daß er um deswillen sollte seine Ordnung wandeln lassen? Bleibt doch in allen weltlichen Dingen alles, wie es Gott geschaffen und geordnet hat, Gott gebe, wie wir's [ge]brauchen und handeln. Solches muß man immerdar treiben, denn damit kann man fast aller Rottengeister Geschwäg zurückstoßen; denn sie die Sacramente außer Gottes Wort ansehen als ein Ding, daß wir tun.

7) quacunq; tandem ratione illis utamur aut semper ac sedulo inculcanda sunt; iis enim omnium seditiosorum spirituum neniae et gerrae illico labefactantur et subvertuntur. Illi enim sacramenta extra Dei Verbum intuentur ut rem a nobis factam.

Was ist nun das Sacrament des Altars?

Antwort:

Es ist der wahre Leib und Blut des Herrn Christi, in und unter dem Brot und Wein durch Christus' Wort uns Christen befohlen zu essen und zu trinken. Und wie von der Taufe gesagt, daß [sie] nicht schlecht [bloßes] Wasser ist, so sagen wir hier auch, daß Sacrament ist Brot und Wein, aber nicht schlecht Brot und Wein, so man sonst zu Eische trägt, sondern Brot und Wein in Gottes Wort gesagt und daran gebunden.

Das Wort (sage ich) ist das, daß dies Sacrament macht und unterscheidet, daß es nicht lauter Brot und Wein, sondern Christus' Leib und Blut ist und heißt. Denn es heißt: Accedat verbum ad elementum et sit sacramentum; „Wenn das Wort zum äußerlichen Ding kommt, so wird's ein Sacrament.“ Dieser Spruch St. Augustini ist so eigentlich [treffend] und wohl geredet, daß er kaum einen besseren gesagt hat. Das Wort muß das Element zum Sacrament machen; wo nicht, so bleibt's ein lauter Element. Nun ist's nicht eines Fürsten oder Kaisers, sondern der hohen Majestät Wort und Ordnung, davor alle Creaturen sollen zu Füßen fallen und ja sprechen, daß es sei, wie er jagt, und [es] mit allen Ehren, Furcht und Demut annehmen.

Aus dem Wort kannst du dein Gewissen stärken und sprechen: Wenn hunderttausend Teufel samt allen Schwärmern herfahren: Wie kann Brot und Wein Christus' Leib und Blut sein usw.? so weiß ich, daß alle Geister und Gelehrten auf einem Haufen nicht so klug sind als die göttliche Majestät im kleinsten Fingerlein. Nun steht hier Christus' Wort: „Nehmet, esset, das ist mein Leib. Trinket alle daraus, das ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut“ usw. Da bleiben wir bei und wollen sie ansehen, die ihn meistern werden und anders machen, denn er's geredet hat. Das ist wohl wahr, wenn du das Wort davontust oder ohne Wort ansiehst, so hast du nichts denn lauter Brot und Wein; wenn sie aber dabei bleiben, wie sie sollen und müssen, so ist's laut derselben wahrhaftig Christus' Leib und Blut. Denn wie Christus' Mund redet und spricht, also ist es, als der nicht lügen noch trügen kann.

5) ab ipso Christo institutum est. Quapropter sicut decem praecepta, Oratio Dominica, fidei Confessio suam dignitatem obtinent, tametsi ea in perpetuum nunquam servaveris, oraveris neque credideris, ita quoque hoc venerabile sacramentum salvum ac inviolatum permanet, ut nihil ille detrahatur, quamlibet nos [R. 553 6] illo indigne abutamur. Quid putas Deo nostra opera aut fidem adeo curae esse, ut eam ob rem suum ordinem aut institutionem immutari patiatur? Videmus enim in omnibus mundanis rebus eum perpetuo tenorem consistere et ordinem perdurare, quem Deus semel rebus creandis praescripuit et instituit, res creatas exerceamus. Haec quidem vulgo Est verum corpus et sanguis Domini nostri Iesu Christi, in et sub pane et vino per verbum Christi nobis Christianis ad manducandum et bibendum institutum et mandatum. 9) Et sicut de baptismo diximus non simplicem eum esse aquam, ita quoque hic dicimus hoc sacramentum panem et vinum esse, sed non simpliciter panem et vinum esse, quae proponuntur discumbentibus, sed panem et vinum Dei verbo inclusa et huic alligata.

8) Quid est itaque Sacramentum Altaris?

Responsio:

10) Verbum, inquam, illud est, quo hoc sacramentum fit atque discernitur, ne tantum simpliciter vinum et aqua [panis], sed Christi corpus et sanguis sit ac dicatur. Nos enim Augustini verbis subscribimus, ita dicentis: Accedat verbum ad elementum et sit sacramentum. Hoc Augustini verbum tam proprie et expresse dictum est, ut vix aliud dixerit praeclarius. Virtute verbi elementum fit sacramentum, citra cuius accessionem non nisi 11) elementum manet. Iam hoc non est aliquis principis aut caesaris, sed omnipotentis Dei verbum et institutio, cui merito omnes creaturae debebant ad pedes accidere atque assentiri ita se rem habere, sicut dicit ipse, omnique reverentia, metu et humilitate illud accipere.

12) Hoc verbo conscientiae tuae imbecillitatem confirmare potes ac dicere: Etiam si infinitae diabolorum myriades una cum [R. 554] omnibus suermeris uno ore impudentissime affirmarent, quomodo panis et vinum Christi corpus et sanguis esse possunt etc., tamen compertum habeo, omnes ad unum spiritus et doctos non tanta exultos esse prudentia atque intelligentia, quanta Deum omnipotentem vel in minimo digitulo valere certo scio. Iam 13) hic expresse Christi verbum ponitur: Accipite, edite, hoc est corpus meum. Bibite ex hoc omnes, hic est calix novi testamenti in meo sanguine etc. In haec verba pedibus imus, hisce constanter adhaeremus, perlibenter eos visuri, qui suo magisterio Christum aliter audeant docere aut aliter facere, atque 14) ipse locutus esse. Hoc equidem non infirmum verum esse, si verbum auferas, aut sine eo hoc sacramentum intuearis, praeter merum been instituted by Christ. Therefore, just as the Ten Commandments, the Lord's Prayer, and the Creed retain their nature and worth, although you never keep, pray, or believe them, so also does this venerable Sacrament remain undisturbed, so that nothing is detracted or taken from it, even though we employ and dispense it unworthily. What do you think God cares about what we do or believe, so that on that account He should suffer His ordinance to be changed? Why, in all worldly matters every thing remains as God has created and ordered it, no matter how we employ or use it. This must always be urged, for thereby the prating of nearly all the fanatical spirits can be repelled. For they regard the Sacraments, aside from the Word of God, as something that we do.

Now, what is the Sacrament of the Altar?

Answer: It is the true body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, in and under the bread and wine which we Christians are commanded by the Word of Christ to eat and to drink. And as we have said of Baptism that it is not simple water, so here also we say the Sacrament is bread and wine, but not mere bread and wine, such as are ordinarily served at the table, but bread and wine comprehended in, and connected with, the Word of God.

It is the Word (I say) which makes and distinguishes this Sacrament, so that it is not mere bread and wine, but is, and is called, the body and blood of Christ. For it is said: Accedat verbum ad elementum, et fit sacramentum. If the Word be joined to the element, it becomes a Sacrament. This saying of St. Augustine is so properly and so well put that he has scarcely said anything better. The Word must make a Sacrament of the element, else it remains a mere element. Now, it is not the word or ordinance of a prince or emperor, but of the sublime Majesty, at whose feet all creatures should fall, and affirm it is as He says, and accept it with all reverence, fear, and humility.

With this Word you can strengthen your conscience and say: If a hundred thousand devils, together with all fanatics, should rush forward, crying, How can bread and wine be the body and blood of Christ? etc., I know that all spirits and scholars together are not as wise as is the Divine Majesty in His little finger. Now here stands the Word of Christ: Take, eat; this is My body; Drink ye all of it; this is the new testament in My blood, etc. Here we abide, and would like to see those who will constitute themselves His masters, and make it different from what He has spoken. It is true, indeed, that if you take away the Word or regard it without the words, you have nothing but mere bread and wine. But if the words remain with them, as they shall and must, then, in virtue of the panem ac vinum nihil tibi mansurum reliqui; sed verbis una cum vino et pane manentibus, sicut debet et oportet, tum constat illa veraciter esse Christi corpus et sanguinem. Sicut enim os Christi dicit ac loquitur, ita quoque est, ut qui neque mentiri novit neque fallere.

Daher ist nun leicht zu antworten auf allerlei Fragen, damit man sich jetzt befummert, als diese ist: ob auch ein böser Priester könnte das Sacrament handeln und geben, und was mehr dergleichen ist. Denn da schließen wir und sagen: Obgleich ein Bube das Sacrament nimmt oder gibt, so nimmt er das rechte Sacrament, das ist, Christus' Leib und Blut, ebensowohl, als der es aufs allerwürdigste handelt. Denn es ist nicht gegründet auf Menschenheiligkeit, sondern auf Gottes Wort; und wie kein Heiliger auf Erden, ja kein Engel im Himmel das Brot und Wein zu Christus' Leib und Blut machen kann, also kann's auch niemand ändern noch wandeln, ob es gleich mißbraucht wird. Denn um der Person oder Unglaubens willen wird das Wort nicht falsch, dadurch es ein Sacrament [ge]worden und eingesetzt ist. Denn er spricht nicht: Wenn ihr glaubt oder würdig seid, so habt ihr meinen Leib und Blut, sondern: „Nehmet, esset und trinket; das ist mein Leib und Blut“; item: „Solches thut“ (nämlich das ich jetzt tue, einsetze, euch gebe und nehmen heiße). Das ist so viel gesagt: Gott gebe, du seiest unwürdig oder würdig, so hast du hier seinen Leib und Blut aus Kraft dieser Worte, so zu dem Brot und Wein kommen. Solches merke und behalte nur wohl; denn auf den Worten steht alle unser Grund, Schutz und Wehr wider alle Irrthümer und Verführung, so je [ge]kommen sind oder noch kommen mögen.

19) habes horum verborum virtute, quae pani ac vino adiecta sunt. Hoc animo reconditum fac diligenter conserves. In his enim verbis omne nostrum praesidium, tutela et propugnatio adversus omnes illorum errores et seductiones, quaecunque vel exortae sunt unquam, vel deinceps adhuc exoriri possunt, sita sunt.

Also haben wir kürzlich das erste Stück, so das Wesen dieses Sacraments belangt. Nun siehe weiter auf die Kraft und Nutz, darum endlich [schließlich, im Grunde] das Sacrament eingesetzt ist, welches auch das Nützigste darin ist, daß man wisse, was wir da suchen und holen sollen. Das ist nun klar und leicht eben aus den gedachten Worten: „Das ist mein Leib und Blut, für euch gegeben und vergossen zur Vergebung der Sünden.“ Das ist kürzlich so viel gesagt: Darum gehen wir zum Sacrament, daß wir da empfangen solchen Schatz, durch und in dem wir Vergebung der Sünden überkommen. Warum das? Darum, daß die Worte dasethen und uns solches geben; denn darum heißt er mich essen und trinken, daß es mein sei und mir nütze, als ein gewiß Pfand und Zeichen, ja eben daselbe Gut, so für mich gesetzt ist wider meine Sünde, Tod und alles Unglück.

Darum heißt es wohl eine Speise der Seele, die den neuen Menschen nährt und stärkt. Denn durch die Taufe werden wir erstlich neugeboren, aber daneben (wie gesagt ist) bleibt gleichwohl die alte Haut im Fleisch und Blut am Menschen; da ist so viel Hinderniß und Anfechtung vom Teufel und der Welt, daß wir oft müde und matt werden und zuweilen auch straucheln.

15) Ex his iam haud difficulter respondere possumus ad omnis generis quaestiones, quibus iam passim multi sollicitantur, quarum una haec est: num profligatae quoque vitae sacerdos sacramentum ministrare aut tractare 16) possit, et eiusmodi. Siquidem hic nos ita concludimus, dicentes: Quamquam nebulo perditissimus sacramentum aliis ministret aut ipse sumat, tamen nihilominus sacramentum illum sumere, hoc est, Christi corpus et sanguinem, non secus atque is, qui omnium reverentissime et dignissime sumpserit aut tractaverit. Neque enim humana sanctimonia, sed Verbo Dei nititur illud. Et quemadmodum nullus sanctorum in terris, adde: etiam nullus angelorum in coelis, panem et vinum in Christi corpus et sanguinem vertere [R. 555] potest, ita quoque nemo aliter facere aut imutare potest, etsi hoc sacramento indignus 17) sime abutatur. Nam propter personae indignitatem aut incredulitatem Verbum non fit falsum aut irritum, per quod sacramentum factum et institutum est. Neque enim dicit: Quando credideritis aut digni fueritis, tum corpus et sanguinem meum habebitis; sed: Accipite, edite, bibite; hoc est corpus meum et sanguis meus, et iterum: Hoc facite, nimirum quod ego iam facio, instituo, vobis edendū 18) dum et bibendum porrigo. Hoc perinde valet, ac si dixisset: Sive dignus sive indignus fueris, hic corpus et sanguinem meum same, it is truly the body and blood of Christ. For as the lips of Christ say and speak, so it is, as He can never lie or deceive.

20) Ita habemus breviter primam partem, de substantia nempe sacramenti. Nunc porro videamus et virtutem ac utilitatem eius, cuius gratia potissimum sacramentum hoc institutum est, quodque omnium maxime in eo est necessarium, ut sciamus, quid hic nobis quae 21) rendum indeque auferendum sit. Sed et hoc valde perspicuum est et cognitum facile ex iisdem supra memoratis verbis: Hoc est corpus meum et sanguis meus, quod PRO VOBIS datur et effunditur in remissionem peccatorum. 22) rum. Horum verborum breviter hic est sensus: Ideo ad sacramentum accedimus, ut eiusmodi thesaurum ibi accipiamus, per quem et in quo peccatorum remissionem consequamur. Quare hoc? Ideo quod verba illic exstant et haec dant nobis. Siquidem propterea a Christo iubeor edere et bibere, ut meum sit mihi que utilitatem afferat, veluti certum pignus et arrabo, imo potius res ipsa, quam pro peccatis meis morte et omnibus malis ille opposuit et oppignoravit.

23) Inde iure optimo cibus animae dicitur, novum hominem alens atque fortificans. Per baptismum enim initio regeneramur, [R. 556] verum nihilominus antiqua et vitiosa cutis carnis et sanguinis adhaeret homini. Iam hic multa sunt impedimenta et impugnationes, quibus cum a mundo tum a diabolo acerrime infestamur, ita ut non raro defessi viribus deficiamus, ac nonnunquam etiam in peccatorum sordes prolabamur.

Hence it is easy to reply to all manner of questions about which men are troubled at the present time, such as this one: Whether even a wicked priest can minister at, and dispense, the Sacrament, and whatever other questions like this there may be. For here we conclude and say: Even though a knave takes or distributes the Sacrament, he receives the true Sacrament, that is, the true body and blood of Christ, just as truly as he who [receives or] administers it in the most worthy manner. For it is not founded upon the holiness of men, but upon the Word of God. And as no saint upon earth, yea, no angel in heaven, can make bread and wine to be the body and blood of Christ, so also can no one change or alter it, even though it be misused. For the Word by which it became a Sacrament and was instituted does not become false because of the person or his unbelief. For He does not say: If you believe or are worthy, you receive My body and blood, but: Take, eat and drink; this is My body and blood. Likewise: Do this (namely, what I now do, institute, give, and bid you take). That is as much as to say, No matter whether you are worthy or unworthy, you have here His body and blood by virtue of these words which are added to the bread and wine. Only note and remember this well; for upon these words rest all our foundation, protection, and defense against all errors and deception that have ever come or may yet come.

Thus we have briefly the first point which relates to the essence of this Sacrament. Now examine further the efficacy and benefits on account of which really the Sacrament was instituted; which is also its most necessary part, that we may know what we should seek and obtain there. Now this is plain and clear from the words just mentioned: This is My body and blood, given and shed FOR YOU, for the remission of sins. Briefly that is as much as to say: For this reason we go to the Sacrament because there we receive such a treasure by and in which we obtain forgiveness of sins. Why so? Because the words stand here and give us this; for on this account He bids me eat and drink, that it may be my own and may benefit me, as a sure pledge and token, yea, the very same treasure that is appointed for me against my sins, death, and every calamity.

On this account it is indeed called a food of souls, which nourishes and strengthens the new man. For by Baptism we are first born anew; but (as we said before) there still remains, besides, the old vicious nature of flesh and blood in man, and there are so many hindrances and temptations of the devil and of the world that we often become weary and faint, and sometimes also stumble.

Darum ist es gegeben zur täglichen Weide und Fütterung, daß sich der Glaube erhole und stärke, daß er in solchem Kampf nicht zurückfalle, sondern immerdar je stärker und stärker werde. Denn das neue Leben soll also getan sein, daß es stets zunehme und fortfahre; es muß aber dagegen viel leiden. Denn so ein zorniger Feind ist der Teufel; wo er sieht, daß man sich wider ihn legt und den alten Menschen angreift, und er uns nicht mit Macht überpoltern kann, da schleicht und freicht er auf allen Seiten umher, versucht alle Künste und läßt nicht ab, bis er uns zuletzt müde macht, daß man entweder den Glauben läßt fallen oder Hände und Füße gehen und wird unlustig oder ungeduldig. Dazu ist nun der Trost gegeben, wenn das Herz solches fühlt, daß [es] ihm will zu schwer werden, daß es hier neue Kraft und Absaß hole.

aiunt) hasta fidem deseramus, aut omni desperata repugnandi fiducia taediosi aut impatientes 27) sumus. Adhuc iam datum est solatium, et haec praesentaria animi levatio, adornata, ut, cum cor senserit se nimia impugnatione premi, hic vires et refocillationem quaerat et auferat.

Hier verdröhen sich aber unsere klugen Geister mit ihrer großen Kunst und Klugheit, die schreien und poltern: Wie kann Brot und Wein die Sünde vergeben oder den Glauben stärken? so sie doch hören und wissen, daß wir solches nicht von Brot und Wein sagen, als an ihm selbst Brot Brot ist, sondern von solchem Brot und Wein, das Christus' Leib und Blut ist und die Worte bei sich hat. Dasselbige, sagen wir, ist je der Schatz und kein anderer, dadurch solche Vergebung erworben ist. Nun wird es uns ja nicht anders denn in den Worten: „Für euch gegeben und vergossen“ gebracht und zugeeignet; denn darin hast du beides, daß es Christus' Leib und Blut ist, und daß es dein ist als ein Schatz und Geschenk. Nun kann je Christus' Leib nicht ein unfruchtbar, vergeblich Ding sein, daß nichts schaffe noch nütze. Doch wie groß [auch immer] der Schatz für sich selbst ist, so muß er in das Wort gefaßt und uns gereicht werden; sonst würden wir's nicht können wissen noch suchen.

Darum ist's auch nichts geredet, daß sie sagen, Christus' Leib und Blut ist nicht im Abendmahl für uns gegeben noch vergossen, darum könnte man im Sacrament nicht Vergebung der Sünden haben. Denn obgleich das Wort am Kreuz gegeben und die Vergebung der Sünden erworben ist, so kann sie doch nicht anders denn durchs Wort zu uns kommen. Denn was müßten wir sonst davon, daß solches gegeben wäre oder uns geschenkt sein sollte, wenn man's nicht durch die Predigt oder mündlich Wort vorträge? Woher wissen sie es, oder wie können sie die Vergebung ergreifen und zu sich bringen, wo sie sich nicht halten und glauben an die Schrift und das Evangelium? Nun ist je das ganze Evangelium und Artikel des Glaubens: „Ich glaube eine heilige christliche Kirche, Vergebung der Sünden“ usw. durch das Wort in dies Sacrament gestiftet und uns vorgelegt. Warum sollten wir denn solchen Schatz aus dem Sacrament lassen reizen, so sie doch bekennen müssen, daß [es] eben die Worte 28) Atqui hoc loco iterum nasuti spiritus nostri mirifica eruditione et sapientia sua sese contorquent, tumultuantes et vociferantes: Qui vero, inquit, panis et vinum peccata possunt remittere aut fidem corroborare? cum tamen sciant et audiant, nos talia de vino et pane nunquam adhuc docuisse, velut [R. 557] panis per se panis est; verum de tali pane et vino, quae Christi corpus et sanguis sunt et verba secum coniuncta habent. Hic, inquam, panis thesaurus ille est, quem iactamus, hic certe est nec alius, per quem eiusmodi peccatorum condonationem Christus nobis meritus 29) est. Iam ille non aliter quam per verba: Pro vobis traditur et effunditur nobis offertur et donatur. Nam in his utrumque habes, et quod Christi corpus sit, et quod tuum sit tamquam thesaurus et donum concessum gratuito. 30) Quin etiam illud pro certo constat Christi corpus et sanguinem nequaquam rem otiosam et infrugiferam esse posse, quae nihil fructus aut utilitatis afferat. Verumtamen quamlibet magnus per se thesaurus existat, Verbo eum includi ac in eo nobis offerri necesse est; alioqui eundem neque scire neque quaerere possemus.

24) Ideo hoc sacramentum tamquam pro quotidiano alimento nobis datum est, ut huius esu fides iterum vires suas repararet atque recuperet, ne in tali certamine aut tergiversetur aut succumbat denique, sed subinde magis 25) atque magis fiat robustior. Etenim nova vita sic instituenda est, ut assidue crescat et porro pergendo incrementa accipiat. Verum 26) huic contra multae passiones exhaurientae sunt. Tanta enim aestuat iracundia inimicus noster diabolus, simul atque conspexerit nos adversus se niti et hominem veterem iniecto freno coerceri, ut ille nos vi nequeat opprimere, tum ab omni parte positis insidiis occulte irrepens nos adoritur, omnes suos nervos intendens, omnes suas artes experiens, nihil non fallaciarum conans, nec prius absistit, quam nos denique extrema lassitudine defessos fecerit, ut aut abiecta (quod

31) Quare nihil etiam illud est planeque frivolum commentum, quod garriunt, Christi corpus et sanguinem non esse in coena pro nobis traditum et effusum, ob id in sacramento peccatorum remissionem nos habere non posse. Nam tametsi opus ipsum in cruce peractum est, et peccatorum ibi parva condonatio, neque tamen alia ratione quam per Verbum ad nos pervenire aut perferri potest. Quid enim hac de re nos comperti haberemus, haec facta esse aut nobis condonata, nisi haec praedicatione aut vocali verbo nobis annuntiarentur? Unde vero illi hoc habent exploratum aut cognitum, aut quomodo remissionem peccatorum possunt apprehendere, nisi Scripturae et evangelio cre- 32) diderint et innixi fuerint? Iam totum evangelium et fidei articulus: Credo ecclesiam sanctam catholicam, remissionem peccatorum etc. virtute Verbi in hoc sacramentum conclusus est et nobis propositus. Quamobrem ergo talem thesaurum ex hoc sacramento vio-

Therefore it is given for a daily pasture and sustenance, that faith may refresh and strengthen itself so as not to fall back in such a battle, but become ever stronger and stronger. For the new life must be so regulated that it continually increase and progress; but it must suffer much opposition. For the devil is such a furious enemy that when he sees that we oppose him and attack the old man, and that he cannot topple us over by force, he prowls and moves about on all sides, tries all devices, and does not desist, until he finally wearies us, so that we either renounce our faith or yield hands and feet and become listless or impatient. Now to this end the consolation is here given when the heart feels that the burden is becoming too heavy, that it may here obtain new power and refreshment.

But here our wise spirits contort themselves with their great art and wisdom, crying out and bawling: How can bread and wine forgive sins or strengthen faith? Although they hear and know that we do not say this of bread and wine, because in itself bread is bread, but of such bread and wine as is the body and blood of Christ, and has the words attached to it. That, we say, is verily the treasure, and nothing else, through which such forgiveness is obtained. Now the only way in which it is conveyed and appropriated to us is in the words (Given and shed for you). For herein you have both truths, that it is the body and blood of Christ, and that it is yours as a treasure and gift. Now the body of Christ can never be an unfruitful, vain thing, that effects or profits nothing. Yet, however great is the treasure in itself, it must be comprehended in the Word and administered to us, else we should never be able to know or seek it.

Therefore also it is vain talk when they say that the body and blood of Christ are not given and shed for us in the Lord's Supper, hence we could not have forgiveness of sins in the Sacrament. For although the work is accomplished and the forgiveness of sins acquired on the cross, yet it cannot come to us in any other way than through the Word. For what would we otherwise know about it, that such a thing was accomplished or was to be given us if it were not presented by preaching or the oral Word? Whence do they know of it, or how can they apprehend and appropriate to themselves the forgiveness, except they lay hold of and believe the Scriptures and the Gospel? But now the entire Gospel and the article of the Creed: I believe a holy Christian Church, the forgiveness of sin, etc., are by the Word embodied in this Sacrament and presented to us. Why, then, sind, die wir allenthalben im Evangelio hören, und ja so wenig sagen können, diese Worte im Sakrament sind kein nütz, so wenig sie dürfen sprechen, daß das ganze Evangelium oder Wort Gottes außer dem Sakrament kein nütz sei?

Also haben wir nun das ganze Sakrament, beide was es an ihm selbst ist, und was es bringt und nützt. Nun muß man auch sehen, wer die Person sei, die solche Kraft und Nütz empfangen. Das ist aufs kürzeste, wie droben von der Taufe und sonst oft gesagt ist: wer da solches glaubt, der hat, wie die Worte lauten und was sie bringen. Denn sie sind nicht Stein noch Holz gesagt oder verkündigt, sondern denen, die sie hören, zu welchen er spricht: „Nehmet und esset“ usw. Und weil er Vergebung der Sünden anbietet [anbietet] und verheißt, kann es nicht anders denn durch den Glauben empfangen werden. Solchen Glauben fordert er selbst in dem Wort, als er spricht: „Für euch gegeben und für euch verlossen“; als sollte er sagen: Darum gebe ich's und heiße euch essen und trinken, daß ihr euch's sollt annehmen und genießen [daß ihr euch um dasselbe bekümmern und es genießen sollt]. Wer nun ihm [sich] solches läßt gesagt sein und glaubt, daß [es] wahr sei, der hat es; wer aber nicht glaubt, der hat nichts, als der's ihm [sich] läßt umsonst vortragen und nicht will solches heilsamen Gutes genießen. Der Schatz ist wohl aufgetan und jedermann vor die Thür, ja auf den Tisch gelegt; es gehört aber dazu, daß du dich auch seiner annimmest und gewislich dafürhaltest, wie dir die Worte geben.

Das ist nun die ganze christliche Bereitung, dieß Sakrament würdig zu empfangen. Denn weil solcher Schatz gar in den Worten vorgelegt wird, kann man's nicht anders ergreifen und zu sich nehmen denn mit dem Herzen. Denn mit der Faust wird man solch Geschenk und ewigen Schatz nicht fassen. Fasten und Beten usw. mag wohl eine äußerliche Bereitung und Rinderübung sein, daß sich der Leib züchtig [anständig] und ehrerbietig gegen den Leib und Blut Christi hält und gebärdet; aber daß darin und damit gegeben wird, kann nicht der Leib fassen noch zu sich bringen. Der Glaube aber tut's des Herzens, so da solchen Schatz erkennt und sein begehrt. Daß sei genug, soviel zum gemeinen Unterricht not ist von diesem Sakrament; denn was weiter davon zu sagen ist, gehört auf eine andere Zeit.

Am Ende [zulezt], weil wir nun den rechten Verstand und die Lehre von dem Sakrament haben, ist wohl not [sehr nötig] auch eine Ermahnung und Reizung, daß man nicht lasse solchen großen Schatz, so man täglich unter den Christen handelt und austeilt, umsonst vorübergehen, daß ist, daß, die Christen wollen sein, sich dazu schiden, das hochwürdige Sakrament oft zu empfangen. Denn wir sehen, daß man sich eben laß und faul dazu stellt, und ein großer Haufe ist derer, die das Evangelium hören, welche, weil des Papsts Tand ist ab[ge]kommen, daß wir befreit [befreit] sind von seinem Zwang und Gebot, gehen lenter atque indigne evelli ac diripi patemur, cum, velint nolint, fateri cogantur eadem haec esse verba, quae passim in evangelio repetita audimus, et tam non affirmare [R. 558] audeant, haec verba in sacramento nullius usus esse, quam affirmare non audent totum evangelium aut Verbum Dei extra sacramentum nullius pretii esse aut usus?

33] Iam ergo totum sacramentum habemus, cum quid in se sit, tum quid afferat et prosit utentibus. Nunc et videndum est, quanam sit persona ea, quae eam percipit vim et utilitatem. Haec est, ut breviter dicam, veluti supra de baptismo et alias non raro diximus: quicumque ea crediderit, quae verba loquuntur et afferunt. Neque enim saxis aut truncis dicta aut annuntiata sunt, sed audientibus, ad quos ita inquit: Accipite et manducate etc. 34] Et quia peccatorum condonationem offert benigneque pollicetur, non possunt haec aliter atque per fidem percipi. Eam fidem ipse iis verbis exigit, inquit: Pro vobis traditur, pro vobis effunditur. Quasi diceret: Ideo vobis corpus et sanguinem meum offero et edere ac bibere iubeo, ut vobis tanquam rem propriam vindicetis illisque ita fruamini. Iam 35] quicumque haec sibi dicta statuit, creditque ita se habere, ille certo consecutus est. Ceterum hisce verbis diffidens nihil habet, utpote qui nequiquam haec sibi offerri patitur, neque tam salutari bono frui cupit. Thesaurus equidem apertus est atque omnibus obviis et expositus, atque adeo ad fores usque adductus, imo potius mensae ad vescendum impositus; at requiritur porro, ut hunc tibi peculiariter vindices, huic manum extensam admoveas constanter credens, quemadmodum ipsa verba te docent.

36] Haec iam tota Christiana praeparatio est hoc sacramentum digne percipiendi. Cum enim hic thesaurus in verbis prorsus nobis proponatur, non aliter quam corde apprehendi potest. Manibus enim eiusmodi donum adeoque perennis thesaurus non est apprehensibilis. 37] Ieiunium et oratio etc. externae [R. 559] quidem praeparationis locum habere et puerile exercitium esse potest, ut corpus modeste et reverenter erga corpus et sanguinem Christi se gerat; verum quod in hoc et per hoc nobis donatur, corpus nullo modo potest assequi aut apprehendere, sed fides cordis hoc facit, eiusmodi thesaurus cognoscens et cupientis. Et 38] haec quidem, quantum ad communem huius sacramenti institutionem attinet, dicta sufficiant. Quae enim ea de re latius disserenda sunt, aliud ac peculiare tempus requirunt.

39] Ultimo, quoniam de huius sacramenti recto intellectu et vera doctrina certi sumus, admonitione etiam et cohortatione peropus est, ne talem ac tantum thesaurum, qui quotidie inter Christianos administratur et distribuitur, negligamus, hoc est, ut ii, qui Christo nomen dederunt, se praeparent ad huius venerabilis sacramenti communionem 40] saepe frequentandam. Videmus enim non obscure, quam pigros et segnes ad id nos praebeamus. Est paene magna pars eorum, qui audiunt evangelium, qui, posteaquam papae commenta sunt sublata, nosque a mandato et should we allow this treasure to be torn from the Sacrament when they must confess that these are the very words which we hear everywhere in the Gospel, and they cannot say that these words in the Sacrament are of no use, as little as they dare say that the entire Gospel or Word of God, apart from the Sacrament, is of no use?

Thus we have the entire Sacrament, both as to what it is in itself and as to what it brings and profits. Now we must also see who is the person that receives this power and benefit. That is answered briefly, as we said above of Baptism and often elsewhere: Whoever believes it has what the words declare and bring. For they are not spoken or proclaimed to stone and wood, but to those who hear them, to whom He says: Take and eat, etc. And because He offers and promises forgiveness of sin, it cannot be received otherwise than by faith. This faith He Himself demands in the Word when He says: Given and shed for you. As if He said: For this reason I give it, and bid you eat and drink, that you may claim it as yours and enjoy it. Whoever now accepts these words, and believes that what they declare is true, has it. But whoever does not believe it has nothing, as he allows it to be offered to him in vain, and refuses to enjoy such a saving good. The treasure, indeed, is opened and placed at every one's door, yea, upon his table, but it is necessary that you also claim it, and confidently view it as the words suggest to you.

This, now, is the entire Christian preparation for receiving this Sacrament worthily. For since this treasure is entirely presented in the words, it cannot be apprehended and appropriated in any other way than with the heart. For such a gift and eternal treasure cannot be seized with the fist. Fasting and prayer, etc., may indeed be an external preparation and discipline for children, that the body may keep and bear itself modestly and reverently towards the body and blood of Christ; yet what is given in and with it the body cannot seize and appropriate. But this is done by the faith of the heart, which discerns this treasure and desires it. This may suffice for what is necessary as a general instruction respecting this Sacrament; for what is further to be said of it belongs to another time.

In conclusion, since we have now the true understanding and doctrine of the Sacrament, there is indeed need of some admonition and exhortation, that men may not let so great a treasure which is daily administered and distributed among Christians pass by unheeded, that is, that those who would be Christians make ready to receive this venerable Sacrament often. For we see that men seem weary and lazy with respect to it; and there is a great multitude of such as hear the Gospel, and, because the nonsense of the Pope has been abolished, and we are freed sie wohl dahin ein Jahr zwei oder drei und länger ohne Sacrament, als seien sie so starke Christen, die sein nicht [be]dürfen, und lassen sich etliche hindern und davonreden, daß wir gelehrt haben, es solle niemand dazu gehen, ohne die Hunger und Durst fühlen, so sie treibt. Etliche wenden vor, es sei frei und nicht vonnöten, und sei genug, daß sie sonst glauben, und kommen also daß mehrere Teil dahin, daß sie gar roh werden und zuletzt beide das Sacrament und Gottes Wort berachten.

Nun ist's wahr, was wir gesagt haben, man solle beileibe niemand treiben noch zwingen, auf daß man nicht wieder eine neue Seelenmorderei anrichte; aber daß soll man dennoch wissen, daß solche Leute für keine Christen zu halten sind, die sich so lange Zeit des Sacraments äußern [enthalten] und entziehen. Denn Christus hat es nicht darum eingesetzt, daß man's für ein Schauspiel handle [daß man es als ein Schauspiel aufführe], sondern seinen Christen geboten, daß sie es essen und trinken und sein darüber bedenken.

Und zwar welche rechte Christen sind und das Sacrament teuer und wert halten, sollen sich wohl selbst treiben und hindringen. Doch daß die Einfältigen und Schwachen, die da auch gerne Christen wären, desto mehr gereizt werden, die Ursache und Not zu bedenken, so sie treiben sollen, wollen wir ein wenig davon reden. Denn wie es in andern Sachen, so den Glauben, Liebe und Geduld betrifft, ist nicht genug allein lehren und unterrichten, sondern auch täglich ermahnen, also ist es auch hier not, mit Erwehnen anzuhalten, daß man nicht laß noch verdroffen werde, weil wir wissen und fühlen, wie der Teufel sich immer wider solches und alles christliche Wesen sperrt und, soviel er kann, davonhetzt und -reibt.

Und zum ersten haben wir den hellen Text in den Worten Christi: „Das tut zu meinem Gedächtnis.“ Das sind Worte, die uns heißen und befehlen, dadurch denen, so Christen wollen sein, aufgelegt ist, daß Sacrament zu genießen. Darum, wer Christus' Jünger will sein, mit denen er hier redet, der denke und halte sich auch dazu, nicht aus Zwang als von Menschen gedrungen, sondern dem Herrn Christo zu Gehorsam und Gefallen. Sprichst du aber: Steht doch dabei: „sooft ihr's tut“; da zwingt er je niemand, sondern läßt's in freier Willkür. Antwort: Ist wahr; es steht aber nicht [da], daß man's nimmermehr tun solle; ja, weil er eben die Worte spricht: „so oft, als ihr's tut“, ist dennoch mit eingebunden [eingeschärft], daß man's oft tun soll, und ist darum hinzugesetzt, daß er will das Sacrament frei haben, ungebunden an sonderliche Zeit, wie der Juden Osterlamm, welches sie alle Jahre nur einmal und eben auf den vierzehnten Tag des ersten vollen Monats des Abends mußtessen und seinen Tag überschreiten. Als er damit sagen wollte: Ich setze euch ein Osterfest oder Abendmahl, das ihr nicht eben diesen Abend des Jahres einmal, sondern oft sollt genießen, wann und wo coactione eius liberati sumus, duos, tres plures annos sine hoc sacramento exigunt, quasi tam firmi sint Christiani, qui eo plane non 41) opus habeant. Et impediti ac absterreri inde nonnulli hoc nomine sese patiuntur, quod docuimus non accedere debere ad hoc sacramentum, nisi quos fames ac sitis eius urgeat atque compellat. Sunt rursus, qui causantur liberum esse neque necessarium, ac satis superque esse, ut credant se manducasse; quorum maior pars eo denique pervenit, ut omnibus devotionis affectibus exutis plane brutescere incipiant, ac demum cum sacramentum tum Verbum Dei extreme contemnant.

42) Equidem quod initio docuimus, verum esse non negamus, neminem scilicet ad [R. 560] hanc coenam ullo modo adigendum aut impellendum esse, ne de integro novam animarum carnificinam constituamus. Hoc tamen interim sciendum est tales pro Christianis non esse reputandos, qui tanto tempore a sacramento semet alienos faciunt et subtrahunt. Illud enim Christus non in hoc instituit, ut circumferatur pro spectaculo, sed suis Christianis praecepit, ut edant ac bibant, suique per hoc sint memores.

43) Et perfectio qui veri Christiani sunt ac γνήσιοι Christi discipuli, quibus sacramentum est in aliqua existimatione ac pretio, illi semet sua sponte ultro impellent. Verum enim vero ut simplices etiam et infirmi, quibus aliqua voluntas esse est Christianis, hoc vehementius incitentur ad causam et necessitatem reputandam, qua ad sacramentum impelli debeant, ea de re pauca quaedam verba faciemus. Nam 44) quemadmodum in aliis negotiis ad fidem, caritatem, animi tolerantiam pertinentibus non satis est tantum docere et instituere, verum etiam quotidie ac sedulo monere populum, ita quoque hic requiritur necessitas, ut praedicando seduli simus, ne segnes aut tædiosi fiamus, non ignorantes, quanto conatu et studio diabolus huic rei ac omni Christiano exercitio reluctetur, adeo ut pro virili sua humanos animos ab eo fuget et absterreat.

45) Ac primum quidem clarum textum in ipsis Christi verbis habemus: Hoc facite in mei commemorationem. Haec sunt verba nobis praecipientia et iubentia, quibus iis, qui Christiani censi volunt, mandatur et praecipitur, ut utantur sacramento. Quare qui Christi discipulus esse cupit, quibuscum hic verba facit, huic curae sit, ut haec verba sibi cordi sint, non quidem ex coactione, velut impulsio ab hominibus, verum ut Christo Domino 46) obsequatur et obediat. Dixeris autem fortasse: Tamen haec quoque particula, quotiescumque feceritis, adiecta est, haec [R. 561] equidem cogit neminem, sed relinquit sacramenti usum in cuiusque arbitratu liberum? 47) Respondeo: Audio; sed non dixit, ut perpetuo nunquam faciamus, quin potius haec ipsa verba dicens, quotiescumque feceritis, una iniunxit, ut saepe sacramenti communionem iteremus. Estque propterea adiectum, quod sacramentum velit habere liberum, non certo tempori alligatum, velut erat Iudeorum pascha, quod singulis annis semel tantum ac nonnisi decimo quarto die primi mensis vespri manducare nec ullum diem transilire from his laws and coercion, go one, two, three years, or even longer without the Sacrament, as though they were such strong Christians that they have no need of it; and some allow themselves to be prevented and deterred by the pretense that we have taught that no one should approach it except those who feel hunger and thirst, which urge them to it. Some pretend that it is a matter of liberty and not necessary, and that it is sufficient to believe without it; and thus for the most part they go so far that they become quite brutish, and finally despise both the Sacrament and the Word of God.

Now, it is true, as we have said, that no one should by any means be coerced or compelled, lest we institute a new murdering of souls. Nevertheless, it must be known that such people as deprive themselves of, and withdraw from, the Sacrament so long a time are not to be considered Christians. For Christ has not instituted it to be treated as a show, but has commanded His Christians to eat and drink it, and thereby remember Him.

And, indeed, those who are true Christians and esteem the Sacrament precious and holy will urge and impel themselves unto it. Yet that the simple-minded and the weak who also would like to be Christians be the more incited to consider the cause and need which ought to impel them, we will treat somewhat of this point. For as in other matters pertaining to faith, love, and patience, it is not enough to teach and instruct only, but there is need also of daily exhortation, so here also there is need of continuing to preach that men may not become weary and disgusted, since we know and feel how the devil always opposes this and every Christian exercise, and drives and deters therefrom as much as he can.

And we have, in the first place, the clear text in the very words of Christ: Do this in remembrance of Me. These are bidding and commanding words by which all who would be Christians are enjoined to partake of this Sacrament. Therefore, whoever would be a disciple of Christ, with whom He here speaks, must also consider and observe this, not from compulsion, as being forced by men, but in obedience to the Lord Jesus Christ, and to please Him. However, if you say: But the words are added, As oft as ye do it; there He compels no one, but leaves it to our free choice, answer: That is true, yet it is not written that we should never do so. Yea, just because He speaks the words, As oft as ye do it, it is nevertheless implied that we should do it often; and it is added for the reason that He wishes to have the Sacrament free, not limited to special times, like the Passover of the Jews, which they were obliged to eat only once a year, and that just upon the fourteenth day of the first full moon in the ihr wollt, nach eines jeglichen Gelegenheit und Notdurft, an keinen Ort oder bestimmte Zeit angebunden; wiewohl der Papst hernach solches um[ge]lehrt und wieder ein Zudenfest daraus gemacht hat.

48] sarium, nulli loco aut tempori alligatum. hanc quoque, ut cetera omnia a Christo constituta perverterit, iterumque Iudaicam festivitatem ex ea reddiderit.

Also siehst du, daß nicht also Freiheit gelassen ist, als möge man's verachten. Denn das heiße ich verachten, wenn man so lange Zeit hingehet und sonst kein Hindernis hat und doch sein nimmer begehrt. Willst du solche Freiheit haben, so habe ebenfomehr [ebenso]gut] Freiheit, daß du kein Christ seiest und nicht glauben noch beten dürftest; denn das ist ebenfomehr Christus' Gebot als jenes. Willst du aber ein Christ sein, so mußt du je zuweilen diesem Gebot genugthun und gehorchen; denn solch Gebot sollte dich je bewegen, in dich selbst zu schlagen und zu denken: Siehe, was bin ich für ein Christ? Wäre ich's, so würde ich mich je ein wenig sehnen nach dem, daß mein Herr befohlen hat zu tun.

Und zwar, weil wir uns so fremd dazu stellen, spürt man wohl, was wir für Christen in dem Papsttum gewesen sind, als die aus lauterem Zwang und Furcht menschlichen Gebots hind[er]ge[ga]ngen, ohne Lust und Liebe, und Christus' Gebot nie angesehen. Wir aber zwingen noch bringen niemand, darf's uns auch niemand zu Dienst und Gefallen thun. Das soll dich aber reizen und selbst zwingen, daß er's haben will und ihm gefällt. Menschen soll man sich weder zum Glauben noch irgendetwas guten Werth nötigen lassen. Wir tun nicht mehr, denn daß wir sagen und vermahnen, was du tun sollst, nicht um unfert-, sondern um beinetwillen. Er lodt und reizt dich; willst du solches verachten, so antworte selbst dafür [so verantworte es selbst].

Das soll nun das erste sein, sonderlich für die Kalten und Nachlässigen, daß sie sich selbst bedenken [prüfen] und erwecken. Denn das ist gewißlich wahr, als ich wohl bei mir selbst erfahren habe, und ein jeglicher bei sich finden wird, wenn man sich also davon zeucht [zieht], daß man von Tag zu Tage je mehr roh und fast wird und gar in [den] Wind schlägt. Sonst muß man sich je mit dem Herzen und Gewissen befragen und stellen als ein Mensch, daß [der] gerne wollte mit Gott recht stehen. Je mehr nun solches geschieht, je mehr das Herz erwärmt und entzündet wird, daß [es] nicht gar erlase.

Spricht du aber: Wie denn, wenn ich fühle, daß ich nicht geschickt bin? Antwort: Das ist meine Unsechtung auch, sonderlich aus dem alten Wesen her unter dem Papst, da man sich so zer-cogebantur. Quasi velit dicere: Ego vobis festivitatem paschalem seu coenam adorno et constituo, quam non tantum ad huius diei vesperam quotannis celebrabitis, sed ea saepe fruimini, quando et quotiescunque libitum fuerit, prout cuique integrum erit et necesse. Quamquam Romanae sedis idolum pontificium

49] Ex his iam perspicuum est omnibus non ita relictum esse liberum, quasi contemni possit. Ceterum hoc ego voco sacramentum contemnere, quando nullo impedimento praepediti tanto tempore, sacramentum quasi fastidientes, non accedimus neque desideramus. Quodsi hanc libertatem habere contendis, cur non potius illam quoque tibi arrogas, ut tibi prorsus non liceat esse Christiano, neque quidquam orare aut credere? Hoc enim perinde Christi praeceptum est atque illud. Sin Christianus perhiberi cupis, ut huic praecepto nonnunquam satisfacias atque obtem- 50] peres necesse est. Hoc enim mandatum permovere utique te debebat, ut in te descenderes et cogitares: Ecce, cuiusmodi ego Christianus sum? Quod si essem, haud dubie vel modico harum rerum perficiendarum caperer desiderio, quas Dominus meus mihi faciendas praecepit.

51] Et profecto quandoquidem ad hanc coenam tam gravate et fastidiose affecti [R. 562] sumus, ita nauseantes illam, satis apparet, quales in papatu Christiani fuerimus, ut qui tantum coactu et metu humani praecepti accesserimus, sine omni animi voluptate et amore, praecipientis Christi nullo respectu 52] habito. Sed enim nos neminem cogimus aut violenter impellimus, nec quisquam in nostri gratiam huius coenae conviva esse dignetur. Hoc vero impellere et ultro cogere te debebat, quod Christus id requirit et placet id illi. Hominibus utique non concedendum est, ut ab illis aut ad fidem aut ad ullum opus adigamur. Nos non plus facimus, quam ut doceamus et moneamus, quid facto opus sit, non in nostri, sed in tui gratiam. Ipse pellicit te ac omnibus modis ad se provocat; hunc si arroganter contempseris, vide, ut ipse pro te respondeas.

53] Hoc primo quidem loco dictum est frigidis potissimum et negligentibus Christianis, ut vel tandem serio resipiscant, seque accendant et expergefiant. Illud enim vero verius est, id quod apud me ipse expertus sum, et quisque apud se ita esse invenit, ut tam diuturna sui a sacramento alienatione in dies singulos etiam atque etiam frigidiores et barbariores evadamus, ac denique prorsus id fasti- 54] diamus. Alioqui descendendum est cum animo in colloquium, atque ita gerendum, quemadmodum par est homini Dei favorem et gratiam ex animo cupienti. Iam quo frequentius hoc factum fuerit, hoc impensius cor calecit et incenditur, ne prorsus omnibus amoris divini flammis extinctis congelescat.

55] Dixeris fortasse: Quid autem, si sensero me non paratum esse? Respondeo: Et hoc me quoque impugnatur adhuc et papatu usque, in quo tanta mentis anxietate quisque se evening, and which they must not vary a day. As if He would say by these words: I institute a Passover or Supper for you which you shall enjoy not only once a year, just upon this evening, but often, when and where you will, according to every one's opportunity and necessity, bound to no place or appointed time; although the Pope afterwards perverted it, and again made a Jewish feast of it.

Thus, you perceive, it is not left free in the sense that we may despise it. For that I call despising it if one allow so long a time to elapse and with nothing to hinder him yet never feels a desire for it. If you wish such liberty, you may just as well have the liberty to be no Christian, and neither have to believe nor pray; for the one is just as much the command of Christ as the other. But if you wish to be a Christian, you must from time to time render satisfaction and obedience to this commandment. For this commandment ought ever to move you to examine yourself and to think: See, what sort of a Christian I am! If I were one, I would certainly have some little longing for that which my Lord has commanded [me] to do.

And, indeed, since we act such strangers to it, it is easily seen what sort of Christians we were under the Papacy, namely, that we went from mere compulsion and fear of human commandments, without inclination and love, and never regarded the commandment of Christ. But we neither force nor compel any one; nor need any one do it to serve or please us. But this should induce and constrain you by itself, that He desires it and that it is pleasing to Him. You must not suffer men to coerce you unto faith or any good work. We are doing no more than to say and exhort you as to what you ought to do, not for our sake, but for your own sake. He invites and allures you; if you despise it, you must answer for it yourself.

Now, this is to be the first point, especially for those who are cold and indifferent, that they may reflect upon and rouse themselves. For this is certainly true, as I have found in my own experience, and as every one will find in his own case, that if a person thus withdraw from this Sacrament, he will daily become more and more callous and cold, and will at last disregard it altogether. To avoid this, we must, indeed, examine heart and conscience, and act like a person who desires to be right with God. Now, the more this is done, the more will the heart be warmed and enkindled, that it may not become entirely cold.

But if you say: How if I feel that I am not prepared? Answer: That is also my scruple, especially from the old way under the Pope, in which a person tortured himself to martert hat, daß man ganz rein wäre und Gott kein Tadeln [Tädelein, Mafel, Feh!] an uns fände, davon wir so schüchtern davor [ge]worden sind, daß flugs sich jedermann entfegt und gesagt hat: O weh, du bist nicht würdig! Denn da heßt Natur und Vernunft an zu rechnen unsere Unwürdigkeit gegen das große, teure Gut; da findet sich's denn als eine finstere Laterne gegen die lichte Sonne oder Mist gegen Edelsteine; und weil sie solches sieht, will sie nicht hinan und harret, bis sie geschickt werde, so lange, daß eine Woche die andere und ein halb Jahr das andere bringt. Aber wenn du das willst ansehen, wie fromm und rein du seiest, und danach arbeiten, daß dich nichts beiße [im Gewissen], so mußt du nimmermehr hinzufommen.

Derhalben soll man hier die Leute unterscheiden. Denn was freche und wilde sind, denen soll man sagen, daß sie davonbleiben; denn sie sind nicht geschickt, Vergebung der Sünden zu empfangen, als die sie nicht begehren und ungerne wollten fromm sein. Die andern aber, so nicht solche rohe und lose Leute sind und gerne fromm wären, sollen sich nicht davonsondern, ob sie gleich sonst schwach und gebrechlich sind, wie auch St. Hilarius gesagt hat: „Wenn eine Sünde nicht also getan ist, daß man jemand billig aus der Gemeinde stoßen und für einen Unchristen halten kann, soll man nicht vom Sakrament bleiben, auf daß man sich nicht des Lebens beraube.“ Denn so weit wird niemand kommen, daß er nicht viel täglicher Gebrechen im Fleisch und Blut behalte.

Darum sollen solche Leute lernen, daß die höchste Kunst ist, daß man wisse, daß unser Sakrament steht nicht auf unserer Würdigkeit; denn wir lassen uns nicht taufen, als die würdig und heilig sind, kommen auch nicht zur Beichte, als seien wir rein und ohne Sünde, sondern das Widerspiel, als arme elende Menschen, und eben darum, daß wir unwürdig sind; es wäre denn ein solcher, der keine Gnade und Absolution begehrte, noch sich dächte zu bessern.

Wer aber gerne wollte Gnade und Trost haben, soll sich selbst treiben und [durch] niemand [sich] davonreden lassen und also sprechen: Ich wollte wohl gerne würdig sein, aber ich komme auf keine Würdigkeit, sondern auf dein Wort, daß du es befohlen hast, als der gerne dein Jünger wäre; meine Würdigkeit bleibe, wo sie kann. Es ist aber schwer; denn das liegt uns immer im Wege und hindert, daß wir mehr auf uns selbst denn auf Christus' Wort und Mund sehen. Denn die Natur wollte gern so handeln, daß sie gewiß auf sich selbst möchte fußen und sehen; wo nicht, so will sie nicht hinan. Das sei genug vom ersten Stück.

excarnificavit, ut per omnia puri essemus, ne Deus quidquam naevi aut labis in nobis inveniret. Unde tanta trepidatione sumus [R. 563] exanimati, ut illico quisque attonito animo in haec verba proruperit: Heu te miserum! hac [56] coena omnibus modis indignus es. Nam natura et humana ratio hic suae dignitatis rationem inire incipit erga ingentis huius et pretiosi boni praestantiam, ac tunc perinde nitet, atque obscura latera lucido soli collata aut instar fimi candidis gemmis aut unionibus comparati. Has suae vitae sordes intuens recusat accedere et tantisper differt, donec bene praeparata fuerit, usque dum dies diei, mensis mensi, annus anno successerit. [57] Ceterum hoc si intueri voles, quam videlicet tu sis probus et purus, atque in hoc conari, ut nihil conscientiam tuam mordeat, futurum est, ut vix unquam accedas.

[58] Quare hic homines habita ratione discernendi sunt. Nam procaci feritate et improbitate insolescentibus dicendum est, ut a sacramento abstineant; neque enim ad percipiendam peccatorum remissionem sunt apposit, utpote qui eam non desiderant, nec libenter [59] probi esse student. Reliqui vero, qui non ita ferini sunt et belluini, quique probitatis amantes sunt, nullo modo semet ab hac coena debent se iungere, tametsi aliqui fragiles sint et imbecilles, quemadmodum et dictum est ab Hilario: Si quod peccatum non ita perpetratum est, cuius gratia aliquis iure ex ecclesia possit exigi ac pro gentili existimari, huic nequaquam a sacramento temperandum est, [60] ne quis se ipse vita privet. Nemo enim eo probitatis unquam se venturum speret, ut non infinitos defectus in carne et sanguine suo retineat.

[61] Quapropter eiusmodi hominibus discendum est, summam esse scientiam nosse, nostrum sacramentum non dignitatis nostrae gratia institutum esse. Non enim ut dignos et sanctos nos baptizari permittimus, neque hoc nomine peccata nostra confitemur, quasi puri et a delictis alieni essemus, sed plane contraria quadam ratione, ut miseri [R. 564] ac aerumnosi peccatores, et prorsus propterea, quia indigni sumus, nisi fortasse quispiam talis esset, qui nullam gratiam aut absolutionem desideraret, neque cogitaret unquam vita in melius mutata respicere.

[62] Sed enim qui gratiam ac consolationem habendi et impetrandi cupidus est, ille semet instiget, nulloque modo absterri se patiar, itaque dicat: Perlibenter quidem hac coena dignus esse velim, nulla adductus dignitate venio, verum tuo verbo fretus adsum, propterea quod tu mihi praecepisti, egoque non invitatus in discipulorum tuorum numerum referri cupio; quantulacumque tandem mea sit [63] dignitas, nihil moror. Verum hoc arduum et grave est factu; hoc enim nobis nunquam non impedimento est et obstat, quod longe attentiores ad nos ipsos quam ad os et verba Christi sumus. Ita enim natura humana agere cuperet, ut securitate quadam et certitudine se ipsa potius frui et niti posset; quare frustrata abhorret accedere. Verum haec de prima parte satis superque diximus.

be so perfectly pure that God could not find the least blemish in us. On this account we became so timid that every one was instantly thrown into consternation and said to himself: Alas! you are unworthy! For then nature and reason begin to reckon our unworthiness in comparison with the great and precious good; and then it appears like a dark lantern in contrast with the bright sun, or as filth in comparison with precious stones. Because nature and reason see this, they refuse to approach and tarry until they are prepared, so long that one week trails another, and one half year the other. But if you are to regard how good and pure you are, and labor to have no compunctions, you must never approach.

We must, therefore, make a distinction here among men. For those who are wanton and dissolute must be told to stay away; for they are not prepared to receive forgiveness of sin, since they do not desire it and do not wish to be godly. But the others, who are not such callous and wicked people, and desire to be godly, must not absent themselves, even though otherwise they be feeble and full of infirmities, as St. Hilary also has said: If any one have not committed sin for which he can rightly be put out of the congregation and esteemed as no Christian, he ought not stay away from the Sacrament, lest he may deprive himself of life. For no one will make such progress that he will not retain many daily infirmities in flesh and blood.

Therefore such people must learn that it is the highest art to know that our Sacrament does not depend upon our worthiness. For we are not baptized because we are worthy and holy, nor do we go to confession because we are pure and without sin, but the contrary, because we are poor miserable men, and just because we are unworthy; unless it be some one who desires no grace and absolution nor intends to reform.

But whoever would gladly obtain grace and consolation should impel himself, and allow no one to frighten him away, but say: I, indeed, would like to be worthy; but I come, not upon any worthiness, but upon Thy Word, because Thou hast commanded it, as one who would gladly be Thy disciple, no matter what becomes of my worthiness. But this is difficult; for we always have this obstacle and hindrance to encounter, that we look more upon ourselves than upon the Word and lips of Christ. For nature desires so to act that it can stand and rest firmly on itself, otherwise it refuses to make the approach. Let this suffice concerning the first point.

Zum andern ist über das Gebot auch eine Verheißung, wie auch oben gehört, die uns aufs allerstärkste reizen und treiben soll. Denn da stehen die freundlichen, lieblichen Worte: „Das ist mein Leib, für euch gegeben. Das ist mein Blut, für euch vergossen zur Vergebung der Sünden.“ Diese Worte, habe ich gesagt, sind keinem Stod noch Stein gepredigt, sondern mir und dir; sonst möchte er ebensomehr [ebensogut] stillschweigen und kein Sakrament einsehen. Drum denke und bringe dich auch in das „euch“, daß er nicht umsonst mit dir rede!

Denn da heut [bietet] er uns an alle den Schatz, so er uns vom Himmel [ge]bracht hat, dazu er uns auch sonst lodd aufs allerfreundlichste, als da er spricht Matth. am 11.: „Kommt her zu mir alle, die ihr mühselig und beladen seid; ich will euch erquiden!“ Nun ist's je Sünde und Schande, daß er uns so herzlich und treulich fordert und vermahnt zu unserm höchsten und besten Gut, und wir uns so fremd dazu stellen und so lange hingehen, bis wir gar erkalten und verhärten, daß wir keine Lust noch Liebe dazu haben. Man muß je das Sakrament nicht ansehen als ein schädlich Ding, daß man davor laufen solle, sondern als eitel heilsame, tröstliche Arznei, die dir helfe und das Leben gebe beide an Seele und Leib; denn wo die Seele genesen ist, da ist dem Leibe auch geholfen. Wie stellen wir uns denn dazu, als sei es ein Gift, daran man den Tod freffe?

tuis morbis medeatur, vitamque tibi det et animae et corporis. Ubi enim anima recuperata salute convaluit, ibi corporis quoque valetudo salva est. Cur ergo nos illud ita abominantes cavemus, quasi cicuta esset, quae devorata mortem nobis inferret praesentem?

Das ist wohl wahr, daß, die es verachten und unchristlich leben, nehmen's ihnen [sich] zu Schaden und Verdamnis; denn solchen soll nichts gut noch heilsam sein, eben als einem Kranken, der aus Muthwillen ist und trinkt, daß ihm vom Arzt verboten ist. Aber denen [die], so ihre Schwachheit fühlen und ihrer gerne los wären und Hilfe begehren, sollen's nicht anders ansehen und [ge-]brauchen denn als ein köstlich Thierat [Thierat, ein altes Heilmittel] wider das Gift, so sie bei sich haben. Denn hier sollst du im Sakrament empfangen aus Christus' Mund Vergebung der Sünden, welche bei sich hat und mit sich bringt Gottes Gnade und Geist mit all seinen Gaben, Schutz, Schirm und Gewalt wider Tod und Teufel und alles Unglück.

Also hast du von Gottes wegen beide des Herrn Christi Gebot und Verheißung; zudem soll dich beinethalben treiben deine eigene Noth, so dir auf dem Halße liegt, um welcher willen solch Gebieten, Loden und Verheissen geschieht. Denn er spricht selbst: „Die Starcken [bedürfen des Arztes nicht, sondern die Kranken“, daß ist, die mühselig und beschwert sind mit Sünde, Furcht des Todes, Ansehung des Fleisches und Teufels. Bist du nun beladen und fühlst deine Schwachheit, so gehe fröhlich hin und laß dich erquiden, trösten und stärken. Denn willst du harren, bis du solches los werdest, daß du rein und würdig zum Sakrament kommest, 64] Secundo benigna quoque huic praecepto adiecta est promissio, ut supra etiam memoratum est, quae nos omnium vehementissime instigare debebat atque impellere. Haec enim illa sunt verba perquam amica et amabilia, humanitatis ac benevolentiae plenissima: Hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis traditur. Hic est sanguis meus, qui pro vobis effunditur 65] in remissionem peccatorum. Haec, inquam, verba dixi neque ullis cautibus neque quercubus esse praedicata, verum mihi et tibi; alioqui eadem opera aequae tacere potuisset neque ullum sacramentum instituere. Quare fac etiam atque etiam, ut et te in haec verba (PRO VOBIS) includas, ne nequiquam tecum loquatur.

66] Hic enim omnes thesauri sui nobis offert divitias, quascunque coelitus secum humano generi detulit, ad quas etiam alias amicissime et amantissime nos provocat, veluti [R. 565 Matth. 11, 28 inquit: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis et onerati estis; ego reficiam 67] vos. Iam quidem extremum flagitium et facinus est, quod, cum ille tam amanter atque fideliter nos vocet et moneat, ad nostrum summum et maximum bonum confluendos, nos tam alienos erga vocantem geramus ac tantum temporis a sacramenti participatione remoti exigamus, donec prorsus animo indurato refrixerimus, ut nulla usquam desiderii aut amoris scintilla in nobis superstes remaneat. 68] Equidem sacramentum non perinde intuendum est ut res noxia, a qua vitanda ambobus (quod aiunt) pedibus fugiendum sit, verum ut salutifera et utilis medicina, quae

69] Illud equidem infitias non iverim, eos ipsos, qui contemunt aut beluino more vivunt, tantum in perniciem et damnationem sibi sumere. Talibus enim nihil debet esse bono aut saluti, perinde atque aegrotis accidere solet, pro libidine sua edenti atque bibenti, quae ipsi a medico interdicta sunt. 70] Il vero, qui suae carnis infirmitatem sentiunt, eaque libenter exonerati essent, quaerentes auxilium, non aliter intueri debent et uti atque preciosissima tyriaca aut antidoto praesentissimo adversus omnia venena, quibus infecti sunt. Hic enim in sacramento ex ore Christi sumes peccatorum condonationem, secum habentem unaque apportantem Dei gratiam et spiritum una cum omnibus suis bonis, tutela, protectione et potestate contra mortem, diabolum atque omnia mala.

71] Ita quidem a Deo et Christi praeceptum eiusque promissionem habes. Adhaec [R. 566 tui gratia tua ipsius necessitas, quae cervici tuae incumbit et cuius gratia eiusmodi praecepta, illicetiam et promissiones datae sunt, impellere te debebat. Ipse enim dicit [Matth. 9, 12]: Non est opus medico valentibus, sed male habentibus, hoc est, laborantibus et qui peccatis, mortis formidine, carnis atque diaboli tentatione onerati sunt. Iam si peccatorum fasce gravatus es tuamque sentis infirmitatem, tum alacri accedas animo, teque Christo reficiendum, levandum et corroboran-

In the second place, there is besides this command also a promise, as we heard above, which ought most strongly to incite and encourage us. For here stand the kind and precious words: This is My body, given for you. This is My blood, shed for you, for the remission of sins. These words, I have said, are not preached to wood and stone, but to me and you; else He might just as well be silent and not institute a Sacrament. Therefore consider, and put yourself into this you, that He may not speak to you in vain.

For here He offers to us the entire treasure which He has brought for us from heaven, and to which He invites us also in other places with the greatest kindness, as when He says in St. Matthew 11, 28: Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Now it is surely a sin and a shame that He so cordially and faithfully summons and exhorts us to our highest and greatest good, and we act so distantly with regard to it, and permit so long a time to pass [without partaking of the Sacrament] that we grow quite cold and hardened, so that we have no inclination or love for it. We must never regard the Sacrament as something injurious from which we had better flee, but as a pure, wholesome, comforting remedy imparting salvation and comfort, which will cure you and give you life both in soul and body. For where the soul has recovered, the body also is relieved. Why, then, is it that we act as if it were a poison, the eating of which would bring death?

To be sure, it is true that those who despise it and live in an unchristian manner receive it to their hurt and damnation; for nothing shall be good or wholesome to them, just as with a sick person who from caprice eats and drinks what is forbidden him by the physician. But those who are sensible of their weakness, desire to be rid of it and long for help, should regard and use it only as a precious antidote against the poison which they have in them. For here in the Sacrament you are to receive from the lips of Christ forgiveness of sin, which contains and brings with it the grace of God and the Spirit with all His gifts, protection, shelter, and power against death and the devil and all misfortune.

Thus you have, on the part of God, both the command and the promise of the Lord Jesus Christ. Besides this, on your part, your own distress which is about your neck, and because of which this command, invitation, and promise are given, ought to impel you. For He Himself says: They that be whole need not a physician, but they that be sick; that is, those who are weary and heavy-laden with their sins, with the fear of death, temptations of the flesh and of the devil. If, therefore, you are heavy-laden and feel your weakness, then go joyfully to this Sacrament and obtain refreshment, consolation, and strength.

so mußt du ewig davonbleiben. Denn da fällt er das Urtheil und spricht: Bist du rein und fromm, so [be]darfst du mein nichts und ich dein wieder nichts. Darum heißen die allein unwürdig, die ihr' Gebrechen nicht fühlen noch wollen Sünd' der sein.

Spricht du aber: Wie soll ich ihm denn tun, wenn ich solche Not nicht fühlen kann, noch Hunger und Durst zum Sacrament empfinden? Antwort: Denselfigen, die so gefinnt sind, daß sie sich nicht fühlen, weiß ich keinen besseren Rat, denn daß sie doch in ihren Wusen greifen, ob sie auch Fleisch und Blut haben. Wo du denn solches findest, so gehe doch dir zugut in St. Paulus' Epistel an die Galater und höre, was dein Fleisch für ein Fruchtlein sei. „Offenbar sind aber“ (spricht er) „die Werke des Fleisches, als da sind: Ehebruch, Hurerei, Unreinigkeit, Geilheit, Abgötterei, Zauberei, Feindschaft, Haß, Eifer, Zorn, Jant, Zwietracht, Seltzen, Haß, Mord, Saufen, Fressen und dergleichen.“

Derhalben, kannst du es nicht fühlen, so glaube doch der Schrift, die wird dir nicht lügen, als die dein Fleisch besser kennt denn du selbst. Ja, weiter schließt [schließt] St. Paulus zu den Römern [am] 7.: „Denn ich weiß, daß in mir, das ist, in meinem Fleische, wohnet nichts Gutes.“ Darf St. Paulus solches von seinem Fleische reden, so wollen wir auch nicht besser noch heiliger sein. Daß wir's aber nicht fühlen, ist so viel desto ärger; denn es ist ein Zeichen, daß [es] ein außsätzig Fleisch ist, das da nichts empfindet und doch wüthet und um sich frißt. Doch, wie gesagt, bist du so gar erkorben, so glaube doch der Schrift, so das Urtheil über dich spricht. Und Summa, je weniger du deine Sünden und Gebrechen fühlst, je mehr Ursache hast du hinzuzugehen, Hilfe und Arznei zu suchen.

Zum andern siehe dich um, ob du auch in der Welt siehst; oder weißt du es nicht, so frage deine Nachbarn darum. Bist du in der Welt, so denke nicht, daß [es] an Sünden und Not werde fehlen. Denn fange nur an und stelle dich, als wolltest du fromm werden und beim Evangelio bleiben, und siehe zu, ob dir niemand werde feind werden, dazu Leib, Unrecht und Gewalt tun, item zu Sünden und Untugenden Ursache geben. Hast du es nicht erfahren, so laß dir's die Schrift sagen, die der Welt allenthalben solchen Preis und Zeugnis gibt.

Über das wirst du ja auch den Teufel um dich haben, welchen du nicht wirst gar unter dich treten, weil es unser Herr Christus selbst nicht hat können umgehen. Was ist nun der Teufel? Nichts anderes, denn wie ihn die Schrift nennt, ein Lügner und Mörder: ein Lügner, das Herz zu ver-

73) dum offeras. Etenim si tam diu procrastinare volueris, donec defecatis vitis mundus et dignus sacramentum possis accedere, perpetuo tibi ab hac coena abstinendum erit. Etenim eam hic pronuntiat sententiam: Si 74) purus et probus es, mea ope non indiges, neque vicissim te mihi opus est. Quare ii tantum indigni dicuntur, qui suos defectus non sentiunt, neque peccatores esse sustinent.

75) Quodsi dixeris: Quid mihi tum faciendum suades, si talem carnis meae necessitatem persentiscere nequeo, neque ulla sacramenti fame aut siti teneor? Respondeo: Iis, qui ita affecti sunt, ut nihil tale sentiant, nullum scio dare consilium praestantius, quam ut in sinum proprium inspiciant videantque, num ipsi quoque carnem et sanguinem habeant; quod cum ita esse compierent, tum sui tantum compendii gratia Pauli epistolam scriptam ad Galatas [5, 19 sqq.] requirant et audiant, cuiusmodi sua caro fructus soleat producere. Manifesta sunt autem (inquit) opera carnis, quae sunt: adulterium, fornicatio, immunditia, impudicitia, luxuria, idolorum servitus, veneficia, inimicitiae, contentiones, aemulationes, irae, rixae, dissensiones, sectae, invidiae, homicidia, ebrietates, comestiones et his similia.

76) Quapropter si haec sentire nequis, saltem Scripturae credas, quae tibi non mentietur, et cui caro tua propius quam tibi [R. 567] nota est. Imo amplius quoque concludit Paulus ad Rom. 7, 18 inquit: Scio, quod non habitet in me, hoc est, in carne mea, bonum. Quodsi Paulus de sua carne id pronuntiare audet, neque nos vel meliores vel sanctiores 77) illo esse volumus. Quod autem nos idem non persentiscimus, hoc periculosius aegrotamus. Signum enim est certissimum nostram carnem lepra esse infectam, quae nihil quidem sentit, saevit tamen interim et circumcirca 78) serpit. Veruntamen, ut dictum, quodsi usque adeo mortuus es, saltem Scripturae testimonio fidem habere digneris, quae, qualis sis, iam tibi suo comprobavit iudicio. Et in summa, quo minus tua peccata et defectus persentiscis, hoc plures causae tibi supersunt accedendi, opemque et medicinam quaeritandi.

79) Deinde in hoc quoque fac attentus sis, ut circumspicias, num in mundo quoque vereris, aut si ignoras, id ex vicinis tuis exquirito. Quodsi una cum aliis in mundo constitutus es, non est, ut cogites peccatum et necessitatem tibi defuturam. Tantum enim incipias, ac ita te geras, quasi prohibitatem sectari et cum evangelio stare decreveris, ac vide, num nemo tibi infensus futurus sit, insuper aegre faciat, vim atque iniuriam inferat, praeterea ad peccata et vitia causam suppeditet. Quodsi nondum expertus es, hoc ipsum Scriptura magistra fac audias, sursum ac deorsum his praeclaris testimoniis et titulis mundum praedicante.

80) Praeter haec diabolus quoque iuxta te habebis, quem prostratum nequaquam prorsus conculcabis, cum Dominus noster Iesus Christus 81) stus ipse devitare non potuerit. Quid ergo est diabolus? Nihil aliud, quam quod eum Scriptura nominans esse perhibet, nempe

For if you would wait until you are rid of such burdens, that you might come to the Sacrament pure and worthy, you must forever stay away. For in that case He pronounces sentence and says: If you are pure and godly, you have no need of Me, and I, in turn, none of thee. Therefore those alone are called unworthy who neither feel their infirmities nor wish to be considered sinners.

But if you say: What, then, shall I do if I cannot feel such distress or experience hunger and thirst for the Sacrament? Answer: For those who are so minded that they do not realize their condition I know no better counsel than that they put their hand into their bosom to ascertain whether they also have flesh and blood. And if you find that to be the case, then go, for your good, to St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians, and hear what sort of a fruit your flesh is: Now the works of the flesh (he says [chap. 5, 19ff.]) are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revelings, and such like.

Therefore, if you cannot feel it, at least believe the Scriptures; they will not lie to you, and they know your flesh better than you yourself. Yea, St. Paul further concludes in Rom. 7, 18: I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing. If St. Paul may speak thus of his flesh, we do not propose to be better nor more holy. But that we do not feel it is so much the worse; for it is a sign that there is a leprous flesh which feels nothing, and yet [the leprosy] rages and keeps spreading. Yet, as we have said, if you are quite dead to all sensibility, still believe the Scriptures, which pronounce sentence upon you. And, in short, the less you feel your sins and infirmities, the more reason have you to go to the Sacrament to seek help and a remedy.

In the second place, look about you and see whether you are also in the world, or if you do not know it, ask your neighbors about it. If you are in the world, do not think that there will be lack of sins and misery. For only begin to act as though you would be godly and adhere to the Gospel, and see whether no one will become your enemy, and, moreover, do you harm, wrong, and violence, and likewise give you cause for sin and vice. If you have not experienced it, then let the Scriptures tell you, which everywhere give this praise and testimony to the world.

Besides this, you will also have the devil about you, whom you will not entirely tread under foot, because our Lord Christ Himself could not entirely avoid him. Now, what is the devil? Nothing else than what the Scripführen von Gottes Wort und [zu] verblenden, daß du deine Not nicht fühlst noch zu Christo kommen könntest; ein Mörder, der dir keine Stunde das Leben gönnt. Wenn du sehen solltest, wieviel Messer, Spieße und Pfeile alle Augenblicke auf dich gezielt werden, du solltest froh werden, sooft du könntest, zu dem Sacrament zu kommen. Daß man aber so sicher und unachtsam dahingeht, macht nichts anderes, denn daß wir nicht denken noch glauben, daß wir im Fleisch und in der bösen Welt oder unter des Teufels Reich seien.

Darum versuche und übe solches wohl und gehe nur in dich selbst; oder siehe dich ein wenig um und halte dich nur [zu] der Schrift. Fühlst du alsbald auch nichts, so hast du desto mehr Not zu klagen beide Gott und deinem Bruder. Da laß dir raten und für dich bitten und laß nur nicht ab so lange, bis der Stein von deinem Herzen komme: so wird sich die Not wohl finden, und du gewahr werden, daß du zweimal tiefer liegst denn ein anderer armer Sünder und des Sacraments viel mehr [be]dürft wider das Elend, so du leider nicht siehst, ob Gott Gnade gebe, daß du es mehr fühlst und je hungrier dazu würdest, sonderlich weil dir der Teufel so zusetzt und ohne Unterlaß auf dich hält, wo er dich erschäße und bringe um Seele und Leib, daß du keine Stunde vor ihm sicher kannst sein. Wie bald möchte er dich plötzlich in Jammer und Not [ge]bracht haben, wenn du dich's am wenigsten versiehst!

anima et vita iuxta spoliet, ita ut nulla hora ab eius insidiis tibi in tuto esse liceat. Quam cito vero et subito te oscitantem et nil tale opinantem in omne calamitatis genus praecipitaverit!

Solches sei nun zur Vermahnung gesagt, nicht allein für uns Alte und Große, sondern auch für das junge Volk, so man in der christlichen Lehre und Verstand aufziehen soll. Denn damit könnte man desto leichter die zehn Gebote, Glauben und Vaterunser in die Jugend bringen, daß es ihnen mit Lust und Ernst einging, und also von Jugend auf übten und gewöhnten. Denn es ist doch nun fast [beinahe, vielfach] mit den Alten geschehen, daß man solches und anderes nicht erhalten kann, man ziehe denn die Leute auf, so nach uns kommen sollen und in unser Amt und Werk treten, auf daß sie auch ihre Kinder fruchtbarlich erziehen, damit Gottes Wort und die Christenheit erhalten werde. Darum wisse ein jeglicher Hausvater, daß er aus Gottes Befehl und Gebot schuldig ist, seine Kinder solches zu lehren oder lernen [zu] lassen, was sie können sollen. Denn weil sie getauft sind und in die Christenheit genommen, sollen sie auch solcher Gemeinschaft des Sacraments genießen, auf daß sie uns mögen dienen und nütze werden; denn sie müssen doch alle uns helfen glauben, lieben, beten und wider den Teufel sechten.

optati, aequum est, ut huius sacramenti participatione fruantur, ut nobis queant esse utilitati et subsidio. Oportet enim eos omnes et singulos nobiscum credere, diligere, orare et adversus diabolum pugnare.

mendax et homicida: mendax quidem ob id, quod cor humanum a Verbo Dei abducere et excaecare conatur, ne tuam necessitatem sentias, neve ad Christum medicum venire queas; homicida vero, qui ne ad unius quidem [R. 568 82] horulae spatium vitam tibi favet. Quodsi videndi tibi daretur copia, quot gladiis, quot hastis, quot sagittis et telis omnibus momentis in te collimet, gauderes toties tibi patere ad sacramentum accedendi ianuam, quoties possis consequi. Quod autem tam secure, tam incogitante ambulamus, nihil facit aliud, quam quod non cogitamus aut credimus, nos in carne et hoc pravo mundo vivere aut versari in regno diaboli.

83] Quamobrem haec probe experienda et exercenda tibi proponito, teque ipse accurate fac excutias et noscas, tum paulisper circumspicito, et vide, quid Scriptura loquatur. Quodsi ne tum quidem quidquam senseris, hoc maior te urget ad conquerendum necessitas aequae apud Deum ac proximum tuum. Ab his petas auxilium, utque pro te precentur, postula neque prius abistas, quam cor tuum adamantina illa duritie liberatum fuerit. Ita 84] fiet, ut demum tua tibi pateat necessitas, clare visuro te terque quaterque in omnium vitiorum lernam profundius esse immersum quam ullum alium peccatorem, teque sacramento multo egere impensius, medendae calamitati tibi occultae, Deo suam tibi largiente gratiam, ut magis sentias, flasque ad hunc modum sacramenti esurientior. Praecipue vero diabolo tantopere te infestante tibi que perniciem machinante, ut te comprehendens et tures call him, a liar and murderer. A liar, to lead the heart astray from the Word of God, and to blind it, that you cannot feel your distress or come to Christ. A murderer, who cannot bear to see you live one single hour. If you could see how many knives, darts, and arrows are every moment aimed at you, you would be glad to come to the Sacrament as often as possible. But there is no reason why we walk so securely and heedlessly, except that we neither think nor believe that we are in the flesh, and in this wicked world or in the kingdom of the devil.

85] Haec iam hactenus monendi gratia dicta sint, non tantum nobis grandioribus, verum etiam natu minoribus, qui in Christiana doctrina eiusdemque intellectu educandi sunt. Ad hunc enim modum hoc minore negotio Decem Praecepta, Fidei Symbolum et [R. 569] Orationem Dominicam iuventuti inculcare possemus, ut cum quadam voluptate atque adeo serio haec caperent et ita statim ab ipsis infantiae crepundiis percepta indesinenter ex- 86] ercerent atque assuescerent. Iam enim paene cum natu grandioribus actum est, ut haec atque alia ab ipsis impetrare nequeamus, nisi eiusmodi homines iam inde a puero educantur, qui nobis successuri sunt nostrumque opus et officium arrepturi, ut et ipsi suos liberos bene ac salutariter educant, quorum opera Dei Verbum sustentetur, et Christianorum 87] communio aedificetur. Quapropter quisque paterfamilias sciat, hoc sui esse officii, ut Dei iussu atque praeepto haec liberos suos doceat aut alios docere sinat, quae eos nosse par est. Cum enim baptizati sint, iamque in Christianorum numerum et communionem co-

Therefore, try this and practise it well, and do but examine yourself, or look about you a little, and only keep to the Scriptures. If even then you still feel nothing, you have so much the more misery to lament both to God and to your brother. Then take advice and have others pray for you, and do not desist until the stone be removed from your heart. Then, indeed, the distress will not fail to become manifest, and you will find that you have sunk twice as deep as any other poor sinner, and are much more in need of the Sacrament against the misery which unfortunately you do not see, so that, with the grace of God, you may feel it more and become the more hungry for the Sacrament, especially since the devil plies his force against you, and lies in wait for you without ceasing, to seize and destroy you, soul and body, so that you are not safe from him one hour. How soon can he have brought you suddenly into misery and distress when you least expect it!

Let this, then, be said for exhortation, not only for those of us who are old and grown, but also for the young people, who ought to be brought up in the Christian doctrine and understanding. For thereby the Ten Commandments, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer might be the more easily inculcated to our youth, so that they would receive them with pleasure and earnestness, and thus would practise them from their youth and accustom themselves to them. For the old are now well-nigh done for, so that these and other things cannot be attained, unless we train the people who are to come after us and succeed us in our office and work, in order that they also may bring up their children successfully, that the Word of God and the Christian Church may be preserved. Therefore let every father of a family know that it is his duty, by the injunction and command of God, to teach these things to his children, or have them learn what they ought to know. For since they are baptized and received into the Christian Church, they should also enjoy this communion of the Sacrament, in order that they may serve us and be useful to us; for they must all indeed help us to believe, love, pray, and fight against the devil.

VII.

Die Konkordienformel.

FORMULA CONCORDIAE.

THE FORMULA OF CONCORD.

[Erster Teil.]

Summarischer Begriff der Streitigen Artikel

zwischen

den Theologen Augsburgischer Konfession, in nachfolgender Wiederholung nach Anleitung Gottes Wortes christlich erklärt und verglichen.

Mit Kurfl. Gn. zu Sachsen Befreiung. Dresden 1579 [1580].

[PARS PRIMA.]

EPITOME ARTICULORUM,

de quibus

Controversiae Ortae Sunt

inter theologos Augustanae Confessionis, qui in repetitione sequenti secundum Verbi Dei praescriptum pie declarati sunt et conciliati.

[PART FIRST.]

SUMMARY CONTENT [EPITOME]

of the Articles in Controversy

among the Theologians of the Augsburg Confession, Set Forth and Reconciled in a Christian Way, according to the Direction of God's Word, in the Following Recapitulation.

Von dem summarischen Begriff, Regel und Richtschnur, nach welcher alle Lehre geurtheilt und die eingefallenen Irrungen christlich entschieden und erklärt werden sollen.

1. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß die einige Regel und Richtschnur, nach welcher zugleich alle Lehren und Lehrer gerichtet und geurtheilt werden sollen, sind allein die prophetischen und apostolischen Schriften Alten und Neuen Testaments; wie geschrieben steht: „Dein Wort ist meines Fußes Leuchte und ein Licht auf meinem Wege“, Ps. 119. Und St. Paulus: „Wenn ein Engel vom Himmel käme und predigte anders, der soll verflucht sein“, Gal. 1.

Andere Schriften aber der alten oder neuen Lehrer, wie sie Namen haben, sollen der Heiligen Schrift nicht gleichgehalten, sondern alle zumal miteinander derselben unterworfen und anders oder weiter nicht angenommen werden denn als Zeugen, welcher Gestalt nach der Apostel Zeit und an welchen Orten solche Lehre der Propheten und Apostel erhalten worden.

2. Und nachdem gleich nach der Apostel Zeit, auch noch bei ihrem Leben, falsche Lehrer und Lehrer eingerissen, und wider dieselben in der ersten Kirche Symbola, das ist, kurze, runde Bekenntnisse, gestellt, welche für den einheiligen, allgemeinen christlichen Glauben und Bekenntnis der rechtgläubigen und wahrhaftigen Kirche gehalten, als nämlich das Symbolum Apostolicum, Symbolum Nicaenum und Symbolum Athanasii: bekennen wir uns zu denselben und verwerfen hiermit alle Ketereien und Lehren, so denselben zuwider in die Kirche Gottes eingeführt worden sind.

3. Soviel aber die Trennung in Glaubenssachen belangt, zu unsern Zeiten eingefallen, halten wir für den einheiligen Konsens und Erklärung unsers christlichen Glaubens und Bekenntnisses, besonders wider des Papsttums [wider das Papsttum] und dessen falschen Gottesdienst, Abgötterei, Aberglauben und [wider] andere Setzen, als dieser Zeit unserm Symbolo [unser Symbolum], die erste, ungedruckte Augsburgerische Konfession, Kaiser Karol V. zu Augsburg Anno 30 usw. in der großen Reichsversammlung übergeben, samt derselben Apologie und Artikeln, [so] zu Schmalkalden Anno 37 gestellt und von den vornehmsten Theologen damals unterschrieben worden.

Und weil solche Sachen auch den gemeinen Vätern und derselben Seelen Seligkeit betreffen, bekennen wir uns auch zu dem Kleinen und Großen Katechismo Doctor Luthers, wie solche beide Katechismi in den tomiis Lutheri verfaßt, als zu der Väternbibel, darin alles begriffen, was in Heiliger Schrift weitläufig gehandelt und einem Christenmenschen zu seiner Seligkeit zu wissen vonnöten ist.

Nach dieser Anleitung, wie oben vermeldet, sollen alle Lehren ange stellt, und was derselben ad quam omnia dogmata exigenda, et quae inciderunt certamina, pie declaranda et componenda sunt.

DE COMPENDIARIA REGULA ATQUE NORMA,

1] I. Credimus, confitemur et docemus unicam regulam et normam, secundum [R. 570] quam omnia dogmata omnesque doctores aestimari et iudicari oporteat, nullam omnino aliam esse quam prophetica et apostolica scripta cum Veteris tum Novi Testamenti, sicut scriptum est Ps. 119, 105: Lucerna pedibus meis Verbum tuum et lumen semitis meae. Et divus Paulus inquit Gal. 1, 8: Etiamsi angelus de coelo aliud praedicoet evangelium, anathema sit.

2] Reliqua vero sive patrum sive neotericorum scripta, quocunque veniant nomine, sacris litteris nequaquam sunt equiparanda, sed universa illis ita subicienda sunt, ut [R. 571] alia ratione non recipiantur nisi testimonio loco, qui doceant, quod etiam post apostolorum tempora et in quibus partibus orbis doctrina illa prophetarum et apostolorum sincerior conservata sit.

3] II. Et quia statim post apostolorum tempora, imo etiam cum adhuc superstites essent, falsi doctores et haeretici exorti sunt, contra quos in primitiva ecclesia symbola sunt composita, id est, breves et categoriae confessiones, quae unanimem catholicae Christianae fidei consensum et confessionem orthodoxorum et verae ecclesiae complectebantur (ut sunt Symbolum Apostolicum, Nicaenum et Athanasianum): profiteamur publice nos illa amplecti et relicimus omnes haereses omniaque dogmata, quae contra illorum sententiam unquam in ecclesiam Dei sunt inventa.

4] III. Quod vero ad schismata in negotiis fidei attinet, quae in nostra tempora inciderunt, iudicamus unanimem consensum et declarationem Christianae nostrae fidei et confessionis, imprimis contra papatum et huius falsos ac idololatricos cultus et superstitiones et alias sectas, esse nostri temporis Symbolum, Augustanam illam primam et non mutatam Confessionem, quae Imperatori Carolo V. Augustae anno 30 in magnis Imperii Comitibus exhibita est, similiter et Apologiam et Articulos Smalcaldicos anno 37 conscriptos et praecipuorum theologorum illius temporis subscriptione comprobatos.

5] Et quia haec religionis causa etiam ad laicos, quos vocant, spectat eorumque perpetua salus agitur, profiteamur publice nos etiam amplecti Minorem et Maiorem D. Lutheri Catechismos, ut ii tomiis Lutheri sunt inserti, quod eos quasi laicorum biblia esse censeamus, in quibus omnia illa breviter comprehenduntur, quae in Sacra Scriptura fusius tractantur et quorum cognitio homini Christiano ad [R. 572] aeternam salutem est necessaria.

6] Ad has rationes paulo ante monstratas omnis doctrina in religionis negotio confor-

OF THE SUMMARY CONTENT, RULE, AND STANDARD

according to which all dogmas should be judged, and the erroneous teachings [controversies] that have occurred should be decided and explained in a Christian way.

1. We believe, teach, and confess that the sole rule and standard according to which all dogmas together with [all] teachers should be estimated and judged are the prophetic and apostolic Scriptures of the Old and of the New Testament alone, as it is written Ps. 119, 105: Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path. And St. Paul: Though an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you, let him be accursed, Gal. 1, 8.

Other writings, however, of ancient or modern teachers, whatever name they bear, must not be regarded as equal to the Holy Scriptures, but all of them together be subjected to them, and should not be received otherwise or further than as witnesses, [which are to show] in what manner after the time of the apostles, and at what places, this [pure] doctrine of the prophets and apostles was preserved.

2. And because directly after the times of the apostles, and even while they were still living, false teachers and heretics arose, and symbols, i. e., brief, succinct [categorical] confessions, were composed against them in the early Church, which were regarded as the unanimous, universal Christian faith and confession of the orthodox and true Church, namely, the Apostles' Creed, the Nicene Creed, and the Athanasian Creed, we pledge ourselves to them, and hereby reject all heresies and dogmas which, contrary to them, have been introduced into the Church of God.

3. As to the schisms in matters of faith, however, which have occurred in our time, we regard as the unanimous consensus and declaration of our Christian faith and confession, especially against the Papacy and its false worship, idolatry, superstition, and against other sects, as the symbol of our time, the First, Unaltered Augsburg Confession, delivered to the Emperor Charles V at Augsburg in the year 1530, in the great Diet, together with its Apology, and the Articles composed at Smalcald in the year 1537, and subscribed at that time by the chief theologians.

And because such matters concern also the laity and the salvation of their souls, we also confess the Small and Large Catechisms of Dr. Luther, as they are included in Luther's works, as the Bible of the laity, wherein everything is comprised which is treated at greater length in Holy Scripture, and is necessary for a Christian man to know for his salvation.

To this direction, as above announced, all zumider, als unsers Glaubens einhelliger Erklärung entgegen, verworfen und verdammt werden.

Solchergehalt wird der Unterschied zwischen der Heiligen Schrift Alten und Neuen Testaments und allen andern Schriften erhalten, und bleibt allein die Heilige Schrift der einzige Richter, Regel und Richtschnur, nach welcher als dem einzigen Proberstein sollen und müssen alle Lehren erkannt und geurtheilt werden, ob sie gut oder böß, recht oder unrecht seien.

Die andern Symbola aber und angezogenen Schriften sind nicht Richter wie die Heilige Schrift, sondern allein Zeugnis und Erklärung des Glaubens, wie jederzeit die Heilige Schrift in streitigen Artikeln in der Kirche Gottes von den damals Lebenden verstanden und ausgelegt und derselben widerwärtige Lehre verworfen und verdammt worden.

I.

Von der Erbsünde.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Die Hauptfrage in diesem Zwiespalt.

Ob die Erbsünde sei eigentlich und ohne allen Unterschied des Menschen verderbte Natur, Substanz und Wesen oder ja das vornehmste und beste Theil seines Wesens, als die vernünftige Seele selbst in ihrem höchsten Grad und Kräften, oder ob zwischen des Menschen Substanz, Natur, Wesen, Leib, Seele, auch nach dem Fall und der Erbsünde, ein Unterschied sei, also daß ein anderes die Natur und ein anderes die Erbsünde sei, welche in der verderbten Natur steckt und die Natur verderbt.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Keine Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis vermöge vorgelegter Richtschnur und summarischer Erklärung.

1. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß ein Unterschied sei zwischen der Natur des Menschen, nicht allein wie er anfangs von Gott rein und heilig ohne Sünde erschaffen, sondern auch wie wir sie jezt nach dem Fall haben, nämlich zwischen der Natur, so auch nach dem Fall noch eine Creatur Gottes ist und bleibt, und der Erbsünde, und daß solcher Unterschied so groß als der Unterschied zwischen Gottes und des Teufels Werk sei.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß über solchem Unterschied mit höchstem Fleiß zu halten, weil diese Lehre, daß zwischen unserer verderbten Menschennatur und der Erbsünde kein Unterschied sein sollte, wider die Hauptartikel unsers christlichen Glaubens von der Erschaffung, Erlösung, Heiligung und Auferstehung unsers Fleisches streitet und neben denselben nicht bestehen kann.

manda est, et, si quid illis contrarium esse deprehenditur, id reiiciendum atque damnandum est, quippe quod cum unanimi fidei nostrae declaratione pugnet.

7) Hoc modo luculentum discrimen inter sacras Veteris et Novi Testamenti litteras et omnia aliorum scripta retinetur, et sola Sacra Scriptura iudex, norma et regula agnoscitur, ad quam ceu ad Lydium lapidem omnia dogmata exigenda sunt et iudicanda, an pia an impia, an vera an vero falsa sint.

8) Cetera autem Symbola et alia scripta, quorum paulo ante mentionem fecimus, non obtinent auctoritatem iudicis; haec enim dignitas solis sacris litteris debetur; sed duntaxat pro religione nostra testimonium dicunt eamque explicant ac ostendunt, quomodo singulis temporibus sacrae litterae in articulis controversis in ecclesia Dei a doctoribus, qui tum vixerunt, intellectae et explicatae fuerint, et quibus rationibus dogmata cum Sacra Scriptura pugnantia reiecta et condemnata sint.

I.

DE PECCATO ORIGINIS.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1) An peccatum originale sit proprie et absque omni discrimine ipsa hominis corrupti natura, substantia et essentia aut certe principalis et praestantissima pars ipsius substantiae, utpote ipsa rationalis anima in [R. 573] summo suo gradu et in summis ipsius viribus considerata, an vero inter hominis substantiam, naturam, essentiam, corpus et animam, etiam post lapsum humani generis, et inter originale peccatum aliquod sit discrimen, ita ut aliud sit ipsa natura et aliud ipsum peccatum originis, quod in natura corrupta haeret et naturam etiam depravat.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera doctrina, fides et confessio, cum superiore norma et compendiosa declaratione consentiens.

2) I. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod sit aliquod discrimen inter ipsam hominis naturam, non tantum quemadmodum initio a Deo purus et sanctus et absque peccato homo conditus est, verum etiam qualem iam post lapsum naturam illam habemus; discrimen, inquam, inter ipsam naturam, quae etiam post lapsum est permanetque Dei creatura, et inter peccatum originis, et quod tanta sit illa naturae et peccati originalis differentia, quanta est inter opus Dei et inter opus diaboli.

3) II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod summo studio hoc discrimen sit conservandum, propterea quod illud dogma, nullum videlicet inter naturam hominis corrupti et inter peccatum originis esse discrimen, cum praecipuis fidei nostrae articulis (de creatione, de redemptione, de sanctificatione et resurrectione carnis nostrae) pugnet neque salvus hisce articulis stare possit.

doctrines are to be conformed, and what is contrary thereto is to be rejected and condemned, as opposed to the unanimous declaration of our faith.

In this way the distinction between the Holy Scriptures of the Old and of the New Testament and all other writings is preserved, and the Holy Scriptures alone remain the only judge, rule, and standard, according to which, as the only test-stone, all dogmas shall and must be discerned and judged, as to whether they are good or evil, right or wrong.

But the other symbols and writings cited are not judges, as are the Holy Scriptures, but only a testimony and declaration of the faith, as to how at any time the Holy Scriptures have been understood and explained in the articles in controversy in the Church of God by those then living, and how the opposite dogma was rejected and condemned [by what arguments the dogmas conflicting with the Holy Scripture were rejected and condemned].

I.

OF ORIGINAL SIN.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in This Controversy.

Whether original sin is properly and without any distinction man's corrupt nature, substance, and essence, or at any rate the principal and best part of his essence [substance], namely, the rational soul itself in its highest state and powers; or whether, even after the Fall, there is a distinction between man's substance, nature, essence, body, soul, and original sin, so that the nature [itself] is one thing, and original sin, which inheres in the corrupt nature and corrupts the nature, another.

AFFIRMATIVA.

The Pure Doctrine, Faith, and Confession according to the Afore-said Standard and Summary Declaration.

1. We believe, teach, and confess that there is a distinction between man's nature, not only as he was originally created by God pure and holy and without sin, but also as we have it [that nature] now after the Fall, namely, between the nature [itself], which even after the Fall is and remains a creature of God, and original sin, and that this distinction is as great as the distinction between a work of God and a work of the devil.

2. We believe, teach, and confess also that this distinction should be maintained with the greatest care, because this doctrine, that no distinction is to be made between our corrupt human nature and original sin, conflicts with the chief articles of our Christian faith concerning creation, redemption, sanctification, and the resurrection of our body, and cannot coexist therewith.

Denn nicht allein Adams und Evas Leib und Seele vor dem Fall, sondern auch unsern Leib und Seele nach dem Fall, unangesehen daß sie verderbt, [hat] Gott geschaffen, welche auch Gott noch für sein Werk [an]erkennt, wie geschrieben steht Job 10: „Deine Hände haben mich gearbeitet und gemacht alles, was ich um und um bin.“ Deut. 32; Jes. 45. 54. 64; Act. 17; Ps. 100. 139; Eccl. 12.

Es hat auch der Sohn Gottes in Einigkeit seiner Person solche menschliche Natur, doch ohne Sünde, und also nicht ein fremd, sondern unser Fleisch an sich genommen, und [ist] nach demselben unser wahrhaftiger Bruder [ge]worden. Hebr. 2: „Nachdem die Kinder Fleisch und Blut haben, ist er's gleichmaßen theilhaftig worden.“ Item: „Er nimmt nirgend die Engel an sich, sondern den Samen Abrahams nimmt er an sich; daher muß er allerdinge seinen Brüdern, ausgenommen die Sünde, gleich werden.“ Also hat es auch Christus erlöst als sein Werk, heiligt es als sein Werk, erweckt es von den Toten und ziert es herrlich als sein Werk. Aber die Erbsünde hat er nicht erschaffen, nicht angenommen, nicht erlöst, nicht geheiligt, wird sie auch nicht erwecken an den Auserwählten, weder zieren noch selig machen, sondern in der Auferstehung gar vertilgt sein wird.

Daraus der Unterschied zwischen der verderbten Natur und der Verderbung, so in der Natur steht und die Natur dadurch verderbt worden, leichtlich zu erkennen.

3. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen aber hinwiederum, daß die Erbsünde nicht sei eine schlechte [geringe], sondern so tiefe Verderbung menschlicher Natur, daß nichts Gesundes oder unverderbt an Leib und Seele des Menschen, seinen innerlichen und äußerlichen Kräften geblieben, sondern wie die Kirche singt: „Durch Adams Fall ist ganz verderbt menschlich' Natur und Wesen“; welcher Schade unaussprechlich, nicht mit der Vernunft, sondern allein aus Gottes Wort erkennet [erkannt] werden mag; und daß die Natur und solche Verderbung der Natur niemand voneinander scheiden könne denn allein Gott, welches durch den Tod in der Auferstehung gänzlich geschehen, da unsere Natur, die wir jetzt tragen, ohne die Erbsünde und von derselben abgesondert und abgetrieben, auferstehen und ewig leben wird, wie geschrieben steht Job 19: „Ich werde mit dieser meiner Haut umgeben werden und werde in meinem Fleisch Gott sehen; denselben werde ich mit sehen, und meine Augen werden ihn schauen.“

NEGATIVA.

Verwerfung der falschen Gegenlehre.

1. Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir, wenn gelehrt wird, daß die Erbsünde allein ein reatus oder Schuld von wegen fremder Verwirrung, ohne einige unserer Natur Verderbung sei.

2. Item, daß die bösen Lüste nicht Sünde, sondern angeschaffene wesentliche Eigenschaften der

4] Deus enim non modo Adami et Evae corpus et animam ante lapsum, verum etiam corpora et animas nostras post lapsum creavit, etsi haec iam sunt corrupta. Et sane [R. 574] hodie Dominus animas et corpora nostra creaturas et opus suum esse agnoscit, sicut scriptum est Job. 10, 8: Manus tuae fecerunt me et plasmaverunt me totum in circuitu. Deut. 32, 18. Esa. 45, 9; 54, 5; 64, 8. Act. 17, 28. Ps. 100, 3; 139, 14. Eccl. 12, 1.

5] Et Filius Dei unione personali illam humanam naturam, sed sine peccato, assumpsit, et non alienam, sed nostram carnem sibi adiungens arctissime copulavit eiusque assumptae carnis ratione vere frater noster factus est, ut Scriptura testatur Hebr. 2, 14: Posteaquam pueri commercium habent cum carne et sanguine, et ipse similiter particeps factus est eorumdem. Item v. 16: Non angelos assumpsit, sed semen Abrahae assumit, unde et debuit per omnia fratribus assimilari, excepto peccato. Eandem humanam naturam (opus videlicet suum) Christus redemit, eandem (quae ipsius opus est) sanctificat, eandem a mortuis resuscitat et ingenti gloria (opus videlicet suum) ornat. Peccatum autem originale non creavit, non assumpsit, non redemit, non sanctificat, non resuscitat in electis, neque unquam gloria coelesti ornabit aut salvabit, sed in beata illa resurrectione plane abolitum erit.

7] Ex his, quae a nobis allata sunt, discrimen inter corruptam naturam et inter corruptionem, quae naturae infixa est, per quam natura est corrupta, facile agnoscitur potest.

8] III. Viciissim autem credimus, docemus atque confitemur, peccatum originis non esse levem, sed tam profundam humanae naturae corruptionem, quae nihil sanum, nihil incorruptum in corpore et anima hominis, atque adeo in interioribus et exterioribus viribus eius reliquit. Sicut ecclesia canit: Lapsus Adae vi pessima humana tota massa, natura et ipsa essentia corrupta, luce cassa etc. Hoc 9] quantum sit malum, verbis revera est inexplicabile, neque humanae rationis acumine indagari, sed duntaxat per Verbum Dei reve- 10] latum agnoscitur potest. Et sane [R. 575] affirmamus, quod hanc naturae corruptionem ab ipsa natura nemo nisi solus Deus separare queat, id quod per mortem in beata illa resurrectione plene fiet. Ibi enim ea ipsa natura nostra, quam nunc circumferimus, absque peccato originis et ab eodem omnino separata et remota, resurget et aeterna felicitate fruetur. Sic enim scriptum est Job. 19, 26. 27: Pelle mea circumdabor et in carne mea videbo Deum, quem ego visurus sum mihi, et oculi mei eum conspexuri sunt.

NEGATIVA.

Relectio falsorum dogmatum, quae commemoratae sanae doctrinae repugnant.

11] I. Relicimus ergo et damnamus dogma illud, quo assertitur, peccatum originale tantummodo reatum et debitum esse ex alieno delicto, absque ulla naturae nostrae corruptione, in nos derivatum.

12] II. Item, concupiscentias pravas non esse peccatum, sed concreatas naturae condi-

For God created not only the body and soul of Adam and Eve before the Fall, but also our bodies and souls after the Fall, notwithstanding that they are corrupt, which God also still acknowledges as His work, as it is written Job 10, 8: Thine hands have made me and fashioned me together round about. Deut. 32, 18; Is. 45, 9 ff.; 54, 5; 64, 8; Acts 17, 28; Job 10, 8; Ps. 100, 3; 139, 14; Eccl. 12, 1.

Moreover, the Son of God has assumed this human nature, however, without sin, and therefore not a foreign, but our own flesh, into the unity of His person, and according to it is become our true Brother. Heb. 2, 14: Forasmuch, then, as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same. Again, v. 16; 4, 15: He took not on Him the nature of angels, but He took on Him the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behooved Him to be made like unto His brethren, yet without sin. In like manner Christ has also redeemed it as His work, sanctifies it as His work, raises it from the dead, and gloriously adorns it as His work. But original sin He has not created, assumed, redeemed, sanctified; nor will He raise it, will neither adorn nor save it in the elect, but in the [blessed] resurrection it will be entirely destroyed.

Hence the distinction between the corrupt nature and the corruption which infects the nature, and by which the nature became corrupt, can easily be discerned.

3. But, on the other hand, we believe, teach, and confess that original sin is not a slight, but so deep a corruption of human nature that nothing healthy or uncorrupt has remained in man's body or soul, in his inner or outward powers, but, as the Church sings:

Through Adam's fall is all corrupt, Nature and essence human.

This damage is unspeakable, and cannot be discerned by reason, but only from God's Word. And [we affirm] that no one but God alone can separate from one another the nature and this corruption of the nature, which will fully come to pass through death, in the [blessed] resurrection, where our nature which we now bear will rise and live eternally without original sin and separated and sundered from it, as it is written Job 19, 26: I shall be compassed again with this my skin, and in my flesh shall I see God, whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold.

NEGATIVA.

Rejection of the False Opposite Dogmas.

1. Therefore we reject and condemn the teaching that original sin is only a reatus or debt on account of what has been committed by another [diverted to us] without any corruption of our nature.

2. Also, that evil lusts are not sin, but created, essential properties of the nature, Natur seien, oder als wäre der obgemeldete Mangel oder Schade nicht wahrhaftig Sünde, darum der Mensch außerhalb Christo ein Kind des Zornes sein sollte.

3. Desgleichen verwerfen wir auch den pelagianischen Irrtum, da vorgegeben wird, daß die Natur des Menschen auch nach dem Fall unverderbt und sonderlich in geistlichen Sachen ganz gut und rein in ihren naturalibus, daß ist, in ihren natürlichen Kräften, geblieben sei.

4. Item, daß die Erbsünde nur von außen ein schlechter, [ge]ringfügiger, eingesprengter Fleck oder anfliegender Makel sei, darunter die Natur ihre guten Kräfte auch in geistlichen Sachen behalten habe.

5. Item, daß die Erbsünde sei nur ein äußerlich Hindernis der guten geistlichen Kräfte und nicht eine Verabung oder Mangel derselben; als wenn ein Magnet mit Knoblauchsast bestrichen wird, dadurch seine natürliche Kraft nicht weggenommen, sondern allein gehindert wird; oder daß derselbe Makel wie ein Fleck vom Angesicht oder Farbe von der Wand leichtlich abgewischt werden könnte.

6. Item, daß im Menschen nicht gar verderbt sei menschlich' Natur und Wesen, sondern der Mensch habe noch etwas Gutes an ihm [an sich], auch in geistlichen Sachen, als nämlich Frömmigkeit [* Fähigkeit], Geschicklichkeit, Tüchtigkeit oder Vermögen, in geistlichen Sachen etwas anzufangen, zu wirken oder mitzuwirken.

7. Dagegen verwerfen wir auch die falsche Lehre der Manichäer, wenn gelehrt wird, daß die Erbsünde als etwas Wesentliches und Selbstständiges durch den Satan in die Natur eingegossen und mit derselben vermengt [sei], wie Gift und Wein gemengt werden.

8. Item, daß nicht der natürliche Mensch, sondern etwas anderes und Fremdes im Menschen sündige, deswegen nicht die Natur, sondern allein die Erbsünde in der Natur angelegt werde.

9. Wir verwerfen und verdammen auch als einen manichäischen Irrtum, wenn gelehrt wird, daß die Erbsünde sei eigentlich und ohne allen Unterschied des verderbten Menschen Substanz, Natur und Wesen selbst, also daß kein Unterschied zwischen der verderbten Natur nach dem Fall an ihr selbst und der Erbsünde sollte auch nicht gedacht, noch mit Gedanken voneinander unterschieden werden können.

10. Es wird aber solche Erbsünde von Ruthero Naturfünde, Personfünde, wesentliche Sünde genannt [genannt], nicht daß die Natur, Person oder das Wesen des Menschen selbst ohne allen Unterschied die Erbsünde sei, sondern daß mit solchen Worten der Unterschied zwischen der Erbsünde, so in der menschlichen Natur steckt, und den andern Sünden, so man wirkliche Sünden nennt, angezeigt würde.

11. Denn die Erbsünde ist nicht eine Sünde, die man tut, sondern sie steckt in der Natur, Substanz und Wesen des Menschen; also wenngleich kein böser Gedanke nimmer im Herzen des verderbten Menschen aufsteige, kein unnütz Wort geredet [würde], noch böse Tat geschähe, so ist doch die Natur verderbt durch die Erbsünde, die uns im sündlichen Samen angeboren wird und ein Brunn-tionen et proprietates quasdam essentialis, aut defectus illos et malum ingens a nobis paulo ante commemoratum non esse peccatum, propter quod homo Christo non insertus sit filius irae.

13) III. Relicimus etiam Pelagianam haeresin, qua asseritur hominis naturam post lapsum incorruptam esse, et quidem in spiritualibus rebus totam bonam et puram in viribus suis naturalibus mansisse.

14) IV. Item, peccatum originis externum, levem et nullius prope momenti esse naevum, aut aspersam quandam maculam, sub [R. 576] qua nihilominus natura bonas suas vires etiam in rebus spiritualibus retinuerit.

15) V. Item, peccatum originale tantum esse externum impedimentum bonarum spiritualium virium et non esse despoliationem et defectum earundem, sicuti, cum magnes alii succo illinitur, vis eius naturalis attrahendi ferrum non tollitur, sed tantum impeditur; aut sicut macula de facie aut color de pariete abstergeri facile potest.

16) VI. Item, hominis naturam et essentiam non prorsus esse corruptam, sed aliquid boni adhuc in homine reliquum, etiam in rebus spiritualibus, videlicet bonitatem, capacitatem, aptitudinem, facultatem, industriam aut vires, quibus in rebus spiritualibus inchoare aliquid boni, operari aut cooperari valet.

17) VII. Contra autem relictum etiam falsum dogma Manichaeorum, cum docetur, peccatum originis tamquam quiddam essentialis atque substantiale a Satana in naturam esse infusum et cum eadem permixtum, quemadmodum venenum et vinum miscentur.

18) VIII. Item, non ipsum animale hominem, sed aliquid aliud et peregrinum quiddam, quod sit in homine, peccare. ideoque non ipsam naturam, sed tantummodo peccatum originale in natura existens accusari.

19) IX. Relicimus etiam atque damnamus ut Manichaeum errorem, quando docetur, originale peccatum proprie, et quidem nullo posito discrimine, esse ipsam hominis corrupti substantiam, naturam et essentiam, ita ut inter naturam corruptam post lapsum, per se ipsam consideratam, et inter peccatum originis nulla prorsus sit differentia, neque ulla distinctio cogitari, aut saltem peccatum illud a natura cogitatione discerni possit.

20) X. D. Lutherus quidem originis illud malum peccatum naturae, personale, [R. 577] essentialis vocat, sed non eam ob causam, quasi natura, persona aut essentia hominis, absque omni discrimine, sit ipsum peccatum originis, sed ideo ad hunc modum loquitur, ut huiusmodi phrasibus discrimen inter peccatum originale, quod humanae naturae infixum est, et inter alia peccata, quae actualia vocantur, melius intelligi possit.

21) XI. Peccatum enim originis non est quoddam delictum, quod actu perpetratur, sed intime inhaeret infixum ipsi naturae, substantiae et essentiae hominis. Et quidem, si maxime nulla unquam prava cogitatio in corde hominis corrupti exoriretur, si nullum verbum otiosum proferretur, si nullum malum opus aut facinus designaretur, tamen natura nihi-or, as though the above-mentioned defect and damage were not truly sin, because of which man without Christ [not ingrafted into Christ] would be a child of wrath.

3. We likewise reject the Pelagian error, by which it is alleged that man's nature even after the Fall is incorrupt, and especially with respect to spiritual things has remained entirely good and pure in naturalibus, i. e., in its natural powers.

4. Also, that original sin is only a slight, insignificant spot on the outside, dashed upon the nature, or a blemish that has been blown upon it, beneath which [nevertheless] the nature has retained its good powers even in spiritual things.

5. Also, that original sin is only an external impediment to the good spiritual powers, and not a despoliation or want of the same, as when a magnet is smeared with garlic-juice, its natural power is not thereby removed, but only impeded; or that this stain can be easily wiped away like a spot from the face or pigment from the wall.

6. Also, that in man the human nature and essence are not entirely corrupt, but that man still has something good in him, even in spiritual things, namely, capacity, skill, aptness, or ability in spiritual things to begin, to work, or to help working for something [good].

7. On the other hand, we also reject the false dogma of the Manicheans, when it is taught that original sin, as something essential and self-subsisting, has been infused by Satan into the nature, and intermingled with it, as poison and wine are mixed.

8. Also, that not the natural man, but something else and extraneous to man, sins, on account of which not the nature, but only original sin in the nature, is accused.

9. We reject and condemn also as a Manichean error the doctrine that original sin is properly and without any distinction the substance, nature, and essence itself of the corrupt man, so that a distinction between the corrupt nature, as such, after the Fall and original sin should not even be conceived of, nor that they could be distinguished from one another [even] in thought.

10. Now, this original sin is called by Dr. Luther nature-sin, person-sin, essential sin, not because the nature, person, or essence of man is, without any distinction, itself original sin, but in order to indicate by such words the distinction between original sin, which inheres in human nature, and other sins, which are called actual sins.

11. For original sin is not a sin which is committed, but it inheres in the nature, substance, and essence of man, so that, though no wicked thought ever should arise in the heart of corrupt man, no idle word were quell ist aller andern wirklichen Sünden, als böser Gedanken, Worte und Werke, wie geschrieben steht: „Aus dem Herzen kommen arge Gedanken“; item: „Das Dichten des menschlichen Herzens ist böse von Jugend auf.“ Matth. 15; Gen. 6.

12. So ist auch wohl zu merken der ungleiche Verstand des Wortes „Natur“, dadurch die Manichäer ihren Irrtum bedecken und viel einfältige Leute irremachen. Denn zuzeiten heißt es des Menschen Wesen, als wenn gesagt wird: Gott hat die menschliche Natur geschaffen. Zuzeiten aber heißt es die Art und Unart eines Dinges, die in der Natur oder Wesen steht, als wenn gesagt wird: Der Schlange Natur ist flehen, und des Menschen Natur und Art ist sündigen und Sünde; da das Wort „Natur“ nicht die Substanz des Menschen, sondern etwas heißt, das in der Natur oder Substanz steht.

13. Was aber die lateinischen Worte substantia und accidens belangt, weil es nicht Heiliger Schrift Worte sind, dazu dem gemeinen Mann unbekannt, sollen dieselben in den Predigten vor dem gemeinen unverständigen Volke nicht gebraucht, sondern des einfältigen Volks damit versehen werden.

Aber in der Schule bei den Gelehrten, weil sie wohl bekannt und ohne allen Mißverstand gebraucht, dadurch das Wesen eines jeden Dings, und was ihm zufälligerweise anhängt, eigentlich unterschieben [wird], werden solche Worte auch billig in der Disputation von der Erbsünde gehalten.

Denn der Unterschied zwischen Gottes und des Teufels Werk auf das deutlichste dadurch angezeigt [wird], weil der Teufel keine Substanz schafft, sondern allein zufälligerweise aus Gottes Verhängnis die von Gott erschaffene Substanz verderben kann.

II.

Vom freien Willen.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Die Hauptfrage in diesem Zwiespalt.

Nachdem des Menschen Wille in vier ungleichen Ständen gefunden, nämlich 1. vor dem Fall, 2. nach dem Fall, 3. nach der Wiedergeburt, 4. nach der Auferstehung des Fleisches, ist [so ist hier doch] die Hauptfrage allein von dem Willen und Vermögen des Menschen im andern Stande, was derselbe nach dem Fall unserer ersten Eltern vor seiner Wiedergeburt aus ihm [aus sich] selbst in geistlichen Sachen für Kräfte habe, und ob er vermöge, aus seinen eigenen Kräften, zuvor und ehe er durch den Geist Gottes wiedergeboren, sich zur Gnade Gottes [zu] schiden und [zu] bereiten und die durch den Heiligen Geist im Wort und heiligen Sakramenten angebotene Gnade an[zuh]nehmen oder nicht.

lominus corrupta est per originale peccatum, quod nobis ratione corrupti seminis agnatum est, quod ipsum etiam scaturigo est omnium aliorum actualium peccatorum, ut sunt pravae cogitationes, prava colloquia, prave et scelerate facta. Sic enim scriptum legimus Matth. 15, 19: Ex corde oriuntur cogitationes malae; et alibi, Gen. 6, 5; 8, 21: Omne figmentum cordis tantummodo malum est a pueritia.

22] XII. Est etiam diligenter observanda varia significatio vocabuli naturae, cuius aequivocatione Manichaei abutentes errorem suum occultant, multosque simplices homines in errorem inducunt. Quandoque enim natura ipsam hominis substantiam significat, ut cum dicimus: Deus humanam naturam creavit. Interdum vero per vocabulum naturae intelligitur ingenium, conditio, defectus aut vitium alicuius rei, in ipsa natura insitum et inherens, ut cum dicimus: Serpentis natura est icere; hominis natura est peccare et peccatum. Et in hac posteriore significatione vocabulum naturae non ipsam hominis substantiam, sed aliquid, quod in natura aut substantia fixum inheret, denotat.

23] XIII. Quod vero ad Latina vocabula substantiae et accidentis attinet, cum [R. 578] ea non sint Scripturae Sacrae vocabula, praeterea etiam a plebe non intelligantur, abstinendum est ab illis in publicis sacris concionibus, ubi indocta plebs docetur, et hac in re simplicium et rudiorum merito habenda est ratio.

24] In scholis autem et apud homines doctos (quibus horum vocabulorum significatio nota est, et qui iisdem recte atque citra abusum uti possunt, proprie discernentes essentiam alicuius rei ab eo, quod aliunde ei accidit et per accidens inheret), in disputatione de peccato originis retinenda sunt.

25] Nam hisce vocabulis discrimen inter opus Dei et inter opus diaboli quam maxime perspicue explicari potest. Diabolus enim substantiam nullam creare, sed tantummodo per accidens, permittente Domino, substantiam a Deo creatam depravare potest.

II.

DE LIBERO ARBITRIO.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1] Cum hominis voluntas quadruplicem habeat considerationem, primo ante lapsum, secundo post lapsum, tertio post regenerationem, quarto post resurrectionem carnis, nunc quaestio praecipua est tantum de voluntate et viribus hominis in secundo statu, quasnam vires post lapsum primorum parentum nostrorum ante regenerationem ex se ipso habeat in rebus spiritualibus: an propriis viribus, antequam per Spiritum Dei fuerit regeneratus, possit sese ad gratiam Dei applicare et praeparare, et num gratiam divinam (quae illi per Spiritum Sanctum in Verbo et sacramentis divinitus institutis offertur) accipere et apprehendere possit necne.

spoken, no wicked deed were done, yet the nature is nevertheless corrupted through original sin, which is born in us by reason of the sinful seed, and is a fountainhead of all other actual sins, as wicked thoughts, words, and works, as it is written Matt. 15, 19: Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts. Also Gen. 6, 5; 8, 21: The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth.

12. Thus there is also to be noted well the diverse signification of the word nature, whereby the Manicheans cover their error and lead astray many simple men. For sometimes it means the essence [the very substance] of man, as when it is said: God created human nature. But at other times it means the disposition and the vicious quality [disposition, condition, defect, or vice] of a thing, which inheres in the nature or essence, as when it is said: The nature of the serpent is to bite, and the nature and disposition of man is to sin, and is sin; here the word nature does not mean the substance of man, but something that inheres in the nature or substance.

13. But as to the Latin terms substantia and accidens, because they are not words of Holy Scripture, and besides unknown to the ordinary man, they should not be used in sermons before ordinary, uninstructed people, but simple people should be spared them.

But in the schools, among the learned, these words are rightly retained in disputations concerning original sin, because they are well known and used without any misunderstanding, to distinguish exactly between the essence of a thing and what attaches to it in an accidental way.

For the distinction between God's work and that of the devil is thereby designated in the clearest way, because the devil can create no substance, but can only, in an accidental way, by the providence of God [God permitting], corrupt the substance created by God.

II.

OF FREE WILL.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in This Controversy.

Since the will of man is found in four unlike states, namely: 1. before the Fall; 2. since the Fall; 3. after regeneration; 4. after the resurrection of the body, the chief question is only concerning the will and ability of man in the second state, namely, what powers in spiritual things he has of himself after the fall of our first parents and before regeneration, and whether he is able by his own powers, prior to and before his regeneration by God's Spirit, to dispose and prepare himself for God's grace, and to accept [and apprehend], or not, the grace offered through the Holy Ghost in the Word and holy [divinely instituted] Sacraments.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Keine Lehre vermöge Gottes Wortes von diesem Artikel.

1. Hierbon ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Erkenntnis, daß des Menschen Verstand und Vernunft in geistlichen Sachen blind, nichts verstehe aus seinen eigenen Kräften, wie geschrieben steht: „Der natürliche Mensch vernimmt nichts vom Geist Gottes; es ist ihm eine Torheit und kann es nicht begreifen, wenn er wird von geistlichen Sachen gefragt“, 1 Kor. 2.

2. Desgleichen glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß des Menschen unwiedergeborener Wille nicht allein von Gott abgemendet, sondern auch ein Feind Gottes worden [geworden ist], daß er nur Lust und Willen hat zum Bösen und was Gott zuwider ist, wie geschrieben steht: „Das Dichten des Menschenherzens ist böse von Jugend auf“, Gen. 8; item: „Fleischlich gennet sein ist eine Feindschaft wider Gott, insofern es dem Gesetz nicht untertan ist, denn es vermag es auch nicht“, Röm. 8. Ja, so wenig ein toter Leib sich selbst lebendig machen kann zum leiblichen, irdischen Leben, so wenig mag [kann] der Mensch, so durch die Sünde geistlich tot ist, sich selbst zum geistlichen Leben aufrichten; wie geschrieben steht: „Da wir tot waren in Sünden, hat er uns samt Christo lebendig gemacht“, Eph. 2. Darum wir auch „aus uns selbst, als aus uns, nicht tüchtig sind, etwas Gutes zu bedenken, sondern daß wir tüchtig sind, daß ist von Gott“, 2 Kor. 3.

3. Die Bekehrung aber wirkt Gott der Heilige Geist nicht ohne Mittel, sondern gebraucht dazu die Predigt und das Gehör Gottes Wortes, wie geschrieben steht: „Das Evangelium ist eine Kraft Gottes, selig zu machen“, Röm. 1; item: „Der Glaube kommt aus dem Gehör Gottes Wortes“, Röm. 10. Und ist Gottes Wille, daß man sein Wort hören und nicht die Ohren verstopfen solle, Ps. 95. Bei solchem Wort ist der Heilige Geist gegenwärtig und tut auf die Herzen, daß sie, wie die Lydia in der Apostelgeschichte am 16. Kapitel, darauf merken und also belehrt werden allein durch die Gnade und Kraft des Heiligen Geistes, dessen Werk allein ist die Bekehrung des Menschen. Denn ohne seine Gnade ist unser Wollen und Laufen, unser Pflanzen, Säen und Begießen alles nichts, Röm. 9; 1 Kor. 3, wenn er nicht das Gedeihen dazu verleiht, wie Christus sagt: „Ohne mich vermögt ihr nichts.“ Mit welchen kurzen Worten er dem freien Willen seine Kräfte abspricht und alles der Gnade Gottes zuschreibt, damit sich nicht jemand vor Gott rühmen möchte, 1 Kor. 9, 16.

NEGATIVA.

Widerwärtige falsche Lehre.

Demnach verwerten und verdammen wir alle nachfolgenden Irrtümer als der Richtschnur Gottes Wortes zuwider:

1. Den Schwarm der Philosophen, so man Stoicos genennet [genannt] hat, wie auch die Manichäer, die gelehrt haben, daß alles, was geschehe,

AFFIRMATIVA.

[R. 579]

Sincera doctrina de hoc articulo, cum immota regula Verbi divini congruens.

2) I. De hoc negotio haec est fides, doctrina et confessio nostra, quod videlicet hominis intellectus et ratio in rebus spiritualibus prorsus sint caeca, nihilque propriis viribus intelligere possint, sicut scriptum est 1 Cor. 2, 14: Animalis homo non percipit ea, quae sunt Spiritus; stultitia illi est et non potest intelligere, quia de spiritualibus examinatur.

3) II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur etiam, voluntatem hominis nondum renatam non tantum a Deo esse aversam, verum etiam inimicam Deo factam, ita ut tantummodo ea velit et cupiat iisque delectetur, quae mala sunt et voluntati divinae repugnant. Scriptum est enim Gen. 8, 21: Sensus et cogitatio humani cordis in malum prona sunt ab adulescentia sua. Item, Rom. 8, 7: Affectus carnis inimicitia est adversus Deum, neque enim legi subicitur, ac ne potest id quidem. Itaque credimus, quantum adest, ut corpus mortuum se ipsum vivificare atque sibi ipsi corporalem vitam restituere possit, tantum abesse, ut homo, qui ratione peccati spiritualiter mortuus est, se ipsum in vitam spirituales revocandi ullam facultatem habeat, sicut scriptum est Eph. 2, 5: Cum essemus mortui in peccatis, convivificavit nos cum Christo etc. 2 Cor. 3, 5: Itaque etiam ex nobismet ipsis, tamquam ex nobis, non sumus idonei, ut aliquid boni cogitemus; quod vero idonei sumus, id ipsum a Deo est.

4) III. Conversionem autem hominis operatur Spiritus Sanctus non sine mediis, sed ad eam efficiendam uti solet praedicatione et auscultatione Verbi Dei, sicut scriptum est Rom. 1, 16: Evangelium est potentia Dei [R. 580 5] ad salutem omni credenti; et Rom. 10, 17: Fides est ex auditu Verbi Dei. Et sane vult Dominus, ut ipsius Verbum audiatur, neque ad illius praedicationem aures obdurentur [obturentur], Ps. 95, 8. Huic Verbo adest praesens Spiritus Sanctus et corda hominum aperit, ut, sicut Lydia in Actis Apostolicis, 16, 14, diligenter attendant et ita convertantur sola gratia et virtute Spiritus Sancti, cuius unius 6) et solius opus est hominis conversio. Si enim Spiritus Sancti gratia absit, nostrum velle et currere, nostrum plantare, seminare et rigare prorsus frustranea sunt, Rom. 9, 16; 1 Cor. 3, 7; si videlicet ille incrementum non largiatur, sicut Christus inquit, Ioh. 15, 5: Sine me nihil potestis facere. Et hic quidem paucis verbis Christus libero arbitrio omnes vires derogat, omniaque gratiae divinae ascribit, ne quis coram Deo habeat, de quo gloriatur, 1 Cor. 1, 29 [2 Cor. 12, 5]; Ier. 9, 23.

NEGATIVA.

Relectio contrariae et falsae doctrinae.

7) Repudiamus igitur et damnamus omnes, quos iam recitabimus, errores cum Verbi divini regula non congruentes:

8) I. Primo delirum philosophorum Stoicorum dogma, quemadmodum et Manichaeorum furorem, qui docuerunt omnia, quae eveniant,

AFFIRMATIVA.

The Pure Doctrine concerning This Article, according to God's Word.

1. Concerning this subject, our doctrine, faith, and confession is, that in spiritual things the understanding and reason of man are [altogether] blind, and by their own powers understand nothing, as it is written 1 Cor. 2, 14: The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; neither can he know them when he is examined concerning spiritual things.

2. Likewise we believe, teach, and confess that the unregenerate will of man is not only turned away from God, but also has become an enemy of God, so that it only has an inclination and desire for that which is evil and contrary to God, as it is written Gen. 8, 21: The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. Also Rom. 8, 7: The carnal mind is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the Law of God, neither, indeed, can be. Yea, as little as a dead body can quicken itself to bodily, earthly life, so little can man, who by sin is spiritually dead, raise himself to spiritual life, as it is written Eph. 2, 5: Even when we were dead in sins, He hath quickened us together with Christ; 2 Cor. 3, 5: Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything good as of ourselves, but that we are sufficient is of God.

3. God the Holy Ghost, however, does not effect conversion without means, but uses for this purpose the preaching and hearing of God's Word, as it is written Rom. 1, 16: The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Also Rom. 10, 17: Faith cometh by hearing of the Word of God. And it is God's will that His Word should be heard, and that man's ears should not be closed. Ps. 95, 8. With this Word the Holy Ghost is present, and opens hearts, so that they, as Lydia in Acts 16, 14, are attentive to it, and are thus converted alone through the grace and power of the Holy Ghost, whose work alone the conversion of man is. For without His grace, and if He do not grant the increase, our willing and running, our planting, sowing, and watering, all are nothing, as Christ says John 15, 5: Without Me ye can do nothing. With these brief words He denies to the free will its powers, and ascribes everything to God's grace, in order that no one may boast before God. 1 Cor. 1, 29; 2 Cor. 12, 5; Jer. 9, 23.

NEGATIVA.

Contrary False Doctrine.

Accordingly, we reject and condemn all the following errors as contrary to the standard of God's Word:

1. The delirium [insane dogma] of philosophers who are called Stoics, as also of the Manicheans, who taught that everything that müsse also geschehen und könne nicht anders geschehen, und daß der Mensch alles aus Zwang tue, was er auch in äußerlichen Dingen handle, und zu bösen Werken und Taten, als Unzucht, Raub, Mord, Diebstahl und dergleichen, gezwungen werde.

2. Wir verwerfen auch der groben Pelagianer Irrtum, die gelehrt haben, daß der Mensch aus eigenen Kräften ohne die Gnade des Heiligen Geistes sich selbst zu Gott bekehren, dem Evangelio glauben, dem Geseze Gottes mit Herzen gehorsamen und also Vergebung der Sünden und ewiges Leben verdienen könne.

3. Wir verwerfen auch der Halbpelagianer Irrtum, welche lehren, daß der Mensch aus eigenen Kräften den Anfang seiner Bekehrung machen, aber ohne die Gnade des Heiligen Geistes nicht vollbringen möge.

4. Item, da gelehrt wird, obwohl der Mensch mit seinem freien Willen vor seiner Wiedergeburt zu schwach, den Anfang zu machen und sich selbst aus eigenen Kräften zu Gott zu bekehren und Gottes Gesez von Herzen gehorsam zu sein, jedoch, wenn der Heilige Geist mit der Predigt des Wortes den Anfang gemacht und seine Gnade darin angedeihen, daß alsdann der Wille des Menschen aus seinen eigenen natürlichen Kräften etlichermaßen etwas, wievielwohl wenig und schwächlich, dazu tun, helfen und mitwirken, sich selbst zur Gnade schiden, bereiten, dieselbe ergreifen, annehmen und dem Evangelio glauben könne.

5. Item, daß der Mensch, nachdem er wiedergeboren, das Gesez Gottes vollkommen halten und gänzlich erfüllen könne, und daß solche Erfüllung unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott sei, mit welcher wir das ewige Leben verdienen.

6. Item, wir verwerfen und verdammen auch den Irrtum der Enthufiasten, welche dichten, daß Gott ohne Mittel, ohne Gehör Gottes Wort, auch ohne Gebrauch der heiligen Sakramente, die Menschen zu sich ziehe, erleuchte, gerecht und selig mache. (Enthufiasten heißen, die ohne die Predigt Gottes Wort auf himmlische Erleuchtung des Geistes warten.)

7. Item, daß Gott in der Bekehrung und Wiedergeburt des alten Adams Substanz und Wesen und sonderlich die vernünftige Seele ganz vertilge und ein neues Wesen der Seele aus nichts in der Bekehrung und Wiedergeburt erschaffe.

8. Item, wenn diese Reden ohne Erklärung gebraucht werden, daß des Menschen Wille vor, in und nach der Bekehrung dem Heiligen Geist widerstrebe, und daß der Heilige Geist gegeben werde denen, so ihm vorzüglich und beharrlich widerstreben; denn Gott in der Bekehrung aus dem Unwilligen Willige macht und in den Willigen wohnt, wie Augustinus redet.

Was [so]dann die Reden der alten und neuen Kirchenlehrer belangt, als da gesagt wird: Deus trahit, sed volentem trahit, das ist: Gott zieht [zieht], zieht aber, die da wollen; item: Homini voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid, das ist: Des Menschen Wille ist nicht müßig in der Bekehrung, sondern wirkt auch etwas: weil solche Reden zur Befähigung des natürlichen freien Willens in der Bekehrung des necessario fieri, et aliter fieri prorsus non posse, et hominem omnia coactum facere, etiam ea, quae in rebus externis agat, eumque ad designanda mala opera et scelera (qualia sunt libidines vagae, rapinae, caedes, furta et similia) cogi.

9) II. Repudiamus etiam crassum illum Pelagianorum errorem, qui asserere non dubitarunt, quod homo propriis viribus, sine gratia Spiritus Sancti sese ad Deum convertere, evangelio credere, legi divinae ex animo [R. 581] parere et hac ratione peccatorum remissionem ac vitam aeternam ipse promereri valeat.

10) III. Praeter hos errores reiicimus et Semipelagianorum falsum dogma, qui docent, hominem propriis viribus inchoare posse suam conversionem, absolvere autem sine Spiritus Sancti gratia non posse.

11) IV. Item, cum docetur, licet homo non renatus, ratione liberi arbitrii, ante sui regenerationem infirmior quidem sit, quam ut conversionis suae initium facere atque propriis viribus sese ad Deum convertere et legi Dei toto corde parere valeat, tamen, si Spiritus Sanctus praedicatione Verbi initium fecerit suamque gratiam in Verbo homini obtulerit, tum hominis voluntatem propriis et naturalibus suis viribus quodammodo aliquid, licet id modicum, infirmum et languidum admodum sit, conversionem adiuvere atque cooperari et se ipsam ad gratiam applicare, praeparare, eam apprehendere, amplecti et evangelio credere posse.

12) V. Item, hominem post regenerationem legem Dei perfecte observare atque implere posse, eamque impletionem esse nostram coram Deo iustitiam, qua vitam aeternam promereamur.

13) VI. Reiicimus etiam damnamusque Enthusiastarum errorem, qui fingunt, Deum immediate, absque Verbi Dei auditu et sine sacramentorum usu, homines ad se trahere, illuminare, iustificare et salvare. (Enthusiastae vocantur, qui neglecta praedicatione Verbi divini coelestes revelationes Spiritus expectant.)

14) VII. Item, Deum in conversione et regeneratione hominis substantiam et essentiam veteris Adami et praecipue animam rationalem penitus abolere, novamque animae essentiam ex nihilo in illa conversione et regeneratione creare.

15) VIII. Item, cum hi sermones citra declarationem usurpantur, quod videlicet hominis voluntas ante conversionem, in ipsa conversione et post conversionem Spiritui [R. 582] Sancto repugnet, et quod Spiritus Sanctus iis detur, qui ex proposito et pertinaciter ipsi resistunt. Nam Deus in conversione ex nolentibus volentes facit et in volentibus habitat, ut Augustinus loqui solet.

16) Quod vero ad dicta quaedam tum patrum tum neotericorum quorundam doctorum attinet: Deus trahit, sed volentem trahit, et: Homini voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid: iudicamus, haec formae sanorum verborum non esse analoga. Afferuntur enim haec dicta ad confirmandam falsam opinionem de viribus humani arbitrii in hominis conversione contra doctrinam, quae happens must so happen, and cannot happen otherwise, and that everything that man does, even in outward things, he does by compulsion, and that he is coerced to evil works and deeds, as in chastity, robbery, murder, theft, and the like.

2. We reject also the error of the gross Pelagians, who taught that man by his own powers, without the grace of the Holy Ghost, can turn himself to God, believe the Gospel, be obedient from the heart to God's Law, and thus merit the forgiveness of sins and eternal life.

3. We reject also the error of the Semi-Pelagians, who teach that man by his own powers can make a beginning of his conversion, but without the grace of the Holy Ghost cannot complete it.

4. Also, when it is taught that, although man by his free will before regeneration is too weak to make a beginning, and by his own powers to turn himself to God, and from the heart to be obedient to God, yet, if the Holy Ghost by the preaching of the Word has made a beginning, and therein offered His grace, then the will of man from its own natural powers can add something, though little and feebly, to this end, can help and cooperate, qualify and prepare itself for grace, and embrace and accept it, and believe the Gospel.

5. Also, that man, after he has been born again, can perfectly observe and completely fulfil God's Law, and that this fulfilling is our righteousness before God, by which we merit eternal life.

6. Also, we reject and condemn the error of the Enthusiasts, who imagine that God without means, without the hearing of God's Word, also without the use of the holy Sacraments, draws men to Himself, and enlightens, justifies, and saves them. (Enthusiasts we call those who expect the heavenly illumination of the Spirit [celestial revelations] without the preaching of God's Word.)

7. Also, that in conversion and regeneration God entirely exterminates the substance and essence of the old Adam, and especially the rational soul, and in conversion and regeneration creates a new essence of the soul out of nothing.

8. Also, when the following expressions are employed without explanation, namely, that the will of man before, in, and after conversion resists the Holy Ghost, and that the Holy Ghost is given to those who resist Him intentionally and persistently; for, as Augustine says, in conversion God makes willing persons out of the unwilling and dwells in the willing.

As to the expressions of ancient and modern teachers of the Church, when it is said: Deus trahit, sed volentem trahit, i. e., God draws, but He draws the willing; likewise, Hominis voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid, i. e., In conversion the will of man is not idle, but also effects something, we maintain that, inasmuch as these expressions have been introduced for confirming [the false opinion concerning] the powers

Menschen wider die Lehre von der Gnade Gottes eingeführt, halten wir, daß sie der Form der gesunden Lehre nicht ähnlich und demnach, wenn von der Belehrung zu Gott geredet wird, billig zu meiden seien.

Dagegen aber wird recht geredet, daß Gott in der Belehrung durch das Ziehen des Heiligen Geistes aus widerspenstigen, unwilligen willige Menschen mache, und daß nach solcher Belehrung in täglicher Übung der Buße des Menschen wiedergeborener Wille nicht müßig gehe, sondern in allem Wirken [in allen Werken] des Heiligen Geistes, die er durch uns tut, auch mitwirkt.

9. Item, das Doctor Luther geschrieben, daß des Menschen Wille in seiner Belehrung sich halte pure passive, das ist, daß er ganz und gar nichts tue, daß solches zu verstehen sei respectu divinae gratiae in accendendis novis motibus, das ist, wenn der Geist Gottes durch das gehörte Wort oder durch den [Ge]brauch der heiligen Sacramente des Menschen Willen angreift und wirkt die neue Geburt und Belehrung; denn so der Heilige Geist solches gewirkt und ausgerichtet [hat], und des Menschen Wille allein durch seine göttliche Kraft und Wirkung geändert und erneuert [ist], alsdann ist der neue Wille des Menschen ein Instrument und Werkzeug Gottes des Heiligen Geistes, daß er nicht allein die Gnade annimmt, sondern auch in folgenden Werken des Heiligen Geistes mitwirkt.

Daß also vor der Belehrung des Menschen nur zwei wirkliche [bewirkende] Ursachen sich finden, nämlich der Heilige Geist und das Wort Gottes, als das Instrument des Heiligen Geistes, dadurch er die Belehrung wirkt, welches der Mensch hören soll, aber demselben nicht aus eigenen Kräften, sondern allein durch die Gnade und Wirkung Gottes des Heiligen Geistes Glauben geben und [es] annehmen kann.

III.

Von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Hauptfrage in diesem Zwiespalt.

Weil einhellig vermöge Gottes Worts und nach Inhalt der Augsburgerischen Konfession in unsern Kirchen bekant [wird], daß wir armen Sünder allein durch den Glauben an Christum vor Gott gerecht und selig werden, und also Christus allein unsere Gerechtigkeit sei, welcher wahrhaftiger Gott und Mensch ist, weil in ihm die göttliche und menschliche Natur miteinander persönlich vereinigt [sind], Jer. 23; 1 Kor. 1; 2 Kor. 5, ist eine Frage entstanden, nach welcher Natur Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei, und [sind] also zwei widerwärtige Irrtümer in etlichen Kirchen eingefallen.

Denn der eine Teil hat gehalten, daß Christus allein nach der Gottheit unsere Gerechtigkeit sei, wenn er durch den Glauben in uns wohnt, gegen welcher durch den Glauben einwohnenden Gottheit aller Menschen Sünde wie ein Tropfen Wasser soli gratiae divinae id opus attribuit. Ideoque ab eiusmodi sermonibus, quando de conversatione hominis ad Deum agitur, abstinendum censemus.

17) Contra autem recte docetur, quod Dominus in conversione per Spiritus Sancti tractionem (id est, motum et operationem) ex hominibus repugnantibus et nolentibus volentes homines faciat, et quod post conversionem in quotidianis poenitentiae exercitiis hominis renati voluntas non sit otiosa, sed omnibus Spiritus Sancti operibus, quae ille per nos efficit, etiam cooperetur.

18) IX. Item, quod D. Lutherus scripsit, hominis voluntatem in conversione pure passive se habere, id recte et dextre est accipiendum, videlicet respectu divinae gratiae in accendendis novis motibus, hoc est, de eo intelligi oportet, quando Spiritus Dei per Verbum auditum aut per usum sacramentorum hominis voluntatem aggreditur et conversionem atque regenerationem in homine operatur. Postquam enim Spiritus Sanctus hoc ipsum iam operatus est atque effecit, hominisque voluntatem sola sua divina virtute et operatione immutavit atque renovavit, tunc revera hominis nova illa voluntas instrumentum est et organon Dei Spiritus Sancti, ut ea [R. 583] non modo gratiam apprehendat, verum etiam in operibus sequentibus Spiritui Sancto cooperetur.

19) Relinquantur igitur ante conversionem hominis duae tantum efficientes causae (ad conversionem efficaces), nimirum Spiritus Sanctus et Verbum Dei, quod est instrumentum Spiritus Sancti, quo conversionem hominis efficit. Hoc Verbum homo certe audire debet, sed tamen, ut illud ipsum vera fide amplectatur, id nequaquam suis viribus propriis, sed sola gratia et operatione Dei Spiritus Sancti obtinere potest.

III.

DE IUSTITIA FIDEI CORAM DEO.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Unanimi consensu (ad normam Verbi divini 1) et sententiam Augustanae Confessionis) in ecclesiis nostris docetur, nos peccatores longe miserimos sola in Christum fide coram Deo iustificari et salvari, ita ut Christus solus nostra sit iustitia. Hic autem Iesus Christus, Salvator noster et iustitia nostra, verus Deus est et verus homo: etenim divina et humana naturae in ipso sunt personaliter unitae, Ier. 23, 6; 1 Kor. 1, 30; 2 Kor. 5, 21. Quaesitum igitur fuit, secundum quam naturam Christus nostra sit iustitia. Et hac occasione duo errores, et quidem inter se pugnantes, ecclesias quasdam perturbarunt.

2) Una enim pars sensit, Christum tantummodo secundum divinam naturam esse nostram iustitiam, si videlicet ille per fidem in nobis habitet; etenim omnia hominum peccata, collata nimirum cum illa per fidem inof the natural free will in man's conversion, against the doctrine of God's grace, they do not conform to the form of sound doctrine, and therefore, when we speak of conversion to God, justly ought to be avoided.

But, on the other hand, it is correctly said that in conversion God, through the drawing of the Holy Ghost, makes out of stubborn and unwilling men willing ones, and that after such conversion in the daily exercise of repentance the regenerate will of man is not idle, but also cooperates in all the works of the Holy Ghost, which He performs through us.

9. Also what Dr. Luther has written, namely, that man's will in his conversion is pure passive, that is, that it does nothing whatever, is to be understood respectu divinae gratiae in accendendis novis motibus, that is, when God's Spirit, through the Word heard or the use of the holy Sacraments, lays hold upon man's will, and works [in man] the new birth and conversion. For when [after] the Holy Ghost has wrought and accomplished this, and man's will has been changed and renewed by His divine power and working alone, then the new will of man is an instrument and organ of God the Holy Ghost, so that he not only accepts grace, but also cooperates with the Holy Ghost in the works which follow.

Therefore, before the conversion of man there are only two efficient causes, namely, the Holy Ghost and the Word of God, as the instrument of the Holy Ghost, by which He works conversion. This Word man is [indeed] to hear; however, it is not by his own powers, but only through the grace and working of the Holy Ghost that he can yield faith to it and accept it.

III.

OF THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH BEFORE GOD.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in This Controversy.

Since it is unanimously confessed in our churches, in accordance with God's Word and the sense of the Augsburg Confession, that we poor sinners are justified before God and saved alone by faith in Christ, and thus Christ alone is our Righteousness, who is true God and man, because in Him the divine and human natures are personally united with one another, Jer. 23, 6; 1 Cor. 1, 30; 2 Cor. 5, 21, the question has arisen: According to which nature is Christ our Righteousness? and thus two contrary errors have arisen in some churches.

For the one side has held that Christ according to His divinity alone is our Righteousness, if He dwell in us by faith; con-gegen dem großen Meer [gegen welche durch den Glauben einnehmende Gottheit aller Menschen Sünde wie ein Tropfen Wasser gegen das große Meer] geachtet sei. Dagegen haben andere gehalten, Christus sei unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott allein nach der menschlichen Natur.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Keine Lehre der christlichen Kirche wider beide jetzt gesetzten Irrthümer.

1. Wider beide jetzt erzählten Irrthümer glauben, lehren und bekennen wir einhelliglich, daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit weder nach der göttlichen Natur allein noch auch nach der menschlichen Natur allein, sondern der ganze Christus nach beiden Naturen allein in seinem Gehorsam sei, den er als Gott und Mensch dem Vater bis in Tod geleistet und uns damit Vergebung der Sünden und das ewige Leben verdient habe; wie geschrieben steht: „Gleichwie durch eines Menschen Ungehorsam viel Sünder worden, also durch eines Menschen Gehorsam werden viele gerecht“, Röm. 5.

2. Demnach glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott sei, daß uns Gott die Sünde vergibt aus lauter Gnade, ohne alle unsere vor[her]gehenden, gegenwärtigen oder nachfolgenden Werke, Verdienst oder Würdigkeit, schenkt und rechnet uns zu die Gerechtigkeit des Gehorsams Christi, um welcher Gerechtigkeit willen wir bei Gott zu Gnaden angenommen und für gerecht gehalten werden.

3. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß allein der Glaube das Mittel und das Werkzeug sei, damit wir Christum und also in Christo solche Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott gilt, ergreifen, um welches willen uns solcher Glaube zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet wird, Röm. 4.

4. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß dieser Glaube nicht sei eine bloße Erkenntnis der Historie von Christo, sondern eine solche Gabe Gottes, dadurch wir Christum, unsern Erlöser, im Wort des Evangelii recht erkennen und auf ihn vertrauen, daß wir allein um seines Gehorsams willen aus Gnaden Vergebung der Sünden haben, für fromm und gerecht vor Gott dem Vater gehalten und ewig selig werden.

5. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß nach Art heiliger Schrift das Wort „rechtfertigen“ in diesem Artikel heiße absolvieren, das ist, von Sünden ledig sprechen. „Wer den Gottlosen recht spricht und den Gerechten verdammet, der ist vor dem Herrn ein Greuel“, Prov. 17; item: „Wer will die Auserwählten Gottes beschuldigen? Gott ist hier, der da gerecht machet“, Röm. 8.

Und da an desselben Statt die Worte regenerationis und vivificationis, das ist, Lebendigmachung und Wiedergeburt, gebraucht [werden], wie in der Apologia geschieht, daß es auch in gleichem Verstand geschehe, dadurch sonst die Erneuerung des Menschen verstanden und von der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens unterschieden wird.

6. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, unangesehen daß den Rechtgläubigen und wahrhaftig Wiedergeborenen auch noch viel Schwachheit und Gebrechen anhängt bis in die Grube, da sie doch habitante divinitate, esse instar unius [R. 584 guttulæ aquæ cum magno mari comparatæ. Contra hanc opinionem alii quidam asseruerunt, Christum esse nostram coram Deo iustitiam duntaxat secundum humanam naturam.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera doctrina piarum ecclesiarum, utrique commemorato errori opposita.

3) I. Ad refellendum utrumque errorem credimus, docemus et confitemur unanimiter, quod Christus vere sit nostra iustitia, sed tamen neque secundum solam divinam naturam, neque secundum solam humanam naturam, sed totus Christus secundum utramque naturam in sola videlicet obedientia sua, quam Patri ad mortem usque abolutissimam Deus et homo præstitit, eaque nobis peccatorum omnium remissionem et vitam æternam promeruit. Sicut scriptum est: Sicut per inobedientiam unius hominis peccatores constituti sunt multi, ita et per unius obedientiam iusti constituentur multi, Rom. 5, 19.

4) II. Credimus igitur, docemus et confitemur, hoc ipsum nostram esse coram Deo iustitiam, quod Dominus nobis peccata remittit ex mera gratia, absque ullo respectu præcedentium, præsentium aut consequentium nostrorum operum, dignitatis aut meriti. Ille enim donat atque imputat nobis iustitiam obedientiae Christi; propter eam iustitiam a Deo in gratiam recipimur et iusti reputamur.

5) III. Credimus etiam, docemus et confitemur, solam fidem esse illud medium et instrumentum, quo Christum Salvatorem et ita in Christo iustitiam illam, quæ coram iudicio Dei consistere potest, apprehendimus; propter Christum enim fides illa nobis ad iustitiam imputatur, Rom. 4, 5.

6) IV. Credimus præterea, docemus [R. 585 et confitemur, fidem illam iustificantem non esse nudam notitiam historiae de Christo, sed ingens atque tale Dei donum, quo Christum, Redemptorem nostrum, in verbo evangelii recte agnoscimus ipsique confidimus, quod videlicet propter solam ipsius obedientiam ex gratia remissionem peccatorum habeamus, sancti et iusti coram Deo Patre reputemur et æternam salutem consequamur.

7) V. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, vocabulum iustificare phrasi Scripturæ Sacrae in hoc articulo idem significare, quod abolvere a peccatis, ut ex dicto Salomonis, Prov. 17, 15, intelligi potest: Qui iustificat impium, et qui condemnat iustum, abominabilis est uterque apud Deum. Item Rom. 8, 33: Quis accusabit electos Dei? Deus est, qui iustificat.

8) Et si quando pro vocabulo iustificationis vocabula regenerationis et vivificationis usurpantur (quod in Apologia Augustanae Confessionis factum est), sunt ea in illa superiore significatione accipienda. Nam alias eae voces de hominis renovatione intelligendae sunt, quæ a fidei iustificatione recte discernitur.

9) VI. Credimus, docemus et confitemur etiam, etsi vere in Christum credentes et renati multis infirmitatibus et naevis usque ad mortem sunt obnoxii, non tamen illis vel de trasted with this divinity, dwelling in us by faith, the sins of all men must be regarded as a drop of water compared to the great ocean. Others, on the contrary, have held that Christ is our Righteousness before God according to the human nature alone.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Pure Doctrine of the Christian Churches against Both Errors Just Mentioned.

1. Against both the errors just recounted, we unanimously believe, teach, and confess that Christ is our Righteousness neither according to the divine nature alone nor according to the human nature alone, but that it is the entire Christ according to both natures, in His obedience alone, which as God and man He rendered to the Father even unto death, and thereby merited for us the forgiveness of sins and eternal life, as it is written: As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous, Rom. 5, 19.

2. Accordingly, we believe, teach, and confess that our righteousness before God is [this very thing], that God forgives us our sins out of pure grace, without any work, merit, or worthiness of ours preceding, present, or following, that He presents and imputes to us the righteousness of Christ's obedience, on account of which righteousness we are received into grace by God, and regarded as righteous.

3. We believe, teach, and confess that faith alone is the means and instrument whereby we lay hold of Christ, and thus in Christ of that righteousness which avails before God, for whose sake this faith is imputed to us for righteousness, Rom. 4, 5.

4. We believe, teach, and confess that this faith is not a bare knowledge of the history of Christ, but such a gift of God by which we come to the right knowledge of Christ as our Redeemer in the Word of the Gospel, and trust in Him that for the sake of His obedience alone we have, by grace, the forgiveness of sins, are regarded as holy and righteous before God the Father, and eternally saved.

5. We believe, teach, and confess that according to the usage of Holy Scripture the word justify means in this article, to absolve, that is, to declare free from sins. Prov. 17, 15: He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the righteous, even they both are abomination to the Lord. Also Rom. 8, 33: Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth.

And when, in place of this, the words regeneratio and vivificatio, that is, regeneration and vivification, are employed, as in the Apology, this is done in the same sense. By these terms, in other places, the renewal of man is understood, and distinguished from justification by faith.

6. We believe, teach, and confess also that notwithstanding the fact that many weaknesses and defects cling to the true believers and truly regenerate, even to the grave, still they must not on that account doubt either

[daß sie doch] der Ursache halben weder an ihrer Gerechtigkeit, so ihnen durch den Glauben zugerechnet, noch an ihrer Seelen Seligkeit zweifeln, sondern für gewiß halten sollen, daß sie um Christus' willen vermöge der Verheißung und Worts des heiligen Evangelii einen gnädigen Gott haben.

7. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß zur Erhaltung reiner Lehre von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott über den particulus exclusivus, das ist, über [den] nachfolgenden Worten des heiligen Apostels Pauli, dadurch der [daß] Verdienst Christi von unsern Werken gänzlich abgesondert und Christo die Ehre allein gegeben [wird], mit besonderem Fleiß zu halten sei, da der heilige Apostel Paulus schreibt: „Aus Gnaden, ohne Verdienst, ohne Gesetz, ohne Werke, nicht aus den Werken“, welche Worte alle zugleich so viel heißen als: allein durch den Glauben an Christum werden wir gerecht und selig.

8. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß, obwohl vor[her]gehende Reue und nachfolgende gute Werke nicht in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung vor Gott gehören, jedoch soll nicht ein solcher Glaube geduldet werden, der bei und neben einem bösen Vorsatz zu sündigen und wider das Gewissen zu handeln, sein und bleiben könnte; sondern nachdem der Mensch durch den Glauben gerechtfertigt worden, alsdann ist ein wahrhaftiger, lebendiger Glaube durch die Liebe tätig, Gal. 5, also daß die guten Werke dem gerechtmachenden Glauben allezeit folgen und bei demselben, da er rechtfertigen und lebendig, gewißlich erfunden werden; wie er denn nimmer allein ist, sondern allezeit Liebe und Hoffnung bei sich hat.

ANTITHESIS oder NEGATIVA.

Gegensätze verworfen.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir alle nachfolgenden Irrtümer:

1. Daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei allein nach der göttlichen Natur;

2. Daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei allein nach der menschlichen Natur;

3. Daß in den Sprüchen der Propheten und Apostel, da von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens geredet wird, die Worte „rechtfertigen“ und „gerechtfertigt werden“ nicht sollen heißen, von Sünden ledig sprechen oder gesprochen werden und Vergebung der Sünden erlangen, sondern von wegen der durch den Heiligen Geist eingegossenen Liebe, Tugend und daraus folgenden Werke mit der Tat vor Gott gerecht gemacht werden;

4. Daß der Glaube nicht allein ansehe den Gehorsam Christi, sondern seine göttliche Natur, wie dieselbe in uns wohnt und wirkt, und durch solche Einwohnung unsere Sünden bedeckt werden;

5. Daß der Glaube ein solch Vertrauen auf den Gehorsam Christi sei, welcher in einem Menschen sein und bleiben könne, der gleich keine wahrhaftige Buße habe, da auch keine Liebe folge, sondern [der Mensch] wider sein Gewissen in Sünden verharret;

6. Daß nicht Gott selbst, sondern allein die Gaben Gottes in den Gläubigen wohnen;

7. Daß der Glaube darum selig mache, weil die Erneuerung, so in der Liebe gegen Gott und den Nächsten stehe, in uns durch den Glauben angefangen werde; iustitia, quae per fidem ipsis imputatur, vel de aeterna salute esse dubitandum, quin potius firmiter illis statuendum esse, quod propter Christum iuxta promissionem et immotum verbum evangelii Deum sibi placatum habeant.

10] VII. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod ad conservandam puram doctrinam de iustitia fidei coram Deo necessarium sit, ut particulae exclusivae (quibus apostolus Paulus Christi meritum ab operibus nostris prorsus separat solique Christo eam gloriam tribuit) quam diligentissime retineantur, [R. 586 ut cum Paulus scribit: Ex gratia, gratis, sine meritis, absque lege, sine operibus, non ex operibus. Quae omnia hoc ipsum dicunt: Sola fide in Christum iustificamur et salvamur. [Eph. 2, 8; Rom. 1, 17; 3, 24; 4, 3 sqq.; Gal. 3, 11; Ebr. 11.]

11] VIII. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, etsi antecedens contritio et subsequens nova obedientia ad articulum iustificationis coram Deo non pertinent, non tamen talem fidem iustificantem esse fingendam, quae una cum malo proposito, peccandi videlicet et contra conscientiam agendi, esse et stare possit. Sed postquam homo per fidem est iustificatus, tum veram illam et vivam fidem esse per caritatem efficacem, Gal. 5, 6, et bona opera semper fidem iustificantem sequi et una cum ea, si modo vera et viva fides est, certissime deprehendi. Fides enim vera nunquam sola est, quin caritatem et spem semper secum habeat.

ANTITHESIS seu NEGATIVA.

Relectio contrariae et falsae doctrinae.

12] Repudiamus ergo et damnamus omnia falsa dogmata, quae iam recitabimus:

13] I. Christum esse iustitiam nostram solummodo secundum divinam naturam;

14] II. Christum esse iustitiam nostram tantummodo iuxta humanam naturam;

15] III. In dictis prophetis et apostolicis, ubi de iustificatione fidei agitur, vocabula iustificare et iustificari non idem esse, ac a peccatis absolvere et absolvi et remissionem peccatorum consequi, sed nos per caritatem a Spiritu Sancto infusam, per virtutes [R. 587 et per opera, quae a caritate promanant, re ipsa coram Deo iustos fieri;

16] IV. Fidem non respicere in solam Christi obedientiam, sed in divinam eius naturam, quatenus videlicet ea in nobis habitat atque efficax sit, ut per eam inhabitationem peccata nostra tegantur;

17] V. Fidem esse talem fiduciam in obedientiam Christi, quae possit in eo etiam homine permanere et consistere, qui vera poenitentia careat, et ubi caritas non sequatur, sed qui contra conscientiam in peccatis perseveret;

18] VI. Non ipsum Deum, sed tantum dona Dei in credentibus habitare;

19] VII. Fidem ideo salutem nobis conferre, quod novitas illa, quae in dilectione erga Deum et proximum consistit, per fidem in nobis inchoetur; their righteousness which has been imputed to them by faith, or the salvation of their souls, but must regard it as certain that for Christ's sake, according to the promise and [immovable] Word of the holy Gospel, they have a gracious God.

7. We believe, teach, and confess that for the preservation of the pure doctrine concerning the righteousness of faith before God it is necessary to urge with special diligence the particulæ exclusivæ, that is, the exclusive particles, i. e., the following words of the holy Apostle Paul, by which the merit of Christ is entirely separated from our works, and the honor given to Christ alone, when the holy Apostle Paul writes: Of grace, without merit, without Law, without works, not of works. All these words together mean as much as that we are justified and saved alone by faith in Christ. Eph. 2, 8; Rom. 1, 17; 3, 24; 4, 3 ff.; Gal. 3, 11; Heb. 11.

8. We believe, teach, and confess that, although the contrition that precedes, and the good works that follow, do not belong to the article of justification before God, yet one is not to imagine a faith of such a kind as can exist and abide with, and alongside of, a wicked intention to sin and to act against the conscience. But after man has been justified by faith, then a true living faith worketh by love, Gal. 5, 6, so that thus good works always follow justifying faith, and are surely found with it, if it be true and living; for it never is alone, but always has with it love and hope.

ANTITHESIS or NEGATIVA.

Contrary Doctrine Rejected.

Therefore we reject and condemn all the following errors:

1. That Christ is our Righteousness according to His divine nature alone.

2. That Christ is our Righteousness according to His human nature alone.

3. That in the sayings of the prophets and apostles where the righteousness of faith is spoken of the words justify and to be justified are not to signify declaring or being declared free from sins, and obtaining the forgiveness of sins, but actually being made righteous before God, because of love infused by the Holy Ghost, virtues, and the works following them.

4. That faith looks not only to the obedience of Christ, but to His divine nature, as it dwells and works in us, and that by this indwelling our sins are covered.

5. That faith is such a trust in the obedience of Christ as can exist and remain in a man even when he has no genuine repentance, in whom also no love follows, but who persists in sins against his conscience.

6. That not God Himself, but only the gifts of God, dwell in believers.

7. That faith saves on this account, because by faith the renewal, which consists in love to God and one's neighbor, is begun in us.

8. Daß der Glaube den Vorzug habe in der Rechtfertigung, gleichwohl gehöre auch die Erneuerung und die Liebe zu unserer Gerechtigkeit vor Gott, dergestalt daß sie wohl nicht die vornehmste Ursache unserer Gerechtigkeit, aber gleichwohl unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott ohne solche Liebe und Erneuerung nicht ganz oder vollkommen sei;

9. Daß die Gläubigen vor Gott gerechtfertigt werden und selig sein zugleich durch die zugerechnete Gerechtigkeit Christi und durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam oder zum Teil durch die Zurechnung der Gerechtigkeit Christi, zum Teil aber durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam;

10. Daß uns die Verheißung der Gnade zugeeignet werde durch den Glauben im Herzen und durch die [durch das] Bekenntnis, so mit dem Munde geschieht, und durch andere Tugenden;

11. Daß der Glaube nicht rechtfertige ohne die guten Werke, also daß die guten Werke notwendig zur Gerechtigkeit erfordert, ohne derselben Gegenwärtigkeit der Mensch nicht gerechtfertigt werden könne.

IV.

Von guten Werken.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Die Hauptfrage im Streit von den guten Werken.

Über der Lehre von guten Werken sind zweierlei Spaltungen in etlichen Kirchen entstanden. Erstlich haben sich etliche Theologen über nachfolgenden Reden getrennt, da der eine Teil geschrieben:

1. „Gute Werke sind nötig zur Seligkeit; es ist unmöglich, ohne gute Werke selig zu werden“; item: „Es ist niemals jemand ohne gute Werke selig [ge]worden“; der andere aber dagegen geschrieben: „Gute Werke sind schädlich zur Seligkeit.“

2. Danach hat sich auch zwischen etlichen Theologen über den beiden Worten „nötig“ und „frei“ eine Trennung erhoben, da der eine Teil gestritten, man solle das Wort „nötig“ nicht brauchen von dem neuen Gehorsam, der nicht aus Not und Zwang, sondern aus freiwilligem Geist herfließe; der andere Teil hat über dem Wort „nötig“ gehalten, weil solcher Gehorsam nicht in unserer Willkür stehe, sondern die wiedergeborenen Menschen schuldig seien, solchen Gehorsam zu leisten.

Aus welcher Disputation über den Worten nachmals ein Streit von der Sache an ihr selbst sich zugetragen, daß der eine Teil gestritten, man sollte ganz und gar unter den Christen das Gesetz nicht treiben, sondern allein aus dem heiligen Evangelio die Leute zu guten Werken vermahnen; der andere hat es widersprochen.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Keine Lehre der christlichen Kirche von diesem Streit.

Zu gründlicher Erklärung und Hinlegung [Beilegung] dieses Zwiespalts ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis:

1. Daß gute Werke dem wahrhaftigen Glauben, wenn derselbe nicht ein toter, sondern ein leben-

20] VIII. Fidem in iustificationis negotio primas quidem partes tenere, sed tamen etiam renovationem et caritatem ad iustitiam nostram coram Deo pertinere, ita ut renovatio et caritas quidem non sint principalis causa nostrae iustitiae, sed tamen iustitiam nostram coram Deo (si absint renovatio et caritas), non esse integram et perfectam;

21] IX. Credentes in Christum coram Deo iustos esse et salvos simul per imputatam Christi iustitiam et per inchoatam novam obedientiam, vel partim quidem per imputationem iustitiae Christi, partim vero per inchoatam novam obedientiam;

22] X. Promissionem gratiae nobis applicari per fidem in corde et praeterea etiam per confessionem, quae ore fit, et per alias virtutes;

23] XI. Fidem non iustificare sine bonis operibus, itaque bona opera necessario ad iustitiam requiri, et absque eorum praesentia hominem iustificari non posse.

IV.

DE BONIS OPERIBUS. [R. 588]

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1] In doctrina de bonis operibus duae controversiae in quibusdam ecclesiis ortae sunt:

2] I. Primum schisma inter theologos quodam factum est, cum alii assererent, bona opera necessaria esse ad salutem, impossibile esse salvari sine bonis operibus, et neminem unquam sine bonis operibus salvatum esse; alii vero docerent, bona opera ad salutem esse perniciosa.

3] II. Alterum schisma inter theologos nonnullos super vocabulis necessarium et liberum ortum est. Altera enim pars contendit, vocabulum necessarium non esse usurpandum de nova obedientia; eam enim non a necessitate quadam et coactione, sed a spontaneo spiritu promanare. Altera vero pars vocabulum necessarium prorsus retinendum censuit, propterea quod illa obedientia non in nostro arbitrio posita et libera sit, sed homines renatos illud obsequium debere praestare.

4] Et dum de commemoratis illis vocabulis disputatum est, tandem etiam de re ipsa fuit disceptatum. Alii enim contenderunt, legem apud Christianos prorsus non esse docendam, sed tantummodo doctrina evangelii homines ad bona opera invitandos esse. Alii hanc opinionem impugnarunt.

AFFIRMATIVA.

[R. 589]

Sincera ecclesiae doctrina de hac controversia.

5] Ut hae controversiae solide et dextre explicentur atque decendantur, haec nostra fides, doctrina et confessio est:

6] I. Quod bona opera veram fidem (si modo ea non sit mortua, sed viva fides) certissime

8. That faith has the first place in justification, nevertheless also renewal and love belong to our righteousness before God in such a manner that they [renewal and love] are indeed not the chief cause of our righteousness, but that nevertheless our righteousness before God is not entire or perfect without this love and renewal.

9. That believers are justified before God and saved jointly by the imputed righteousness of Christ and by the new obedience begun in them, or in part by the imputation of Christ's righteousness, but in part also by the new obedience begun in them.

10. That the promise of grace is made our own by faith in the heart, and by the confession which is made with the mouth, and by other virtues.

11. That faith does not justify without good works; so that good works are necessarily required for righteousness, and without their presence man cannot be justified.

IV.

OF GOOD WORKS.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in the Controversy concerning Good Works.

Concerning the doctrine of good works two divisions have arisen in some churches:

1. First, some theologians have become divided because of the following expressions, where the one side wrote: Good works are necessary for salvation. It is impossible to be saved without good works. Also: No one has ever been saved without good works. But the other side, on the contrary, wrote: Good works are injurious to salvation.

2. Afterwards a schism arose also between some theologians with respect to the two words necessary and free, since the one side contended that the word necessary should not be employed concerning the new obedience, which, they say, does not flow from necessity and coercion, but from a voluntary spirit. The other side insisted on the word necessary, because, they say, this obedience is not at our option, but regenerate men are obliged to render this obedience.

From this disputation concerning the terms a controversy afterwards occurred concerning the subject itself; for the one side contended that among Christians the Law should not be urged at all, but men should be exhorted to good works from the Holy Gospel alone; the other side contradicted this.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Pure Doctrine of the Christian Churches concerning This Controversy.

For the thorough statement and decision of this controversy our doctrine, faith, and confession is:

1. That good works certainly and without diger Glaube ist, gewißlich und ungeschwefelt solchen als Früchte eines guten Baumes.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß die guten Werke gleich so wohl, wenn von der Seligsigkeit gefragt wird, als im Artikel der Rechtfertigung vor Gott gänzlich ausgeschlossen werden sollen, wie der Apostel mit klaren Worten bezeugt, da er also geschrieben: „Nach welcher Weise auch David sagt, daß die Seligskeit sei allein des Menschen, welchem Gott zurechnet die Gerechtigkeit ohne Zutun der Werke, da er spricht: Selig sind die, welchen ihre Ungerechtigkeiten nicht zugerechnet wird“, Röm. 4; und abermals: „Aus Gnaden seid ihr selig worden; Gottes Gabe ist es, nicht aus den Werken, auf daß sich nicht jemand rühme“, Eph. 2.

3. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß alle Menschen, sonderlich aber die durch den Heiligen Geist wiedergeboren und erneuert [sind], schuldig seien, gute Werke zu tun.

4. In welchem Verstande die Worte „nötig“, „sollen“ und „müssen“ recht und christlich auch von den Wiedergeborenen gebraucht werden und keinesweges dem Vorbilde gesunder Worte und Reden zuwider sind.

5. Doch soll durch ermelbete Worte necessitas, necessarium, „Not“ und „notwendig“, wenn von den Wiedergeborenen geredet [wird], nicht ein Zwang, sondern allein der schuldige Gehorsam verstanden werden, welchen die Rechtgläubigen [die wahrhaft Gläubigen], soviel sie wiedergeboren, nicht aus Zwang oder Treiben des Gesetzes, sondern aus freiwilligem Geiste leisten, weil sie nicht mehr unter dem Gesetze, sondern unter der Gnade sind, Röm. 7 und 8.

6. Demnach glauben, lehren und bekennen wir auch, wenn gesagt wird: Die Wiedergeborenen tun gute Werke aus einem freien Geiste, daß solches nicht verstanden werden soll, als ob es in des wiedergeborenen Menschen Willkür stehe, Gutes zu tun oder zu lassen, wann er wolle, und gleichwohl den Glauben behalten möge, wenn er in Sünden vorzüglich verharret.

7. Welches doch anders nicht verstanden werden soll, denn wie es der Herr Christus und seine Apostel selbst erklärt [erklären], nämlich von dem freigemachten Geiste, daß er solches nicht tue aus Furcht der Strafe, wie ein Knecht, sondern aus Liebe der [aus Liebe zur] Gerechtigkeit, wie die Kinder, Röm. 8.

8. Wiewohl diese Freiwilligkeit in den auserwählten Kindern Gottes nicht vollkommen, sondern mit großer Schwachheit beladen ist, wie St. Paulus über sich selbst klagt Röm. 7, Gal. 5.

9. Welche Schwachheit doch der Herr seinen Auserwählten nicht zurechnet um des Herrn Christi willen, wie geschrieben steht: „Es ist nun nichts Verdammliches in denen, so in Christo Jesu sind“, Röm. 8.

10. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß den Glauben und die Seligskeit in uns nicht die Werke, sondern allein der Geist Gottes durch den Glauben erhalte, des Gegenwärtigkeit und Inwohnung [Einwohnung] die guten Werke zeugen sind.

atque indubitato sequantur tamquam fructus bonae arboris.

7) II. Credimus etiam, docemus et confitemur, quod bona opera penitus excludenda sint, non tantum cum de iustificatione fidei agitur, sed etiam cum de salute nostra aeterna disputatur, sicut apostolus perspicuis verbis testatur, cum ait Rom. 4, 6: Sicut et David dicit [Ps. 32, 1 sq.] beatitudinem hominis, cui Deus accepto fert iustitiam sine operibus. Beati, quorum remissae sunt iniquitates, et quorum tecta sunt peccata. Beatus vir, cui non imputavit Dominus peccatum etc. Et alibi, Eph. 2, 8 sq.: Gratia, inquit, estis salvati per fidem, et hoc non ex vobis; Dei enim donum est, non ex operibus, ne quis glorietur.

8) III. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, omnes quidem homines, praecipue vero eos, qui per Spiritum Sanctum regenerati sunt et renovati, ad bona opera facienda debitores esse.

9) IV. Et in hac sententia vocabula illa necessarium, debere, oportere recte usurpantur etiam de renatis hominibus et cum forma sanorum verborum non pugnant.

10) V. Sed tamen per vocabula necessitas, necessarium, quando videlicet de renatis est sermo, non intelligenda est coactio, sed tantum debita illa obedientia, quam vere credentes, quatenus renati sunt, non ex coactione aut compulsa legis, sed libero et spontaneo [R. 590] spiritu praestant, quandoquidem non amplius sub lege sunt, sed sub gratia, Rom. [6, 14] 7, 6; 8, 14.

11) VI. Credimus igitur, docemus et confitemur, cum dicitur, renatos bene operari libero et spontaneo spiritu, id non ita accipiendum esse, quod in hominis renati arbitrio relictum sit bene aut male agere, quando ipsi visum fuerit, ut nihilominus tamen fidem retineat, etiam in peccatis ex proposito perseveret.

12) VII. Hoc tamen non aliter quam de spiritu hominis iam liberato intelligendum est, sicut hanc rem ipse Christus eiusque apostoli declarant, quod videlicet spiritus hominis liberatus bene operetur, non formidine poenae ut servus, sed iustitiae amore, qualem obedientiam filii praestare solent, Rom. 8, 15.

13) VIII. Hanc vero libertatem spiritus in electis Dei filius non perfectam, sed multiplici infirmitate adhuc gravatam agnoscimus, quemadmodum divus Paulus super ea re de sua ipsius persona conqueritur, Rom. 7, 14—25; Gal. 5, 17.

14) IX. Illam tamen infirmitatem Dominus electis suis non imputat, idque propter mediatorem Christum. Sic enim scriptum est Rom. 8, 1: Nihil iam damnationis est his, qui in Christo Iesu sunt.

15) X. Credimus praeterea, docemus et confitemur, fidem et salutem in nobis conservari aut retineri non per opera, sed tantum per Spiritum Dei et per fidem (qua scilicet salus custoditur), bona autem opera testimonia esse, quod Spiritus Sanctus praesens sit atque in nobis habitet.

doubt follow true faith, if it is not a dead, but a living faith, as fruits of a good tree.

2. We believe, teach, and confess also that good works should be entirely excluded, just as well in the question concerning salvation as in the article of justification before God, as the apostle testifies with clear words, when he writes as follows: Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, saying, Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin, Rom. 4, 6 ff. And again: By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast, Eph. 2, 8, 9.

3. We believe, teach, and confess also that all men, but those especially who are born again and renewed by the Holy Ghost, are bound to do good works.

4. In this sense the words necessary, shall, and must are employed correctly and in a Christian manner also with respect to the regenerate, and in no way are contrary to the form of sound words and speech.

5. Nevertheless, by the words mentioned, necessitas, necessarium, necessity and necessary, if they be employed concerning the regenerate, not coercion, but only due obedience is to be understood, which the truly believing, so far as they are regenerate, render not from coercion or the driving of the Law, but from a voluntary spirit; because they are no more under the Law, but under grace, Rom. 6, 14; 7, 6; 8, 14.

6. Accordingly, we also believe, teach, and confess that when it is said: The regenerate do good works from a free spirit, this is not to be understood as though it is at the option of the regenerate man to do or to forbear doing good when he wishes, and that he can nevertheless retain faith if he intentionally perseveres in sins.

7. Yet this is not to be understood otherwise than as the Lord Christ and His apostles themselves declare, namely, regarding the liberated spirit, that it does not do this from fear of punishment, like a servant, but from love of righteousness, like children, Rom. 8, 15.

8. Although this voluntariness [liberty of spirit] in the elect children of God is not perfect, but burdened with great weakness, as St. Paul complains concerning himself, Rom. 7, 14—25; Gal. 5, 17;

9. Nevertheless, for the sake of the Lord Christ, the Lord does not impute this weakness to His elect, as it is written: There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, Rom. 8, 1.

10. We believe, teach, and confess also that not works maintain faith and salvation in us, but the Spirit of God alone, through faith, of whose presence and indwelling good works are evidences.

NEGATIVA.

Falsche Gegensehre.

1. Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir diese Weise zu reden, wenn gelehrt und geschrieben wird, daß gute Werke nötig seien zur Seligkeit; item, daß niemand jemals ohne gute Werke sei selig [ge]worden; item, daß es unmöglich sei, ohne gute Werke selig [zu] werden.

2. Wir verwerfen und verdammen diese bloße Rede als ärgerlich und christlicher Zucht nachtheilig, wenn geredet wird: Gute Werke sind schädlich zur Seligkeit.

Denn besonders zu diesen letzten Zeiten nicht weniger nöthigen [ist], die Leute zu christlicher Zucht und guten Werken zu vermehren und zu erinnern, wie nötig es sei, daß sie zur Anzeigung ihres Glaubens und Dankbarkeit bei [gegen] Gott sich in guten Werken üben, als daß die Werke in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung nicht eingemengt werden, weil durch einen epikurischen Wahn vom Glauben die Menschen sowohl als durch das papistische und pharisäische Vertrauen auf eigene Werke und Verdienste verdammt werden können.

3. Wir verwerfen und verdammen auch, wenn gelehrt wird, daß der Glaube und Einwohnung des Heiligen Geistes nicht durch mutwillige Sünden verloren werden, sondern daß die Heiligen und Auserwählten den Heiligen Geist behalten, wenn sie gleich in Ehebruch und andere Sünden fallen und darin verharren.

V.

Vom Gesetz und Evangelio.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Die Hauptfrage in diesem Zwiespalt.

Ob die Predigt des heiligen Evangelii eigentlich sei nicht allein eine Gnadenpredigt, die Vergebung der Sünden verkündigt, sondern auch eine Buß- und Strafpredigt, welche den Unglauben straft, der im Gesetz nicht gestraft, sondern allein durch das Evangelium gestraft werde.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Keine Lehre Gottes Wort.

1. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß der Unterschied des Gesetzes und Evangelii als ein besonder herrlich Licht mit großem Fleiß in der Kirche zu erhalten [sei], dadurch das Wort Gottes nach der Ermahnung St. Pauli recht geteilt wird.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß das Gesetz eigentlich sei eine göttliche Lehre, welche lehrt, was recht und Gott gefällig, und straft alles, was Sünde und Gottes Willen zuwider ist.

3. Darum denn alles, was Sünde straft, ist und gehört zur Predigt des Gesetzes.

4. Das Evangelium aber sei eigentlich eine solche Lehre, die da lehrt, was der Mensch glauben soll, der das Gesetz nicht gehalten [hat] und durch das-

NEGATIVA.

Falsa doctrina, superiori repugnans.

16] I. Reicimus igitur et damnamus subsequentes phrasas, cum docetur, bona opera necessaria esse ad salutem; neminem [R. 591] unquam sine bonis operibus salvatum; impossibile esse, sine bonis operibus salvari.

17] II. Repudiamus et damnamus nudam hanc, offendiculi plenam et Christianae disciplinae perniciosam phrasin: bona opera noxia esse ad salutem.

18] His enim postremis temporibus non minus necessarium est, ut homines ad recte et pie vivendi rationem bonaque opera invitentur atque moneantur, quam necessarium sit, ut ad declarandam fidem atque gratitudinem suam erga Deum in bonis operibus sese exerceant: quam necessarium est cavere, ne bona opera negotio iustificationis admisceantur. Non minus enim homines Epicurea persuasionem de fide quam Pharisaea et papistica fiducia in propria opera et merita damnationem incurrere possunt.

19] III. Praeterea reprobamus atque damnamus dogma illud, quod fides in Christum non amittatur, et Spiritus Sanctus nihilominus in homine habitet, etiamsi sciens volensque peccet, et quod sancti atque electi Spiritum Sanctum retineant, tametsi in adulterium aut in alia scelera prolabantur et in iis perseverent.

V.

DE LEGE ET EVANGELIO.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1] Quaesitum fuit: an evangelium proprie sit tantummodo concio de gratia Dei, quae remissionem peccatorum nobis annuntiet, an vero etiam sit concio poenitentiae arguens peccatum incredulitatis, quippe quae non per legem, sed per evangelium duntaxat arguatur.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera doctrina cum norma Verbi Dei congruens. [R. 592]

2] I. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, discrimen legis et evangelii ut clarissimum quoddam lumen singulari diligentia in ecclesia Dei retinendum esse, ut Verbum Dei, iuxta admonitionem divi Pauli, recte secari queat.

3] II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, legem esse proprie doctrinam divinitus revelatam, quae doceat, quid iustum Deoque gratum sit, quae etiam, quidquid peccatum est et voluntati divinae adversatur, redarguat.

4] III. Quare, quidquid exstat in sacris literis, quod peccata arguit, id revera ad legis concionem pertinet.

5] IV. Evangelium vero proprie doctrinam esse censemus, quae doceat, quid homo credere debeat, qui legi Dei non satisfecit et idcirco

NEGATIVA.

False Contrary Doctrine.

1. Accordingly, we reject and condemn the following modes of speaking: when it is taught and written that good works are necessary to salvation; also, that no one ever has been saved without good works; also, that it is impossible to be saved without good works.

2. We reject and condemn as offensive and detrimental to Christian discipline the bare expression, when it is said: Good works are injurious to salvation.

For especially in these last times it is no less needful to admonish men to Christian discipline [to the way of living aright and godly] and good works, and remind them how necessary it is that they exercise themselves in good works as a declaration of their faith and gratitude to God, than that the works be not mingled in the article of justification; because men may be damned by an Epicurean delusion concerning faith, as well as by papistic and Pharisaic confidence in their own works and merits.

3. We also reject and condemn the dogma that faith and the indwelling of the Holy Ghost are not lost by wilful sin, but that the saints and elect retain the Holy Ghost even though they fall into adultery and other sins and persist therein.

V.

OF THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in This Controversy.

Whether the preaching of the Holy Gospel is properly not only a preaching of grace, which announces the forgiveness of sins, but also a preaching of repentance and reproof, rebuking unbelief, which, they say, is rebuked not in the Law, but alone through the Gospel.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Pure Doctrine of God's Word.

1. We believe, teach, and confess that the distinction between the Law and the Gospel is to be maintained in the Church with great diligence as an especially brilliant light, by which, according to the admonition of St. Paul, the Word of God is rightly divided.

2. We believe, teach, and confess that the Law is properly a divine doctrine, which teaches what is right and pleasing to God, and reproves everything that is sin and contrary to God's will.

3. For this reason, then, everything that re-proves sin is, and belongs to, the preaching of the Law.

4. But the Gospel is properly such a doctrine as teaches what man who has not observed the Law, and therefore is condemned selbe verdammt [wird], nämlich daß Christus alle Sünden gebüßt und bezahlt und ihm ohne alle sein Verdienst erlangt und erworben habe Vergebung der Sünden, Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott gilt, und das ewige Leben.

5. Nachdem aber das Wort „Evangelium“ nicht in einerlei Verstand in Heiliger Schrift gebraucht [wird], daher denn dieser Zwiespalt ursprünglich entstanden, so glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, wenn durch das Wort „Evangelium“ verstanden wird die ganze Lehre Christi, die er in seinem Lehramt, wie auch seine Apostel geführt (in welchem Verstande es denn Mark. 1, Act. 20 gebraucht), daß recht geredet und geschrieben [wird], daß Evangelium sei eine Predigt von der Buße und Vergebung der Sünden.

6. Wenn aber das Gesetz und Evangelium, wie auch Moses selbst [als] ein Gesetzeslehrer, und Christus als ein Prediger des Evangeliums gegeneinander gehalten [werden], glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß das Evangelium nicht eine Buß- oder Strafpredigt, sondern eigentlich anderes nichts denn eine Trostpredigt und fröhliche Botschaft sei, die nicht straft noch schredt, sondern wider das Schreden des Gesetzes die Gewissen tröstet, allein auf das Verdienst Christi weist und mit der lieblichen Predigt von der Gnade und Guld Gottes, durch Christus' Verdienst erlangt, wieder aufrichtet.

7. Was [so] dann die Offenbarung der Sünden belangt, weil die Rede Moses allen Menschen vor den Augen hängt, solange sie die bloße Predigt des Gesetzes und nichts von Christo hören und also ihre Sünde aus dem Gesetz nicht recht lernen erkennen, sondern entweder vermessene Heuchler werden wie die Pharisäer oder verzweifeln wie Judas, so nimmt Christus das Gesetz in seine Hände und legt dasselbe geistlich aus, Matth. 5; Röm. 7. Und also wird Gottes Zorn vom Himmel herab geoffenbart über alle Sünder, wie groß derselbe sei, dadurch sie in das Gesetz gewiesen werden, und alsdann aus demselben erst recht lernen ihre Sünde erkennen; welche Erkenntnis Moses nimmermehr aus ihnen hätte erzwingen können.

Demnach, obwohl die Predigt vom Leiden und Sterben Christi, des Sohnes Gottes, eine ernsthafte und schreckliche Predigt und Anzeigen [Anzeigung, Kundgebung] Gottes Zorns ist, dadurch die Leute erst recht in das Gesetz geführt [werden], nachdem ihnen die Rede Moses hinweggetan, daß sie erst recht erkennen, wie große Dinge Gott im Gesetz von uns erfordert, deren wir keines halten können, und demnach alle unsere Gerechtigkeit in Christo suchen sollen:

8. Doch solange dieses alles (nämlich Christus' Leiden und Sterben) Gottes Zorn predigt und den Menschen schredt, so ist es noch nicht des Evangelii eigentliche Predigt, sondern Moses und des Gesetzes Predigt und demnach ein fremdes Werk Christi, dadurch er kommt zu seinem eigenen Amt, daß ist, Gnade predigen, trösten und lebendig machen, welches eigentlich die Predigt des Evangelii ist.

per eandem damnatur, videlicet quod illum credere oporteat, Iesum Christum omnia peccata expiasse atque pro iis satisfacisse et remissionem peccatorum, iustitiam coram Deo consistentem et vitam aeternam, nullo interveniente peccatoris illius merito, impetrasse.

6] V. Cum autem vocabulum evangelii non semper in una eademque significatione in Sacra Scriptura usurpetur, unde et dissensio illa primum orta est, credimus, docemus et confitemur, si vocabulum evangelii de tota Christi doctrina accipitur, quam ipse in ministerio suo (quemadmodum et eius apostoli) professus est (in qua significatione Marc. 1, 15 et Act. 20, 21 vox illa usurpatur), recte dici et doceri, evangelium esse concionem de poenitentia et remissione peccatorum.

7] VI. Quando vero lex et evangelion [R. 593] sicut et ipse Moses ut doctor legis et Christus ut doctor evangelii inter se conferuntur, credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod evangelium non sit concio poenitentiae, arguens peccata, sed quod proprie nihil aliud sit quam laetissimum quoddam nuntium et concio plena consolationis, non arguens aut terrens, quandoquidem conscientias contra terrores legis solatur, easque in meritum solius Christi respicere iubet, et dulcissima praedicatione de gratia et favore Dei per meritum Christi impetrato rursus erigit.

8] VII. Quod vero ad revelationem peccati attinet, sic sese res habent. Velum illud Moysi omnium hominum oculis est obductum, quamdiu solam legis concionem, nihil autem de Christo audiunt. Itaque peccata sua ex lege non vere agnoscunt, sed aut hypocritae fiunt, qui iustitiae propriae opinione turgent, quales olim erant Pharisaei; aut in peccatis suis desperant, quod Iudas proditor ille fecit. Eam ob causam Christus sumpsit sibi legem explicandam spiritualiter, Matth. 5, 21 sqq.; Rom. 7, 14, et hoc modo ira Dei de coelo revelatur super omnes peccatores [Rom. 1, 18], ut vera legis sententia intellecta animadvertatur, quanta sit illa ira. Et sic demum peccatores, ad legem remissi, vere et recte peccata sua agnoscunt. Talem vero peccatorum agnitionem solus Moses nunquam ex ipsis extorquere potuisset.

9] Etsi igitur concio illa de passione et morte Christi, Filii Dei, severitatis et terroris plena est, quae iram Dei adversus peccata ostendit, unde demum homines ad legem Dei propius adducuntur, postquam velum illud Moysi ablatum est, ut tandem exacte agnoscant, quanta videlicet Dominus in lege sua a nobis exigit, quorum nihil nos praestare possumus, ita ut universam nostram iustitiam in solo Christo quaerere oporteat:

10] VIII. Tamen quamdiu nobis Christi passio et mors iram Dei ob oculos ponunt et hominem perterrefaciunt, tamdiu non [R. 594] sunt propriae concio evangelii, sed legis et Moysi doctrina et sunt alienum opus Christi, per quod accedit ad proprium suum officium, quod est praedicare de gratia Dei, consolari et vivificare. Haec propria sunt praedicationis evangelicae.

by it, is to believe, namely, that Christ has expiated and made satisfaction for all sins, and has obtained and acquired for him, without any merit of his [no merit of the sinner intervening], forgiveness of sins, righteousness that avails before God, and eternal life.

5. But since the term Gospel is not used in one and the same sense in the Holy Scriptures, on account of which this dissension originally arose, we believe, teach, and confess that if by the term Gospel is understood the entire doctrine of Christ which He proposed in His ministry, as also did His apostles (in which sense it is employed, Mark 1, 15; Acts 20, 21), it is correctly said and written that the Gospel is a preaching of repentance and of the forgiveness of sins.

6. But if the Law and the Gospel, likewise also Moses himself [as] a teacher of the Law and Christ as a preacher of the Gospel are contrasted with one another, we believe, teach, and confess that the Gospel is not a preaching of repentance or reproof, but properly nothing else than a preaching of consolation, and a joyful message which does not reprove or terrify, but comforts consciences against the terrors of the Law, points alone to the merit of Christ, and raises them up again by the lovely preaching of the grace and favor of God, obtained through Christ's merit.

7. As to the revelation of sin, because the veil of Moses hangs before the eyes of all men as long as they hear the bare preaching of the Law, and nothing concerning Christ, and therefore do not learn from the Law to perceive their sins aright, but either become presumptuous hypocrites [who swell with the opinion of their own righteousness] as the Pharisees, or despair like Judas, Christ takes the Law into His hands, and explains it spiritually, Matt. 5, 21 ff.; Rom. 7, 14. And thus the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all sinners [Rom. 1, 18], how great it is; by this means they are directed [sent back] to the Law, and then first learn from it to know aright their sins — a knowledge which Moses never could have forced out of them.

Accordingly, although the preaching of the suffering and death of Christ, the Son of God, is an earnest and terrible proclamation and declaration of God's wrath, whereby men are first led into the Law aright, after the veil of Moses has been removed from them, so that they first know aright how great things God in His Law requires of us, none of which we can observe, and therefore are to seek all our righteousness in Christ:

8. Yet as long as all this (namely, Christ's suffering and death) proclaims God's wrath and terrifies man, it is still not properly the preaching of the Gospel, but the preaching of Moses and the Law, and therefore a foreign work of Christ, by which He arrives at His proper office, that is, to preach grace, console, and quicken, which is properly the preaching of the Gospel.

NEGATIVA.

Gegenlehre, so verworfen.

Demnach verwerfen wir und halten es für unrecht und schädlich, wenn gelehrt wird, daß das Evangelium eigentlich eine Buß- oder eine Strafpredigt und nicht allein eine Gnadenpredigt sei, dadurch das Evangelium wiederum zu einer Gesetzeslehre gemacht, das Verdienst Christi und Heilige Schrift verdunkelt, die Christen des rechten Trosts beraubt und dem Papsttum die Thür wiederum aufgetan wird.

VI.

Vom dritten Brauch des Gesetzes.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Die Hauptfrage von diesem Streit.

Nachdem das Gesetz den Menschen um dreierlei Ursache willen gegeben: erstlich, daß dadurch äußerliche Zucht wider die Wilden, Ungehorsamen erhalten [werde]; zum andern, daß die Menschen dadurch zur Erkenntnis ihrer Sünden geführt [werden]; zum dritten, nachdem sie wiedergeboren, und gleichwohl das Fleisch ihnen anhängt, daß sie um desselben willen eine gewisse Regel hätten, nach welcher sie ihr ganzes Leben anstellen und regieren sollen: hat sich ein Zwiespalt zwischen etlichen wenigen Theologen über den dritten [Ge]brauch des Gesetzes zugetragen, ob nämlich auch bei den wiedergeborenen Christen solches zu treiben sei oder nicht. Der eine Theil hat ja, der andere nein gesagt.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Die rechte christliche Lehre von diesem Streit.

1. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, obwohl die recht gläubigen und wahrhaftig zu Gott bekehrten Menschen vom Fluch und Zwang des Gesetzes durch Christum gefreiet [befreit] und ledig gemacht [sind], daß sie doch der Ursache nicht ohne Gesetz seien, sondern darum von dem Sohn Gottes erlöst worden, daß sie sich in demselben Tag und Nacht üben sollen, Ps. 119; wie denn unsere ersten Eltern auch vor dem Fall nicht ohne Gesetz gelebt, welchen das Gesetz Gottes auch in das Herz geschrieben, da sie zum Ebenbild Gottes erschaffen worden, Gen. 2 und 3.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß die Predigt des Gesetzes nicht allein bei den Ungläubigen und Unbußfertigen, sondern auch bei den Rechtgläubigen [wahrhaft Gläubigen], wahrhaftig bekehrten, Wiedergeborenen und durch den Glauben Gerechtfertigten mit Fleiß zu treiben sei.

3. Denn ob sie wohl wiedergeboren und in dem Geist ihres Gemüths verneuert [sind], so ist doch solche Wiedergeburt und Erneuerung in dieser Welt nicht vollkommen, sondern nur angefangen, und Rehen die Gläubigen mit dem Geist ihres Gemüths

NEGATIVA.

Contraria et falsa doctrina, quae relucitur.

11] Relicimus igitur ut falsum et perniciosum dogma, cum asseritur, quod evangelium proprie sit concio poenitentiae, arguens, accusans et damnans peccata, quodque non sit tantummodo concio de gratia Dei. Hac enim ratione evangelium rursum in legem transformatur, meritum Christi et sacrae litterae obscurantur, piis mentibus vera et solida consolatio eripitur, et pontificiis erroribus et superstitionibus fores aperiuntur.

VI.

DE TERTIO USU LEGIS.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1] Cum constet, legem Dei propter tres causas hominibus datam esse: primo, ut externa quaedam disciplina conservetur, et feri atque intractabiles homines quasi repagulis quibusdam coercantur; secundo, ut per legem homines ad agnitionem suorum peccatorum adducantur; tertio, ut homines iam renati, quibus tamen omnibus multum adhuc carnis (R. 595) adhaeret, eam ipsam ob causam certam aliquam regulam habeant, ad quam totam suam vitam formare possint et debeant etc.: orta est inter paucos quosdam theologos controversia super tertio usu legis, videlicet an lex etiam renatis inculcanda et eius observatio apud eos urgenda sit an non. Alii urgendam legem censuerunt, alii negarunt.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera et pia doctrina de hac controversia.

2] I. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, etsi vere in Christum credentes et sincere ad Deum conversi a maledictione et coactione legis per Christum liberati sunt, quod ii tamen propterea non sint absque lege, quippe quos Filius Dei eam ob causam redemit, ut legem Dei diu nocturne meditarentur, atque in eius observatione sese assidue exerceant, Ps. 1, 2; 119, 1 sqq. Etenim ne primi quidem nostri parentes etiam ante lapsum prorsus sine lege vixerunt, quae certe cordibus ipsorum tum inscripta erat, quia Dominus eos ad imaginem suam creaverat, Gen. [1, 26 sq.]; 2, 16 sqq.; 3, 3.

3] II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, concionem legis non modo apud eos, qui fidem in Christum non habent et poenitentiam nondum agunt, sed etiam apud eos, qui vere in Christum credunt, vere ad Deum conversi et renati et per fidem iustificati sunt, sedulo urgendam esse.

4] III. Etsi enim renati et spiritu mentis suae renovati sunt, tamen regeneratio illa et renovatio in hac vita non est omnibus numeris absoluta, sed duntaxat inchoata. Et credentes illi spiritu mentis suae perpetuo luctan-

NEGATIVA.

Contrary Doctrine which is Rejected.

Accordingly we reject and regard as incorrect and injurious the dogma that the Gospel is properly a preaching of repentance or reproof, and not alone a preaching of grace; for thereby the Gospel is again converted into a doctrine of the Law, the merit of Christ and Holy Scripture are obscured, Christians robbed of true consolation, and the door is opened again to [the errors and superstitions of] the Papacy.

not complete, but only begun, and believers are, by the spirit of their mind, in a constant struggle against the flesh, that is, against the corrupt nature and disposition which cleaves to us unto death. On account of this old Adam, which still inheres in the understand-

VI.

OF THE THIRD USE OF THE LAW.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Principal Question in This Controversy.

Since the Law was given to men for three reasons: first, that thereby outward discipline might be maintained against wild, disobedient men [and that wild and intractable men might be restrained, as though by certain bars]; secondly, that men thereby may be led to the knowledge of their sins; thirdly, that after they are regenerate and [much of] the flesh notwithstanding cleaves to them, they might on this account have a fixed rule according to which they are to regulate and direct their whole life, a dissension has occurred between some few theologians concerning the third use of the Law, namely, whether it is to be urged or not upon regenerate Christians. The one side has said, Yea; the other, Nay.

AFFIRMATIVA.

The True Christian Doctrine concerning This Controversy.

1. We believe, teach, and confess that, although men truly believing [in Christ] and truly converted to God have been freed and exempted from the curse and coercion of the Law, they nevertheless are not on this account without Law, but have been redeemed by the Son of God in order that they should exercise themselves in it day and night [that they should meditate upon God's Law day and night, and constantly exercise themselves in its observance, Ps. 1, 2], Ps. 119. For even our first parents before the Fall did not live without Law, who had the Law of God written also into their hearts, because they were created in the image of God, Gen. 1, 26 f.; 2, 16 ff.; 3, 3.

2. We believe, teach, and confess that the preaching of the Law is to be urged with diligence, not only upon the unbelieving and impenitent, but also upon true believers, who are truly converted, regenerate, and justified by faith.

3. For although they are regenerate and renewed in the spirit of their mind, yet in the present life this regeneration and renewal is in einem stetigen Kampf wider das Fleisch, das ist, wider die verderbte Natur und Art, so uns bis in [den] Tod anhängt; um welches alten Adams willen, so im Verstande, Willen und allen Kräften des Menschen noch steht, damit sie nicht aus menschlicher Andacht eigenwillige und [selbst=] erwählte Gottesdienste vornehmen, ist bonnöten, daß ihnen das Gesetz des Herrn immer vorleuchte, dergleichen, daß auch der alte Adam nicht seinen eigenen Willen gebrauche, sondern wider seinen Willen nicht allein durch Vermahnung und Dräuung [Drohung] des Gesetzes, sondern auch mit den Strafen und Plagen gezwungen [werde], daß er dem Geiste folge und sich gefangen gebe, 1 Cor. 9; Röm. 6. 7. 12; Gal. 5. 6; Ps. 119; Hebr. 13.

4. Was [so] dann den Unterschied der Werke des Gesetzes und der Früchte des Geistes belangt, glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß die Werke, so nach dem Gesetz geschehen, so lange Werke des Gesetzes seien und genennet [genannt] werden, so lange sie allein durch Treiben der Strafen und Dräuung Gottes Zorns aus den Menschen erzwungen werden.

5. Früchte aber des Geistes sind die Werke, welche der Geist Gottes, so in den Gläubigen wohnt, wirkt durch die Wiedergeborenen, und [die] von den Gläubigen geschehen, soviel sie wieder geboren sind, als wenn sie von keinem Gebot, Dräuen oder Belohnung wüßten; dergestalt denn die Kinder Gottes im Gesetz leben und nach dem Gesetz Gottes wandeln, welches St. Paulus in seinen Episteln das Gesetz Christi und das Gesetz des Gemüths nennt [*], und gleichwohl nicht unter dem Gesetz, sondern unter der Gnade, Röm. 7 und 8].

6. Also ist und bleibt das Gesetz beides bei den Bußfertigen und Unbußfertigen, bei wiedergeborenen und nichtwiedergeborenen Menschen ein einziges Gesetz, nämlich der unwandelbare Wille Gottes, und ist der Unterschied, soviel den Gehorsam belangt, allein an dem [an den] Menschen, da einer, so noch nicht wiedergeboren, dem Gesetz aus Zwang und unwillig (wie auch die Wiedergeborenen nach dem Fleisch) tut, was [es] von ihm erfordert, der Gläubige aber ohne Zwang mit willigem Geiste, soviel er neugeboren, tut, das keine Dräuungen des Gesetzes aus ihm nimmermehr erzwingen könnten.

NEGATIVA.

Falsche Gegenlehre.

Demnach verworfen wir als eine schädliche, christlicher Zucht und wahrhaftiger Gottseligkeit widerwärtige Lehre und Irrtum, wenn gelehrt wird, daß das Gesetz obgemeldeter Weise und Maß nicht bei den Christen und Rechtgläubigen, sondern allein bei den Ungläubigen, Unchristen und Unbußfertigen getrieben werden soll.

VII.

Vom heiligen Abendmahl Christi.

Wiewohl die zwinglischen Lehrer nicht unter die Augsburgerische Konfessionsverwandten Theologen zu rechnen, als von denen sie sich gleich damals, als solche Konfession übergeben worden, abgesontur cum carne, hoc est, cum corrupta natura, quae in nobis ad mortem usque haeret. [R. 596] Et propter veterem Adamum, qui adhuc in hominis intellectu, voluntate et in omnibus viribus eius infixus residet, opus est, ut homini lex Dei semper prae luceat, ne quid privatae devotionis affectu in negotio religionis confingat et cultus divinos Verbo Dei non institutos eligat. Item, ne vetus Adam pro suo ingenio agat, sed potius contra suam voluntatem, non modo admonitionibus et minis legis, verum etiam poenis et plagis coerceatur, ut Spiritui obsequatur seque ipsi captivum tradat, 1 Cor. 9, 27; Rom. 6, 12; 7, 21. 23; 12; Gal. 5, 17; 6, 14; Ps. 119; Hebr. 13, 21; [12, 1].

5) IV. Iam quod ad discrimen operum legis et fructuum Spiritus attinet, credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod opera illa, quae secundum praescriptum legis fiunt, eatenus opera legis sint et appellentur, quatenus ea solummodo urgendo et minis poenarum atque irae divinae ab homine extorquentur.

6) V. Fructus vero Spiritus sunt opera illa, quae Spiritus Dei, in credentibus habitans, per homines renatos operatur, et quae a credentibus fiunt, quatenus renati sunt, ita quidem sponte ac libere, quasi nullum praeceptum unquam accepissent, nullas minas audivissent, nullamque remunerationem expectarent. Et hoc modo filii Dei in lege vivunt et secundum normam legis divinae vitam suam instituunt; hanc vivendi rationem divus Paulus vocare solet in suis epistolis legem Christi et legem mentis, Rom. 7, 25; 8, 7 [Rom. 8, 2; Gal. 6, 2].

7) VI. Ad hunc modum una eademque lex est manetque, immota videlicet Dei voluntas, sive poenitentibus sive impenitentibus, renatis aut non renatis proponatur. Discrimen autem, quoad obedientiam, duntaxat in hominibus est, quorum alii non renati legi obedientiam qualemcumque a lege requisitam praestant, sed coacti et inviti id faciunt (sicut etiam renati faciunt, quatenus adhuc carnales sunt); credentes vero in Christum, quatenus renati sunt, absque coactione, libero et [R. 597] spontaneo spiritu talem obedientiam praestant, qualem alias nullae quantumvis severissimae legis comminationes extorquere possent.

NEGATIVA.

Falsae doctrinae relectio.

8) Repudiamus itaque ut perniciosum et falsum dogma, quod Christianae disciplinae et verae pietati adversatur, cum docetur, quod lex Dei (eo modo, quo supra dictum est) non sit piis et vere credentibus, sed tantum impiis, infidelibus et non agentibus poenitentiam proponenda, atque apud hos solos sit urgenda.

VII.

DE COENA DOMINI.

1) Etsi Cingliani doctores non in eorum theologorum numero, qui Augustanam Confessionem agnoscunt et profitentur, habendi sunt, quippe qui tum, cum illa Confessio ex-

ing, the will, and all the powers of man, it is needful that the Law of the Lord always shine before them, in order that they may not from human devotion institute wanton and self-elected cults [that they may frame nothing in a matter of religion from the desire of private devotion, and may not choose divine services not instituted by God's Word]; likewise, that the old Adam also may not employ his own will, but may be subdued against his will, not only by the admonition and threatening of the Law, but also by punishments and blows, so that he may follow and surrender himself captive to the Spirit, 1 Cor. 9, 27; Rom. 6, 12; Gal. 6, 14; Ps. 119, 1 ff.; Heb. 13, 21 (Heb. 12, 1).

4. Now, as regards the distinction between the works of the Law and the fruits of the Spirit, we believe, teach, and confess that the works which are done according to the Law are and are called works of the Law as long as they are only extorted from man by urging the punishment and threatening of God's wrath.

5. Fruits of the Spirit, however, are the works which the Spirit of God who dwells in believers works through the regenerate, and which are done by believers so far as they are regenerate [spontaneously and freely], as though they knew of no command, threat, or reward; for in this manner the children of God live in the Law and walk according to the Law of God, which [mode of living] St. Paul in his epistles calls the Law of Christ and the Law of the mind, Rom. 7, 25; 8, 7; Rom. 8, 2; Gal. 6, 2.

6. Thus the Law is and remains both to the penitent and impenitent, both to regenerate and unregenerate men, one [and the same] Law, namely, the immutable will of God; and the difference, so far as concerns obedience, is alone in man, inasmuch as one who is not yet regenerate does for the Law out of constraint and unwillingly what it requires of him (as also the regenerate do according to the flesh); but the believer, so far as he is regenerate, does without constraint and with a willing spirit that which no threatenings [however severe] of the Law could ever extort from him.

NEGATIVA.

False Contrary Doctrine.

Accordingly, we reject as a dogma and error injurious to, and conflicting with, Christian discipline and true godliness the teaching that the Law in the above-mentioned way and degree is not to be urged upon Christians and true believers, but only upon unbelievers, non-Christians, and the impenitent.

VII.

OF THE LORD'S SUPPER.

Although the Zwinglian teachers are not to be reckoned among the theologians who affiliate with [acknowledge and profess] the Augsburg Confession, as they separated from them bert [haben], jedoch, weil sie sich mit eindringen und ihren Irrtum unter derselben christlichen Konfession Namen auszubringen [* auszubringen] unterstehen, haben wir von diesem Zweifelsfall auch nothdürftigen Bericht tun wollen.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Der Hauptstreit zwischen unserer und der Sacramentierer Lehre in diesem Artikel.

Ob in dem heiligen Abendmahl der wahrhaftige Leib und Blut unsers Herrn Jesu Christi wahrhaftig und wesentlich gegenwärtig sei, mit Brod und Wein ausgeteilt und mit dem Munde empfangen werde von allen denen, so sich dieses Sacraments gebrauchen, sie seien würdig oder unwürdig, fromm oder unf fromm, gläubig oder ungläubig, den Gläubigen zum Trost und Leben, den Ungläubigen zum Gericht? Die Sacramentierer sagen nein, wir sagen ja.

Zur Erklärung dieses Streits ist anfänglich zu merken, daß zweierlei Sacramentierer seien. Etliche sind grobe Sacramentierer, welche mit deutlichen, klaren Worten vorgeben, wie sie im Herzen halten, daß im heiligen Abendmahl mehr nicht denn Brod und Wein gegenwärtig sei, ausgeteilt und mit dem Munde empfangen werde. Etliche aber sind verschlagene und die allerschädlichsten Sacramentierer, die zum Teil mit unsern Worten ganz scheinbar reden und vorgeben, sie glauben auch eine wahrhaftige Gegenwärtigkeit des wahrhaftigen, wesentlichen, lebendigen Leibes und Blutes Christi im heiligen Abendmahl, doch solches geschehe geistlich, durch den Glauben; welche doch unter diesen scheinbaren [scheinbar wahren] Worten eben die erste grobe Meinung behalten, daß nämlich nichts denn Brod und Wein im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig sei und mit dem Munde empfangen werde; denn geistlich heißt ihnen anders nichts denn den [denn der] Geist Christi oder die Kraft des abwesenden Leibes Christi und sein Verdienst, welcher [welches] gegenwärtig sei; der Leib Christi aber sei auf keinerlei Weise noch Wege gegenwärtig, sondern allein droben im obersten Himmel, zu dem wir mit den Gedanken unsers Glaubens in [den] Himmel uns erheben und daselbst, aber gar nicht bei Brod und Wein des Abendmahls, solchen seinen Leib und Blut suchen sollen. [In dem von Selnecker 1580 herausgegebenen lateinischen Konfessionsbuch lautet der Abschnitt „Vocabulum enim . . . praesens sit“ also: „Vocabulum enim spiritualiter nihil aliud ipsis significat quam Spiritum Christi, quem praesentem esse credunt, aut sub eo vocabulo virtutem absentis corporis Christi eiusque meritum intelligunt.“ Mehreren Handschriften zufolge lautet der entsprechende deutsche Text: „Denn ‚geistlich‘ heißt ihnen anders nichts denn den (der) Geist Christi, welcher gegenwärtig sei, oder die Kraft des abwesenden Leibes Christi und sein Verdienst.“] hiberetur, ab eis secessionem fecerunt, tamen, cum nunc sese in eorum coetum callide ingerant erroremque suum sub praetextu pia illius Confessionis quam latissime spargere conentur, etiam de hac controversia ecclesiam Dei erudiendam iudicavimus.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Bekentnis reiner Lehre vom heiligen Abendmahl wider die Sacramentierer.

1. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß im heiligen Abendmahl der Leib und Blut Christi wahrhaftig und wesentlich gegenwärtig sei, mit Brod und Wein wahrhaftig ausgeteilt und empfangen werde.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE,

quae est inter nos et Sacramentarios in hoc articulo.

2] Quaeritur, an in Sacra Coena verum corpus et verus sanguis Domini nostri Iesu Christi vere et substantialiter sint praesentia, atque cum pane et vino distribuantur [R. 598 et ore sumantur ab omnibus illis, qui hoc sacramento utuntur, sive digni sint sive indigni, boni aut mali, fideles aut infideles, ita tamen, ut fideles e Coena Domini consolationem et vitam percipiant, infideles autem eam ad iudicium sumant. Cingliani hanc praesentiam et dispensationem corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena negant, nos vero eandem asseveramus.

3] Ad solidam huius controversiae explanationem primum sciendum est, duo esse Sacramentarium genera. Quidam enim sunt Sacramentarii crassi admodum; hi perspicuis et clavis verbis id aperte profitentur, quod corde sentiunt, quod videlicet in Coena Domini nihil amplius quam panis et vinum sint praesentia ibique distribuantur et ore percipiantur. Alii 4] autem sunt versuti et callidi, et quidem omnium nocentissimi Sacramentarii; hi de negotio Coenae Dominicae loquentes, ex parte nostris verbis splendide admodum utuntur et prae se ferunt, quod et ipsi veram praesentiam veri, substantialis atque vivi corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena credant, eam tamen praesentiam et manducationem dicunt 5] esse spirituales, quae fiat fide. Et hi posteriores Sacramentarii sub his splendidis verbis eandem crassam, quam priores habent, opinionem occultant et retinent, quod videlicet praeter panem et vinum nihil amplius in Coena Domini sit praesens et ore sumatur. Vocabulum enim spiritualiter nihil aliud ipsis significat quam Spiritum Christi seu virtutem absentis corporis Christi eiusque meritum, quod praesens sit; ipsum vero Christi corpus nullo prorsus modo esse praesens, sed tantummodo id sursum in supremo coelo contineri sentiunt et affirmant oportere nos cogitationibus fidei sursum assurgere inque [R. 599 coelum ascendere, et ibidem (nulla autem ratione cum pane et vino Sacrae Coenae) illud corpus et sanguinem Christi quaerendum esse.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Confessio sinceræ doctrinae de Coena Domini contra Sacramentarios.

6] I. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod in Coena Domini corpus et sanguis Christi vere et substantialiter sint praesentia, et quod una cum pane et vino vere distribuantur atque sumantur.

at the very time when this Confession was presented, nevertheless, since they are intruding themselves [into their assembly], and are attempting, under the name of this Christian Confession, to spread their error, we intend also to make a needful statement [we have judged that the Church of Christ should be instructed also] concerning this controversy.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Chief Controversy between Our Doctrine and That of the Sacramentarians regarding This Article.

Whether in the Holy Supper the true body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ are truly and essentially present, are distributed with the bread and wine, and received with the mouth by all those who use this Sacrament, whether they be worthy or unworthy, godly or ungodly, believing or unbelieving; by the believing for consolation and life, by the unbelieving for judgment? The Sacramentarians say, No; we say, Yes.

For the explanation of this controversy it is to be noted in the beginning that there are two kinds of Sacramentarians. Some are gross Sacramentarians, who declare in plain (deutschen), clear words as they believe in their hearts, that in the Holy Supper nothing but bread and wine is present, and distributed and received with the mouth. Others, however, are subtle Sacramentarians, and the most injurious of all, who partly speak very speciously in our own words, and pretend that they also believe a true presence of the true, essential, living body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper, however, that this occurs spiritually through faith. Nevertheless they retain under these specious words precisely the former gross opinion, namely, that in the Holy Supper nothing is present and received with the mouth except bread and wine. For with them the word spiritually means nothing else than the Spirit of Christ or the power of the absent body of Christ and His merit, which is present; but the body of Christ is in no mode or way present, except only above in the highest heaven, to which we should elevate ourselves into heaven by the thoughts of our faith, and there, not at all, however, in the bread and wine of the Holy Supper, should seek this body and blood [of Christ].

AFFIRMATIVA.

Confession of the Pure Doctrine concerning the Holy Supper against the Sacramentarians.

1. We believe, teach, and confess that in the Holy Supper the body and blood of Christ are truly and essentially present, and are truly distributed and received with the bread and wine.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß die Worte des Testaments Christi nicht anders zu verstehen seien, denn wie sie nach dem Buchstaben lauten, also daß nicht das Brot den abwesenden Leib und der Wein das abwesende Blut Christi bedeute, sondern daß es wahrhaftig um sakramentlicher Einigkeit willen der Leib und Blut Christi sei. [Der letzte Satz: „sondern daß . . . Christi sei“ lautete im Entwurf und in sämtlichen Ansbacher und Augsburger Handschriften: „sondern daß es wahrhaftig um sakramentlicher Einigkeit willen der Leib und Blut Christi seien“. Einer der Redaktoren setzte die Frage an den Rand: „ob nicht das eine Wort wahrhaftig auszulassen?“ Statt bloßer Tilgung des Wortes wurde jedoch durch die Sorglosigkeit der Korrektoren die Frage selbst in den Text zwischen „Christi“ und „sei“ eingerückt. Chemnitz, der diesen Druckfehler als pudendum erratum bezeichnet, trug darauf an, daß der betreffende Bogen umgedruckt werde. In den Exemplaren, welche der Kurfürst an die Fürsten und Reichsfürsten berlangte, wurde der Fehler auch korrigiert, aber nicht in allen andern Exemplaren. Typographorum sordida avaritia obstitit, sagt Chemnitz. In den fünf von uns verglichenen Exemplaren des zu Dresden gedruckten Kontorbiensbuchs mit den Jahreszahlen 1580 und 1579 findet sich das pudendum erratum nicht.]

3. Was [so]dann die Konsekration belangt, glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß solche Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im heiligen Abendmahl nicht schaffe einiges Menschen Wert oder Sprechen des Dieners, sondern daß solche einig und allein der allmächtigen Kraft unsers Herrn Jesu Christi zugeschrieben werden soll.

4. Daneben aber glauben, lehren und halten [* bekennen] wir auch einhellig, daß im Gebrauch des heiligen Abendmahls die Worte der Einsetzung Christi keineswegs zu unterlassen, sondern öffentlich gesprochen werden sollen, wie geschrieben steht: „Der gesegnete Kelch, den wir segnen“ usw., 1 Kor. 10, 16, welches Ergehen durch das Sprechen der Worte Christi geschieht.

5. Die Gründe aber, darauf wir in diesem Handb. stehen wider die Sakramentierer, sind, wie D. Luther solche in seinem großen Bekenntnis gesetzt hat.

Der erste ist dieser Artikel unsers christlichen Glaubens: Jesus Christus ist wahrhaftiger, wesentlicher, natürlicher, völliger Gott und Mensch, in einer Person unzertrennt und ungeteilt.

Der andere: daß Gottes rechte Hand allenthalben ist, zu welcher Christus, nach seiner menschlichen Natur mit der Tat und Wahrheit gesetzt, gegenwärtig regiert, in seinen Händen und unter seinen Füßen hat alles, was im Himmel und auf Erden ist, dahin sonst kein Mensch noch Engel, sondern allein Mariä Sohn gesetzt ist, daher er auch solches vermag.

Der dritte: daß Gottes Wort nicht falsch ist oder lüge.

Der vierte: daß Gott mancherlei Weise hat und weiß, etwa [irgendwo] an einem Orte zu sein, und nicht allein die einige, welche die Philosophi localem oder räumliche nennen.

6. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß der Leib und Blut Christi nicht allein geistlich durch den Glauben, sondern auch mündlich, doch nicht auf lapernaitische, sondern [auf] übernatürliche, himmlische Weise um der sakramentlichen Vereinigung willen mit dem Brot und Wein empfangen werde, wie solches die Worte Christi klärl. ausweisen, da Christus heiet [besieht zu] nehmen,

7) II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, verba testamenti Christi non aliter accipienda esse, quam sicut verba ipsa ad litteram sonant, ita ne panis absens Christi corpus et vinum absentem Christi sanguinem significant, sed ut propter sacramentalem unionem panis et vinum vere sint corpus et sanguis Christi.

Ansbacher und Augsburger Handschriften: „sondern daß es wahrhaftig um sakramentlicher Einigkeit willen der Leib und Blut Christi seien“. Einer der Redaktoren setzte die Frage an den Rand: „ob nicht das eine Wort wahrhaftig auszulassen?“ Statt bloßer Tilgung des Wortes wurde jedoch durch die Sorglosigkeit der Korrektoren die Frage selbst in den Text zwischen „Christi“ und „sei“ eingerückt. Chemnitz, der diesen Druckfehler als pudendum erratum bezeichnet, trug darauf an, daß der betreffende Bogen umgedruckt werde. In den Exemplaren, welche der Kurfürst an die Fürsten und Reichsfürsten berlangte, wurde der Fehler auch korrigiert, aber nicht in allen andern Exemplaren. Typographorum sordida avaritia obstitit, sagt Chemnitz. In den fünf von uns verglichenen Exemplaren des zu Dresden gedruckten Kontorbiensbuchs mit den Jahreszahlen 1580 und 1579 findet sich das pudendum erratum nicht.]

8) III. Iam quod ad consecrationem attinet, credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod nullum opus humanum neque ulla ministri ecclesiae pronuntiatio praesentiae corporis et sanguinis Christi in Coena causa sit, sed quod hoc soli omnipotenti virtuti Domini nostri Iesu Christi sit tribuendum.

9) IV. Interim tamen unanimi consensu credimus, docemus et confitemur, in usu Coenae Dominicae verba institutionis Christi nequaquam omittenda, sed publice recitanda esse, sicut scriptum est [1 Kor. 10, 16]: Calice benedictionis, cui benedicimus, nomine communicatio sanguinis Christi est etc. Illa autem benedictio sit per recitationem verborum Christi.

10) V. Fundamenta autem, quibus in hoc negotio contra Sacramentarios nitimur, haec sunt, quae etiam D. Lutherus in maiore sua de Coena Domini confessione posuit.

Primum fundamentum est articulus [R. 600 11] fidei nostrae Christianae, videlicet: Iesus Christus est verus, essentialis, naturalis, perfectus Deus et homo in unitate personae, inseparabilis et indivisus.

12) Secundum: quod dextera Dei ubique est, ad eam autem Christum ratione humanitatis suae vere et re ipsa collocatus est, ideoque praesens gubernat, in manu sua et sub pedibus suis, ut Scriptura loquitur [Eph. 1, 22], habet omnia, quae in coelo sunt et in terra. Ad eam Dei dexteram nullus alius homo, ac ne angelus quidem, sed solus Mariae Filius collocatus est, unde et ea, quae diximus, praestare potest.

13) Tertium: quod Verbum Dei non est falsum aut mendax.

14) Quartum: quod Deus varios modos novit et in sua potestate habet, quibus alicubi esse potest, neque ad unicum illum alligatus est, quem philosophi localem aut circumscriptum appellare solent.

15) VI. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, corpus et sanguinem Christi non tantum spiritualiter per fidem, sed etiam ore, non tamen Capernaitice, sed supernaturali et coelesti modo, ratione sacramentalis unionis, cum pane et vino sumi. Hoc enim verba Christi perspicue testantur, quibus praecipit accipere, edere, bibere: idque ab apostolis factum esse,

2. We believe, teach, and confess that the words of the testament of Christ are not to be understood otherwise than as they read, according to the letter, so that the bread does not signify the absent body and the wine the absent blood of Christ, but that, on account of the sacramental union, they [the bread and wine] are truly the body and blood of Christ.

3. Now, as to the consecration, we believe, teach, and confess that no work of man or recitation of the minister [of the church] produces this presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper, but that this is to be ascribed only and alone to the almighty power of our Lord Jesus Christ.

4. But at the same time we also believe, teach, and confess unanimously that in the use of the Holy Supper the words of the institution of Christ should in no way be omitted, but should be publicly recited, as it is written 1 Cor. 10, 16: The cup of blessing which we bless, etc. This blessing occurs through the recitation of the words of Christ.

5. The grounds, however, on which we stand against the Sacramentarians in this matter are those which Dr. Luther has laid down in his Large Confession concerning the Lord's Supper.

The first is this article of our Christian faith: Jesus Christ is true, essential, natural, perfect God and man in one person, undivided and inseparable.

The second: That God's right hand is everywhere; at which Christ is placed in deed and in truth according to His human nature, [and therefore] being present, rules, and has in His hands and beneath His feet everything that is in heaven and on earth [as Scripture says, Eph. 1, 22], where no man else, nor angel, but only the Son of Mary is placed; hence He can do this [those things which we have said].

The third: That God's Word is not false, and does not deceive.

The fourth: That God has and knows of various modes of being in any place, and not only the one [is not bound to the one] which philosophers call localis (local) [or circumscribed].

6. We believe, teach, and confess that the body and blood of Christ are received with the bread and wine, not only spiritually by faith, but also orally; yet not in a Capernaitic, but in a supernatural, heavenly mode, because of the sacramental union; as the words of Christ clearly show, when Christ gives direction to take, eat, and drink, as essen und trinken, wie denn von den Aposteln gesehen; denn geschrieben steht: „Und sie tranken alle daraus“, Mark. 14. Desgleichen St. Paulus sagt: „Das Brot, das wir brechen, ist eine Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi“, das ist: Wer dies Brot ißt, der ißt den Leib Christi; welches auch einhellig die vornehmsten alten Kirchenlehrer, Chrysostomus, Cyprianus, Leo I., Gregorius, Ambrosius, Augustinus, bezeugen.

7. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß nicht allein die Rechtgläubigen [wahrhaft Gläubigen] und Würdigen, sondern auch die Unwürdigen und Ungläubigen empfangen den wahrhaftigen Leib und Blut Christi, doch nicht zum Leben und Trost, sondern zum Gericht und Verdammnis, wenn sie sich nicht bekehren und Buße tun, 1 Kor. 11.

Denn ob sie wohl Christum als einen Seligmacher von sich stoßen, so müssen sie ihn doch, auch wider ihren Willen, als einen strengen Richter zulassen, welcher so [ebenso] gegenwärtig das Gericht auch in den unbüßfertigen Gästen übt und erzeigt, als gegenwärtig er Leben und Trost in den Herzen der Rechtgläubigen und würdigen Gäste wirkt.

8. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß nur einerlei unwürdige Gäste sind, nämlich die nicht glauben, von welchen geschrieben steht: „Wer aber nicht glaubet, der ist schon gerichtet“, Joh. 3; welches Gericht durch unwürdigen [Ge]brauch des heiligen Sacraments gehäuft, größer und schwerer wird, 1 Kor. 11.

9. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß kein Rechtgläubiger, solange er den lebendigen Glauben behält, wie schwach er auch sein möchte, das heilige Abendmahl zum Gericht empfangen, welches sonderlich den schwachgläubigen, doch büßfertigen Christen zum Trost und Stärkung ihres schwachen Glaubens eingesetzt worden.

10. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß alle Würdigkeit der Tischgäste dieser himmlischen Mahlzeit sei und stehe allein in dem allerheiligsten Gehorsam und vollkommenen Verdienst Christi, welches wir uns durch wahrhaftigen Glauben zu eignen und des durch das Sacrament versichert werden, und gar nicht in unsern Tugenden, innerlichen und äußerlichen Vereitungen.

NEGATIVA.

Widerwärtige verdamnte Lehre der Sacramentierer.

Dagegen verwerfen und verdammen wir einhellig alle nachfolgenden irrigen Artikel, so der jetzt gesetzten Lehre, einfältigem Glauben und Bekennnis vom Abendmahl Christi entgegen und zuwider sind:

1. Die päpstliche Transsubstantiation, da im Papsttum gelehrt wird, daß Brot und Wein im heiligen Abendmahl ihre Substanz und natürlich Wesen verlieren und also zunichte werden, daß es in den Leib Christi verwandelt werde, und allein die äußerliche Gestalt bleibe.

Scriptura commemorat, dicens Marc. 14, 23: Et biberunt ex eo omnes. Et Paulus inquit 1 Cor. 10, 16: Panis, quem frangimus, est communicatio corporis Christi; hoc est: Qui hunc panem edit, corpus Christi edit. Idem magno consensu praecipui ex antiquissimis ecclesiae doctoribus, Chrysostomus, Cyprianus, Leo Primus, Gregorius, Ambrosius, Augustinus, testantur.

16] VII. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod non tantum vere in Christum credentes, et qui digne ad Coenam Domini accedunt, verum etiam indigni et infideles verum [R. 601] corpus et sanguinem Christi sumant; ita tamen, ut nec consolationem nec vitam inde percipiant, sed potius, ut illis sumptio ea ad iudicium et damnationem cedat, si non convertantur et poenitentiam agant [1 Cor. 11, 27. 29].

17] Etsi enim Christum ut Salvatorem a se repellunt, tamen eundem, licet maxime inviti, ut severum Iudicem admittere coguntur. Is vero non minus praesens iudicium suum in convivis illis impenitentibus exercet, quam praesens consolationem et vitam in cordibus vere credentium et dignorum convivarum operatur.

18] VIII. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, unum tantum genus esse indignorum convivarum: ii sunt soli illi, qui non credunt. De his scriptum est Ioh. 3, 18: Qui non credit, iam iudicatus est. Et hoc iudicium indigno sacrae coenae usu cumulatur et aggravatur, 1 Cor. 11, 29.

19] IX. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod nullus vere credentium, quamdiu vivam fidem retinet, sacram Domini Coenam ad iudiciumumat, quantacunque fidei imbecillitate laboret. Coena enim Domini imprimis propter infirmos in fide, poenitentes tamen, instituta est, ut ex ea veram consolationem et imbecillis fidei suae confirmationem percipiant [Matth. 9, 12; 11, 5. 28].

20] X. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, totam dignitatem convivarum coelestis huius Coenae in sola sacratissima obedientia et absolutissimo Christi merito consistere. Illud autem nobis vera fide applicamus et de applicatione huius meriti pro sacramentum certi reddimus atque in animis nostris confirmamus. Nequaquam autem dignitas illa ex virtutibus nostris aut ex internis vel externis nostris praeparationibus pendet.

NEGATIVA.

Contrariae et damnatae Sacramentarium doctrinae relectio.

Reiicimus atque damnamus unanimi [R. 602 21] consensu omnes erroneos, quos iam recitabimus, articulos, ut qui commemoratae piae doctrinae, simplicitati fidei et sinceræ confessioni de Coena Domini repugnant:

I. Papiesticam transsubstantiationem, cum 22] videlicet in papatu docetur, panem et vinum in Sacra Coena substantiam atque naturalem suam essentiam amittere et ita annihilari, atque elementa illa ita in Christi corpus transmutari, ut praeter externas species nihil de iis reliquum maneat.

was also done by the apostles; for it is written Mark 14, 23: And they all drank of it. St. Paul likewise says, 1 Cor. 10, 16: The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? that is: He who eats this bread eats the body of Christ, which also the chief ancient teachers of the Church, Chrysostom, Cyprian, Leo I, Gregory, Ambrose, Augustine, unanimously testify.

7. We believe, teach, and confess that not only the true believers [in Christ] and the worthy, but also the unworthy and unbelievers, receive the true body and blood of Christ; however, not for life and consolation, but for judgment and condemnation, if they are not converted and do not repent, 1 Cor. 11, 27, 29.

For although they thrust Christ from themselves as a Savior, yet they must admit Him even against their will as a strict Judge, who is just as present also to exercise and render judgment upon impenitent guests as He is present to work life and consolation in the hearts of the true believers and worthy guests.

8. We believe, teach, and confess also that there is only one kind of unworthy guests, namely, those who do not believe, concerning whom it is written John 3, 18: He that believeth not is condemned already. And this judgment becomes greater and more grievous, being aggravated, by the unworthy use of the Holy Supper, 1 Cor. 11, 29.

9. We believe, teach, and confess that no true believer, as long as he retains living faith, however weak he may be, receives the Holy Supper to his judgment, which was instituted especially for Christians weak in faith, yet penitent, for the consolation and strengthening of their weak faith [Matt. 9, 12; 11, 5, 28].

10. We believe, teach, and confess that all the worthiness of the guests of this heavenly feast is and consists in the most holy obedience and perfect merit of Christ alone, which we appropriate to ourselves by true faith, and whereof [of the application of this merit] we are assured by the Sacrament, and not at all in [but in nowise does this worthiness depend upon] our virtues or inward and outward preparations.

NEGATIVA.

Contrary, Condemned Doctrines of the Sacramentarians.

On the other hand, we unanimously reject and condemn all the following erroneous articles, which are opposed and contrary to the doctrine presented above, the simple faith, and the [pure] confession concerning the Lord's Supper:

1. The papistic transubstantiation, when it is taught in the Papacy that in the Holy Supper the bread and wine lose their substance and natural essence, and are thus annihilated; that they are changed into the body of Christ, and the outward form alone remains.

2. Die päpstliche Opfermesse für die Sünden der Lebendigen und Toten.

3. Daß den Laien nur eine Gestalt des Sacraments gegeben, und wider die offenbaren Worte des Testaments Christi der Kelch ihnen vorgehalten [vorenthalten], und [sie] seines Bluts beraubt werden.

4. Wenn gelehrt wird, daß die Worte des Testaments Christi nicht einsfältig verstanden oder geglaubt werden sollen, wie sie lauten, sondern daß es dunkle Reden seien, deren Verstand man erst an andern Orten suchen müsse.

5. Daß der Leib Christi im heiligen Abendmahl nicht mündlich mit dem Brod, sondern allein Brod und Wein mit dem Munde, der Leib Christi aber allein geistlich durch den Glauben empfangen werde.

6. Daß Brod und Wein im heiligen Abendmahl nicht mehr denn Kennzeichen seien, dadurch die Christen einander erkennen.

7. Daß Brod und Wein allein Bedeutungen, Gleichnisse und Anbildungen [Abbildungen] des weit abwesenden Leibes und Blutes Christi seien.

8. Daß Brod und Wein nicht mehr denn Denkszeichen, Siegel und Pfand seien, durch welche wir versichert [würden], wenn sich der Glaube über sich in [den] Himmel schwinde, daß er daselbst so wahrhaftig des Leibes und Blutes Christi theilhaftig werde, so wahrhaftig wir im Abendmahl Brod und Wein essen und trinken.

9. Daß die Versicherung und Bekräftigung unsers Glaubens im heiligen Abendmahl geschehe allein durch die äußerlichen Zeichen Brodes und Weines und nicht durch den wahrhaftigen gegenwärtigen Leib und Blut Christi.

10. Daß im heiligen Abendmahl allein die Kraft, Wirkung und Verdienst des abwesenden Leibes und Blutes Christi ausgeteilt werde.

11. Daß der Leib Christi also im Himmel beschloss (eingeschlossen sei), daß er auf keinerlei Weise zumal und zu einer Zeit an vielen oder allen Orten gegenwärtig sein könne auf Erden, da sein heiliges Abendmahl gehalten wird.

12. Daß Christus die wesentliche Gegenwärtigkeit seines Leibes und Blutes im heiligen Abendmahl nicht habe verheißten noch leisten können, weil die Natur und Eigenschaft seiner angenommenen menschlichen Natur solches nicht leiden noch zugeben könne.

13. Daß Gott nach aller seiner Allmächtigkeit (welches erschrecklich zu hören) nicht vermöge zu verschaffen, daß sein Leib auf eine Zeit mehr denn an einem Ort wesentlich gegenwärtig sei.

14. Daß nicht die allmächtigen Worte des Testaments Christi, sondern der Glaube die Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im heiligen Abendmahl schaffe und mache.

15. Daß die Gläubigen den Leib Christi nicht bei dem Brod und Wein des heiligen Abendmahls suchen, sondern ihre Augen von dem Brod in [den] Himmel erheben und daselbst den Leib Christi suchen sollen.

16. Daß die ungläubigen, unbußfertigen Christen im heiligen Abendmahl nicht den wahrhaftigen Leib und Blut Christi, sondern allein Brod und Wein empfangen.

23] II. Papisticum missae sacrificium, quod pro peccatis vivorum et mortuorum offertur.

24] III. Sacilegium, quo laicis una tantum pars sacramenti datur, cum nimirum contra expressa verba testamenti Christi calice illis interdicatur, atque ita sanguine Christi spoliatur.

25] IV. Dogma, quo docetur, quod verba testamenti Iesu Christi non simpliciter intelligenda et fide amplectenda sint, uti sonant; ea enim obscura esse ideoque verum eorum sensum ex aliis Scripturae locis petendum esse.

26] V. Corpus Christi in Sacra Coena non ore una cum pane sumi, sed tantum panem et vinum ore accipi, corpus vero Christi spiritualiter duntaxat, fide nimirum, sumi.

27] VI. Panem et vinum in Coena Domini tantummodo symbola seu tesseræ esse, quibus Christiani mutuo sese agnoscant.

28] VII. Panem et vinum tantum esse figuras, similitudines et typos corporis et sanguinis Christi, longissimo intervallo a nobis absentis.

29] VIII. Panem et vinum tantummodo signa, memoriae conservandæ gratia, instituta esse, quæ sigillorum et pignorum rationem habeant, quibus nobis confirmetur, quod fides, cum in coelum illa ascendit et erehitur, ibi tam vere corporis et sanguinis [R. 603 Christi particeps fiat, quam vere nos in Sacra Coena panem manducamus et vinum bibimus.

30] IX. Fidem nostram de salute certam reddi et confirmari in Coena Domini nonnisi signis illis externis, pane et vino, nequaquam autem vere praesentibus vero corpore et sanguine Christi.

31] X. In Sacra Coena duntaxat virtutem, operationem et meritum absentis corporis et sanguinis Christi dispensari.

32] XI. Christi corpus ita coelo inclusum esse, ut nullo prorsus modo simul eodem tempore pluribus aut omnibus locis in terris praesens esse possit, ubi Coena Domini celebratur.

33] XII. Christum substantialem corporis et sanguinis sui praesentiam neque promittere neque exhibere potuisse, quandoquidem id proprietas humanae ipsius naturae assumptae nequaquam ferre aut admittere possit.

34] XIII. Deum ne quidem universa sua omnipotentia (horrendum dictu et auditu) efficere posse, ut corpus Christi uno eodemque tempore in pluribus, quam uno tantum loco, substantialiter praesens sit.

35] XIV. Non omnipotens illud verbum testamenti Christi, sed fidem praesentiae corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena causam esse.

36] XV. Fideles corpus et sanguinem Christi non in pane et vino Coenae Dominicae quaerere, sed oculos in coelum attollere et ibi corpus Christi quaerere debere.

37] XVI. Infideles et impenitentes Christianos in Coena Domini non verum corpus et sanguinem Christi, sed panem tantum et vinum sumere.

2. The papistic sacrifice of the Mass for the sins of the living and the dead.

3. That [the sacrilege whereby] to laymen one form only of the Sacrament is given, and, contrary to the plain words of the testament of Christ, the cup is withheld from them, and they are [thus] deprived of His blood.

4. When it is taught that the words of the testament of Christ must not be understood or believed simply as they read, but that they are obscure expressions, whose meaning must be sought first in other passages of Scripture.

5. That in the Holy Supper the body of Christ is not received orally with the bread; but that with the mouth only bread and wine are received, the body of Christ, however, only spiritually by faith.

6. That the bread and wine in the Holy Supper are nothing more than [symbols or] tokens by which Christians recognize one another.

7. That the bread and wine are only figures, similitudes, and representations of the far absent body and blood of Christ.

8. That the bread and wine are no more than a memorial, seal, and pledge, through which we are assured that when faith elevates itself to heaven, it there becomes partaker of the body and blood of Christ as truly as we eat bread and drink wine in the Supper.

9. That the assurance and confirmation of our faith [concerning salvation] in the Holy Supper occur through the external signs of bread and wine alone, and not through the true, [verily] present body and blood of Christ.

10. That in the Holy Supper only the power, efficacy, and merit of the absent body and blood of Christ are distributed.

11. That the body of Christ is so enclosed in heaven that it can in no way be at once and at one time in many or all places upon earth where His Holy Supper is celebrated.

12. That Christ has not promised, neither could have effected, the essential presence of His body and blood in the Holy Supper, because the nature and property of His assumed human nature cannot suffer nor permit it.

13. That God, according to [even by] all His omnipotence (which is dreadful to hear), is not able to cause His body to be essentially present in more than one place at one time.

14. That not the omnipotent words of Christ's testament, but faith, produces and makes [is the cause of] the presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper.

15. That believers must not seek the body [and blood] of Christ in the bread and wine of the Holy Supper, but raise their eyes from the bread to heaven and there seek the body of Christ.

16. That unbelieving, impenitent Christians do not receive the true body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper, but only bread and wine.

17. Daß die Würdigkeit der Gäste bei dieser himmlischen Mahlzeit nicht allein im wahrhaftigen Glauben an Christum, sondern auch auf der Menschen äußerlicher Bereitung stehe.

18. Daß auch die Rechtgläubigen, so einen wahrhaftigen, lebendigen, reinen Glauben an Christum haben und behalten, dies Sakrament zum Gericht empfangen können darum, daß sie im äußerlichen Wandel noch unvollkommen sind.

19. Daß die äußerlichen sichtbaren Elemente Brotes und Weines im heiligen Sakrament sollen angesetzt werden.

20. Desgleichen befehlen wir auch dem [ge-] rechten Gericht Gottes alle vorwitzigen, spöttischen, lästerlichen Fragen (so Zucht halben nicht zu erzählen) und Reden, so auf grobe, fleischliche, lapernaitische und abscheuliche Weise von den übernatürlichen, himmlischen Geheimnissen dieses Sakraments ganz lästerlich und mit großem Argerniß durch die Sakramentierer vorgebracht werden.

21. Wie wir denn hiermit das lapernaitische Essen des Leibes Christi, als wenn man sein Fleisch mit Zähnen zerriße und wie andere Speise verdaute, welches die Sakramentierer wider das Zeugnis ihres Gewissens, über all unser vielfältig Bezeugen, uns mutwillig aufbringen und dergestalt unsere Lehre bei ihren Zuhörern verhasst machen, gänzlich verdammen und dagegen halten und glauben, vermöge der einfältigen Worte des Testaments Christi, ein wahrhaftig, doch übernatürlich Essen des Leibes Christi wie auch Trinken seines Blutes, welches menschliche Sinne und Vernunft nicht begreifen, sondern unsern [sondern unser] Verstand in den Gehorsam Christi, wie in allen andern Urtheilen des Glaubens, gefangengenommen [werden muß], und solch Geheimnis anders nicht denn allein mit [dem] Glauben gefaßt und im Wort geoffenbart wird.

38] XVII. Dignitatem convivarum in hac coelesti Coena non ex sola vera in Christum fide, sed etiam ex praeparatione hominum externa pendere.

39] XVIII. Eos etiam, qui veram et [R. 604] vivam in Christum fidem habent eamque retinent, nihilominus hoc sacramentum ad iudicium sumere posse, propterea quod in externa sua conversatione adhuc imperfecti sint.

40] XIX. Externa visibilia elementa panis et vini in sacramento adoranda esse.

41] XX. Praeter haec iusto Dei iudicio relinquimus omnes curiosas, sannis virulentis tinctas et blasphemias quaestiones, quae honeste, pie et sine gravi offensione recitari nequeunt, aliosque sermones, quando de supernaturali et coelesti mysterio huius sacramenti crasse, carnaliter, Capernaitice et plane abominandis modis, blaspheme et maximo cum ecclesiae offensiculo sacramentarii loquuntur.

42] XXI. Prorsus etiam reicimus atque damnamus Capernaiticam manducationem corporis Christi, quam nobis Sacramentarii contra suae conscientiae testimonium, post tot nostras protestationes, malitiose affingunt, ut doctrinam nostram apud auditores suos in odium adducant, quasi videlicet doceamus, corpus Christi dentibus laniari et instar alterius cuiusdam cibi in corpore humano digeri. Credimus autem et asserimus, secundum clara verba testamenti Christi, veram, sed supernaturalem manducationem corporis Christi, quemadmodum etiam vere, supernaturaliter tamen, sanguinem Christi bibi docemus. Haec autem humanis sensibus aut ratione nemo comprehendere potest, quare in hoc negotio, sicut et in aliis fidei articulis, intellectum nostrum in obedientiam Christi captivare oportet. Hoc enim mysterium in solo Dei Verbo revelatur et sola fide comprehenditur.

VIII.

Von der Person Christi.

Aus dem Streit von dem heiligen Abendmahl ist zwischen den reinen Theologen Augsburger Konfession und den Calvinisten (welche auch etliche andere Theologen irregemacht) eine Uneinigkeit entstanden von der Person Christi, von beiden Naturen in Christo und ihren Eigenschaften.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Hauptstreit in diesem Zwiespalt.

Die Hauptfrage aber ist gewesen, ob die göttliche und menschliche Natur um der persönlichen Vereinigung willen realiter, das ist, mit [der] Tat und Wahrheit, in der Person Christi wie auch derselben Eigenschaften miteinander Gemeinschaft haben, und wie weit sich solche Gemeinschaft erstrecke.

Die Sakramentierer haben vor[ge]geben, die göttliche und menschliche Natur in Christo seien also persönlich vereinigt, daß keine mit der andern realiter, das ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, was einer jeden Natur eigen ist, sondern mehr nicht denn allein den Namen gemein haben. Denn unio, sagen sie schlecht, facit communia nomina,

VIII.

DE PERSONA CHRISTI. [R. 605]

1] Ex controversia superiore de Coena Domini inter sinceros theologos Augustanae Confessionis et Calvinistas, qui alios etiam quosdam theologos perturbant, dissensio orta est de persona Christi, de duabus in Christo naturis et de ipsarum proprietatibus.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

2] Principalis huius dissidii quaestio fuit, an divina et humana natura et utriusque proprietates propter unionem personalem realiter, hoc est, vere et re ipsa, in persona Christi invicem communicent, et quousque illa communicatio extendatur.

3] Sacramentarii affirmarunt, divinam et humanam naturas in Christo eo modo personaliter unitas esse, ut neutra alteri quidquam realiter, hoc est, vere et re ipsa, quod cuiusque naturae proprium sit, communicet, sed nomina tantum nuda communicari. Unio (inquiunt illi) facit tantum nomina communia, ut vide-

17. That the worthiness of the guests at this heavenly meal consists not alone in true faith in Christ, but also in the external preparation of men.

18. That even the true believers, who have and retain a true, living, pure faith in Christ, can receive this Sacrament to their judgment, because they are still imperfect in their outward life.

19. That the external visible elements of the bread and wine should be adored in the Holy Sacrament.

20. Likewise, we consign also to the just judgment of God all presumptuous, frivolous, blasphemous questions (which decency forbids to mention) and [other] expressions, which most blasphemously and with great offense [to the Church] are proposed by the Sacramentarians in a gross, carnal, Capernaitic way concerning the supernatural, heavenly mysteries of this Sacrament.

21. Hence we hereby utterly [reject and] condemn the Capernaitic eating of the body of Christ, as though [we taught that] His flesh were rent with the teeth, and digested like other food, which the Sacramentarians, against the testimony of their conscience, after all our frequent protests, wilfully force upon us, and in this way make our doctrine odious to their hearers; and on the other hand, we maintain and believe, according to the simple words of the testament of Christ, the true, yet supernatural eating of the body of Christ, as also the drinking of His blood, which human senses and reason do not comprehend, but as in all other articles of faith our reason is brought into captivity to the obedience of Christ, and this mystery is not apprehended otherwise than by faith alone, and revealed in the Word alone.

VIII.

OF THE PERSON OF CHRIST.

From the controversy concerning the Holy Supper a disagreement has arisen between the pure theologians of the Augsburg Confession and the Calvinists, who also have confused some other theologians, concerning the person of Christ and the two natures in Christ and their properties.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Chief Controversy in This Dissension.

The chief question, however, has been whether, because of the personal union, the divine and human natures, as also their properties, have realiter, that is, in deed and truth, a communion with one another in the person of Christ, and how far this communion extends.

The Sacramentarians have asserted that the divine and human natures in Christ are united personally in such a way that neither has realiter, that is, in deed and truth, in common with the other that which is peculiar to either nature, but that they have in common nothing more than the name alone. For unio, daß ist, die persönliche Vereinigung macht mehr nicht denn die Namen gemein, daß nämlich Gott Mensch und Mensch Gott genennet [genannt] wird, doch also, daß Gott nichts mit der Menschheit und die Menschheit nichts mit der Gottheit, derselben Majestät und Eigenschaften realiter, das ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, gemein habe. Das Widerspiel hat D. Luther, und die es mit ihm gehalten, wider die Sacramentierer gestritten [verfochten].

Concordia Triglotta.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Reine Lehre der christlichen Kirche von der Person Christi.

Solchen Streit zu erklären und nach Anleitung unsers christlichen Glaubens hinzulegen [beizulegen], ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis, wie folgt:

1. Daß die göttliche und menschliche Natur in Christo persönlich vereinigt [sind], also daß nicht zwei Christus, einer Gottes, der andere des Menschen Sohn, sondern ein einiger [ein und derselbe] Sohn Gottes und des Menschen Sohn sei, Luk. 1; Röm. 9.

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß die göttliche und menschliche Natur nicht in ein Wesen vermengt, keine in die andere vermandelt [sei], sondern eine jede ihre wesentlichen Eigenschaften behalte, welche der andern Natur Eigenschaften nimmermehr werden.

3. Die Eigenschaften göttlicher Natur sind: allmächtig, ewig, unendlich, nach Eigenschaft der Natur und ihres natürlichen Wesens, für sich selbst, allenthalben gegenwärtig sein, alles wissen usw., welche der menschlichen Natur Eigenschaften nimmermehr werden.

4. Die Eigenschaften menschlicher Natur sind: ein leiblich Geschöpf oder Kreatur sein, Fleisch und Blut sein, endlich und umschrieben sein, leiden, sterben, auf- und niederfahren, von einem Ort zum andern sich bewegen, Hunger, Durst, Frost, Hitze leiden und dergleichen, welche der göttlichen Natur Eigenschaften nimmermehr werden.

5. Nachdem beide Naturen persönlich, das ist, in einer Person, vereinigt [sind], glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß diese Vereinigung nicht eine solche Verknüpfung und Verbindung sei, daß keine Natur mit der andern persönlich, das ist, um der persönlichen Vereinigung willen, etwas gemein haben soll; als, wenn einer zwei Bretter zusammenleimt, da keines dem andern etwas gibt oder von dem andern nimmt, sondern hier ist die höchste Gemeinschaft, welche Gott mit dem Menschen wahrhaftig hat, aus welcher persönlichen Vereinigung und der daraus erfolgenden höchsten und unaussprechlichen Gemeinschaft alles herfließt, was menschlich von Gott und göttlich vom Menschen Christo gesagt und geglaubt wird; wie solche Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft der Naturen die alten Kirchenlehrer durch die [durch das] Gleichniß eines feurigen Eisens wie auch der Vereinigung Leibes und der Seele im Menschen erklärt haben.

6. Daher glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß Gott Mensch und Mensch Gott sei, welches nicht sein könnte, wenn die göttliche und menschliche Natur allerdings keine Gemeinschaft in Tat und Wahrheit miteinander hätten.

licet Deus dicatur homo, et homo Deus appelletur, ita tamen, ut Deus nihil cum humanitate commune habeat, et vicissim humanitas nihil cum divinitate, quoad ipsius maiestatem et proprietates, realiter, hoc est, revera et re ipsa, commune habeat. Contrariam vero huic dogmati sententiam D. Lutherus, et qui cum ipso faciunt, adversus Sacramentarios propugnant.

AFFIRMATIVA.

[R. 606]

Sincera doctrina ecclesiae Dei de persona Christi.

4) Ad explicandam hanc controversiam et iuxta analogiam fidei nostrae Christianae decidendam, fidem, doctrinam et confessionem nostram piam perspicue profitemur, videlicet:

5) I. Quod divina et humana natura in Christo personaliter unitae sint, ita prorsus, ut non sint duo Christi, unus Filius Dei, alter Filius hominis, sed ut unus et idem sit Dei et hominis Filius, Luc. 1, 35; Rom. 9, 5.

6) II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, divinam et humanam naturas non in unam substantiam commixtas, nec unam in alteram mutatam esse, sed utramque naturam retinere suas proprietates essentielles, ut quae alterius naturae proprietates fieri nequeant.

7) III. Proprietates divinae naturae sunt: esse omnipotentem, aeternam, infinitam et secundum naturae naturalisque suae essentiae proprietatem, per se, ubique praesentem esse, omnia novisse etc. Haec omnia neque sunt, neque unquam fiunt humanae naturae proprietates.

8) IV. Humanae autem naturae proprietates sunt: corpoream esse creaturam, constare carne et sanguine, esse finitam et circumscriptam, pati, mori, ascendere, descendere, de loco ad locum moveri, esurire, sitire, algere, aestu affligi et si quae sunt similia. Haec neque sunt, neque unquam fiunt proprietates divinae naturae.

9) V. Cum vero divina et humana naturae personaliter, hoc est, ad constituendum unum ὑποστάσεων, sint unitae, credimus, docemus et confitemur, unionem illam hypostaticam non esse talem copulationem aut combinationem, cuius ratione neutra natura cum [R. 607] altera personaliter, hoc est, propter unionem personalem, quidquam commune habeat, qualis combinatio fit, cum duo asseres conglutinantur, ubi neuter alteri quidquam confert aut aliquid ab altero accipit. Quin potius hic summa communio est, quam Deus cum assumpto homine vere habet, et ex personali unionem et summa ac ineffabili communione, quae inde consequitur, totum illud promanat, quidquid humani de Deo et quidquid divini de homine Christo dicitur et creditur. Et hanc unionem atque communionem naturarum antiquissimi ecclesiae doctores similitudine ferri candentis, itemque unionem corporis et animae in homine declararunt.

10) VI. Hinc etiam credimus, docemus atque confitemur, quod Deus sit homo et homo sit Deus, id quod nequaquam ita se haberet, si divina et humana natura prorsus inter se nihil revera et re ipsa communicarent.

they plainly say, facit communia nomina, i. e., the personal union makes nothing more than the names common, namely, that God is called man, and man God, yet in such a way that God has nothing realiter, that is, in deed and truth, in common with humanity, and humanity nothing in common with divinity, its majesty and properties. Dr. Luther, and those who held with him, have contended for the contrary against the Sacramentarians.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Pure Doctrine of the Christian Church concerning the Person of Christ.

To explain this controversy, and settle it according to the guidance [analogy] of our Christian faith, our doctrine, faith, and confession is as follows:

1. That the divine and human natures in Christ are personally united, so that there are not two Christs, one the Son of God, the other the Son of man, but that one and the same is the Son of God and Son of man, Luke 1, 35; Rom. 9, 5.

2. We believe, teach, and confess that the divine and human natures are not mingled into one substance, nor the one changed into the other, but that each retains its own essential properties, which [can] never become the properties of the other nature.

3. The properties of the divine nature are: to be almighty, eternal, infinite, and to be, according to the property of its nature and its natural essence, of itself, everywhere present, to know everything, etc.; which never become properties of the human nature.

4. The properties of the human nature are: to be a corporeal creature, to be flesh and blood, to be finite and circumscribed, to suffer, to die, to ascend and descend, to move from one place to another, to suffer hunger, thirst, cold, heat, and the like; which never become properties of the divine nature.

5. As the two natures are united personally, i. e., in one person, we believe, teach, and confess that this union is not such a copulation and connection that neither nature has anything in common with the other personally, i. e., because of the personal union, as when two boards are glued together, where neither gives anything to the other or takes anything from the other. But here is the highest communion, which God truly has with the [assumed] man, from which personal union, and the highest and ineffable communion resulting therefrom, there flows everything human that is said and believed concerning God, and everything divine that is said and believed concerning the man Christ; as the ancient teachers of the Church explained this union and communion of the natures by the illustration of iron glowing with fire, and also by the union of body and soul in man.

6. Hence we believe, teach, and confess that God is man and man is God, which could not be if the divine and human natures had in deed and truth absolutely no communion with one another.

Denn wie könnte der Mensch, Marien Sohn, Gott oder Gottes des Allerhöchsten Sohn mit Wahrheit genennet [genannt] werden oder sein, wenn seine Menschheit mit Gottes Sohn nicht persönlich vereinigt und also realiter, daß ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, nichts, sondern nur den Namen Gottes mit ihm gemein hätte?

7. Daher glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß Maria nicht einen bloßen, purlauteren Menschen, sondern den wahrhaftigen Sohn Gottes empfangen und geboren habe, darum sie auch recht [mit Recht] die Mutter Gottes genennet wird und auch wahrhaftig ist.

8. Daher glauben, lehren und bekennen wir auch, daß nicht ein purlauterer Mensch für uns gelitten, gestorben, begraben, gen Hölle gefahren, von Toten erstanden, gen Himmel gefahren und gesetzt zur Majestät und allmächtigen Kraft Gottes, sondern ein solcher Mensch, des menschliche Natur mit dem Sohn Gottes so eine tiefe, unaussprechliche Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft hat, daß sie mit ihm eine Person ist.

9. Darum wahrhaftig der Sohn Gottes für uns gelitten [hat], doch nach Eigenschaft der menschlichen Natur, welche er in Einigkeit seiner göttlichen Person angenommen und ihm [sich] eigen gemacht, daß er leiden und unser Hohepriester zu unserer Versöhnung mit Gott sein könnte, wie geschrieben steht: „Sie haben den Herrn der Herrlichkeit gekreuziget“; und: „Mit Gottes Blut sind wir erlöst worden“, 1 Kor. 2; Act. 20.

10. Daher glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß des Menschen Sohn zur Rechten der allmächtigen Majestät und Kraft Gottes realiter, daß ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, nach der menschlichen Natur erhöht [ist], weil er in Gott aufgenommen, als er von dem Heiligen Geist in Mutterleibe empfangen, und seine menschliche Natur mit dem Sohn des Allerhöchsten persönlich vereinigt [worden ist].

11. Welche Majestät er nach der persönlichen Vereinigung allwegen [allezeit] gehabt und sich doch derselben im Stande seiner Erniedrigung geäußert und [aus] der Ursache wahrhaftig an aller Weisheit und Gnade bei Gott und den Menschen zugenommen; darum er solche Majestät nicht allezeit, sondern wann es ihm gefallen, erzeigt [hat], bis er die Knechtsgestalt, und nicht die Natur, nach seiner Auferstehung ganz und gar hingelegt und in den völligen Gebrauch, Offenbarung und Erweisung der göttlichen Majestät gesetzt und also in seine Herrlichkeit eingegangen, daß er jetzt nicht allein als Gott, sondern auch als Mensch alles weiß, alles vermag, allen Creaturen gegenwärtig ist und alles, was im Himmel, auf Erden und unter der Erde ist, unter seinen Füßen und in seinen Händen hat; wie er selbst zeugt: „Mir ist gegeben alle Gewalt im Himmel und auf Erden“; und St. Paulus: „Er ist über alle Himmel gefahren, auf daß er alles erfüllete“; welche seine Gewalt er allenthalben gegenwärtig üben kann, und ihm alles möglich und alles wissend ist, Phil. 2; Eph. 4.

12. Daher er auch vermag und ihm ganz leicht ist, seinen wahrhaftigen Leib und Blut im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig mitzutheilen; nicht

11] Quomodo enim homo, Mariae Filius, Deus aut Filius Dei altissimi vere appellari posset aut esset, si ipsius humanitas cum Filio Dei non esset personaliter unita, atque ita realiter, hoc est, vere et re ipsa, nihil prorsus, excepto solo nudo nomine, cum ipso commune haberet?

12] VII. Eam ob causam credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod virgo Maria non nudum aut merum hominem duntaxat, sed verum Dei Filium conceperit et genuerit: unde recte mater Dei et appellatur et revera est.

13] VIII. Inde porro credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod non nudus homo tantum pro nobis passus, mortuus et sepultus sit, ad inferos descenderit, a mortuis resurrexerit, ad coelos ascenderit et ad maiestatem et omnipotentem Dei virtutem evectus fuerit, sed talis homo, cuius humana natura cum Filio Dei tam arctam ineffabilemque unionem et communicationem habet, ut cum eo una sit facta persona.

14] IX. Quapropter vere Filius Dei [R. 608 pro nobis esse passus, sed secundum proprietatem humanae naturae, quam in unitatem divinae suae personae assumpsit sibi] eam propriam fecit, ut videlicet pati et pontifex noster summus reconciliationis nostrae cum Deo causa esse posset. Sic enim scriptum est 1 Cor. 2, 8: Dominum gloriae crucifixerunt; et Act. 20, 28: Sanguine Dei redempti sumus.

15] X. Ex eodem etiam fundamento credimus, docemus et confitemur, Filium hominis ad dexteram omnipotentis maiestatis et virtutis Dei realiter, hoc est, vere et re ipsa, secundum humanam suam naturam esse exaltatum, cum homo ille in Deum assumptus fuerit, quam primum in utero matris a Spiritu Sancto est conceptus, eiusque humanitas iam tum cum Filio Dei altissimi personaliter fuerit unita.

16] XI. Eamque maiestatem ratione unionis personalis semper Christus habuit, sed in statu suae humiliationis sese exinanivit, quae de causa revera aetate, sapientia et gratia apud Deum atque homines profecit. Quare maiestatem illam non semper, sed quoties ipsi visum fuit, exeruit [exseruit], donec formam servi, non autem naturam humanam, post resurrectionem plene et prorsus deponeret et in plenariam usurpationem, manifestationem et declarationem divinae maiestatis collocaretur et hoc modo in gloriam suam ingrederetur [Phil. 2, 6 sqq.]. Itaque iam non tantum ut Deus, verum etiam ut homo omnia novit, omnia potest, omnibus creaturis praesens est et omnia, quae in coelis, in terris et sub terra sunt, sub pedibus suis et in manu sua habet. Haec ita se habere Christus ipse testatur, inquit Matth. 28, 18; Ioh. 13, 3: Mihi data est omnis potestas in coelo et in terra. Et Paulus ait Eph. 4, 10: Ascendit super omnes coelos, ut omnia impleat. Hanc suam potestatem ubique praesens exercere potest, neque quidquam illi aut impossibile est aut ignotum.

17] XII. Inde adeo, et quidem facillime, corpus suum verum et sanguinem suum [R. 609 Sacra Coena praesens distribuere potest. Id

For how could the man, the son of Mary, in truth be called or be God, or the Son of God the Most High, if His humanity were not personally united with the Son of God, and He thus had realiter, that is, in deed and truth, nothing in common with Him except only the name of God?

7. Hence we believe, teach, and confess that Mary conceived and bore not a mere man and no more, but the true Son of God; therefore she also is rightly called and truly is the mother of God.

8. Hence we also believe, teach, and confess that it was not a mere man who suffered, died, was buried, descended to hell, arose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and was raised to the majesty and almighty power of God for us, but a man whose human nature has such a profound [close], ineffable union and communion with the Son of God that it is [has become] one person with Him.

9. Therefore the Son of God truly suffered for us, however, according to the property of the human nature which He assumed into the unity of His divine person and made His own, so that He might be able to suffer and be our High Priest for our reconciliation with God, as it is written 1 Cor. 2, 8: They have crucified the Lord of glory. And Acts 20, 28: We are purchased with God's blood.

10. Hence we believe, teach, and confess that the Son of Man is realiter, that is, in deed and truth, exalted according to His human nature to the right hand of the almighty majesty and power of God, because He [that man] was assumed into God when He was conceived of the Holy Ghost in His mother's womb, and His human nature was personally united with the Son of the Highest.

11. This majesty He [Christ] always had according to the personal union, and yet He abstained from it in the state of His humiliation, and on this account truly increased in all wisdom and favor with God and men; therefore He exercised this majesty, not always, but when [as often as] it pleased Him, until after His resurrection He entirely laid aside the form of a servant, but not the [human] nature, and was established in the full use, manifestation, and declaration of the divine majesty, and thus entered into His glory, Phil. 2, 6 ff., so that now not only as God, but also as man He knows all things, can do all things, is present with all creatures, and has under His feet and in His hands everything that is in heaven and on earth and under the earth, as He Himself testifies Matt. 28, 18; John 13, 3: All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. And St. Paul says Eph. 4, 10: He ascended up far above all heavens, that He might fill all things. And this His power, He, being present, can exercise everywhere, and to Him everything is possible and everything is known.

12. Hence He also is able and it is very easy for Him to impart, as one who is present, His nach der Art oder Eigenschaft der menschlichen Natur, sondern nach Art und Eigenschaft göttlicher Rechte, sagt Doktor Luther aus unserm christlichen Kinder glauben; welche Gegenwärtigkeit nicht irdisch, noch capernaitanisch, gleichwohl wahrhaftig und wesentlich ist, wie die Worte seines Testaments lauten: „Das ist, ist, ist mein Leib“ ufw.

Durch diese unsere Lehre, Glauben und Bekenntnis wird die Person Christi nicht getrennt, wie Nestorius getan (welcher die communicationem idiomatum, das ist, die wahrhaftige Gemeinschaft der Eigenschaften beider Naturen in Christo, geleugnet und also die Person getrennt, wie solches Lutherus im Buch von den Conciliis erklärt); noch [werden] die Naturen samt ihren Eigenschaften miteinander in ein Wesen vermischt (wie Eutyches geirrt); noch die menschliche Natur in der Person Christi verleugnet oder abgetilgt wird; auch keine Natur in die andere verwandelt; sondern Christus ist und bleibt in alle Ewigkeit Gott und Mensch in einer unzertrennten Person; welches nach der heiligen Dreifaltigkeit das höchste Geheimnis ist, wie der Apostel zeugt 1 Tim. 3, in welchem unser einiger Trost, Leben und Seligkeit steht.

NEGATIVA.

Widerwärtige falsche Lehre von der Person Christi.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir als Gottes Wort und unserm einfältigen christlichen Glauben zuwider alle nachfolgenden irrigen Artikel, wenn gelehrt wird:

1. Daß Gott und Mensch in Christo nicht eine Person, sondern ein anderer Gottes und ein anderer des Menschen Sohn sei; wie Nestorius narret.

2. Daß die göttliche und menschliche Natur miteinander in ein Wesen vermischt und die menschliche Natur in die Gottheit verwandelt [sei]; wie Eutyches geschwärmt.

3. Daß Christus nicht wahrhaftiger, natürlicher, ewiger Gott sei; wie Arius gehalten.

4. Daß Christus nicht eine wahrhaftige menschliche Natur gehabt, von Leib und Seele; wie Marcion gebichtet hat.

5. Quod unio personalis faciat tantum communia nomina, das ist, daß die persönliche Vereinigung mache allein die Titel und Namen gemein.

6. Daß es nur eine phrasis und modus loquendi, das ist, nur Worte und eine Weise zu reden sei, wenn man sagt: Gott ist Mensch, Mensch ist Gott; denn die Gottheit habe nichts mit der Menschheit wie auch die Menschheit nichts mit der Gottheit realiter, das ist, mit der Tat, gemein.

7. Daß es nur communicatio verbalis, das ist, nichts denn Worte sei, wenn gesagt wird, Gottes Sohn sei für der Welt Sünde gestorben, des Menschen Sohn sei allmächtig [ge]worden.

8. Daß die menschliche Natur in Christo auf solche Weise wie die Gottheit ein unendlich Wesen [ge]worden, und aus solcher wesentlicher, mitge-vero non sit secundum modum et proprietatem humanae naturae, sed secundum modum et proprietatem dexterae Dei, ut Lutherus secundum analogiam fidei nostrae Christianae in catechesi comprehensae loqui solet. Et haec Christi in Sacra Coena praesentia neque physica aut terrena est, neque Capernaitica, interim tamen verissima et quidem substantialis est. Sic enim verba testamenti Christi sonant: Hoc est, est, est corpus meum etc.

18) Hac nostra fide, doctrina et confessione persona Christi non solvitur, quod olim Nestorius fecit. Is enim veram communicationem idiomatum seu proprietatum utriusque naturae in Christo negavit et hac ratione Christi personam solvit, quam rem D. Lutherus in libello suo De Conciliis perspicue declaravit. Neque hac pia nostra doctrina duae in Christo naturae earumque proprietates confunduntur, aut in unam essentiam commiscuntur (in quo errore Eutyches fuit), neque humana natura in persona Christi negatur aut aboletur, neque altera natura in alteram mutatur; sed Christus verus Deus et homo in una indivisa persona est permanetque in omnem aeternitatem. Hoc post illud Trinitatis summum est mysterium, ut apostolus testatur 1 Tim. 3, 16, in quo solo tota nostra consolatio, vita et salus posita est.

NEGATIVA.

Contrariae et falsae doctrinae de persona Christi relectio.

19) Repudiamus igitur atque damnamus omnes erroneos, quos iam recitabimus, articulos, eo quod Verbo Dei et sinceræ fidei nostrae Christianae repugnent, cum videlicet sequentes errores docentur:

20) I. Quod Deus et homo in Christo [R. 610] non constituent unam personam, sed quod alius sit Dei Filius et alius hominis Filius, ut Nestorius deliravit.

21) II. Quod divina et humana naturae in unam essentiam commixtae sint, et humana natura in Deitatem mutata sit, ut Eutyches furenter dixit.

22) III. Quod Christus non sit verus, naturalis et aeternus Deus, ut Arius blasphemavit.

23) IV. Quod Christus non veram humanam naturam animæ rationali et corpore constantem habuerit, ut Marcion finxit.

24) V. Quod unio personalis faciat tantum communia nomina et communes titulos.

25) VI. Quod phrasis tantum et modus quidam loquendi sit, cum dicitur: Deus est homo et homo est Deus; siquidem Divinitas nihil cum humanitate et humanitas nihil cum Deitate realiter, hoc est, vere et re ipsa, commune habeat.

26) VII. Quod tantum sit verbalis sine re ipsa idiomatum communicatio, cum dicitur, Filium Dei pro peccatis mundi mortuum esse, Filium hominis omnipotentem factum esse.

27) VIII. Quod humana in Christo natura eo modo, quo est Divinitas, facta sit essentia quaedam infinita, et ex hac essentiali, com-true body and blood in the Holy Supper, not according to the mode or property of the human nature, but according to the mode and property of the right hand of God, as Dr. Luther says in accordance with our Christian faith for children, which presence [of Christ in the Holy Supper] is not [physical or] earthly, nor Capernaïtic; nevertheless it is true and substantial, as the words of His testament read: This is, is, is My body, etc.

By this our doctrine, faith, and confession the person of Christ is not divided, as it was by Nestorius, who denied the communicatio idiomatum, that is, the true communion of the properties of both natures in Christ, and thus divided the person, as Luther has explained in his book Concerning Councils. Neither are the natures together with their properties confounded with one another [or mingled] into one essence (as Eutyches erred); nor is the human nature in the person of Christ denied or annihilated; nor is either nature changed into the other; but Christ is and remains to all eternity God and man in one undivided person, which, next to the Holy Trinity, is, as the Apostle testifies, 1 Tim. 3, 16, the highest mystery, upon which our only consolation, life, and salvation depends.

NEGATIVA.

Contrary False Doctrine concerning the Person of Christ.

Accordingly, we reject and condemn as contrary to God's Word and our simple [pure] Christian faith all the following erroneous articles, when it is taught:

1. That God and man in Christ are not one person, but that the Son of God is one, and the Son of Man another, as Nestorius raved.

2. That the divine and human natures have been mingled with one another into one essence, and the human nature has been changed into the Deity, as Eutyches fanatically asserted.

3. That Christ is not true, natural, and eternal God, as Arius held [blasphemed].

4. That Christ did not have a true human nature [consisting] of body and soul, as Marcion imagined.

5. Quod unio personalis faciat tantum communia nomina, that is, that the personal union renders only the names and titles common.

6. That it is only phrasis et modus loquendi, that is, a phrase and mode of speaking, when it is said: God is man, man is God; since Divinity, as they say, has realiter, that is, in deed [and truth], nothing in common with the humanity, nor the humanity with the Deity.

7. That there is merely communicatio [idiomatum] verbalis [without reality], that is, that it is nothing but words when it is said the Son of God died for the sins of the world; the Son of Man has become almighty.

8. That the human nature in Christ has become an infinite essence in the same manner as the Divinity, and that it is everywhere present in the same manner as the divine theilte, in die menschliche Natur ausgegossener und von Gott abgesonderter Kraft und Eigenschaft auf solche Weise wie die göttliche Natur allenthalben gegenwärtig sei.

9. Daß die menschliche Natur der göttlichen Natur an ihrer Substanz und Wesen oder an derselben wesentlichen Eigenschaften äquäwertig und gleich [ge]worden sei.

10. Daß die menschliche Natur Christi in alle Orte des Himmels und der Erden räumlich ausgespannt [sei], welches auch der göttlichen Natur nicht zugemessen werden soll.

11. Daß Christo unmöglich sei von wegen der Eigenschaft menschlicher Natur, daß er zumal [zu gleicher Zeit] mehr denn an einem Ort, noch viel weniger allenthalben mit seinem Leibe sein könnte.

12. Daß allein die bloße Menschheit für uns gelitten und uns erlöst habe, und daß der Sohn Gottes im Leiden mit derselben keine Gemeinschaft mit der Sat gehabt, als wenn es ihn nichts an[ge]gangen hätte.

13. Daß Christus allein nach seiner Gottheit bei uns auf Erden im Wort, Sakramenten und allen unsern Nöten gegenwärtig sei, und solche Gegenwärtigkeit seine menschliche Natur ganz und gar nichts angehe, nach welcher er auch mit uns auf Erden, nachdem er uns durch sein Leiden und Sterben erlöst, nicht mehr [nichts mehr] zu schaffen habe.

14. Daß der Sohn Gottes, so die menschliche Natur angenommen, nachdem er Knechtsgestalt abgelegt, nicht alle Werke seiner Allmächtigkeit in, durch und mit seiner menschlichen Natur verrichte, sondern nur etliche, und allein an dem Ort, da die menschliche Natur räumlich sei.

15. Daß er nach der menschlichen Natur der Allmächtigkeit und anderer Eigenschaften göttlicher Natur allerdings nicht fähig sei; wider den ausgedrückten [ausdrücklichen] Spruch Christi: „Mir ist gegeben alle Gewalt im Himmel und auf Erden“, Matth. 28; und St. Paulus: „In ihm wohnet alle Fülle der Gottheit leibhaftig“, Kol. 2.

16. Daß ihm größere Gewalt im Himmel und auf Erden gegeben, nämlich größere und mehr denn allen Engeln und andern Kreaturen, aber mit der Allmächtigkeit Gottes habe er keine Gemeinschaft, sei ihm auch dieselbe nicht gegeben. Daher sie eine mediam potentiam, das ist, eine solche Gewalt zwischen Gottes allmächtiger Gewalt und anderer Kreaturen Gewalt, dichten, die Christo nach seiner Menschheit durch die Erhöhung gegeben, die weniger denn Gottes allmächtige Gewalt und größer denn anderer Kreaturen Gewalt sei.

17. Daß Christus nach seinem menschlichen Geiste ein gewisses Maß habe, wieviel er wissen solle, und daß er nicht mehr wisse, denn ihm gebührt und vonnöten sei, zu seinem Richteramt zu wissen.

18. Daß Christus noch nicht vollkommene Erkenntnis Gottes und aller seiner Werke habe; von dem doch geschrieben steht, daß „in ihm alle Schätze der Weisheit und der Erkenntnis verborgen seien“, Kol. 2.

19. Daß Christo nach seinem menschlichen Geiste unmöglich sei zu wissen, was von Ewigkeit gemunicata, in humanam naturam effusa et a Deo separata virtute et proprietate eo modo quo divina natura ubique praesens sit.

28] IX. Quod humana natura divinae ratione substantiae atque essentiali suae vel proprietatum divinarum essentialium exaequata sit.

29] X. Quod humana natura in Christo in omnia loca coeli et terrae localiter expansa sit, quod ne quidem divinae naturae est tribuendum.

30] XI. Quod Christo impossibile sit [R. 611] propter humanae naturae proprietatem, ut simul in pluribus quam in uno loco, nedum ubique suo cum corpore esse possit.

31] XII. Quod sola humanitas pro nobis passa sit nosque redemerit, et quod Filius Dei in passione nullam prorsus cum humanitate (re ipsa) communicationem habuerit, perinde ac si id negotium nihil ad ipsum pertinuisset.

32] XIII. Quod Filius Dei tantummodo divinitate sua nobis in terris, in Verbo, sacramentis, in omnibus denique aerumnis nostris praesens sit, et quod haec praesentia prorsus ad humanitatem nihil pertineat. Christo enim, postquam nos passione et morte sua redemerit, secundum humanitatem suam nihil amplius nobiscum in terris esse negotii.

33] XIV. Quod Filius Dei, qui humanam naturam assumpsit, iam post depositam servi formam non omnia opera omnipotentiae suae in et cum humanitate sua et per eam efficiat, sed tantum aliqua, et quidem in eo tantum loco, ubi humana natura est localiter.

XV. Quod secundum humanitatem omnipotentiae aliarumque proprietatum divinae naturae prorsus non sit capax. Idque asserere audent contra expressum testimonium Christi, Matth. 28, 18: Mihi data est omnis potestas in coelo et in terra. Et contradicunt Paulo, qui ait Col. 2, 9: In ipso inhabitat tota divinitas plenitudo corporaliter.

35] XVI. Quod Christo secundum humanitatem data quidem sit maxima potestas in coelo et in terra, videlicet maior et amplior, quam omnes angeli et creaturae acceperint, sed tamen ita, ut cum omnipotentia Dei nullam habeat communicationem, neque omnipotentia illi data sit. Itaque mediam quandam potentiam inter omnipotentiam Dei et inter aliarum creaturarum potentiam fingunt, datam Christo secundum humanam eius naturam per exaltationem, quae minor quidem sit quam Dei omnipotentia, maior tamen omnium aliarum creaturarum potestate.

36] XVII. Quod Christo secundum [R. 612] spiritum suum humanum certi limites positi sint, quantum videlicet ipsum scire oporteat, et quod non plus sciat, quam ipsi conveniat, et ad executionem sui officii, iudicis nimirum, necessario requiratur.

37] XVIII. Quod Christus ne hodie quidem perfectam habeat cognitionem Dei et omnium ipsius operum, cum tamen de Christo scriptum sit Col. 2, 3, in ipso omnes thesauros sapientiae et scientiae absconditos esse.

38] XIX. Quod Christo secundum humanitatis suae spiritum impossibile sit scire, quid nature because of this essential power and property, communicated to, and poured out into, the human nature and separated from God.

9. That the human nature has become equal to and like the divine nature in its substance and essence, or in its essential properties.

10. That the human nature of Christ is locally extended to all places of heaven and earth, which should not be ascribed even to the divine nature.

11. That because of the property of the human nature it is impossible for Christ to be able to be at the same time in more than one place, much less everywhere, with His body.

12. That only the mere humanity has suffered for us and redeemed us, and that the Son of God in the suffering had actually no communion with the humanity, as though it did not concern Him.

13. That Christ is present with us on earth in the Word, the Sacraments, and in all our troubles, only according to His divinity, and that this presence does not at all pertain to His human nature, according to which also, as they say, He, after having redeemed us by His suffering and death, has nothing to do with us any longer upon earth.

14. That the Son of God who assumed the human nature, after He has laid aside the form of a servant, does not perform all the works of His omnipotence in, through, and with His human nature, but only some, and only in the place where His human nature is locally.

15. That according to His human nature He is not at all capable of omnipotence and other attributes of the divine nature, against the express declaration of Christ, Matt. 28, 18: All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth, and of St. Paul, Col. 2, 9: In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

16. That to Him [to Christ according to His humanity] greater power is given in heaven and upon earth, namely, greater and more than to all angels and other creatures, but that He has no communion with the omnipotence of God, nor that this has been given Him. Hence they devise mediam potentiam, that is, a power between the almighty power of God and the power of other creatures given to Christ according to His humanity by the exaltation, such as would be less than God's almighty power and greater than that of other creatures.

17. That Christ according to His human mind has a certain limit as to how much He is to know, and that He knows no more than is becoming and needful for Him to know for [the execution of] His office as Judge.

18. That Christ does not yet have a perfect knowledge of God and all His works; of whom nevertheless it is written Col. 2, 3: In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

19. That it is impossible for Christ according to His human mind to know what has been weisen, was jegund allenthalben geschehe und noch in Ewigkeit sein werde.

20. Da gelehrt und der Spruch Matth. 28: „Wir ist gegeben alle Gewalt“ uſw. also gedeutet und lästerlich verkehrt wird, daß Christo nach der göttlichen Natur in der Auferstehung und seiner Himmelfahrt restituirt, daß ist, wiederum zugeſtellt worden ſei alle Gewalt im Himmel und auf Erden, als hätte er im Stande ſeiner [Er]Niedrigung auch nach der Gottheit ſolche abgelegt und verlaſſen. Durch welche Lehre nicht allein die Worte des Testaments Chriſti verkehrt [werden], ſondern auch der verdammten arianischen Ketzerei der Weg bereitet [wird], daß endlich Chriſtus' ewige Gottheit verleugnet, und also Chriſtus ganz und gar ſamt unſerer Seligkeit verloren [würde], da [wenn] ſolcher falſchen Lehre aus beſtändigem Grunde göttliches Wort und unſers einfältigen chriſtlichen Glaubens nicht widerſprochen würde.

IX.

Von der Höllenfahrt Chriſti.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Hauptſtreit über dieſen Artikel.

Es iſt auch unter etlichen Theologen, ſo der Augſburgiſchen Konfeſſion zugetan, über dieſen Artikel geſtritten worden: wann und auf was Weiſe der Herr Chriſtus, vermöge [laut] unſers einfältigen chriſtlichen Glaubens, gen Hölle gefahren, ob es geſchehen ſei vor oder nach ſeinem Tode; item, ob es nach der Seele allein oder nach der Gottheit allein oder mit Leib und Seele, geiſtlich oder leiblich zu[ge]gangen; item, ob dieſer Artikel gehöre zum Leiden oder zum herrlichen Sieg und Triumph Chriſti.

Nachdem aber dieſer Artikel wie auch der vor[her]gehende nicht mit den Sinnen noch mit der Vernunft begriffen werden kann, ſondern muß allein mit dem Glauben gefaßt werden, iſt unſer einhellig Bedenken, daß ſolches nicht zu diſputieren, ſondern nur außs einfältigſte geglaubt und gelehrt werden ſolle; inmaſſen D. Luther ſeliger in der Predigt zu Torgau Anno 33 uſw. ſolchen Artikel ganz chriſtlich erklärt, alle unnützligen, unnotwendigen Fragen abgeſchnitten und zu chriſtlicher Einfachheit des Glaubens alle frommen Chriſten vermahnt [hat].

Denn es iſt genug, daß wir wiſſen, daß Chriſtus in die Hölle gefahren, die Hölle allen Gläubigen zerſtört und ſie aus der Gewalt des Todes, Teufels, ewiger Verdammnis des hölliſchen Rachens erlöſt habe. Wie aber ſolches zu[ge]gangen, ſollen wir ſparen biß in die andere Welt, da uns nicht allein dieß Stück, ſondern auch noch anderes mehr geoffenbart [worden wird], daß wir hier einfältig geglaubt [haben] und mit unſerer blinden Vernunft nicht begreifen können.

ab aeterno fuerit, quid iam nunc ubique fiat et quid in omnem aeternitatem sit futurum.

30) XX. Relicimus etiam damnamusque, quod dictum Christi Matth. 28, 19: Mihi data est omnis potestas in coelo et in terra, horribili et blasphema interpretatione a quibusdam depravatur in hanc sententiam: quod Christo secundum divinam suam naturam in resurrectione et ascensione ad coelos iterum restituta fuerit omnis potestas in coelo et in terra, perinde quasi, dum in statu humiliationis erat, eam potestatem etiam secundum divinitatem deposuisset et exuisset. Hac enim doctrina non modo verba testamenti Christi falsa explicatione pervertuntur, verum etiam dudum damnatae Arianæ hæresi via de novo sternitur, ut tandem aeterna Christi divinitas negetur, et Christus totus, quantus quantus est, una cum salute nostra amittatur, nisi huic impiæ doctrinae ex solidis Verbi Dei et fidei nostræ catholicæ fundamentis constanter contradicatur.

IX.

[R. 613]

DE DESCENSU CHRISTI AD INFEROS.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

1) Disceptam fuit super hoc articulo inter quosdam theologos, qui Augustanam Confessionem profitentur: quando et quomodo Dominus noster Iesus Christus, ut testatur fides nostra catholica, ad inferos descenderit, an id ante vel post mortem eius factum sit. Præterea quaesitum fuit, num anima tantum, an divinitate sola, an vero anima et corpore descenderit, idque an spiritualiter an vero corporaliter sit factum. Disputatum etiam est, num hic articulus ad passionem an vero ad gloriosam victoriam et triumphum Christi sit referendus.

2) Cum autem hic fidei nostræ articulus, sicut et præcedens, neque sensibus neque ratione nostra comprehendi queat, sola autem fide acceptandus sit, unanimi consensu consulimus, de hac re non esse disputandum, sed quam simplicissime hunc articulum credendum et docendum esse. Atque in hoc negotio sequamur piam D. Lutheri doctrinam, qui hunc articulum in concione Torgæ habita (anno etc. XXXIII.) pie admodum explicuit, omnes inutiles et curiosas quaestiones præcidit atque ad piam fidei simplicitatem omnes Christianos adhortatus est.

4) Satis enim nobis esse debet, si sciamus, Christum ad inferos descendisse, infernum omnibus credentibus destruxisse, nosque per ipsum e potestate mortis et Satanae, ab aeterna damnatione atque adeo e faucibus inferni ereptos. Quo autem modo hæc effecta fuerint, non curiose scrutemur, sed [R. 614] huius rei cognitionem alteri sæculo reservemus, ubi non modo hoc mysterium, sed et alia multa in hac vita simpliciter a nobis credita revelabuntur, quæ captum caecæ nostræ rationis excedunt.

from eternity, what at present is occurring everywhere, and what will be in eternity.

20. When it is taught, and the passage Matt. 28, 18: All power is given unto Me, etc., is thus interpreted and blasphemously perverted, namely, that all power in heaven and on earth was restored, that is, delivered again to Christ according to the divine nature, at the resurrection and His ascension to heaven, as though He had also according to His divinity laid this aside and abandoned it in His state of humiliation. By this doctrine not only the words of the testament of Christ are perverted, but also the way is prepared for the accursed Arian heresy, so that finally the eternal deity of Christ is denied, and thus Christ, and with Him our salvation, are entirely lost if this false doctrine were not firmly contradicted from the immovable foundation of the divine Word and our simple Christian [catholic] faith.

IX.

OF THE DESCENT OF CHRIST TO HELL.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Chief Controversy concerning This Article.

It has also been disputed among some theologians who have subscribed to the Augsburg Confession concerning this article: When and in what manner the Lord Christ, according to our simple Christian faith, descended to hell: whether this was done before or after His death; also, whether it occurred according to the soul alone, or according to the divinity alone, or with body and soul, spiritually or bodily; also, whether this article belongs to the passion or to the glorious victory and triumph of Christ.

But since this article, as also the preceding, cannot be comprehended by the senses or by our reason, but must be grasped by faith alone, it is our unanimous opinion that there should be no disputation concerning it, but that it should be believed and taught only in the simplest manner; according as Dr. Luther, of blessed memory, in his sermon at Torgau in the year 1533 has explained this article in an altogether Christian manner, separated from it all useless, unnecessary questions, and admonished all godly Christians to Christian simplicity of faith.

For it is sufficient that we know that Christ descended into hell, destroyed hell for all believers, and delivered them from the power of death and of the devil, from eternal condemnation and the jaws of hell. But how this occurred we should [not curiously investigate, but] reserve until the other world, where not only this point [mystery], but also still others will be revealed, which we here simply believe, and cannot comprehend with our blind reason.

X.

Von Kirchengebräuchen,

so man Adiaphora oder Mittelbänge nennt.

Von Ceremonien oder Kirchengebräuchen, welche in Gottes Wort weder geboten noch verboten, sondern um guter Ordnung und Wohlstands (Wohlstands, kirchlicher Schicklichkeit) willen in die Kirche eingeführt, hat sich auch zwischen den Theologen Augsbургischer Confession ein Zwiespalt zugetragen.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Der Hauptstreit von diesem Artikel.

Die Hauptfrage aber ist gewesen, ob man zur Zeit der Verfolgung und im Fall des Bekenntnisses, wenn die Feinde des Evangelii sich gleich nicht mit uns in der Lehre vergleichen, dennoch mit unterletem Gewissen etliche gefallene (in Abgang gekommene, abgeschaffte) Ceremonien, so an ihm selbst (so an sich) Mittelbänge und von Gott weder geboten noch verboten (sind), auf der Widersacher Dringen und Erfordern wiederum aufrichten und sich also mit ihnen in solchen Ceremonien und Mittelbängen vergleichen möge. Der eine Theil hat ja, der andere hat nein dazu gesagt.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Die rechte, wahrhaftige Lehre und Bekenntnis von diesem Artikel.

1. Zur Hinlegung (Beilegung) auch dieses Zwiespalts glauben, lehren und bekennen wir einhellig, daß die Ceremonien oder Kirchengebräuche, welche in Gottes Wort weder geboten noch verboten, sondern allein um Wohlstands und guter Ordnung willen ange stellt (eingeführt sind), an ihnen und für sich selbst kein Gottesdienst, auch kein Theil desselben seien; Matth. 15: „Sie ehren mich umsonst mit menschlichen Geboten.“

2. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß die Gemeinde Gottes jedes Orts und jeder Zeit nach derselben Gelegenheit Macht habe, solche Ceremonien zu ändern, wie es der Gemeinde Gottes am nützlichsten und erbaulichsten sein mag.

3. Doch daß hierin alle Leichtfertigkeit und Argerniß gemieden, und sonderlich der Schwachgläubigen mit allem Fleiß verschont werde, 1 Cor. 8; Röm. 14.

4. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß zur Zeit der Verfolgung, wenn ein rundes Bekenntnis des Glaubens von uns erfordert (wird), in solchen Mittelbängen den Feinden nicht zu weichen (sei); wie der Apostel geschrieben: „So bestehet nun in der Freiheit, damit uns Christus befreiet hat, und laßt euch nicht wiederum in das flethetische Joch fangen!“ Gal. 5. Item: „Zieheth nicht an fremden Joch! Was hat das Licht für Gemeinshaft mit der Finsternis?“ 2 Cor. 6. Item: „Auf daß die Wahrheit des Evangelii bei euch bestünde, wichen wir denselben nicht eine Stunde, untertänig zu sein“, Gal. 2. Denn in solchem Falle ist es nicht mehr um Mittelbänge, sondern um die Wahrheit des Evangelii, um die christliche quae vulgo adiaphora seu res mediae et indifferentes vocantur.

X.

DE CEREMONIIS ECCLESIASTICIS,

1) Orta est etiam inter theologos Augustanae Confessionis controversia de ceremoniis seu ritibus ecclesiasticis, qui in Verbo Dei neque praecepti sunt neque prohibiti, sed ordinis tantum et decori gratia in ecclesiam sunt introducti.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

2) Quaesitum fuit, num persecutionis tempore et in casu confessionis (etiamsi adversarii nobiscum in doctrina consentire nolint) nihilominus salva conscientia aliquae iam abrogatae ceremoniae, quae per se indifferentes et a Deo neque mandatae neque prohibita sint, postulantibus id et urgentibus adversariis iterum in usum revocari possint, et an hoc modo cum pontificiis in eiusmodi ceremoniis et adiaphoris conformari recte queamus. Una pars hoc fieri posse affirmavit, altera vero negavit.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera doctrina et confessio de hoc articulo.

3) I. Ad hanc controversiam dirimendam unanimi consensu credimus, docemus [R. 615 et confitemur, quod ceremoniae sive ritus ecclesiastici (qui Verbo Dei neque praecepti sunt neque prohibiti, sed tantum decori et ordinis causa instituti) non sint per se cultus divini aut aliqua saltem pars cultus divini. Scriptum est enim Matth. 15, 9: Frustra colunt me, docentes doctrinas, mandata hominum.

4) II. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, ecclesiae Dei ubivis terrarum et quocunque tempore licere, pro re nata ceremonias tales mutare iuxta eam rationem, quae ecclesiae Dei utilissima et ad aedificationem eiusdem maxime accommodata iudicatur.

5) III. Ea tamen in re omnem levitatem fugiendam et offendicula cavenda, imprimis vero infirmorum in fide rationem habendam et iis parcendum esse censemus, 1 Cor. 8, 9; Rom. 14, 13.

6) IV. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod temporibus persecutionum, quando perspicua et constans confessio a nobis exigitur, hostibus evangelii in rebus adiaphoris non sit cedendum. Sic enim apostolus inquit Gal. 5, 1: Qua libertate Christus nos liberavit, in ea state et nolite iterum iugo servitutis subiaci. Et alibi, 2 Cor. 6, 14: Nolite iugum ducere cum infidelibus etc. Quae enim est societas luci ad tenebras etc.? Item Gal. 2, 5: Quibus neque ad horam cessimus subiectione, ut veritas evangelii permaneret apud vos. In tali enim rerum statu non agitur iam amplius de adiaphoris, sed de veritate evangelii et de libertate Christiana sarta tectaque

X.

OF CHURCH RITES

Which are [Commonly] Called Adiaphora or Matters of Indifference.

Concerning ceremonies or church rites which are neither commanded nor forbidden in God's Word, but have been introduced into the Church for the sake of good order and propriety, a dissension has also occurred among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Chief Controversy concerning This Article.

The chief question, however, has been, whether, in time of persecution and in case of confession, even if the enemies of the Gospel have not reached an agreement with us in doctrine, some abrogated ceremonies, which in themselves are matters of indifference and are neither commanded nor forbidden by God, may nevertheless, upon the pressure and demand of the adversaries, be reestablished without violence to conscience, and we may thus [rightly] have conformity with them in such ceremonies and adiaphora. To this the one side has said Yea, the other, Nay.

AFFIRMATIVA.

The Correct and True Doctrine and Confession concerning This Article.

1. For settling also this controversy we unanimously believe, teach, and confess that the ceremonies or church rites which are neither commanded nor forbidden in God's Word, but have been instituted alone for the sake of propriety and good order, are in and of themselves no divine worship, nor even a part of it. Matt. 15, 9: In vain they do worship Me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

2. We believe, teach, and confess that the congregation of God of every place and every time has the power, according to its circumstances, to change such ceremonies in such manner as may be most useful and edifying to the congregation of God.

3. Nevertheless, that herein all frivolity and offense should be avoided, and especial care should be taken to exercise forbearance towards the weak in faith. 1 Cor. 8, 9; Rom. 14, 13.

4. We believe, teach, and confess that in time of persecution, when a plain [and steadfast] confession is required of us, we should not yield to the enemies in regard to such adiaphora, as the apostle has written Gal. 5, 1: Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again in the yoke of bondage. Also 2 Cor. 6, 14: Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, etc. For what concord hath light with darkness? Also Gal. 2, 5: To whom we gave place, no, not for an hour, that the truth of the Gospel might remain with you. For in such a case it is no longer a question concerning adiaphora, but concerning the truth of the Gospel, concerning [preserving] Chris-

Freiheit und um die Befestigung öffentlicher Abgötterei wie auch um Verhütung des Uergernisses der Schwachgläubigen zu tun, darin wir nichts zu vergeben haben, sondern rund bekennen und darüber leiden sollen, was uns Gott zuschickt und über uns den Feinden seines Wortes verhängt [über uns verhängt und den Feinden seines Wortes zuschickt].

5. Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß keine Kirche die andere verdammen soll, daß eine weniger oder mehr äußerlicher von Gott ungesbotener Ceremonien denn die andere hat, wenn sonst in der Lehre und allen derselben Artikeln wie auch im rechten Gebrauch der heiligen Sacramente miteinander Einigkeit gehalten [wird], nach dem wohlbekannten Spruch: Dissonantia ieiunii non dissolvit consonantiam fidei, Ungleichheit des Fastens soll die Einigkeit im Glauben nicht trennen.

NEGATIVA.

Falsche Lehre von diesem Artikel.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir als unrecht und dem Worte Gottes zuwider, wenn gelehrt wird:

1. Daß Menschengebote und Satzungen in der Kirche für sich selbst als ein Gottesdienst oder Theil desselben gehalten werden sollen.

2. Wenn solche Ceremonien, Gebote und Satzungen mit Zwang als notwendig der Gemeinde Gottes wider ihre christliche Freiheit, so sie in äußerlichen Dingen hat, aufgedrungen werden.

3. Item, daß man zur Zeit der Verfolgung und öffentlichen Bekenntnisses den Feinden des heiligen Evangelii (welches zum Abbruch der Wahrheit dient) in vergleichenen Mittelbinden und Ceremonien möge willfahren oder sich mit ihnen vergleichen.

4. Item, wenn solche äußerliche Ceremonien und Mittelbinden also abgeschafft werden, als sollte es der Gemeinde Gottes nicht freistehen, nach ihrer guten Gelegenheit, wie es jederzeit der Kirche am nützlichsten, sich eines oder mehrerer in christlicher Freiheit zu gebrauchen.

conservanda, et quomodo cavendum sit, ne manifeste idololatria confirmetur et infirmi in fide offendantur. In huiusmodi rebus nostrum certe non est aliquid adversariis largiri, sed officium nostrum requirit, ut piam et ingenuam confessionem edamus, et ea patienter feramus, quae Dominus nobis ferenda imposuerit et hostibus Verbi Dei in nos permiserit.

7] V. Credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod ecclesia alia aliam damnare non [R. 616] debeat, propterea quod haec vel illa plus minusve externarum ceremoniarum, quas Dominus non instituit, observet, si modo in doctrina eiusque articulis omnibus et in vero sacramentorum usu sit inter eas consensus. Hoc enim vetus et verum dictum est: Dissonantia ieiunii non dissolvit consonantiam fidei.

NEGATIVA.

Falsae doctrinae de hoc articulo relectio.

8] Repudiamus atque damnamus haec falsa et Verbo Dei contraria dogmata:

9] I. Quod humanae traditiones et constitutiones in ecclesiasticis rebus per se pro cultu Dei aut certe pro parte divini cultus sint habendae.

10] II. Quando eiusmodi ceremoniae et constitutiones ecclesiae Dei coactione quadam tamquam necessariae obtruduntur, et quidem contra libertatem Christianam, quam ecclesia Christi in rebus eiusmodi externis habet.

11] III. Cum asseritur, quod tempore persecutionis, quando clara confessio requiritur, hostibus evangelii in observatione eiusmodi rerum adiaphorarum gratificari et cum ipsis pacisci et consentire liceat, quae res cum detrimento veritatis coelestis coniuncta est.

12] IV. Cum externae ceremoniae, quae indifferentes sunt, ea opinione abrogantur, quasi ecclesiae Dei liberum non sit pro re nata, ut iudicaverit ad aedificationem utile esse, hanc vel illam ceremoniam ratione libertatis Christianae usurpare.

XI.

Von der ewigen Vorsehung und Wahl Gottes.

Von diesem Artikel ist kein öffentlicher Zwispalt unter den Theologen Augsburger Confession eingefallen [erregt worden]. Dieweil es aber ein tröstlicher Artikel, wenn er recht gehandelt, und deshalb [und damit seinethalben] nicht künftiglich ärgerliche Disputation eingeführt werden möchte, ist derselbe in dieser Schrift auch erklärt worden.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Reine, wahrhaftige Lehre von diesem Artikel.

1. Anfänglich ist der Unterschied zwischen der praescientia et praedestinatione, daß ist, zwischen der Vorsehung und ewigen Wahl Gottes, mit Fleiß zu merken.

XI.

[R. 617]

DE AETERNA PRAEDESTINATIONE ET ELECTIONE DEI.

1] De hoc articulo non quidem publice mota est controversia inter Augustanae Confessionis theologos; sed tamen, cum hic articulus magnam piis mentibus consolationem afferat, si recte et dextre explicetur, visum est, eundem in hoc scripto declarare, ne forte temporis progressu disputationes aliquae cum offendiculo coniunctae de hac re exoriantur.

AFFIRMATIVA.

Sincera doctrina de hoc articulo.

2] I. Primum omnium est, quod accurate observari oportet, discrimen esse inter praescientiam et praedestinationem sive aeternam electionem Dei.

tian liberty, and concerning sanctioning open idolatry, as also concerning the prevention of offense to the weak in the faith [how care should be taken lest idolatry be openly sanctioned and the weak in faith be offended]; in which we have nothing to concede, but should plainly confess and suffer on that account what God sends, and what He allows the enemies of His Word to inflict upon us.

5. We believe, teach, and confess also that no Church should condemn another because one has less or more external ceremonies not commanded by God than the other, if otherwise there is agreement among them in doctrine and all its articles, as also in the right use of the holy Sacraments, according to the well-known saying: Dissonantia ieiunii non dissolvit consonantiam fidei, Disagreement in fasting does not destroy agreement in faith.

NEGATIVA.

False Doctrine concerning This Article.

Accordingly, we reject and condemn as wrong and contrary to God's Word when it is taught:

1. That human ordinances and institutions in the church should be regarded as in themselves a divine worship or part of it.

2. When such ceremonies, ordinances, and institutions are violently forced upon the congregation of God as necessary, contrary to its Christian liberty which it has in external things.

3. Also, that in time of persecution and public confession [when a clear confession is required] we may yield to the enemies of the Gospel in such adiaphora and ceremonies, or may come to an agreement with them (which causes injury to the truth).

4. Also, when these external ceremonies and adiaphora are abrogated in such a manner as though it were not free to the congregation of God to employ one or more [this or that] in Christian liberty, according to its circumstances, as may be most useful at any time to the Church [for edification].

XI.

OF GOD'S ETERNAL FOREKNOWLEDGE [PREDESTINATION] AND ELECTION.

Concerning this article no public dissension has occurred among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession. But since it is a consolatory article, if treated properly, and lest offensive disputations concerning the same be instituted in the future, it is also explained in this writing.

AFFIRMATIVA.

The Pure and True Doctrine concerning This Article.

1. To begin with [First of all], the distinction between praescientia et praedestinatio, that is, between God's foreknowledge and His eternal election, ought to be accurately observed.

2. Denn die Vorsehung Gottes ist anders nicht, denn daß Gott alle Dinge weiß, ehe sie geschehen, wie geschrieben steht: „Gott im Himmel kann verborgene Dinge offenbaren; der hat dem König Nebuchodonosor angezeigt, was in künftigen Zeiten geschehen soll“, Dan. 2.

3. Diese Vorsehung geht zugleich über die Frommen und Bösen, ist aber keine Ursache des Bösen, weder der Sünde, daß man unrecht tue (welche ursprünglich aus dem Teufel und des Menschen bösem, verkehrtem Willen herkommt), noch ihres Verderbens, daran sie selbst schuldig [schuld], sondern ordnet allein daselbe und steckt ihm ein Ziel, wie lang es währen, und alles, unangesehen daß es an ihm selbst böse, seinen Auserwählten zu ihrem Heil dienen solle.

4. Die Prädestination aber oder ewige Wahl Gottes geht allein über die frommen, wohlgefalligen Kinder Gottes, die eine Ursache ist ihrer Seligkeit, welche er auch schafft, und was zur selbigen gehört, verordnet, darauf unsere Seligkeit so fest gegründet [ist], daß sie die Pforten der Hölle nicht überwältigen können, Joh. 10; Matth. 16.

5. Solche ist nicht in dem heimlichen Rat Gottes zu erforschen, sondern in dem Wort zu suchen, da sie auch geoffenbart worden ist.

6. Das Wort Gottes aber führt uns zu Christo, der das Buch des Lebens ist, in welchem alle die geschrieben und erwählt sind, welche da ewig selig werden sollen; wie geschrieben steht: „Er hat uns durch denselben (Christum) erwählt, ehe der Welt Grund gelegt war“, Eph. 1.

7. Dieser Christus ruft zu ihm [zu sich] alle Sünder und verheißt ihnen Erquickung, und ist ihm Ernst, daß alle Menschen zu ihm kommen und ihnen [sich] helfen lassen sollen, denen er sich im Wort anbietet [anbietet], und will, daß man es höre und nicht die Ohren verstopfen oder das Wort verachten soll; verheißt dazu die Kraft und Wirkung des Heiligen Geistes, göttlichen Beistand zur Beständigkeit und ewigen Seligkeit.

8. Deshalb wir von solcher unserer Wahl zum ewigen Leben weder aus der Vernunft noch aus dem Befehl Gottes urteilen sollen, welche uns entweder in ein wild, wild, epikurisch Leben oder in Verzweiflung führen und schädliche Gedanken in den Herzen der Menschen erwecken, daß sie bei sich selbst gedenken, auch solcher Gedanken sich nicht recht erwehren können, solange sie ihrer Vernunft folgen: Hat mich Gott erwählt zur Seligkeit, so kann ich nicht verdammt werden, ich tue, was ich will; und wiederum: Bin ich nicht erwählt zum ewigen Leben, so hilft's nichts, was ich Gutes tue; es ist doch alles umsonst.

9. Sondern es muß allein aus dem heiligen Evangelio von Christo gelernt werden, in welchem klar bezeugt wird, wie Gott alles unter den Unglauben beschloffen, auf daß er sich aller erbarme, und nicht will, daß jemand verloren werde, sondern sich jedermann zur Buße bekehre und an den Herrn Christum glaube, Jesek. 18. 33; 1 Joh. 2.

3) II. Praescientia enim Dei nihil aliud est, quam quod Deus omnia noverit, antequam fiant, sicut scriptum est Dan. 2, 28: Est Deus in coelo, revelans mysteria, qui indicavit tibi, rex Nabuchodonosor, quae ventura sunt in novissimis temporibus.

4) III. Haec Dei praescientia simul ad bonos et malos pertinet, sed interim non est causa mali, neque est causa peccati, quae hominem ad scelus impellat. Peccatum enim ex diabolo et ex hominis prava et mala voluntate oritur. Neque haec Dei praescientia causa est, quod homines pereant; hoc enim sibi ipsis imputare debent. Sed praescientia Dei disponit malum et metas illi constituit, quousque progredi et quamdiu durare debeat, idque [R. 618 eo dirigit, ut, licet per se malum sit, nihilominus electis Dei ad salutem cedat.

5) IV. Praedestinatio vero seu aeterna Dei electio tantum ad bonos et dilectos filios Dei pertinet, et haec est causa ipsorum salutis. Etenim eorum salutem procurat et ea, quae ad ipsam pertinent, disponit. Super hanc Dei praedestinationem salus nostra ita fundata est, ut inferiorum portae eam evertere nequeant, Ioh. 10, 28; Matth. 16, 18.

6) V. Haec Dei praedestinatio non in arcano Dei consilio est scrutanda, sed in Verbo Dei, in quo revelatur, quaerenda est.

7) VI. Verbum autem Dei deducit nos ad Christum; is est liber ille vitae, in quo omnes inscripti et electi sunt, qui salutem aeternam consequuntur. Sic enim scriptum est Eph. 1, 4: Elegit nos in Christo ante mundi constitutionem.

8) VII. Christus vero omnes peccatores ad se vocat et promittit illis levationem. Et serio vult, ut omnes homines ad se veniant et sibi consuli et subveniri sinant. His sese Redemptorem in Verbo offert et vult, ut Verbum audiat, et ut aures non obturentur nec Verbum negligatur et contemnatur. Et promittit se largiturum virtutem et operationem Spiritus Sancti et auxilium divinum, ut in fide constantes permaneamus et vitam aeternam consequamur.

9) VIII. De nostra igitur electione ad vitam aeternam neque ex rationis nostrae iudicio neque ex lege Dei iudicandum est, ne vel dissolutae et Epicureae vitae nos tradamus, vel in desperationem incidamus. Qui enim rationis suae iudicium in hoc negotio sequuntur, in horum cordibus haec perniciosae cogitationes (quibus aegerrime resistere possunt) excitantur: Si (inquiunt) Deus me ad aeternam salutem elegit, non potero damnari, quidquid etiam designavero. Contra vero, [R. 619 si non sum electus ad vitam aeternam, nihil plane mihi profuerit, quantumcunque boni fecero; omnes enim conatus mei irriti erunt.

10) IX. Vera igitur sententia de praedestinatione ex evangelio Christi discenda est. In eo enim perspicue docetur, quod Deus omnes sub incredulitatem concluderet, ut omnium misereatur, et quod nolit quemquam perire, sed potius, ut omnes convertantur et in Christum credant, Rom. 11, 32. Ezech. 18, 23; 33, 11. 1 Ioh. 2, 2. [2 Petr. 3, 9.]

2. For the foreknowledge of God is nothing else than that God knows all things before they happen, as it is written Dan. 2, 28: There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days.

3. This foreknowledge extends alike over the godly and the wicked, but it is not the cause of evil, neither of sin, namely, of doing what is wrong (which originally arises from the devil and the wicked, perverse will of man), nor of their ruin [that men perish], for which they themselves are responsible [which they must ascribe to themselves]; but it only regulates it, and fixes a limit to it [how far it should progress and] how long it should last, and all this to the end that it should serve His elect for their salvation, notwithstanding that it is evil in itself.

4. The predestination or eternal election of God, however, extends only over the godly, beloved children of God, being a cause of their salvation, which He also provides, as well as disposes what belongs thereto. Upon this [predestination of God] our salvation is founded so firmly that the gates of hell cannot overcome it. John 10, 28; Matt. 16, 18.

5. This [predestination of God] is not to be investigated in the secret counsel of God, but to be sought in the Word of God, where it is also revealed.

6. But the Word of God leads us to Christ, who is the Book of Life, in whom all are written and elected that are to be saved in eternity, as it is written Eph. 1, 4: He hath chosen us in Him [Christ] before the foundation of the world.

7. This Christ calls to Himself all sinners and promises them rest, and He is in earnest [seriously wills] that all men should come to Him and suffer themselves to be helped, to whom He offers Himself in His Word, and wishes them to hear it and not to stop their ears or [neglect and] despise the Word. Moreover, He promises the power and working of the Holy Ghost, and divine assistance for perseverance and eternal salvation [that we may remain steadfast in the faith and attain eternal salvation].

8. Therefore we should judge concerning this our election to eternal life neither from reason nor from the Law of God, which lead us either into a reckless, dissolute, Epicurean life or into despair, and excite pernicious thoughts in the hearts of men, for they cannot, as long as they follow their reason, successfully refrain from thinking: If God has elected me to salvation, I cannot be condemned, no matter what I do; and again: If I am not elected to eternal life, it is of no avail what good I do; it is all [all my efforts are] in vain anyway.

9. But it [the true judgment concerning predestination] must be learned alone from the holy Gospel concerning Christ, in which it is clearly testified that God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that He might have mercy upon all, and that He is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance and believe in the Lord Christ. Rom. 11, 32; Ezek. 18, 23; 33, 11; 2 Pet. 3, 9; 1 John 2, 2.

10. Wer nun sich also mit dem geoffenbarten Willen Gottes bestimmet und der Ordnung nachgeht, welche St. Paulus in der Epistel an die Römer gehalten, der zubor die Menschen zur Buße, Erkenntnis der Sünden, zum Glauben an Christum, zum göttlichen Gehorsam weist, ehe er vom Geheimnis der ewigen Wahl Gottes redet: dem ist solche Lehre nützlich und tröstlich.

11. Daß aber viele berufen und wenige ausgewählt sind, hat es nicht diese Meinung, als wolle Gott nicht jedermann selig machen, sondern die Ursache ist, daß sie Gottes Wort entweder gar nicht hören, sondern mutwillig verachten, die Ohren und ihr Herz verstopfen und also dem Heiligen Geist den ordentlichen Weg verstellen, daß er sein Werk in ihnen nicht haben kann, oder daß sie es gehört haben, wiederum in [den] Wind schlagen und nicht achten, daran nicht Gott oder seine Wahl, sondern ihre Bosheit [schuld] [schuldig] ist, 2 Petr. 2; Luf. 11; Hebr. 12.

12. Und so fern soll sich ein Christ des Artikels von der ewigen Wahl Gottes annehmen, wie sie im Wort Gottes geoffenbart [ist], welches uns Christum als das Buch des Lebens vorhält, das er uns durch die Predigt des heiligen Evangelii aufschleußt [aufschließt] und offenbart, wie geschrieben steht: „Welche er erwählt hat, die hat er auch berufen“, Röm. 8, in dem wir die ewige Wahl des Vaters suchen sollen, der in seinem ewigen göttlichen Rat beschlossen [hat], daß er außerhalb denen, so seinen Sohn Christum erkennen und wahrhaftig an ihn glauben, niemand wolle selig machen, und sich anderer Gedanken entschlagen, welche nicht aus Gott, sondern aus Eingeben des bösen Feindes herfließen, dadurch er sich unterkehrt, uns den herrlichen Trost zu schwächen oder gar zu nehmen, den wir in dieser heilsamen Lehre haben: daß wir wissen, wie wir aus lauter Gnade, ohne all unser Verdienst, in Christo zum ewigen Leben erwählt seien, und daß uns niemand aus seiner Hand reißen könne; wie er denn solche gnädige Erwählung nicht allein mit bloßen Worten zusagt, sondern auch mit dem Eide beteuert und mit den heiligen Sacramenten versiegelt hat, deren wir uns in unsern höchsten Ansehnungen erinnern und trösten und damit die feurigen Pfeile des Teufels auslöschten können.

13. Daneben sollen wir uns zum höchsten befließen, nach dem Willen Gottes zu leben und unsern Beruf, wie St. Petrus vermahnt, festzumachen, 2 Petr. 1, und sonderlich an das geoffenbarte Wort uns halten; das kann und wird uns nicht fehlen.

14. Durch diese kurze Erklärung der ewigen Wahl Gottes wird Gott seine Ehre ganz und völlig gegeben, daß er allein aus lauter Barmherzigkeit ohne all unser Verdienst uns selig mache nach dem Vorsatz seines Willens; daneben auch niemand einige Ursache zur Kleinmütigkeit oder rohem, wildem Leben gegeben [wird].

11] X. Qui igitur voluntatem Dei reuelatam inquirunt eoque ordine progrediuntur, quem diuus Paulus in epistola ad Romanos secutus est (qui hominem prius deducit ad poenitentiam, ad agnitionem peccatorum, ad fidem in Christum, ad obedientiam mandatorum Dei, quam de aeternae praedestinationis mysterio loquatur): iis doctrina de praedestinatione Dei salutaris est et maximam consolationem affert.

12] XI. Quod vero scriptum est [Matth. 22, 14]: Multos quidem vocatos, paucos vero electos esse, non ita accipiendum est, quasi Deus nolit, ut omnes salventur, sed damnationis impiorum causa est, quod Verbum Dei aut prorsus non audiant, sed contumaciter contemnant, aures obturent et cor indurent et hoc modo Spiritui Sancto viam ordinariam praeccludant, ut opus suum in eis efficere nequeat, aut certe quod Verbum auditum flocciendant atque abiiciant. Quod igitur pereunt, neque Deus neque ipsius electio, sed malitia eorum in culpa est. 2 Petr. 2, 1 sqq. Luc. 11, 49. 52. Hebr. 12, 25 sqq.

13] XII. Huc usque homo pius in meditatione articuli de aeterna Dei electione tuto progredi potest, quatenus videlicet ea in Verbo Dei est reuelata. Verbum Dei enim nobis Christum, librum vitae, proponit, is nobis per evangelii praedicationem aperitur et evolvitur, sicut scriptum est Rom. 8, 30: Quos elegit, hos vocavit. In Christo igitur electio aeterna Dei Patris est quaerenda. Is in aeterno suo [R. 620] consilio decrevit, quod praeter eos, qui Filium eius, Iesum Christum, agnoscunt et in eum vere credunt, neminem salvum facere velit. Reliquae cogitationes ex animis piorum penitus excutiendae sunt, quia non a Deo, sed ex afflatu Satanae proficiscuntur, quibus humani generis hostis hoc agit, ut dulcissimam illam consolationem vel enervet, vel penitus e medio tollat, quam ex saluberrima hac doctrina haurire possumus: qua videlicet certi reddimur, quod mera gratia sine ullo nostro merito in Christo ad vitam aeternam electi simus, et quod nemo ex ipsius manibus rapere nos possit. Et hanc clementissimam electionem non nudis verbis, sed interposito iureiurando Dominus contestando confirmavit et venerabilibus sacramentis nobis obsignavit, quorum in summis tentationibus meminisse et ex iis consolationem petere debemus, ut ignita diaboli tela exstinguamus.

14] XIII. Interim tamen summo studio in eo elaboremus, ut ad normam voluntatis divinae vitam nostram instituamus et vocationem nostram (ut diuus Petrus loquitur) firmam faciamus, 2 Petr. 1, 10, neque a Dei revelato Verbo latum unguem recedamus; illud enim nunquam nos fallet.

15] XIV. Hac brevi explicatione aeternae electionis divinae honos suus Deo plene et in solidum tribuitur, quod videlicet secundum voluntatis suae propositum mera misericordia sine ullo nostro merito salvos nos faciat. Neque tamen hac doctrina vel gravioribus illis animi perturbationibus et pusillanimitati vel Epicurismo [Epicureismo] ansa praebetur.

10. Whoever, now, is thus concerned about the revealed will of God, and proceeds according to the order which St. Paul has observed in the Epistle to the Romans, who first directs men to repentance, to knowledge of sins, to faith in Christ, to divine obedience, before he speaks of the mystery of the eternal election of God, to him this doctrine [concerning God's predestination] is useful and consolatory.

11. However, that many are called and few chosen, Matt. 22, 14, does not mean that God is not willing to save everybody; but the reason is that they either do not at all hear God's Word, but wilfully despise it, stop their ears and harden their hearts, and in this manner foreclose the ordinary way to the Holy Ghost, so that He cannot perform His work in them, or, when they have heard it, make light of it again and do not heed it, for which [that they perish] not God or His election, but their wickedness, is responsible. [2 Pet. 2, 1 ff.; Luke 11, 49, 52; Heb. 12, 25 f.]

12. Thus far a Christian should occupy himself [in meditation] with the article concerning the eternal election of God, as it has been revealed in God's Word, which presents to us Christ as the Book of Life, which He opens and reveals to us by the preaching of the holy Gospel, as it is written Rom. 8, 30: Whom He did predestinate, them He also called. In Him we are to seek the eternal election of the Father, who has determined in His eternal divine counsel that He would save no one except those who know His Son Christ and truly believe on Him. Other thoughts are to be [entirely] banished [from the minds of the godly], as they proceed not from God, but from the suggestion of the Evil Foe, whereby he attempts to weaken or entirely to remove from us the glorious consolation which we have in this salutary doctrine, namely, that we know [assuredly] that out of pure grace, without any merit of our own, we have been elected in Christ to eternal life, and that no one can pluck us out of His hand; as He has not only promised this gracious election with mere words, but has also certified it with an oath and sealed it with the holy Sacraments, which we can [ought to] call to mind in our most severe temptations, and take comfort in them, and therewith quench the fiery darts of the devil.

13. Besides, we should use the greatest diligence to live according to the will of God, and, as St. Peter admonishes, 2 Ep. 1, 10, make our calling sure, and especially adhere to [not recede a finger's breadth from] the revealed Word: that can and will not fail us.

14. By this brief explanation of the eternal election of God His glory is entirely and fully given to God, that out of pure mercy alone, without all merit of ours, He saves us according to the purpose of His will; besides, also, no cause is given any one for despondency or a vulgar, wild life [no opportunity is afforded either for those more severe agitations of mind and faint-heartedness or for Epicureanism].

ANTITHESIS oder NEGATIVA.

Falsche Lehre von diesem Artikel.

Demnach glauben und halten wir: welche die Lehre von der gnädigen Wahl Gottes zum ewigen Leben also führen, daß sich die betrübten Christen derselben nicht trösten können, sondern dadurch zur Kleinmütigkeit oder Verzweiflung verursacht, oder die Unbußfertigen in ihrem Mutwillen gestärkt werden, daß solche Lehre nicht nach dem Wort und Willen Gottes, sondern nach der Vernunft und Anstiftung des leidigen Satans getrieben werde, weil alles, was geschrieben ist, wie der Apostel zeugt, „uns zur Lehre geschrieben [ist], auf daß wir durch Geduld und Trost der Schrift Hoffnung haben“, Röm. 15. Demnach verwerfen wir folgende Irrtümer:

1. Als wenn gelehrt wird, daß Gott nicht wolle, daß alle Menschen Buße tun und dem Evangelio glauben.

2. Item, wenn Gott uns zu sich berufe, daß es nicht sein Ernst sei, daß alle Menschen zu ihm kommen sollen.

3. Item, daß Gott nicht wolle, daß jedermann selig werde, sondern [daß etliche], unangesehen ihre Sünde, allein aus dem bloßen Rat, Vorsatz und Willen Gottes zur Verdammnis verordnet [seien], daß sie nicht können selig werden.

4. Item, daß nicht allein die Barmherzigkeit Gottes und das allerheiligste Verdienst Christi, sondern auch in uns eine Ursache sei der Wahl Gottes, um welcher willen Gott uns zum ewigen Leben erwählt habe.

Welches alles lästerliche und erschreckliche irrtümliche Lehren sind, dadurch den Christen aller Trost genommen [wird], den sie im heiligen Evangelio und Gebrauch der heiligen Sacramente haben, und demwegen in der Kirche Gottes nicht sollten geduldet werden.

Dies ist die kurze und einfältige Erklärung der streitigen Artikel, so eine Zeitlang von den Theologen Augsburger Konfession widerwärtig disputiert und gelehrt worden. Daraus ein jeder einfältiger Christ nach Anleitung Gottes Wort und seines einfältigen Katechismi vernehmen kann, was recht oder unrecht sei, da nicht allein die reine Lehre steht, sondern auch derselben widerwärtige, irrtümliche Lehre ausgesetzt [verurteilt], verworfen und also die eingefallenen ärgerlichen Spaltungen gründlich entschieden sind.

Der allmächtige Gott und Vater unser Herr Jesu verleihe die Gnade seines Heiligen Geistes, daß wir alle in ihm einig seien und in solcher christlichen und ihm wohlgefälligen Einigkeit beständiglich bleiben! Amen.

NEGATIVA.

[R. 621]

Falsae doctrinae de hoc articulo relectio.

16] Credimus igitur et sentimus, quando doctrina de electione Dei ad vitam aeternam eo modo proponitur, ut perturbatae pie mentes ex ea consolationem nullam capere queant, sed potius per eam in animi angustias aut desperationem concitantur, aut impenitentes in dissoluta sua vita confirmantur, quod articulus hic non ad normam Verbi et voluntatis Dei, sed iuxta humanae rationis iudicium, et quidem impulsu Satanae, male et perperam tractetur. Quaecunque enim scripta sunt (inquit apostolus), ad nostram doctrinam scripta sunt, ut per patientiam et consolationem Scripturarum spem habeamus, Rom. 15, 4. Reiciimus itaque omnes, quos iam enumerabimus, errores:

17] I. Quod Deus nolit, ut omnes homines poenitentiam agant et evangelio credant.

18] II. Quando Deus nos ad se vocat, quod non serio hoc velit, ut omnes homines ad ipsum veniant.

19] III. Quod nolit Deus, ut omnes salventur, sed quod quidam, non ratione peccatorum suorum, verum solo Dei consilio, proposito et voluntate ad exitium destinati sint, ut prorsus salutem consequi non possint.

20] IV. Quod non sola Dei misericordia et sanctissimum Christi meritum, sed etiam in nobis ipsis aliqua causa sit electionis divinae, cuius causae ratione Deus nos ad vitam aeternam elegerit.

21] Haec dogmata omnia falsa sunt, horrenda et blasphemica, iisque piis mentibus omnis prorsus consolatio eripitur, quam ex evangelio et sacramentorum usu capere deberent, et idcirco in ecclesia Dei nequaquam sunt ferenda.

22] Haec brevis est et simplicissima articulorum controversorum explicatio, de quibus inter theologos Augustanae Confessionis aliquamdiu disceptatum et discrepantibus inter se sententiis disputatum est. Et ex hac declaratione homo plus quantumvis simplex [R. 622] secundum analogiam Verbi Dei et Catechismi simplicem doctrinam deprehendere potest, quid verum sit, quid falsum. Non enim tantummodo sincera doctrina diserte est recitata, verum etiam contraria et falsa doctrina repudiata est et reiecta, et controversiae illae, offendorum plenae, solide sunt decisa atque diiudicatae.

23] Faxit Deus omnipotens, Pater Domini nostri Iesu Christi, ut per gratiam Spiritus Sancti omnes in ipso consentientes et concordantes simus atque in consensu pio, qui ipsi probetur, constanter perseveremus! Amen.

ANTITHESIS or NEGATIVA.

False Doctrine concerning This Article.

Accordingly, we believe and hold: When any teach the doctrine concerning the gracious election of God to eternal life in such a manner that troubled Christians cannot comfort themselves therewith, but are thereby led to despondency or despair, or the impenitent are strengthened in their wantonness, that such doctrine is treated [wickedly and erroneously] not according to the Word and will of God, but according to reason and the instigation of the cursed Satan. For, as the apostle testifies, Rom. 15, 4, whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope. Therefore we reject the following errors:

1. As when it is taught that God is unwilling that all men repent and believe the Gospel.

2. Also, that when God calls us to Himself, He is not in earnest that all men should come to Him.

3. Also, that God is unwilling that every one should be saved, but that some, without regard to their sins, from the mere counsel, purpose, and will of God, are ordained to condemnation so that they cannot be saved.

4. Also, that not only the mercy of God and the most holy merit of Christ, but also in us there is a cause of God's election, on account of which God has elected us to everlasting life.

All these are blasphemous and dreadful erroneous doctrines, whereby all the comfort which they have in the holy Gospel and the use of the holy Sacraments is taken from Christians, and therefore should not be tolerated in the Church of God.

This is the brief and simple explanation of the controverted articles, which for a time have been debated and taught controversially among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession. Hence every simple Christian, according to the guidance of God's Word and his simple Catechism, can perceive what is right or wrong, since not only the pure doctrine has been stated, but also the erroneous contrary doctrine has been repudiated and rejected, and thus the offensive divisions that have occurred are thoroughly settled [and decided].

May Almighty God and the Father of our Lord Jesus grant the grace of His Holy Ghost that we all may be one in Him, and constantly abide in this Christian unity, which is well pleasing to Him! Amen.

[XII.]

Von andern Rotten und Secten, so sich niemals zu der Augsbургischen Confession bekant.

Damit uns auch nicht stillschweigend solche zugemessen [werden], weil wir derselben in vorgesetzter Erklärung keine Meldung gethan, haben wir zu Ende allein die bloßen Artikel erzählen wollen, darin sie sich irren und vielgedachtem unserm christlichen Glauben und Bekenntnis zuwider lehren.

Irrige Artikel der Wiedertäufer.

Die Wiedertäufer sind unter sich selbst in viele Haufen geteilt, da einer viel, der andere wenig Irrtümer bekennt [verteidigt]; insgemein aber führen sie solche Lehre, die weder in der Kirche noch in der Polizei und weltlichem Regiment noch in der Haushaltung zu dulden noch zu leiden [sind].

Unleibliche Artikel in der Kirche.

1. Daß Christus seinen Leib und Blut nicht von Maria der Jungfrau angenommen, sondern vom Himmel mit sich gebracht [habe].

2. Daß Christus nicht wahrhaftiger Gott [sei], sondern nur mehr Gaben des Heiligen Geistes habe denn sonst ein heiliger Mensch.

3. Daß unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott nicht allein auf dem einigen Verdienst Christi, sondern in der Erneuerung und also in unserer eigenen Frömmigkeit stehe, in der wir wandeln. Welche zum großen Teil auf eigene, sonderliche, selbsterwählte Geistlichkeit gesetzt und im Grunde anderes nichts denn eine neue Möncherei ist.

4. Daß die Kinder, so nicht getauft, vor Gott nicht Sünder, sondern gerecht und unschuldig seien, welche in ihrer Unschuld, weil sie noch nicht zu ihrem Verstand [ge]kommen, ohne die Taufe (deren, ihrem Vorgeben nach, sie nicht bedürfen) selig werden. Verwerfen also die ganze Lehre von der Erbsünde, und was derselben anhangt [an]hängt].

5. Daß die Kinder nicht sollen getauft werden, bis sie zu ihrem Verstand kommen und ihren Glauben selbst bekennen können.

6. Daß der Christen Kinder darum, weil sie von christlichen und gläubigen Eltern geboren, auch ohne und vor der Taufe heilig und Gottes Kinder seien; auch der Ursache [halben] der Kinder Taufe weder hochhalten noch befördern, wider die ausgedrückten [ausdrücklichen] Worte der Verheißung Gottes, die sich allein auf die erstreckt, welche seinen Bund halten und denselben nicht verachten, Gen. 17.

7. Daß dies keine rechte christliche Gemeinde sei, darin noch Sünder gefunden werden.

8. Daß man keine Predigt hören noch in den Tempeln besuchen solle, darin zuvor päpstliche Messe gehalten und gelesen worden.

XII.

DE ALIIS HAERESIBUS ET SECTIS, quae nunquam Augustanam Confessionem sunt amplexae.

1) Ne tacita cogitatione haereses illae et sectae nobis tribuantur, propterea quod earum in commemorata declaratione expressam mentionem non fecimus, visum est articulos earum ad calcem (ut dicitur) huius scripti nude recitare, in quibus nostri temporis haeretici a veritate dissentiunt et sinceræ nostrae religioni et confessioni contrarium docent.

Errores Anabaptistarum.

Anabaptistae in multas sectas sunt divisi, 2) quarum aliae plures, aliae pauciores errores defendunt. Generatim tamen omnes talem doctrinam profitentur, quae neque in ecclesia neque in politia neque in oeconomia tolerari potest.

Articuli Anabaptistoi, qui in Ecclesia Ferri
Non Possunt. [R. 623]

3) I. Quod Christus carnem et sanguinem suum non e Maria virgine assumpserit, sed e coelo attulerit.

4) II. Quod Christus non sit verus Deus, sed tantummodo ceteris sanctis sit superior, quia plura Spiritus Sancti dona acceperit quam alius quispiam homo sanctus.

5) III. Quod iustitia nostra coram Deo non in solo Christi merito, sed in renovatione atque adeo in nostra propria probitate, in qua ambulemus, consistat. Ea vero Anabaptistarum iustitia magna ex parte electicia et humanitus excogitata quadam sanctimonia constat et revera nil aliud est quam novus quidam monachatus.

6) IV. Quod infantes non baptizati coram Deo non sint peccatores, sed iusti et innocentis et in illa sua innocentia, cum usum rationis nondum habeant, sine Baptismo (quo videlicet ipsorum opinione non egeant) salutem consequantur. Et hoc modo reiiciunt totam de peccato originali doctrinam, reliqua etiam, quae ex ea dependent.

7) V. Quod infantes baptizandi non sint, donec usum rationis consequantur et fidem suam ipsi profiteri possint.

8) VI. Quod Christianorum liberi eam ob causam, quia parentibus Christianis et fidelibus orti sunt (etiam praeter et ante susceptum Baptismum), revera sancti et in filiorum Dei numero sint habendi. Qua de causa etiam neque paedobaptismus magni faciunt, neque id operam dant, ut infantes baptizentur, quod cum expressis verbis promissionis divinae pugnat; ea enim tantum ad eos pertinet, qui foedus Dei observant, illudque non contemnunt, Gen. 17, 7 aqq.

9) VII. Quod ea non sit vera et [R. 624] Christiana ecclesia, in qua aliqui adhuc peccatores reperiuntur.

10) VIII. Quod conciones non sint audiendae ullae in iis templis, in quibus aliquando missae pontificiae sunt celebratae.

(XII.)

OF OTHER FACTIONS [HERESIES] AND SECTS,

Which Never Embraced the Augsburg Confession.

In order that such [heresies and sects] may not silently be ascribed to us, because, in the preceding explanation, we have made no mention of them, we intend at the end [of this writing] simply to enumerate the mere articles wherein they [the heretics of our time] err and teach contrary to our Christian faith and confession to which we have often referred.

Erroneous Articles of the Anabaptists.

The Anabaptists are divided among themselves into many factions, as one contends for more, another for less errors; however, they all in common propound [profess] such doctrine as is to be tolerated or allowed neither in the Church, nor in the commonwealth and secular government, nor in domestic life.

Articles that Cannot be Tolerated in the Church.

1. That Christ did not assume His body and blood from the Virgin Mary, but brought them with Him from heaven.

2. That Christ is not true God, but only [is superior to other saints, because He] has more gifts of the Holy Ghost than any other holy man.

3. That our righteousness before God consists not in the sole merit of Christ alone, but in renewal, and hence in our own godliness [uprightness] in which we walk. This is based in great part upon one's own special, self-chosen [and humanly devised] spirituality [holiness], and in fact is nothing else than a new sort of monkery.

4. That children who are not baptized are not sinners before God, but righteous and innocent, who in their innocency, because they have not yet attained their reason [the use of reason], are saved without Baptism (which, according to their assertion, they do not need). Therefore they reject the entire doctrine concerning original sin and what belongs to it.

5. That children are not to be baptized until they have attained their reason [the use of reason], and can themselves confess their faith.

6. That the children of Christians, because they have been born of Christian and believing parents, are holy and children of God even without and before Baptism; and for this reason they neither attach much importance to the baptism of children nor encourage it, contrary to the express words of God's promise which pertains only to those who keep His covenant and do not despise it. Gen. 17, 7 ff.

7. That that is no true Christian congregation [church] in which sinners are still found.

8. That no sermon is to be heard nor attended in those churches in which formerly papal masses have been celebrated and said.

9. Daß man nichts mit den Kirchendienern, so das Evangelium vermöge [laut] Augsburger Konfession predigen und der Wiedertäufer Predigen und Irrthümer strafen, zu schaffen haben, ihnen auch weder dienen noch etwas arbeiten, sondern [sic] als die Verlehrer Gottes Wortes stehen und meiden soll.

Unleibliche Artikel in der Poliget.

1. Daß die Obrigkeit kein gottgefälliger Stand im Neuen Testament sei.

2. Daß ein Christenmensch mit gutem, unverletztem Gewissen das Amt der Obrigkeit nicht tragen noch verwalten könne.

3. Daß ein Christ mit unverletztem Gewissen das Amt der Obrigkeit in zufälligen Sachen wider die Bösen nicht gebrauchen [dürfe], noch derselben Untertanen ihre habende und von Gott empfangene Gewalt zum Schutz und Schirm anrufen mögen.

4. Daß ein Christenmensch mit gutem Gewissen keinen Eid schwören noch mit Eid seinem Landesfürsten oder Oberherrn die Erbhuld[ig]ung tun könne.

5. Daß die Obrigkeit im Neuen Testament in [mit] unverletztem Gewissen die Übeltäter am Leben nicht strafen könne.

Unleibliche Artikel in der Haushaltung.

1. Daß ein Christ mit gutem Gewissen nichts Eigenes behalten noch besitzen könne, sondern schuldig sei, dasselbe in die Gemein [in die Gemeindegemeinde oder Kommunkasse] zu geben.

2. Daß ein Christ mit gutem Gewissen kein Gastgeber, Kaufmann oder Messerschmied sein könne.

3. Daß Eheleute um des Glaubens willen sich voneinander scheiden und eins das andere verlassen und mit einem andern, das seines Glaubens ist, sich verehelichen möge.

Frühe Artikel der Schwencfeldianer.

1. Daß alle die keine rechte Erkenntnis des regierenden Himmelskönigs Christi haben, welche Christum nach dem Fleisch für eine Kreatur halten.

2. Daß das Fleisch Christi durch die Erhöhung also alle göttlichen Eigenschaften angenommen, daß er, Christus, als Mensch an Macht, Kraft, Majestät, Herrlichkeit dem Vater und dem Wort allenthalben im Grad und Stelle des Wesens gleich, daß nunmehr einerlei Wesen, Eigenschaft, Wille und Glorie beider Naturen in Christo seien, und daß das Fleisch Christi zu dem Wesen der heiligen Dreifaltigkeit gehöre.

3. Daß der Kirchendienst, das gepredigte und gehörte Wort, nicht sei ein Mittel, dadurch Gott der Heilige Geist die Menschen lehre, die seligmachende Erkenntnis Christi, Bekehrung, Buße, Glauben und neuen Gehorsam in ihnen wirke.

4. Daß das Taufwasser nicht sei ein Mittel, dadurch Gott der Herr die Kinderschaft versiegele und die Wiedergeburt wirke.

11] IX. Quod homo pius nihil prorsus commercii habere debeat cum ecclesiae ministris, qui evangelion Christi iuxta Augustanae Confessionis sententiam docent et Anabaptistarum conciones ac errores reprehendunt, et quod eiusmodi ecclesiae ministri neque servire, neque operam locare liceat, sed quod fidem, ut perversores Verbi divini, vitandi et fugiendi sint.

Articuli Anabaptistici, qui in Politia sunt Intolerabiles.

12] I. Quod magistratus officium non sit sub novo testamento genus vitae, quod Deo placeat.

13] II. Quod homo Christianus salva et illaesa conscientia officio magistratus fungi non possit.

14] III. Quod homo Christianus illaesa conscientia officium magistratus, rebus ita ferentibus, adversus improbos administrare et exsequi, et subditi potestatem illam, quam magistratus a Deo accepit, ad defensionem implorare non possint.

15] IV. Quod homo Christianus sana conscientia iusiurandum praestare et iuramento interposito obedientiam et fidem suo principi aut magistratui promittere nequeat.

16] V. Quod magistratus sub novo testamento bona conscientia homines facinorosos capitali supplicio afficere non possit.

Articuli Anabaptistici, qui in Oeconomia Ferri Non Possunt.

17] I. Quod homo pius non possit [R. 625 conscientia salva proprium tenere et possidere, sed quod is, quidquid omnino facultatum habeat, id totum in commune conferre debeat.

18] II. Quod homo Christianus illaesa conscientia neque cautionariam neque mercatoriam exercere aut arma conficere possit.

19] III. Quod coniugibus propter diversam religionem divorcium facere et cum alia persona, quae in religione non dissentiat, matrimonium contrahere liceat.

Errores Schwencfeldianorum.

20] I. Quod omnes illi, qui Christum secundum carnem creaturam esse dicunt, non habeant veram regnantis coelestis Regis agnitionem.

21] II. Quod caro Christi per exaltationem eo modo omnes proprietates divinas acceperit, ut Christus, quatenus homo est, potentia, virtute, maiestate, gloria Patri et τῷ λόγῳ per omnia, in gradu et statu essentiae omnino aequalis sit, ita ut iam utriusque in Christo naturae una sit essentia, eadem proprietates, eadem voluntas eademque gloria, et quod caro Christi ad sacrosanctae Trinitatis essentiam pertineat.

22] III. Quod ministerium Verbi, praedicatum et auditu perceptum Verbum, non sit instrumentum illud, per quod Deus Spiritus Sanctus homines doceat, salutaremque Christi agnitionem largiatur et conversionem, veram poenitentiam, fidem et novam obedientiam in ipsis efficiat.

23] IV. Quod aqua Baptismi non sit medium, per quod Dominus adoptionem in filiis Dei obsignet et regenerationem efficiat.

9. That one [a godly man] must not have anything to do with those ministers of the Church who preach the Gospel according to the Augsburg Confession, and rebuke the sermons and errors of the Anabaptists; also, that he is neither to serve nor in any way to labor for them, but to flee from and shun them as perverters of God's Word.

Articles that Cannot be Tolerated in the Government.

1. That under the New Testament the magistracy is not an estate pleasing to God.

2. That a Christian cannot with a good, inviolate conscience hold or discharge the office of magistrate.

3. That a Christian cannot without injury to conscience use the office of the magistracy against the wicked in matters as they occur [matters so requiring], nor that subjects may invoke for their protection and defense the power which the magistrates possess and have received from God.

4. That a Christian cannot with a good conscience take an oath, nor with an oath do homage [promise fidelity] to the hereditary prince of his country or sovereign.

5. That under the New Testament magistrates cannot, without injury to conscience, inflict capital punishment upon malefactors.

Articles that Cannot be Tolerated in Domestic Life.

1. That a Christian cannot with a good conscience hold or possess property, but is in duty bound to devote it to the common treasury.

2. That a Christian cannot with a good conscience be an innkeeper, merchant, or cutler [maker of arms].

3. That the married may be divorced on account of [diverse] faith, and the one may abandon the other and be married to another person who is of his faith.

Erroneous Articles of the Schwenkfeldians.

1. That all those have no true knowledge of Christ as reigning King of heaven who regard Christ according to the flesh as a creature.

2. That the flesh of Christ by His exaltation has assumed all divine properties in such a manner that Christ as man is in might, power, majesty, and glory altogether, as regards degree and position of essence, equal to the Father and to the Word, so that now there is only one essence, property, will, and glory of both natures in Christ, and that the flesh of Christ belongs to the essence of the Holy Trinity.

3. That the ministry of the Church [ministry of the Word], the Word preached and heard, is not a means whereby God the Holy Ghost teaches men, and works in them the saving knowledge of Christ, conversion, repentance, faith, and new obedience.

4. That the water of Baptism is not a means whereby God the Lord seals the adoption of sons and works regeneration.

5. Daß Brot und Wein im heiligen Abendmahl nicht Mittel seien, dadurch und damit Christus seinen Leib und Blut austheile.

6. Daß ein Christenmensch, der wahrhaftig durch den Geist Gottes wiedergeboren, das Gesetz Gottes in diesem Leben vollkommen halten und erfüllen könne.

7. Daß keine rechte christliche Gemeinde sei, da kein öffentlicher Ausschluß oder ordentlicher Prozeß des Bannes gehalten werde.

8. Daß der Diener der Kirche andere Leute nicht nützlich lehren oder rechte, wahrhaftige Sacramente austheilen könne, welcher nicht auch für seine Person wahrhaftig verneuert, wiedergeboren, gerecht und fromm sei.

Irrium der neuen Arianer.

Daß Christus nicht ein wahrhaftiger, wesentlicher, natürlicher Gott, eines ewigen göttlichen Wesens mit Gott dem Vater und dem Heiligen Geist, sondern allein mit göttlicher Majestät, unter und neben Gott dem Vater, geziert sei.

Irrium der Antitrinitarier.

Daß ist gar eine neue Sekte, zuvor in der Christenheit nicht erhört, welche glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß nicht ein einig, ewig göttlich Wesen sei des Vaters, Sohnes und Heiligen Geistes; sondern wie Gott Vater, Sohn und Heiliger Geist drei unterschiedliche Personen seien, also habe auch eine jede Person ihr unterschiedlich und von andern Personen der Gottheit abgefondert Wesen, die doch entweder alle drei, wie sonst drei unterschiedene und voneinander in ihrem Wesen abgefonderte Menschen, gleicher Gewalt, Weisheit, Majestät und Herrlichkeit [seien], oder am Wesen und Eigenschaften einander ungleich, daß allein der Vater rechter wahrer Gott sei.

Diese und dergleichen Artikel allzumal, und was denselben mehr Irthums anhängig [ist] und daraus erfolgt, verwerfen und verdammen wir als unrecht, falsch, keherisch, dem Worte Gottes, den dreien Symbolis, der Augsburgerischen Konfession und Apologie, den Schmalkaldischen Artikeln und Catechismus Lutheri zuwider, vor welchen alle frommen Christen hohen und niedrigen Standes sich hüten sollen, so lieb ihnen ihrer Seelen Heil und Seligkeit ist.

Daß dies unser aller Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis sei, wie wir solches am jüngsten Tage vor dem gerechten Richter, unserm Herrn Jesu Christo, verantworten, dardie auch nichts heimlich noch öffentlich reden oder schreiben wollen, sondern gedanken vermittelt der Gnade Gottes dabei zu bleiben, haben wir wohlbedacht in wahrer Furcht und Anrufung Gottes mit eigenen Händen unterschrieben. [Am Schluß der Epitome steht in den Handschriften: „Actum Bergae, den 29. Mai, Anno 1577.“ Dann folgen als Unterschriften die Namen: Iacobus Andreae D., Nicolaus Selneccerus D., Andreas Musculus D., Christophorus Cornerus D., David Chytraeus D., Martinus Chemnitius D. Ebenso am Schluß der Declaratio, jedoch ohne Actum und Datum.]

24] V. Quod panis et vinum in Sacra Coena non sint organa, per quae et cum quibus [R. 626] Christus corpus et sanguinem suum distribuat.

25] VI. Quod homo pius, vere per Spiritum Dei regeneratus, legem Dei in hac vita perfecte servare et implere valeat.

26] VII. Quod non sit vera ecclesia Christi, in qua non vigeat publica excommunicatio et solennis aliquis excommunicationis modus seu, ut vulgo dicitur, processus ordinarius.

27] VIII. Quod is ecclesiae minister alios homines cum fructu docere, aut vera sacramenta dispensare non possit, qui ipse non sit vere renovatus, renatus et vere iustus.

Error Novorum Arianorum.

28] Quod Christus non sit verus, substantialis, naturalis Deus, eiusdem cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto essentiae, sed divina tantum maiestate ita cum Patre ornatus, ut Patre sit inferior.

Error Antitrinitariorum.

29] Haec prorsus nova est haeresis, quae antehac ecclesiis Christi ignota fuit, eorum videlicet, qui opinantur, docent et profitentur, non esse unicam tantum divinam et aeternam Patris, Filii et Spiritus Sancti essentiam, sed quemadmodum Pater, Filius et Spiritus Sanctus tres sunt distinctae personae, ita unamquamque personam habere distinctam et a reliquis personis Divinitatis separatam essentiam. Et horum alii sentiunt, quod singulae personae in singulis essentis aequali sint potestate, sapientia, maiestate et gloria, sicut alias tres numero differentes homines, ratione essentiae suae, sunt a se invicem disiuncti [R. 627 et separati. Alii sentiunt, tres illas personas et essentias ita inaequales esse ratione essentiae et proprietatum, ut solus Deus Pater verus sit Deus.

30] Hos atque his similes errores omnes, et eos etiam, qui ab his dependent et ex his consequuntur, reicimus atque damnamus, utpote qui falsi sint atque haeretici, et qui Verbo Dei, tribus approbatis Symbolis, Augustanae Confessionis, eiusdem Apologiae, Smalcaldicis Articulis et Catechismus Lutheri repugnent, quos etiam errores omnes pii, summi atque infimi, cavere et vitare debent, nisi aeternae suae salutis iacturam facere velint.

31] Quod autem haec sit omnium nostrum fides, doctrina et confessio (de qua in novissimo illo die Iudici Domino nostro Iesu Christo rationem reddere parati sumus), et quod contra hanc doctrinam nihil vel occulte vel aperte dicere aut scribere, sed per gratiam Dei in ea constanter perseverare velimus, in eius rei fidem re bene meditata in vero Dei timore et invocatione nominis eius, hanc Epitomen propriis manibus subscripsimus.

5. That bread and wine in the Holy Supper are not means through and by which Christ distributes His body and blood.

6. That a Christian who is truly regenerated by God's Spirit can perfectly observe and fulfil the Law of God in this life.

7. That it is not a true Christian congregation [church] in which no public excommunication [some formal mode of excommunication] or no regular process of the ban [as it is commonly called] is observed.

8. That the minister of the church who is not on his part truly renewed, regenerate, righteous, and godly cannot teach other men with profit or distribute genuine, true Sacraments.

Error of the New Arians.

That Christ is not true, essential, natural God, of one eternal, divine essence with God the Father and the Holy Ghost, but is only adorned with divine majesty inferior to and alongside of God the Father [is so adorned with divine majesty, with the Father, that He is inferior to the Father].

Error of the Anti-Trinitarians.

This is an entirely new sect, not heard of before in Christendom, [composed of those] who believe, teach, and confess that there is not one only, eternal, divine essence of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, but as God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are three distinct persons, so each person has its essence distinct and separate from the other persons of the Godhead; and that nevertheless they are either [some think] all three of equal power, wisdom, majesty, and glory, just as otherwise three men are distinct and separate from one another in their essence, or [others think that these three persons and essences are] unequal with one another in essence and properties, so that the Father alone is properly and truly God.

These and similar articles, one and all, with whatever other errors depend upon and follow from them, we reject and condemn as wrong, false, heretical, contrary to the Word of God, the three Creeds, the Augsburg Confession and Apology, the Smalcald Articles, and Luther's Catechisms, against which all godly Christians of both high and low station are to be on their guard as they love the welfare and salvation of their souls.

That this is the doctrine, faith, and confession of us all, for which we will answer at the last day before the just Judge, our Lord Jesus Christ, and will neither secretly nor publicly speak or write anything against it, but that we intend by the grace of God to persevere therein, we have after mature deliberation testified, in the true fear of God and invocation of His name, by signing with our own hands [this Epitome].

[Zweiter Teil.]

Gründliche, lautere, richtige und endliche

Wiederholung und Erklärung etlicher Artikel Augsburgischer Confession, in welchen eine Zeitlang

unter etlichen Theologen, derselben zugetan, Streit vorgefallen, nach Anleitung Gottes Wortes und summarischem Inhalt unserer christlichen Lehre beigelegt und verglichen.

Mit Kurzl. Gn. zu Sachsen Befreyung. Dresden Anno 1579 [*1580].

[PARS SECUNDA.]

Solida, plana ac perspicua

REPETITIO ET DECLARATIO quorundam Articulorum Augustanae Confessionis, de quibus aliquamdiu inter nonnullos theologos, eidem addictos, disputatum fuit, continens earum controversiarum ad normam et analogiam Verbi Dei et compendiariam Christianae nostrae doctrinae formulam et rationem decisionem atque conciliationem.

[PART SECOND.]

Thorough, Pure, Correct, and Final [Solid, Plain, and Clear]

REPETITION AND DECLARATION of Some Articles of the Augsburg Confession concerning which, for Some Time, there has been Controversy among Some Theologians who Subscribe Thereto, Decided and Settled according to the Analogy of God's Word and the Summary Contents of Our Christian Doctrine.

Nachdem aus [bes]onderen Gnaden und Barmherzigkeit des Allmächtigen die Lehre von den vornehmsten Artikeln unserer christlichen Religion (welche durch Menschenlehre und -sagen unter dem Papsttum greulich verfinstert gewesen) durch D. Luther, seligen und heiligen Gedächtnisses, wiederum aus Gottes Wort erläutert und gereinigt, die päpstlichen Irrthümer, Mißbräuche und Abgöttereien gestraft, und aber solche reine Reformation von dem Gegenteil für eine neue Lehre geachtet, auch, als ob sie dem Wort Gottes und den christlichen Ordnungen gänzlich zuwider [sei], heftig (gleichwohl mit Ungrund) angezogen, dazu mit unerfindlichen [unwahren] Kalamnien und Aufträgen beschwert [worden], haben die christlichen Kurfürsten, auch Stände, welche damals die reine Lehre des heiligen Evangelii angenommen und ihre Kirchen christlich, dem Worte Gottes gemäß [haben] reformieren lassen, auf der großen Reichsversammlung zu Augsburg Anno 30 u. s. w. eine christliche Konfession aus Gottes Wort stellen lassen und dieselbe Kaiser Carolo V. überantwortet, darin sie lauter und rund ihr christliches Bekenntnis gethan, was von den vornehmsten Artikeln (sonderlich denen, so zwischen ihnen und den Päpstlichen streitig [gewesen] in den christlichen evangelischen Kirchen gehalten und gelehrt werde, welche [Augsburgische Konfession] von dem Gegenteil gleichwohl fauer angesehen, aber, Gott Lob, bis auf diesen Tag unantwiderlegt und unumgestoßen geblieben [ist].

et publice doceretur. Eam confessionem adversarii moleste quidem graviterque acceperunt, sed ad hunc usque diem neque refutare neque evertere potuerunt.

Zu derselben christlichen und in Gottes Wort wohlbegründeten Augsburgischen Konfession bekennen wir uns nochmals hiermit von Grund unseres Herzens, bleiben bei derselben einsältigem, hellem und lauterem Verstand, wie solchen die Worte mit sich bringen, und halten gedachte Konfession für ein rein christlich Symbolum, bei dem sich dieser Zeit rechte Christen nächst Gottes Wort sollen finden lassen; wie denn auch vorzeiten in der Kirche Gottes über etliche vorgefallene große Streite christliche Symbole und Bekenntnisse gestellt worden [sind], zu denen sich die reinen Lehrer und Zuhörer mit Herzen und Munde damals bekannt haben. Wir gedanken auch vermittlest der Gnade des Allmächtigen bei mehrgemeldeter christlicher Konfession, wie sie Kaiser Carolo Anno 30 u. s. w. übergeben, bis an unser Ende beständig zu verharren; und ist unser Vorhaben nicht, weder in diesem [in dieser] noch andern Schriften von vielgedachter Konfession im wenigsten [im geringsten] abzuweichen, noch eine andere und neue Konfession zu stellen.

Wiewohl aber die christliche Lehre in derselben Konfession mehrertheils (außerhalb [außer] was von den Papisten geschehen) unangefochten geblieben, so kann gleichwohl nicht geleugnet werden, daß etliche Theologi von etlichen hohen und vornehmen Artikeln gemeldeter Konfession abgewichen und den rechten Verstand derselben entweder nicht erreicht oder ja nicht dabei bestanden, etwa auch deren [zuweilen auch derselben] einen fremden

Immensa Dei Optimi Maximi bonitate atque
 1) miseratione factum est, ut doctrina de praecipuis Christianae nostrae religionis articulis, quae opinionibus et traditionibus humanis durante papatu horribiliter obscurata fuerat, opera D. Lutheri, piae sanctaeque memoriae, rursus secundum praescriptum et analogiam Verbi Dei sincere explicaretur et repurgaretur, pontificii vero errores, abusus et idolomaniae graviter redarguerentur. Hac pia reformatione adversarii nova dogmata in ecclesiam Dei introduci putaverunt, eam igitur, quasi Verbo Dei prorsus repugnaret et pias ordinationes penitus everteret, vehementer, falso tamen, criminati sunt et calumnias prope infinitis, quae nullo tamen vel probabili saltem colore fulcirentur, oppugnaverunt. Ea re moti illustrissimi pietateque religiosae praestantissimi Electores, Principes et Ordines Imperii (qui tum sinceram evangelii doctrinam amplexi fuerant et ecclesias suas ad [R. 629] Verbi Dei normam pie reformaverant) in comitiis frequentissimis et celeberrimis illis Augustae Vindelicorum anno post millesimum quingentesimum trigesimo habitis, sedulo curarunt, ut confessio pia, a sacris litteris collecta, conscriberetur, eamque confessionem Imperatori Carolo V. exhibuerunt. In ea perspicue et candide professi sunt, quid de praecipuis articulis (iis praesertim, qui inter ipsos et pontificios in controversiam venerant) in ecclesiis evangelicis et reformatis crederetur

4) Hanc piam atque e fundamentis Verbi Dei solidissimis exstructam Augustanam Confessionem nos toto pectore amplecti, publice et sollemniter etiamnum profiteamur et simplicem illius, sinceram et perspicuam sententiam, quam verba ipsa monstrant, retinemus. Eamque pium nostri temporis symbolum esse, quod piae mentes post invictam Verbi Dei auctoritatem recipere debeant, iudicamus: quemadmodum olim etiam in ecclesia Dei, exortis gravissimis in religionis negotio certaminibus, confessiones et pia quaedam symbola sunt conscripta, quae sinceri doctores et auditores toto animo amplectebantur et publice 5) profitebantur. Et quidem, bene iuvante nos gratia Dei Optimi Maximi, in illius Confessionis pia doctrina (quemadmodum ea Carolo V. anno etc. XXX. exhibita est) ad ultimos usque vitae nostrae spiritus constantes perseverabimus. Neque in animo habemus, hoc scripto aut quocunque alio a commemorata iam Confessione vel transversum, ut aiunt, unguem discedere, vel aliam aut novam confessionem condere.

6) Et si autem pia Confessionis illius [R. 630] doctrina magna ex parte (praeterquam quod a pontificiis factitatum est) non fuit impugnata, fateri tamen oportet, nonnullos theologos in praecipuis quibusdam et magni momenti articulis a doctrina illius Confessionis discessisse, veramque illius sententiam aut non assecutos esse, aut certe non constanter retinuisse, quosdam etiam ei alienam senten-

When, by the special grace and mercy of the Almighty, the doctrine concerning the chief articles of our Christian religion (which under the Papacy had been horribly obscured by human teachings and ordinances) had been explained and purified again from [in accordance with the direction and analogy of] God's Word by Dr. Luther, of blessed and holy memory, and the papistic errors, abuses, and idolatries had been rebuked; and this pure reformation was nevertheless regarded by its opponents as [introducing] a new doctrine and was violently (though without foundation) charged with being entirely contrary to God's Word and the Christian ordinances, and, in addition, was loaded with [almost endless] unsupportable calumnies and accusations, the Christian [the most illustrious and in religious piety most prominent] Electors and Princes, and the Estates [of the Empire] which at that time had embraced the pure doctrine of the Holy Gospel and had their churches reformed in a Christian manner according to God's Word, had a Christian Confession prepared from God's Word at the great Diet of Augsburg in the year 1530 and delivered it to the Emperor Charles V. In this they clearly and plainly made their Christian confession as to what was being held and taught in the Christian evangelical churches concerning the chief articles, especially those in controversy between them and the Papists; and although this Confession was received with disfavor by their opponents, still, thank God, it remains to this day unrefuted and unoverthrown.

To this Christian [pious] Augsburg Confession, so thoroughly grounded in God's Word, we herewith pledge ourselves again [publicly and solemnly] from our inmost hearts; we abide by its simple, clear, and unadulterated meaning as the words convey it, and regard the said Confession as a pure Christian symbol, with which at the present time true Christians ought to be found next to [which pious hearts ought to receive next to the matchless authority of] God's Word; just as in former times concerning certain great controversies that had arisen in the Church of God, symbols and confessions were proposed, to which the pure teachers and hearers at that time pledged themselves with heart and mouth. We intend also, by the grace of the Almighty, faithfully to abide until our end by [the doctrine of] this Christian Confession, mentioned several times, as it was delivered in the year 1530 to the Emperor Charles V; and it is our purpose, neither in this nor in any other writing, to recede in the least from that oft-cited Confession, nor to propose another or new confession.

Now, although the Christian doctrine of this Confession has in great part remained unchallenged (save what has been done by the Papists), yet it cannot be denied that some theologians have departed from some great [principal] and important articles of the said Confession, and either have not attained to their true meaning, or at any rate have not continued steadfastly therein, and occasionally [some] have even undertaken to attach to it a foreign meaning, while at the same time they wished to be regarded as adherents of [they professed to embrace] the Augsburg

Verstand anzudeuten sich unterwunden und doch neben dem allem der Augsbургischen Konfession sein und sich derselben behelfen und rühmen wollen; daraus denn beschwerliche und schädliche Spaltungen in den reinen evangelischen Kirchen entstanden; wie denn auch noch bei Lebzeiten der heiligen Apostel unter denen, so Christen heißen wollten und sich der Lehre Christi berühmten, gleichfalls erschreckliche Irrtümer eingefallen, daher etliche durch die Werke des Gesetzes wollten gerecht und selig werden, Act. 15, etliche die Auferstehung der Toten widersprochen, 1 Cor. 15, etliche nicht glaubten, daß Christus wahrer ewiger Gott wäre; wider welche sich die heiligen Apostel in ihren Predigten und Schriften heftig [haben] legen müssen; obwohl solche hochwichtige Irrtümer und ernstliche Streite damals auch nicht ohne großes Argerniß beide der Ungläubigen und Schwachgläubigen ab[ge]gangen, inmaßen heutiges Tages unsere Widersacher, die Papisten, über den Spaltungen, so unter uns entstanden, frohlocken, der unschristlichen und vergeblichen Hoffnung, als sollten diese Uneinigkeiten zu endlichem Untergang der reinen Lehre gereichen; die Schwachgläubigen aber sich darob ärgern und eines Theils zweifeln, ob die reine Lehre bei uns unter so großen Spaltungen sei [vorhanden sei], eines Theils nicht wissen, welchem Theil sie in den streitigen Artikeln beifallen sollen. Denn die eingefallenen Streite nicht nur Mißverständnisse [Mißverständnisse] oder Wortgezänke sind, dafür es etliche halten möchten, da ein Theil des andern Meinung nicht genugsam eingenommen [verstanden] hätte, und sich also der Span [Zwist] allein in etlichen wenig Worten, an welchen nicht viel gelegen, hielt; sondern es sind wichtige und große Sachen, darüber gekritten worden, und also geschaffen [beschaffen], daß des einen und irrenden Theils Meinung in der Kirche Gottes nicht kann noch soll gebuldet, noch viel weniger entschuldigt oder bestritten [in Streit gezogen, verteidigt] werden.

Derwegen die Nothdurft erfordert, solche streitigen Artikel aus Gottes Wort und bewährten Schriften also zu erklären, daß männiglich [jedermann], so eines christlichen Verstandes [ist], merken könne, welche Meinung in den streitigen Punkten dem Wort Gottes und der christlichen Augsburgischen Konfession gemäß sei oder nicht, und sich also gutherzige Christen, denen die Wahrheit angelegen, vor den eingerissenen Irrthümern und Corruptelen haben zu verhüten und zu verwahren.

Von dem summarischen Begriff, Grund, Regel und Richtschnur, wie alle Lehre nach Gottes Wort geurteilt, und die eingefallenen Irrungen christlich erklärt und entschieden werden sollen.

Weil zu gründlicher, beständiger Einigkeit in der Kirche vor allen Dingen vorrätig ist, daß man einen summarischen, einhelligen Begriff und Form habe, darin die allgemeine summarische Lehre (dazu die Kirchen, so der wahrhaftigen christlichen Religion sind, sich bekennen) aus Gottes Wort tiam affingere conatos esse, qui nihilominus tamen Augustanam se Confessionem amplecti simularunt et ex ea, quasi gloriantes de eius 7) professione, praetextus quaeiverunt. Ex ea autem re gravia admodum et pernicioosa in reformatis ecclesiis dissidia sunt orta; quemadmodum olim etiam, vivis adhuc apostolis, inter eos, qui Christiani haberi volebant et de doctrina Christi gloriabantur, horribiles errores sunt exorti. Quidam enim per opera legis iustificationem et salutem querebant, Act. 15, 1—29, alii resurrectionem mortuorum negabant, 1 Cor. 15, 12, alii Christum verum et aeternum Deum esse non credebant. His certe apostoli sese et concionibus et scriptis severe opposuerunt, etsi non ignorabant, errores illos et de rebus tantis acerrima certamina gravissimam offensionem tam apud infideles quam apud infirmos in fide excitare; perinde ac hodie nostri adversarii pontificii propter dissidia illa inter nos orta exsultant, spem illam minime piam et quidem falsam foventes, fore ut ex nostris mutuis concertationibus sanae doctrinae ruina et interitus consequantur. 8) Infirmi vero interim valde offendantur et perturbantur; quidam dubitant, an inter tot et tanta dissidia etiam vera apud nos doctrina reperiat; quidam non vident, cui parti in articulis illis controversis subscribere debeant. 9) Mota enim illa certamina non sunt λογομαχίαι aut de verbis inanes et non necessariae disceptationes, quales oriri solent, cum altera pars alterius sententiam non satis assecuta est, ut quibusdam fortasse in hoc religionis negotio res habere videntur, qui existimant disputari tantum de paucis quibusdam (R. 631) vocabulis, quae nullius paene aut certe non magni sint momenti. Sed res gravissimae sunt, de quibus controversatur, et prorsus tales, ut illius partis, quae a vero aberrat, sententia in ecclesia Dei nec possit nec debeat ferri, nedum excusari aut defendi.

10) Quare necessitas exigit, ut controversi illi articuli e Verbo Dei et probatis scriptis perspicue explicentur, quo omnes pii et intelligentes animadvertere possint, cuiusnam partis sententia in controversiis illis motis Verbo Dei et Augustanae Confessioni orthodoxae conformis sit, et quae probatis illis scriptis adversetur, ut bonae et piae mentes, quibus veritas cordi est, corruptelas et errores, qui exorti sunt, effugere et vitare queant.

DE COMPENDIARIA DOCTRINAE FORMA, FUNDAMENTO, NORMA ATQUE REGULA, ad quam Omnia Dogmata iuxta Analogiam Verbi Dei Diffludicanda et Controversiae Motae Pie Declarandae atque Decidendae sunt.

1) Primo ad solidam, diuturnam et firmam concordiam in ecclesia Dei constituendam necessarium omnino est, ut certa compendiaria forma et quasi typus unanimi consensu approbatus exstet, in quo communis doctrina, quam ecclesiae sinceriores et reformatae religionis

Confession, and to avail themselves and make their boast of it [for a pretext]. From this, grievous and injurious dissensions have arisen in the pure evangelical churches; just as even during the lives of the holy apostles among those who wished to be called Christians, and boasted of Christ's doctrine, horrible errors arose likewise. For some sought to be justified and saved by the works of the Law, Acts 15, 1—29, others denied the resurrection of the dead, 1 Cor. 15, 12, and still others did not believe that Christ was true and eternal God. Against these the holy apostles had to inveigh strenuously in their sermons and writings, although [they were well aware that] also at that time such fundamental errors and severe controversies could not occur without offense both to unbelievers and to those weak in the faith. In a similar manner at present our opponents, the Papists, rejoice at the dissensions that have arisen among us, in the unchristian and vain hope that these discords might finally cause the suppression of the pure doctrine, while those who are weak in faith are [greatly] offended [and disturbed], and some of them doubt whether, amid such dissensions, the pure doctrine is with us, and others do not know with whom to side with respect to the articles in controversy. For the controversies which have occurred are not, as some would regard them, mere misunderstandings or disputes concerning words [as are apt to occur], one side not having sufficiently grasped the meaning of the other, and the difficulty lying thus in a few words which are not of great moment; but here the subjects of controversy are important and great, and of such a nature that the opinion of the party in error cannot be tolerated in the Church of God, much less be excused or defended.

Necessity, therefore, requires us to explain these controverted articles according to God's Word and approved writings, so that every one who has Christian understanding can notice which opinion concerning the matters in controversy accords with God's Word and the Christian Augsburg Confession, and which does not. And sincere Christians who have the truth at heart may guard and protect themselves against [flee and avoid] the errors and corruptions that have arisen.

OF THE COMPREHENSIVE SUMMARY, FOUNDATION, RULE, AND STANDARD

Whereby All Dogmas should be Judged according to God's Word, and the Controversies that have Occurred should be Explained and Decided in a Christian Manner.

Since for thorough, permanent unity in the Church it is, above all things, necessary that we have a comprehensive, unanimously approved summary and form wherein is brought together from God's Word the common doctrine, reduced to a brief compass, which the zusammengezogen [ist]; wie denn die alte Kirche allemal zu solchem [Ge]brauch ihre gewissen Symbole gehabt; und aber solches nicht auf Privatschriften, sondern auf solche Bücher gesetzt werden solle, die im Namen der Kirchen, so zu einer Lehre und Religion sich bekennen, gestellt, approbiert und angenommen [worden]: so haben wir uns gegeneinander mit Herzen und Mund erklärt, daß wir kein sonderliches oder neues Bekenntnis unsers Glaubens machen oder annehmen wollen, sondern uns zu den öffentlichen allgemeinen Schriften bekennen, so für solche Symbole oder gemeine Bekenntnisse in allen Kirchen der Augsburgerischen Konfession je und allemal, ehe denn die [der] Zwiespalt unter denen, so sich zur Augsburgerischen Konfession bekannt, entstanden, und solange man einbelliglich allenthalben in allen Artikeln bei der reinen Lehre göttlichen Wortes (wie sie D. Luther seliger erkläret) geblieben, gehalten und gebraucht worden:

1. Als erstlich: zu den prophetischen und apostolischen Schriften Alten und Neuen Testaments, als zu dem reinen, lautern Brunnen Israels, welche allein die einzige, wahrhaftige Richtschnur ist, nach der alle Lehrer und Lehre zu richten und zu urteilen sind.

2. Und weil vor alters die wahre christliche Lehre, im reinen, gesunden Verstande, aus Gottes Wort in kurze Artikel oder Hauptstücke wider der Ketzer Verfälschung zusammengezogen ist, bekennen wir uns zum andern zu den drei allgemeinen Symbolis, nämlich dem Apostolischen, Nizäischen und des heiligen Athanasii, als zu den kurzen, christlichen und in Gottes Wort gegründeten herrlichen Bekenntnissen des Glaubens, in welchen allen den Ketzereien, so zur selben Zeit sich in der christlichen Kirche erhoben, lauter und beständig widersprochen wird.

3. Zum dritten, diemal in diesen letzten Zeiten der gütige Gott aus [be]sondern Gnaden die Wahrheit seines Wortes aus der greulichen Finsternis des Papsttums durch den getreuen Dienst des teuren Mannes Gottes, D. Luthers, wieder ans Licht gebracht hat, und dieselbe Lehre aus und nach Gottes Wort wider des Papsttums und auch anderer Sekten Verfälschung in die Artikel und Hauptstücke der Augsburgerischen Konfession zusammengezogen ist, so bekennen wir uns auch zu derselben Ersten, Ungeänderten Augsburgerischen Konfession, nicht deswegen, daß sie von unsern Theologis gestellt, sondern weil sie aus Gottes Wort genommen und darin fest und wohl gegründet ist, allermäßen [in jeder Weise], wie sie Anno 30 ufw. in Schriften verfaßt und dem Kaiser Carolo V. von etlichen christlichen Kurfürsten und Ständen des Römischen Reichs als ein allgemeines Bekenntnis der reformierten Kirchen zu Augsburg übergeben, als dieser Zeit unserm Symbolo, durch welches unsere reformierten Kirchen von der Papisten und andern verworfenen und verdammten Sekten und Ketzereien abgesondert worden, inmaßen denn solches in der alten Kirche also her[ge]kommen und gebräuchlich geprofitetur, e Verbo Dei collecta exstet. Et enim ea in re exemplum primitivae ecclesiae sequimur, quae in talem usum sua quaedam ²⁾ certa symbola semper habuit. Cum [R. 632] vero compendiarie illa doctrinae forma non privatis, sed publicis scriptis niti debeat, quae confecta, approbata et recepta sint earum ecclesiarum nomine, quae sinceram doctrinam et religionem unanimi consensu profitentur: mentem nostram invicem corde et ore ita declaravimus et iam declaramus, quod nullam novam aut singularem confessionem fidei nostrae conscribere aut recipere in animo habemus. Quin potius publica illa et communia scripta amplectimur, quae in omnibus ecclesiis Augustanae Confessionis pro symbolis et communibus confessionibus semper habita sunt, priusquam dissensiones inter eos, qui Augustanam Confessionem profitentur, ortae sunt; quae etiam scripta publicam auctoritatem obtinuerunt, quamdiu magno consensu passim in omnibus articulis sincera Verbi Dei doctrina, ut eam D. Lutherus proposuit, conservata, retenta atque usurpata fuit.

3) I. Primum igitur toto pectore prophetica et apostolica scripta Veteris et Novi Testamenti, ut limpidissimos purissimosque Israelis fontes, recipimus et amplectimur et sacras litteras solas unicam et certissimam illam regulam esse credimus, ad quam omnia dogmata exigere, et secundum quam de omnibus tum doctrinis tum doctoribus iudicare oporteat.

4) II. Et quia iam olim sincera Christi doctrina, in genuino et sano sensu, ex sacris litteris collecta et in articulos seu capita brevissima contra haeticorum corruptelas digesta est, amplectimur etiam tria illa catholica et generalia summae auctoritatis Symbola, Apostolicum videlicet, Nicaenum et Athanasii. Haec enim agnoscimus esse breves quidem, sed easdem maxime pias atque in Verbo Dei solide fundatas, praeclaras confessiones fidei, quibus omnes haereses, quae iis temporibus ecclesias Christi perturbarunt, perspicue et solide refutantur.

5) III. Deinde cum postremis hisce [R. 633] temporibus Deus Optimus Maximus summa clementia puritatem Verbi sui tenebris horrendis et plus quam cimmeriis, quibus sub papatu oppressa fuerat, fideli opera praestantissimi viri, D. Lutheri, viri Dei, rursus in lucem produxerit, quae sincera doctrina non modo contra papatum, sed etiam adversus aliarum sectarum corruptelas e Verbo Dei in articulos et capita Augustanae Confessionis digesta est: etiam Augustanam, primam illam et non mutatam, Confessionem amplectimur. Idque non ea de causa facimus, quod a nostris theologis sit conscripta, sed quia e Verbo Domini est desumpta et ex fundamentis sacrarum litterarum solide extructa, sicut ea anno 1530 scripto comprehensa et Imperatori Carolo V. per quosdam Electores, Principes et Ordines Romani Imperii (ut communis pie reformatarum ecclesiarum confessio) Augustae est exhibitae. Hanc enim nostri temporis symbolum esse iudicamus, quo reformatae nostrae ecclesiae ab Romanensibus aliisque reiectis et damnatis sectis et haeresibus seiunguntur. Et sane hoc ipsum olim usu in primitiva ecclesia churches that are of the true Christian religion confess, just as the ancient Church always had for this use its fixed symbols; moreover, since this [comprehensive form of doctrine] should not be based on private writings, but on such books as have been composed, approved, and received in the name of the churches which pledge themselves to one doctrine and religion, we have declared to one another with heart and mouth that we will not make or receive a separate or new confession of our faith, but confess the public common writings which always and everywhere were held and used as such symbols or common confessions in all the churches of the Augsburg Confession before the dissensions arose among those who accept the Augsburg Confession, and as long as in all articles there was on all sides a unanimous adherence to [and maintenance and use of] the pure doctrine of the divine Word, as the sainted Dr. Luther explained it.

1. First [, then, we receive and embrace with our whole heart] the Prophetic and Apostolic Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as the pure, clear fountain of Israel, which is the only true standard by which all teachers and doctrines are to be judged.

2. And since of old the true Christian doctrine, in a pure, sound sense, was collected from God's Word into brief articles or chapters against the corruption of heretics, we confess, in the second place, the three Ecumenical Creeds, namely, the Apostles', the Nicene, and the Athanasian, as glorious confessions of the faith; brief, devout, and founded upon God's Word, in which all the heresies which at that time had arisen in the Christian Church are clearly and unanswerably refuted.

3. In the third place, since in these last times God, out of especial grace, has brought the truth of His Word to light again from the darkness of the Papacy through the faithful service of the precious man of God, Dr. Luther, and since this doctrine has been collected from, and according to, God's Word into the articles and chapters of the Augsburg Confession against the corruptions of the Papacy and also of other sects, we confess also the First, Unaltered Augsburg Confession as our symbol for this time, not because it was composed by our theologians, but because it has been taken from God's Word and is founded firmly and well therein, precisely in the form in which it was committed to writing in the year 1530, and presented to the Emperor Charles V at Augsburg by some Christian Electors, Princes, and Estates of the Roman Empire as a common confession of the reformed churches, whereby our reformed churches are distinguished from the Papists and other repudiated and condemned sects and heresies, after the custom and usage of the wesen, daß die folgenden Synoden, christlichen Bischöfe und Lehrer sich auf das Nizäische Symbol gezogen und dazu bekant haben.

4. Zum vierten, was denn vielgemeldeter Augsburgischer Konfession eigentlich und wahrhaftigen Bestand belangt, damit man sich gegen die Papisten ausführlicher erkläre und verwahre, und nicht unter dem Namen der Augsburgischen Konfession verdamnte Irrtümer in der [in die] Kirche Gottes einschleichen, und derselben sich zu behelfen unterziehen möchten, ist nach übergebener Konfession verdamnte Irrtümer in der [in die] Kirche Gottes einschleichen, und derselben sich zu behelfen unterziehen möchten, ist nach übergebener Konfession eine ausführliche Apologia gestellt und Anno 1531 durch öffentlichen Druck publiziert. Zu derselben bekennen wir uns auch einhellig, darin gedachte Augsburgische Konfession nicht allein notdürftiglich ausgeführt und verwahrt, sondern auch mit hellen, un widersprechlichen Zeugnissen der Heiligen Schrift erwiesen worden.

5. Zum fünften bekennen wir uns auch zu den Artikeln, zu Schmalkarden in großer Versammlung der Theologen Anno 1537 gestellt, approbiert und angenommen, inmaßen dieselben erstlich begriffen und gedruckt worden, so aus dem Concilio zu Mantua, oder wo es gehalten [werden möchte] im Namen höchst- und hochermeldeter Kurfürsten, Fürsten und Stände als vorgemeldeter Augsburgischer Konfession und Bekenntnis Erklärung, darauf sie durch Gottes Gnade zu verharren entschlossen, überantwortet hat [haben] werden sollen; in welchen ermeldete Lehre Augsburgischer Konfession wiederholt [ist], und etliche Artikel aus Gottes Wort weiter erklärt [sind], auch daneben Ursache und Grund, warum man von papistischen Irrthümern und Abgöttereien abgetreten und mit denselben keine Gemeinschaft zu haben, sich auch über solchen mit dem Papst nicht zu vergleichen wiße noch gedente, notdürftiglich angezeigt worden.

6. Und dann zum sechsten, weil die hochwichtigen Sachen auch den gemeinen Mann und Laien belangen, welche, ihrer Seligkeit zugut, dennoch als Christen zwischen reiner und falscher Lehre unterscheiden müssen, bekennen wir uns auch einhellig zu dem Kleinen und Großen Katechismus D. Luthers, wie solche von ihm geschrieben und seinen Tömis einberleibt worden, weil dieselben von allen der Augsburgischen Konfession verwandten Kirchen einhellig approbiert, angenommen und öffentlich in Kirchen, Schulen und Häusern gebraucht worden sind, und weil auch in denselben die christliche Lehre aus Gottes Wort für die einfältigen Laien auf das richtigste und einfältigste begriffen und gleichergestalt notdürftiglich erklärt worden.

Diese öffentlichen gemeinen Schriften sind in den reinen Kirchen und Schulen alleine gehalten worden als die Summa und Vorbild der Lehre, welche D. Luther seliger in seinen Schriften aus Gottes Wort wider das Papsttum und andere Seltten fäthlich ausgeführt und wohl gegründet hat, auf welches [auf dessen] ausführliche Erklärungen in seinen Lehr- und Streitschriften wir uns gezogen [bezogen] haben wollen, auf Weise und Maß wie D. Luther in der lateinischen Vorrede über seine zusammengedruckt Bücher von seinen Schriften selbst notdürftige und christliche Erinnerung getan und diesen Unterschied ausdrücklich gesetzt hat, daß allein Gottes Wort die receptum est, ut subsequentes synodi, pii item episcopi et doctores, ad Nicaenum Symbolum provocarent atque se id amplecti publice profiterentur.

6] IV. Postea cum hoc etiam curandum esset, ut propria et genuina Confessionis Augustanae sententia conservaretur atque adversus pontificiorum calumnias plenius explicaretur et praemuniretur, ne sub Augustanae Confessionis praetextu et patrocinio damnati errores sese in ecclesiam Dei paulatim insinuerent: post exhibitam Confessionem luculenta Apologia conscripta et anno 1531 typis vulgata est. Eam etiam unanimi consensu approbamus et amplectimur, quia in ea non modo Augustana Confessio perspicue explicatur atque ab adversariorum calumniis vindicatur, verum etiam clarissimis et solidissimis [R. 634] Sacrae Scripturae testimoniis confirmatur.

7] V. Praeterea etiam Articulos illos toto pectore amplectimur, qui Smalcaldiae in frequentissimo theologorum conventu anno salutis MDXXXVII. conscripti, approbati et recepti sunt. Eos autem articulos intelligimus, quales initio conscripti, postea typis in lucem editi sunt in eum videlicet finem, ut concilio vel Mantuae vel alibi celebrando nomine illustrissimorum Electorum, Principum atque Ordinum Imperii (ut Augustanae Confessionis uberior declaratio, in qua per Dei gratiam constantes perseverare decrevisent) publice proponi posset [possent]. In iis enim articulis doctrina Augustanae Confessionis repetita est et in quibusdam articulis e Verbo Dei amplius declarata, et insuper fundamenta monstrata et graves causae recitatae sunt, cur a pontificiis erroribus et idolomaniis secessionem fecerimus, cur etiam in iis rebus cum pontifice Romano nobis convenire non possit, quodque cum eo in illis conciliari nequeamus.

8] VI. Postremo, quando negotium religionis etiam ad salutem vulgi et laicorum (quos vocant) pertinet, et illis etiam, ratione salutis, necessarium est, ut sinceram doctrinam a falsa discernant, amplectimur etiam Minorem et Maiorem D. Lutheri Catechismos, eos dicimus, quales illi ab ipso scripti et tomis eius inserti sunt. Omnes enim ecclesiae Augustanae Confessionis hos catechismos approbarunt atque receperunt, ita ut passim in ecclesiis et scholis publice et in privatis etiam aedibus propositi fuerint. Et pia doctrina, e Verbo Dei desumpta, in iis quam maxime perspicue et simplicissime in usum rudiorum et laicorum est comprehensa et dilucide declarata.

9] Haec publica et ab omnibus piis approbata scripta in purioribus ecclesiis et scholis semper habita fere pro compendiaris [R. 635] hypotyposi seu forma sanae doctrinae, quam D. Lutherus in suis scriptis e sacris litteris contra papatum et alias sectas deprompsit, luculenter declaravit et solide fundavit. Et ad D. Lutheri explicationes praeclaras tam in polemicis quam didacticis ipsius scriptis comprehensas provocamus, eo videlicet modo, quem D. Lutherus in Latina sua praefatione, tomis operum eius praefixa, de scriptis suis pia et necessaria admonitione nobis ipse monstravit. Ibi enim hoc discrimen (inter divina et hu-early Church, whereby succeeding councils, Christian bishops and teachers appealed to the Nicene Creed, and confessed it [publicly declared that they embraced it].

4. In the fourth place, as regards the proper and true sense of the oft-quoted Augsburg Confession, an extensive Apology was composed and published in print in 1531, after the presentation of the Confession, in order that we might explain ourselves at greater length and guard against the [slanders of the] Papists, and that condemned errors might not steal into the Church of God under the name of the Augsburg Confession, or dare to seek cover under the same. We unanimously confess this also, because not only is the said Augsburg Confession explained as much as is necessary and guarded [against the slanders of the adversaries], but also proven [confirmed] by clear, irrefutable testimonies of Holy Scripture.

5. In the fifth place, we also confess the Articles composed, approved, and received at Smalcald in the large assembly of theologians, in the year 1537, as they were first framed and printed in order to be delivered in the council at Mantua, or wherever it would be held, in the name of the Estates, Electors, and Princes, as an explanation of the above-mentioned Augsburg Confession, wherein by God's grace they were resolved to abide. In them the doctrine of the Augsburg Confession is repeated, and some articles are explained at greater length from God's Word, and, besides, the cause and grounds are indicated, as far as necessary, why we have abandoned the papistical errors and idolatries, and can have no fellowship with them, and also why we know, and can think of, no way for coming to any agreement with the Pope concerning them.

6. And now, in the sixth place, because these highly important matters [the business of religion] concern also the common people and laymen [as they are called], who, inasmuch as they are Christians, must for their salvation distinguish between pure and false doctrine, we confess also the Small and the Large Catechisms of Dr. Luther, as they were written by him and incorporated in his works, because they have been unanimously approved and received by all churches adhering to the Augsburg Confession, and have been publicly used in churches, schools, and in [private] houses, and, moreover, because the Christian doctrine from God's Word is comprised in them in the most correct and simple way, and, in like manner, is explained, as far as necessary [for simple laymen].

In the pure churches and schools these public common writings have been always regarded as the sum and model of the doctrine which Dr. Luther, of blessed memory, has admirably deduced from God's Word, and firmly established against the Papacy and other sects; and to his full explanations in his doctrinal and polemical writings we wish to appeal, in the manner and as far as Dr. Luther himself in the Latin preface to his published works has given necessary and Christian admonition concerning his writings, and has exeinige [die alleinige] Richtschnur und Regel aller Lehre sein und bleiben solle, welchem keines Menschen Schriften gleich geachtet, sondern demselben alles unterworfen werden soll.

Es werden aber hiermit andere gute, nützliche, reine Bücher, Auslegungen der Heiligen Schrift, Widerlegungen der Irrtümer, Erklärungen der Lehrartikel nicht verworfen, welche, wofern sie dem jezt gemeldeten Vorbild der Lehre gemäß, als nützliche Auslegungen und Erklärungen gehalten und nützlich gebraucht können werden: sondern was bisher von der Summa unserer Christlichen Lehre gesagt, wird allein dahin gemeint, daß man habe eine einhellige, gewisse, allgemeine Form der Lehre, dazu sich unsere evangelischen Kirchen jämtlich und insgemein bekennen, aus und nach welcher, weil sie aus Gottes Wort genommen, alle andern Schriften, wieweil sie zu probieren und anzunehmen, geurteilt und reguliert sollen werden.

Denn daß wir obgezählte Schriften, nämlich die Augsburgische Confession, Apologie, Schmalcaldischen Artikel, Großen und Kleinen Katechismus Lutheri, vielgedachter Summa unserer Christlichen Lehre einverleibt, ist der Ursache geschähen, daß solche für den gemeinen, einhelligen Verstand unserer Kirchen je und allwege gehalten worden, als die auch von den vornehmsten, hocherleuchteten Theologen dieselbe Zeit unterschrieben und alle evangelischen Kirchen und Schulen innegehabt; wie sie auch, inmaßen hievor bemeldet, alle geschrieben und aus[ge]gangen, ehe die Zwiespaltungen unter den Theologen Augsburgischer Confession entstanden; und dann, weil sie für unparteiisch gehalten und von keinem Theiler, so sich in [den] Streit eingelassen, können oder sollen verworfen werden, auch keiner, so ohne Rath der Augsburgischen Confession [zu]getan] ist, sich dieser Schriften beschweren, sondern sie als Zeugen gerne annehmen und gedulden wird: so kann uns niemand verdenken, daß wir auch aus derselben Erläuterung und Entscheid der streitigen Artikel nehmen und, wie wir Gottes Wort, als die ewige Wahrheit, zum Grunde legen, also auch diese Schriften zum Zeugnis der Wahrheit und für den einhelligen rechten Verstand unserer Vorfahren, so bei der reinen Lehre standhaftig gehalten, einführen und anziehen.

Von streitigen Artikeln, was die Antithesis oder Gegenlehre belangt.

Weil auch zur Erhaltung reiner Lehre und zu gründlicher, beständiger, gottfälliger [* gottgefälliger] Einigkeit in der Kirche vornehmlich ist, daß nicht allein die reine heilsame Lehre recht geführt, sondern daß auch die Widersprecher, so anders lehren, gestraft werden, 1 Tim. 3; Tit. 1; denn treue Hirten, wie Lutherus redet, sollen beides tun, die Schäflein weiden oder nähren und den Wölfen wehren, daß sie vor den fremden Stimmen fliehen mana scripta) perspicue posuit, solas videlicet sacras litteras pro unica regula et norma omnium dogmatum agnoscendas, iisque nullius omnino hominis scripta adaequanda, sed potius omnia subiicienda esse.

10] Haec autem non ita accipi debent, quasi alia utilia et sincera scripta (verbi gratia commentarios in sacras litteras, errorum reutationes, articulorum praecipuorum explicationes) reicere aut ex hominum manibus excutere velimus. Ea enim scripta (quatenus commemoratae hypotyposi et compendiariae sanae doctrinae conformia sunt) tamquam explicationes atque declarationes utiles retineri et cum fructu legi possunt. Quidquid enim hactenus de compendiarium hypotyposi sanae doctrinae diximus, eo tantum referendum est, ut unanimi consensu approbatam certamque formam doctrinae habeamus, quam evangelicae ecclesiae nostrae simul omnes agnoscant et amplectantur, secundum quam, cum e Verbo Dei sit desumpta, omnia alia scripta iudicare et accommodare oportet, quatenus probanda sint et recipienda.

11] Quod enim commemorata scripta, videlicet Augustanam Confessionem, Apologiam, Smalcaldicos Articulos, Minorem et Maiorem Catechismos Lutheri, illa doctrinae nostrae Christianae summa completi voluerimus, eam ob causam factum est, quod in iis unanimem et communem ecclesiarum nostrarum (R. 636) sententiam contineri semper sit iudicatum, quippe quae a praecipuis iisque excellentissimis illius temporis theologis subscriptione confirmata et in evangelicis ecclesiis et scholis 12] recepta fuere. Et ea quidem (ut paulo ante monuimus) omnia conscripta atque edita sunt, priusquam controversiae illae inter Augustanae Confessionis theologos orirentur, ideoque nihil in illis datum est affectibus; quare etiam ab iis, qui inter se disceptant, reprobari nullo iure possunt. Neque vero quisquam (modo sincere et sine furore Augustanam Confessionem amplectatur) eorum auctoritatem elevari aut contemnet, sed ea (ut veritatis testes) recipiet. Quare nemo vitio nobis vertet, quod ad eorum scriptorum declarationem et decisionem in obortis controversiis provocamus. 13] Ut enim Verbum Dei tamquam immotam veritatem pro fundamento ponimus, ita illa scripta tamquam veritatis testes et quae unanimem sinceramque maiorum nostrorum, qui in puriore doctrina constantes permansere, sententiam complectantur, in medium recte producimus.

De Antithesi

seu reiectione falsae doctrinae in articulis controversis.

14] Necessarium est ad conservandam in ecclesia sinceram doctrinam et ad solidam, firmam Deoque probatam atque gratam concordiam, ut non tantum sana doctrina dextre proponatur, sed etiam contradicentes diversumque docentes redarguantur. Fidelium enim pastorum utrumque officium est (ut D. Lutherus dicere solet), et oviculas pascere et lupum arcere, ut alienas voces vitare discant pressly drawn this distinction, namely, that the Word of God alone should be and remain the only standard and rule of doctrine, to which the writings of no man should be regarded as equal, but to which everything should be subjected.

But [this is not to be understood as if] hereby other good, useful, pure books, expositions of the Holy Scriptures, refutations of errors, explanations of doctrinal articles, are not rejected; for as far as they are consistent with the above-mentioned type of doctrine, these are regarded as useful expositions and explanations, and can be used with advantage. But what has thus far been said concerning the summary of our Christian doctrine is intended to mean only this, that we should have a unanimously accepted, definite, common form of doctrine, which all our evangelical churches together and in common confess, from and according to which, because it has been derived from God's Word, all other writings should be judged and adjusted as to how far they are to be approved and accepted.

For that we embodied the above-mentioned writings, namely, the Augsburg Confession, Apology, Smalcald Articles, Luther's Large and Small Catechisms, in the oft-mentioned Sum of our Christian doctrine, was done for the reason that these have always and everywhere been regarded as the common, unanimously accepted meaning of our churches, and, moreover, have been subscribed at that time by the chief and most enlightened theologians, and have held sway in all evangelical churches and schools. So also, as before mentioned, they were all written and sent forth before the divisions among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession arose; therefore, since they are held to be impartial, and neither can nor should be rejected by either part of those who have entered into controversy, and no one who without guile is an adherent of the Augsburg Confession will complain of these writings, but will cheerfully accept and tolerate them as witnesses [of the truth], no one can think ill of [blame] us that we derive from them an explanation and decision of the articles in controversy, and that, as we lay down God's Word, the eternal truth, as the foundation, so we introduce and quote also these writings as a witness of the truth and as the unanimously received correct understanding of our predecessors who have steadfastly held to the pure doctrine.

Of Articles in Controversy with Respect to the Antithesis, or Opposite Doctrine.

Moreover, since for the preservation of pure doctrine and for thorough, permanent, godly unity in the Church it is necessary, not only that the pure, wholesome doctrine be rightly presented, but also that the opponents who teach otherwise be reproved, 1 Tim. 3 (2 Tim. 3, 16); Titus 1, 9, — for faithful shepherds, as Luther says, should do both, namely, feed or nourish the lambs and resist the wolves, so that the sheep may flee from strange voices, mügen, Joh. 10, und das Röstliche von dem Schändlichen scheiden, Jer. 15:

So haben wir uns auch darüber und davon gegeneinander gründlich und deutlich erklärt, also daß in alle Wege ein Unterschied soll und muß gehalten werden zwischen unnötigem und unnützigem Gezänf, damit, weil es mehr verführt als baut, die Kirche billig nicht soll verwirrt werden, und zwischen nötigem Streit, wenn nämlich solcher Streit vorfällt, welcher die Artikel des Glaubens oder die vornehmen Hauptstücke der christlichen Lehre angeht, da zur Rettung der Wahrheit falsche Gegenlehre gestraft werden muß.

Wiewohl nun obgemeldete Schriften dem christlichen Leser, welcher Lust und Liebe zu der göttlichen Wahrheit trägt, einen lautereren, richtigen Bescheid von allen und jeden streitigen Artikeln unserer christlichen Religion geben, was er vermöge Gottes Wort, der Propheten und Apostel Schriften, für recht und wahr halten und annehmen, und was er als falsch und unrecht verwerfen, fliehen und meiden solle: so haben wir doch, damit die Wahrheit desto deutlicher und klarer gehalten und von allen Irrthümern unterschieden, und nicht unter gemeinen Worten etwas verstedt und verborgen möchte werden, uns von den vornehmsten und wichtigsten Artikeln, so dieser Zeit in Streit gezogen, von jedem insonderheit herüber deutlich und ausdrücklich gegeneinander erklärt, daß es ein öffentliches gewisses Zeugnis nicht allein bei den Lebenden, sondern auch bei unsern Nachkommen sein möge, was unserer Kirchen einhellige Meinung und Urtheil von den streitigen Artikeln sei und bleiben solle, nämlich:

1. Zum ersten, daß wir verwerfen und verdammen alle Ketereien und Irrthümer, so in der ersten, alten, rechtgläubigen Kirche aus wahrem, beständigem Grunde der heiligen göttlichen Schrift verworfen und verdammt sind.

2. Zum andern verwerfen und verdammen wir alle Sekten und Ketereien, so in jetztgemeldeten Schriften des Summarischen Begriffs der Bekenntnis [des Bekenntnisses] unserer Kirchen verworfen sind.

3. Zum dritten, weil innerhalb dreißig Jahren von wegen des Interims und sonst etliche Spaltungen unter etlichen Theologen Augsburger Confession entstanden, haben wir von denselben allen und einem jeden insonderheit unsern Glauben und Bekenntnis rund, lauter und klar in thesi et antithesi, das ist, die rechte Lehre und Gegenlehre, setzen und erklären wollen, damit der Grund göttlicher Wahrheit in allen Artikeln offenbar, und alle unrechtmäßige, zweifelhaftige, verächtliche und verdamnte Lehre, wo auch dieselbe und in was Büchern sie gefunden, und wer gleich dieselben geschrieben oder sich noch derselben annehmen wollte, ausgesetzt werde, damit männiglich [jedermann] vor den Irrthümern, so hin und wieder in etlicher Theologen Schriften ausgebreitet, treulich verwahrt sei, und hierin durch keines Menschen Ansehen verführt werde. In welcher Erklärung sich der christliche Leser nach aller Nothdurft ersehen und solche gegen überzählte Schriften halten möge, daraus er eigentlich befinden wird, was von einem jeden Artikel in dem Summarischen Begriff unserer Religion und Glaubens anfangs bekannt, nachmals zu unterschiedlichen et pretiosum a vili secernere possint. 1 Tim. 3 [2 Tim. 3, 16]; Tit. 1, 9; Joh. 10, 12; Jer. 15, 19.

Quare in hac etiam parte mentem nostram 15) invicem declaravimus et perspicue [R. 637] declaramus, quod videlicet discrimen sit habendum inter non necessarias atque inutiles contentiones (quae plus destruunt quam aedificant), ne iis ecclesia perturbetur, et inter necessaria certamina, quando tales controversiae incidunt, ubi de articulis fidei aut praecipuis partibus Christianae doctrinae agitur; tum enim ad veritatis defensionem necessario contraria et falsa doctrina est refutanda.

16) Etsi autem paulo ante commemorata scripta pio lectori, qui veritatis coelestis amore flagrat, in omnibus et singulis articulis Christianae nostrae religionis perspicue et dilucide commonstrant, quidnam iuxta Verbi Dei, prophetarum et apostolicorum scriptorum, normam verum sit et amplectendum, et quid falsum et reiiciendum atque fugiendum sit: tamen de praecipuis et summis articulis singulis, qui hisce temporibus in controversiam venerunt, sententiam nostram perspicue et sine omni ambiguitate proponere volumus. Idque eo consilio, ut veritas magis elucescat clariusque agnoscat et ab erroribus facilius discernatur, ne quidquam, quod veritati officiat, sub nimis generalibus verbis aut phrasibus occultari possit; tum etiam, ut publicum solidumque testimonium, non modo ad eos, qui nunc vivunt, sed etiam ad omnem posteritatem exstaret, ostendens, quanam ecclesiarum nostrarum de controversis articulis unanimis fuerit esseque perpetuo debeat decisio atque sententia, videlicet:

17) I. Primo reiicimus atque damnamus omnes haereses et errores, qui in primitiva (recte credentium) ecclesia ex solidis Verbi Dei fundamentis reiecti sunt et damnati.

18) II. Deinde reprobamus et damnamus omnes sectas atque haereses, quae in scriptis paulo ante commemoratis reprobatae sunt.

19) III. Praeterea, cum intra triginta annos partim ex interreligionis, quam Interim [R. 638] vocant, formula, partim aliis occasionibus dissidia inter theologos quosdam Augustanae Confessionis orta sint, de illis omnibus et singulis fidem et confessionem nostram non modo in thesi, verum etiam in antithesi (veram videlicet et falsam contrariam doctrinam) diserte, categorice et perspicue proponere et declarare volumus. Idque ea de causa a nobis factum est, ut solida coelestis doctrinae in omnibus articulis fundamenta rectius conspicerentur, et omnia falsa, ambigua, suspecta et damnata dogmata (quibuscunque libris contineantur et a quocunque tandem vel conscripta sint vel hodie etiamnum defendantur) diserte repudientur, ut omnes ad cavendos errores (hinc inde in quorundam theologorum libris sparsos) fideliter praemoneantur et excitentur, ne in rebus tantis ullius hominis 20) auctoritate seducantur. Hanc nostram controversiarum explicationem si pius lector sedulo perpenderit eamque cum scriptis illis aliquoties commemoratis contulerit, liquido

John 10, 18, and may separate the precious from the vile, Jer. 15, 19,—

Therefore we have thoroughly and clearly declared ourselves to one another, also regarding these matters, as follows: that a distinction should and must by all means be observed between unnecessary and useless wrangling, on the one hand, whereby the Church ought not to be disturbed, since it destroys more than it builds up, and necessary controversy, on the other hand, as, when such a controversy occurs as involves the articles of faith or the chief heads of the Christian doctrine, where for the defense of the truth the false opposite doctrine must be reprovcd.

Now, although the aforesaid writings afford the Christian reader, who delights in and has a love for the divine truth, clear and correct information concerning each and every controverted article of our Christian religion, as to what he should regard and receive as right and true according to God's Word of the Prophetic and Apostolic Scriptures, and what he should reject, shun, and avoid as false and wrong; yet, in order that the truth may be preserved the more distinctly and clearly, and be distinguished from all errors, and that nothing be hidden and concealed under ordinary terms [rather general words and phrases], we have clearly and expressly declared ourselves to one another concerning the chief and most important articles, taken one by one, which at the present time have come into controversy, so that there might be a public, definite testimony, not only for those now living, but also for our posterity, what is and should remain the unanimous understanding and judgment [decision] of our churches in reference to the articles in controversy, namely:

1. First, that we reject and condemn all heresies and errors which were rejected and condemned in the primitive, ancient, orthodox Church, upon the true, firm ground of the holy divine Scriptures.

2. Secondly, we reject and condemn all sects and heresies which are rejected in the writings, just mentioned, of the comprehensive summary of the Confession of our churches.

3. Thirdly, since within thirty years some divisions arose among some theologians of the Augsburg Confession on account of the Interim and otherwise, it has been our purpose to state and declare plainly [categorically], purely, and clearly our faith and confession concerning each and every one of these in thesis and antithesis, i. e., the true doctrine and its opposite, in order that the foundation of divine truth might be manifest in all articles, and that all unlawful, doubtful, suspicious, and condemned doctrines, wherever and in whatever books they may be found, and whoever may have written them, or even now may be disposed to defend them, might be exposed [distinctly repudiated], so that every one may be faithfully warned against the errors, which are spread here and there in the writings of some theologians, and no one be misled in this matter by the reputation [authority] of any man. From this declaration the Christian reader will inform himself in every emergency, and compare it with the writings enumerated above, and he will find out exactly that what was confessed rare, ut semel exhibitam illam Augustanam Confessionem eiusque unanimem, piam et veram sententiam firmiter retineamus, atque in ea doctrina per gratiam Dei (adversus omnes, quae inciderunt, corruptelas) constantes perseveremus.

Zeiten erklärt und durch uns in dieser Schrift wiederholt, keineswegs widerinander, sondern die einfältige, unwandelbare, beständige Wahrheit sei, und daß wir demnach nicht von einer Lehre zu der andern fallen, wie unsere Widersacher fälschlich ausgeben, sondern bei der einmal übergebenen Augsburgerischen Konfession und in einhelligem, christlichem Verstande derselben begehren uns finden zu lassen und dabei durch Gottes Gnade standhaftig und beständig wider alle eingefallenen Verfälschungen zu verharren.

I.

Von der Erbsünde.

Und erstlich hat sich unter etlichen Theologen Augsburgerischer Konfession ein Zwiespalt von der Erbsünde zugetragen, was eigentlich dieselbe sei. Denn ein Teil hat gestritten: weil durch Adams Fall ist ganz verderbt menschlich' Natur und Wesen, daß nunmehr nach dem Fall des verderbten Menschen Natur, Substanz, Wesen oder ja das [der] vornehmste, höchste Teil seines Wesens, als die vernünftige Seele in ihrem höchsten Grad über vornehmsten Kräften, die Erbsünde selbst sei, welche Natur- oder Person[sünde] genennet [genannt] worden, darum daß es nicht ein Gedanke, Wort oder Werk, sondern die Natur selbst sei, daraus als aus der Wurzel alle andern Sünden entspringen, und sei deswegen jeßund nach dem Fall, weil die Natur durch die Sünde verderbt, ganz und gar kein Unterschied zwischen des Menschen Natur oder Wesen und zwischen der Erbsünde.

Der andere Teil aber hat dagegen gelehrt, daß die Erbsünde eigentlich nicht sei des Menschen Natur, Substanz oder Wesen, daß ist, des Menschen Leib oder Seele, welche auch jeßund nach dem Fall in uns Gottes Geschöpf und Creaturen sind und bleiben, sondern sei etwas in des Menschen Natur, Leib, Seele und allen seinen Kräften, nämlich eine greuliche, tiefe, unaussprechliche Verderbung derselben, also daß der Mensch der Gerechtigkeit, darin er anfangs erschaffen, mangelt und in geistlichen Sachen zum Guten erstorben und zu allem Bösen verlehrt [ist], und daß von wegen solcher Verderbung und angeborener Sünde, so in der Natur steckt, aus dem Herzen alle wirklichen Sünden herfließen, und müßte also ein Unterschied gehalten werden zwischen des verderbten Menschen Natur und Wesen oder seinem Leib und Seele, welches Gottes Geschöpf und Creaturen an uns auch nach dem Fall sind, und zwischen der Erbsünde, welche ein Werk des Teufels ist, dadurch die Natur verderbt worden.

Run ist dieser Streit von der Erbsünde nicht ein unnütziges Gezänk, sondern wenn diese Lehre aus und nach Gottes Wort recht geführt und von allen pelagianischen und manichäischen Irrtümern intelliget, ea, quae de unoquoque articulo (in compendiaria illa doctrina nostrae religionis et fidei) initio maiores nostri senserunt atque publice professi sunt, easque declarationes, quae diversis temporibus per intervalla sunt consecutae, et eam doctrinam, quam nunc hoc scripto repetimus, haudquaquam inter se discrepare, sed esse simplicem, immotam ac certissimam veritatem. Et agnoscat lector candidus, nos non de uno dogmate ad aliud (levitate quadam, ut adversarii nos criminantur) transillire, sed potius nos in eo elaborare, ut semel exhibitam illam Augustanam Confessionem eiusque unanimem, piam et veram sententiam firmiter retineamus, atque in ea doctrina per gratiam Dei (adversus omnes, quae inciderunt, corruptelas) constantes perseveremus.

I.

[R. 639]

DE PECCATO ORIGINIS.

1) Orta est inter nonnullos Augustanae Confessionis theologos controversia de peccato originali, quidnam hoc proprie et revera sit. Una enim pars contendit (cum per lapsum Adae humana natura et essentia totaliter corrupta sit), quod nunc post lapsum hominis corrupta natura, substantia et essentia aut certe praecipua et praestantissima pars ipsius essentiae (anima videlicet rationalis in summo suo gradu aut praecipuis potentiis) sit ipsum peccatum originale, quod ideo vocetur peccatum naturae vel personae, quod non sit cogitatio, verbum aut opus quoddam, sed ipsissima natura, e qua tamquam ex radice omnia alia peccata oriantur, eamque ob causam affirmant, iam post lapsum (quandoquidem natura per peccatum corrupta est) nullum plane discrimen esse inter hominis naturam, substantiam seu essentiam et inter peccatum originis.

2) Altera vero pars contrarium asseruit: peccatum videlicet originale non esse ipsam hominis naturam, substantiam aut essentiam, hoc est, ipsius hominis corpus et animam (quae hodie in nobis etiam post lapsum sunt manentque Dei opus et creatura), sed malum illud originis esse aliquid in ipsa hominis natura, corpore, anima omnibusque viribus humanis, horrendam videlicet, profundam, intinam atque verbis inexplicabilem humanae naturae corruptionem, ita ut homo originali iustitia, cum qua initio creatus erat, penitus spoliatus careat atque (in rebus spiritualibus) ad bonum prorsus sit mortuus, ad omne (R. 640) vero malum totus plane sit conversus, et propter hanc naturae corruptionem et insitum ac innatum peccatum (quod in ipsa natura infixum haeret) e corde humano omnis generis actualia peccata promanent. Discrimen itaque retinendum esse affirmant inter corrupti hominis naturam et essentiam, seu animam et corpus hominis, quae in nobis etiam post lapsum sunt Dei opus et creatura, et inter peccatum originale, quod est diaboli opus, per quod natura est depravata.

3) Haec disceptatio de peccato originis non est certamen quoddam non necessarium, sed maximi momenti. Cum enim haec doctrina iuxta Verbi Dei analogiam recte ac sincere in the beginning concerning each article in the comprehensive summary of our religion and faith, and what was afterward restated at various times, and is repeated by us in this document, is in no way contradictory, but the simple, immutable, permanent truth, and that we, therefore, do not change from one doctrine to another, as our adversaries falsely assert, but earnestly desire to be found loyal to the once-delivered Augsburg Confession and its unanimously accepted Christian sense, and through God's grace to abide thereby firmly and constantly in opposition to all corruptions which have entered.

I.

OF ORIGINAL SIN.

And, to begin with, a controversy has occurred among some theologians of the Augsburg Confession concerning Original Sin, what it properly [and really] is. For one side contended that, since through the fall of Adam man's nature and essence are entirely corrupt, the nature, substance, and essence of the corrupt man, now, since the Fall, or, at any rate, the principal, highest part of his essence, namely, the rational soul in its highest state or principal powers, is original sin itself, which has been called nature-sin or person-sin, for the reason that it is not a thought, word, or work, but the nature itself whence, as from a root, spring all other sins, and that on this account there is now, since the Fall, because the nature is corrupt through sin, no difference whatever between the nature and essence of man and original sin.

But the other side taught, in opposition, that original sin is not properly the nature, substance, or essence of man, that is, man's body or soul, which even now, since the Fall, are and remain the creation and creatures of God in us, but that it is something in the nature, body, and soul of man, and in all his powers, namely, a horrible, deep, inexpressible corruption of the same, so that man is destitute of the righteousness wherein he was originally created, and in spiritual things is dead to good and perverted to all evil; and that, because of this corruption and inborn sin, which inheres in the nature, all actual sins flow forth from the heart; and that hence a distinction must be maintained between the nature and essence of the corrupt man, or his body and soul, which are the creation and creatures of God in us even since the Fall, and original sin, which is a work of the devil, by which the nature has become corrupt.

Now this controversy concerning original sin is not unnecessary wrangling, but if this doctrine is rightly presented from, and according to, God's Word, and separated from all abgejonbert wird, so werden (wie die Apologia spricht) des Herrn Christi Wohlthaten und sein theures Verdienst, auch die Gnadenwirkung des heiligen Geistes desto besser erkannt und mehr gepreiset; es wird auch Gott seine Ehre gegeben, wenn Gottes Wort und Geschöpf am Menschen von des Teufels Wert, dadurch die Natur verderbt [ist], recht unterschieden wird. Derwegen, diesen Zwiespalt christlich und nach Gottes Wort zu erklären und die rechte, reine Lehre von der Erbsünde zu erhalten, wollen wir aus vorgemeldeten Schriften die thesin und antithesin, das ist, rechte Lehre und Gegenlehre, in kurze Hauptstücke fassen.

1. Und erstlich ist's wahr, daß Christen für Sünde halten und erkennen sollen nicht allein die wirkliche Übertretung der Gebote Gottes, sondern daß auch die greuliche, schreckliche Erbsünde, durch welche die ganze Natur verderbt [ist], vor allen Dingen wahrhaftig für Sünde soll gehalten und erkannt [erkannt] werden, ja für die Hauptünde, welche eine Wurzel und Brunnquell ist aller wirklichen Sünden; und wird von D. Luthero eine Natur- oder Personünde genannt [genannt], damit anzuzeigen: da gleich [wenngleich] der Mensch nichts Böses gedachte, rebete oder wirkte, welches doch nach dem Fall unserer ersten Eltern in diesem Leben menschlicher Natur unmöglich, daß gleichwohl seine Natur und Person sündig, das ist, durch die Erbsünde als mit einem geistlichen Ausatz durch und durch, ganz und gar, vor Gott vergiftet und verderbt sei; um welcher Verderbung willen und von wegen des Falles des ersten Menschen die Natur oder Person von Gottes Gesetz beklagt [angeklagt] und verdammt wird, also daß wir von Natur Kinder des Zorns, des Todes und der Verdammnis sind, wo wir nicht durch das Verdienst Christi davon erlöst werden.

sona hominis lege Dei accusatur et condemnatur, ita ut natura filii irae, mortis et damnationis mancipia simus, nisi beneficio meriti Christi ab his malis liberemur et servemur.

2. Zum andern ist das auch klar und wahr, wie der neunzehnte Artikel in der Augsburgerischen Confession lehrt, daß Gott nicht ist ein Schöpfer, Stifter oder Ursache der Sünde, sondern aus Anstiftung des Teufels durch einen Menschen ist die Sünde (welche ist ein Werk des Teufels) in die Welt [ge]kommen. Röm. 5; 1 Joh. 3. Und noch heutzutage in dieser Verderbung schafft und macht Gott in uns die Sünde nicht, sondern mit der Natur, welche Gott heutzutage an den Menschen noch schafft und macht, wird die Erbsünde durch die fleischliche Empfängnis und Geburt von Vater und Mutter aus sündlichem Samen mit fortgepflanzt.

3. Zum dritten, was dieser Erbschade sei, weiß und kennt keine Vernunft nicht, sondern es muß, wie die Schmalkaldischen Artikel reden, aus der Schrift Offenbarung gelernt und geglaubt werden. Und in der Apologia wird dasselbe kürzlich in diese Hauptstücke gefaßt:

1. Daß dieser Erbschade sei die Schuld, daß wir allesamt von wegen des Ungehorsams Adams und Evas in Gottes Unnade und Kinder des Zorns von Natur sind, wie der Apostel zu den Römern am 5. Kapitel zeugt.

proponitur et ab omnibus cum Pelagianis tum Manichaeis erroribus separatur, tunc (ut Apologia habet) beneficia Christi et satisfactio seu pretiosissimum ipsius meritum atque operationes Spiritus Sancti gratuita rectius agnoscuntur et magis celebrantur. Ac insuper Deo gloria sua tribuitur, quando opus Dei et creatura in homine a diaboli opere (per quod 4) natura corrupta est) recte discernitur. Ut igitur haec controversia pie, secundum Verbi Dei analogiam, explicetur, et sincera doctrina de peccato originis conservetur, ex illis, quorum supra mentionem fecimus, scriptis, thesin et antithesin, id est, sinceram doctrinam et falsam huic contrariam, in certa eaque brevia capita colligemus.

5) I. Et primum quidem constat, Christianos non tantum, actualia delicta et transgressionem mandatorum Dei peccata esse, agnoscere et definire debere, sed etiam horrendum atque abominabilem illum hereditarium morbum, per quem tota natura corrupta est, imprimis pro horribili peccato, et quidem pro principio et capite omnium peccatorum (e quo reliquae transgressionis tamquam e radice nascuntur et quasi e scaturigine promanent) omnino 6) habendum esse. Et hoc malum aliquando D. Lutherus peccatum naturae, item [R. 639] peccatum personae appellare solet, ut significet, etiamsi homo prorsus nihil mali cogitaret, loqueretur aut ageret (quod sane post primorum nostrorum parentum lapsum in hac vita humanae naturae est impossibile), tamen nihilominus hominis naturam et personam esse peccatricem, hoc est, peccato originali (quasi lepra quadam spirituali) prorsus et totaliter intimis etiam visceribus et cordis recessibus profundissimis totam esse coram Deo infectam, venenatam et penitus corruptam; et propter hanc corruptionem atque primorum nostrorum parentum lapsum natura aut personam

7) II. Deinde etiam hoc extra controversiam est positum (ut decimus nonus articulus Confessionis Augustanae habet), quod Deus non sit causa, creator vel auctor peccati, sed quod instinctu, opera et machinationibus Satanae per unum hominem peccatum (quod est diaboli opus) in mundum intraverit. Rom. 5, 12; 1 Joh. 3, 8. Et hodie, etiam in hac naturae corruptione, Deus non creat aut facit in nobis peccatum, sed una cum natura, quam Deus etiamnum in hominibus creat et efficit, peccatum originale per carnalem conceptionem et nativitatem a patre et matre (ex semine per peccatum corrupto) propagatur.

8) III. Praeterea, quid et quantum sit hoc ingens hereditarium malum, id nulla humana ratio indagare aut agnoscere potest, sed (ut Smalcaldici Articuli loquuntur) ex Scripturae Sacrae patefactione discendum et credendum est, id quod in Apologia breviter his praecipuis capitibus comprehenditur:

9) I. Primo, quod hoc hereditarium malum sit culpa seu reatus, quo fit, ut omnes [R. 640] propter inobedientiam Adae et Evae in odio apud Deum et natura filii irae simus, ut apostolus testatur. Rom. 5, 12 sqq. [Eph. 2, 3].

Pelagian and Manichean errors, then (as the Apology says) the benefits of the Lord Christ and His precious merit, also the gracious operation of the Holy Ghost, are the better known and the more extolled; moreover, due honor is rendered to God, if His work and creation in man is rightly distinguished from the work of the devil, by which the nature has been corrupted. In order, therefore, to explain this controversy in the Christian way and according to God's Word, and to maintain the correct, pure doctrine of original sin, we shall collect from the above-mentioned writings the thesis and antithesis, that is, the correct doctrine and its opposite, into brief chapters.

1. And first, it is true that Christians should regard and recognize as sin not only the actual transgression of God's commandments; but also that the horrible, dreadful hereditary malady by which the entire nature is corrupted should above all things be regarded and recognized as sin indeed, yea, as the chief sin, which is a root and fountain-head of all actual sins. And by Dr. Luther it is called a nature-sin or person-sin, thereby to indicate that, even though a person would think, speak, or do nothing evil (which, however, is impossible in this life, since the fall of our first parents), his nature and person are nevertheless sinful, that is, thoroughly and utterly infected and corrupted before God by original sin, as by a spiritual leprosy; and on account of this corruption and because of the fall of the first man the nature or person is accused or condemned by God's Law, so that we are by nature the children of wrath, death, and damnation, unless we are delivered therefrom by the merit of Christ.

2. In the second place, this, too, is clear and true, as the Nineteenth Article of the Augsburg Confession teaches, that God is not a creator, author, or cause of sin, but by the instigation of the devil through one man sin (which is a work of the devil) has entered the world, Rom. 5, 12; 1 John 3, 7. And even at the present day, in this corruption [in this corruption of nature], God does not create and make sin in us, but with the nature which God at the present day still creates and makes in men original sin is propagated from sinful seed, through carnal conception and birth from father and mother.

3. In the third place, what [and how great] this hereditary evil is no reason knows and understands, but, as the Smalcald Articles say, it must be learned and believed from the revelation of Scripture. And in the Apology this is briefly comprehended under the following main heads:

1. That this hereditary evil is the guilt [by which it comes to pass] that, by reason of the disobedience of Adam and Eve, we are all in God's displeasure, and by nature children of wrath, as the apostle shows Rom. 5, 12 ff.; Eph. 2, 3.

2. Zum andern, daß es auch eine gänzliche Darbung [Entbehrung] oder Mangelung der ange-schaffenen Erbgerichtigkeit im Paradies oder des Bildes Gottes, nach welchem der Mensch anfäng-lich in Wahrheit, Heiligkeit und Gerechtigkeit geschaffen, und zugleich ein Unvermögen und Un-tätigkeit zu allen Gottesfahen [sei], oder wie die lateinischen Worte lauten: Descriptio peccati originalis detrahit naturae non renovatae et dona et vim seu facultatem et actus inchoandi et efficiendi spiritualia. Daß ist: Die Beschreibung der Erbsünde benimmt der unverneuerten Natur die Gaben, Kraft und alle Wirkung, in geistlichen Dingen etwas anzufangen und zu wirken.

3. Daß die Erbsünde (an der menschlichen Natur) nicht allein sei ein solcher gänzlicher Mangel alles Guten in geistlichen, göttlichen Sachen, sondern daß sie zugleich auch sei anstatt des ver-lorenen Bildes Gottes in dem Menschen eine tiefe, böse, greuliche, grundlose, unerforschliche und unausprechliche Verderbung der ganzen Natur und aller Kräfte, sonderlich der höchsten, vornehmsten Kräfte der Seele im Verstand, Herzen und Willen, daß dem Menschen nunmehr nach dem Fall angeerbt wird eine angeborene böse Art und inwenigke Mureinigkeit des Herzens, böse Lust und Neigung, daß wir alle von Art und Natur solch Herz, Sinn und Gedanken aus Adam er-erben, welches nach seinen höchsten Kräften und Licht der Vernunft natürlich stracks wider Gott und seine höchsten Gebote geknnt und geartet, ja eine Feindschaft wider Gott ist, was sonderlich göttliche, geistliche Sachen belangt. Denn sonst in natürlichen, äußerlichen Sachen, so der Vernunft unterworfen, hat der Mensch noch etlichermaßen Verstand, Kraft und Vermögen, wiewohl gar sehr geschwächt, welches doch alles auch durch die Erb-sünde vergiftet und verunreinigt wird, daß es vor Gott nichts taugt.

valde sunt debiles et quidem haec ipsa quantulacunque per morbum illum hereditarium [R. 641 veneno infecta sunt atque contaminata, ut coram Deo nullius momenti sint.

4. Die Strafe und Pön der Erbsünde, so Gott auf Adams Kinder und auf die Erbsünde gelegt, ist der Tod, die ewige Verdammnis, auch anderleiblich und geistlich, zeitlich und ewig Elend, Tyrannei und Herrschaft des Teufels, daß die menschliche Natur dem Reich des Teufels unterworfen und unter des Teufels Gewalt dahin-gegeben und unter seinem Reich gefangen [ist], der manchen großen, weisen Menschen in der Welt mit schrecklichem Irrtum, Reheret und anderer
Blindheit betäubt und verführt und sonst die
Menschen zu allerlei Lastern dahintrieht.

5. Zum fünften, derselbe Erbschade ist so groß und greulich, daß er allein um des Herrn Christi willen in den Getauften und Gläubigen vor Gott zugebedt und vergeben muß werden. Es muß auch und kann die dadurch verrückte [verlehrte], ver-derbte menschliche Natur allein durch des Heiligen Geistes Wiedergeburt und Erneuerung geheilt werden, welches doch in diesem Leben nur angefangen, aber allererst in jenem Leben vollkommen sein wird.

Diese Punkte, so alhier allein summarischerweise angezogen, werden in obgemeldeten Schrif-ten der gemeinen Bekenntnis [des gemeinen Be-

10] II. Deinde, quod sit per omnia totalis carentia, defectus seu privatio concreatae in paradiso iustitiae originalis seu imaginis Dei, ad quam homo initio in veritate, sanctitate atque iustitia creatus fuerat, et quod simul etiam sit impotentia et ineptitudo, adversaria et stupiditas, qua homo ad omnia divina seu spiritualia sit prorsus ineptus. Verba Apolo-giae Latine sic habent: Descriptio peccati originalis detrahit naturae non renovatae et dona et vim seu facultatem et actus inchoandi et efficiendi spiritualia.

11] III. Praeterea, quod peccatum originale in humana natura non tantummodo sit eiusmodi totalis carentia seu defectus omnium bonorum in rebus spiritualibus ad Deum pertinentibus, sed quod sit etiam, loco imaginis Dei amissae in homine, intima, pessima, pro-fundissima (instar cuiusdam abyssi), inscu-tabilis et ineffabilis corruptio totius naturae et omnium virium, imprimis vero superiorum et principalium animae facultatum, in mente, intellectu, corde et voluntate. Itaque iam post lapsum homo hereditario a parentibus accipit congenitam pravam vim, internam immunditatem cordis, pravam concupiscentiam et pravas 12] inclinationes, ita ut omnes natura talia corda, tales sensus et cogitationes ab Adamo hereditaria et naturali propagatione consequamur, quae secundum summas suas vires et iuxta lumen rationis naturaliter e diametro cum Deo et summis ipsius mandatis pugnent, atque inimicitia sint adversus Deum, praesertim quantum ad res divinas et spirituales attinet. In aliis enim externis et huius mundi rebus, quae rationi subiectae sunt, relictum est homini adhuc aliquid intellectus, virium et facultatum, etsi hae etiam miserae reliquiae

13] IV. Poenae vero peccati originalis, quas Deus filiis Adae ratione huius peccati im-posuit, haec sunt: mors, aeterna damnatio et praeter haec aliae corporales, spirituales, tem-porales atque aeternae aerumnae et miseriae, tyrannis et dominium Satanae, quod videlicet humana natura regno diaboli subiecta est, cui in miserrimam servitutem tradita, captiva ab eo tenetur. Is certe multos magnos et sapientes homines in mundo horribilibus erroribus ac haeresibus et caecitate multiplici fascinat et seducit, ac miseros mortales saepe in varia et atrocia scelera praecipitat.

14] V. Hoc hereditarium malum tantum tamque horrendum est, ut nullo alio modo nisi propter solum Christum (in hominibus baptizatis et credentibus) coram Deo contegi et condonari possit. Et quidem humana natura, quae hoc malo perversa et tota corrupta est, aliter sanari non potest, nisi ut per Spi-ritum Sanctum regeneretur et renovetur. Idque opus Spiritus Sancti in hac vita tantummodo in nobis inchoatur, in altera demum vita absolvetur et perficitur.

15] Haec capita de peccato originis, quae hoc loco summarie tantum recitavimus, in commemoratis scriptis, quae confessionem

2. Secondly, that it is an entire want or lack of the concreated hereditary righteousness in Paradise, or of God's image, according to which man was originally created in truth, holiness, and righteousness; and at the same time an inability and unfitness for all the things of God, or, as the Latin words read: Descriptio peccati originalis detrahit naturae non renovatae et dona et vim seu facultatem et actus inchoandi et efficiendi spiritualia; that is: The definition of original sin takes away from the unrenewed nature the gifts, the power, and all activity for beginning and effecting anything in spiritual things.

3. That original sin (in human nature) is not only this entire absence of all good in spiritual, divine things, but that, instead of the lost image of God in man, it is at the same time also a deep, wicked, horrible, fathomless, inscrutable, and unspeakable corruption of the entire nature and all its powers, especially of the highest, principal powers of the soul in the understanding, heart, and will, so that now, since the Fall, man inherits an inborn wicked disposition and inward impurity of heart, evil lust and propensity; that we all by disposition and nature inherit from Adam such a heart, feeling, and thought as are, according to their highest powers and the light of reason, naturally inclined and disposed directly contrary to God and His chief commandments, yea, that they are enmity against God, especially as regards divine and spiritual things. For in other respects, as regards natural, external things which are subject to reason, man still has to a certain degree understanding, power, and ability, although very much weakened, all of which, however, has been so infected and contaminated by original sin that before God it is of no use.

4. The punishment and penalty of original sin, which God has imposed upon the children of Adam and upon original sin, are death, eternal damnation, and also other bodily and spiritual, temporal and eternal miseries, and the tyranny and dominion of the devil, so that human nature is subject to the kingdom of the devil and has been surrendered to the power of the devil, and is held captive under his sway, who stupefies [fascinates] and leads astray many a great, learned man in the world by means of dreadful error, heresy, and other blindness, and otherwise rushes men into all sorts of crime.

5. Fifthly, this hereditary evil is so great and horrible that only for the sake of the Lord Christ it can be covered and forgiven before God in the baptized and believing. Moreover, human nature, which is perverted and corrupted thereby, must and can be healed only by the regeneration and renewal of the Holy Ghost, which, however, is only begun in this life, but will not be perfect until in the life to come.

These points, which have been quoted here only in a summary way, are set forth more kenntnisses] unserer christlichen Lehre ausführlicher erklärt.

Solche Lehre aber muß nun also erhalten und verwahrt werden, daß sie nicht abweichend entweder auf die pelagianische oder auf die manichäische Seite. Derhalben soll auch kürzlich gemeldet werden, welche Gegenlehre von diesem Artikel in unsern Kirchen ausgelegt [verurteilt] und verworfen werde.

1. Und erstlich, wider die alten und neuen Pelagianer, werden gestraft und verworfen diese falschen opiniones und Lehren, als wäre die Erbsünde allein ein reatus oder Schuld von wegen fremder Verwirrung, ohne einige unserer Natur Verderbung.

2. Item, als wären die sündlichen bösen Güte nicht Sünde, sondern conditiones oder angeschaffene und wesentliche Eigenschaften der Natur.

3. Oder als wäre der obgemelte Mangel und Schade nicht eigentlich und wahrhaftig vor Gott solche Sünde, darum [um derentwillen] der Mensch außer Christo ein Kind des Zorns und der Verdammnis, auch im Reich und unter der Gewalt des Satans sein müßte.

4. Es werden auch ausgelegt und verworfen diese und dergleichen pelagianische Irrtümer, als: daß die Natur auch nach dem Fall unverderbt und sonderlich in geistlichen Sachen ganz und rein und in ihren naturalibus, das ist, in ihren natürlichen Kräften, vollkommen sein solle.

5. Oder daß die Erbsünde nur von außen ein schlechter, [geringschätziger, eingesprengter Fleck oder anstehender] [von außen sich ansehender] Makel, vel corruptio tantum accidentium aut qualitatum, das ist, eine Verderbung allein etlicher zufälligen Dinge, an des Menschen Natur wäre, dabei und darunter die Natur gleichwohl ihre Güte und Kraft auch zu geistlichen Sachen habe und behalte.

6. Oder daß die Erbsünde nicht eine Verabung oder Mangelung, sondern nur ein äußerliches Hindernis solcher geistlichen guten Kräfte wäre, als wenn ein Magnet mit Knoblauchsast bestrichen wird, dadurch seine natürliche Kraft nicht weggenommen, sondern allein gehindert wird; oder daß dieselbige [derselbe] Makel wie ein Fleck vom Angesicht oder Farbe von der Wand leichtlich könne abgewischt werden.

7. Gleichfalls werden auch gestraft und verworfen, so da lehren, es sei wohl die Natur durch den Fall sehr geschwächt und verderbt, habe aber gleichwohl nicht ganz und gar alles Gute, was zu göttlichen, geistlichen Sachen gehört, verloren, sei auch nicht [es verhalte sich mit der Natur auch nicht], wie man in unsern Kirchen singt: „Durch Adams Fall ist ganz verderbt menschlich Natur und Wesen“, sondern [unsere Natur] habe noch aus und von der natürlichen Geburt, wie klein, wenig und gering es auch sei, dennoch etwas Gutes, als: Fähigkeit, Geschicklichkeit, Lichtigkeit oder Vermögen, in geistlichen Sachen etwas anzufangen, wirken oder mit[zu]wirken. Denn was äußerliche, zeitliche, weltliche Sachen und Händel, so der Vernunft unterworfen, belangt, davon soll im nachfolgenden Artikel Erklärung geschehen.

Diese und dergleichen Gegenlehre wird darum gestraft und verworfen; denn Gottes Wort lehrt, Christianae nostrae doctrinae complectuntur, copiosius explicantur.

16] Haec vero doctrina sic asserenda, conservanda atque munienda est, ut in neutram partem, hoc est, neque ad Pelagianos neque ad Manichaeos errores, declinet. Itaque (quanta fieri potest brevitate) etiam contraria de hoc articulo doctrina, quae ab ecclesiis nostris reprobatur et reiicitur, est recitanda.

17] I. Repudiantur igitur et reiiciuntur veterum et recentiorum Pelagianorum [R. 642] falsae opiniones et dogmata vana, quod peccatum originale sit tantum reatus aut culpa, quae ex aliena transgressione (absque ulla naturae nostrae corruptione) sit contracta.

18] II. Quod pravae concupiscentiae non sint peccatum, sed conditiones quaedam aut concreatæ essentialis naturae proprietates.

19] III. Quod defectus ille et malum hereditarium non sit proprie et vere coram Deo tale peccatum, propter quod homo filius irae et damnationis habeatur, cuius ratione sub tyrannide et regno Satanae ei sit pereundum, nisi Christo inseratur et per eum liberetur.

20] IV. Reprobantur etiam et reiiciuntur hi et similes Pelagiani errores, ut: quod natura etiam post lapsum incorrupta, et quidem praecipue quoad res spirituales, tota adhuc bona ac pura sit et in suis naturalibus, hoc est, in potentiis et viribus suis naturalibus, perfecta et integra sit.

21] V. Aut quod peccatum originis tantum sit externus quidam, nullius prope momenti, naevus aut aspersa macula aut corruptio tantum accidentium et qualitatum, cum qua et sub qua nihilominus natura suam bonitatem et vires, etiam in rebus spiritualibus, habeat et retineat.

22] VI. Vel quod originale peccatum non sit defectus, spoliatio aut privatio, sed tantummodo externum quoddam impedimentum spiritualium bonarum virium, perinde ac si magnus alius succo illinitur, ubi non tollitur vis ipsius naturalis, sed tantummodo impeditur; vel quod macula ista tamquam macula a facie aut color a pariete facile abstergi possit.

23] VII. Repudiantur similiter et reiiciuntur etiam ii, qui docent, naturam ex lapsu humani generis valde quidem debilitatam atque corruptam esse, non tamen prorsus omnem bonitatem (quoad res divinas et spirituales) amisisse. Et falsum esse contendunt, [R. 643] quod ecclesiae nostrae canunt, per lapsum Adae penitus humanam naturam et essentiam corruptam esse. Aiunt enim, hominem ex naturali nativitate adhuc aliquid boni, quantumcunque etiam et quam minutulum, exiguum atque tenue id sit, reliquum habere, capacitatem videlicet, aptitudinem, habilitatem, potentiam et vires aliquas, in rebus spiritualibus aliquid inchoandi, operandi aut 24] cooperandi. Quod vero ad externa, temporalia et ad hunc mundum pertinentia negotia, quae rationi subiecta sunt, attinet, de his in sequentibus articulis dicitur.

25] Haec atque huius generis veritati contraria dogmata eam ob causam reprehendunfully in the above-mentioned writings of the common confession of our Christian doctrine.

Now this doctrine must be so maintained and guarded that it may not deflect either to the Pelagian or the Manichean side. For this reason the contrary doctrine concerning this article, which is censured and rejected in our churches, should also be briefly stated.

1. And first, in opposition to the old and the new Pelagians, the following false opinions and dogmas are censured and rejected, namely, that original sin is only a reatus or guilt, on account of what has been committed by another, without any corruption of our nature.

2. Also, that sinful, evil lusts are not sins, but conditiones, or concreated and essential properties of the nature.

3. Or as though the above-mentioned defect and evil were not properly and truly sin before God, on account of which man without Christ [unless he be grafted into Christ and be delivered through Him] must be a child of wrath and damnation, also in the dominion and beneath the power of Satan.

4. The following and similar Pelagian errors are also censured and rejected, namely: that nature, even since the Fall, is said to be incorrupt, and that especially with respect to spiritual things entirely good and pure, and in naturalibus, that is, in its natural powers, it is said to be perfect.

5. Or that original sin is only external, a slight, insignificant spot sprinkled or a stain dashed upon the nature of man, or corruptio tantum accidentium aut qualitatum, i. e., a corruption only in some accidental things, along with and beneath which the nature nevertheless possesses and retains its integrity and power even in spiritual things.

6. Or that original sin is not a despoliation or deficiency, but only an external impediment to these spiritual good powers, as when a magnet is smeared with garlic-juice, whereby its natural power is not removed, but only hindered; or that this stain can be easily washed away, as a spot from the face or pigment from the wall.

7. They are rebuked and rejected likewise who teach that the nature has indeed been greatly weakened and corrupted through the Fall, but that nevertheless it has not entirely lost all good with respect to divine, spiritual things, and that what is sung in our churches, Through Adam's fall is all corrupt, Nature and essence human, is not true, but from natural birth it still has something good, small, little and inconsiderable though it be, namely, capacity, skill, aptness or ability to begin, to effect, or to help effect something in spiritual things. For concerning external, temporal, worldly things and transactions, which are subject to reason, there will be an explanation in the succeeding article.

These and contrary doctrines of like kind are censured and rejected for the reason that daß die verderbte Natur aus und von ihr selbst in geistlichen, göttlichen Sachen nichts Gutes, auch nicht das Wenigste, als gute Gedanken, vermöge, und nicht allein das, sondern daß sie aus und für sich selbst vor Gott nichts anderes denn sündigen könne. Gen. 6 und 8.

Also muß auch diese Lehre auf der andern Seite vor dem manichäischen Jertum verwahrt werden. Derhalben werden auch diese und dergleichen irrige Lehren verworfen, als: daß jetzt, nach dem Fall, die menschliche Natur anfangs rein und gut geschaffen, und danach von außen die Erbsünde (als etwas Wesentliches) durch den Satan in die Natur eingegossen und eingemengt werde, wie Gift unter Wein gemengt wird.

Denn obwohl in Adam und Eva die Natur erstlich rein, gut und heilig geschaffen, so ist doch durch den Fall die Sünde nicht also in ihre Natur [ge-]kommen, wie die Manichäer geschwärm haben, als hätte der Satan etwas wesentliches Böses geschaffen oder gemacht und mit ihrer Natur vermengt; sondern da aus Verleitung des Satans durch den Fall, nach Gottes Gericht und Urtheil, der Mensch zur Strafe die angeschaffene Erbgerechtigkeit verloren, ist durch solche Privation oder Mangel, Darbung [Entbehrung] und Verminderung, so durch den Satan geschehen, die menschliche Natur also, wie droben gesagt, verlehrt und verderbt, daß mit demselben Mangel und Verderbung jeztund die Natur allen Menschen, so natürlicherweise von Vater und Mutter empfangen und geboren werden, angeerbt wird. Denn nach dem Fall wird die menschliche Natur nicht erstlich rein und gut geschaffen und danach allererst durch die Erbsünde verderbt, sondern im ersten Augenblick unserer Empfängnis ist der Same, daraus der Mensch formiert wird, sündig und verderbt. So ist auch die Erbsünde nicht etwas für sich selbst, in oder außer des verderbten Menschen Natur selbständig, wie sie auch des verderbten Menschen eigen Wesen, Leib oder Seele oder der Mensch selber nicht ist. Es kann und soll auch die Erbsünde und die dadurch verderbte menschliche Natur nicht also unterschieden werden, als wäre die Natur vor Gott rein, gut, heilig und un verderbt, aber allein die Erbsünde, so darin wohnt, wäre böse.

Item, wie Augustinus von den Manichäern schreibt, als ob nicht der verderbte Mensch selber von wegen der angeborenen Erbsünde sündigte, sondern etwas anderes und Fremdes im Menschen, und daß also Gott durchs Gesetz nicht die Natur, als durch die Sünde verderbt, sondern nur allein die Erbsünde darin anlage und verdamme. Denn wie droben in thesi, das ist, in Erklärung der reinen Lehre von der Erbsünde, gesetzt, ist die ganze Natur des Menschen, so natürlicherweise von Vater und Mutter geboren wird, an Leib und Seele, in allen Kräften durch und durch auf das äußerste (was ihre im Paradies angeschaffene Güte, Wahrheit, Heiligkeit und Gerechtigkeit betrifft und anlangt) durch die Erbsünde verderbt und verlehrt. Non tamen in aliam substantiam genere aut specie diversam, priori abolita, transmutata est. Das ist: Jedoch ist sie nicht ganz und gar verlißt oder in eine andere Substanz verwandelt, welche nach ihrem Wesen tur et reiciuntur, quia Verbo Domini docemur, quod corrupta natura ex se et suis viribus in rebus spiritualibus et divinis nihil boni, et ne minimum quidem, utpote ullas bonas cogitationes, habeat. Neque id modo, sed insuper etiam asserunt, quod natura corrupta ex se et viribus suis coram Deo nihil aliud nisi peccare possit. Gen. 6. 8.

26] Vera autem haec doctrina etiam ab altera parte contra Manichaeorum errores probe munienda est. Quare haec et similia alia falsa dogmata reiciuntur, ut: quod initio quidem humana natura bona et pura a Deo creata sit, verum iam, post lapsum, extrinsecus peccatum originale (tamquam quiddam essentialia) per Satanam in naturam infusum et cum ea permixtum sit, quemadmodum venenum vino admiscetur.

27] Etsi enim in Adamo et Eva natura initio pura, bona et sancta creata est, tamen per lapsum peccatum non eo modo ipsorum naturam invasit (ut Manichaei furenter dixerunt), quasi Satan aliquod malum substantiale creasset aut formasset et illud cum natura ipsorum commiscuisset. Quin potius cum seductione Satanae per lapsum iusto Dei iudicio (in poenam hominum) iustitia [R. 644] concreta seu originalis amissa esset, defectu illo, privatione seu spoliatione et vulneratione (quorum malorum Satan causa est) humana natura eo modo, quo supra diximus, perversa et corrupta est, ut iam natura una cum illo defectu et corruptione ad omnes homines, qui naturali modo a parentibus concipiuntur et 28] nascuntur, hereditario propagetur. Post lapsum enim iam humana natura non pura et bona primum creatur, et deinde demum per originis peccatum corrumpitur, sed in primo conceptionis nostrae momento ipsum semen, ex quo homo formatur, peccato iam contaminatum et corruptum est. Et hoc originale peccatum non est quiddam in natura vel extra naturam corrupti hominis per se subsistens, sed neque est hominis corrupti propria essentia, corpus aut anima aut homo ipse. Neque 29] etiam originale peccatum eo modo a corrupta per illud natura est discernendum, quasi ipsa natura coram Deo pura, bona, sancta et incorrupta exstaret, et tantum inhabitans in illa peccatum originis esset malum.

30] Neque ea sententia, quam Augustinus Manichaeis tribuit, illa ratione probari potest, quod nimirum non homo ipse corruptus (ratione innati peccati originalis) peccet, sed aliud quiddam et alienum in homine, et quod Deus per legem non ipsam naturam (quatenus peccato corrupta est), sed tantum peccatum originale (quod sit in natura) accuset atque damnet. Tota enim hominis natura (ut supra in thesi seu assertionem sinceram doctrinae de peccato originali diximus), qualis naturali modo a parentibus generatur, corpore et anima in omnibus viribus prorsus, tota extreme est per peccatum originis corrupta et perversa, quoad bonitatem suam, veritatem, sanctitatem et iustitiam, quae dotes in paradiso naturae erant concretae. Non tamen penitus deleta, abolita aut in aliam substantiam, genere aut specie diversam, id est, quae secundum suam essentiam non sit [R. 645]

God's Word teaches that the corrupt nature, of and by itself, has no power for anything good in spiritual, divine things, not even for the least, as good thoughts; and not only this, but that of and by itself it can do nothing in the sight of God but sin, Gen. 6, 5; 8, 21.

In the same manner this doctrine must also be guarded on the other side against Manichean errors. Accordingly, the following and similar erroneous doctrines are rejected, namely: that now, since the Fall, human nature is in the beginning created pure and good, and that afterwards original sin from without is infused and mingled with the nature by Satan (as something essential), as poison is mingled with wine [that in the beginning human nature was created by God pure and good, but that now, since the Fall, original sin, etc.].

For although in Adam and Eve the nature was originally created pure, good, and holy, nevertheless sin did not enter their nature through the Fall in the way fanatically taught by the Manicheans, as though Satan had created or made some evil substance, and mingled it with their nature. But since man, by the seduction of Satan through the Fall, has lost his concreated hereditary righteousness according to God's judgment and sentence, as a punishment, human nature, as has been said above, is so perverted and corrupted by this deprivation or deficiency, want, and injury, which has been caused by Satan, that at present the nature is transmitted, together with this defect and corruption [propagated in a hereditary way], to all men, who are conceived and born in a natural way from father and mother. For since the Fall human nature is not at first created pure and good, and only afterward corrupted by original sin, but in the first moment of our conception the seed from which man is formed is sinful and corrupt. Moreover, original sin is not something by itself, existing independently in, or apart from, the nature of the corrupt man, as it neither is the real essence, body, or soul of the corrupt man, or the man himself. Nor can and should original sin and the nature of man corrupted thereby be so distinguished as though the nature were pure, good, holy, and uncorrupted before God, while original sin alone which dwells therein were evil.

Also, as Augustine writes concerning the Manicheans, as though it were not the corrupt man himself that sins by reason of in-born original sin, but something different and foreign in man, and that God, accordingly, accuses and condemns by the Law, not the nature as corrupt by sin, but only the original sin therein. For, as stated above in thesi, that is, in the explanation of the pure doctrine concerning original sin, the entire nature of man, which is born in the natural way of father and mother, is entirely and to the farthest extent corrupted and perverted by original sin, in body and soul, in all its powers, as regards and concerns the goodness, truth, holiness, and righteousness concreated with it in Paradise. Non tamen in aliam substantiam genere aut specie diversam, priori abolita, transmutata est, that is: Nevertheless the nature is not entirely exterminated or changed into another substance, which, according to its essence, could not be said to be like our nature [but is diverse in genus or unserer Natur nicht gleich und also mit uns nicht ein es Wesens sein sollte.

Es wird auch von wegen solcher Verderbung die ganze verderbte Natur des Menschen durchs Gesetz angeklagt und verdammt, wo nicht die Sünde um Christi willen vergeben wird.

Es beklagt [verklagt] aber und verdammt das Gesetz unsere Natur nicht darum, daß wir Menschen von Gott erschaffen sind, sondern darum, daß wir sündig und böse sind, wie auch nicht darum und sofern die Natur und das Wesen auch nach dem Fall in uns ein Werk, Geschöpf und Kreatur Gottes ist, sondern darum und sofern sie durch die Sünde vergiftet und verderbt ist.

Wiewohl aber die Erbsünde die ganze menschliche Natur wie ein geistlich Gift und Ausfluß (wie Lutherus redet) vergiftet und verderbt hat, daß man in unserer verderbten Natur augenscheinlich nicht zeigen und weisen kann die Natur besonders für sich und die Erbsünde auch besonders für sich, so ist doch gleichwohl nicht ein Ding die verderbte Natur oder das Wesen des verderbten Menschen, Leib und Seele oder der Mensch selber, von Gott erschaffen (darin die Erbsünde wohnt, dadurch auch Natur, Wesen oder der ganze Mensch verderbt; wie auch in dem äußerlichen Ausfluß der Menschen Natur oder Wesen wohnt und dieselbe verderbt; wie auch in dem äußerlichen Ausfluß der Leib, so ausfließig ist, und der Ausfluß an oder im Leibe nicht ein Ding sind, wenn man eigentlich reden will, sondern es muß ein Unterschied gehalten werden auch zwischen unserer Natur, wie sie von Gott erschaffen und erhalten wird, darin die Sünde wohnt, und zwischen der Erbsünde, so in der Natur wohnt: die beiden müssen und können auch unterschiedlich nach der Heiligen Schrift betrachtet, gelehrt und geglaubt werden.

Und solchen Unterschied zu erhalten, bringen und zwingen die vornehmsten Artikel unsers christlichen Glaubens. Als erstlich im Artikel von der Schöpfung zeugt die Schrift, daß Gott nicht allein vor dem Fall [die] menschliche Natur geschaffen habe, sondern daß sie auch nach dem Fall eine Kreatur und Werk Gottes sei. Deut. 32; Jes. 45. 54. 64; Act. 17; Apoc. 4.

„Deine Hände“ (spricht Hiob) „haben mich gearbeitet und gemacht alles, was ich um und um bin; und versenkest mich so gar. Gedente doch, daß du mich aus Weimen gemacht hast und würdest [wirfst] mich wieder zur Erde machen. Hast du mich nicht wie Milch gemolten und wie Käse lassen gerinnen? Du hast mir Haut und Fleisch angezogen, mit Weinen und Athern hast du mich zusammengefüget. Leben und Wohlthat hast du an mir getan, und dein Aufsehen bewahret meinen Atem“, Hiob 10.

„Ich danke dir“ (spricht David), „daß ich wunderbarlich gemacht bin; wunderbarlich sind deine Werke, und das erkennet meine Seele wohl. Es war dir mein Gebein nicht verhohlen, da ich im Verborgenen gemacht ward, da ich gebildet ward unten in der Erde. Deine Augen sahen mich, da ich noch unbereit war, und waren alle Tage auf dein Buch geschrieben, die noch werden sollten und derselben keiner da war“, Psalm 139.

similis nostrae naturae, atque ita nobiscum non unius essentiae sit, transmutata est.

31] Et quidem propter hanc corruptionem tota hominis corrupta natura per legem accusatur et condemnatur, nisi peccatum propter Christum remittatur.

32] Lex autem naturam nostram non eam ob causam accusat et damnat, quod homines simus, a Deo creati, sed ea de causa, quod peccatores et mali simus. Neque eatenus lex naturam accusat et damnat, quatenus etiam post lapsum ea in nobis est opus et creatura Dei, sed propterea et eatenus, quod per peccatum infecta et corrupta est.

33] Etsi vero peccatum originale totam hominis naturam ut spirituale quoddam venenum et horribilis lepra (quemadmodum D. Lutherus loquitur) infecit et corrumpit, ita quidem, ut iam in nostra natura corrupta ad oculum non monstrari possint distincte haec duo, ipsa natura sola et originale peccatum solum, tamen non unum et idem est corrupta natura seu substantia corrupti hominis, corpus et anima, aut homo ipse a Deo creatus, in quo originale peccatum habitat (cuius ratione natura, substantia, totus denique homo corruptus est), et ipsam originale peccatum, quod in hominis natura aut essentia habitat eamque corrumpit, quemadmodum etiam in lepra corporali ipsum corpus leprosum et lepra ipsa in corpore non sunt unum et idem, si proprie et distincte ea de re disserere velimus. Discrimen igitur retinendum est inter naturam nostram, qualis a Deo creata est hodieque conservatur, in qua peccatum originale habitat, et inter ipsum peccatum originis, quod in natura habitat. Haec enim duo secundum Sacrae Scripturae regulam distincte considerari, doceri et credi debent et possunt.

34] Et quidem ad retinendum hoc discrimen movemur, urgemur atque cogimur [R. 646 praecipuis articulis Christianae fidei nostrae. In primo enim articulo de creatione docet Sacra Scriptura, Deum non modo ante lapsum humanam naturam creasse, verum etiam eandem post lapsum esse Dei opus et creaturam. Deut. 32, 6; Es. 45, 11; 54, 5; 64, 8; Act. 17, 25; Iob. 10; Apoc. 4, 11.

35] Manus tuae (inquit Iob. 10, 8—12) fecerunt me et plasmaverunt me totum in circuitu; et sic repente praecipitas me? Memento, quod sicut lutum feceris me et in pulverem reduces me. Nonne sicut lac mulsisti me et sicut caseum me coagulasti? Pelle et carnibus vestiisti me, ossibus et nervis compegisti me. Vitam et misericordiam tribuisti mihi, et visitatio tua custodivit spiritum meum.

36] Confiteor tibi (inquit David Ps. 139, 14—16), quod mirabiliter formatus sum; mirabilia sunt opera tua, et anima mea cognoscit abunde. Non est occultatum os meum a te, quod fecisti in occulto, et substantia mea (id est, formatio mei, seu: cum formarer) in inferioribus terrae. Imperfectum meum viderunt oculi tui, et in libro tuo omnes dies mei scripti sunt, qui adhuc futuri sunt, et nullus adhuc ex eis esset.

species], and therefore cannot be of one essence with us.

Because of this corruption, too, the entire corrupt nature of man is accused and condemned by the Law, unless the sin is forgiven for Christ's sake.

But the Law accuses and condemns our nature, not because we have been created men by God, but because we are sinful and wicked; not because and so far as nature and its essence, even since the Fall, is a work and creature of God in us, but because and so far as it has been poisoned and corrupted by sin.

But although original sin, like a spiritual poison and leprosy (as Luther says), has poisoned and corrupted the whole human nature, so that we cannot show and point out to the eye the nature apart by itself, and original sin apart by itself, nevertheless the corrupt nature, or essence of the corrupt man, body and soul, or the man himself whom God has created (and in whom dwells original sin, which also corrupts the nature, essence, or the entire man), and original sin, which dwells in man's nature or essence, and corrupts it, are not one thing; as also in external leprosy the body which is leprous, and the leprosy on or in the body, are not, properly speaking, one thing. But a distinction must be maintained also between our nature as created and preserved by God, in which sin is indwelling, and original sin, which dwells in the nature. These two must and also can be considered, taught, and believed separately according to Holy Scripture.

Moreover, the chief articles of our Christian faith urge and compel us to preserve this distinction. For instance, in the first place, in the article of Creation, Scripture testifies that God has created human nature not only before the Fall, but that it is a creature and work of God also since the Fall, Deut. 32, 6; Is. 45, 11; 54, 5; 64, 8; Acts 17, 25; Rev. 4, 11.

Thine hands, says Job, have made me and fashioned me together round about; yet Thou dost destroy me. Remember, I beseech Thee, that Thou hast made me as the clay; and wilt Thou bring me into dust again? Hast Thou not poured me out as milk and curdled me as cheese? Thou hast clothed me with skin and flesh, and fenced me with bones and sinews. Thou hast granted me life and favor, and Thy visitation hath preserved my spirit. Job 10, 8—12.

I will praise Thee, says David, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made. Marvelous are Thy works, and that my soul knoweth right well. My substance was not hid from Thee when I was made in secret and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see my substance yet being unperfect, and in Thy book all my members were written which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them, Ps. 139, 14—16.

Im Prediger Salomons steht geschrieben: „Denn der Staub muß wieder zur Erde kommen, wie er gewesen ist, und der Geist wieder zu Gott, der ihn gegeben hat“, Eccl. 12.

Diese Sprüche zeugen lauter [klar], daß Gott auch nach dem Fall des Menschen Schöpfer sei und ihm Leib und Seele erschaffe. Darum kann der verderbte Mensch nicht ohne allen Unterschied die Sünde selbst sein, sonst wäre Gott ein Schöpfer der Sünde; wie auch unser Kleiner Catechismus in der Auslegung des ersten Artikels bekennet, da also geschrieben: „Ich glaube, daß mich Gott geschaffen hat samt allen Creaturen, mir Leib und Seele, Augen, Ohren und alle Glieder, Vernunft und alle Sinne gegeben hat und noch erhält.“ Desgleichen im Großen Catechismo steht also geschrieben: „Daß meine und glaube ich, daß ich Gottes Geschöpf bin, daß ist, daß er mir gegeben hat und ohne Unterlaß erhält Leib, Seele und Leben, Gliedmaßen klein und groß, alle Sinne, Vernunft und Verstand“ usw. Wievohl dieselbe Creatur und das Werk Gottes durch die Sünde jämmerlich verderbt ist; denn die Masse, daraus Gott jegund den Menschen formiert und macht, ist in Adam verderbt und verlehrt und wird also auf uns geerbt.

Und hier sollen billig fromme, christliche Herzen die unaussprechliche Güte Gottes bedenken, daß solche verderbte, verlehrt, sündliche massam Gott nicht alsbald von sich wirft ins höllische Feuer, sondern daraus formiert und macht die jetzige menschliche Natur, so durch die Sünde jämmerlich verderbt [ist], auf daß er sie durch seinen lieben Sohn von Sünden reinigen, heiligen und selig machen möge.

Aus diesem Artikel findet sich nun der Unterschied unabweisend und klar. Denn die Erbsünde kommt nicht von Gott her; Gott ist nicht ein Schöpfer oder Stifter der Sünde. Es ist auch die Erbsünde nicht eine Creatur oder Werk Gottes, sondern sie ist des Teufels Werk.

Wenn nun ganz und gar kein Unterschied sein sollte zwischen der Natur und dem Wesen unsers Leibes und Seele, so durch die Erbsünde verderbt, und zwischen der Erbsünde, dadurch die Natur verderbt ist, so würde folgen, daß entweder Gott, weil er ist ein Schöpfer dieser unserer Natur, auch die Erbsünde schaffe und mache, welche auch also sein Werk und Creatur sein würde, oder, weil die Sünde ein Werk des Teufels ist, daß der Satan ein Schöpfer wäre dieser unserer Natur, unsers Leibes und Seele, welche auch ein Werk oder Geschöpf des Satans sein müßte, wenn ohne allen Unterschied unsere verderbte Natur die Sünde selbst sein sollte; welches beides wider den Artikel unsers christlichen Glaubens ist. Derwegen und auf daß Gottes Geschöpf und Werk am Menschen von des Teufels Werk unterschieden möge werden, sagen wir, daß es Gottes Geschöpf sei, daß der Mensch Leib und Seele hat; item, daß es Gottes Werk sei, daß der Mensch etwas bedenken [denken], reden, tun und wirken könne; denn „In ihm leben, weben und sind wir“, Act. 17. Daß aber die Natur verderbt [ist], Gedanken, Worte und Werke böse sind, das ist anfänglich ein Werk des Satans, 37] Et Ecclesiastae Salomonis 12, 7 scriptum est: Revertetur pulvis in terram suam, unde erat, et spiritus redibit ad eum, qui dedit illum.

38] Haec Scripturae dicta luculenter testantur, quod Deus etiam post lapsum nihilominus sit hominis Creator, qui ipse corpus et animam creet. Itaque verum esse non potest, quod corruptus homo sine omni discrimine sit ipsum peccatum, alias consequeretur Deum esse peccati creatorem. Sicut etiam Minor noster Catechismus in explicatione primi articuli testatur, ubi ita scriptum est: Credo, quod Deus me creaverit, sicut et omnes alias creaturas, quodque mihi animam et corpus, oculos, aures et omnia membra, rationem et sensus omnes largitus sit et adhuc conservet. Et in Maiore Catechismo haec verba [R. 647] exstant: Hoc sentio et credo me esse Dei creaturam, hoc est, mihi ab ipso donata esse et semper conservari corpus meum, animam, vitam, membra tam minima quam maxima, omnes sensus totamque meam rationem et intellectum etc. Etiam si negari non possit, quod ista creatura et opus Dei per peccatum horribiliter sint corrupta. Massa enim illa, ex qua hodie Deus hominem format et fingit, in Adam corrupta et perversa est et ita hereditario modo in nos propagatur.

39] Et hoc loco omnes piaes mentes ineffabilem Dei bonitatem merito agnoscere debent, quod videlicet hanc penitus corruptam, perversam et peccato contaminatam massam Deus non statim a facie sua in aeternum Gehennae incendium abiicit, sed quod ex ea, quantumvis peccato horribiliter corrupta, format atque fingit humanam naturam, quam hodie circumferimus, ut per unigenitum dilectum Filium suum a peccato eam emundet, sanctificet atque salvam faciat.

40] Quare ex hoc primo fidei nostrae articulo clarissime elucet discrimen. Originale enim peccatum non est a Deo, neque Deus est creator vel auctor peccati. Nec originale peccatum est opus aut creatura Dei, sed est opus diaboli.

41] Quodsi prorsus nulla differentia esset inter naturam seu substantiam corporis atque animae nostrae, quae per peccatum originis corrupta sunt, et inter ipsum peccatum originale, quod naturam corrumpit, sequeretur alterutrum, videlicet aut Deum (quippe huius naturae nostrae Creatorem) etiam ipsum peccatum originis creare et formare, id enim hac ratione ipsius opus et creatura esset; aut certe conficeretur (cum peccatum sit opus diaboli), ipsum Satanam huius nostrae naturae, corporis atque animae, creatorem, atque ita naturam nostram opus et creaturam [R. 648] diaboli esse, si absque omni discrimine nostra corrupta natura ipsum peccatum esset. Utrumque autem absurdum primo fidei nostrae Christianae articulo repugnat. Quia 42] propter, ut opus et creatura Dei in homine ab opere diaboli discerni queat, asserimus, quod homo corpus et animam habet, id habere eum beneficio creationis divinae, et quidem id ipsum Dei esse opus, quod homo aliquid cogitare, loqui, agere, operari potest. In ipso enim vivimus, movemur et sumus, inquit apostolus

In the Ecclesiastes of Solomon it is written: Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit to God, who gave it, Eccl. 12, 7.

These passages clearly testify that God even since the Fall is the Creator of man, and creates his body and soul. Therefore corrupt man cannot, without any distinction, be sin itself, otherwise God would be a creator of sin; as also our Small Catechism confesses in the explanation of the First Article, where it is written: I believe that God has made me and all creatures, that He has given me my body and soul, eyes, ears, and all my members, my reason and all my senses, and still preserves them. Likewise in the Large Catechism it is thus written: This is what I believe and mean, that is, that I am a creature of God; that He has given and constantly preserves to me my body, soul, and life, members great and small, and all my senses, mind, and reason. Nevertheless, this same creature and work of God is lamentably corrupted by sin; for the mass (massa) from which God now forms and makes man was corrupted and perverted in Adam, and is thus transmitted by inheritance to us.

And here pious Christian hearts justly ought to consider the unspeakable goodness of God, that God does not immediately cast from Himself into hell-fire this corrupt, perverted, sinful mass, but forms and makes from it the present human nature, which is lamentably corrupted by sin, in order that He may cleanse it from all sin, sanctify and save it by His dear Son.

From this article, now, the distinction is found indisputably and clearly. For original sin does not come from God. God is not a creator or author of sin. Nor is original sin a creature or work of God, but it is a work of the devil.

Now, if there were to be no difference whatever between the nature or essence of our body and soul, which is corrupted by original sin, and original sin, by which the nature is corrupted, it would follow either that God, because He is the Creator of this our nature, also created and made original sin, which, accordingly, would also be His work and creature; or, because sin is a work of the devil, that Satan would be the creator of this our nature, of our body and soul, which would also have to be a work or creation of Satan if, without any distinction, our corrupt nature should have to be regarded as sin itself; both of which teachings are contrary to the article of our Christian faith. Therefore, in order that God's creation and work in man may be distinguished from the work of the devil, we say that it is God's creation that man has body and soul; also, that it is God's work that man can think, speak, do, and work anything; for in Him we live, and move, and der durch die Sünde Gottes Werk in Adam also verderbt hat, welches daher [von Adam her] auf uns geerbt wird.

Zum andern, im Artikel von der Erlösung zeugt die Schrift gewaltig, daß Gottes Sohn unsere menschliche Natur ohne Sünde angenommen, also daß er uns, seinen Brüdern, allenthalben gleich [ge]worden sei, ausgenommen die Sünde, Hebr. 2. Und veteres dixerunt: Christum nobis, fratribus suis, consubstantialtem esse secundum assumptam naturam, quia naturam, quae, excepto peccato, eiusdem generis, speciei et substantiae cum nostra est, assumpsit, et contrariam sententiam manifeste haereseos damnarunt. Daß ist: Daher alle alten rechtgläubigen Lehrer gehalten, daß Christus nach der angenommenen Menschheit mit uns, seinen Brüdern, ein es Wesens sei; denn er hat seine menschliche Natur, welche unserer menschlichen Natur in ihrem (allein die Sünde ausgenommen) gleich ist, an sich genommen, und haben die Gegenlehre als öffentliche Keterei verdammt.

Wenn nun kein Unterschied wäre zwischen der Natur oder dem Wesen des verderbten Menschen und zwischen der Erbsünde, so müßte folgen, daß Christus entweder unsere Natur nicht angenommen, weil er die Sünde nicht hätte angenommen, oder, weil er unsere Natur angenommen, daß er auch die Sünde hätte angenommen, welches beides wider die Schrift ist. Weil aber Gottes Sohn unsere menschliche Natur und nicht die Erbsünde an sich genommen, so ist hieraus klar, daß die menschliche Natur (auch nach dem Fall) und die Erbsünde nicht ein Ding sei [seien], sondern unterschieden werden müssen.

Zum dritten, im Artikel von der Heiligung zeugt die Schrift, daß Gott den Menschen von der Sünde abwasche, reinige, heilige, und daß Christus sein Volk von ihren Sünden selig mache. So kann ja die Sünde der Mensch selber nicht sein; denn den Menschen nimmt Gott um Christus' willen zu Gnaden auf, aber der Sünde bleibt er in Ewigkeit feind. Ist [Es ist] derhalben unchristlich und abscheulich, zu hören, daß die Erbsünde im Namen der heiligen Dreifaltigkeit getauft, geheiligt und selig gemacht werde, und dergleichen Reden mehr (damit [mit Anführung welcher] wir einfältige Leute nicht verärgern wollen), so in der neuen Manichäer Schriften zu finden.

Zum vierten, im Artikel von der Auferstehung zeugt die Schrift, daß eben dieses unsers Fleisches Substanz, aber ohne Sünde, auferstehen [werde], und daß wir im ewigen Leben eben diese Seele, aber ohne Sünde, haben und behalten werden.

Wenn nun ganz und gar kein Unterschied wäre zwischen unserm verderbten Leib und Seele und zwischen der Erbsünde, so würde wider diesen Artikel des christlichen Glaubens folgen, daß entweder dies unser Fleisch am jüngsten Tage nicht aufstehen [werde], und daß wir im ewigen Leben

Act. 17, 28. Quod vero natura hominis corrupta est, quod cogitationes, verba et facta eius prava sunt, hoc originaliter et principaliter est opus Satanae, qui per peccatum opus Dei in Adamo miserabiliter corruptit, quae naturae depravatio inde in nos hereditario derivata est.

43) In secundo fidei nostrae articulo de redemptione sacrae litterae luculenter testantur, quod Filius Dei humanam nostram naturam (sine peccato tamen) assumpsit, ita quidem, ut nobis, fratribus suis, per omnia similis fieret, peccato excepto, ut apostolus docet Hebr. 2, 4. Unde omnes veteres orthodoxi dixerunt, Christum secundum assumptam humanam naturam nobis, fratribus suis, consubstantialtem esse, quia naturam, quae (excepto peccato) eiusdem generis, speciei et substantiae cum nostra est, assumpsit. Et contrariam sententiam ut haeresin manifeste damnarunt.

Wesen und allen wesentlichen Eigenschaften durchaus genommen, und haben die Gegenlehre als öffentliche

44) Iam si nullum esset discrimen inter hominis corrupti naturam seu substantiam et inter peccatum originis, horum alterutrum consequeretur: aut Christum naturam nostram non assumpsisse, quandoquidem certum est, quod peccatum non assumpsit, aut Christum assumpsisse etiam peccatum, cum naturam nostram assumpsit. Horum utrumque Sacrae Scripturae repugnat. Cum igitur Filius Dei naturam nostram humanam, non autem peccatum originale, assumpsit, manifestum est, quod humana natura, etiam post lapsum, et peccatum originis non sint [R. 649 unum et idem, sed quod diligenter sint discernenda].

45) In tertio articulo fidei nostrae Christianae, de sanctificatione, testatur Sacra Scriptura, quod Deus hominem a peccato abluit, emundet, sanctificet [1 Ioh. 1, 7], et quod Christus populum suum salvum faciat a peccatis eorum, Matth. 1, 21. Ergo peccatum originis non potest esse ipsemet homo. Deus enim hominem propter Christum in gratiam recipit, peccatum autem in omnem aeternitatem odit. Quare impium est et auditu horrendum, quod peccatum originale in nomine sacrosanctae Trinitatis baptizetur, sanctificetur et salvetur, et si quae sunt alia huius farinae prorsus paradoxa, quae in scriptis recentiorum Manichaeorum leguntur. Ea recitare nolumus, ne pias mentes offendamus.

46) Quarto. In articulo de resurrectione Scriptura perspicue docet, quod huius nostrae carnis, quam circumferimus, substantia (sed tamen a peccato mundata) sit resurrectura, et quod in vita aeterna eam ipsam animam (sed peccato non contaminatam) habituri et retenturi simus.

47) Iam si nulla prorsus esset differentia inter corpus et animam nostram corruptam et inter peccatum originale, rursus duo absurda, quae cum hoc articulo e diametro pugnant, consequerentur: aut, videlicet, hanc carnem in die novissimo non resurrecturam, have our being, Acts 17, 28. But that the nature is corrupt, that its thoughts, words, and works are wicked, is originally a work of Satan, who has thus corrupted God's work in Adam through sin, which from him is transmitted by inheritance to us.

Secondly, in the article of Redemption the Scriptures testify forcibly that God's Son assumed our human nature without sin, so that He was in all things, sin excepted, made like unto us, His brethren, Heb. 2, 14. Unde veteres dixerunt: Christum nobis, fratribus suis, consubstantialem esse secundum assumptam naturam, quia naturam, quae, excepto peccato, eiusdem generis, speciei et substantiae cum nostra est, assumpsit; et contrariam sententiam manifeste haereseos damnarunt. That is: Hence all the old orthodox teachers have maintained that Christ, according to His assumed humanity, is of one essence with us, His brethren; for He has assumed His human nature, which in all respects (sin alone excepted) is like our human nature in its essence and all essential attributes; and they have condemned the contrary doctrine as manifest heresy.

Now, if there were no distinction between the nature or essence of corrupt man and original sin, it must follow that Christ either did not assume our nature, because He did not assume sin, or that, because He assumed our nature, He also assumed sin; both of which ideas are contrary to the Scriptures. But inasmuch as the Son of God assumed our nature, and not original sin, it is clear from this fact that human nature, even since the Fall, and original sin, are not one [and the same] thing, but must be distinguished.

Thirdly, in the article of Sanctification Scripture testifies that God cleanses, washes, and sanctifies man from sin, 1 John 1, 7, and that Christ saves His people from their sins, Matt. 1, 21. Sin, therefore, cannot be man himself; for God receives man into grace for Christ's sake, but to sin He remains hostile to eternity. Therefore it is unchristian and horrible to hear that original sin is baptized in the name of the Holy Trinity, sanctified and saved, and other similar expressions found in the writings of the recent Manicheans, with which we will not offend simple-minded people.

Fourthly, in the article of the Resurrection Scripture testifies that precisely the substance of this our flesh, but without sin, will rise again, and that in eternal life we shall have and retain precisely this soul, but without sin.

Now, if there were no difference whatever between our corrupt body and soul and original sin, it would follow, contrary to this article of the Christian faith, either that this nicht dies Wesen unsers Leibes und Seele, sondern eine andere Substanz (oder eine andere Seele) haben würden, weil wir da werden ohne Sünde sein; oder daß auch die Sünde auferstehen und im ewigen Leben in den Auserwählten sein und bleiben würde.

Hieraus ist klar, daß diese Lehre (mit allem, so ihr anhängt und daraus folgt), müsse verworfen werden, da vorgegeben und gelehrt wird, daß die Erbsünde des verderbten Menschen Natur, Substanz, Wesen, Leib oder Seele selbst sei, also daß ganz und gar kein Unterschied zwischen unserer verderbten Natur, Substanz und Wesen und zwischen der Erbsünde sein solle. Denn die vornehmsten Artikel unsers christlichen Glaubens zeugen stark und gewaltig, warum ein Unterschied zwischen der Natur oder Substanz des Menschen, so durch die Sünde verderbt, und zwischen der Sünde, damit und dadurch der Mensch verderbt ist, soll und muß gehalten werden. Und dieß sei genug zur einfältigen Erklärung der Lehre und Gegenlehre (in thesi et antithesi) von diesem Streit, soviel die Hauptsache an ihr selbst belangt, an diesem Ort, da nicht ausführlich disputiert [wird], sondern artikelweise nur die vornehmsten Hauptstücke gehandelt werden.

Was aber die Wörter und Weise zu reden anlangt, ist das Beste und Sicherste, daß man das Vorbild der gefundenen Worte, wie in der Heiligen Schrift und in den obgemeldeten Büchern von diesem Artikel geredet wird, [ge]brauche und behalte.

Es sollen auch aequivocationes vocabulorum, das ist, die Wörter und Reden, so in mancherlei Verstand gezogen und gebraucht werden, Wortgezanke zu verhüten, fleißig und unterschiedlich erklärt werden. Als, wenn man sagt: Gott schafft die Natur der Menschen, da wird durch das Wort „Natur“ verstanden das Wesen, Leib und Seele der Menschen. Oft aber nennt man die Art oder Unart eines Dinges seine Natur, als wenn man sagt: Der Schlange Natur ist, daß sie ficht und vergiftet. Also spricht Lutherus, daß Sünde und sündigen des verderbten Menschen Art und Natur sei.

Also heißt Erbsünde eigentlich die tiefe Verderbung unserer Natur, wie sie in [den] Schmalcaldischen Artikeln beschrieben wird. Zuzeiten aber wird das Koncretum oder Subjektum, das ist, der Mensch selber mit Leib und Seele, darin die Sünde ist und steht, mitbegriffen, darum daß der Mensch durch die Sünde verderbt, vergiftet und sündig ist, als wenn Lutherus spricht: „Deine Geburt, deine Natur und dein ganzes Wesen ist Sünde“, das ist, sündig und unrein.

Natursünde, Personensünde, wesentliche Sünde erklärt Lutherus selber, daß er es also meine, daß nicht allein die Worte, Gedanken und Werke Sünde sei [seien], sondern daß die ganze Natur, Person und Wesen des Menschen durch die Erbet nos in altero illo saeculo non has corporis et animae nostrae substantias, sed aliam substantiam sive aliam animam habituros, cum constet, nos tum ab omni peccato fore mundos; aut, quod etiam peccatum in novissimo die resurrecturum et in vita illa aeterna in electis futurum et mansurum sit.

48) Ex his omnibus luce meridiana clarius est, hanc Manichaeorum doctrinam et omnes opiniones, quae ex ea dependent et consequuntur, reiici oportere, cum videlicet asseritur, quod peccatum originale sit hominis [R. 650] corrupti natura, substantia, essentia, corpus et anima ipsa, adeo ut nullum prorsus sit discrimen inter corruptam nostram naturam, substantiam et essentiam et inter peccatum originis. Praecipui enim articuli fidei nostrae Christianae magnas gravissimasque causas afferunt, quare differentia inter naturam seu substantiam hominis (per peccatum corrupti) et inter ipsum peccatum (quo homo corruptus 49) est) constituenda et retinenda sit. Et haec sufficere existimamus ad simplicem declarationem doctrinae sinceræ et falsæ contrariæ (in thesi et antithesi) de hac controversia, quantum ad principalem ipsius statum attinet, hoc quidem loco, ubi non copiose et argute disputatur, sed certis quibusdam articulis tantum praecipua capita tractanda sunt.

50) Quod vero ad vocabula et phrases attinet, utilissimum est et tutissimum, ut forma sanorum verborum, quibus in hoc articulo explicando sacrae litterae et supra commemorata scripta publica et recepta utuntur, usurpetur et retineatur.

51) Sed et aequivocationes vocabulorum, ad cavendas λογωματίας, diligenter et diserte sunt explicandae. Verbi gratia, cum dicitur: Deus creat hominum naturam, per vocabulum naturae intelligitur ipsa substantia, corpus et anima hominis. Saepe autem proprietas aut conditio alicuius rei (tam in bonam quam in malam partem) vocatur eius rei natura, ut cum dicitur: Serpentis natura est icere et veneno inficere (ibi exprimitur non serpentis substantia, sed malitia). In hac sententia D. Lutherus utitur vocabulo naturae, cum dicit peccatum et peccare esse corrupti hominis naturam.

52) Sic igitur peccatum originale proprie significat profundissimam illam naturae nostrae corruptionem, quemadmodum ea [R. 651] in Articulis Smalcaldisce describitur. Interdum etiam concretum seu subiectum, hoc est, hominem ipsum cum corpore et anima, in quo peccatum est et infixum haeret, simul complectimur, idque eam ob causam, quod totus homo peccato corruptus, veneno infectus et foedissima lue originalis peccati contaminatus sit. In hanc sententiam loquitur D. Lutherus, cum inquit: Tua nativitas, tua natura, tota tua substantia est peccatum, hoc est, peccatrix seu peccato polluta et impurissima.

53) Et cum Lutherus utitur hisce vocabulis: peccatum naturae, peccatum personae, peccatum substantiale aut essentialia, satis ipse mentem suam declarat, quod hoc velit, non tantum hominis sermones, cogitationes et our flesh will not rise again at the last day, and that in eternal life we shall not have the present essence of our body and soul, but another substance (or another soul), because then we shall be without sin; or that [at the last day] sin also will rise again, and will be and remain in the elect in eternal life.

Hence it is clear that this doctrine [of the Manicheans] (with all that depends upon it and follows from it) must be rejected, when it is asserted and taught that original sin is the nature, substance, essence, body, or soul itself of corrupt man, so that between our corrupt nature, substance, and essence and original sin there is no distinction whatever. For the chief articles of our Christian faith forcibly and emphatically testify why a distinction should and must be maintained between man's nature or substance, which is corrupted by sin, and the sin, with which and by which man is corrupted. For a simple statement of the doctrine and the contrary teaching (in thesi et antithesi) in this controversy, as regards the principal matter itself, is sufficient in this place, where the subject is not argued at length, but only the principal points are treated, article by article.

But as regards terms and expressions, it is best and safest to use and retain the form of sound words employed concerning this article in the Holy Scriptures and the above-mentioned books.

Also, to avoid strife about words, aequivocationes vocabulorum, that is, words and expressions which are applied and used in various meanings, should be carefully and distinctly explained; as when it is said: God creates the nature of men, there by the term nature the essence, body, and soul of men are understood. But often the disposition or vicious quality of a thing is called its nature, as when it is said: It is the nature of the serpent to bite and poison. Thus Luther says that sin and sinning are the disposition and nature of corrupt man.

Therefore original sin properly signifies the deep corruption of our nature, as it is described in the Smalcald Articles. But sometimes the concrete person or the subject, that is, man himself with body and soul, in which sin is and inheres, is also comprised under this term, for the reason that man is corrupted by sin, poisoned and sinful, as when Luther says: "Thy birth, thy nature, and thy entire essence is sin," that is, sinful and unclean.

Luther himself explains that by nature-sin, person-sin, essential sin he means that not only the words, thoughts, and works are sin, sünde zu Grund [bis auf den Grund] gänzlich verderbt sei.

Was aber die lateinischen Worte substantia und accidens anlangt, soll der Einfältigen Kirche [soll die Kirche, die eben zum großen Teil aus einfältigen, schlichten, ungelehrten Leuten besteht], weil solche Worte dem gemeinen Manne unbekannt, mit denselben in öffentlichen Predigten billig verschont werden. Wenn aber die Gelehrten unter sich oder bei andern, welchen solche Worte nicht unbekannt, sich derselben in diesem Handel gebrauchen, inmaßen [wie] Eusebius, Ambrosius und sonderlich Augustinus, wie auch andere vornehme Kirchenlehrer mehr, aus Not, diese Lehre wider die Ketzer zu erklären, getan, so nehmen sie vor eine immediatam divisionem, das ist, [sie nehmen] vor eine solche Teilung, dazwischen kein Mittel ist [eine Teilung nach dem contradiutorischen Gegensatz, die kein tertium interveniens, kein zwischen die Gegensätze sich einschiebbendes Drittes, zuläßt], daß alles, was da ist, müsse entweder substantia, das ist, ein selbständig Wesen, oder accidens, das ist, ein zufälliges Ding, sein, daß nicht für sich selbst wesentlich besteht, sondern in einem andern selbständigen Wesen ist und davon kann unterschieden werden; welche Teilung auch Cyrillus und Basilus gebrauchen.

Und diem Weil unter andern dieses auch ein ungeweißelter, un widersprechlicher Grundsatz in der Theologia ist, daß eine jede substantia oder selbständiges Wesen, sofern es eine Substanz ist, entweder Gott selber oder ein Werk und Geschöpf Gottes sei, so hat Augustinus in vielen Schriften wider die Manichäer mit allen wahrhaftigen Lehrern wohlbedacht und mit Ernst die Rede: Peccatum originis est substantia vel natura, das ist: Die Erbsünde ist des Menschen Natur oder Wesen, verdammt und verworfen; nach welchem [dem Augustin folgend haben nach ihm] auch alle Gelehrten und Verständigen allezeit gehalten, daß dasjenige, so nicht für sich selbst besteht, noch ein Teil ist eines andern selbständigen Wesens, sondern in einem andern Ding wandelbarlich ist, nicht eine substantia, das ist, etwas Selbständiges, sondern ein accidens, das ist, etwas Zufälliges, sei. Also pflegt Augustinus beständig auf diese Weise zu reden: die Erbsünde sei nicht die Natur selbst, sondern ein accidens vitium in natura, das ist, ein zufälliger Mangel und Schaden in der Natur. Wie man denn auf solche Weise auch in unsern Schulen und Kirchen nach der Dialectica vor diesem Punkt frei und unverdächtig geredet hat und deswegen weder von D. Luther noch einigem rechtschaffenen Lehrer unserer reinen evangelischen Kirchen jemals gestraft worden [ist].

Weil denn die unwidersprechliche Wahrheit ist, daß alles, was da ist, entweder eine Substanz oder ein accidens, das ist, entweder ein selbständiges Wesen oder etwas Zufälliges in demselben ist, inmaßen kurz hervor [kurz zuvor] mit Zeugnissen der Kirchenlehrer angezeigt und erwiesen [ist], und kein Rechtsverständiger [kein wahrhaft Verständiger] jemals daran geweißelt [hat], so bringet die Not, und kann hier keiner vorüber, wenn jemand fragen wollte, ob die Erbsünde eine Substanz, das ist, ein solches Ding, das für sich selbst besteht und nicht in einem andern ist, oder ein accidens, das ist, ein solch Ding sei, das nicht für sich opera esse peccata, sed totam hominis naturam, personam et substantiam hominis per originale peccatum prorsus et omnino esse depravata et totaliter corrupta.

54) Quod vero ad Latina vocabula substantiae et accidentis attinet, in publicis concionibus coram simplice plebe (quae horum vocabulorum significationem et vim non tenet) ab iis abstinendum censemus, ut ea in re pia et sanctae simplicitatis ecclesiae ratio habeatur. Cum autem viri docti, vel inter se vel cum aliis (quibus haec vocabula non sunt ignota) disserentes, iis in hoc negotio utuntur, tum immediatam hanc divisionem ponunt: quod omne, quidquid est, aut substantia sit aut accidens, quod non per se subsistit, sed in aliqua substantia est et ab ea discerni potest. Et sequuntur ea in re viri eruditi exemplum Eusebii, Ambrosii, imprimis Augustini, Cyrilli, Basilii aliorumque praecipuorum ecclesiae doctorum, qui cogente necessitate in explicatione articuli de peccato originis hisce vocabulis in genuina sua sententia contra haereticos sunt usi.

55) Et cum sit indubitatum certissimumque axioma in re theologica, quod omnis [R. 652] substantia (quatenus est substantia) aut sit Deus ipse aut opus et creatura Dei, Augustinus in multis suis scriptis contra Manichaeos (quemadmodum et reliqui sinceri ecclesiae doctores) rem diligentissime expendit et propositionem hanc: Peccatum originis est substantia vel natura, magno zelo reiecit atque damnavit. Et post eum etiam omnes eruditi et intelligentes semper senserunt, quidquid non per se subsistit, nec est pars alterius per se subsistens essentiae, sed in alio est mutabiliter, id substantiam non esse, id est, quiddam per se subsistens, sed accidens, quod aliunde accidit. Et Augustinus constanter in hanc sententiam loqui solet: Peccatum originis non est ipsa natura, sed accidens vitium in natura. Et hoc ipso modo etiam nostro saeculo in scholis et ecclesiis nostris (iuxta regulas dialecticae) ante motam hanc controversiam libere et sine ulla haereseos suspicionem locuti sunt viri docti, neque eam ob causam vel a D. Luthero vel ab ullo alio sincero doctore evangelicarum ecclesiarum unquam sunt reprehensi.

57) Cum igitur haec sit immota veritas, quod, quidquid est, id aut substantia sit aut accidens, hoc est, vel per se subsistens quiddam vel quod aliunde accidit et in substantia haeret, quemadmodum paulo ante testimonio ecclesiasticorum scriptorum docuimus et demonstravimus, neque ea de re quisquam, qui est sanae mentis, dubitaverit, profecto necessario fatendum est, neque effugio ulli locus est, si quis quaerat, an peccatum sit substantia, id est, res quaedam per se subsistens et non in alio, an vero accidens, hoc est, res non per se subsistens, sed in alio inhaerens, but that the entire nature, person, and essence of man are altogether corrupted from the root by original sin.

However, as to the Latin words substantia and accidens, a church of plain people ought to be spared these terms in public sermons, because they are unknown to ordinary men. But when learned men among themselves, or with others to whom these words are not unknown, employ such terms in treating this subject, as Eusebius, Ambrose, and especially Augustine, and also still other eminent church-teachers have done, because they were necessary to explain this doctrine in opposition to the heretics, they assume immediatam divisionem, that is, a division between which there is no mean, so that everything that is must be either substantia, that is, a self-existent essence, or accidens, that is, an accidental matter which does not exist by itself essentially, but is in another self-existent essence and can be distinguished from it; which division Cyril and Basil also use.

And since, among others, this, too, is an indubitable, indisputable axiom in theology, that every substantia or self-existing essence, so far as it is a substance, is either God Himself or a work and creation of God, Augustine, in many writings against the Manicheans, in common with all true teachers, has, after due consideration and with earnestness, condemned and rejected the statement: Peccatum originis est substantia vel natura, that is, original sin is man's nature or substance. After him all the learned and intelligent also have always maintained that whatever does not exist by itself, nor is a part of another self-existing essence, but exists, subject to change, in another thing, is not a substantia, that is, something self-existing, but an accidens, that is, something accidental. Accordingly, Augustine is accustomed constantly to speak in this way: Original sin is not the nature itself, but an accidens vitium in natura, that is, an accidental defect and damage in the nature. In this way, previous to this controversy, [learned] men spoke, also in our schools and churches, according to the rules of logic, freely and without being suspected [of heresy], and were never censured on this account either by Dr. Luther or any orthodox teacher of our pure, evangelical churches.

Now, then, since it is the indisputable truth that everything that is, is either a substance or an accidens, that is, either a self-existing essence or something accidental in it, as has just been shown and proved by testimonies of the church-teachers, and no truly intelligent man has ever had any doubts concerning this, necessity here constrains, and no one can evade it, if the question be asked whether original sin is a substance, that is, such a thing as exists by itself, and is not in another, or whether it is an accidens, that is, such a thing as does not exist by itself, but is in another, and cannot exist or be by itself, selbst besteht, sondern in einem andern ist und für sich selbst nicht bestehen noch sein kann: so muß er sein rund heraus bekennen, daß die Erbsünde keine Substanz, sondern ein Accidens sei.

Darum auch der Kirche Gottes zum beständigen Frieden in dieser Zwiespaltung [in diesem Zwiespalt] nimmermehr geholfen, sondern die Uneinigkeit vielmehr gestärkt und erhalten [wird], wenn die Kirchendiener im Zweifel steden bleiben, ob die Erbsünde eine Substanz oder Accidens sei und also recht und eigentlich genennet [genannt] werde.

Demnach, soll den Kirchen und Schulen dieses ärgerlichen und hochschädlichen Streits zu Grund [gründlich] abgeholfen werden, [so] ist vonnöten, daß männiglich deshalb eigentlich berichtet werde [daß jedermann hierüber genau belehrt werde].

Wenn aber weiter gefragt wird, was denn die Erbsünde für ein Accidens sei, daß ist eine andere Frage, darauf kein Philosophus, kein Papist, kein Sophist, ja keine menschliche Vernunft, wie scharf auch dieselbe immermehr sein mag, die rechte Erklärung geben kann, sondern aller Verstand und Erklärung muß allein aus Heiliger Schrift genommen werden, welche bezeugt, daß die Erbsünde sei ein unaussprechlicher Schaden und eine solche Verderbung menschlicher Natur, daß an derselben und allen ihren innerlichen und äußerlichen Kräften nichts Reines noch Gutes geblieben, sondern alles zumal verderbet [alles durch und durch verderbt sei], daß der Mensch durch die Erbsünde wahrhaftig vor Gott geistlich tot und zum Guten mit allen seinen Kräften erstorben sei.

Dergestalt denn [auf solche Weise wird] durch das Wort accidens die Erbsünde nicht verkleinert, wenn es nach Gottes Wort also erklärt wird, inmaßen D. Luther in seiner lateinischen Auslegung über das dritte Kapitel des ersten Buchs Rom wider die Verkleinerung der Erbsünde mit großem Ernst geschrieben hat; sondern solch Wort dient allein dazu, den Unterschied zwischen dem Werk Gottes (welches ist unsere Natur, unangesehen, daß sie verderbt ist) und zwischen des Teufels Werk (welches ist die Sünde, die im Werk Gottes steht und desselben allertiefste und unaussprechliche Verderbung ist) anzuzeigen.

Also hat auch Lutherus in diesem Handel das Wort [* accidens wie auch das Wort] qualitas gebraucht und nicht verworfen, daneben aber auch mit besonderem Ernst und großem Eifer auf das allerfleißigste erklärt und männiglich [jedermann] eingebildet, was es für eine greuliche Qualität und accidens sei, dadurch die menschliche Natur nicht schlecht verunreinigt, sondern so tief verderbt ist, daß nichts Reines noch unverderbt in derselben geblieben; wie seine Worte über den 90. Psalm lauten: Sive igitur peccatum originis qualitatem sive morbum vocaverimus, profecto extremum malum est non solum pati aeternam iram et mortem, sed ne agnoscere quidem, quae pateris. Das ist: Wir nennen die Erbsünde eine Qualität oder Seuche, so ist sie fürwahr der äußerste Schaden, daß wir nicht allein den ewigen Zorn Gottes und den ewigen Tod leiden sollen, sondern auch nicht verstehen, was wir leiden. Und abermals über das erste Buch Mose, Kap. 3: Qui isto veneno peccati originis a planta pedis usque ad verticem infecti sumus, siquidem in natura adhuc integra accidere. Das ist: Wir sind durch das Gift der Erbsünde von der Fußsohle an bis auf die Scheitel [den Scheitel] vergiftet, diem Weil solches noch in der vollkommenen Natur uns zugefallen.

quod simpliciter, categorice et rotunde respondendum ac fatendum sit, peccatum non esse substantiam, sed accidens.

58] Quare ecclesiae Dei (ad constituendam firmam pacem quoad hanc controversiam) non consulitur, sed dissidia magis foveantur [R. 653 et confirmantur, si ecclesiae ministri in dubio relinquuntur, an peccatum originale substantia sit an vero accidens, et an illud recte et proprie substantia vel accidens nominetur.

59] Quapropter si controversiam hanc (plenam certe offensionis et detrimenti) solide componere velimus, necessarium est, ut unusquisque de hoc negotio recte erudiat.

60] Quando autem praeterea quaeritur, qualenam accidens sit peccatum originis, haec iam alia est quaestio. Huius quaestionis declarationem veram nullus philosophus, nullus papista, nullus sophista, imo nulla humana ratio (quae etiam acutissimi sit iudicii) proferre potest, sed eius explicatio et sola Sacra Scriptura est petenda. Ea vero testatur, quod peccatum originale sit ineffabile malum et tanta humanae naturae corruptio, quae in natura omnibusque eius viribus tam internis quam externis nihil sinceri, nihil boni reliquerit, sed omnia penitus depravarit, ita quidem certe, ut homo, ratione peccati originalis, coram Deo vere et spiritualiter ad bonum cum omnibus viribus suis plane sit emortuus.

61] Hac facta explicatione, per vocabulum accidentis peccatum originis haudquaquam extenuatur, cum videlicet illud iuxta Verbi Dei analogiam ita declaratur, quemadmodum D. Lutherus in Latino suo commentario in caput tertium Geneseos contra extenuationem peccati originalis magno zelo disseruit. Vocabulum autem accidentis in hunc tantum finem usurpatur, ut discrimen inter opus Dei (quod est nostra natura, etiam corrupta) et inter diaboli opus (quod est peccatum in opere Dei inhaerens, eius videlicet operis intima et ineffabilis corruptio) monstretur.

62] Et sane D. Lutherus ipse in hoc negotio usus est vocabulo accidentis, quemadmodum etiam qualitatis, neque eas voces [R. 654] reiecit. Interim tamen singulari diligentia et magno zelo declaravit et inculcavit, quam horribilis sit qualitas et accidens, per quod humana natura non tantum contaminata aut impura facta, verum etiam adeo in universum corrupta est, ut nihil sinceri, nihil sani prorsus in ea sit relictum. Sic enim verba eius in explicatione Psalmi nonagesimi habent: Sive igitur peccatum originis qualitatem sive morbum vocaverimus, profecto extremum malum est non solum pati aeternam iram et mortem, sed ne agnoscere quidem, quae pateris. Et in commentario super tertium caput Geneseos inquit: Qui isto veneno peccati originis a planta pedis usque ad verticem infecti sumus, siquidem in natura adhuc integra accidere etc.

Et in commentario super tertium caput Geneseos inquit: Qui isto veneno peccati originis a planta pedis usque ad verticem infecti sumus, siquidem in natura adhuc integra accidere. Das ist: Wir sind durch das Gift der Erbsünde von der Fußsohle an bis auf die Scheitel [den Scheitel] vergiftet, diem Weil solches noch in der vollkommenen Natur uns zugefallen.

he must confess straight and pat that original sin is no substance, but an accidens.

For this reason, too, the Church of God will never be helped to permanent peace in this controversy, but the dissension will rather be strengthened and kept up, if the ministers of the Church remain in doubt as to whether original sin is a substance or an accidens, and whether it is rightly and properly named thus.

Hence, if the churches and schools are to be thoroughly relieved of this scandalous and very mischievous controversy, it is necessary that each and every one be properly instructed concerning this matter.

But if it be further asked what kind of an accidens original sin is, that is another question, of which no philosopher, no papist, no sophist, yea, no human reason, however acute it may be, can give the right explanation, but all understanding and every explanation of it must be derived solely from the Holy Scriptures, which testify that original sin is an unspeakable evil and such an entire corruption of human nature that in it and all its internal and external powers nothing pure or good remains, but everything is entirely corrupt, so that on account of original sin man is in God's sight truly spiritually dead, with all his powers dead to that which is good.

In this way, then, original sin is not extenuated by the word accidens, [namely] when it is explained according to [the analogy of] God's Word, after the manner in which Dr. Luther, in his Latin exposition of the third chapter of Genesis, has written with great earnestness against the extenuation of original sin; but this word serves only to indicate the distinction between the work of God (which our nature is, notwithstanding that it is corrupt) and the work of the devil (which the sin is that inheres in God's work, and is the most profound and indescribable corruption of it).

Therefore Luther also in his treatment of this subject has employed the term accidens, as also the term qualitas [quality], and has not rejected them; but at the same time he has, with special earnestness and great zeal, taken the greatest pains to explain and to inculcate upon each and every one what a horrible quality and accidens it is, by which human nature is not merely polluted, but so deeply corrupted that nothing pure or incorrupt has remained in it, as his words on Ps. 90 run: Sive igitur peccatum originis QUALITATEM sive MORBUM vocaverimus, profecto extremum malum est non solum pati aeternam iram et mortem, sed ne agnoscere quidem, quae pateris. That is: Whether we call original sin a quality or a disease, it is indeed the utmost evil, that we are not only to suffer the eternal wrath of God and eternal death, but that we do not even understand what we suffer. And again, on Gen. 3: Qui isto veneno peccati originis a planta pedis usque ad verticem infecti sumus, siquidem in natura adhuc integra accidere. That is: We are infected with the poison of original sin from the sole of the foot to the crown of the head, inasmuch as this happened to us in a nature still perfect.

II.

Vom freien Willen oder menschlichen Kräften.

Nachdem ein Zwiespalt nicht allein zwischen den Papisten und den Unsern, sondern auch unter etlichen Theologen der Augsburgerischen Confession selbst von dem freien Willen eingefallen [entstanden], wollen wir zuvörderst, worüber der Streit gewesen, eigentlich [deutlich] anzeigen.

Denn weil der Mensch mit seinem freien Willen in vier unterschiedlichen, ungleichen Ständen gefunden und betrachtet werden kann, ist jeztund die Frage nicht, wie es um denselben vor dem Fall geschaffen [beschaffen war], oder was er nach dem Fall vor seiner Belehrung in äußerlichen Sachen, dies zeitliche Leben belangend, vermöge; wie auch nicht, was er in geistlichen Sachen, nachdem er durch den Geist Gottes wiedergeboren und von demselben regiert wird, oder wenn er von den Toten erweckt, für einen freien Willen haben werde; sondern die Hauptfrage ist einig und allein, was des unwiedergeborenen Menschen Verstand und Wille in seiner Belehrung und Wiedergeburt aus eigenen und nach dem Fall übergebliebenen Kräften vermöge: wenn das Wort Gottes gepredigt, und uns die Gnade Gottes angeboten wird, ob er sich zu solcher Gnade bereiten, dieselbe annehmen und das Jawort dazu sagen könnte. Dies ist die Frage, darüber nun etliche viel Jahre in den Kirchen Augsburgerischer Confession unter etlichen Theologen gestritten worden.

Denn der eine Teil hat gehalten und gelehrt: obwohl der Mensch aus eigenen Kräften nicht vermöge, Gottes Gebote zu erfüllen, Gott wahrhaftig trauen, fürchten und lieben ohne die Gnade des Heiligen Geistes, doch habe er noch so viel natürlicher Kräfte vor der Wiedergeburt übrig, daß er etlichermaßen sich zur Gnade bereiten und das Jawort, doch schwächlich, geben, aber, wenn die Gnade des Heiligen Geistes nicht zukomme, damit nichts ausgerichtet könnte, sondern im Kampf daniederliegen müßte.

So haben auch die alten und neuen Enthusiasten gelehrt, daß Gott die Menschen ohne alle Mittel und Instrument der Creatur, das ist, ohne die äußerliche Predigt und Gehör Gottes Wortes, durch seinen Geist belehre und zu der seligmachenden Erkenntnis Christi ziehe.

Wider diese beiden Teile haben die reinen Lehrer Augsburgerischer Confession gelehrt und gestritten, daß der Mensch durch den Fall unserer ersten Eltern also verderbt, daß er in göttlichen Sachen, unsere Belehrung und Seelen Seligkeit belangend, von Natur blind [sei], wenn Gottes Wort gepredigt wird, dasselbe nicht verstehen noch verstehen könnte, sondern für eine Torheit halte, auch aus ihm [aus sich] selbst sich nicht zu Gott nähere, sondern ein Feind Gottes sei und bleibe, bis er mit der Kraft des Heiligen Geistes durch das gepredigte und gehörte Wort aus lauter Gnade ohne alles sein Zutun belehrt, gläubig, wiedergeboren und erneuert werde.

II.

DE LIBERO ARBITRIO SIVE DE VIRIBUS HUMANIS.

1) Cum de libero arbitrio seu viribus humanis non modo inter nos et pontificios hactenus controversum fuerit, verum etiam ea de re quidam Augustanae Confessionis theologi disceptarint, primum omnium, quinam controversiae huius inter Augustanae Confessionis theologos status fuerit, perspicue doceamus.

2) Quandoquidem homo, ratione liberi sui arbitrii, in quatuor, et quidem valde diversis, statibus considerari potest, iam non quaeritur, quale fuerit ipsius arbitrium ante lapsum; aut quale id sit post lapsum ante hominis conversionem in rebus externis, quae ad [R. 655] hanc vitam spectant; neque quaeritur, quale sit illud arbitrium, aut quantae ipsius vires, etiam in rebus spiritualibus, postquam per Spiritum Dei regeneratus est et a Dei Spiritu iam regitur; aut quale liberum arbitrium sit habiturus, quando a mortuis resurget. Sed hic est verus et unicus controversiae status: quid hominis nondum renati intellectus et voluntas in ipsa conversione et regeneratione ex propriis suis et post lapsum reliquis viribus praestare possit, quando videlicet Verbum Dei praedicatur, et Dei gratia nobis offertur. Hic quaeritur, an homo ad hanc Dei gratiam apprehendendam sese applicare, eam amplecti et Verbo Dei assentiri possit. Haec disputatio iam aliquot et quidem multos annos in ecclesiis Augustanae Confessionis inter theologos nonnullos fuit agitata.

3) Una pars sensit atque docuit: quamvis homo propriis suis viribus legem Dei implere, Deo vere considerare, ipsum timere et diligere, sine gratia Spiritus Sancti non possit, tamen tantum adhuc ipsi virium naturalium, ante regenerationem, reliquum esse, ut aliquo modo se ad gratiam Dei praeparare, applicare et assentiri, languide tamen, possit, sed nisi accedat gratia Spiritus Sancti, nihil illum qualemcumque assensum praestare posse, sed in lucta succumbere.

4) Ex altera autem parte entusiastae tum veteres tum recentiores docuerunt, quod Deus hominem sine ullo medio aut instrumento creaturarum, hoc est, sine externa praedicatione et absque auditione Verbi Dei, per Spiritum suum convertat et ad salutarem Christi agnitionem pertrahat.

5) Contra utriusque partis corruptelas sinceri Augustanae Confessionis doctores asseruerunt, hominem ex lapsu primorum nostrorum parentum ita penitus corruptum [R. 656] esse, ut in rebus spiritualibus, quae ad conversionem et salutem nostram spectant, natura caecus sit et Verbum Dei praedicatum neque intelligat neque intelligere possit, sed illud ut rem stultam iudicet et nunquam a se ipso ad Deum appropinquet, sed potius inimicus Dei sit et maneat, donec virtute Spiritus Sancti per Verbum praedicatum et auditum ex mera gratia sine omni sua propria cooperatione convertatur, fide donetur, regeneretur et renovetur. 1 Cor. 2.

II.

OF FREE WILL, OR HUMAN POWERS.

Since a division has occurred not only between the Papists and us, but also among some theologians of the Augsburg Confession themselves, concerning free will, we shall, first of all, show exactly the points in controversy.

For since man with [respect to] his free will is found and can be considered in four distinct, dissimilar states, the question at present is not what was the condition of the same before the Fall, or what he is able to do since the Fall and before his conversion in external things which pertain to this temporal life; also not what sort of a free will he will have in spiritual things after he has been regenerated and is controlled by God's Spirit, or when he rises from the dead. But the principal question is only and alone, what the intellect and will of the unregenerate man is able to do in his conversion and regeneration from his own powers remaining after the Fall; whether he is able, when the Word of God is preached, and the grace of God is offered us, to prepare himself for grace, accept the same, and assent thereto. This is the question upon which, for quite a number of years now, there has been a controversy among some theologians in the churches of the Augsburg Confession.

For the one side has held and taught that, although man cannot from his own powers fulfil God's command, or truly trust in God, fear and love Him, without the grace of the Holy Ghost, nevertheless he still has so much of natural powers left before regeneration as to be able to prepare himself to a certain extent for grace, and to assent, although feebly; however, that he cannot accomplish anything by them, but must succumb in the struggle, if the grace of the Holy Ghost is not added thereto.

Moreover [On the other side], both the ancient and modern enthusiasts have taught that God converts men, and leads them to the saving knowledge of Christ through His Spirit, without any created means and instrument, that is, without the external preaching and hearing of God's Word.

Against both these parties the pure teachers of the Augsburg Confession have taught and contended that by the fall of our first parents man was so corrupted that in divine things pertaining to our conversion and the salvation of our souls he is by nature blind, that, when the Word of God is preached, he neither does nor can understand it, but regards it as foolishness; also, that he does not of himself draw nigh to God, but is and remains an enemy of God, until he is converted, becomes a believer [is endowed with faith], is regenerated and renewed, by the power of the Holy Ghost through the Word when preached and heard, out of pure grace, without any co-operation of his own.

Diesen Zwiespalt nach Anleitung Gottes Wortes christlich zu erklären und durch seine Gnade hinzulegen [beizulegen], ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis, wie nachfolgt:

Daß nämlich in geistlichen und göttlichen Sachen des unviedergeborenen Menschen Verstand, Herz und Wille aus eigenen natürlichen Kräften ganz und gar nichts verstehen, glauben, annehmen, bedenken, wollen, anfangen, verrichten, tun, wirken oder mitwirken könne, sondern sei ganz und gar zum Guten erstorben und verdorben, also daß in des Menschen Natur nach dem Fall vor der Wiedergeburt nicht ein Fünkeln der geistlichen Kräfte übriggeblieben noch vorhanden, mit welchem er aus ihm [aus sich] selber sich zur Gnade Gottes bereiten oder die angebotene Gnade annehmen, noch derselben für und von sich selbst fähig sein oder sich dazu applizieren oder schiden könne oder aus seinen eigenen Kräften etwas zu seiner Belehrung, weder zum ganzen noch zum halben oder zu einigem dem wenigsten oder geringsten Theil, helfen, tun, wirken oder mit[zu]wirken vermöge von ihm [aus sich] selbst als von ihm selbst, sondern sei der Sünde Knecht, Joh. 8, und des Teufels Gefangener, davon [von dem] er getrieben wird, Eph. 2; 2 Tim. 2. Daher der natürliche freie Wille seiner verkehrten Art und Natur nach allein zu demjenigen, das Gott mißfällig und zuwider ist, kräftig und tätig ist.

Diese Erklärung und Hauptantwort auf die im Eingang dieses Artikels gestellte Hauptfrage und statum controversiae bestätigen und bekräftigen folgende Gründe des göttlichen Wortes, welche, ob sie wohl der höfartigen Vernunft und Philosophie zuwider sind, so wissen wir doch, daß dieser verkehrten Welt Weisheit nur Torheit vor Gott ist, und daß von den Artikeln des Glaubens allein aus Gottes Wort soll geurtheilt werden.

Denn erstlich des Menschen Vernunft oder natürlicher Verstand, ob er gleich noch wohl ein dunkel Fünkeln des [der] Erkenntnis, daß ein Gott sei, wie auch, Röm. 1, von der Lehre des Gesetzes hat, dennoch also unwissend, blind und verkehrt ist, daß, wenn schon die allerfeinreichsten und gelehrtesten Leute auf Erden das Evangelium vom Sohn Gottes und Verheißung der ewigen Seligkeit lesen oder hören, dennoch dasselbe aus eigenen Kräften nicht vernehmen, fassen, verstehen noch glauben und für Wahrheit halten können, sondern je größeren Fleiß und Ernst sie anwenden und diese geistlichen Sachen mit ihrer Vernunft begreifen wollen, je weniger sie verstehen oder glauben und solches alles allein für Torheit oder Fabeln halten, ehe sie durch den Heiligen Geist erleuchtet und gelehrt werden. 1 Kor. 2: „Der natürliche Mensch vernimmt nichts vom Geiste Gottes; denn es ist ihm eine Torheit, und kann es nicht begreifen, denn es wird geistlich ergründet.“ 1 Kor. 1: „Dieweil die Welt durch ihre Weisheit Gott in seiner Weisheit nicht erkannte, hat es Gott also gefallen, durch die Predigt des Evangelii, welches die Welt für Torheit hält, die Gläubigen selig zu machen.“ Eph. 4: „Die andern Menschen“ (die nicht durch Gottes Geist wiedergeboren sind) „wandeln in der Eitelkeit ihres Sinnes, welcher Verstand verfinstert ist und sind fremde von dem Leben, das aus Gott ist, durch die Unwissenheit, die in ihnen ist, durch die Blindheit ihres Herzens.“ Matth. 13: „Mit sehenden

6] Ut autem haec controversia iuxta Verbi Dei analogiam pie declaratur et per ipsius gratiam decidatur, doctrina, fides et confessio nostra haec est, ut sequitur:

7] Credimus, quod hominis non renati intellectus, cor et voluntas in rebus spiritualibus et divinis ex propriis naturalibus viribus prorsus nihil intelligere, credere, amplecti, cogitare, velle, inchoare, perficere, agere, operari aut cooperari possint, sed homo ad bonum prorsus corruptus et mortuus sit, ita ut in hominis natura post lapsum ante regenerationem ne scintillula quidem spiritualium virium reliqua manserit aut restet, quibus ille ex se ad gratiam Dei praeparare se, aut oblatam gratiam apprehendere, aut eius gratiae (ex sese et per se) capax esse possit, aut se ad gratiam applicare, aut accommodare, aut viribus suis propriis aliquid ad conversionem suam vel ex toto vel ex dimidia vel minima parte conferre, agere, operari aut cooperari (ex se ipso, tamquam ex semet ipso) possit, sed homo sit peccati servus et mancipium Satanae, a quo agitur. Ioh. 8, 34; Eph. 2, 2; 2 Tim. 2, 26. Inde adeo naturale liberum arbitrium, ratione corruptarum virium et naturae suae depravatae, dumtaxat ad ea, quae Deo displicent et adversantur, activum et efficacius est.

8] Hanc piam declarationem et generalem (ad statum causae, in exordio huius tractationis propositum) responsionem e Verbo Dei desumpta argumenta, quae recitabimus, (R. 657) confirmant. Licet autem ea supercilio humanae rationis et philosophiae displiceant, tamen novimus mundi huius perversissimi sapientiam coram Deo esse stultitiam, et quod de capitibus religionis nostrae tantummodo ex Verbo Dei sit iudicandum.

9] I. Primo, etsi humana ratio seu naturalis intellectus hominis obscuram aliquam notitiae illius scintillulam reliquam habet, quod ait Deus, et particulam aliquam legis tenet, Rom. 1, 19 sqq., tamen adeo ignorans, caeca et perversa est ratio illa, ut, etiamsi ingeniosissimi et doctissimi homines in hoc mundo evangelium de Filio Dei et promissiones divinas de aeterna salute legant vel audiant, tamen ea propriis viribus percipere, intelligere, credere et vera esse statuere nequeant. Quin potius, quanto diligentius in ea re elaborant, ut spirituales res istas suae rationis acumine indagant et comprehendant, tanto minus intelligunt et credunt et ea omnia pro stultitia et meris nugis et fabulis habent, priusquam a Spiritu Sancto illuminentur et 10] doceantur. Sic enim scribit apostolus 1 Cor. 2, 14: Animalis homo non percipit ea, quae sunt Spiritus Dei; stultitia enim est illi, et non potest intelligere, quia spiritualiter examinantur. Et 1 Cor. 1, 21: Quia in Dei sapientia non cognovit mundus per sapientiam Deum, placuit Deo per stultitiam praedicationis salvos facere credentes. Et alibi, Eph. 4, 17 sq., de hominibus impiis et nondum renatis in hanc sententiam scribit: Gentes ambulant in vanitate sensus sui, tenebris obscuratum habentes intellectum, alienati a vita Dei per ignorantiam, quae est in illis, propter caecitatem cordis ipsorum. Et Christus inquit

In order to explain this controversy in a Christian manner, according to the guidance of God's Word, and by His grace to decide it, our doctrine, faith, and confession are as follows:

Namely, that in spiritual and divine things the intellect, heart, and will of the unregenerate man are utterly unable, by their own natural powers, to understand, believe, accept, think, will, begin, effect, do, work, or concur in working anything, but they are entirely dead to what is good, and corrupt, so that in man's nature since the Fall, before regeneration, there is not the least spark of spiritual power remaining, nor present, by which, of himself, he can prepare himself for God's grace, or accept the offered grace, nor be capable of it for and of himself, or apply or accommodate himself thereto, or by his own powers be able of himself, as of himself, to aid, do, work, or concur in working anything towards his conversion, either wholly, or half, or in any, even the least or most inconsiderable part; but that he is the servant [and slave] of sin, John 8, 34, and a captive of the devil, by whom he is moved, Eph. 2, 2; 2 Tim. 2, 26. Hence the natural free will according to its perverted disposition and nature is strong and active only with respect to what is displeasing and contrary to God.

This declaration and principal [general] reply to the chief question and statement of the controversy presented in the introduction to this article is confirmed and substantiated by the following arguments from God's Word, and although they are contrary to proud reason and philosophy, yet we know that the wisdom of this perverted world is only foolishness before God, and that articles of faith must be judged only from God's Word.

For, first, although man's reason or natural intellect indeed has still a dim spark of the knowledge that there is a God, as also of the doctrine of the Law, Rom. 1, 19 ff., yet it is so ignorant, blind, and perverted that when even the most ingenious and learned men upon earth read or hear the Gospel of the Son of God and the promise of eternal salvation, they cannot from their own powers perceive, apprehend, understand, or believe and regard it as true, but the more diligence and earnestness they employ, wishing to comprehend these spiritual things with their reason, the less they understand or believe, and before they become enlightened and are taught by the Holy Ghost, they regard all this only as foolishness or fictions. 1 Cor. 2, 14: The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him. 1 Cor. 1, 21: For after that, in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Eph. 4, 17 f.: They (that is, those not born again of God's Spirit) walk in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart. Matt. 13, 11 ff.; Luke 8, 18: Seeing Augen sehen sie nicht, und mit hörenden Ohren hören sie nicht; denn sie verstehen es nicht. Euch aber ist [ist's] gegeben, daß ihr das Geheimnis des Himmelreichs vernehmet." Röm. 3: "Da ist nicht, der verständig sei, da ist nicht, der nach Gott frage; sie sind allesamt abgewichen und allesamt untüchtig worden; da ist niemand, der Gutes tue, auch nicht ein er." Also nennt die Schrift den natürlichen Menschen in geistlichen und göttlichen Sachen stracks eine Finsternis, Eph. 5; Act. 26. Joh. 1: "Das Licht leuchtet in der Finsternis" (das ist, in der finsternen, blinden Welt, die Gott nicht erkennt noch achtet), "und die Finsternis haben's nicht begriffen." Item, die Schrift lehrt, daß der Mensch in Sünden nicht allein schwach und krank, sondern ganz erstorben und tot sei, Eph. 2; Kol. 2.

Wie nun der Mensch, so leiblich tot ist, sich nicht kann aus eigenen Kräften bereiten oder schiden, daß er das zeitliche Leben wieder bekomme, also kann der Mensch, so geistlich tot ist in den Sünden, sich nicht aus eigener Macht zur Erlangung der geistlichen und himmlischen Gerechtigkeit und Lebens schiden oder wenden, wo er nicht durch den Sohn Gottes vom Tode der Sünde frei und lebendig gemacht wird.

Also nimmt die Schrift des natürlichen Menschen Verstand, Herzen und Willen alle Tüchtigkeit, Geschicklichkeit, Fähigkeit und Vermögen, in geistlichen Sachen etwas Gutes und Rechtes zu gedenken, zu verstehen, können, anfangen, wollen, vornehmen, tun, wirken oder mitwirken, als von ihm selbst. 2 Kor. 3: "Wir sind nicht tüchtig, etwas zu gedenken als von uns selber, sondern daß wir tüchtig sind, ist von Gott." Röm. 3: "Sie sind allesamt untüchtig." Joh. 8: "Meine Rede fähst nicht in euch." Joh. 1: "Die Finsternis haben's nicht begriffen oder angenommen." 1 Kor. 2: "Der natürliche Mensch vernimmt nicht" oder, wie das griechische Wort eigentlich lautet, fähst oder faßt nicht, nimmt nicht an, "was des Geistes ist", oder ist nicht fähig der geistlichen Sachen; "denn er hält es für Torheit und kann's nicht verstehen." Viel weniger wird er dem Evangelio wahrhaftig glauben oder das Jawort dazu geben und für Wahrheit halten können. Röm. 8: "Des Fleisches" oder natürlichen Menschen "Sinn ist eine Feindschaft wider Gott, sintemal er dem Befehl Gottes nicht untertan ist; denn er vermag es auch nicht." Und in Summa bleibt's ewig wahr, daß der Sohn Gottes spricht: "Ohne mich könnt ihr nichts tun." Und Paulus Phil. 2: "Gott ist's, der in euch wirket beides das Wollen und das Vollbringen nach seinem Wohlgefallen." Welcher liebliche Spruch allen frommen Christen, die ein kleines Büßklein und Sehnen nach Gottes Gnade und der ewigen Seligkeit in ihrem Herzen fühlen und empfinden, sehr tröstlich ist, daß sie wissen, daß Gott diesen Anfang der wahren Gottseligkeit in ihrem Herzen angezündet hat und wolle sie in der großen Schwachheit ferner stärken und ihnen helfen, daß sie in wahrem Glauben bis ans Ende beharren.

Hierher gehören auch alle Gebete der Heiligen, darin sie bitten, daß sie von Gott gelehrt, erleuchtet und geheiligt werden, und eben damit anzeigen, daß sie dasjenige, so sie von Gott bitten, aus eige-

Matth. 13, 11 sqq., Luc. 8, 10: Videntes non vident et audientes non audiunt, neque intelligunt etc. Vobis autem datum est nosse mysterium regni Dei. Et rursus apostolus ait Rom. 3, 11. 12: Non est intelligens, non est requirens Deum; omnes declinaverunt, simul inutiles facti sunt; non est, qui faciat [R. 658 bonum, non est usque ad unum. Et Sacra Scriptura hominem naturale in rebus divinis et spiritualibus tenebras vocat, Eph. 5, 8; Act. 26, 18. Ioh. 1, 5: Lux in tenebris lucet, hoc est, in tenebricoso et excaecato mundo, qui Deum neque novit neque curat, et tenebras eam non comprehenderunt. Quin etiam sacrae litterae docent, hominem in peccatis non tantummodo languidum et aegrotum, verum etiam prorsus mortuum esse, Eph. 2, 1. 5; Col. 2, 13.

11] Sicut igitur homo, qui corporaliter mortuus est, se ipsum propriis viribus praeparare aut accommodare non potest, ut vitam externam recipiat, ita homo spiritualiter in peccatis mortuus se ipsum propriis viribus ad consequendam spiritualem et coelestem iustitiam et vitam praeparare, applicare aut vertere non potest, nisi per Filium Dei a morte peccati liberetur et vivificetur.

12] Scriptura igitur hominis naturalis intellectui, cordi et voluntati omnem aptitudinem, capacitatem et facultatem in rebus spiritualibus aliquid boni et recti (ex semet ipso) cogitandi, intelligendi, inchoandi, volendi, proponendi, agendi, operandi et cooperandi adimit. Sic enim inquit apostolus 2 Cor. 3, 5: Non quod idonei simus cogitare aliquid a nobis, quasi ea nobis, sed quod idonei sumus, id ex Deo est etc. Rom. 3, 12: Omnes inutiles facti sunt. Sermo meus, ait Christus Ioh. 8, 37, non capit in vobis. Ioh. 1, 5: Tenebrae non comprehenderunt (seu receperunt) lucem. 1 Cor. 2, 14: Animalis homo non percipit (vel, ut Graecum vocabulum significanter exprimit, οὐ δέξεται, non capit, non comprehendit, non accipit) ea, quae sunt Spiritus Dei, vel non est capax rerum spiritualium; stultitia enim est illi, et non potest intelligere etc. Multo minus igitur eiusmodi animalis seu naturalis homo evangelio vere credere aut assentiri et id pro veritate agnoscere poterit. Rom. 8, 7: Carnis, sive naturalis hominis, sensus inimicitia est adversus Deum, quia legi Dei [R. 659 non subiicitur, ac ne potest id quidem.

14] Summa, verum est perpetuoque manebit verum, quod Filius Dei inquit Ioh. 15, 5: Sine me nihil potestis facere. Et apostolus ait Phil. 2, 13: Deus est, qui operatur in vobis et velle et perficere pro bona voluntate. Quae Scripturae dulcissima sententia omnibus piis mentibus, quae scintillulam aliquam et desiderium gratiae divinae et aeternae salutis in cordibus suis sentiunt, eximiam consolationem affert. Certi enim sunt, quod ipse Deus initium illud verae pietatis tamquam flammulam in cordibus ipsorum accenderit, quodque velit eos etiam in magna infirmitate porro confirmare et iuvare, ut in vera fide ad finem usque perseverent.

15] Huc referantur etiam omnes sanctorum preces, quibus petunt, ut a Deo doceantur, illuminentur et sanctificentur. His enim precibus fatentur, quod ea, quae petunt, suis they see not, and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand; but it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. Rom. 3, 11. 12: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are all together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one. Accordingly, the Scriptures flatly call natural man in spiritual and divine things darkness, Eph. 5, 8; Acts 26, 18. John 1, 5: The light shineth in darkness (that is, in the dark, blind world, which does not know or regard God), and the darkness comprehendeth it not. Likewise, the Scriptures teach that man in sins is not only weak and sick, but defunct and entirely dead, Eph. 2, 1. 5; Col. 2, 13.

Now, just as a man who is physically dead cannot of his own powers prepare or adapt himself to obtain temporal life again, so the man who is spiritually dead in sins cannot of his own strength adapt or apply himself to the acquisition of spiritual and heavenly righteousness and life, unless he is delivered and quickened by the Son of God from the death of sin.

Therefore the Scriptures deny to the intellect, heart, and will of the natural man all aptness, skill, capacity, and ability to think, to understand, to be able to do, to begin, to will, to undertake, to act, to work or to concur in working anything good and right in spiritual things as of himself. 2 Cor. 3, 5: Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God. Rom. 3, 12: They are together become unprofitable. John 8, 37: My Word hath no place in you. John 1, 5: The darkness comprehendeth (or receiveth) it not [the light]. 1 Cor. 2, 14: The natural man receiveth not (or, as the Greek word properly signifies, grasps not, comprehends not, accepts not) the things of the Spirit, that is, he is not capable of spiritual things; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them. Much less will he truly believe the Gospel, or assent thereto and regard it as truth. Rom. 8, 7: The carnal mind, or the mind of the natural man, is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be. And, in a word, it remains eternally true what the Son of God says, John 15, 5: Without Me ye can do nothing. And Paul, Phil. 2, 13: It is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure. To all godly Christians who feel and experience in their hearts a small spark or longing for divine grace and eternal salvation this precious passage is very comforting; for they know that God has kindled in their hearts this beginning of true godliness, and that He will further strengthen and help them in their great weakness to persevere in true faith unto the end.

Here belong also all the prayers of the saints in which they pray that they may be taught, enlightened, and sanctified by God, and by this very act declare that they cannot obtain those things which they ask of God from their nen natürlichen Kräften nicht haben mögen; wie allein im 119. Psalm David mehr als zehnmal bittet, daß ihm Gott volle Verstand mittheilen, daß er seine göttliche Lehre recht fassen und lernen möge. Dergleichen Gebete sind im Paulo Eph. 1, Kol. 1, Phil. 1. Welche Gebete und Sprüche von unserer Unwissenheit und Unvermögen uns nicht der Ursache halben vorgeschrieben sind, daß wir faul und träge werden sollen, Gottes Wort zu lesen, hören und betrachten, sondern daß wir erstlich Gott von Herzen danken, daß er uns aus der Finsternis der Unwissenheit und Gefängnis der Sünde und des Todes durch seinen Sohn freigemacht und durch die Taufe und Heiligen Geist wiedergeboren und erleuchtet hat.

Und nachdem Gott den Anfang durch seinen Heiligen Geist in der Taufe, rechte Erkenntnis Gottes und Glauben, angezündet und gewirkt [hat, sollen wir] ihn ohne Unterlaß bitten, daß er durch denselben Geist und seine Gnade, vermittlest täglicher Übung Gottes Wort zu lesen und zu üben, in uns den Glauben und seine himmlischen Gaben bewahren, von Tag zu Tag stärken und bis an das Ende erhalten wolle. Denn wo Gott nicht selber Schulmeister ist, so kann man nichts, das ihm angenehm und uns und andern heilsam ist, studieren und lernen.

Zum andern zeugt Gottes Wort, daß des natürlichen, unwiegeborenen Menschen Verstand, Herz und Wille in Gottes Sachen ganz und gar nicht allein von Gott abgewandt, sondern auch wider Gott zu allem Bösen genebet und verlehrt sei; item, nicht alleine schwach, unvermögend, untüchtig und zum Guten erstorben, sondern auch durch die Erbsünde also jämmerlich verlehrt, vergiftet und verderbt sei, daß er von Art und Natur ganz böse und Gott widerspenstig und feind und zu allem, das Gott mißfällig und zuwider ist, allzu kräftig, lebendig und tätig sei. Gen. 8: „Das Dichten und Trachten des menschlichen Herzens ist nur böse von Jugend auf.“ Jer. 17: „Des Menschen Herz ist trozig und verzagt“ oder verlehret und voll Eclenß, „das nicht auszugründen ist.“ Diesen Spruch erklärt St. Paulus Röm. 8: „Des Fleisches Sinn ist eine Feindschaft wider Gott.“ Gal. 5: „Das Fleisch gelüftet wider den Geist; dieselbigen sind widereinander.“ Röm. 7: „Wir wissen, daß das Gesetz geistlich ist, ich aber bin fleischlich, unter die Sünde verkauft.“ Und bald hernach: „Ich weiß, daß in mir, das ist, in meinem Fleisch, nichts Guts wohnt; denn ich habe Lust an dem Gesetz Gottes nach dem innerlichen Menschen“, so durch den Heiligen Geist wiedergeboren ist; „ich sehe aber ein ander Gesetz in meinen Gliedern, das widerstrebet dem Gesetz in meinem Gemüt und nimmt mich gefangen in der Sünden Gesetz.“

So nun im heiligen Paulo und andern Wiedergeborenen der natürliche oder fleischliche freie Wille auch nach der Wiedergeburt Gottes Gesetz widerstrebt, viel mehr wird er vor der Wiedergeburt Gottes Gesetz und Willen widerspenstig und feind sein; daraus offenbar ist (wie in dem Artikel von der Erbsünde weiter erklärt [ist]), darauf wir uns geliebter Kürze halben gezogen [bezogen] haben wollen), daß der freie Wille aus seinen eigenen natürlichen Kräften nicht allein nichts zu seiner selbst Belehrung, Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit wir-naturalibus viribus habere nequeant. Et quidem David in uno duntaxat psalmo, Ps. 119, decies et amplius orat pro intellectu, ut doctrinam divinam recte capere et discere queat. Tales precatiunculae multae admodum in scriptis Paulinis exstant, Eph. 1, 17; Col. 1, 9; Phil. 1, 9, quae preces et sententiae de ignorantia et impotentia nostra non ideo nobis praescriptae sunt, ut ad legendum, audiendum atque meditandum Verbum Dei tardiores atque remissiores reddamur, sed ut primum Deo toto pectore gratias agamus, quod nos e tenebris ignorantiae et captivitate peccati ac mortis per Filium suum liberaverit et per Baptismum et Spiritum Sanctum regeneraverit atque illuminaverit.

16] Et postquam Deus per Spiritum Sanctum suum initium in Baptismo fecit atque veram Dei agnitionem et fidem in cordibus nostris accendit atque operatus est, assiduus precibus orandus est, ut per eundem Spiritum sua gratia (per quotidiana exercitia audiendi, legendi et ad usum transferendi Verbum Dei) in nobis fidem et coelestia sua dona [R. 660] fovere, de die in diem confirmare et ad finem usque conservare velit. Nisi enim Dominus ipse doctoris et praeceptoris officio fungatur, nihil eorum, quae ipsi grata, nobis autem et aliis salutaria sunt, discemus.

17] II. Deinde Verbum Dei testatur, hominis naturalis, non renati intellectum, cor et voluntatem in rebus divinis prorsus non modo a Deo aversa, verum etiam adversus Deum ad omne malum conversam et penitus depravatam esse. Item, hominem non tantum infirmum, imbecillum, ineptum et ad bonum emortuum, verum etiam per peccatum originis adeo miserabiliter perversum, veneno peccati infectum et corruptum esse, ut ex ingenio et natura sua totus sit malus, Deo rebellis et inimicus et ad omnia ea, quae Deus odit, nimium sit potens, vivus, efficax. Gen. 8, 21: Sensus et cogitatio humani cordis tantum mala sunt, ab adolescentia sua. Pravum est cor hominis, ait Ieremias 17, 9, et incurabile; quis cognosceret illud? Hoc dictum apostolus his verbis interpretatur Rom. 8, 7: Sensus carnis inimicitia est adversus Deum. Gal. 5, 17: Caro concupiscit adversus Spiritum; haec sibi invicem adversantur. Et ad Romanos, 7, 14, sic ait: Scimus quod lex spiritualis est, ego autem carnalis, venundatus sub peccato. Et paulo post: Scio, quod in me, hoc est, in carne mea, non habitat bonum etc. Condelector enim lege Dei secundum interiorem hominem (qui ex Spiritu Sancto renatus est); video autem aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae et captivantem me in lege peccati etc.

18] Si autem in beato apostolo Paulo et aliis renatis hominibus naturale vel carnale liberum arbitrium, etiam post regenerationem, legi divinae repugnat, quanto magis ante regenerationem legi et voluntati Dei rebellabit et inimicum erit! Ex his manifestum est (ut in articulo de peccato originis pluribus [R. 661] ostendimus, ad quae brevitas causa nunc non referimus), liberum arbitrium propriis et naturalibus suis viribus non modo nihil ad conversionem, iustitiam et salutem suam ope-own natural powers; as, in Ps. 119 alone David prays more than ten times that God would impart to him understanding, that he might rightly comprehend and learn the divine doctrine. [Very many] similar prayers are in the writings of Paul, Eph. 1, 17; Col. 1, 9; Phil. 1, 9. These prayers and passages concerning our ignorance and inability have been written for us, not for the purpose of rendering us idle and remiss in reading, hearing, and meditating upon God's Word, but, first, that we should thank God from the heart that by His Son He has delivered us from the darkness of ignorance and the captivity of sin and death, and through Baptism and the Holy Ghost regenerated and illumined us.

And after God through the Holy Ghost in Baptism has kindled and effected a beginning of the true knowledge of God and faith, we should pray Him without ceasing that through the same Spirit and His grace, by means of the daily exercise of reading and practising God's Word, He would preserve in us faith and His heavenly gifts, strengthen us from day to day, and keep us to the end. For unless God Himself be our schoolmaster, we can study and learn nothing that is acceptable to Him and salutary to ourselves and others.

Secondly, God's Word testifies that the intellect, heart, and will of the natural, unregenerate man in divine things are not only turned entirely away from God, but also turned and perverted against God to every evil; also, that he is not only weak, incapable, unfit, and dead to good, but also is so lamentably perverted, infected, and corrupted by original sin that he is entirely evil, perverse, and hostile to God by his disposition and nature, and that he is exceedingly strong, alive, and active with respect to everything that is displeasing and contrary to God. Gen. 8, 22: The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. Jer. 17, 9: The heart of man is deceitful and desperately wicked, or perverted and full of misery, so that it is unfathomable. This passage St. Paul explains Rom. 8: The carnal mind is enmity against God. Gal. 5, 17: The flesh lusteth against the spirit; and these are contrary the one to the other. Rom. 7, 14: We know that the Law is spiritual; but I am carnal, sold under sin. And soon after, 18, 23: I know that in me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing. For I delight in the Law of God after the inward man, which is regenerate by the Holy Ghost; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin.

Now, if in St. Paul and in other regenerate men the natural or carnal free will even after regeneration strives against God's Law, it will be much more obstinate and hostile to God's Law and will before regeneration. Hence it is manifest (as it is further declared in the article concerning original sin, to which we now refer for the sake of brevity) that the free will from its own natural powers, not only cannot work or concur in working any-ten oder mitwirken noch dem Heiligen Geiſt, ſo ihm durch das Evangelium Gottes Gnade und die Seligleit anbietet], folgen, glauben oder das Jawort dazu geben kann, ſondern aus angeborener, böſer, widerſpenſtiger Art Gott und ſeinem Willen feindlich widerſteht, wo er nicht durch Gottes Geiſt erleuchtet und regiert wird.

Derhalben auch die Heilige Schrift des un-wiedergeborenen Menſchen Herz einem harten Stein, ſo dem, der ihn anrührt, nicht weicht, ſondern widerſteht, und einem ungehobelten Bloß und wilhem, unbändigem Tier vergleicht; nicht daß der Menſch nach dem Fall nicht mehr eine vernünftige Creatur ſei, oder ohne Gehör und Betrachtung des göttlichen Wortes zu Gott bekehrt werde, oder in äußerlichen, weltlichen Sachen nichts Gutes oder Böſes verſtehen, oder freiwillig tun oder laſſen könne.

Denn wie Doktor Luther im 90. Pſalm ſpricht: In weltlichen und äußerlichen Geſchäften, was die Nahrung und leiſtliche Nothdurft betrifft, iſt der Menſch wißig, vernünftig und faß [ſehr] geſchäftig; aber in geiſtlichen und göttlichen Sachen, was der Seelen Heil betrifft, da iſt der Menſch wie eine Salzſäule, wie Lots Weib, ja wie Aſch und Stein, wie ein totes Bild, das weder Augen noch Mund, weder Sinn noch Herz braucht; ſintemal der Menſch den graufamen, grimmen Jorn Gottes über die Sünde und Tod nicht ſieht noch erkennt, ſondern fährt immer fort in ſeiner Sicherheit, auch wiſſentlich und wißig, und kommt darüber in tauſend Gefährlichkeit, endlich in den ewigen Tod und Verdammnis; und da hilft kein Bitten, kein Flehen, kein Vermahnen, ja auch kein Drängen, Schelten, ja alles Lehren und Predigen iſt bei ihm verloren, ehe er durch den Heiligen Geiſt erleuchtet, bekehrt und wiedergeboren wird, dazu denn kein Stein oder Bloß, ſondern allein der Menſch erſchaffen iſt. Und da Gott nach ſeinem gerechten, geſtrengen Gericht die gefallenen böſen Geiſter gänzlich in Ewigkeit vernorfen, hat er doch aus beſonderer lauter Barmherzigkeit gewollt, daß die arme, gefallene menſchliche Natur wiederum der Befehrung, der Gnade Gottes und des ewigen Lebens fähig und theilhaftig werden und ſein möchte, nicht aus eigener, natürlicher, wirklicher Geſchicklichkeit, Tüchtigkeit oder Fähigkeit (denn es iſt eine widerſpenſtige Feindſchaft wider Gott), ſondern aus lauter Gnade, durch gnädige, kräftige Wirkung des Heiligen Geiſtes. Und das heiſt D. Luther capacitatem [non activam, ſed passivam], die er alſo erklärt: Quando patres liberum arbitrium defendunt, capacitatem libertatis eius praedicant, quod scilicet verti potest ad bonum per gratiam Dei et fieri revera liberum, ad quod creatum est. Das iſt: Wenn die Väter den freien Willen verteidigen, reden ſie davon, daß er der Freiheit fähig ſei bereſt, daß er durch Gottes Gnade zum Guten bekehrt und wahrhaftig frei ſeyn könnte werden, dazu er anfangs erſchaffen iſt. (Tom. I, p. 236.) Dergleichen auch Auguſtinus, lib. 2, contra Iulianum, geſchrieben. (D. Luther über das 6. Kapitel Joſeas; item, in der Kirchengpoſtelle über die Epistel am Chriſttag, Tit. 3; item, über das Evangelium Dom. 3. post Epiphaniae.)

rari aut cooperari, aut Spiritui Sancto (qui homini in evangelio gratiam et salutem offert) obsequi, credere aut assentiri posse, sed potius, pro insita sua rebellis et contumaci natura, Deo et voluntati eius hostiliter repugnare, nisi Spiritu Dei illuminetur atque regatur.

19] Nam ob causam sacrae litterae hominis non renati cor duro lapidi, qui ad tactum non cedat, sed resistat, item rudi trunco, interdum etiam ferae indomitae comparant; non quod homo post lapsum non amplius sit rationalis creatura, aut quod absque auditu et meditatione Verbi divini ad Deum convertatur, aut quod in rebus externis et civilibus nihil boni aut mali intelligere possit, aut libere aliquid agere vel omittere queat.

20] Nam (ut D. Lutherus in Commentario super Psalmum 90. dicit) in civilibus externis rebus, quae ad victum et corporalem sustentationem pertinent, homo est industrius, ingeniosus et quidem admodum negotiosus; sed in spiritualibus et divinis rebus, quae ad animae salutem spectant, homo est instar statuæ salis (in quam uxor patriarchae Lot est conversa), imo est similis trunco et lapidi ac statuæ vita carenti, quae neque oculorum, oris aut ullorum sensuum cordisve usum 21] habet. Homo enim horrendam Dei iram adversus peccatum et ex ea consequentem mortem neque videt neque agnoscit, sed strenue in carnali sua securitate (etiam sciens volensque) pergit et ita in mille pericula, tandem etiam in aeternam mortem et damnationem se praecipitat. Neque ab eo ad interitum cursum homo precibus, admonitionibus, obsecrationibus, minis, obiurgationibus revocari se patitur, nulla doctrina, nullae conciones apud eum locum habent, antequam per Spiritum [R. 662] Sanctum illuminatur, convertitur et regene- 22] ratur. Ad hanc vero Spiritus Sancti renovationem nullus lapis, nullus truncus, sed solus homo creatus est. Et cum Deus, severissimo et iustissimo suo iudicio, lapsos malos spiritus prorsus in aeternum abiecerit, singulari nihilominus et mera miseratione voluit, ut miserrima ex lapsu hominis natura conversionis et gratiae Dei ad vitae aeternae rursus capax particepsque fieret et esset, non ex sua propria, naturali et activa aut efficaci habilitate, aptitudine aut capacitate (natura enim hominis est inimicitia adversus Deum), sed ex mera gratia, per clementem et efficacem operationem Spiritus Sancti. Et hoc ipsum vocat D. Lutherus capacitatem (non activam, sed passivam) eamque his verbis declarat: Quando patres liberum arbitrium defendunt, capacitatem libertatis eius praedicant, quod scilicet verti potest ad bonum per gratiam Dei et fieri revera liberum, ad quod creatum est. (Tom. I, p. 236.) Horum similia etiam Auguſtinus, lib. 2, contra Iulianum, scripsit. [Auguſtinus: „Naturam demonstravit (Ambrosius) etiam istam, quae sub peccato nascitur et cuius ortus in vitio est, esse iustificationis capacem, sed sane per gratiam.“] (D. Lutherus in 6. caput Osee et in Postillis ecclesiasticis, in epistolam nativitatis Christi, Tit. 3, et ibidem Dominica 3. post Epiphaniae.)

thing for its own conversion, righteousness, and salvation, nor follow [obey], believe, or assent to the Holy Ghost, who through the Gospel offers him grace and salvation, but from its innate, wicked, rebellious nature it resists God and His will hostilely, unless it be enlightened and controlled by God's Spirit.

On this account the Holy Scriptures also compare the heart of the unregenerate man to a hard stone, which does not yield to the one who touches it, but resists, and to a rough block, and to a wild, unmanageable beast; not that man since the Fall is no longer a rational creature, or is converted to God without hearing and meditating upon the divine Word, or in external, worldly things cannot understand, or of his free will do, or abstain from doing, anything good or evil.

For, as Doctor Luther says Ps. 90: "In worldly and external affairs, which pertain to the livelihood and maintenance of the body, man is cunning, intelligent, and quite active; but in spiritual and divine things, which pertain to the salvation of the soul, man is like a pillar of salt, like Lot's wife, yea, like a log and a stone, like a lifeless statue, which uses neither eyes nor mouth, neither sense nor heart. For man neither sees nor perceives the terrible and fierce wrath of God on account of sin and death [resulting from it], but ever continues in his security, even knowingly and willingly, and thereby falls into a thousand dangers, and finally into eternal death and damnation; and no prayers, no supplications, no admonitions, yea, also no threats, no chiding, are of any avail, yea, all teaching and preaching is lost upon him, until he is enlightened, converted, and regenerated by the Holy Ghost, for which [renewal of the Holy Ghost], indeed, no stone or block, but man alone, was created. And although God, according to His just, strict sentence, has utterly cast away the fallen evil spirits forever, He has nevertheless, out of special, pure mercy, willed that poor fallen human nature might again become and be capable and participant of conversion, the grace of God and eternal life; not from its own natural, active [or effective] skill, aptness, or capacity (for the nature of man is obstinate enmity against God), but from pure grace, through the gracious efficacious working of the Holy Ghost." And this Dr. Luther calls capacitatem (non activam, sed passivam), which he explains thus: Quando patres liberum arbitrium defendunt, capacitatem libertatis eius praedicant, quod scilicet verti potest ad bonum per gratiam Dei et fieri revera liberum, ad quod creatum est. That is: When the Fathers defend the free will, they are speaking of this, that it is capable of freedom in this sense, that by God's grace it can be converted to good, and become truly free, for which it was created in the beginning. (Tom. I, p. 236.) To like effect also Augustine has written, lib. 2, Contra Iulianum. Doctor Luther on Hosea 6; also in the Church-Postil on the Epistle for Christmas; also on the Gospel for the third Sunday after Epiphany.

Aber zuvor und ehe der Mensch durch den Heiligen Geist erleuchtet, belehrt, wiedergeboren, erneuert und gezogen wird, kann er für sich selbst und aus seinen eigenen natürlichen Kräften in geistlichen Sachen und seiner selbst Belehrung oder Wiedergeburt etwas anfangen, wirken oder mitzuwirken gleich so wenig als ein Stein oder Blut oder Ton. Denn ob er wohl die äußerlichen Gliedmaßen regieren und das Evangelium hören und eiflermaßen betrachten, auch davon reden kann, wie in den Pharisäern und Heuchlern zu sehen ist, so hält er es doch für Torheit und kann es nicht glauben, [wer] hält sich auch in dem Fall ärger als ein Blod, daß er Gottes Willen widerspenstig und feind ist, wo nicht der Heilige Geist in ihm kräftig ist und den Glauben und andere gottgefällige Tugenden und Gehorsam in ihm anjündet und wirkt.

Wie denn zum dritten die Heilige Schrift die Belehrung, den Glauben an Christum, die Wiedergeburt, Erneuerung und alles, was zu derselben nützlichem Anfang und Vollziehung gehört, nicht den menschlichen Kräften des natürlichen freien Willens, weder zum ganzen noch zum halben noch zu einigem, dem wenigsten oder geringsten Teil zugeleget [zulegt], sondern in solidum, das ist, ganz und gar, allein der göttlichen Wirkung und dem Heiligen Geist zuschreibt, wie auch die Apologia sagt.

Die Vernunft und freier Wille vermag eiflermaßen äußerlich ehrbar zu leben; aber neugeboren werden, inwendig ander Herz, Sinn und Mut bekommen, das wirkt allein der Heilige Geist. Der öffnet den Verstand und das Herz, die Schrift zu verstehen und ausß Wort achtzugeben, wie Luc. 24 geschrieben: „Er öffnete ihnen das Verstandnis, daß sie die Schrift verstanden.“ Item Act. 16: „Lydia hörte zu, welcher tat der Herr das Herz auf, daß sie darauf acht hatte, was von Paulo geredet ward.“ Er wirkt in uns heide das Willen und das Vollbringen, Phil. 2; gibt Ruhe, Act. 5; 2 Tim. 2; wirkt den Glauben, Phil. 1: „Euch ist von Gott gegeben, daß ihr an ihn glaubet.“ Eph. 2: „Gottes Gabe ist es.“ Joh. 6: „Das ist Gottes Werk, daß ihr an den glaubet, den er gesandt hat.“ Gibt ein verständig Herz, sehende Augen und hörende Ohren, Deut. 29; Matth. 13. Ist ein Geist der Wiedergeburt und Erneuerung, Tit. 3. Nimmt das harte, fleisnerne Herz weg und gibt ein neues, weiches, fleischern Herz, daß wir in seinen Geboten wandeln, Ezech. 11. 36; Deut. 30; Ps. 51. Schafft uns in Christo Jesu zu guten Werken, Eph. 2, und zu neuen Creaturen, 2 Cor. 5; Gal. 6. Und in Summa: „Alle gute Gabe ist von Gott“, Jak. 1. „Niemand kann zu Christo kommen, der Vater ziehe ihn denn“, Joh. 6. „Niemand kennet den Vater, denn wem es der Sohn offenbaren will“, Matth. 11. „Niemand kann Christum einen Herrn nennen ohne durch den Heiligen Geist“, 1 Cor. 12. Und „ohne mich“, spricht Christus, „kann ihr nichts tun“, Joh. 15. Denn „alle unsere Fähigkeit ist von Gott“, 2 Cor. 3. Und „was hast du, daß du nicht empfangen hast? Was rühmest du dich denn, als der es nicht empfangen hätte?“ 1 Cor. 4. Wie denn sonderlich von diesem Spruch St. Augustinus schreibt, daß er dadurch überzeugt sei, seine vorige irrige Meinung fallen zu lassen, da er gehalten habe, De Praedestinatione, cap. 3: Gratiam

24] Antequam autem homo per Spiritum Sanctum illuminatur, convertitur, regeneratur et trahitur, ex sese et propriis naturalibus suis viribus in rebus spiritualibus et ad conversionem aut regenerationem suam nihil inchoare, operari aut cooperari potest, nec plus quam lapis, truncus aut limus. Etai enim locomotivam potentiam seu externa membra regere, evangelium audire et aliquo modo meditari, atque etiam de eo disserere potest, ut in Pharisaeis et hypocritis est videre, tamen id tacitis cogitationibus ut rem stultam apernit neque credere potest. Et hac in parte deterior est truncus, quia voluntati divinae rebellis est et inimicus, nisi Spiritus Sanctus in ipso sit efficax et fidem aliasque Deo probatas virtutes atque obedientiam in ipso accendat et operetur.

25] III. Praeterea sacrae litterae hominis conversionem, fidem in Christum, regenerationem, renovationem et omnia, quae ad [R. 663] illam efficaciter inchoandam et absolvendam pertinent, nequaquam humanis viribus naturalis liberi arbitrii, neque ex toto neque dimidia, aut ulla vel minima ex parte, sed in solidum, id est, simpliciter, soli divinae operationi et Spiritui Sancto ascribunt, sicut etiam Apologia testatur.

26] Ratio et naturale liberum arbitrium habet aliquo modo facultatem, ut externam honestam vitam instituire possit; at ut interne homo renascatur ipsiusque cor et animus immutentur, hoc solius Spiritus Sancti opus est. Et sane is donat intellectum et cor hominis aperit, ut Scripturam intelligat et Verbo Domini attendat, ut Luc. 24, 27 scriptum est: Aperuit ipsis Scripturam, ut eam intelligerent. Et Act. 16, 14: Lydiae auscultanti Dominus aperuit cor intendere his, quae dicebantur a Paulo. Operatur enim Dominus in nobis utrumque, et velle et perficere, Phil. 2, 13, dat poenitentiam, Act. 5, 31; 2 Tim. 2, 25, operatur fidem, ut apostolus ait Phil. 1, 29: Vobis donatum est, ut in eum oroadis. Eph. 2, 8: Donum Dei est. Et Christus inquit Ioh. 6, 29: Hoc est opus Dei, ut oroadis in eum, quem misit ille. Deut. 29, 4; Matth. 13, 15: Dominus donat oor intelligendum, oculos videntes et aures audientes. Tit. 3, 5: Spiritus Sanctus est Spiritus regenerationis et renovationis. Ezech. 11, 19; 36, 26; Deut. 30, 6; Ps. 51, 12: Ille aufert durum lapideum cor et donat novum, molle et carneum cor, ut in praeceptis eius ambulemus. Eph. 2, 10: Ille nos in Christo Iesu creat ad opera bona et nos novas creaturas facit, 2 Cor. 5, 17; Gal. 6, 15. Et ut paucis dicamus, Iac. 1, 17: Omne donum bonum est a Deo. Ioh. 6, 44: Nemo potest ad Christum venire, nisi Pater traxerit eum. Matth. 11, 27: Nemo novit Patrem, nisi cui Filius revelare voluerit. 1 Cor. 12, 3: Nemo potest Christum Dominum appellare nisi per Spiritum Sanctum. Sine me, inquit Christus, Ioh. 15, 5, nihil facere potestis. 2 Cor. 3, 5: Omnia sufficientia nostra a Deo est. 1 Cor. 4, 7: Et quid habes, quod non acceperis? Quid igitur gloriaris, quasi non acceperis? Et sane divus [R. 664] 27] Augustinus hoc Scripturae loco convictum

But before man is enlightened, converted, regenerated, renewed, and drawn by the Holy Ghost, he can of himself and of his own natural powers begin, work, or concur in working in spiritual things and in his own conversion or regeneration just as little as a stone or a block or clay. For although he can control the outward members and hear the Gospel, and to a certain extent meditate upon it, also discourse concerning it, as is to be seen in the Pharisees and hypocrites, nevertheless he regards it as foolishness, and cannot believe it. And in this respect he acts even worse than a block, inasmuch as he is rebellious and hostile to God's will, unless the Holy Ghost is efficacious in him, and kindles and works in him faith and other virtues pleasing to God, and obedience.

Thirdly, in this manner, too, the Holy Scriptures ascribe conversion, faith in Christ, regeneration, renewal, and all that belongs to their efficacious beginning and completion, not to the human powers of the natural free will, neither entirely, nor half, nor in any, even the least or most inconsiderable part, but in solidum, that is, entirely, solely, to the divine working and the Holy Ghost, as also the Apology teaches.

Reason and free will are able to a certain extent to live an outwardly decent life; but to be born anew, and to obtain inwardly another heart, mind, and disposition, this only the Holy Ghost effects. He opens the understanding and heart to understand the Scriptures and to give heed to the Word, as it is written Luke 24, 45: Then opened He their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures. Also Acts 16, 14: Lydia heard us; whose heart the Lord opened that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul. He worketh in us both to will and to do of His own good pleasure, Phil. 2, 13. He gives repentance, Acts 5, 31; 2 Tim. 2, 25. He works faith, Phil. 1, 29: For unto you it is given, in behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him. Eph. 2, 8: It is the gift of God. John 6, 29: This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent. He gives an understanding heart, seeing eyes, and hearing ears, Deut. 29, 4; Matt. 13, 15. He is a Spirit of regeneration and renewal, Titus 3, 5, 6. He takes away the hard heart of stone, and gives a new tender heart of flesh, that we may walk in His commands, Ezek. 11, 19; Deut. 30, 6; Ps. 51, 10. He creates us in Christ Jesus to good works, Eph. 2, 10, and makes us new creatures, 2 Cor. 5, 17; Gal. 6, 15. And, in short, Every good gift is of God, Jas. 1, 17. No one can come to Christ unless the Father draw him, John 6, 44. No one knoweth the Father, save him to whom the Son will reveal Him, Matt. 11, 27. No one can call Christ Lord except by the Holy Ghost, 1 Cor. 12, 3. Without Me, says Christ, ye can do nothing, John 15, 5. All our sufficiency is of God, 2 Cor. 3, 5. What hast thou that thou didst not receive? Now, if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory as if thou hadst not received it? 1 Cor. 4, 7. Accordingly, St. Augustine particularly writes of this passage that by it he was convinced that he must lay aside his former erroneous opinion, when he had maintained the following in his treatise De Prædestinatione, chap. 3: Gratiam Dei in eo tantum consistere, quod in præconio veritatis Dei voluntas nobis revelaretur; ut autem prædicato nobis evangelio consentiremus,

Dei in eo tantum consistere, quod in praeconio veritatis Dei voluntas nobis revelaretur; ut autem praedicato nobis evangelio consentiremus, nostrum esse proprium et ex nobis esse. Item erravi (inquit), cum dicerem, nostrum esse credere et velle; Dei autem, dare credentibus et volentibus facultatem operandi. Das ist: „In dem habe ich geirrt, daß ich gehalten habe, die Gnade Gottes stehe allein darin, daß Gott in der Predigt der Wahrheit seinen Willen offenbare; aber daß wir dem gepredigten Evangelio Beifall tun, das sei unser eigen Werk und stehe in unsern Kräften.“ Item spricht St. Augustinus weiter: „Ich habe geirrt, da ich sagte, es stehe in unserer Macht, dem Evangelio zu glauben und [zu] wollen; aber Gottes Werk sei es, zu geben die Kraft denen, die da glauben und wollen, daß sie etwas wirken könnten.“

Diese Lehre ist in Gottes Wort gegründet und der Augsburgerischen Konfession, auch andern Schriften, droben vermeldet, gemäß, wie die nachfolgenden Zeugnisse ausweisen.

Im XX. Artikel sagt die Konfession also: „Dieweil durch den Glauben der Heilige Geist gegeben wird, so wird auch das Herz geschickt, gute Werke zu tun. Denn zuvor, dieweil es ohne den Heiligen Geist [ist], so ist es zu schwach, dazu ist es in des Teufels Gewalt, der die arme menschliche Natur zu viel Sünden treibt.“ [* Und bald danach: „Denn außer dem Glauben und außerhalb Christo ist menschliche Natur und Vermögen viel zu schwach, gute Werke zu tun.“]

Diese Sprüche zeugen klar, daß die Augsburgerische Konfession des Menschen Willen in geistlichen Sachen gar nicht für frei erkennt, sondern sagt, er sei des Teufels Gefangener; wie sollte er sich denn können aus eigenen Kräften zum Evangelio oder Christo wenden?

Die Apologia (über den 18. Artikel) lehrt vom freien Willen also: „Und wir sagen auch, daß die Vernunft etlichermaßen einen freien Willen habe; denn in den Dingen, welche mit der Vernunft zu fassen, haben wir einen freien Willen.“ Und bald danach: „Solche Herzen, die ohne den Heiligen Geist sind, die sind ohne Gottesfurcht, ohne Glauben, Vertrauen, glauben nicht, daß Gott sie erhöhe, daß er ihre Sünden verzeihe, und daß er ihnen in Nöten helfe; darum sind sie gottlos. Nun kann ein böser Baum nicht gute Früchte tragen, und ohne Glauben kann Gott niemand gefallen. Darum ob wir gleich nachgeben, daß in unserm Vermögen sei, solche äußerliche Werke zu tun, so sagen wir doch, daß der freie Wille und Vernunft in geistlichen Sachen nichts vermöge“ usw. Hieraus [ist] lauter zu sehen, daß die Apologia des Menschen Willen kein Vermögen zuschreibt, weder das Gute anzufangen noch für sich selbst mitzuwirken.

In den Schmalkaldischen Artikeln (Von der Sünde) werden auch nachfolgende Irrtümer vom freien Willen verworfen: „Daß der Mensch habe einen freien Willen, Gutes zu tun und Böses zu lassen“ usw. Und bald danach wird auch als ein Irrtum verworfen, wenn gelehrt wird: „Es sei nicht in der Schrift gegründet, daß zu den guten Werken vonnöten sei der Heilige Geist mit seiner Gnade“ usw.

Ferner steht in den Schmalkaldischen Artikeln (Von der Buße) also: „Und diese Buße währt se esse fatetur, ut opinionem, quam antea ea de re falsam conceperat, abiiceret. Senserat enim, gratiam Dei in eo tantum consistere, quod in praeconio veritatis Dei voluntas nobis revelaretur; ut autem praedicato nobis evangelio consentiremus, nostrum esse proprium et ex nobis esse. Item, erravi (inquit) cum dicerem, nostrum esse credere et velle; Dei autem, dare credentibus et volentibus facultatem operandi.

28] Haec doctrina in sacris litteris solidissima fundamenta habet et Augustanae Confessioni aliisque scriptis publicis et approbatis, quorum supra mentionem fecimus, plane conformis est, quemadmodum dicta, quae recitabimus, luculenter testantur.

29] In Articulo XX. Augustana Confessio haec verba habet: Homines sine Christo, sine fide et sine Spiritu Sancto sunt in potestate diaboli, qui impellit homines ad varia et manifesta scelera. Ideo primum docentur homines de fide, quomodo Spiritus Sanctus detur, et quod Christus nos iuvet et tegat contra diabolum etc. Et paulo post: Humana ratio et virtus sine Christo nimis infirma est ad resistendum diabolo, qui impellit homines ad peccandum etc.

30] Ex his manifestum est, quod Augustana Confessio hominis voluntatem in rebus spiritualibus haudquaquam liberam pronuntiet, sed affirmet, hominem esse in diaboli potestate. Quomodo igitur suis ipse viribus ad evangelion aut ad Christum se convertere posset?

31] Apologia Confessionis (Articulo 18.) de libero arbitrio ad hunc modum docet: Non adimimus humanae voluntati libertatem. Habet enim libertatem in operibus et rebus deligen- dis, quas ratio per se comprehendit etc. Et paulo post: Humana corda sine Spiritu Sancto sunt sine timore Dei, sine fide et [R. 665] fiducia erga Deum, non credunt se exaudiri a Deo, sibi remitti peccata et in tribulatione velle Deum opem ferre; igitur sunt impia.

32] Porro arbor mala non potest ferre bonos fructus [Matth. 7, 18]. Et sine fide impossibile est placere Deo [Hebr. 11, 6]. Igitur, etiamsi concedimus libero arbitrio libertatem et facultatem externa legis opera efficiendi, tamen illa spiritualia non tribuimus libero arbitrio, scilicet vere timere Deum, vere credere Deo etc. Haec satis clare testantur, quod Apologia humanae voluntati nullas vires attribuat vel bonum inchoandi vel ex sese operandi.

33] In Articulis Smalcaldicis (De peccato originis) sequentes errores de libero arbitrio reiiciuntur: Quod homo liberum habeat arbitrium bonum agendi et malum omittendi etc. Et post aliqua tamquam error repudiatur, cum docetur: Non posse ex Scriptura probari, ad bonum opus necessario requiri Spiritum Sanctum et eius gratiam.

34] Praeterea in Articulis Smalcaldicis (De poenitentia) haec leguntur: Et haec poeni- nostrum esse proprium et ex nobis esse. Item erravi (inquit), cum dicerem, nostrum esse credere et velle; Dei autem, dare credentibus et volentibus facultatem operandi. That is: I erred in this, that I held that the grace of God consists only in this, that God in the preaching of the truth reveals His will; but that our consenting to the preached Gospel is our own work, and is within our own powers. Likewise, St. Augustine writes further: I erred when I said that it is within our own power to believe the Gospel and to will; but it is God's work to give to them that believe and will the power to effect something.

This doctrine is founded upon God's Word, and conformable to the Augsburg Confession and other writings above mentioned, as the following testimonies prove.

In Article XX the Confession says as follows: Because through faith the Holy Ghost is given, the heart thus becomes fit for doing good works. For before, because it is without the Holy Ghost, it is too weak, and, besides, is in the devil's power, who drives poor human nature into many sins. [Without Christ, without faith, and without the Holy Ghost men are in the power of the devil, who drives men to manifold and open crimes. Therefore men are first taught regarding faith, how the Holy Spirit is given, and that Christ aids and protects us against the devil, etc.] And a little afterward: For without faith and without Christ human nature and ability [reason and virtue] are much too weak to do good works [to resist the devil who drives men into sinning].

These passages clearly testify that the Augsburg Confession does not at all recognize [pronounce] the will of man in spiritual things as free, but says that he is the devil's captive; how, then, is he to be able of his own powers to turn himself to the Gospel or Christ?

The Apology (Art. XVIII) teaches thus of free will: [We do not deny liberty to the human will.] We also say that reason has, to a certain extent, a free will; for in the things which are to be comprehended by reason [as such] we have a free will [liberty in the choice of works and things]. And a little after: For such hearts as are without the Holy Ghost are without the fear of God, without faith, without trust [in God]; they do not believe that God hears them, that He forgives their sins, and helps them in troubles; therefore they are godless. Now, "a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit," and "without faith it is impossible to please God." Therefore, although we concede that it is within our ability to perform such an outward work [we concede to free will the liberty and power to perform the outward works of the Law], nevertheless, we say that in spiritual things [truly to fear God, truly to believe in God] the free will and reason have no ability, etc. Here it is clearly seen that the Apology ascribes no ability to the will of man, either for beginning good or for co-operating of itself.

In the Smalcald Articles (Of Sin) also the following errors concerning the free will are rejected: That man has a free will to do good and omit evil, etc. And shortly afterward it is also rejected as an error when men teach: That it is not founded upon Scripture, that for a good work the Holy Ghost with His grace is necessary.

Furthermore, we read in the Smalcald Articles (Of Repentance), as follows: And bei den Christen bis in den Tod; denn sie beistht sich mit der übrigen Sünde im Fleisch durchs ganze Leben, wie St. Paulus Röm. 7 zeugt, daß er kämpfe mit dem Gesez seiner Glieder, und daß nicht durch eigene Kräfte, sondern durch die Gabe des Heiligen Geistes, welche solat auf die Vergebung der Sünden. Dieselbe Gabe reinigt und segt täglich die übrigen Sünden aus und arbeitet, den Menschen recht rein und heilig zu machen.“ Diese Worte sagen gar nichts von unserm Willen, oder daß derselbe auch in den neugebornen Menschen etwas aus ihm selbst wirke, sondern schreiben es zu der Gabe des Heiligen Geistes, welche den Menschen reinige und ihn täglich frömmen und heiliger mache, und werden hiervon unsere eigenen Kräfte gänzlich ausgeschlossen.

Im Großen Katechismo D. Luthers steht also geschrieben (über den 3. Artikel des christlichen Glaubens): „Derselben christlichen Kirche bin ich auch ein Stück und Glied, aller Güter, so sie hat, theilhaftig und Mitgenos, durch den Heiligen Geist dahin gebracht und eingeleibt dadurch, daß ich Gottes Wort gehört habe und noch höre, welches ist der Anfang hineinkommen. Denn vorhin, ehe wir dazu“, zur christlichen Kirche, [ge]kommen, sind wir gar des Teufels gewesen, als die von Gott und Christo nichts gewußt haben. So bleibt der Heilige Geist bei der heiligen Gemeinde der Christenheit bis auf den jüngsten Tag, dadurch er uns heilet [* holet], und braucht sie dazu, das Wort zu führen und treiben, dadurch er die Heiligen macht und mehrt, daß wir täglich zunehmen und stark werden im Glauben und seinen Früchten, so er schafft“ usw. In diesen Worten gedenkt der Katechismus unsern freien Willens oder Zutuns mit seinem Wort, sondern gibt's alles dem Heiligen Geist, daß er durchs Predigtamt uns in die Christenheit bringe, darinnen heilige und verschaffe, daß wir täglich zunehmen im Glauben und guten Werken.

fit mentio, sed omnia Spiritui Sancto attribuuntur, quod videlicet nos per ministerium Verbi in ecclesiam Dei introducat, in qua nos sanctificet et efficiat, ut quotidie in fide et bonis operibus proficiamus.

Und obwohl die Neugebornen auch in diesem Leben so fern [so weit] kommen, daß sie das Gute wollen, und es ihnen liebet [lieb ist], auch Gutes tun und in demselben zunehmen, so ist doch solches (wie droben vermeldet) nicht aus unserm Willen und unserm Vermögen, sondern der Heilige Geist, wie Paulus selbst davon redet, wirkt solch Wollen und Vollbringen, Phil. 2. Wie er auch zu [den] Ephesern [am] 2. solch Werk allein Gott zuschreibt, da er sagt: „Wir sind sein Werk, geschaffen in Christo Jesu zu guten Werken, zu welchen uns Gott zuvor bereitet hat, daß wir darinnen wandeln sollen.“

Im Kleinen Katechismo D. Luthers steht also geschrieben: „Ich glaube, daß ich nicht aus eigener Vernunft noch Kraft an Jesum Christum, meinen Herrn, glauben oder zu ihm kommen kann, sondern der Heilige Geist hat mich durchs Evangelium berufen, mit seinen Gaben erleuchtet, im rechten Glauben geheiligt und erhalten; gleichwie er die ganze Christenheit auf Erden beruft, sammelt, erleuchtet, heiligt und bei Jesu Christo erhält im rechten einigen Glauben“ usw.

tentia in Christianis usque ad mortem durat. Luctatur enim cum reliquiis peccati in carne per totam vitam, quemadmodum dicitur Paulus Rom. 7, 23 testatur, se luctari cum lege membrorum suorum, atque hoc non propriis viribus, sed Spiritus Sancti dono, quod remissionem peccatorum statim sequitur. Hoc donum quotidie aliquid de reliquiis peccati expurgat et in hoc incumbit, ut hominem vere mundum 35] et sanctum reddat. Haec verba prorsus nihil de nostra voluntate loquuntur, neque dicunt, quod ea etiam in renatis aliquid ex sese operetur, sed omnia Spiritus Sancti dono ascribunt, quod hominem emundet et de die in diem meliorem et sanctiorem faciat, et ab eo opere vires nostrae propriae prorsus excluduntur.

36] Maior D. Lutheri Catechismus sic habet (de tertio articulo Symboli Apostolici): Illius catholicae Christianae ecclesiae ego quoque pars sum et membrum, omnium bonorum, quae ipsa habet, particeps et consors; per Spiritum Sanctum enim ad eam communionem coelestium bonorum introductus et [R. 666] ecclesiae sum insertus, hoc videlicet medio, quod Verbum Dei audiui et adhuc audio; hoc enim initium est, per quod aditus ad ecclesiam 37] Dei nobis patet. Antequam enim in ecclesiam Christi introducti sumus, vilissima diaboli mancipia eramus, quia de Deo et Christo nihil noveramus. Spiritus Sanctus autem manet cum sancta ecclesia catholica ad novissimum usque diem et per ecclesiam nos sanat eiusque opera utitur in docendo et propagando Dei Verbo, per quod ipse sanctificationem nostram operatur et promovet, ut de die in diem proficiamus et in fide confirmemur, atque in ferendis bonis fidei fructibus, quos ipse efficit, progressus subinde maiores faciamus 38] mus etc. In his omnibus, quae iam e catechismo recitavimus, liberi nostri arbitrii aut cooperationis nostrae ne uno quidem verbulo in Christians this repentance continues until death, because through the entire life it contends with sin remaining in the flesh, as Paul, Rom. 7, 23, testifies that he wars with the Law in his members, etc., and that not by his own powers, but by the gift of the Holy Ghost, which follows the remission of sins. This gift daily cleanses and sweeps out the remaining sins, and works so as to render man truly pure and holy. These words say nothing whatever of our will, or that even in regenerate men it works anything of itself, but ascribe it to the gift of the Holy Ghost, which cleanses man and makes him daily more godly and holy; and our own powers are entirely excluded therefrom.

39] Quamvis autem renati etiam in hac vita eo usque progrediantur, ut bonum velint eoque delectentur et bene agere atque in pietate proficere studeant, tamen hoc ipsum (ut paulo ante dictum est) non a nostra voluntate aut a viribus nostris proficitur, sed Spiritus Sanctus (ut Paulus Phil. 2, 13 ipse de hac re loquitur) operatur in nobis illud velle et perficere. Quemadmodum etiam alibi apostolus hoc opus soli Deo tribuit, cum inquit Eph. 2, 10: Ipsius sumus factura, creati in Christo Iesu ad opera bona, quae praeparavit Deus, ut in illis ambulemus.

40] In Minori Catechismo D. Lutheri sic scriptum est: Credo me non propria mearum ratione aut virtute in Iesum Christum, Dominum meum, credere ac ad ipsum venire [R. 667] posse, quandoquidem Spiritus Sanctus me per evangelium vocavit, suis donis illuminavit, in recta fide sanctificavit et conservavit; quemadmodum universam Christianam ecclesiam in terris vocat, colligit, illuminat, sanctificat et in vera ac una fide in Iesum Christum conservat etc.

In the Large Catechism of Dr. Luther (the Third Article of the Christian Faith) it is written thus: And I am also a part and member of the same, a sharer and joint owner of all the goods it possesses, brought to it and incorporated into it by the Holy Ghost, by having heard and continuing to hear the Word of God, which is the beginning of entering it. For formerly, before we had attained to this, we were altogether of the devil, knowing nothing of God and of Christ. Thus, until the last day, the Holy Ghost abides with the holy congregation or Christendom, by means of which He brings us to Christ, and which He employs to teach and preach to us the Word, whereby He works and promotes sanctification, causing [this community] daily to grow and become strong in the faith and the fruits of the Spirit, which He produces. In these words the Catechism does not mention our free will or cooperation with a single word, but ascribes everything to the Holy Ghost, namely, that through the office of the ministry He brings us into the Christian Church, wherein He sanctifies us, and brings it about that we daily grow in faith and good works.

And although the regenerate even in this life advance so far that they will what is good, and love it, and even do good and grow in it, nevertheless this (as above stated) is not of our will and ability, but the Holy Ghost, as Paul himself speaks concerning this, works such willing and doing, Phil. 2, 13. As also in Eph. 2, 10 he ascribes this work to God alone, when he says: For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk therein.

In the Small Catechism of Dr. Luther it is thus written: I believe that I cannot by my own reason or strength believe in Jesus Christ, my Lord, or come to Him; but the Holy Ghost has called me through the Gospel, enlightened me with His gifts, and sanctified and kept me in the true faith; even as He calls, gathers, enlightens, and sanctifies the whole Christian Church on earth, and keeps it with Jesus Christ in the one true faith, etc.

Und in der Auslegung des Vaterunsers, in der andern Bitte, sind diese Worte: „Wie geschieht das?“ nämlich daß Gottes Reich zu uns komme. Antwort: „Wenn der himmlische Vater uns seinen Heiligen Geist gibt, daß wir seinem heiligen Wort durch seine Gnade glauben und göttlich leben“ usw.

Diese Zeugnisse sagen, daß wir aus eigenen Kräften zu Christo nicht kommen mögen [können], sondern Gott müsse uns seinen Heiligen Geist geben, dadurch wir erleuchtet, geheiligt und also zu Christo durch den Glauben gebracht und bei ihm erhalten werden, und wird weder unsers Willens noch Mitwirkens gedacht.

Hierauf wollen wir einen Spruch setzen, da sich D. Luther nachmals mit einer Protestation, daß er bei solcher Lehre bis an sein Ende zu verharren gedente, erklärt im Großen Bekenntnis vom heiligen Abendmahl, da er also sagt: „Hiemit verwerfe und verdamme ich als eitel Irrtum alle Lehren, so unsern freien Willen preisen, als die stracks wider solche Hilfe und Gnade unsers Heilandes Jesu Christi strebet [streben]. Denn weil außerhalb Christo der Tod und die Sünde unsere Herren und der Teufel unser Gott und Fürst ist, kann da keine Kraft noch Macht, kein Witz noch Verstand sein, damit wir zu der Gerechtigkeit und Leben uns könnten schiden oder [danach] trachten, sondern müssen Verblendete und Gefangene der Sünde und des Teufels eigen sein, zu tun und zu gebeten, was ihnen gefällt, und Gott mit seinen Geboten [zu]wider ist.“

In diesen Worten gibt D. Luther, seltsam und heiligen Gedächtnisses, unsern freien Willen keine einige Kraft, sich zur Gerechtigkeit zu schiden oder danach zu trachten, sondern sagt, daß der Mensch, verblindet und gefangen, allein des Teufels Willen, und was Gott dem Herrn zuwider ist, tue. Darum ist hier kein Mitwirken unsers Willens in der Befehrung des Menschen, und muß der Mensch gezogen und aus Gott neugeboren werden; sonst ist kein Gedanke in unsern Herzen, der sich zu dem heiligen Evangelio, das selbe anzunehmen, von sich selbst wenden möchte [könnte]. Wie auch D. Luther von diesem Handel im Buch De Servo Arbitrio, das ist, von dem gefangenen Willen des Menschen, wider Erasmus geschrieben und diese Sache wohl und gründlich ausgeführt und erhalten [dargetan, bewiesen] und nachmals in der herrlichen Auslegung des ersten Buchs Mose, und sonderlich über das 26. Kapitel, wiederholt und erklärt hat; inmaßen daselbst er auch etliche andere sonderbare durch Erasmus neben eingeführte Disputationen, als de absoluta necessitate etc., wie er solches gemeint und verstanden haben wolle, wider allen Mißverstand und Verfehrung zum besten und fleißigsten verwahrt hat; darauf wir uns auch hiermit gezogen [bezo-gen haben wollen] und andere dahin weisen. [In der Auslegung Luthers zu 1 Mos. 26, 9 heißt es u. a.: „Libet autem ex hoc loco captare occasionem disputandi de dubitatione, de Deo et voluntate Dei. Audio enim, spargi passim sceleratas voces inter nobiles et magnates de praedestinatione sive praescientia divina. Sic enim loquuntur: Si sum praedestinatus, sive bene, sive male egero, salvabor. Si non sum praedestinatus, damnabor, nulla ratione habita operum. Contra has impias voces libenter multis disputarem, si possem per incertam valetudinem, quia, si sunt verae voces, ut ipsis quidem videtur, tum plane tollitur incarnatio Filii Dei, passio et resurrectio, et quidquid fecit pro salute mundi. Quid proderunt prophetae ac tota Scriptura Sacra? quid sacramenta? Abiciamus ergo et conculcemus ista omnia.“ — „Opponenda est autem cogitationibus 41] Et in explicatione secundae petitionis in Oratione Dominica haec sunt verba: Qui sit hoc? ut scilicet regnum Dei ad nos veniat. Responsio: Quando coelestis Pater nobis Spiritum Sanctum suum largitur, ut Verbo eius sancto per gratiam Dei credamus et pie vivamus etc.

42] Haec testimonia affirmant nos propriis viribus non posse ad Christum venire, sed Deum dare nobis Spiritum suum Sanctum, a quo illuminamur, sanctificamur et ita ad Christum per fidem adducimur atque in ipso conservamur. Hic nec voluntatis nostrae nec cooperationis mentio fit.

43] His adiungimus dictum, quo D. Luther tandem adhibita protestatione se ipsum declarat, quod in hac doctrina usque ad vitae finem perseverare velit. Verba in Maiore Confessione de Sacrosancta Coena haec sunt: Reicio et damno tamquam meros errores omnia dogmata, quae nostrum liberum arbitrium praedicant, utpote quae auxilio et gratiae Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi simpliciter repugnant. Cum enim extra Christum mors et peccatum nobis dominantur, et diabolus sit deus et princeps noster, non potest hic esse ulla potentia aut virtus, sapientia aut intelligentia in nobis, qua ad iustitiam et vitam nos parare et eam quaerere possimus; sed constat nos plane excaecatos et captivos et peccati ac diaboli mancipia esse et facere atque cogitare ea, quae ipsis placent et Deo et praeceptis eius adversa sunt.

44] In his verbis D. Lutherus, pie [R. 668] sanctaeque memoriae, libero nostro arbitrio prorsus nihil virium tribuit, quibus se homo ad iustitiam praeparare aut eam quaerere possit. Contra vero docet hominem excaecatum et captivum tantummodo voluntati Sata-nae parere, et ea, quae Deo displicent, facere. Quare non est in hoc negotio somnianda ulla cooperatio voluntatis nostrae in hominis conversione. Etenim necesse est, ut homo divinitus trahatur et ex Deo renascatur, Ioh. 6, 65; alias nulla in cordibus nostris cogitatio est, quae a se ipso ad evangelium amplectendum sese convertat. Hoc negotium D. Lutherus in libro suo De Servo Arbitrio contra Erasmus egregie et solide explicuit atque sententiam hanc piam et invictam esse demonstravit. Postea in commentario illo praeclaro, quem in Genesin scripsit (praecipue in explicatione 26. capitis), eandem repetivit et declaravit. Eo loco etiam alias quasdam peculiare ab Erasmo motas disputationes (ut de absoluta necessitate etc.) attingit, et quomodo ea intelligi et accipi vellet, contra omnes sinistras suspiciones et corruptelas pia explicatione optime munivit. Ea hic repetita esse volumus et, ut diligenter legantur, omnes hortamur.

And in the explanation of the Second Petition of the Lord's Prayer the following words occur: How is this done? When our Heavenly Father gives us His Holy Spirit, so that by His grace we believe His holy Word and live a godly life, etc.

These testimonies state that by our own powers we cannot come to Christ, but God must give us His Holy Ghost, by whom we are enlightened, sanctified, and thus brought to Christ through faith, and kept with Him; and no mention is made either of our will or cooperation.

To this we will add a passage in which Dr. Luther declared himself later, with a solemn protestation that he intended to persevere in this doctrine unto the end, in his Large Confession concerning the Holy Supper, where he says: Herewith I reject and condemn as nothing but error all dogmas which extol our free will, as they directly conflict with this help and grace of our Savior Jesus Christ. For since outside of Christ death and sin are our lords, and the devil our god and prince, there can be no power or might, no wisdom or understanding, whereby we can qualify ourselves for, or strive after, righteousness and life; but we must be blinded people and prisoners of sin and the devil's own, to do and to think what pleases them and is contrary to God and His commandments.

In these words Dr. Luther, of blessed and holy memory, ascribes to our free will no power whatever to qualify itself for righteousness or strive after it, but says that man is blinded and held captive to do only the devil's will, and that which is contrary to God the Lord. Therefore there is here no cooperation of our will in the conversion of man, and man must be drawn and born anew of God; otherwise there is no thought in our hearts which of itself could turn to the holy Gospel for the purpose of accepting it. Even so Dr. Luther wrote of this matter also in his book De Servo Arbitrio, i. e., Of the Captive Will of Man, in opposition to Erasmus, and elucidated and supported this position well and thoroughly, and afterward he repeated and explained it in his glorious exposition of the book of Genesis, especially of chapter 28. There likewise his meaning and understanding of some other peculiar disputations introduced incidentally by Erasmus, as of absolute necessity, etc., have been secured by him in the best and most careful way against all misunderstanding and perversion; to which we also hereby appeal and refer others.

istis vera et firma cognitio Christi, sicut saepe moneo, imprimis utile et necessarium esse, ut cognitio Dei certissima sit in nobis et firma animi assensione apprehensa haereat; alioqui inanis erit fides nostra. Si enim non stat promissionibus suis Deus, tum de nostra salute actum est; cum e contra haec nostra consolatio sit, tametsi nos mutemur, ut ad immutabilem tamen confugiamus. Sic enim de se affirmat, Mal. 3, 6: „Ego Dominus et non mutor“; et Rom. 11, 29: „Sine poenitentia enim sunt dona et vocatio Dei.“ Sic igitur in libello De Servo Arbitrio et alibi docui, esse distinguendum, quando agitur de notitia, vel potius de subiecto divinitatis. Aut enim disputandum est de Deo abscondito aut de Deo revelato. De Deo, quatenus non est revelatus, nulla est fides, nulla scientia et cognitio nulla. Atque ibi tenendum est, quod dicitur: Quae supra nos, nihil ad nos. Eiusmodi enim cogitationes, quae supra aut extra revelationem Dei sublimius aliquid rimantur, prorsus diabolicae sunt, quibus nihil amplius proficitur, quam ut nos ipsos in exitum praecipitemus, quia obiciunt obiectum impervestigabile, videlicet Deum non revelatum. Quin potius retineat Deus sua decreta et mysteria in abscondito: non est, cur ea manifestari nobis tantopere laboremus. Moses etiam petebat, ut ostenderet ipsi Deus faciem suam. Sed respondet Dominus Ex. 33, 20: „Posteriora mea tibi ostendam, faciem autem meam videre non poteris.“ Est enim curiositas ista ipsum peccatum originis, quo impellimur, ut ad Deum affectemus viam naturali speculatione. Sed est ingens peccatum, et conatus inutilis et irritus. Sic enim inquit Christus Ioh. 6, 65; 14, 6: „Nemo venit ad Patrem nisi per me.“ Ideo quando ad Deum non revelatum accedimus, ibi nulla fides, nullum verbum neque ulla cognitio est, quia est invisibilis Deus, quem tu non facies visibilem.“ — „Haec studiose et accurate sic monere et tradere volui, quia post meam mortem multi meos libros proferent in medium et inde omnis generis errores et deliria sua confirmabunt. Scripsi autem inter reliqua, esse omnia absoluta et necessaria; sed simul addidi, quod aspiciendus sit Deus revelatus, sicut in Psalmo canimus: „Er heisst Iesus Christ, der Herr Zebaoth, und ist kein ander Gott“, Iesus Christus est Dominus Zebaoth, nec eat alius Deus, et alias saepissime. Sed istos locos omnes transibunt, et eos tantum arripient de Deo abscondito. Vos igitur, qui nunc me auditis, memineritis, me hoc docuisse, non esse inquirendum de praedestinatione Dei absconditi, sed ea acquiescendum esse, quae revelatur per vocationem et per ministerium Verbi. Ibi enim potes de fide et salute tua certus esse ac dicere: Ego credo in Filium Dei, qui dixit: „Qui credit in Filium, habet vitam aeternam“, Ioh. 3, 36. Ergo in eo non est damnatio aut ira, sed beneplacitum Dei Patris. Haec eadem autem alibi quoque in libris meis protestatus sum, et nunc etiam viva voce trado: ideo sum excusatus.“ E. opp. exeg. 6, 290. 292. 300.]

Derhalben ist es unecht gelehrt, wenn man vorgibt, daß der unwiedergeborene Mensch noch so viel Kräfte habe, daß er begehre, das Evangelium anzunehmen, sich mit demselben zu trösten, und also der natürliche menschliche Wille in der Belehrung etwas mitwirke. Denn solche irrige Meinung ist der heiligen göttlichen Schrift, der christlichen Augsbürgischen Confession, derselben Apologia, den Schmalkaldischen Artikeln, dem Großen und Kleinen Katechismo Lutheri und andern dieses vortrefflichen, hocherleuchteten Theologen Schriften unüber.

Die weil aber diese Lehre vom Unvermögen und Bosheit unsers natürlichen freien Willens und von unserer Belehrung und Wiedergeburt, daß sie allein Gottes und nicht unserer Kräfte Wert sei, beides von Enthusiasten und Episturern unchristlich mißbraucht wird, und viele Leute durch solche Reden wüß und wiß und zu allen christlichen Übungen im Beten, Lesen und christlicher Betrachtung faul und träge werden, indem sie sagen: weil sie aus ihren eigenen natürlichen Kräften sich nicht vermögen, zu Gott [zu] bekehren, wollen sie Gott immerzu gänzlich widerstreben oder warten, bis sie Gott mit Gewalt wider ihren Willen belehre; oder: weil sie in diesen geistlichen Sachen nichts tun können, sondern alles allein des Heiligen Geistes Wirkung sei, so wollen sie weder Wort noch Sacrament achten, hören oder lesen, sondern warten, bis ihnen Gott vom Himmel ohne Mittel seine Gaben eingieße, daß sie eigentlich bei sich selbst fühlen und merken können, daß sie Gott belehrt habe;

45) Quare male docetur, cum fingitur, hominem non renatum adhuc tantum habere virium, ut evangelium amplecti eoque sese consolari cupiat, et hoc modo humanam voluntatem (qualis natura est) in conversione aliquo modo cooperari. Haec enim falsa opinio Sacrosanctae Scripturae, pia Augustanae Confessionis, eiusdem Apologiae, Smalcaldicis Articulis, Maiori et Minori Catechismis Lutheri et aliis huius excellentissimi et divinitus illuminati theologi scriptis repugnat.

46) Non ignoramus autem et enthusiastas et Epicurales pia hac, de impotentia et malitia naturalis liberi arbitrii, doctrina (qua conversio et regeneratio nostra soli Deo, nequaquam autem nostris viribus tribuitur) impie, turpiter et maligne abuti. Et (R. 669 multi impiis illorum sermonibus offensi atque depravati, dissoluti et feri sunt atque omnia pietatis exercitia, orationem, sacram lectionem, pias meditationes remisse tractant, aut prorsus negligunt ac dicunt: quandoquidem propriis suis naturalibus viribus ad Deum sese convertere nequeant, perrecturos se in illa sua adversus Deum contumacia, aut expectaturos, donec a Deo violenter et contra suam ipsorum voluntatem convertantur. Et cum in hisce spiritualibus rebus nullam agendi facultatem habeant, sed totum illud conversionis negotium solius Spiritus Sancti operatio sit, negant se porro Verbum Dei vel audituros vel lecturos, aut sacramento usuros, sed expectare velle, donec ipsis Deus immediate coelitus dona sua infundat, ut revera in se ipsis sentire et experientia ipsa certiores fieri possint, se a Deo conversos esse.

Therefore it is teaching incorrectly to assert that unregenerate man has still so much power as to desire to receive the Gospel and to be comforted by it, and that thus the natural human will cooperates somewhat [in a manner] in conversion. For such an erroneous opinion is contrary to the holy, divine Scriptures, the Christian Augsburg Confession, its Apology, the Smalcald Articles, the Large and the Small Catechisms of Luther, and other writings of this excellent, highly [divinely] enlightened theologian.

This doctrine concerning the inability and wickedness of our natural free will and concerning our conversion and regeneration, namely, that it is a work of God alone and not of our powers, is [impiously, shamefully, and maliciously] abused in an unchristian manner both by enthusiasts and by Epicureans; and by their speeches many persons have become disorderly and irregular, and idle and indolent in all Christian exercises of prayer, reading and devout meditation; for they say that, since they are unable from their own natural powers to convert themselves to God, they will always strive with all their might against God, or wait until God converts them by force against their will; or since they can do nothing in these spiritual things, but everything is the operation of God the Holy Ghost alone, they will regard, hear, or read neither the Word nor the Sacrament, but wait until God, without means, instils into them His gifts from heaven, so that they can truly feel and perceive in themselves that God has converted them.

Andere, kleinmüthige Herzen auch in schwere Gedanken und Zweifel fallen möchten, ob sie Gott erwählt habe und durch den heiligen Geist solche seine Gaben in ihnen auch wirken wolle, die weil sie keinen starken, brennenden Glauben und herzlichen Gehorsam, sondern eitel Schwachheit, Angst und Elend empfinden:

So wollen wir jetzt ferner aus Gottes Wort berichten, wie der Mensch zu Gott bekehrt werde, wie und durch was Mittel (nämlich durch das mündliche Wort und die heiligen Sacramente) der heilige Geist in uns kräftig sein und wahre Buße, Glauben und neue geistliche Kraft und Vermögen zum Guten in unsern Herzen wirken und geben wolle, und wie wir uns gegen solche Mittel verhalten und dieselben brauchen sollen.

Gottes Wille ist's nicht, daß jemand verdammt werde, sondern daß alle Menschen sich zu ihm bekehren und ewig selig werden. Hesek. 33: „So wahr ich lebe, will ich nicht den Tod des Sünders, sondern daß er sich bekehre und lebe.“ Denn „also hat Gott die Welt geliebet, daß er seinen eingebornen Sohn gab, auf daß alle, die an ihn glauben, nicht verloren werden, sondern das ewige Leben haben“.

Derhalben läßt Gott aus unermesslicher Güte und Barmherzigkeit sein göttlich ewig Gesetz und den wunderbarlichen Rath von unserer Erlösung, nämlich das heilige, alleinseligmachende Evangelium von seinem ewigen Sohn, unserm einigen Heiland und Seligmacher Jesu Christo, öffentlich predigen, dadurch er ihm [sich] eine ewige Kirche aus dem menschlichen Geschlecht sammelt und in der Menschen Herzen wahre Buße und Erkenntnis der Sünden, wahren Glauben an den Sohn Gottes, Jesum Christum, wirkt; und will Gott durch dieses Mittel, und nicht anders, nämlich durch sein heiliges Wort, so man dasselbe predigen hört oder liest und die Sacramente nach seinem Wort gebraucht, die Menschen zur ewigen Seligkeit berufen, zu sich ziehen, bekehren, wiedergebären und heiligen. 1 Kor. 1: „Dieweil die Welt durch ihre Weisheit Gott [in seiner Weisheit] nicht erkannte, gefiel es Gott wohl, durch törichte Predigt selig zu machen die, so daran glauben.“ Act. 10: Petrus wird dir das Wort sagen, dadurch du und dein ganzes Haus selig wirst.“ Röm. 10: „Der Glaube kommt aus der Predigt, das Predigen aber durch Gottes Wort.“ Joh. 17: „Heilige sie, Vater, in deiner Wahrheit! Dein Wort ist die Wahrheit. Ich bitte aber für alle, die durch ihr Wort an mich glauben werden.“ Derhalben der ewige Vater vom Himmel herab von seinem lieben Sohn und allen, so in seinem Namen Buße und Vergebung der Sünden predigen, ruft: „Den sollt ihr hören“, Matth. 17.

Diese Predigt sollen nun alle die hören, die da wollen selig werden. Denn die Predigt Gottes Wort und das Gehör desselben sind des heiligen Geistes Werkzeuge, bei, mit und durch welche er kräftig wirken und die Menschen zu Gott bekehren und in ihnen beides das Wollen und das Vollbringen wirken will.

Dieses Wort kann der Mensch, so auch noch

47] Alii vero, ut infirmæ et perturbatæ mentes, non satis recte intellecta pia nostra doctrina de libero arbitrio, fortasse in tristibus cogitationibus et periculosam dubitationem incidere possent: an sint a Deo electi, et an Deus dona illa per Spiritum Sanctum in ipsis operari velit, præsertim cum in cordibus suis non adeo firmam et flagrantem fidem promptamque obedientiam, sed solummodo meras infirmitates, misérias et angustias sentiant.

48] Hanc ob causam porro e Verbo Dei docebimus, quomodo homo ad Deum convertatur, quomodo et quibus mediis (videlicet per Verbum vocale et per sacramenta) Spiritus Sanctus in nobis efficac sit et veram poenitentiam, fidem novasque spirituales vires ac facultates ad bene agendum in cordibus nostris operari et largiri velit, et quemadmodum nos erga oblata illa media gerere et iis quomodo uti debeamus.

49] Non est voluntas Dei, ut quisquam pereat, sed vult, ut omnes homines ad [R. 670] ipsum convertantur et in æternum salvi fiant. Vivo ego, inquit Dominus Ezech. 33, 11, nolo mortem peccatoris, sed ut convertatur et vivat. Ioh. 3, 16: Sic enim Deus dilexit mundum, ut Filium suum unigenitum daret, ut omnis, qui in eum crederet, non pereat, sed habeat vitam æternam.

50] Propterea Deus pro sua ineffabili bonitate et clementia curat, ut sua divina et immota lex et mirandum consilium de liberatione nostra, sanctum videlicet et salvificum evangelion de æterno Filio suo, unico Salvatore et Redemptore nostro, Iesu Christo, publice annuntientur. Ea prædicatione æternam ecclesiam sibi e genere humano colligit et in hominum mentibus veram poenitentiam, agnitionem peccatorum et fidem veram in Filium Dei, Iesum Christum, operatur. Et visum est Deo per hoc medium, et non alio modo, nimirum per sanctum Verbum suum, cum id vel prædicari auditur vel legitur, et per sacramentorum legitimum usum homines ad æternam salutem vocare, ad se trahere, convertere, regenerare et sanctificare. Quia 51] in Dei sapientia, inquit apostolus 1 Cor. 1, 21, non cognovit mundus per sapientiam Deum, placuit Deo per stultitiam prædicationis salvos facere credentes. Et angelus inquit Act. 10, 5. 6: Petrus loquetur tibi verba, in quibus salvus eris tu et universa domus tua. Et Rom. 10, 17: Fides est ex auditu, auditus autem per Verbum Dei. Item Ioh. 17, 20: Sanctifica eos, Pater, in veritate tua! Verbum tuum est veritas etc. Oro autem pro iis etiam, qui per sermonem ipsorum in me sunt credituri. Quapropter æternus Deus, Pater coelestis, coelitus de Filio suo dilecto et de omnibus, qui ipsius nomine poenitentiam et remissionem peccatorum prædicant, clamat Matth. 17, 5: Hunc audite.

52] Hanc Verbi Dei prædicationem audire oportet omnes, qui æternam salutem consequi cupiunt. Prædicatio enim Verbi Dei et eiusdem auscultatio sunt Spiritus Sancti [R. 671] instrumenta, cum quibus et per quae efficaciter agere et homines ad Deum convertere, atque in ipsis et velle et perficere operari vult.

53] Hoc Dei Verbum homo, etiam nondum

Other desponding [weak and disturbed] hearts [our godly doctrine concerning the free will not being rightly understood] might perhaps fall into hard thoughts and [perilous] doubts as to whether God has elected them, and will work His gifts also in them through the Holy Ghost, especially when they are sensible of no strong, ardent faith and sincere obedience, but only of weakness, fear, and misery.

For this reason we shall now relate, furthermore, from God's Word how man is converted to God, how and through what means (namely, through the oral Word and the holy Sacraments) the Holy Ghost wants to be efficacious in us, and to work and bestow in our hearts true repentance, faith, and new spiritual power and ability for good, and how we should conduct ourselves towards these means, and [how we should] use them.

It is not God's will that any one should be damned [perish], but that all men should be converted to Him and be saved eternally. Ezek. 33, 11: As I live, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. John 3, 16: For God so loved the world that He gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Therefore God, out of His immense goodness and mercy, has His divine eternal Law and His wonderful plan concerning our redemption, namely, the holy, alone-saving Gospel of His eternal Son, our only Savior and Redeemer, Jesus Christ, publicly preached; and by this [preaching] collects an eternal Church for Himself from the human race, and works in the hearts of men true repentance and knowledge of sins, and true faith in the Son of God, Jesus Christ. And by this means, and in no other way, namely, through His holy Word, when men hear it preached or read it, and the holy Sacraments when they are used according to His Word, God desires to call men to eternal salvation, draw them to Himself, and convert, regenerate, and sanctify them. 1 Cor. 1, 21: For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. Acts 10, 5, 6: Peter shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do. Rom. 10, 17: Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. John 17, 17, 20: Sanctify them by Thy truth; Thy Word is truth, etc. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their Word. Therefore the eternal Father calls down from heaven concerning His dear Son and concerning all who preach repentance and forgiveness of sins in His name: Hear ye Him, Matt. 17, 5.

Now, all who wish to be saved ought to hear this preaching [of God's Word]. For the preaching and hearing of God's Word are instruments of the Holy Ghost, by, with, and through which He desires to work efficaciously, and to convert men to God, and to work in them both to will and to do.

This Word man can externally hear and nicht zu Gott befehrt und wiedergeboren ist, äußerlich hören und lesen; denn in diesen äußerlichen Dingen, wie oben gesagt, hat der Mensch auch nach dem Fall etlichermaßen einen freien Willen, daß er zur Kirche gehen, der Predigt zuhören oder nicht zuhören mag [kann].

Durch dieses Mittel, nämlich die Predigt und Gehör seines Wortes, wirkt Gott und bricht unsere Herzen und zeucht [zieht] den Menschen, daß er durch die Predigt des Befehles seine Sünde und Gottes Zorn erkennt und wahrhaftiges Schrecken, Reue und Leid im Herzen empfindet, und durch die Predigt und Betrachtung des heiligen Evangelii von der gnadenreichen Vergebung der Sünden in Christo ein Fünkeln des Glaubens in ihm angezündet wird, [so daß er] die Vergebung der Sünden um Christi willen annimmt und sich mit der Verheißung des Evangelii tröstet; und wird also der Heilige Geist (welcher dieses alles wirkt) in das Herz gegeben.

Wiewohl nun beides, des Predigers Pflanzen und Begießen und des Zuhörers Laufen und Wollen, umsonst wäre, und keine Belehrung darauf folgen würde, wo nicht des Heiligen Geistes Kraft und Wirkung dazu käme, welcher durch das gepredigte, gehörte Wort die Herzen erleuchtet und befehrt, daß die Menschen solchem Wort glauben und das Jawort dazu geben, so soll doch weder Prediger noch Zuhörer an dieser Gnade und Wirkung des Heiligen Geistes zweifeln, sondern gewiß sein, wenn das Wort Gottes nach dem Befehl und Willen Gottes rein und lauter gepredigt [wird], und die Menschen mit Fleiß und Ernst zuhören und dasselbe betrachten, daß gewißlich Gott mit seiner Gnade gegenwärtig sei und gebe, wie gemeldet, daß der Mensch sonst aus seinen eigenen Kräften weder nehmen noch geben kann. Denn von der Gegenwärtigkeit, Wirkung und Gaben des Heiligen Geistes soll und kann man nicht alleinege ex sensu, wie und wann man's im Herzen empfindet, urteilen, sondern, weil es oft mit großer Schwachheit verdeckt wird und zugeht, sollen wir aus und nach der Verheißung gewiß sein, daß das gepredigte, gehörte Wort Gottes sei ein Amt und Werk des Heiligen Geistes, dadurch er in unsern Herzen gewißlich fräftig ist und wirkt, 2 Kor. 2.

Da aber ein Mensch die Predigt nicht hören noch Gottes Wort lesen will, sondern das Wort und die Gemeinde Gottes verachtet und stirbt also und verdirbt in seinen Sünden, der kann weder Gottes ewiger Wahl sich trösten noch seine Barmherzigkeit erlangen; denn Christus, in dem wir erwählt sind, allen Menschen seine Gnade im Wort und heiligen Sakramenten anbietet [anbietet] und ernstlich will, daß man es hören soll, und hat verheißen, wo zwei oder drei in seinem Namen versammelt sind und mit seinem heiligen Wort umgehen, will er mitten unter ihnen sein.

Da aber ein solcher Mensch verachtet des Heiligen Geistes Werkzeug und will nicht hören, so geschieht ihm nicht unrecht, wenn der Heilige Geist ihn nicht erleuchtet, sondern in der Finsternis seines Unglaubens steden und verderben läßt, davon geschrieben steht: „Wie oft habe ich deine Kinder versammeln wollen, wie eine Henne versammelt ad Deum conversus nec renatus, externis auribus audire aut legere potest. In eiusmodi enim externis rebus, ut supra dictum est, homo adhuc etiam post lapsum aliquo modo liberum arbitrium habet, ut ad coetus publicos ecclesiasticos accedere, Verbum Dei audire vel non audire possit.

54] Per hoc medium seu instrumentum, praedicationem nimirum et auditionem Verbi, Deus operatur, emollit corda nostra trahitque hominem, ut ex concionibus legis et peccata sua et iram Dei agnoscat et veros terrores atque contritionem in corde suo sentiat. Et per annuntiationem ac meditationem evangelii de gratuita et clementissima peccatorum remissione in Christo scintillula fidei in corde ipsius accenditur, quae remissionem peccatorum propter Christum amplectitur et sese promissione evangelii consolatur, et hoc modo Spiritus Sanctus, qui haec omnia operatur, in cor mittitur, Gal. 4, 6.

55] Etiam autem utrumque, tum concionatoris plantare et rigare, tum auditoris currere et velle, frustra omnino essent neque conversio sequeretur, nisi Spiritus Sancti virtus et operatio accederet, qui per Verbum praedicatum et auditum corda illuminat et convertit, ut homines Verbo credere et assentiri possint, tamen neque concionator neque auditor de hac Spiritus Sancti gratia et operatione dubitare debent. Quin potius uterque certo sciat, si Verbum Dei iuxta mandatum et voluntatem Dei pure et sincere praedicatum fuerit, et homines diligenter et serio auscultaverint illudque meditati fuerint, certissime Dominum gratia sua praesentem adesse et largiri ea, ut paulo ante dictum [R. 672 est, quae homo alias suis propriis viribus ne-

56] que accipere neque dare potest. De praesentia enim, operatione et donis Spiritus Sancti non semper ex sensu (quomodo videlicet et quando in corde sentiuntur) iudicari debet aut potest, sed, quia haec saepe multiplices infirmitate contacta sunt, ex promissione Verbi Dei certo statuere debemus, quod Verbum Dei praedicatum et auditum revera sit ministerium et organon Spiritus Sancti, per quod in cordibus nostris vere efficax est et operatur, 2 Cor. 2, 14 sqq. [3, 5 sq.].

57] At si homo quispian neque Verbum Dei audire neque legere velit, sed potius ministerium Verbi et ecclesiam Dei contemnat et in peccatis suis ita moriatur et pereat, is neque ex aeterna Dei praedestinatione quidquam consolationis capere neque misericordiam apud Deum consequi potest. Christus enim, in quo electi sumus, omnibus hominibus clementiam suam in Verbo et sacramentis offert et serio vult, ut Verbum illud audiatur, ac promisit Matth. 18, 20: ubicunque duo aut tres in nomine eius congregati fuerint et Verbum eius pie tractaverint, ibi se in medio ipsorum affuturum.

58] Quare cum homo profanus instrumenta seu media Spiritus Sancti contemnit neque Verbum Dei audire vult, non fit illi iniuria, si a Spiritu Sancto non illuminetur, sed in tenebris infidelitatis suae relinquitur et pereat. De hac re sic scriptum exstat Matth. 23, 37: Quoties volui congregare filios tuos, read, even though he is not yet converted to God and regenerate; for in these external things, as said above, man even since the Fall has to a certain extent a free will, so that he can go to church and hear or not hear the sermon.

Through this means, namely, the preaching and hearing of His Word, God works, and breaks our hearts, and draws man, so that through the preaching of the Law he comes to know his sins and God's wrath, and experiences in his heart true terrors, contrition, and sorrow, and through the preaching and consideration of the holy Gospel concerning the gracious forgiveness of sins in Christ a spark of faith is kindled in him, which accepts the forgiveness of sins for Christ's sake, and comforts itself with the promise of the Gospel, and thus the Holy Ghost (who works all this) is sent into the heart, Gal. 4, 6.

Now, although both, the planting and watering of the preacher, and the running and willing of the hearer, would be in vain, and no conversion would follow it if the power and efficacy of the Holy Ghost were not added thereto, who enlightens and converts the hearts through the Word preached and heard, so that men believe this Word and assent thereto, still, neither preacher nor hearer is to doubt this grace and efficacy of the Holy Ghost, but should be certain that when the Word of God is preached purely and truly, according to the command and will of God, and men listen attentively and earnestly and meditate upon it, God is certainly present with His grace, and grants, as has been said, what otherwise man can neither accept nor give from his own powers. For concerning the presence, operation, and gifts of the Holy Ghost we should not and cannot always judge ex sensu [from feeling], as to how and when they are experienced in the heart; but because they are often covered and occur in great weakness, we should be certain from, and according to, the promise, that the Word of God preached and heard is [truly] an office and work of the Holy Ghost, by which He is certainly efficacious and works in our hearts, 2 Cor. 2, 14 ff.; 3, 5 ff.

But if a man will not hear preaching nor read God's Word, but despises the Word and congregation of God, and thus dies and perishes in his sins, he neither can comfort himself with God's eternal election nor obtain His mercy; for Christ, in whom we are chosen, offers to all men His grace in the Word and holy Sacraments, and wishes earnestly that it be heard, and has promised that where two or three are gathered together in His name and are occupied with His holy Word, He will be in their midst.

But when such a person despises the instrument of the Holy Ghost, and will not hear, no injustice is done to him if the Holy Ghost does not enlighten him, but allows him to remain in the darkness of his unbelief and to perish; for regarding this matter it is written: How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her ihre Zungen unter ihre Flügel, und ihr habt nicht gewollt!" Matth. 23.

Und in diesem Fall mag man wohl sagen, daß der Mensch nicht sei ein Stein oder Block. Denn ein Stein oder Block widerstrebt dem nicht, der ihn bewegt, versteht auch nicht und empfindet nicht, was mit ihm gehandelt wird, wie ein Mensch Gott dem Herrn widerstrebt mit seinem Willen so lange, bis er belehrt wird. Und ist gleichwohl wahr, daß ein Mensch vor der Belehrung dennoch eine vernünftige Kreatur ist, welche einen Verstand und Willen hat, doch nicht einen Verstand in göttlichen Sachen oder einen Willen, etwas Gutes und Heilsames zu wollen. Jedoch kann er zu seiner Belehrung (wie droben auch gemeldet) ganz und gar nichts thun und ist in solchem Fall viel ärger denn ein Stein und Block; denn er widerstrebt dem Wort und Willen Gottes, bis Gott ihn vom Tode der Sünde erweckt, erleuchtet und verneuert.

Und wiewohl Gott den Menschen nicht zwingt, daß er müsse fromm werden (denn welche alzeit dem Heiligen Geist widerstreben und sich für und für auch der erkannten Wahrheit widersetzen, wie Stephanus von den verkörnten Juden redet Act. 7, die werden nicht belehrt), jedoch zeucht [zieht] Gott der Herr den Menschen, welchen er belehren will, und zeucht ihn also, daß aus einem verfinsterten Verstand ein erleuchteter Verstand und aus einem widerpenftigen Willen ein gehorsamer Wille wird. Und das nennt die Schrift „ein neues Herz erschaffen“.

Derhalben kann auch nicht recht gesagt werden, daß der Mensch vor seiner Belehrung einen modum agendi oder eine Weise, nämlich etwas Gutes und Heilsames in göttlichen Sachen zu wirken, habe. Denn weil der Mensch vor der Belehrung „tot ist in Sünden“, Eph. 2, so kann in ihm keine Kraft sein, etwas Gutes in göttlichen Sachen zu wirken, und hat also auch keinen modum agendi oder Weise, in göttlichen Sachen zu wirken. Wenn man aber davon redet, wie Gott in dem Menschen wirke, so hat gleichwohl Gott der Herr einen modum agendi oder Weise zu wirken in einem Menschen, als in einer vernünftigen Kreatur, und eine andere zu wirken in einer andern, unvernünftigen Kreatur oder in einem Stein und Block. Jedoch kann nichtsdestoweniger dem Menschen vor seiner Belehrung kein modus agendi oder einige Weise, in geistlichen Sachen etwas Gutes zu wirken, zugeschrieben werden.

Wenn aber der Mensch belehrt worden und also erleuchtet ist und sein Wille verneuert, alsdann so will der Mensch Gutes (sofern er neugeboren oder ein neuer Mensch ist) und „hat Lust am Gesetz Gottes nach dem innerlichen Menschen“, Röm. 7, und tut forthin so viel und so lange Gutes, soviel und -lange er vom Geist Gottes getrieben wird, wie Paulus sagt: „Die vom Geist Gottes getrieben werden, die sind Gottes Kinder.“ Und ist solcher Trieb des Heiligen Geistes nicht eine coactio oder ein Zwang, sondern der belehrte Mensch tut freiwillig Gutes, wie David sagt: „Nach deinem Sieg wird [dir] dein Volk williglich opfern.“ Und bleibt gleichwohl auch in den Wiedergeborenen, daß St. Paulus geschrieben Röm. 7: „Ich habe Lust an Gottes Gesetz nach dem innerlichen Menschen; ich sehe aber ein ander Gesetz in meinen Gliedern, daß da widerstreitet dem Gesetz in meinem Gemüt und nimmt quemadmodum gallina congregat pullos suos sub alas, et noluit!

50) Et hac ratione recte etiam dici potest, hominem non esse lapidem aut truncum. Lapis enim aut truncus non reluctatur ei, a quo movetur, sed neque intelligit aut sentit, quid secum agatur, sicut homo Deo sua voluntate reluctatur, donec ad Dominum conversus fuerit. Et tamen verum est, [R. 673] quod homo, etiam ante conversionem, sit creatura rationalis, quae intellectum et voluntatem habeat (intellectum autem non in rebus divinis, et voluntatem, non ut bonum et salutare aliquid velit); sed tamen ad conversionem suam (ut saepe iam est dictum) prorsus nihil conferre potest. Et hac in parte multo est deterior lapide aut trunco, quia repugnat Verbo et voluntati Dei, donec Deus eum a morte peccati resuscitet, illuminet atque renovet.

60) Etsi autem Dominus hominem non cogit, ut convertatur (qui enim semper Spiritui Sancto resistunt, Act. 7, 51, et veritati agnitae perseverantes repugnant, quod sanctus Stephanus induratis Iudaeis tribuit, hi non convertuntur), attamen trahit Deus hominem, quem convertere decrevit. Sic autem eum trahit, ut ex intellectu caecato illuminatus fiat intellectus, et ex rebelli voluntate fiat prompta et obediens voluntas. Et hoc ipsum Scriptura vocat novum cor creare [Ps. 51, 12].

61) Eam ob causam etiam non recte dicitur, hominem ante conversionem in rebus spiritualibus habere modum agendi aliquid, quod sit bonum et salutare. Cum enim homo ante conversionem in peccatis mortuus sit, Eph. 2, 5, non potest in ipso aliqua vis ad bene agendum in rebus spiritualibus inesse, itaque non habet modum agendi seu operandi aliquid 62) in rebus divinis. Quando vero de eo agitur, quomodo Deus in homine operetur, verum quidem est, quod Deus alium modum agendi habeat in homine, utpote in creatura rationali, et alium modum in alia aliqua irrationali creatura, vel in lapide aut trunco. Nihilominus ea de causa homini ante conversionem eius modus agendi aliquid boni in rebus divinis tribui non potest.

63) Quando vero iam homo est conversus et illuminatus, eiusque voluntas renovata est, tunc homo vult bonum, quatenus renatus et novus homo est, et lege Dei delectatur secundum interiorem hominem, Rom. 7, 22. Et in posterum tantum boni et tamdiu bonum operatur, quantum et quamdiu a Spiritu Dei impellitur, sicut divus Paulus ait [Rom. 8, 14]: Qui Spiritu Dei aguntur, hi sunt filii Dei. 64) Haec autem agitatio Spiritus Sancti non est coactio, sed homo conversus sponte [R. 674] bonum operatur, quemadmodum David inquit Ps. 110, 3: Post victoriam tuam populus tuus tibi spontaneus offeret. Et tamen simul etiam in renatis lucta carnis et spiritus reliqua manet, de qua Paulus ait Rom. 7, 22 sq.: Delector lege Dei secundum interiorem hominem; video autem aliam legem in membris meis repugnantem legi mentis meae et captivantem chickens under her wings; and ye would not!

Matt. 23, 37.

And in this respect it may well be said that man is not a stone or block. For a stone or block does not resist the person who moves it, nor does it understand and is sensible of what is being done with it, as man with his will so long resists God the Lord until he is [has been] converted. And it is nevertheless true that man before his conversion is still a rational creature, having an understanding and will, however, not an understanding with respect to divine things, or a will to will something good and salutary. Yet he can do nothing whatever towards his conversion (as has also been said [frequently] above), and is in this respect much worse than a stone and block; for he resists the Word and will of God, until God awakens him from the death of sin, enlightens and renews him.

And although God does not force man to become godly (for those who always resist the Holy Ghost and persistently oppose the known truth, as Stephen says of the hardened Jews, Acts 7, 51, are not converted), yet God the Lord draws the man whom He wishes [decreed] to convert, and draws him in such a way that his darkened understanding is turned into an enlightened one and his perverse will into an obedient one. And this [just this] is what the Scriptures call creating a new heart, Ps. 51, 10.

And for this reason it cannot be correctly said that man before his conversion has a modus agendi, or a way, namely, of working something good and salutary in divine things. For inasmuch as man before his conversion is dead in sins, Eph. 2, 5, there can be in him no power to work anything good in divine things, and hence, too, he has no modus agendi, or way of working in divine things. But when we treat of the matter how God works in man, God has nevertheless [it is true, indeed, that God has] one modus agendi, or way of working in man, as in a rational creature, and another way of working in some other, irrational creature, or in a stone and block. Nevertheless, no modus agendi, or no way whatever of working something good in spiritual things, can be ascribed to man before his conversion.

But when man has been converted, and is thus enlightened, and his will is renewed, it is then that man wills what is good (so far as he is regenerate or a new man), and delights in the Law of God after the inward man, Rom. 7, 22, and henceforth does good to such an extent and as long as he is impelled by God's Spirit, as Paul says, Rom. 8, 14: For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. And this impulse of the Holy Ghost is not a coactio, or coercion, but the converted man does good spontaneously, as David says, Ps. 110, 4: Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power. And nevertheless that also [the strife of the flesh and spirit] remains in the regenerate of which St. Paul wrote, Rom. 7, 22 f.: For I delight in the Law of God after the inward man; but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in nich gefangen in der Sünde Geseß, welches ist in meinen Gliedern.“ Item: „So diene ich nun mit dem Gemüt dem Geseß Gottes, aber mit dem Fleisch dem Geseß der Sünde.“ Item Gal. 5: „Das Fleisch geküßet wider den Geist und den Geist wider das Fleisch; dieselbigen sind wider einander, daß ihr nicht tut, was ihr wollt.“

Daraus denn folgt, alsbald der Heilige Geist, wie gesagt, durchs Wort und [die] heiligen Sacramente solch sein Werk der Wiedergeburt und Erneuerung in uns angefangen hat, so ist es gewiß, daß wir durch die Kraft des Heiligen Geistes mitwirken können und sollen, wiewohl noch in großer Schwachheit; solches aber nicht aus unsern fleischlichen, natürlichen Kräften, sondern aus den neuen Kräften und Gaben, so der Heilige Geist in der Belehrung in uns angefangen hat; wie St. Paulus ausdrücklich und ernstlich vermahnt, daß wir „als Mitthelfer die Gnade Gottes nicht vergeblich empfangen“; welches denn anders nicht denn also soll verstanden werden, daß der belehrte Mensch so viel und lange Gutes tue, soviel und -lange ihn Gott mit seinem Heiligen Geist regiert, leitet und führt; und sobald Gott seine gnädige Hand von ihm abjoge, könnte er nicht einen Augenblick in Gottes Gehorsam bestehen [verharren]. Da es aber also wollte verstanden werden, daß der belehrte Mensch neben dem Heiligen Geist dergestalt mitwirkte, wie zwei Pferde miteinander einen Wagen ziehen, könnte solches ohne Nachteil der göttlichen Wahrheit keineswegs zugegeben werden.

una cum Spiritu Sancto eo modo cooperaretur, quemadmodum duq equi simul una currum trahunt, equidem hoc citra veritatis divinae iacturam concedi haudquaquam posset. (2 Cor. 6, 1: Συμμεροῦντες παρακαλοῦμεν. Nos, qui sumus administri seu cooperarii Dei, monemus vos, ut nostrum exemplum imitemini, qui estis arvom et aedificatio Dei, 1 Cor. 3, 9, ne gratia Dei in vobis sit inanis, 1 Cor. 15, 10, sed ut sitis templum Dei viventis et habitantis in vobis, 2 Cor. 6, 16.)

Darum ist ein großer Unterschied zwischen den getauften und ungetauften Menschen. Denn weil nach der Lehre St. Pauli, Gal. 3, „alle die, so getauft sind, Christum angezo-gen“ [haben] und also wahrhaftig wiedergeboren [sind], haben sie nun arbitrium liberatum, das ist, wie Christus sagt, sie sind wiederum freigemacht, der Ursache: denn sie nicht allein das Wort hören, sondern auch demselben, wiewohl in großer Schwachheit, Beifall tun und [es] annehmen können.

Denn weil wir in diesem Leben allein die Erstlinge des Geistes empfangen, und die Wiedergeburt nicht vollkommen, sondern in uns allein angefangen [ist], bleibt der Streit und Kampf des Fleisches wider den Geist auch in den Ausgewählten und wahrhaftig wiedergeborenen Menschen, da unter den Christen nicht allein ein großer Unterschied gespürt, daß einer schwach, der andere stark im Geist [ist], sondern es befindet's auch ein jeder Christ bei sich selbst, daß er zu einer Zeit freudig im Geist, zur andern Zeit furchtsam und erschrocken, zu einer Zeit brünstig in der Liebe, stark im Glauben und in der Hoffnung, zur andern Zeit kalt und schwach sich befindet.

Da aber [wenn aber] die Getauften wider das Gewissen gehandelt, die Sünde in ihnen [in sich] herrschen lassen und also den Heiligen Geist in ihnen selbst betrübt und verloren [haben], dürfen sie zwar nicht wieder getauft, sondern müssen wiederum belehrt werden, inmaßen hievor [wie vorhin] notdürftig vermeldet worden.

me in lege peccati, quae est in membris meis. Et ibidem, v. 25: Servio igitur mente legi Dei, carne vero legi peccati. Et ad Galatas, 5, 17, inquit: Caro concupiscit adversus spiritum, spiritus autem adversus carnem. Haec enim sibi invicem adversantur, ut non, quaecunque vultis, illa faciatis.

65) Ex his consequitur, quam primum Spiritus Sanctus (ut dictum est) per Verbum et sacramenta opus suum regenerationis et renovationis in nobis inchoavit, quod revera tunc per virtutem Spiritus Sancti cooperari possimus ac debeamus, quamvis multa adhuc infirmitas concurrat. Hoc vero ipsum, quod cooperamur, non ex nostris carnalibus et naturalibus viribus est, sed ex novis illis viribus et donis, quae Spiritus Sanctus in conver-

66) sione in nobis inchoavit. In quam sententiam divus Paulus expressis verbis graviter hortatur, ut curemus, ne tamquam Dei cooperarii frustra Dei gratiam acceperimus, 2 Cor. 6, 1. Quod tamen sic et non aliter intelligendum est: hominem iam conversum tantum atque tamdiu bene operari, quantum et quamdiu a Deo per Spiritum Sanctum ducitur, regitur et gubernatur. Quam primum enim Dominus clementem suam manum ab ipso retraheret, homo quidem ne ad minimum momentum [homo ne ad minimum momentum quidem] in obedientia divina perseverare posset. Si quis vero Pauli dictum in ea sententia accipere vellet, quasi homo conversus

67) Quapropter ingens discrimen est [R. 675 inter homines baptizatos et non baptizatos. Cum enim, iuxta Pauli doctrinam [Gal. 3, 27], omnes, qui baptizati sunt, Christum inducunt et revera sint renati, habent illi iam liberatum arbitrium, hoc est, rursus liberati sunt, ut Christus testatur [Ioh. 8, 36]. Unde etiam non modo Verbum Dei audiunt, verum etiam, licet non sine multa infirmitate, eidem assentiri illudque fide amplecti possunt.

68) Cum enim in hac vita tantum primitias Spiritus acceperimus, et regeneratio nondum sit absoluta, sed solummodo in nobis inchoata, manet perpetua quaedam lucta inter carnem et spiritum etiam in electis et vere renatis hominibus. Et quidem non modo inter Christianos magnum discrimenprehenditur, quorum hic infirmus, ille robustus est spiritu, verum etiam hanc diversitatem quilibet Christianus in semet ipso animadvertere potest, se nunc quidem excelso animo esse et ad omnia virtute spiritus paratum promptumque, nunc vero timido et trepido; et iam quidem caritate ardere, firmum in fide et spe esse, post vero frigere et imbecillitatem suam sentire.

69) Cum vero homines baptizati contra conscientiam aliquid patrarint et peccato in mortali suo corpore dominium concesserint atque ita Spiritum Sanctum in se ipsis contristarint et amiserint, non opus est quidem, ut rebaptizentur, necesse est autem, ut rursus convertantur, de qua re antea satis dictum est.

my members. Also, v. 25: So, then, with my mind I myself serve the Law of God, but with the flesh the law of sin. Also, Gal. 5, 17: For the flesh lusteth against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

From this, then, it follows that as soon as the Holy Ghost, as has been said, through the Word and holy Sacraments, has begun in us this His work of regeneration and renewal, it is certain that through the power of the Holy Ghost we can and should cooperate, although still in great weakness. But this [that we cooperate] does not occur from our carnal natural powers, but from the new powers and gifts which the Holy Ghost has begun in us in conversion, as St. Paul expressly and earnestly exhorts that as workers together with Him we receive not the grace of God in vain, 2 Cor. 6, 1. But this is to be understood in no other way than that the converted man does good to such an extent and so long as God by His Holy Spirit rules, guides, and leads him, and that as soon as God would withdraw His gracious hand from him, he could not for a moment persevere in obedience to God. But if this were understood thus [if any one would take the expression of St. Paul in this sense], that the converted man cooperates with the Holy Ghost in the manner as when two horses together draw a wagon, this could in no way be conceded without prejudice to the divine truth. (2 Cor. 6, 1: Συνεργοῦντες παρακαλοῦμεν: We who are servants or coworkers with God beseech you who are God's husbandry and God's building, 1 Cor. 3, 9, to imitate our example, that the grace of God may not be among you in vain, 1 Cor. 15, 10, but that ye may be the temple of God, living and dwelling in you, 2 Cor. 6, 16.)

Therefore there is a great difference between baptized and unbaptized men. For since, according to the doctrine of St. Paul, Gal. 3, 27, all who have been baptized have put on Christ, and thus are truly regenerate, they have now arbitrium liberatum (a liberated will), that is, as Christ says, they have been made free again, John 8, 36; whence they are able not only to hear the Word, but also to assent to it and accept it, although in great weakness.

For since we receive in this life only the first-fruits of the Spirit, and the new birth is not complete, but only begun in us, the combat and struggle of the flesh against the spirit remains even in the elect and truly regenerate men; for there is a great difference perceptible among Christians not only in this, that one is weak and another strong in the spirit, but each Christian, moreover, experiences in himself that at one time he is joyful in spirit, and at another fearful and alarmed; at one time ardent in love, strong in faith and hope, and at another cold and weak.

But when the baptized have acted against their conscience, allowed sin to rule in them, and thus have grieved and lost the Holy Ghost in them, they need not be rebaptized, but must be converted again, as has been sufficiently said before.

Denn das ist einmal wahr, daß in wahrhaftiger Belehrung müsse eine Änderung, neue Regung und Bewegung im Verstand, Willen und Herzen geschehen, daß nämlich das Herz die Sünde erkenne, vor Gottes Zorn sich fürchte, von der Sünde sich abwende, die Verheißung der Gnade in Christo erkenne und annehme, gute geistliche Gedanken, christlichen Voratz und Fleiß habe und wider das Fleisch streite. Denn wo der keines geschieht oder ist, da ist auch keine wahre Belehrung. Weil aber die Frage ist de causa efficiente, das ist, wer solches in uns wirke, und woher der Mensch das habe, und wie er dazu komme, so berichtet diese Lehre: diemeil die natürlichen Kräfte des Menschen dazu nichts tun oder helfen können, 1 Kor. 2; 2 Kor. 3, daß Gott aus unermeßlicher Güte und Barmherzigkeit uns zuvorkomme und sein heiliges Evangelium, dadurch der Heilige Geist solche Belehrung und Verneuerung in uns wirken und ausrichten will, predigen lasse und durch die Predigt und Betrachtung seines Wortes den Glauben und andere gottselige Tugenden in uns anzündet, daß es Gaben und Wirkungen des Heiligen Geistes allein seien; und weist uns diese Lehre zu den Mitteln, dadurch der Heilige Geist solches anfangen und wirken will, erinnert auch, wie dieselben Gaben erhalten, gestärkt und gemehrt werden, und vermahnt, daß wir dieselbe Gnade Gottes an uns nicht sollen lassen vergeblich sein, sondern fleißig üben, in Betrachtung, wie schwere Sünde es sei, solche Wirkung des Heiligen Geistes [zu] hindern und [ihr zu] widerstreben.

illam divinam non frustra acceperimus, sed ut illa illa sedulo exerceamus, cogitantes, quam grave sit peccatum, tales Spiritus Sancti operationes impedire aut illis resistere.

Aus dieser gründlichen Erklärung der ganzen Lehre vom freien Willen können nun auch zum letzten die eingefallenen Fragen, darüber nun etliche viel Jahre in den Kirchen Augsburger Konfession gestritten worden (An homo ante, in, post conversionem Spiritui Sancto repugnet, vel pure passive se habeat; an homo convertatur ut truncus; an Spiritus Sanctus detur repugnantibus, et an conversio hominis fiat per modum coactionis; das ist: ob der Mensch vor, in oder nach seiner Belehrung dem Heiligen Geist widerstrebe, und ob er ganz und gar nichts tue, sondern allein leide, was Gott in ihm wirkt; item, ob der Mensch in der Belehrung sich halte und sei wie ein Blod; item, ob der Heilige Geist gegeben werde denen, die ihm widerstreben; item, ob die Belehrung geschehe durch einen Zwang, daß Gott die Menschen wider ihren Willen zu ihrer Belehrung mit Gewalt zwingt), beurteilt [und] die Gegenlehre und Irrtümer erkannt, ausgesetzt, gestraft und verworfen werden, als:

1. Erstlich der Stoicorum und Manichäer Unfinnigkeit, daß alles, was geschieht, müsse also geschehen, et hominem coactum omnia facere, daß ist, daß der Mensch alles aus Zwang tue, und daß des Menschen Wille auch in äußerlichen Werken keine Freiheit oder Vermögen habe, äußerliche Gerechtigkeit und ehrlüche Zucht etlichermaßen zu leisten und die äußerlichen Sünden und Laster zu meiden, oder daß der [des] Menschen Wille zu bösen äußerlichen Taten, Unzucht, Raub und Mord usw., gezwungen werde.

2. Danach der groben Pelagianer Irrtum, daß der freie Wille aus eigenen natürlichen Kräften, ohne den Heiligen Geist, sich selbst zu Gott be-

70] Hoc enim certissimum est in vera conversione immutationem, renovationem et motum fieri oportere in hominis intellectu, voluntate et corde, ut nimirum hominis mens peccata agnoscat, iram Dei metuat, a peccato sese avertat, promissionem gratiae in [R. 676] Christo agnoscat et apprehendat, pias cogitationes animo agitet, bonum propositum habeat atque diligentiam in moribus suis regendis adhibeat et contra carnem pugnet. Ubi enim nihil horum sit, ibi procul dubio etiam non 71] est vera ad Deum conversio. Cum autem quaestio sit de causa efficiente, hoc est, quoniam haec in nobis operetur, unde homo hoc ipsum habeat, et quomodo id consequi possit, haec pia doctrina ostendit horum bonorum fontem, hoc videlicet modo: Cum naturales hominis vires ad veram conversionem nihil conferre aut quidquam adiumenti afferre possint, 1 Cor. 2; 2 Cor. 3, Deus ineffabili bonitate et misericordia nos praevenerit et evangelion (per quod Spiritus Sanctus conversionem et renovationem in nobis operari et perficere vult) annuntiari curat et per Verbi sui praedicationem et meditationem fidem aliasque pietatis virtutes in nobis accendit, ita quidem, ut haec omnia solius Spiritus Sancti 72] dona sint atque operationes. Quin etiam haec sincera doctrina ostendit nobis media, per quae Spiritus Sanctus haec, quae diximus, in nobis vult inchoare et efficere, et monet, quomodo haec dona conserventur, confirmentur et augeantur, et hortatur, ut gratiam

73] Ex hac solida totius doctrinae de libero arbitrio explicatione de quaestionibus illis, quae iam multis annis in ecclesiis Augustanae Confessionis agitatae sunt, iudicari potest. Verbi gratia, quod quaesitum fuit: An homo ante, in vel post conversionem Spiritui Sancto repugnet, vel pure passive se habeat; an homo convertatur ut truncus; an Spiritus Sanctus detur repugnantibus, et an conversio hominis fiat per modum coactionis. Haec atque huiusmodi multa iuxta recitatam piam nostram de hoc articulo doctrinam facile diiudicari et contraria falsa dogmata [R. 677] et errores agnosci, redargui atque reiici possunt, ut sunt:

74] I. Primo Stoicorum et Manichaeorum furores, qui asseruerunt, omnia, quae sunt, necessario fieri, et quidem eo, quo fiunt, et non alio modo, et hominem coactum omnia facere, et quod hominis voluntas etiam in externis operibus nullam omnino libertatem aut facultatem (ad externam civilem iustitiam et disciplinam honestam aliquo modo praestandam et ad vitanda externa peccata et flagitia) habeat, aut quod hominis voluntas ad externa scelera, libidines, rapinas, caedes etc., violenter cogatur.

75] II. Deinde crassus ille Pelagianorum error, quod liberum arbitrium ex propriis naturalibus viribus sine Spiritu Sancto sese

For this is certainly true that in genuine conversion a change, new emotion [renewal], and movement in the intellect, will, and heart must take place, namely, that the heart perceive sin, dread God's wrath, turn from sin, perceive and accept the promise of grace in Christ, have good spiritual thoughts, a Christian purpose and diligence, and strive against the flesh. For where none of these occurs or is present, there is also no true conversion. But since the question is de causa efficiente (concerning the efficient cause), that is, who works this in us, and whence man has this, and how he attains it, this doctrine informs us that, since the natural powers of man cannot do anything or help towards it, 1 Cor. 2, 14; 2 Cor. 3, 5, God, out of His infinite goodness and mercy, comes first to us [precedes us], and causes His holy Gospel to be preached, whereby the Holy Ghost desires to work and accomplish in us this conversion and renewal, and through preaching and meditation upon His Word kindles in us faith and other godly virtues, so that they are gifts and operations of the Holy Ghost alone. This doctrine, therefore, directs us to the means whereby the Holy Ghost desires to begin and work this [which we have mentioned], also instructs us how those gifts are preserved, strengthened, and increased, and admonishes us that we should not let this grace of God be bestowed on us in vain, but diligently exercise it [those gifts], and ponder how grievous a sin it is to hinder and resist such operations of the Holy Ghost.

From this thorough explanation of the entire doctrine concerning free will we can now judge, lastly, also the questions upon which, for quite a number of years, there has been controversy in the churches of the Augsburg Confession (An homo ante, in, post conversionem Spiritui Sancto repugnet, vel pure passive se habeat; an homo convertatur ut truncus; an Spiritus Sanctus detur repugnantibus, et an conversio hominis fiat per modum coactionis; that is, Whether man before, in, or after his conversion resists the Holy Ghost, and whether he does nothing whatever, but only suffers what God works in him [or is purely passive]; likewise, whether in conversion man acts and is like a block; likewise, whether the Holy Ghost is given to those who resist Him; likewise, whether conversion occurs by coercion, so that God coerces men to conversion by force against their wills), and can perceive, expose, censure, and reject the opposite dogmas and errors, namely:

1. First, the folly of the Stoics and Manicheans [who asserted] that everything that happens must so happen, et hominem coactum omnia facere, that is, that man does everything from coercion, and that even in outward works the will of man has no freedom or ability to render to a certain extent external righteousness and respectable deportment, and to avoid external sins and vices, or that the will of man is coerced to external wicked deeds, in chastity, robbery, murder, etc.

2. Secondly, the error of the gross Pelagians, that the free will, from its own natural lehren, dem Evangelio glauben und Gottes Befehl mit [dem] Herzen gehorham sein und mit diesem seinem freiwilligen Gehorsam Vergebung der Sünden und ewiges Leben verdienen könne.

3. Zum dritten der Papisten und Schullehrer [Scholastiker] Irrtum, die es ein wenig subtiler gemacht und gelehrt haben, daß der Mensch aus seinen natürlichen Kräften könne den Anfang zum Guten und zu seiner selbst Belehrung machen, und daß alsdann der Heilige Geist, weil der Mensch zum Vollbringen zu schwach [sei], dem aus eigenen natürlichen Kräften angefangenen Guten zu Hülfe komme.

4. Zum vierten der Synergisten Lehre, welche vorgeben, daß der Mensch nicht allerdings in geistlichen Sachen zum Guten erstorben, sondern übel verwundet und halb tot [sei]. Deshalb, obwohl der freie Wille zu schwach sei, den Anfang zu machen und sich selbst aus eigenen Kräften zu Gott zu bekehren und dem Befehl Gottes mit [dem] Herzen gehorham zu sein, dennoch, wenn der Heilige Geist den Anfang macht und uns durch das Evangelium beruft und seine Gnade, Vergebung der Sünden und ewige Seligkeit anbietet, daß alsdann der freie Wille aus seinen eigenen natürlichen Kräften Gott begegnen und etlichermaßen etwas, wiewohl wenig und schwächlich, dazu tun, helfen und mitwirken, sich zur Gnade Gottes schiden und applizieren und dieselbe ergreifen, annehmen und dem Evangelio glauben, auch in [der] Fortsetzung und Erhaltung dieses Werks aus seinen eigenen Kräften neben dem Heiligen Geist mitwirken könne.

Dagegen aber ist oben nach der Länge erwiesen, daß solche Kraft, nämlich facultas applicandi se ad gratiam, das ist, natürlich sich zur Gnade zu schiden, nicht aus unsern eigenen natürlichen Kräften, sondern allein durch des Heiligen Geistes Wirkung herkomme.

5. Item, diese der Päpste und Mönche Lehren, daß der Mensch könne nach der Wiedergeburt das Befehl Gottes in diesem Leben gänzlich erfüllen und durch diese Erfüllung des Befehls vor Gott gerecht sei und das ewige Leben verdiene.

6. Dagegen sind auch mit allem Ernst und Eifer die Enthufiasten zu strafen und keineswegs in der Kirche Gottes zu dulden, welche dichten [wähnen], daß Gott ohne alle Mittel, ohne Gehör des göttlichen Wortes und ohne Gebrauch der heiligen Sacramente, den Menschen zu sich ziehe, erleuchte, gerecht und selig mache.

7. Item, die da dichten, daß Gott in der Belehrung und Wiedergeburt ein neues Herz und neuen Menschen also schaffe, daß des alten Adams Substanz und Wesen und sonderlich die vernünftige Seele ganz vertilgt, und ein neues Wesen der Seele aus nichts erschaffen werde. Diesen Irrtum straft St. Augustinus ausdrücklich im 25. Psalm, da er den Spruch Pauli: Deponite veterem hominem, „Leget den alten Menschen ab“ usw., anzeigt [anzeigt] und erklärt mit diesen Worten: Ne aliquis arbitretur, deponendam esse aliquam substantiam, exposuit, quid esset: Deponite veterem hominem et induite novum, cum dicit in consequentibus: quapropter deponentes mendacium, loquimini veritatem. Ecce, hoc est deponere veterem hominem et induere novum etc. Das ist: „Damit nicht jemand das fürhalten möchte, als müßte die Substanz oder ad Deum convertere, evangelio credere, legem Dei etiam toto corde implere atque hac libera et spontanea sua obedientia remissionem peccatorum et vitam aeternam promereri possit.

76) III. Postea Papistarum et Scholasticorum error, qui aliquanto subtilius falsam opinionem suam proposuerunt et docuerunt, quod homo naturalibus suis viribus initium ad agendum bonum et ad conversionem suam facere possit, sed quia infirmior sit, quam ut bene coepta perficere queat, quod Spiritus Sanctus illa, quae naturalibus propriis viribus inchoata erant, adiuvet et absolvat.

77) IV. Item, Synergistarum dogma, qui fingunt, hominem in rebus spiritualibus non prorsus ad bonum esse mortuum, sed tantum graviter vulneratum et semimortuum esse. Et quamvis liberum arbitrium infirmius sit, quam ut initium facere et se ipsum propriis viribus ad Deum convertere et legi Dei toto corde obedire possit, tamen, si Spiritus [R. 678] Sanctus initium faciat et nos per evangelion vocet, gratiam suam, remissionem peccatorum et aeternam salutem nobis offerat, tunc liberum arbitrium propriis suis naturalibus viribus Deo occurrere et aliquo modo (aliquid saltem, etiam parum et languide) ad conversionem suam conferre, eam adjuvare, cooperari, sese ad gratiam praeparare et applicare, eam apprehendere, amplecti, evangelio credere et quidem in continuatione et conservatione huius operis propriis suis viribus una cum Spiritu Sancto cooperari posse.

78) Contra hunc errorem supra luculenter demonstratum est, quod facultas applicandi se ad gratiam non ex nostris naturalibus propriis viribus, sed ex sola Spiritus Sancti operatione promanet.

79) V. Item Pontificum et Monachorum doctrina, quod homo, postquam regeneratus est, legem Dei in hac vita perfecte implere possit, et quod per hanc impletionem legis coram Deo iustificetur et vitam aeternam promeretur.

80) VI. Ab altera parte magna severitate et pio zelo redarguendi sunt Enthufiastae neque in ecclesia Dei ferendi, qui somniant, Deum sine omnibus mediis, sine auditione Verbi divini et sine usu sacramentorum, hominem ad se trahere, illuminare, iustificare et salvum facere.

81) VII. Item qui fingunt, Deum in conversione et regeneratione novum cor, atque adeo novum hominem ita creare, ut veteris Adami substantia et essentia (praesertim vero anima rationalis) penitus aboleatur, et nova animae essentia ex nihilo creetur. Hunc errorem expresse refutat divus Augustinus in explicatione psalmi vigesimi quinti, quo loco dictum Pauli [Eph. 4, 22]: Deponite veterem hominem etc., assert et interpretatur hisce verbis: Ne aliquis arbitretur, deponendam [R. 679] esse aliquam substantiam, exposuit, quid esset: Deponite veterem hominem et induite novum etc., cum dicit in consequentibus: quapropter deponentes mendacium, loquimini veritatem. Ecce, hoc est deponere veterem hominem et induere novum.

powers, without the Holy Ghost, can turn to God, believe the Gospel, and be obedient to God's Law from the heart, and by this its voluntary obedience can merit the forgiveness of sins and eternal life.

3. Thirdly, the error of the Papists and scholastics, who have proceeded in a somewhat more subtle manner, and have taught that man from his own natural powers can make a beginning of doing good and of his own conversion, and that then the Holy Ghost, because man is too weak to bring it to completion, comes to the aid of the good begun from a person's own natural powers.

4. Fourthly, the doctrine of the Synergists, who pretend that man is not absolutely dead to good in spiritual things, but is badly wounded and half dead. Therefore, although the free will is too weak to make a beginning, and to convert itself to God by its own powers, and to be obedient to God's Law from the heart, nevertheless, when the Holy Ghost makes a beginning, and calls us through the Gospel, and offers His grace, the forgiveness of sins, and eternal salvation, that then the free will, from its own natural powers, can meet God, and to a certain extent, although feebly, do something towards it, help and co-operate thereto, can qualify itself for, and apply itself to, grace, and apprehend, accept it, and believe the Gospel, and can also co-operate, by its own powers, with the Holy Ghost, in the continuation and maintenance of this work.

Over against this, however, it has been shown at length above that such power, namely, facultas applicandi se ad gratiam, that is, to qualify one's self by nature for grace, does not proceed from our own natural powers, but alone from the operation of the Holy Ghost.

5. Likewise, the following doctrine of the Popes and monks, that after his regeneration man can completely fulfil the Law of God in this life, and that through this fulfilment of the Law he is righteous before God and merits eternal life.

6. On the other hand, the enthusiasts should be rebuked with great earnestness and zeal, and should in no way be tolerated in the Church of God, who imagine [dream] that God, without any means, without the hearing of the divine Word, and without the use of the holy Sacraments, draws men to Himself, and enlightens, justifies, and saves them.

7. Also those who imagine that in conversion and regeneration God creates a new heart and new man in such a way that the substance and essence of the old Adam, and especially the rational soul, are completely destroyed, and a new essence of the soul is created out of nothing. This error St. Augustine expressly rebukes in [his exposition of] Psalm 25, where he quotes the passage from Paul, Eph. 4, 22: Put off the old man, etc., and explains it in the following words: Ne aliquis arbitretur deponendam esse aliquam substantiam, exposuit, quid esset: „Deponite veterem hominem et induite novum“, cum dicit in consequentibus: „Quapropter deponentes mendacium, loquimini veritatem.“ Ecce, hoc est deponere veterem hominem et induere novum etc.; that is, Lest any one might think that the substance or essence of man is to be laid aside, he has himself explained what it is to lay aside the old man, and to put on the new, when he

Wesen des Menschen abgelegt werden, hat er selbst erklärt, was da sei, den alten Menschen ablegen und den neuen anziehen, da er in nachfolgenden Worten sagt: „Darum leget ab die Lügen und redet die Wahrheit.“ Siehe, das ist den alten Menschen ablegen und den neuen anziehen.“

8. Item, wo diese Reden unerklärt gebraucht werden, daß des Menschen Wille vor, in und nach der Befehlung dem Heiligen Geiste widerstrebe, und daß der Heilige Geist werde gegeben denen, so ihm widerstreben.

Denn aus vorgehender Erklärung ist öffentlich, wo durch den Heiligen Geist gar keine Veränderung zum Guten im Verstande, Willen und Herzen geschieht, und der Mensch der Verheißung ganz nicht glaubt und von Gott zur Gnade nicht geschickt gemacht wird, sondern ganz und gar dem Wort widerstrebt, daß da keine Befehlung geschehe oder sein könne. Denn die Befehlung ist eine solche Veränderung durch des Heiligen Geistes Wirkung in des Menschen Verstand, Willen und Herzen, daß der Mensch durch solche Wirkung des Heiligen Geistes könne die angebotene Gnade annehmen. Und zwar alle die, so des Heiligen Geistes Wirkungen und Bewegungen, die durchs Wort geschehen, widerspenstig, verhartlich widerstreben, die empfangen nicht, sondern betrüben und verlieren den Heiligen Geist.

Nun bleibt gleichwohl auch in den Wiedergeborenen eine Widerspenstigkeit, davon die Schrift meldet, daß „das Fleisch geküßet wider den Geist“, item, „die fleischlichen Lüste wider die Seele streiten“, und daß „das Gesetz in den Gliedern widerstrebe dem Gesetz im Gemüte“, Röm. 7.

Derhalben der Mensch, so nicht wiedergeboren ist, Gott gänzlich widerstrebt und ist ganz und gar ein Knecht der Sünde. Der Wiedergeborene aber hat Lust an Gottes Gesetz nach dem inwendigen Menschen, steht aber gleichwohl in seinen Gliedern der Sünde Gesetz, welches widerstrebt dem Gesetz im Gemüte; derhalben so dient er mit dem Gemüte dem Gesetz Gottes, aber mit dem Fleische dem Gesetz der Sünde, Röm. 7. Auf solche Weise kann und soll die rechte Meinung gründlich, deutlich und bescheidentlich [vorsichtig und auf verständige Weise] erklärt und gelehrt werden.

Was [so] dann belangt die Reden Chrysostomi und Basilii: Trahit Deus, sed volentem trahit; tantum velis, et Deus praeoccurret; item der Schullehrer Rede: Hominis voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid, das ist: „Gott zeucht [zieht], er zeucht aber den, der da will“; item: „Wolle allein, so wird dir Gott [zu-]vorkommen“; item: „Des Menschen Wille ist nicht müßig in der Befehlung, sondern wirkt etwas“, welche Reden zur Bestätigung des natürlichen freien Willens in der Befehlung des Menschen wider die Lehre von der Gnade Gottes eingeführt [worden]: ist aus hievor gesetzter Erklärung offenbar, daß sie der Form gesunder Lehre nicht ähnlich, sondern derselben zuwider und demnach, wenn von der Befehlung zu Gott geredet [wird], billig zu meiden [sind].

Denn die Befehlung unsers verderbten Willens, welche anders nichts denn eine Erweckung desselben von dem geistlichen Tode [ist], ist einig

82) VIII. Repudiamus etiam sequentes loquendi formas, si quis iis citra declarationem utatur: quod hominis voluntas ante conversionem, in ipsa conversione et post conversionem Spiritui Sancto repugnet, et quod Spiritus Sanctus detur ipsi repugnantibus.

83) Ex ea enim, quam paulo ante recitavimus, explicatione manifestum est, ubi per Spiritum Sanctum in hominis intellectu, voluntate et corde prorsus nulla fit immutatio ad bonum, et homo promissioni divinae fidem prorsus non adhibet et a Deo ad gratiam non redditur idoneus, sed totus Verbo Dei repugnat, quod ibi nulla conversio vel fieri vel esse possit. Conversio enim hominis talis est immutatio per operationem Spiritus Sancti in hominis intellectu, voluntate et corde, qua homo (operatione videlicet Spiritus Sancti) potest oblatam gratiam apprehendere. Et quidem omnes illi, qui operationi et motibus Spiritus Sancti (quae per Verbum fiunt) contumaciter et perseveranter repugnant, non accipiunt, sed contristant et amittunt Spiritum Sanctum.

84) Manet quidem etiam in renatis rebellio quaedam, cuius Scriptura mentionem facit, quod nimirum caro concupiscit adversus spiritum, Gal. 5, 17, quod carnales concupiscentiae adversus animam militant, 1 Petr. 2, 11, et quod lex illa in membris legi mentis repugnat, Rom. 7, 23.

85) Homo autem non renatus Deo prorsus rebellis est et totus est servus peccati, Ioh. 8, 34; Rom. 6, 16. Renatus vero delectatur lege Dei secundum interiorem hominem. Videt autem nihilominus in membris suis legem peccati, quae legi mentis repugnat. Quare [R. 680] mente quidem servit legi Dei, carne vero legi peccati, Rom. 7, 25. Ad hunc modum vera de hoc negotio sententia solide, perspicue et dextre declaranda et docenda est.

86) Quod vero attinet ad phrases et dicta Chrysostomi et Basilii: Trahit Deus, sed volentem trahit; tantum velis, et Deus praeoccurret; item Scholasticorum et Pontificiorum: Hominis voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid etc., quia dicta illa pro confirmando naturali libero arbitrio in conversione hominis, contra doctrinam gratiae Dei introducta sunt: ex proposita declaratione manifeste apparet formae sanorum verborum ea non esse analogae, sed cum illa pugnare et idcirco, cum de conversione ad Deum agitur, merito vitanda esse. [Chrysostomus, Hom. 6. de laudibus Pauli Apostoli: „Deus nolentes non cogit, sed volentes trahit.“ Hom. 4: „Non enim Deus homines cogit vocando, sed post vocationem quoque permittit eos propriarum esse dominos voluntatum.“ Basiliius Magnus, Sermo de libero arbitrio: „Tantum velis, et Deus praeoccurret.“]

87) Conversio enim voluntatis nostrae depravatae (quae revera nihil aliud est quam eiusdem resuscitatio a spirituali morte) says in the succeeding words: "Putting away lying, speak the truth." Behold, that is to put off the old man and to put on the new.

8. Likewise, if the following expressions are used without being explained, namely, that the will of man before, in, and after conversion resists the Holy Ghost, and that the Holy Ghost is given to those who resist Him.

For from the preceding explanation it is manifest that where no change whatever in intellect, will, and heart occurs through the Holy Ghost to that which is good, and man does not at all believe the promise, and is not rendered fit by God for grace, but entirely resists the Word, there no conversion takes place or can be. For conversion is such a change through the operation of the Holy Ghost in the intellect, will, and heart of man that by this operation of the Holy Ghost man can accept the offered grace. And, indeed, all those who obstinately and persistently resist the operations and movements of the Holy Ghost, which take place through the Word, do not receive, but grieve and lose, the Holy Ghost.

Now, there remains, nevertheless, also in the regenerate, an obstinacy [a certain rebelliousness] of which the Scriptures speak, namely, that the flesh lusteth against the spirit, Gal. 5, 17, likewise, that fleshly lusts war against the soul, 1 Pet. 2, 11, and that the law in the members wars against the law of the mind, Rom. 7, 23.

Accordingly, the man who is not regenerate resists God altogether, and is entirely a servant of sin, John 8, 34; Rom. 6, 16. The regenerate person, however, delights in the Law of God after the inward man, but nevertheless sees in his members the law of sin, which wars against the law of the mind; on this account he serves the Law of God with his mind, but with the flesh the law of sin, Rom. 7, 25. In this way the correct opinion can and should be thoroughly, clearly, and discreetly explained and taught.

As to the expressions of Chrysostom and Basil: Trahit Deus, sed volentem trahit; tantum velis, et Deus praeoccurret, likewise, the saying of the Scholastics [and Papists], Homini voluntas in conversione non est otiosa, sed agit aliquid, that is, God draws, but He draws the willing; likewise: Only he willing, and God will anticipate you; likewise: In conversion the will of man is not idle, but effects something (expressions which have been introduced for confirming the natural free will in man's conversion, against the doctrine concerning God's grace), it is manifest from the explanation heretofore presented that they are not in harmony with the form of sound doctrine, but contrary to it, and therefore ought to be avoided when we speak of conversion to God.

For the conversion of our corrupt will, which is nothing else than a resurrection of und allein Gottes Werk (wie auch die Auferweckung in der leiblichen Auferstehung des Fleisches allein Gott zugeschrieben werden soll), inmaßen droben ausführlich angezeigt und mit offenkundigen Zeugnissen der Heiligen Schrift erwiesen worden.

Wie aber Gott in der Belehrung aus Widerstehenden und Unwilligen durch das Ziehen des Heiligen Geistes Willige mache, und daß nach solcher Belehrung des Menschen wiedergeborener Wille in täglicher Übung der Buße nicht müßig gehe, sondern in allen Werken des Heiligen Geistes, die er durch uns tut, auch mitwirkt, ist droben gnugsam erklärt worden.

Also auch, wenn Lutherus spricht, daß sich der Mensch zu seiner Belehrung pure passive [ber-] halte, daß ist, ganz und gar nichts dazu tue, sondern nur leide, was Gott in ihm wirkt, ist seine Meinung nicht, daß die Belehrung geschehe ohne die Predigt und Gehör des göttlichen Wortes, ist auch die Meinung nicht, daß in der Belehrung vom Heiligen Geist gar keine neue Bewegung in uns erweckt und keine geistliche Wirkung angefangen werden; sondern er meint, daß der Mensch von sich selbst oder aus seinen natürlichen Kräften nichts vermöge oder helfen könne zu seiner Belehrung, und daß die Belehrung nicht allein zum Teil, sondern ganz und gar sei eine Wirkung, Gabe und Geschenk und Werk des Heiligen Geistes allein, der sie durch seine Kraft und Macht, durchs Wort, im Verstand, Willen und Herzen des Menschen, tamquam in subiecto patiente, daß ist, da der Mensch nichts tut oder wirkt, sondern nur leidet, ausrichte und wirke; nicht als ein Bild in einen Stein gehauen oder ein Siegel ins Wachs, welches nichts drum weiß, solches auch nicht empfindet noch will, gedrückt wird, sondern also und auf die Weise, wie kurz zuvor erzählt und erklärt ist.

Weil auch in den Schulen die Jugend de tribus causis efficientibus, concurrentibus in conversione hominis non renati, daß ist, mit der Lehre von den drei wirklichen [bewirkenden] Ursachen der Belehrung des unwiedergeborenen Menschen zu Gott, heftig irregemacht worden, welchergestalt dieselben (nämlich das gepredigte und gehörte Wort Gottes, der Heilige Geist und des Menschen Wille) zusammenkommen, ist abermals aus hierbo gesetzter Erklärung offenbar, daß die Belehrung zu Gott allein Gottes des Heiligen Geistes Werk sei, welcher der rechte Meister ist, der allein solches in uns wirkt, dazu er die Predigt und das Gehör seines heiligen Wortes als sein ordentlich Mittel und Werkzeug gebraucht. Des unwiedergeborenen Menschen Verstand aber und Wille ist anders nichts denn allein subiectum convertendum, daß ist, der belehrt werden soll, als eines geistlich toten Menschen Verstand und Wille, in dem der Heilige Geist die Belehrung und Erneuerung wirkt, zu welchem Werk des Menschen Wille, so belehrt soll werden, nichts tut, sondern läßt allein Gott in ihm wirken, bis er wiedergeboren und alsdann auch mit dem Heiligen Geist in andern nachfolgenden guten Werken wirkt, was Gott gefällig ist, auf Welche und Maß, wie droben ausführlich erklärt worden.

omnino solius Dei opus est, sicut etiam resuscitatio in corporali carnis resurrectione soli Deo est tribuenda, quemadmodum supra perspicue id explicatum et solidis Scripturae Sacrae testimoniis demonstratum est.

88) Quomodo vero Dominus in conversione ex rebellibus et nolentibus hominibus per Spiritus Sancti tractum volentes et promptos faciat, et quod post hominis conversionem voluntas iam renata in quotidianis poenitentiae exercitiis non sit otiosa, sed in omnibus operibus Spiritus Sancti (quae ille per nos efficit) cooperetur, supra satis perspicue est declaratum.

89) Et quando D. Lutherus affirmat, hominem in conversione sua pure passive esse habere, id est, plane nihil agere, sed tantummodo pati id, quod Deus in ipso agit, certe non sentit, quod conversio absque praedicatione et auditione Verbi Dei fiat, neque haec ita accipi voluit, quasi in conversione per Spiritum Sanctum prorsus nulli novi [R. 681] motus in nobis excitetur, neque ulla spiritalis operatio in nobis inchoetur. Sed hoc voluit D. Lutherus, hominem ex se ipso aut naturalibus suis viribus non posse aliquid conferre, vel adiumentum afferre ad suam conversionem, et hominis conversionem non tantum ex parte, sed totam prorsus esse operationem, donum et opus solius Spiritus Sancti, qui eam virtute et potentia sua, per Verbum (in intellectu, corde et voluntate hominis, tamquam in subiecto patiente, ubi homo nihil agit aut operatur, sed tantum patitur) efficiat atque operetur. Quod tamen non eo modo fit, quasi cum statua e lapide formatur, aut sigillum in ceram imprimitur, quae cera neque notitiam neque sensum neque voluntatem habet, sed eo modo hominis immutationem et renovationem fieri credimus, quem satis luculenter supra explicuimus.

90) Quandoquidem enim iuventus in scholis doctrina illa de tribus causis efficientibus, concurrentibus in conversione hominis non renati, vehementer perturbata est, dum disputatum fuit, quomodo illae (Verbum videlicet praedicatum et auditum, Spiritus Sanctus et hominis voluntas) concurrant, denuo repetitum volumus ex supra posita explicatione, quod conversio ad Deum sit solius Spiritus Sancti opus, qui solus est egregius ille artifex haec in nobis efficiens; interim tamen praedicatione et auditu sancti Verbi sui (tamquam ordinario et legitimo medio seu instrumento suo) utitur. Hominis autem nondum renati intellectus et voluntas tantum sunt subiectum convertendum, sunt enim hominis spiritualiter mortui intellectus et voluntas, in quo homine Spiritus Sanctus conversionem et renovationem operatur, ad quod opus hominis [R. 682] convertendi voluntas nihil confert, sed patitur, ut Deus in ipsa operetur, donec regeneretur. Postea vero in aliis sequentibus bonis operibus Spiritui Sancto cooperatur, ea faciens, quae Deo grata sunt, eo modo, qui iam a nobis in hoc scripto abunde satis est declaratus.

it from spiritual death, is only and solely the work of God (just as also the resuscitation in the resurrection of the body must be ascribed to God alone), as has been fully set forth above and proved by manifest testimonies of Holy Scripture.

But how God in conversion changes stubborn and unwilling into willing men through the drawing of the Holy Ghost, and that after such conversion, in the daily exercise of repentance, the regenerate will of man is not idle, but also cooperates in all the works of the Holy Ghost which He does through us, has already been sufficiently explained above.

So also when Luther says that with respect to his conversion man is pure passive (purely passive), that is, does nothing whatever towards it, but only suffers what God works in him, his meaning is not that conversion takes place without the preaching and hearing of God's Word; nor is this his meaning, that in conversion no new emotion whatever is awakened in us by the Holy Ghost and no spiritual operation begun; but he means that man of himself, or from his natural powers, cannot do anything or help towards his conversion, and that conversion is not only in part, but altogether an operation, gift, and present, and work of the Holy Ghost alone, who accomplishes and effects it by His power and might, through the Word, in the intellect, will, and heart of man, tamquam in subiecto patiente, that is, while man does or works nothing, but only suffers; not as a figure is cut into stone or a seal impressed into wax, which knows nothing of it, neither perceives and wills this, but in the way which has been recounted and explained a short while ago.

Since also the youths in the schools have been greatly perplexed de tribus causis efficientibus, concurrentibus in conversione hominis non renati, that is, by the doctrine of the three efficient causes of the conversion of unregenerate man to God, as to the manner in which they, namely, the Word of God preached and heard, the Holy Ghost, and the will of man, concur, it is again manifest from the explanation above presented that conversion to God is a work of God the Holy Ghost alone, who is the true Master that alone works this in us, for which He uses the preaching and hearing of His Holy Word as His ordinary [and lawful] means and instrument. But the intellect and will of the unregenerate man are nothing else than subiectum convertendum, that is, that which is to be converted, it being the intellect and will of a spiritually dead man, in whom the Holy Ghost works conversion and renewal, towards which work man's will that is to be converted does nothing, but suffers God alone to work in him, until he is regenerate; and then he works also with the Holy Ghost [cooperates] that which is pleasing to God in other good works that follow, in the way and to the extent fully set forth above.

III.

Von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott.

Die dritte [der dritte] Zwiespalt, unter etlichen Theologen der Augsburgerischen Konfession entstanden, ist von der Gerechtigkeit Christi oder des Glaubens, die von Gott durch den Glauben den armen Sündern aus Gnaden zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet wird.

Denn ein Teil hat gestritten, daß die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens, welche der Apostel die Gerechtigkeit Gottes nennt, sei die wesentliche Gerechtigkeit Gottes, welche Christus als der wahrhaftige, natürliche, wesentliche Sohn Gottes selbst sei, der durch den Glauben in den Auserwählten wohne und sie treibe, recht zu tun, und also ihre Gerechtigkeit sei, gegen welcher [gegen welche] Gerechtigkeit aller Menschen Sünde sei wie ein Tropfen Wasser gegen dem großen [gegen das große] Meer.

Dagegen haben etliche gehalten und gelehrt, daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei allein nach seiner menschlichen Natur.

Wider welche beide Teile einhellig von den andern Lehrern der Augsburgerischen Konfession gepredigt [worden], daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit nicht allein nach der göttlichen Natur, auch nicht allein nach der menschlichen Natur, sondern nach beiden Naturen sei, welcher, als Gott und Mensch, uns von unsern Sünden durch seinen vollkommenen Gehorsam erlöst, gerecht und selig gemacht hat, daß also die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens sei Vergebung der Sünden, Versöhnung mit Gott, und daß wir zu Kindern Gottes angenommen werden um des einigen Gehorsams Christi willen, welcher allein durch den Glauben, aus lauter Gnade, allen Rechtgläubigen [wahrhaft Gläubigen] zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet [wird], und sie um desselben willen von aller ihrer Ungerechtigkeit absolviert werden.

Über das sind aus dem Interim und sonst andere mehr Disputationes von dem Artikel der Rechtfertigung verursacht und erregt, die hernach in antithesi, das ist, in Erzählung derjenigen [Irrtümer], so der reinen Lehre in diesem Artikel zuwider, sollen erklärt werden.

Dieser Artikel von der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens (wie die Apologia sagt) ist der vornehmste der ganzen christlichen Lehre, ohne welchen kein arm Gewissen einigen beständigen [zuverlässigen, gewissen] Trost haben oder den Reichtum der Gnade Christi recht erkennen mag [kann]; wie auch D. Luther geschrieben: „Wo dieser einige Artikel rein auf dem Plan bleibt, so bleibt die Christenheit auch rein und sein einträchtig und ohne alle Kotten; wo er aber nicht rein bleibt, da ist's nicht möglich, daß man einigem Irrtum der Kottengeist wehren möge.“ (Tom. 5, Ienens., p. 159.) Und von diesem Artikel sagt Paulus insonderheit, daß „ein wenig Sauerteig den ganzen Teig versäuert“. Darum er die particulas exclusivas, das ist, die Worte, nämlich: „ohne Gesetz, ohne Werke, aus Gnaden“, dadurch die Werke der Menschen ausgeschloffen [werden], in diesem Artikel mit so großem Eifer und Ernst treibt, damit anzuzeigen, wie hoch es vonnöten sei, daß in diesem Artikel neben reiner Lehre die antithesis,

III.

DE IUSTITIA FIDEI CORAM DEO.

1) Tertia controversia inter theologos quosdam Augustanae Confessionis orta est de iustitia Christi seu iustitia fidei, quae a Deo per fidem miseris peccatoribus ad iustitiam ex gratia imputatur.

2) Alii contenderunt, iustitiam fidei (quam apostolus iustitiam Dei appellat) esse iustitiam Dei essentialiam, quae sit ipse Christus, ut verus naturalis et essentialis Dei Filius, qui per fidem in electis habitat eosque ad bene operandum impellat, et hac ipsa ratione eorum sit iustitia, cuius inhabitantis essentialis iustitiae respectu omnium hominum peccata sese habeant instar guttulae aquae ad magnum mare collatae.

3) Alii vero asseruerunt, Christum esse iustitiam nostram duntaxat iuxta humanam suam naturam.

4) Contra utrosque unanimi consensu reliqui Augustanae Confessionis theologi docuerunt, Christum esse nostram iustitiam non secundum divinam tantum naturam, neque etiam secundum humanam tantum, sed iuxta utramque naturam: quippe qui nos (ut Deus et homo) a peccatis nostris perfectissima sua obedientia liberaverit, iustificaverit atque salvos fecerit. Itaque asseruerunt, fidei iustitiam esse remissionem peccatorum, reconciliationem cum Deo et adoptionem in filios Dei propter solam Christi obedientiam, quae per solam fidem, ex mera gratia, omnibus [R. 683 vere credentibus ad iustitiam imputetur, ita ut ipsi propterea ab omni iniustitia absolvantur.

5) Praeter hanc controversiam etiam aliae quaedam disputationes de articulo iustificationis (occasione formulae Interim seu Interreligionis) et alias motae sunt, quae postea in antithesi, id est, in recitatione errorum, qui purae doctrinae in hoc articulo adversantur, explicabuntur.

6) Hic autem articulus de iustitia fidei praecipuus est (ut Apologia loquitur) in tota doctrina Christiana, sine quo conscientiae perturbatae nullam veram et firmam consolationem habere aut divitias gratiae Christi recte agnoscere possunt. Id D. Lutherus suo etiam testimonio confirmavit, cum inquit: Si unicus hic articulus sincerus permanserit, etiam Christiana ecclesia sincera, concors et sine omnibus sectis permanet; sin vero corrumpitur, impossibile est, ut uni errori aut fanatico spiritui recte obviam iri possit. (Tom. 5, Ienens., p. 159 [Lat. tom. 3, p. 397].) Et de hoc articulo divus Paulus praecipue loquitur, cum inquit Gal. 5, 9 [1 Cor. 5, 6]: Paululum fermenti totam conspersionem fermentat. Atque ea ipsa de causa Paulus particulas exclusivas (videlicet sine lege, sine operibus, ex gratia, gratis [Rom. 3, 28; 4, 5; Eph. 2, 8, 9]), quibus humana opera excluduntur, in hoc articulo tanta diligentia tantoque zelo urget, ut osten-

III.

OF THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF FAITH BEFORE GOD.

The third controversy which has arisen among some theologians of the Augsburg Confession is concerning the righteousness of Christ or of faith, which God imputes by grace, through faith, to poor sinners for righteousness.

For one side has contended that the righteousness of faith, which the apostle calls the righteousness of God, is God's essential righteousness, which is Christ Himself as the true, natural, and essential Son of God, who dwells in the elect by faith and impels them to do right, and thus is their righteousness, compared with which righteousness the sins of all men are as a drop of water compared with the great ocean.

Over against this, others have held and taught that Christ is our righteousness according to His human nature alone.

In opposition to both these parties it has been unanimously taught by the other teachers of the Augsburg Confession that Christ is our righteousness not according to His divine nature alone, nor according to His human nature alone, but according to both natures; for He has redeemed, justified, and saved us from our sins as God and man, through His complete obedience; that therefore the righteousness of faith is the forgiveness of sins, reconciliation with God, and our adoption as God's children only on account of the obedience of Christ, which through faith alone, out of pure grace, is imputed for righteousness to all true believers, and on account of it they are absolved from all their unrighteousness.

Besides this [controversy] there have been still other disputes caused and excited on account of the Interim [on occasion of the formula of the Interim or of Interreligion], and otherwise, concerning the article of justification, which will hereafter be explained in antithesi, that is, in the enumeration of those errors which are contrary to the pure doctrine in this article.

This article concerning justification by faith (as the Apology says) is the chief article in the entire Christian doctrine, without which no poor conscience can have any firm consolation, or can truly know the riches of the grace of Christ, as Dr. Luther also has written: If this only article remains pure on the battlefield, the Christian Church also remains pure, and in goodly harmony and without any sects; but if it does not remain pure, it is not possible that any error or fanatical spirit can be resisted. (Tom. 5, Jena, p. 159.) And concerning this article especially Paul says that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. Therefore, in this article he urges with so much zeal and earnestness the particulas exclusivas, that is, the words whereby the works of men are excluded (namely, without Law, without works, by grace [freely], Rom. 3, 28; 4, 5; Eph. 2, 8, 9), in order to indicate how highly necessary it is that in this article, aside daß ist, alle Gegenlehre, dadurch abgesondert, ausgelegt [als falsch ausgeschieden] und verworfen werde.

Derwegen diesen Zwiespalt christlich vermöge Gottes Wort zu erklären und durch seine Gnade hinzulegen [beizulegen], ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis, wie folgt:

Von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott glauben, lehren und bekennen wir einhellig vermöge hievorgelegten summarischen Begriffs unsers christlichen Glaubens und Bekenntnisses, daß ein armer sündiger Mensch vor Gott gerechtfertigt, das ist, absolviert, los und ledig gesprochen werde von allen seinen Sünden und von dem Urtheil der wohlverdienten Verdammnis, auch angenommen werde zur Kindshaft und Erbchaft des ewigen Lebens, ohne einig unser Verdienst oder Würdigkeit, auch ohne alle vor[her]gehenden, gegenwärtigen oder auch folgenden Werke, aus lauter Gnade, allein um des einigen Verdienstes, des ganzen Gehorsams, bitteren Leidens, Sterbens und Auferstehung unsers Herrn Christi willen, des Gehorsam uns zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet wird.

Welche Güter uns in der Verheißung des heiligen Evangelii durch den Heiligen Geist vorgetragen werden, und ist allein der Glaube das einige Mittel, dadurch wir sie ergreifen, annehmen und uns applizieren und zu eignen; welcher ist eine Gabe Gottes, dadurch wir Christum, unsern Erlöser, im Wort des Evangelii recht erkennen und auf ihn vertrauen, daß wir allein um seines Gehorsams willen, aus Gnaden, Vergebung der Sünden haben, für fromm und gerecht von Gott dem Vater gehalten und ewig selig werden. Demnach für eins [demnach wird für ein und dasselbe] gehalten und genommen, wenn Paulus spricht, daß wir „durch den Glauben gerecht werden“, Röm. 3, oder daß „der Glaube uns zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet werde“, Röm. 4, und wenn er spricht, „daß wir durch des einigen Mittlers Christi Gehorsam gerecht werden“, oder „daß durch eines Gerechtfertigkeit die Rechtfertigung des Glaubens [Lebens] über alle Menschen komme“, Röm. 5. Denn der Glaube macht gerecht nicht darum und daher, daß er so ein gut Werk und schöne Tugend [ist], sondern weil er in der Verheißung des heiligen Evangelii den [das] Verdienst Christi ergreift und annimmt; denn derselbe [dasselbe] muß uns durch den Glauben appliziert und zugeeignet werden, wenn wir dadurch gerecht sollen werden; daß also die Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott dem Glauben oder den Gläubigen aus lauter Gnade zugerechnet wird, ist der Gehorsam, Leiden und Auferstehung Christi, da er für uns dem Gesetz genuggethan und für unsere Sünde bezahlt hat. Denn weil Christus nicht allein Mensch, sondern Gott und Mensch in einer unzertrennten Person [ist], so ist er ebensovienig unter dem Gesetz gewesen (weil er ein Herr des Gesetzes), als daß er für seine Person [hat] leiden und sterben sollen. Darum uns denn sein Gehorsam nicht allein im Leiden und Sterben, sondern auch daß er freiwillig an unserer Statt [sich] unter das Gesetz getan und dasselbe mit solchem Gehorsam erfüllt [hat], uns zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet [wird], daß uns Gott um solches ganzen Gehor-dat, quod valde necessarium sit, ut in hoc articulo non modo sincera doctrina perspicue explicetur, verum etiam antithesis ponatur, et omnia veritati contraria dogmata a pia doctrina segregentur, excludantur et reiciantur.

8) Quare ut haec controversia pie iuxta Verbi Dei analogiam explicetur et per gratiam Dei componatur, sinceram doctrinam, fidem et confessionem nostram ad hunc modum recitamus:

9) De iustitia fidei coram Deo unanimi consensu credimus, docemus et confitemur [R. 684 (iuxta compendiarie Christianae nostrae fidei et confessionis capita, quae supra posuimus)], quod homo peccator coram Deo iustificetur, hoc est, absolvatur ab omnibus suis peccatis et a iudicio iustissimae condemnationis et adoptetur in numerum filiorum Dei atque heres aeternae vitae scribatur sine ullis nostris meritis aut dignitate et absque ullis praecedentibus, praesentibus aut sequentibus nostris operibus, ex mera gratia, tantummodo propter unicum meritum perfectissimamque obedientiam, passionem acerbissimam, mortem et resurrectionem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, cuius obedientia nobis ad iustitiam imputatur.

10) Haec bona nobis in promissione evangelii per Spiritum Sanctum offeruntur. Fides autem unicum est medium illud, quo illa apprehendimus, accipimus nobisque applicamus.

11) Ea fides donum Dei est, per quod Christum, Redemptorem nostrum, in verbo evangelii recte agnoscimus et ipsi confidimus, quod videlicet tantum propter ipsius obedientiam, ex gratia, remissionem peccatorum habeamus et iusti a Deo Patre reputemur et in aeternum 12) salvemur. Itaque hae propositiones sunt aequipollentes et idem plane volunt, cum Paulus dicit Rom. 3, 28, fide nos iustificari, aut 4, 5, fidem nobis ad iustitiam imputari, et cum docet 5, 19, quod unius Mediatoris Christi obedientia iustificemur, aut v. 18, quod per unius iustitiam in omnes homines iustificatio vitae

13) veniat. Fides enim non propterea iustificat, quod ipsa tam bonum opus tamque praeclara virtus sit, sed quia in promissione evangelii meritum Christi apprehendit et amplectitur; illud enim per fidem nobis applicari debet, si eo ipso merito iustificari velimus. 14) Itaque iustitia illa, quae coram Deo fidei aut credentibus ex mera gratia imputatur, est obedientia, passio et resurrectio Christi, quibus ille legi nostra causa satisfecit et peccata nostra expiavit. Cum enim Christus non tantum homo, verum Deus et homo sit in una persona indivisa, [R. 685 tam non fuit legi subiectus, quam non fuit passioni et morti (ratione suae personae) obnoxius, quia Dominus legis erat. Eam ob causam ipsius obedientia (non ea tantum, qua Patri paruit in tota sua passione et morte, verum etiam, qua nostra causa sponte saepe legi subiecit eamque obedientia illa sua implevit) nobis ad iustitiam imputatur, ita ut Deus propter totam obedientiam (quam Christus agendo et patiando, in vita et morte sua nostra causa Patri suo coelesti praestitit) peccata nobis remittat, pro bonis et iustis nos 16) reputet et salute aeterna donet. Haec from [the presentation of] the pure doctrine, the antithesis, that is, all contrary dogmas, be stated separately, exposed, and rejected by this means.

Therefore, in order to explain this controversy in a Christian way by means of God's Word, and, by His grace, to settle it, our doctrine, faith, and confession are as follows:

Concerning the righteousness of faith before God we believe, teach, and confess unanimously, in accordance with the comprehensive summary of our faith and confession presented above, that poor sinful man is justified before God, that is, absolved and declared free and exempt from all his sins, and from the sentence of well-deserved condemnation, and adopted into sonship and heirship of eternal life, without any merit or worth of our own, also without any preceding, present, or any subsequent works, out of pure grace, because of the sole merit, complete obedience, bitter suffering, death, and resurrection of our Lord Christ alone, whose obedience is reckoned to us for righteousness.

These treasures are offered us by the Holy Ghost in the promise of the holy Gospel; and faith alone is the only means by which we lay hold upon, accept, and apply, and appropriate them to ourselves. This faith is a gift of God, by which we truly learn to know Christ, our Redeemer, in the Word of the Gospel, and trust in Him, that for the sake of His obedience alone we have the forgiveness of sins by grace, are regarded as godly and righteous by God the Father, and are eternally saved. Therefore it is considered and understood to be the same thing when Paul says that we are justified by faith, Rom. 3, 28, or that faith is counted to us for righteousness, Rom. 4, 5, and when he says that we are made righteous by the obedience of One, Rom. 5, 19, or that by the righteousness of One justification of faith came to all men, Rom. 5, 18. For faith justifies, not for this cause and reason that it is so good a work and so fair a virtue, but because it lays hold of and accepts the merit of Christ in the promise of the holy Gospel; for this must be applied and appropriated to us by faith, if we are to be justified thereby. Therefore the righteousness which is imputed to faith or to the believer out of pure grace is the obedience, suffering, and resurrection of Christ, since He has made satisfaction for us to the Law, and paid for [expiated] our sins. For since Christ is not man alone, but God and man in one undivided person, He was as little subject to the Law, because He is the Lord of the Law, as He had to suffer and die as far as His person is concerned. For this reason, then, His obedience, not only in suffering and dying, but also in this, that He in our stead was voluntarily made under the Law, and fulfilled it by this obedience, is imputed to us for righteousness, so that, on account of this complete obedience, which He sams wissen, so er im Tun und Leiden, im Leben und Sterben für uns seinem himmlischen Vater geleistet, die Sünde vergibt, uns für fromm und gerecht hält und ewig selig macht. Solche Gerechtigkeit wird durchs Evangelium und in den Sacramenten von dem Heiligen Geist uns vorgetragen und durch den Glauben appliziert, zugeeignet und angenommen, daher die Gläubigen haben Versöhnung mit Gott, Vergebung der Sünden, Gottes Gnade, die Kindschaft und Erbschaft des ewigen Lebens.

Demnach das Wort „rechtfertigen“ hier heißt gerecht und ledig von Sünden sprechen und derselben ewigen Strafe ledig zählen um der Gerechtigkeit Christi willen, welche von Gott dem Glauben zugerechnet wird, Phil. 3. Wie denn solcher Gebrauch und Verstand dieses Wortes in Heiliger Schrift Alten und Neuen Testaments gemein ist. Prov. 17: „Wer den Gottlosen recht spricht und den Gerechten verdammet, die sind beide dem Herrn ein Greuel.“ Jes. 5: „Wehe denen, die den Gottlosen recht sprechen um Zeichen willen und das Recht der Gerechten von ihnen wenden.“ Röm. 8: „Wer will die Auserwählten Gottes beschuldigen? Gott ist hie, der rechtfertigt“, das ist, von Sünden absolvirt und ledig spricht.

Die weil aber zuzeiten das Wort regeneratio, Wiedergeburt, für das Wort iustificatio, Rechtfertigung, gebraucht [wird], ist vonnöten, daß solch Wort eigentlich erklärt [werde], damit die Verneuerung, so der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens nachfolgt, nicht mit der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens vermenget, sondern [beide] eigentlich voneinander unterschieden werden.

Denn das Wort regeneratio, das ist, Wiedergeburt, erstlich also gebraucht wird, daß es zugleich die Vergebung der Sünden allein um Christus' willen und die nachfolgende Verneuerung begreift, welche der Heilige Geist wirkt in denen, so durch den Glauben gerechtfertigt sind. Danach wird es gebraucht allein pro remissione peccatorum et adoptione in filios Dei, das ist, daß es heißt allein Vergebung der Sünden, [und] daß wir zu Kindern Gottes angenommen werden. Und in diesem andern Verstand wird in der Apologia viel und oft dieses Wort gebraucht, da geschrieben: Iustificatio est regeneratio, das ist, die Rechtfertigung vor Gott ist die Wiedergeburt; wie auch St. Paulus solche Worte unterschiedlich gesetzt Tit. 3: „Er hat uns selig gemacht durch das Bad der Wiedergeburt und Erneuerung des Heiligen Geistes.“ Wie denn auch das Wort vivificatio, das ist, Lebendigmachung, zuzeiten in gleichem Verstand gebraucht worden. Denn so der Mensch durch den Glauben (welchen allein der Heilige Geist wirkt) gerechtfertigt [wird], solches wahrhaftig eine Wiedergeburt ist, weil [er] aus einem Kind des Zorns ein Kind Gottes und also aus dem Tod in das Leben gesetzt wird, wie geschrieben steht: „Da wir tot waren in Sünden, hat er uns samt Christo lebendig gemacht“, Eph. 2. Item: „Der Gerechte wird seines Glaubens leben“, Röm. 1. In welchem Verstand dieß Wort in der Apologia viel und oft gebraucht wird.

Danach aber wird es auch oft für die Heiligung und Erneuerung genommen, welche der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens nachfolgt, wie es D. Luther im Buch von der Kirche und Konzilien und anderswo also gebraucht hat.

iustitia per evangelion et in sacramentis a Spiritu Sancto nobis offertur et per fidem applicatur atque apprehenditur; unde credentes habent reconciliationem cum Deo, remissionem peccatorum, Dei favorem, adoptionem filiorum et hereditatem vitae aeternae.

17) Vocabulum igitur iustificationis in hoc negotio significat iustum pronuntiare, a peccatis et aeternis peccatorum suppliciis absolvere, propter iustitiam Christi, quae a Deo fidei imputatur, Phil. 3, 9. Et sane hic vocabuli illius usus tam in Veteri quam in Novo Testamento admodum frequens est. Salomon inquit Prov. 17, 15: Qui iustificat impium, et qui condemnat iustum, abominabilis est uterque apud Deum. Iesaias, 5, 23, vae denuntiat illis, qui iustificant impium propter munera et iustitiam iusti auferunt ab eo. Paulus ait Rom. 8, 33: Quis accusabit electos Dei? Deus est, qui iustificat, hoc est, qui a peccatis absolvit.

18) Cum autem interdum vocabulum regenerationis pro vocabulo iustificationis usurpetur, necesse est, ut illud dextre et proprie explicetur, ne renovatio, quae iustificationem sequitur, cum iustificatione fidei confundatur, sed haec recte a se invicem discernantur.

19) Vocabulum enim regenerationis interdum in eo sensu accipitur, ut simul et [R. 688 remissionem peccatorum (quae duntaxat propter Christum contingit) et subsequentem renovationem complectatur, quam Spiritus Sanctus in illis, qui per fidem iustificati sunt, operatur. Quandoque etiam solam remissionem peccatorum et adoptionem in filios Dei significat. Et in hoc posteriore usu saepe multumque id vocabulum in Apologia Confessionis ponitur. Verbi gratia, cum dicitur: Iustificatio est regeneratio. Sed et Paulus haec vocabula cum discrimine ponit, cum dicit Tit. 3, 5: Salvos nos fecit per lavacrum regenerationis et renovationis Spiritus Sancti.

20) Quin etiam vivificationis vocabulum interdum ita accipitur, ut remissionem peccatorum notet. Cum enim homo per fidem (quam quidem solus Spiritus Sanctus operatur) iustificatur, id ipsum revera est quaedam regeneratio, quia ex filio irae fit filius Dei et hoc modo e morte in vitam transfertur, sicut scriptum est Eph. 2, 5: Cum essemus mortui in peccatis, convivificavit nos in Christo. Et alibi, Rom. 1, 17; Hab. 2, 4: Iustus fide sua vivet. Et in hac posteriore significatione Apologia vocabulo regenerationis frequenter uti solet.

21) Deinde etiam regeneratio saepe pro sanctificatione et renovatione (quae fidei iustificationem sequitur) usurpatur. In qua significatione D. Lutherus hac voce, tum in libro De Ecclesia et Conciliis tum alibi etiam, multum usus est.

rendered His heavenly Father for us, by doing and suffering, in living and dying, God forgives our sins, regards us as godly and righteous, and eternally saves us. This righteousness is offered us by the Holy Ghost through the Gospel and in the Sacraments, and is applied, appropriated, and received through faith, whence believers have reconciliation with God, forgiveness of sins, the grace of God, sonship, and heirship of eternal life.

Accordingly, the word justify here means to declare righteous and free from sins, and to absolve one from eternal punishment for the sake of Christ's righteousness, which is imputed by God to faith, Phil. 3, 9. For this use and understanding of this word is common in the Holy Scriptures of the Old and the New Testament. Prov. 17, 15: He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the Lord. Is. 5, 23: Woe unto them which justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him! Rom. 8, 33: Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth, that is, absolves from sins and acquits.

However, since the word regeneratio, regeneration, is sometimes employed for the word iustificatio, justification, it is necessary that this word be properly explained, in order that the renewal which follows justification of faith may not be confounded with the justification of faith, but that they may be properly distinguished from one another.

For, in the first place, the word regeneratio, that is, regeneration, is used so as to comprise at the same time the forgiveness of sins for Christ's sake alone, and the succeeding renewal which the Holy Ghost works in those who are justified by faith. Then, again, it is [sometimes] used pro remissione peccatorum et adoptione in filios Dei, that is, so as to mean only the remission of sins, and that we are adopted as sons of God. And in this latter sense the word is much and often used in the Apology, where it is written: Iustificatio est regeneratio, that is, Justification before God is regeneration. St. Paul, too, has employed these words as distinct from one another, Titus 3, 5: He saved us by the washing of regeneration and renewal of the Holy Ghost. As also the word vivificatio, that is, making alive, has sometimes been used in a like sense. For when man is justified through faith (which the Holy Ghost alone works), this is truly a regeneration, because from a child of wrath he becomes a child of God, and thus is transferred from death to life, as it is written: When we were dead in sins, He hath quickened us together with Christ, Eph. 2, 5. Likewise: The just shall live by faith, Rom. 1, 17; Hab. 2, 4. In this sense the word is much and often used in the Apology.

But again, it is often taken also for sanctification and renewal, which succeeds the righteousness of faith, as Dr. Luther has thus used it in his book concerning the Church and the Councils, and elsewhere.

Wenn wir aber lehren, daß durch die Wirkung des Heiligen Geistes wir neugeboren und gerecht werden, hat es nicht die Meinung, daß den Gerechtfertigten und Wiedergeborenen keine Ungerechtigkeit nach der Wiedergeburt im Wesen und Leben mehr sollte anhangen, sondern daß Christus mit seinem vollkommenen Gehorsam alle ihre Sünden zudeckt, die doch in der Natur in diesem Leben noch fteden. Aber solches unangesehen, werden sie durch den Glauben und um solches Gehorsams Christi willen (den Christus dem Vater von seiner Geburt an bis in den allerhöchlichsten Tod des Kreuzes für uns geleistet hat) für fromm und gerecht gesprochen und gehalten, ob sie gleich ihrer verderbten Natur halben noch Sünder sind und bleiben bis in die Grube [bis ins Grab]. Wie es denn hinwiederum die Meinung nicht hat, als dürften oder sollten wir ohne Buße, Bekehrung und Besserung den Sünden folgen, darin bleiben und fortfahren.

Denn wahre Reue muß vorhergehen; und die also, wie gesagt, aus lauter Gnade, um des etzigen Mittlers Christi willen, allein durch den Glauben, ohne alle Werke und Verdienst vor Gott gerecht, das ist, zu Gnaden angenommen werden, denen wird auch der Heilige Geist gegeben, der sie verneuert und heiligt, in ihnen wirkt Liebe gegen Gott und gegen den Nächsten. Sondern weil die angefangene Verneuerung in diesem Leben unvollkommen, und die Sünde noch im Fleisch auch bei den Wiedergeborenen wohnt, so [be]steht die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott in gnädiger Zurechnung der Gerechtigkeit Christi, ohne Zutun unserer Werke, daß uns unsere Sünden vergeben und zudeckt sind und nicht zugerechnet werden, Röm. 4.

Aber hier muß mit [be]sonderem Fleiß darauf gar gute Acht gegeben werden, wenn der Artikel der Rechtfertigung rein bleiben soll: daß nicht dasjenige, was vor dem Glauben hergeht, und was demselben nachfolgt, zugleich mit in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung, als dazu nötig und gehörig, eingemengt oder eingeschoben werde, weil nicht eins oder gleich ist, von der Bekehrung und von der Rechtfertigung zu reden.

Denn nicht alles, was zur Bekehrung gehört, auch zugleich in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung gehört; in und zu welchem allein gehört und vonnöten ist Gottes Gnade, der [das] Verdienst Christi, der Glaube, so solches in der Verheißung des Evangelii annimmt, dadurch uns die Gerechtigkeit Christi zugerechnet wird, daher wir erlangen und haben Vergebung der Sünden, Versöhnung mit Gott, die Kindschaft und Erbschaft des ewigen Lebens.

Also ist ein wahrer, seligmachender Glaube nicht in denen, so ohne Reue und Leid sind und einen bösen Vorsatz haben, in Sünden zu bleiben und [zu] beharren, sondern wahre Reue geht vorher, und rechter Glaube ist in oder bei wahrer Buße.

Es ist auch die Liebe eine Frucht, so dem wahren Glauben gewöhnlich notwendig folgt. Denn wer nicht liebt, das ist eine gewisse Anzeigung, daß er nicht gerechtfertigt, sondern noch im Tode sei oder die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens wiederum verloren habe; wie Johannes sagt 1 Joh. 3. Aber wenn

22] Quando autem docemus, quod per operationem Spiritus Sancti regeneremur et iustificemur, non ita accipiendum est, quod iustificatis et renatis nulla prorsus iniustitia (post regenerationem) substantiae ipsorum et conversationi adhaereat, sed quod Christus perfectissima obedientia sua omnia ipsorum peccata tegat, quae quidem in ipsa natura (in hac vita) adhuc infixae haerent. Nihilominus tamen per fidem, propter obedientiam Christi (quam Christus inde a nativitate sua [R. 687] usque ad ignominiosissimam crucis mortem pro nobis Patri suo praestitit) boni et iusti pronuntiantur et reputantur, etiamsi ratione corruptae naturae suae adhuc sint maneatque peccatores, dum mortale hoc corpus circumferunt. Sed neque hoc sentimus, quod liceat nobis absque poenitentia et vitae emendatione peccatis frenos laxare, in iisque perseverare et subinde pergere.

23] Oportet enim praecedere veram et non simulatam contritionem. Et qui mera gratia (ut diximus) propter unicum Mediatorem Christum, tantum per fidem, sine omnibus operibus et meritis coram Deo iusti sunt, hoc est, in gratiam Dei recipiuntur, his etiam Spiritus Sanctus datur, qui eos renovat atque sanctificat, in ipsis dilectionem erga Deum et proximum operatur. Cum autem inchoata illa renovatio in hac vita sit imperfecta, et peccatum adhuc in carne, etiam in renatis, habitet, iustitia fidei coram Deo in gratuita et benignissima imputatione iustitiae Christi (absque ulla nostrorum operum additione) consistit, quod videlicet peccata nobis remissa et tecta sint, neque nobis imputentur, Rom. 4, 6 sqq.

24] Sed et hoc diligentissime observandum est, si modo articulum de iustificatione sincerum retinere velimus, ne ea, quae fidem praecedunt, et quae eam sequuntur, articulo huic tamquam ad iustificationem necessaria et ad eam pertinentia admisceantur aut inserantur. Non enim unum idemque est, de conversione hominis et de iustificatione eius agere.

25] Non omnia illa, quae ad veram conversionem requiruntur, etiam ad iustificationem pertinent. Ad iustificationem enim tantum haec requiruntur atque necessaria sunt: gratia Dei, meritum Christi et fides, quae haec ipsa Dei beneficia in promissione evangelii amplectitur, qua ratione nobis Christi [R. 688] iustitia imputatur, unde remissionem peccatorum, reconciliationem cum Deo, adoptionem in filios Dei et hereditatem vitae aeternae consequimur.

26] Quare vera et salvans fides in iis non est, qui contritione carent et propositum in peccatis pergendi et perseverandi habent. Vera enim contritio praecedit, et fides iustificans in iis est, qui vere, non fecte, poenitentiam agunt.

27] Et caritas fructus est, qui veram fidem certissime et necessario sequitur. Qui enim non diligit, de eo recte iudicari potest, quod non sit iustificatus, sed quod adhuc in morte detineatur aut rursus iustitiam fidei amiserit, ut Iohannes, 1 Ioh. 3, 14, testatur. Et quando

But when we teach that through the operation of the Holy Ghost we are born anew and justified, the sense is not that after regeneration no unrighteousness clings any more to the justified and regenerate in their being and life, but that Christ covers all their sins which nevertheless in this life still inhere in nature with His complete obedience. But irrespective of this they are declared and regarded godly and righteous by faith and for the sake of Christ's obedience (which Christ rendered the Father for us from His birth to His most ignominious death upon the cross), although, on account of their corrupt nature, they still are and remain sinners to the grave [while they bear about this mortal body]. Nor, on the other hand, is this the meaning, that without repentance, conversion, and renewal we might or should yield to sins, and remain and continue in them.

For true [and not feigned] contrition must precede; and to those who, in the manner stated, out of pure grace, for the sake of the only Mediator, Christ, without any works and merit, are righteous before God, that is, are received into grace, the Holy Ghost is also given, who renews and sanctifies them, and works in them love to God and to their neighbor. But since the incipient renewal is imperfect in this life, and sin still dwells in the flesh, even in the regenerate, the righteousness of faith before God consists in the gracious imputation of the righteousness of Christ, without the addition of our works, so that our sins are forgiven us and covered, and are not imputed, Rom. 4, 6 ff.

But here very good attention must be given with especial diligence, if the article of justification is to remain pure, lest that which precedes faith, and that which follows after it, be mingled together or inserted into the article of justification as necessary and belonging to it, because it is not one or the same thing to speak of conversion and of justification.

For not everything that belongs to conversion belongs likewise to the article of justification, in and to which belong and are necessary only the grace of God, the merit of Christ, and faith, which receives this in the promise of the Gospel, whereby the righteousness of Christ is imputed to us, whence we receive and have forgiveness of sins, reconciliation with God, sonship, and heirship of eternal life.

Therefore true, saving faith is not in those who are without contrition and sorrow, and have a wicked purpose to remain and persevere in sins; but true contrition precedes, and genuine faith is in or with true repentance [justifying faith is in those who repent truly, not feignedly].

Love is also a fruit which surely and necessarily follows true faith. For the fact that one does not love is a sure indication that he is not justified, but is still in death, or has lost the righteousness of faith again, as John says, 1 John 3, 14. But when Paul says, Rom.

Paulus spricht: „Wir werden durch den Glauben gerecht ohne Werke“, [so] zeigt er damit an, daß weder vor[her]gehende Reue noch folgende Werke in den Artikel oder Handel der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens gehören. Denn gute Werke gehen nicht vor der Rechtfertigung her, sondern folgen derselben, und die Person muß erst gerecht sein, ehe sie gute Werke tun kann.

Gleichfalls auch, wiewohl die Verneuerung und Heiligung auch eine Wohlthat des Mittlers Christi und ein Werk des Heiligen Geistes ist, gehört sie doch nicht in den Artikel oder in den Handel der Rechtfertigung vor Gott, sondern folgt derselben, weil sie von wegen unsers verderbten Fleisches in diesem Leben nicht ganz rein und vollkommen ist; wie D. Luther hiervon wohl [trefflich] schreibt in seiner schönen und langen Auslegung der Epistel an die Galater, da er also sagt: „Wir geben's wohl zu, daß man von der Liebe und guten Werken auch lehren solle, doch also, daß es geschehe, wann und wo es vonnöten ist, als nämlich, wenn man außerhalb dieser Sache von der Rechtfertigung von Werken sonst zu tun hat. Hier aber ist dieses die Hauptsache, damit man zu tun hat, daß man frage, nicht, ob man auch gute Werke tun und lieben [Liebe üben] solle, sondern wodurch man doch gerecht vor Gott und selig werden möge. Und da antworten wir mit St. Paulo also, daß wir allein durch den Glauben an Christum gerecht werden und nicht durch des Gesetzes Werke oder durch die Liebe; nicht also, daß wir hiermit die Werke und Liebe gar verwerfen, wie die Widersacher uns mit Unwahrheit lästern und schuld geben, sondern auf daß wir uns allein von der Hauptsache, damit man hier zu tun hat, nicht auf einen andern, fremden Handel, der in diese Sache gar nichts [in keiner Weise] gehört, abführen lassen, wie es der Satan gerne haben wollte. Deshalb, alldieweil und solange wir in diesem Artikel von der Rechtfertigung zu tun haben, verwerfen und verdammen wir die Werke, hinfmal es um diesen Artikel also getan ist, daß er keinerlei Disputation oder Handlung von den Werken nicht leiden kann; darum schneiden wir in dieser Sache alle Gesetze und Gesetzeswerke kurz ab.“ Bis daher Lutherus.

Derwegen und auf daß betrübte Herzen einen befähigen, gewissen Trost haben, auch dem Verdienst Christi und der Gnade Gottes seine gebührende Ehre gegeben werde, so lehrt die Schrift, daß die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott bestehe allein in gnädiger Versöhnung oder Vergebung der Sünden, welche aus lauter Gnade um des einigen Verdienstes des Mittlers Christi willen uns geschenkt und allein durch den Glauben in der Verheißung des Evangelii empfangen wird. Also auch verläßt sich der Glaube in der Rechtfertigung vor Gott weder auf die Reue noch auf die Liebe oder andere Tugenden, sondern allein auf Christum und in demselben auf seinen vollkommenen Gehorsam, damit er für uns das Gesetz erfüllt [hat], welcher den Gläubigen zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet wird.

Es ist auch weder Reue oder Liebe oder andere Tugend, sondern allein der Glaube das einzige Mittel und Werkzeug, damit und dadurch wir Gottes Gnade, das Verdienst Christi und Vergebung der Sünden, so uns in der Verheißung des Evangelii vorgetragen werden, empfangen und annehmen können.

divus Paulus affirmat [Rom. 3, 28], fide nos iustificari sine operibus, hoc ipso docet, neque praecedentem contritionem neque sequentia bona opera ad articulum aut negotium iustitiae fidei pertinere. Bona enim opera non praecedunt iustificationem, sed eam demum sequuntur. Et oportet personam primum esse iustam, antequam bona opera facere queat.

28) Similiter et renovatio seu sanctificatio, quamvis et ipsa sit beneficium Mediatoris Christi et opus Spiritus Sancti, non tamen ad articulum aut negotium iustificationis coram Deo pertinet, sed eam sequitur, quia propter carnis nostrae corruptionem in hac vita imperfecta est et nondum omnibus numeris absoluta. De hac re erudite et pie D. Lutherus in praeclaro illo suo et copioso super epistolam ad Galatas commentario ad hunc modum 29) docet: Concedimus, de caritate et bonis operibus etiam docendum esse, sed suo tempore et loco, quando scilicet quaestio est de bonis operibus extra hunc articulum de iustificatione. Hic autem status causae et caput est, de quo agitur, ut scilicet quaeratur, non, an bona opera sint facienda et caritas exercenda sit, sed qua re iustificemur et [R. 689] vitam aeternam consequamur. Hic respondemus cum Paulo: sola fide in Christum nos pronuntiar iustos, non operibus legis aut caritate. Non quod opera aut caritatem reiiciamus, ut adversarii nos falso accusant, sed quod a statu causae in alienum negotium, quod ad hanc quaestionem prorsus non pertinet, abstrahi nos et implicari nolumus; id quod tamen Satanas maxime molitur et quaerit. Itaque cum iam versemur in loco communi et articulo de iustificatione, reiicimus et damnamus opera. Is enim locus nequaquam patitur aut admittit disputationem de bonis operibus. Abscindimus igitur hoc proposito simpliciter omnes leges et omnia opera legis. Hactenus Lutherus.

30) Quare ut perturbatae mentes certam firmamque consolationem habeant, et merito Christi atque gratiae divinae debitum honor tribuatur, docet nos Scriptura, iustitiam fidei coram Deo tantummodo consistere in sola elementi et quidem gratuita reconciliatione seu remissione peccatorum, quae ex mera gratia propter solum Christi Mediatoris meritum nobis donatur et per solum fidem in promissione evangelii apprehenditur. Ad eundem modum etiam fides illa in iustificatione coram Deo neque contritione neque dilectione aliis virtutibus, sed solo Christo confidit et in Christo, ipsius perfectissima obedientia (qua pro nobis legem implevit) nititur, quae obedientia credentibus ad iustitiam imputatur.

31) Et quidem neque contritio neque dilectio neque ulla alia virtus, sed sola fides est illud unicum medium et instrumentum, quo gratiam Dei, meritum Christi et remissionem peccatorum (quae bona nobis in promissione evangelii offeruntur) apprehendere et accipere possumus.

3, 28: We are justified by faith without works, he indicates thereby that neither the contrition that precedes, nor the works that follow, belong in the article or transaction of justification by faith. For good works do not precede justification, but follow it, and the person must first be justified before he can do good works.

In like manner also renewal and sanctification, although it is also a benefit of the Mediator, Christ, and a work of the Holy Ghost, does not belong in the article or affair of justification before God, but follows the same, since, on account of our corrupt flesh, it is not entirely perfect and complete in this life, as Dr. Luther writes well concerning this in his beautiful and large exposition of the Epistle to the Galatians, in which he says as follows: We concede indeed that instruction should be given also concerning love and good works, yet in such a way that this be done when and where it is necessary, namely, when otherwise and outside of this matter of justification we have to do with works. But here the chief matter dealt with is the question, not whether we should also do good works and exercise love, but by what means we can be justified before God, and saved. And here we answer thus with St. Paul: that we are justified by faith in Christ alone, and not by the deeds of the Law or by love. Not that we hereby entirely reject works and love, as the adversaries falsely slander and accuse us, but that we do not allow ourselves to be led away, as Satan desires, from the chief matter with which we have to do here to another and foreign affair which does not at all belong to this matter. Therefore, whereas, and as long as we are occupied with this article of justification, we reject and condemn works, since this article is so constituted that it can admit of no disputation or treatment whatever regarding works; therefore in this matter we cut short all Law and works of the Law. So far Luther.

In order, therefore, that troubled hearts may have a firm, sure consolation, also, that due honor be given to the merit of Christ and the grace of God, the Scriptures teach that the righteousness of faith before God consists alone in the gracious [gratuitous] reconciliation or the forgiveness of sins, which is presented to us out of pure grace, for the sake of the only merit of the Mediator, Christ, and is received through faith alone in the promise of the Gospel. In like manner, too, in justification before God faith relies neither upon contrition nor upon love or other virtues, but upon Christ alone, and in Him upon His complete obedience by which He has fulfilled the Law for us, which [obedience] is imputed to believers for righteousness.

Moreover, neither contrition nor love or any other virtue, but faith alone is the sole means and instrument by which and through which we can receive and accept the grace of God, the merit of Christ, and the forgiveness of sins, which are offered us in the promise of the Gospel.

Es wird auch recht gesagt, daß die Gläubigen, so durch den Glauben an Christum gerecht [ge-] worden sind, in diesem Leben erstlich die zugerechnete Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens, danach auch die angefangene Gerechtigkeit des neuen Gehorsams oder der guten Werke haben. Aber diese beiden müssen nicht ineinandergemengt oder zugleich in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens vor Gott eingeschoben werden. Denn weil diese angefangene Gerechtigkeit oder Verneuerung in uns von wegen des Fleisches in diesem Leben unvollkommen und unrein [ist], kann damit und dadurch die Person vor Gottes Gericht nicht bestehen, sondern allein die Gerechtigkeit des Gehorsams, Leidens und Sterbens Christi, so dem Glauben zugerechnet wird, kann vor Gottes Gericht bestehen; also daß allein um dieses Gehorsams willen die Person (auch nach ihrer Verneuerung, wenn sie schon viel guter Werke hat und im besten Leben ist) Gott gefalle und angenehm werde und sei zur Kindschaft und Erbschaft des ewigen Lebens angenommen.

Hierher gehört auch, daß St. Paulus schreibt Röm. 4, daß Abraham vor Gott gerecht sei [ge-] worden allein durch den Glauben um des Mittlers willen, ohne Zutun seiner Werke, nicht allein, da er erstlich von der Abgötterei bekehrt und seine guten Werke hatte, sondern auch, da er hernach durch den Heiligen Geist verneuert und mit vielen herrlichen guten Werken geziert war, Gen. 15; Hebr. 11. Und setzt Paulus diese Frage Röm. 4: worauf alsdann Abrahams Gerechtigkeit vor Gott, dadurch er einen gnädigen Gott gehabt, ihm gefällig und angenehm gewesen, zum ewigen Leben, gestanden sei.

Darauf er antwortet: „Dem, der nicht mit Werken umgeht, glaubet aber an den, der die Gottlosen gerecht macht, dem wird sein Glaube gerechnet zur Gerechtigkeit; wie auch David sagt, daß die Seligkeit sei allein des Menschen, welchem Gott zurechnet die Gerechtigkeit ohne Zutun der Werke.“ Also, wenngleich die Bekehrten und Gläubigen haben angefangene Verneuerung, Heiligung, Liebe, Tugend und gute Werke, so können doch, sollen und müssen dieselben nicht eingezo- gen oder eingemengt werden in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung vor Gott, auf daß dem Erlöser Christo seine Ehre bleibe, und, weil unser neuer Gehorsam unvollkommen und unrein, die angesprochenen Gewissen einen beständigen Trost haben mögen.

Und das ist des Apostels Pauli Meinung, wenn er in diesem Artikel die particulas exclusivae, das ist, die Worte, dadurch die Werke in dem Artikel der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens ausgeschlossen werden, so flehig und emsig treibt: absque operibus, sine lege, gratis, non ex operibus, das ist, „aus Gnaden, ohne Verdienst, ohne Gesetz, ohne Werke, nicht aus den Werken“ usw.; welche exclusivae alle zusammengefaßt werden, wenn man sagt: „Allein durch den Glauben werden wir vor Gott gerecht und selig.“ Denn dadurch werden die Werke ausgeschlossen, nicht der Meinung, als könnte ein wahrer Glaube wohl sein ohne Reue, oder als sollten, müßten und dürften die guten Werke dem wahren Glauben als die gewissten, ungezweifelten Früchte nicht folgen, oder als ob die Gläubigen nicht dürften noch mühten etwas Gutes tun; sondern von dem Artikel der

32) Recte etiam dicitur, quod credentes, qui per fidem in Christum iustificati sunt, in hac vita primum quidem imputatam fidei [R. 690] iustitiam, deinde vero etiam inchoatam iustitiam novae obedientiae seu bonorum operum habeant. Sed haec duo non inter se permiscenda aut simul in articulum de iustificatione fidei coram Deo ingerenda sunt. Cum enim inchoata illa iustitia seu renovatio in nobis propter carnem in hac vita imperfecta sit et impura, eius iustitiae ratione persona coram Dei iudicio consistere non potest. Sola autem iustitia obedientiae, passionis et mortis Christi (quae fidei imputatur) coram iudicio Dei stare potest; ita quidem, ut tantum propter hanc obedientiam persona (etiam postquam renovata est et multa bona opera habet atque iam honeste et innocenter vivit) Deo placeat et accepta, in filium Dei adoptata atque heres vitae aeternae scripta sit.

33) Huc referendum est, quod Paulus Rom. 4, 3 scribit, Abrahamum coram Deo iustificatum esse sola fide propter Mediatorem, sine operibus, idque non tantum, cum primo ab idololatria conversus, nulla bona opera haberet, sed etiam cum postea per Spiritum Sanctum renovatus, multis praeclaris bonis operibus ornatus esset, Gen. 15, 6; Hebr. 11, 8. Et movet Paulus Rom. 4, 1 sqq. quaestionem hanc: in quam re Abrahami iustitia coram Deo (propter quam Deum clementem habuerit ipsique placuerit et acceptus ac heres regni Dei fuerit) posita et constituta fuerit.

34) Respondet autem Rom. 4, 4 sq.: Ei, qui non operatur, credenti autem in eum, qui iustificat impium, reputatur fides eius ad iustitiam. Sicut et David [Ps. 32, 1] dicit, beatitudinem hominis (esse), cui Deus acceptam fert iustitiam sine operibus. Quare, 35) etsi conversi et in Christum credentes habent inchoatam in se renovationem, sanctificationem, dilectionem, virtutes et bona opera, tamen haec omnia nequaquam possunt aut debent immisceri articulo iustificationis coram Deo, ut Redemptori Christo honor illibatus maneat, et, cum nostra nova obedientia imperfecta et impura sit, perturbatae [R. 691] conscientiae certa et firma consolatione sese sustentare valeant.

36) Et hoc ipsum vult divus Paulus, quando in hoc articulo particulas exclusivae, quibus ex articulo iustitiae fidei opera excluduntur, ut sunt hae: absque operibus, sine lege, sine merito, nonnisi ex gratia, gratis, non ex operibus, tanta diligentia tantoque zelo urget. Hae autem exclusivae omnes hisce verbis comprehenduntur, cum docemus: Sola fide coram Deo iustificamur et salvamur. Hoc enim modo opera nostra excluduntur, non quidem ea ratione, quasi vera fides possit existere sine contritione, aut quasi bona opera non necessario fidem veram (tamquam certissimi fructus) sequantur, aut quasi credentes in Christum non debeant bene operari. Sed ab articulo iustificationis coram Deo opera excluduntur, ne negotio iustificationis peccatoris coram Deo, quasi ad eam rem necessaria, per-

It is also correctly said that believers who in Christ through faith have been justified, have in this life first the imputed righteousness of faith, and then also the incipient righteousness of the new obedience or of good works. But these two must not be mingled with one another or be both injected at the same time into the article of justification by faith before God. For since this incipient righteousness or renewal in us is incomplete and impure in this life because of the flesh, the person cannot stand with and by it [on the ground of this righteousness] before God's tribunal, but before God's tribunal only the righteousness of the obedience, suffering, and death of Christ, which is imputed to faith, can stand, so that only for the sake of this obedience is the person (even after his renewal, when he has already many good works and lives the best [upright and blameless] life) pleasing and acceptable to God, and is received into adoption and heirship of eternal life.

Here belongs also what St. Paul writes Rom. 4, 3, that Abraham was justified before God by faith alone, for the sake of the Mediator, without the cooperation of his works, not only when he was first converted from idolatry and had no good works, but also afterwards, when he had been renewed by the Holy Ghost, and adorned with many excellent good works, Gen. 15, 6; Heb. 11, 8. And Paul puts the following question, Rom. 4, 1 ff.: On what did Abraham's righteousness before God for everlasting life, by which he had a gracious God, and was pleasing and acceptable to Him, rest at that time?

This he answers: To him who worketh not, but believeth on Him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness; as David also, Ps. 32, 1, speaks of the blessedness of the man to whom God imputes righteousness without works. Hence, even though the converted and believing [in Christ] have incipient renewal, sanctification, love, virtue, and good works, yet these neither can nor should be drawn into, or mingled with, the article of justification before God, in order that the honor due Him may remain with Christ the Redeemer, and tempted consciences may have a sure consolation, since our new obedience is incomplete and impure.

And this is the meaning of the Apostle Paul when in this article he urges so diligently and zealously the particulas exclusivas, that is, the words by which works are excluded from the article of justification: absque operibus, sine lege, gratis, non ex operibus, that is, by grace, without merit, without works, not of works. These exclusivæ are all comprised in the expression: By faith alone in Christ we are justified before God and saved. For thereby works are excluded, not in the sense that a true faith can exist without contrition, or that good works should, must, and dare not follow true faith as sure and indubitable fruits, or that believers dare not nor must do anything good; but good works are excluded from the article of justification before God,

Rechtfertigung vor Gott werden die guten Werke ausgeschlossen, daß sie in die Handlung der Rechtfertigung des armen Sünders vor Gott, als dazu nötig oder gehörig, nicht sollen mit eingezogen, eingeflochten oder eingemengt werden; und steht der rechte Verstand particularum exclusivarum in articulo iustificationis, das ist, überzählter Wörter im Artikel der Rechtfertigung, darin, [nämlich in folgenden Punkten, und die] sollen auch mit allem Fleiß und Ernst bei diesem Artikel getrieben werden:

1. Daß dadurch alle eigenen Werke, Verdienst, Würdigkeit, Ruhm und Vertrauen aller unserer Werke in dem Artikel der Rechtfertigung ganz und gar ausgeschlossen werden, also daß unsere Werke weder [als] Ursache noch [als] Verdienst der Rechtfertigung, darauf Gott in diesem Artikel und Handlung sehen [sche], oder wir uns darauf verlassen möchten oder sollten, noch [weder] zum ganzen noch zum halben noch zum wenigsten Teil gesetzt und gehalten sollen werden.

2. Daß das Amt und die Eigenschaft des Glaubens allein bleibe, daß er allein, und sonst nichts anderes, sei das Mittel oder Werkzeug, damit und dadurch Gottes Gnade und Verdienst Christi in der Verheißung des Evangelii empfangen, ergriffen, angenommen, uns appliziert und zugeeignet werde; und daß von demselben Amt und Eigenschaft solcher Applikation oder Zueignung die Liebe und alle andern Tugenden oder Werke ausgeschlossen werden.

3. Daß weder [Er]neuerung, Heiligung, Tugenden oder gute Werke tamquam forma aut pars aut causa iustificationis, das ist, unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott sei, noch für einen Teil oder Ursache unserer Gerechtigkeit gemacht und gesetzt oder sonst unter einigerlei Schein, Titel oder Namen in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung, als dazu nötig und gehörig, eingemengt werden sollen; sondern daß die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens allein [be]stehe in Vergebung der Sünden, lauter aus Gnaden, allein um des Verdienstes Christi willen, welche Güter in der Verheißung des Evangelii uns vorgetragen und allein durch den Glauben empfangen, angenommen, uns appliziert und zugeeignet werden.

Also muß auch bleiben und erhalten werden die Ordnung zwischen dem Glauben und guten Werken, item zwischen der Rechtfertigung und Erneuerung oder Heiligung.

Denn gute Werke gehen nicht vor dem Glauben her, auch nicht die Heiligung vor der Rechtfertigung; sondern erstlich wird in der Belehrung durch den Heiligen Geist der Glaube aus dem Gehör des Evangelii in uns angezündet; derselbe ergreift Gottes Gnade in Christo, dadurch die Person gerechtfertigt wird; danach, wenn die Person gerechtfertigt ist, so wird sie auch durch den Heiligen Geist verneuert und geheiligt; aus welcher Verneuerung und Heiligung alsdann die Früchte der guten Werke folgen. Et haec non ita divelluntur, quasi vera fides aliquando et aliquamdiu stare possit cum malo proposito, sed ordine causarum et effectuum, antecedentium et consequentium, ita distribuuntur. Manet enim, quod Lutherus recte dicit: Bene conveniunt et sunt connexa inseparabiliter fides et opera; sed sola fides est, quae apprehendit tenentia et requisita, inserantur et admisceantur. Et haec est vera particularum exclusivarum in articulo iustificationis sententia, quae diligenter et sedulo in hoc articulo retinenda atque urgenda est, propter rationes, quas statim subiiciemus:

37) I. Primum, ut per illas particulas omnia opera propria, merita, dignitas, gloria et fiducia omnium operum nostrorum in articulo iustificationis penitus excludantur, ita quidem, ut opera nostra neque causae neque meriti ullius in iustificatione, ad quae Deus in hoc negotio respiciat, aut quibus nos fidere possimus aut debeamus, vel ex toto vel dimidia aut minima ex parte rationem habeant.

38) II. Deinde, ut hoc officium et haec proprietates fidei solius sit maneatque, quod videlicet sola fides, et nulla prorsus alia res, sit illud medium et instrumentum, quo Dei [R. 692] gratia et meritum Christi in promissione evangelii apprehendatur, accipiat nobisque applicetur, et ut ab hoc applicationis officio atque proprietate caritas omnesque aliae virtutes aut opera penitus excludantur.

39) III. Denique has formulas teneamus, ut neque renovatio neque sanctificatio, virtutes aut bona opera, tamquam forma aut pars aut causa iustificationis aut sub qualicunque praetextu, titulo aut nomine, articulo iustificationis, tamquam ad eam rem necessaria aut pertinentia, immisceantur; sed ut fidei iustitia tantummodo in remissione peccatorum (ex mera gratia, propter solum Christi meritum) consistat, quae bona in promissione evangelii nobis offerantur, et sola fide recipiantur, apprehendantur nobisque applicentur.

40) Eodem modo etiam conservandus est ordo inter fidem et bona opera, inter iustificationem et renovationem seu sanctificationem.

41) Bona enim opera non praecedunt fidem, et sanctificatio non praecedit iustificationem. Sed primum in conversione per Spiritum Sanctum fides ex auditu evangelii in nobis accenditur. Illa vero apprehendit gratiam Dei in Christo, qua persona iustificatur. Cum vero persona iam est iustificata, tum etiam per Spiritum Sanctum renovatur et sanctificatur; ex ea vero renovatione et sanctificatione deinceps fructus, hoc est, bona opera, sequuntur. Et haec non ita divelluntur, quasi vera fides aliquando et aliquamdiu stare possit cum malo proposito, sed ordine causarum et effectuum, antecedentium et consequentium, ita distribuuntur. Manet enim, quod Lutherus recte dicit: Bene conveniunt et sunt connexa inseparabiliter fides et opera; sed sola fides est, quae apprehendit benedictionem sine operibus, so that they must not be drawn into, woven into, or mingled with the transaction of the justification of the poor sinner before God as necessary or belonging thereto. And the true sense of the particulæ exclusivæ in articulo iustificationis, that is, of the aforementioned terms, in the article of justification, consists in the following, and they should also be urged in this article with all diligence and earnestness [on account of these reasons]:

1. That thereby [through these particles] all our own works, merit, worthiness, glory, and confidence in all our works are entirely excluded in the article of justification so that our works shall not be constituted or regarded as either the cause or the merit of justification, neither entirely, nor half, nor in the least part, upon which God could or ought to look, or we to rely in this article and action.

2. That this remain the office and property of faith alone, that it alone, and nothing else whatever, is the means or instrument by and through which God's grace and the merit of Christ in the promise of the Gospel are received, apprehended, accepted, applied to us, and appropriated; and that from this office and property of such application or appropriation love and all other virtues or works are excluded.

3. That neither renewal, sanctification, virtues nor good works are tamquam forma aut pars aut causa iustificationis, that is, our righteousness before God, nor are they to be constituted and set up as a part or cause of our righteousness, or otherwise under any pretext, title, or name whatever to be mingled in the article of justification as necessary and belonging thereto; but that the righteousness of faith consists alone in the forgiveness of sins out of pure grace, for the sake of Christ's merit alone; which blessings are offered us in the promise of the Gospel, and are received, accepted, applied, and appropriated by faith alone.

In the same manner the order also between faith and good works must abide and be maintained, and likewise between justification and renewal, or sanctification.

For good works do not precede faith, neither does sanctification precede justification. But first faith is kindled in us in conversion by the Holy Ghost from the hearing of the Gospel. This lays hold of God's grace in Christ, by which the person is justified. Then, when the person is justified, he is also renewed and sanctified by the Holy Ghost, from which renewal and sanctification the fruits of good works then follow. Et hæc non ita divelluntur, quasi vera fides aliquando et aliquamdiu stare possit cum malo proposito, sed ordine causarum et effectuum, antecedentium et consequentium, ita distribuuntur. Manet enim, quod Lutherus recte dicit: Bene conveniunt et sunt connexa inseparabiliter fides et opera; sed sola fides est, quæ apprehendit benedictionem sine operibus, et tamen nunquam est sola. That is: This should not be understood as though justification and renewal were sundered from one another in such a manner that a genuine faith sometimes could exist and con-benedictionem sine operibus, et tamen nunquam est sola. Das ist: Welches nicht also verstanden werden soll, als ob die Rechtfertigung und Erneuerung voneinander geschieden [wären] dermaßen, daß ein wahrhaftiger Glaube unterweilen eine Zeitlang neben einem bösen Vorsatz sein und bestehen könnte, sondern es wird hiermit allein die Ordnung angezeigt, wie eines dem andern vorgehe oder nachfolge. Denn es bleibt doch wahr, daß D. Luther recht gesagt hat: „Es reimen und schiden sich sein zusammen der Glaube und die guten Werke; aber der Glaube ist es allein, der den Segen ergreift, ohne die Werke, doch nimmer und zu keiner Zeit allein ist“; wie denn oben erklärt worden.

Es werden auch viele Disputationes durch diesen wahrhaftigen Unterschied nützlich und wohl erklärt, welchen die Apologia über den Spruch Gal. 2 handelt. Denn wenn man von dem Glauben redet, wie der gerecht mache, so ist St. Pauli Lehre, daß der Glaube allein gerecht mache ohne Werke, indem er uns das Verdienst Christi, wie gesagt, appliziert und zuignet. Wenn man aber fragt, woran und wobei ein Christ entweder bei sich selbst oder an andern erkennen und unterscheiden möge einen wahren, lebendigen Glauben von einem gefärbten, toten Glauben, weil viel faule, sichere Christen ihnen einen Wahn vom Glauben einbilden, da sie doch keinen wahren Glauben haben, darauf gibt die lateinische Apologia diese Antwort: Jakobus nennt toten Glauben, wo nicht allerlei gute Werke und Früchte des Geistes folgen. Und auf solche Meinung sagt die lateinische Apologia: Iacobus recte negat, nos tali fide iustificari, quae est sine operibus, hoc est, quae mortua est; das ist: St. Jakob lehrt recht, da er verneint, daß wir durch einen solchen Glauben gerechtfertigt werden, der ohne die Werke ist, welches ein toter Glaube ist.

Es redet aber Jakobus, wie die Apologia sagt, von Werken derjenigen, welche schon durch Christum gerecht [ge]worden, mit Gott versöhnt [sind] und Vergebung der Sünden durch Christum erlangt haben. Wenn man aber fragt, woraus und woher der Glaube das habe, und was dazu gehöre, daß er gerecht und selig mache, ist's falsch und unrecht, wer da sagt: fidem non posse iustificare sine operibus; vel fidem, quatenus caritatem, qua formetur, coniunctam habet, iustificare; vel fidei, ut iustificet, necessariam esse praesentiam bonorum operum; aut ad iustificationem vel in articulo iustificationis esse necessariam praesentiam bonorum operum; vel bona opera esse causam sine qua non, quae per particulas exclusivas ex articulo iustificationis non excludantur. Das ist: daß der Glaube nicht könnte rechtfertigen ohne die Werke, oder daß der Glaube dergestalt rechtfertige oder gerecht mache, inwiefern er die Liebe bei sich habe, um welcher Liebe willen solches dem Glauben zugeschrieben [werde]; oder daß die Gegenwartigkeit der Werke bei dem Glauben notwendig sei, soll anders der Mensch dadurch vor Gott gerechtfertigt werden; oder daß die Gegenwartigkeit der guten Werke im Artikel der Rechtfertigung oder zu der Rechtfertigung vonnöthen sei, also daß die guten Werke eine Ursache sein sollen, ohne welche der Mensch nicht könnte gerechtfertigt werden, welche auch durch die particulas exclusivas: absque operibus etc., das ist, wenn St. Paulus spricht: „ohne Werke“, aus dem Artikel der Rechtfertigung nicht ausgeschlossen werden. Denn der Glaube macht gerecht allein darum und daher, weil er Gottes Gnade und das Verdienst Christi in der Verheißung des Evangelii als ein Mittel und Werkzeug ergreift und annimmt.

Und das sei nach Gelegenheit dieser Schrift genug zu einer summarischen Erklärung der Lehre von der Rechtfertigung des Glaubens, welche in den obgemeldeten Schriften ausführlicher gehandelt wird. Daraus auch die antithesis, das ist, et tamen nunquam est sola. De qua re supra satis est dictum.

42] Ac multae sane disputationes hac vera et solida distinctione utiliter et dextre [R. 693 explicari possunt, quam etiam Apologia, cum agit de dicto Iacobi, 2, 20, affert. Quando enim de fide agitur, quomodo videlicet ea iustificet, haec est ea de re divi Pauli doctrina, quod sola fides sine operibus iustificet [Rom. 3, 28], quatenus nobis Christi meritum, ut diximus, applicat et communicat. Quando vero quaeritur, qua in re et quonam indicio homo Christianus vel in se ipso vel in aliis hominibus veram et vivam fidem, item simulatam et mortuam fidem agnoscere et discernere possit (cum multi torpentes et securi Christiani sibi opinionem quandam loco fidei imaginentur, cum tamen veram fidem non habeant), de hac re Apologia sic respondet: Iacobus eam vocat mortuam fidem, quam non omnis generis bona opera et fructus Spiritus sequuntur. Et in hanc sententiam etiam Latina Apologia loquitur: Iacobus recte negat, nos tali fide iustificari, quae est sine operibus, hoc est, quae mortua est.

43] Iacobus autem (ut Apologia docet) agit de eorum operibus, qui per Christum iam sunt iustificati, cum Deo reconciliati et per Christum remissionem peccatorum sunt consecuti. Cum vero quaeritur, unde fides hoc habeat, et quid requiratur, ut iustificet et salvet, tum falsum erit, si quis dicat, fidem non posse iustificare sine operibus, vel fidem, quatenus caritatem, qua formetur, coniunctam habet, iustificare; vel fidei, ut iustificet, necessarium esse praesentiam bonorum operum: aut ad iustificationem vel in articulo iustificationis esse necessariam praesentiam bonorum operum; vel bona opera esse causam sine qua non, quae per particulas exclusivas ex articulo iustificationis non excludantur. Fides [R. 694 enim tantum eam ob causam iustificat et inde vim illam habet, quod gratiam Dei et meritum Christi in promissione evangelii (tamquam medium et instrumentum) apprehendit et amplectitur.

44] Et haec quidem, pro ratione compendiariae explicationis articuli de iustificatione, sufficient, qui articulus in scriptis supra nominatis copiosius tractatur. Ex his autem, quae iam dicta sunt, facile intelligi potest, tinue for a time together with a wicked intention, but hereby only the order [of causes and effects, of antecedents and consequents] is indicated, how one precedes or succeeds the other. For what Luther has correctly said remains true nevertheless: Faith and good works well agree and fit together [are inseparably connected]; but it is faith alone, without works, which lays hold of the blessing; and yet it is never and at no time alone. This has been set forth above.

Many disputations also are usefully and well explained by means of this true distinction, of which the Apology treats in reference to the passage James 2, 20. For when we speak of faith, how it justifies, the doctrine of St. Paul is that faith alone, without works, justifies, Rom. 3, 28, inasmuch as it applies and appropriates to us the merit of Christ, as has been said. But if the question is, wherein and whereby a Christian can perceive and distinguish, either in himself or in others, a true living faith from a feigned and dead faith, (since many idle, secure Christians imagine for themselves a delusion in place of faith, while they nevertheless have no true faith,) the Apology gives this answer: James calls that dead faith where good works and fruits of the Spirit of every kind do not follow. And to this effect the Latin edition of the Apology says: Iacobus recte negat, nos tali fide iustificari, quae est sine operibus, hoc est, quae mortua est. That is: St. James teaches correctly when he denies that we are justified by such a faith as is without works, which is dead faith.

But James speaks, as the Apology says, concerning the works of those who have already been justified through Christ, reconciled with God, and obtained forgiveness of sins through Christ. But if the question is, whereby and whence faith has this, and what appertains to this that it justifies and saves, it is false and incorrect to say: Fidem non posse iustificare sine operibus; vel fidem, quatenus caritatem, qua formatur, coniunctam habet, iustificare; vel fidei, ut iustificet, necessariam esse praesentiam bonorum operum; vel bona opera esse causam sine qua non, quae per particulas exclusivas ex articulo iustificationis non excludantur. That is: That faith cannot justify without works; or that faith justifies or makes righteous, inasmuch as it has love with it, for the sake of which love this is ascribed to faith [it has love with it, by which it is formed]; or that the presence of works with faith is necessary if otherwise man is to be justified thereby before God; or that the presence of good works in the article of justification, or for justification, is needful, so that good works are a cause without which man cannot be justified, and that they are not excluded from the article of justification by the particulæ exclusivæ: absque operibus etc., that is, when St. Paul says: without works. For faith makes righteous only inasmuch as and because, as a means and instrument, it lays hold of, and accepts, the grace of God and the merit of Christ in the promise of the Gospel.

Let this suffice, according to the plan of this document, as a summary explanation of the doctrine of justification by faith, which is treated more at length in the above-mentioned writings. From these, the antithesis also, that is, the false contrary dogmas, are manifalsche Gegenlehre, Nar [ist], nämlich daß über die [außer den] erzählten auch diese und dergleichen Irrthümer, so wider die jetzt gemelte Erklärung streiten, gestraft, ausgekehrt und verworfen werden müssen; als, da gelehrt wird:

1. Daß unsere Liebe oder guten Werke Verdienst oder Ursache seien der Rechtfertigung vor Gott, entweder gänzlich oder ja zum Theil.

2. Oder daß durch gute Werke der Mensch sich dazu würdig und geschickt machen müsse, daß ihm das Verdienst Christi mitgeteilt möge werden.

3. Vel formalem nostram iustitiam coram Deo esse inhaerentem nostram novitatem seu caritatem; das ist: daß unsere wahrhaftige Gerechtigkeit vor Gott sei die Liebe oder die Erneuerung, welche der Heilige Geist in uns wirkt und [welche] in uns ist.

4. Oder daß zwei Stüde oder Teile zu der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott gehören, darin sie bestehe, nämlich die gnädige Vergebung der Sünden und dann zum andern auch die Verneuerung oder Heiligung.

5. Item, fidem iustificare tantum initialiter, vel partialiter, vel principaliter; et novitatem vel caritatem nostram iustificare etiam coram Deo vel complete, vel minus principaliter.

6. Item, credentes coram Deo iustificari vel coram Deo iustos esse simul et imputatione et inchoatione, vel partim imputatione [iustitiae Christi], partim inchoatione novae obedientiae.

7. Item, applicationem promissionis gratiae fieri et fide cordis et confessione oris ac reliquis virtutibus. Das ist: der Glaube mache allein darum gerecht, daß die Gerechtigkeit durch den Glauben in uns angefangen [sei], oder also, daß gleichwohl gehöre auch die Erneuerung und die Liebe zu unserer Gerechtigkeit vor Gott, doch dergestalt, daß sie nicht die vornehmste Ursache unserer Gerechtigkeit, sondern daß unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott ohne solche Liebe und Erneuerung nicht ganz oder vollkommen sei. Item, daß die Gläubigen vor Gott gerechtfertigt werden und gerecht seien zugleich durch die zugerechnete Gerechtigkeit Christi und durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam oder zum Teil durch die Zurechnung der Gerechtigkeit Christi, zum Teil durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam. Item, daß uns die Verheißung der Gnade zugeeignet werde durch den Glauben im Herzen und durch das Bekenntnis, so mit dem Munde geschieht, und durch andere Tugenden.

Es ist auch das unrecht, wenn gelehrt wird, daß der Mensch anderergestalt oder durch etwas anderes selig müsse werden, denn wie er vor Gott gerechtfertigt wird, also daß wir wohl allein durch den Glauben, ohne Werke gerecht werden, aber ohne Werke selig zu werden oder die Seligkeit ohne Werke zu erlangen, sei unmöglich.

Dieses ist darum falsch, denn es ist stracks wider den Spruch Pauli Röm. 4: „Die Seligkeit ist des Menschen, welchem Gott die Gerechtigkeit zurechnet ohne Werke.“ Und Pauli Grund ist, daß wir auf eine Weise wie die Gerechtigkeit, also auch die Seligkeit erlangen, ja, daß wir eben damit, wenn wir durch den Glauben gerecht werden, auch zugleich empfangen die Kindshaft und Erbschaft des ewigen Lebens und Seligkeit; und dergleichen Paulus die particulas exclusivas, das ist, solche Worte, dadurch die Werke und eigenes Verdienst gänzlich ausgeschlossen wird, nämlich: „aus Gnaden, ohne Werke“, ja so stark bei dem Artikel der Seligkeit als bei dem Artikel der Gerechtigkeit steht und treibt.

Gleichfalls muß auch die Disputation von der Einwohnung der wesentlichen Gerechtigkeit Gottes non modo supra commemoratos errores, verum etiam ea falsa dogmata, quae iam recitabimus, redarguenda, repudianda et reiicienda esse:

45] I. Quod dilectio nostra seu bona opera sint meritum vel causa nostrae coram Deo iustificationis aut ex toto aut saltem ex aliqua parte.

46] II. Quod homo bonis operibus suis se praeparare debeat, ut dignus fiat applicatione et communicatione meritum Christi.

47] III. Formalem nostram iustitiam coram Deo esse inhaerentem nostram novitatem seu caritatem.

48] IV. Quod iustitia fidei coram Deo duabus partibus constet, remissione peccatorum et renovatione seu sanctificatione.

49] V. Fidem iustificare tantum initialiter, vel partialiter, vel principaliter; et novitatem vel caritatem nostram iustificare etiam coram Deo vel complete, vel minus principaliter.

50] VI. Credentes coram Deo iustificari vel coram Deo iustos esse simul et imputatione et inchoatione, vel partim imputatione iustitiae Christi, partim inchoatione novae obedientiae.

51] VII. Applicationem promissionis gratiae fieri et fide cordis et confessione oris et reliquis virtutibus.

der Glaube den Vorzug habe in der Rechtfertigung; Item, daß der Glaube den Vorzug habe in der Rechtfertigung; gleichwohl gehöre auch die Erneuerung und die Liebe zu unserer Gerechtigkeit vor Gott, doch dergestalt, daß sie nicht die vornehmste Ursache unserer Gerechtigkeit, sondern daß unsere Gerechtigkeit vor Gott ohne solche Liebe und Erneuerung nicht ganz oder vollkommen sei. Item, daß die Gläubigen vor Gott gerechtfertigt werden und gerecht seien zugleich durch die zugerechnete Gerechtigkeit Christi und durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam oder zum Teil durch die Zurechnung der Gerechtigkeit Christi, zum Teil durch den angefangenen neuen Gehorsam. Item, daß uns die Verheißung der Gnade zugeeignet werde durch den Glauben im Herzen und durch das Bekenntnis, so mit dem Munde geschieht, und durch andere Tugenden.

52] Sed et hic error reiiciendus est, cum docetur, hominem alio modo seu per aliquid aliud salvari quam per id, quo coram Deo iustificatur, ita ut sine operibus, per solam quidem fidem coram Deo iustificemur, [R. 695] sed tamen absque operibus salutem aeternam consequi impossibile sit.

53] Hoc ideo falsum est, quia e diametro pugnat cum dicto Pauli, Rom. 4, 6: Beatitudo hominis est, cui Deus iustitiam imputat sine operibus. Et hoc est fundamentum Paulinae disputationis, quod eodem prorsus modo et iustitiam et salutem consequamur. Imo, quod eo ipso, cum fide iustificamur, simul etiam adoptionem in filios Dei et hereditatem vitae aeternae atque salutem adipiscamur. Eamque ob causam Paulus particulas illas exclusivas, id est, eiusmodi voces, quibus opera et propria merita prorsus excluduntur, videlicet: ex gratia, sine operibus et similes, non minus constanter et graviter in articulo salutis quam in articulo iustificationis nostrae urget.

54] Praeterea etiam disputatio illa de inhabitatione essentialis iustitiae Dei in nobis fest, namely, that in addition to the errors recounted above also the following and similar ones, which conflict with the explanation now published, must be censured, exposed, and rejected, as when it is taught:

1. That our love or good works are a merit or cause of justification before God, either entirely or at least in part.

2. Or that by good works man must render himself worthy and fit that the merit of Christ may be imparted to him.

3. Vel formalem nostram iustitiam coram Deo esse inhaerentem nostram novitatem seu caritatem; that is, that our real righteousness before God is the love or renewal which the Holy Ghost works in us, and which is in us.

4. Or that two things or parts belong to the righteousness of faith before God in which it consists, namely, the gracious forgiveness of sins, and then, secondly, also renewal or sanctification.

5. Item, fidem iustificare tantum initialiter, vel partialiter, vel principaliter; et novitatem vel caritatem nostram iustificare etiam coram Deo vel complete, vel minus principaliter (that is, that faith justifies only initially, either in part or primarily, and that our newness or love justifies even before God, either completely or secondarily).

6. Item, credentes coram Deo iustificari vel coram Deo iustos esse simul et imputatione et inchoatione, vel partim imputatione, partim inchoatione novae obedientiae (that is, also that believers are justified before God, or are righteous before God, both by imputation and by inchoation at the same time, or partly by the imputation of Christ's righteousness and partly by the beginning of new obedience).

7. Item, applicationem promissionis gratiae fieri et fide cordis et confessione oris ac reliquis virtutibus (that is, also that the application of the promise of grace occurs both by faith of the heart and confession of the mouth, and by other virtues). That is: Faith makes righteous for this reason alone, that righteousness is begun in us by faith, or in this way, that faith takes the precedence in justification; nevertheless, renewal and love also belong to our righteousness before God, however, in such a way that it is not the chief cause of our righteousness, but that our righteousness before God is not entire and complete without such love and renewal. Likewise, that believers are justified and righteous before God at the same time by the imputed righteousness of Christ and the incipient new obedience, or in part by the imputation of Christ's righteousness and in part by the incipient new obedience. Likewise, that the promise of grace is appropriated to us by faith in the heart, and confession which is made with the mouth, and by other virtues.

Also this is incorrect, when it is taught that man must be saved in some other way or through something else than as he is justified before God, so that we are indeed justified before God by faith alone, without works, but that it is impossible to be saved without works or obtain salvation without works.

This is false, for the reason that it is directly opposed to the declaration of Paul, Rom. 4, 6: The blessedness is of the man unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works. And Paul's reason [the basis of Paul's argument] is that we obtain both, salvation as well as righteousness, in one and the same way; yea, that by this very means, when we are justified by faith, we receive at the same time adoption and heirship of eternal life and salvation; and on this account Paul employs and emphasizes the particulas exclusivas, that is, those words by which works and our own merits are entirely excluded, namely, by grace, without works, as forcibly in the article concerning salvation as in the article concerning righteousness.

Likewise also the disputation concerning the indwelling in us of the essential righteousness in uns recht erklärt werden. Denn obwohl durch den Glauben in den Auserwählten, so durch Christum gerecht worden und mit Gott versöhnt sind, Gott Vater, Sohn und heiliger Geist, der die ewige und wesentliche Gerechtigkeit ist, wohnt (denn alle Christen sind Tempel Gottes des Vaters, Sohnes und heiligen Geistes, welcher sie auch treibt, recht zu tun), so ist doch solche Einwohnung Gottes nicht die Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens, davon St. Paulus handelt und sie [und die er] iustitiam Dei, das ist, die Gerechtigkeit Gottes, nennt, um welcher willen wir vor Gott gerecht gesprochen werden, sondern sie folgt auf die vor[her]gehende Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens, welche anders nichts ist denn die Vergebung der Sünden und gnädige Annehmung der armen Sünder allein um Christus' Gehorsams und Verdienstes willen.

Demnach, weil in unsern Kirchen zwischen den Theologen Augsburgerischer Confession bekannt, daß alle unsere Gerechtigkeit außerhalb unser und aller Menschen Verdienst, Werk, Tugend und Würdigkeit zu suchen und allein auf dem Herrn Christo steht, so ist wohl zu betrachten, welcher gestalt Christus in diesem Handel der Rechtfertigung unsere Gerechtigkeit genennet [genannt] wird, nämlich, daß unsere Gerechtigkeit nicht auf die eine oder die andere Natur, sondern auf die ganze Person Christi gesetzt, welcher als Gott und Mensch in seinem einigen, ganzen, vollkommenen Gehorsam unsere Gerechtigkeit ist.

Denn da [denn wenn] Christus gleich vom heiligen Geist ohne Sünde empfangen und geboren und in menschlicher Natur allein alle Gerechtigkeit erfüllt hätte und aber nicht wahrer ewiger Gott gewesen, möchte [könnte] uns solcher der menschlichen Natur Gehorsam und Leiden auch nicht zur Gerechtigkeit gerechnet werden; wie denn auch, da der Sohn Gottes nicht Mensch [ge]worden, die bloße göttliche Natur unsere Gerechtigkeit nicht [hätte] sein können. Demnach so glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß der ganzen Person Christi ganzer Gehorsam, welchen er für uns dem Vater bis in den allerhöchsten Tod des Kreuzes geleistet hat, uns zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet werde. Denn die menschliche Natur allein, ohne die göttliche, [hätte] dem ewigen, allmächtigen Gott weder mit Gehorsam noch Leiden für aller Welt Sünde genügt, die Gottheit aber allein, ohne die Menschheit, zwischen Gott und uns nicht mitteln mögen [nicht vermitteln können].

Weil aber, wie oben vermeldet, der Gehorsam der ganzen Person ist, so ist er eine vollkommene Genugthuung und Versöhnung des menschlichen Geschlechts (dadurch der ewigen, unwandelbaren Gerechtigkeit Gottes, so im Gesetz geoffenbart, genug gesehen) und also unsere Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott gilt, so im Evangelio geoffenbart wird, darauf sich der Glaube vor Gott verläßt, welche Gott dem Glauben zurechnet, wie geschrieben steht Röm. 5: „Gleichwie durch eines Menschen Ungehorsam viel Sünder worden sind, also auch durch eines Gehorsam werden viele gerecht“, und 1 Joh. 1: „Das Blut Jesu Christi, des Sohnes Gottes, reinigt uns von allen Sünden“; item: „Der Gerechte wird seines Glaubens leben“, Hab. 2.

recte declaranda est. Etsi enim Deus Pater, Filius et Spiritus Sanctus (qui est aeterna et essentialis iustitia) per fidem in electis, qui per Christum iustificati et cum Deo reconciliati sunt, habitat (omnes enim vere pii sunt templa Dei Patris, Filii et Spiritus Sancti, a quo etiam ad recte agendum impelluntur), tamen haec inhabitatio Dei non est iustitia illa fidei, de qua Paulus agit eamque iustitiam Dei appellat, propter quam coram Deo iusti pronuntiamur. Sed inhabitatio Dei sequitur antecedentem fidei iustitiam, quae nihil aliud est quam remissio peccatorum, gratuita acceptatio peccatoris, propter solam obedientiam et meritum perfectissimum unius Christi.

55] Cum igitur in ecclesiis nostris apud theologos Augustanae Confessionis extra controversiam positum sit, totam iustitiam nostram extra nos et extra omnium hominum merita, opera, virtutes atque dignitatem quaerendam, eamque in solo Domino nostro [R. 696] Iesu Christo consistere, dextre considerandum est, qua ratione Christus in negotio iustificationis nostra iustitia dicatur. Nempe quod iustitia nostra neque in divina neque in humana natura, sed in tota ipsius persona consistat, quippe qui ut Deus et homo in sola sua, tota et perfectissima obedientia est nostra iustitia.

56] Etiam si enim Christus de Spiritu Sancto quidem sine peccato conceptus et natus esset et in sola humanitate sua omnem iustitiam implevisset, nec tamen verus et aeternus Deus fuisset, talis tamen ipsius humanae naturae obedientia et passio nobis ad iustitiam imputari non posset. Et vicissim, si Filius Dei non homo factus esset, non posset sola divina natura nostra esse iustitia. Quare credimus, docemus et confitemur, quod tota totius personae Christi obedientia, quam ille Patri usque ad ignominiosissimam crucis mortem nostra causa praestitit, nobis ad iustitiam imputetur. Humana enim natura sola, sine divinitate, aeterno, omnipotenti Deo neque obedientia neque passione pro totius mundi peccatis satisfacere valuisset. Divinitas vero sola, sine humanitate, inter Deum et nos mediatoris partes implere non potuisset.

57] Cum autem, ut supra commemoratum est, obedientia illa Christi non sit unius duntaxat naturae, sed totius personae, ideo ea est perfectissima pro humano genere satisfactio et expiatio, quae aeternae et immutabili iustitiae divinae (quae in lege revelata est) satis est factum. Ea obedientia est illa nostra iustitia, quae coram Deo valet et in evangelio revelata seu monstrata nobis est, qua fides nostra coram Deo nititur, quam iustitiam Deus fidei imputat, ut scriptum est Rom. 5, 19: Sicut per inobedientiam unius hominis peccatores constituti sunt multi, ita per unius obedientiam iusti constituentur multi. [R. 697] Et Iohannes inquit 1 Ioh. 1, 7: Sanguis Iesu Christi, Filii Dei, emundat nos ab omni peccato. Item: Iustus fide sua vivet, Rom. 1, 17; Hab. 2, 4.

of God must be correctly explained. For although in the elect, who are justified by Christ and reconciled with God, God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who is the eternal and essential righteousness, dwells by faith (for all Christians are temples of God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, who also impels them to do right), yet this indwelling of God is not the righteousness of faith of which St. Paul treats and which he calls iustitiam Dei, that is, the righteousness of God, for the sake of which we are declared righteous before God; but it follows the preceding righteousness of faith, which is nothing else than the forgiveness of sins and the gracious adoption of the poor sinner, for the sake of Christ's obedience and merit alone.

Accordingly, since in our churches it is acknowledged [established beyond controversy] among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession that all our righteousness is to be sought outside the merits, works, virtues, and worthiness of ourselves and of all men, and rests alone upon Christ the Lord, it must be carefully considered in what respect Christ is called our Righteousness in this affair of justification, namely, that our righteousness rests not upon one or the other nature, but upon the entire person of Christ, who as God and man is our Righteousness in His only, entire, and complete obedience.

For even though Christ had been conceived and born without sin by the Holy Ghost, and had fulfilled all righteousness in His human nature alone, and yet had not been true and eternal God, this obedience and suffering of His human nature could not be imputed to us for righteousness. As also, if the Son of God had not become man, the divine nature alone could not be our righteousness. Therefore we believe, teach, and confess that the entire obedience of the entire person of Christ, which He has rendered the Father for us even to His most ignominious death upon the cross, is imputed to us for righteousness. For the human nature alone, without the divine, could neither by obedience nor suffering render satisfaction to eternal almighty God for the sins of all the world; however, the divinity alone, without the humanity, could not mediate between God and us.

But, since it is the obedience as above mentioned [not only of one nature, but] of the entire person, it is a complete satisfaction and expiation for the human race, by which the eternal, immutable righteousness of God, revealed in the Law, has been satisfied, and is thus our righteousness, which avails before God and is revealed in the Gospel, and upon which faith relies before God, which God imputes to faith, as it is written, Rom. 5, 19: For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous; and 1 John 1, 7: The blood of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, cleanseth us from all sin. Likewise: The just shall live by his faith, Hab. 2, 4; Rom. 1, 17.

Solchergehalt wird uns weder die göttliche noch die menschliche Natur Christi für sich selbst zur Gerechtigkeit zugerechnet, sondern allein der Gehorsam der Person, welche zumal [zugleich] Gott und Mensch [ist]. Und steht also der Glaube auf die Person Christi, wie dieselbe für uns unter das Gesetz getan, unsere Sünde getragen und in seinem Gang zum Vater den ganzen vollkommenen Gehorsam, von seiner heiligen Geburt an bis in den Tod, seinem himmlischen Vater für uns arme Sünder geleistet und damit allen unsern Ungehorsam, der in unserer Natur, derselben Gedanken, Worten und Werken steckt, zugebedt [hat], daß er uns zur Verdamnis nicht zugerechnet, sondern aus lauter Gnade, allein um Christus' willen, verziehen und vergeben wird.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir einhellig über die vorgesehten [außer den bereits genannten] auch nachfolgende und alle dergleichen Irrtümer, als die Gottes Wort, der Lehre der Propheten und Apostel, und unserm christlichen Glauben zuwider sind:

1. Da gelehrt wird, daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei vor Gott allein nach seiner göttlichen Natur.

2. Daß Christus unsere Gerechtigkeit sei allein nach der menschlichen Natur.

3. Daß in den Sprüchen der Propheten und Apostel, wenn von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens geredet wird, die Worte „rechtfertigen“ und „gerechtfertigt werden“ nicht sollen heißen von Sünden ledig sprechen und Vergebung der Sünden erlangen, sondern von wegen der durch den Heiligen Geist eingegossenen Liebe, Tugenden und daraus folgenden Werke mit der Tat und Wahrheit gerechtfertigt werden.

4. Daß der Glaube nicht allein ansehe den Gehorsam Christi, sondern seine göttliche Natur, wie dieselbe in uns wohnt und wirkt, und durch solche Einwohnung unsere Sünden vor Gott zugebedt werden.

5. Daß der Glaube ein solch Vertrauen sei auf den Gehorsam Christi, welcher in einem Menschen sein und bleiben könne, der gleich keine wahrhaftige Ruhe habe, da auch keine Liebe folge, sondern [der Mensch] wider sein Gewissen in Sünden verharre.

6. Daß nicht Gott, sondern allein die Gaben Gottes in den Gläubigen wohnen.

Diese Irrtümer und dergleichen allzumal verwerfen wir einhellig als dem klaren Wort Gottes zuwider und verharren durch Gottes Gnade standhaft und beständig auf der Lehre von der Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens vor Gott, wie dieselbe in der Augsburgerischen Confession und darauf erfolgter Apologia gesetzt, ausgeführt und mit Gottes Wort erwiesen ist.

Was dann ferner zur eigentlichen Erklärung dieses hohen und vornehmen [vornehmsten] Artikels der Rechtfertigung vor Gott vonnöten, daran unserer Seelen Seligkeit gelegen, wollen wir mündlich [jedermann] auf die schöne und herrliche Auslegung D. Luthers über die Epistel St. Pauli an die Galater gewiesen und um geliebter Kürze willen hiermit gezogen haben [uns bezogen haben].

58] Hac ratione nobis neque divina neque humana Christi natura (per se) ad iustitiam imputatur, sed sola obedientia illius personae, quae simul Deus est et homo. Et hoc modo fides nostra respicit in personam Christi, quatenus illa pro nobis legi sese subiecit, peccata nostra pertulit et, cum ad Patrem suum iret, solidam, absolutam et perfectissimam obedientiam (iam inde a nativitate sua sanctissima usque ad mortem) Patri suo coelesti pro nobis miserrimis peccatoribus praestitit. Qua sua obedientia omnem nostram inobedientiam (quae in nostra natura et huius cogitationibus, verbis et operibus haeret) texit, ut ea nobis ad damnationem non imputetur, sed ex mera gratia, propter solum Christum, condonetur atque remittatur.

59] Reicimus igitur atque unanimi consensu damnamus, praeter supra commemoratos errores, etiam sequentes et omnes alios hisce similes, quippe qui Verbo Dei, propheticae et apostolicae doctrinae, et pia nostrae religioni repugnant:

60] I. Quod Christus sit iustitia nostra coram Deo tantum secundum divinam naturam.

61] II. Quod Christus nostra sit iustitia duntaxat secundum humanam naturam.

62] III. Quod in prophetarum et apostolorum dictis (ubi de iustitia fidei agitur) vocabula iustificare et iustificari non significant a peccatis absolvere et remissionem peccatorum consequi, sed propter infusam (per Spiritum Sanctum) caritatem, virtutes et opera, quae inde promanant, re ipsa et revera iustos effici.

63] IV. Quod fides non respiciat tantum obedientiam Christi, sed divinam ipsius naturam, quatenus videlicet ea in nobis [R. 698] habitet et operetur, et quod per hanc inhabitationem nostra coram Deo peccata tegantur.

64] V. Quod fides sit talis in obedientiam Christi fiducia, quae existere et manere possit in eiusmodi homine, qui non vere poenitentiam habeat, et qui caritate sit vacuus et in peccatis contra conscientiam perseveret.

65] VI. Quod non Deus ipse, sed dona Dei duntaxat in credentibus habitent.

66] Hos errores hisque similes omnes unanimiter reicimus, quia Verbo Dei clarissimo repugnant. Et per Dei gratiam constantes perseveramus in doctrina sincera de iustificatione fidei coram Deo, ut ea in Augustana Confessione eiusque Apologia perspicue proposita, explicata et Verbo Dei munita est.

67] Quod praeterea ad copiosorem huius ardui et praecipui articuli iustificationis coram Deo (in quo nostra salus vertitur) explicationem requiritur, de eo praeclarum D. Lutheri commentarium in Epistolam Pauli ad Galatas ab unoquoque consuli et diligenter legi moneamus, ad quem, brevitatis studio, hoc loco nos referimus.

Thus neither the divine nor the human nature of Christ by itself is imputed to us for righteousness, but only the obedience of the person who is at the same time God and man. And faith thus regards the person of Christ as it was made under the Law for us, bore our sins, and in His going to the Father offered to His heavenly Father for us poor sinners His entire, complete obedience, from His holy birth even unto death, and has thereby covered all our disobedience which inheres in our nature, and its thoughts, words, and works, so that it is not imputed to us for condemnation, but is pardoned and forgiven out of pure grace, alone for Christ's sake.

Therefore we unanimously reject and condemn, besides the above-mentioned, also the following and all similar errors, as contrary to God's Word, the doctrine of the prophets and apostles, and our Christian faith:

1. When it is taught that Christ is our righteousness before God according to His divine nature alone.

2. That Christ is our righteousness according to His human nature alone.

3. That in the passages from the prophets and apostles, when the righteousness of faith is spoken of, the words justify and to be justified are not to signify to declare free from sins and to obtain the forgiveness of sins, but to be made actually and really righteous because of love infused by the Holy Ghost, virtues, and the works following from it.

4. That faith looks not only to the obedience of Christ, but to His divine nature as it dwells and works in us, and that by this indwelling our sins are covered before God.

5. That faith is such a trust in the obedience of Christ as can be and remain in a person notwithstanding he has no genuine repentance, in whom also no love follows, but who persists in sins against his conscience.

6. That not God dwells in the believers, but only the gifts of God.

These and like errors, one and all, we unanimously reject as contrary to the clear Word of God, and by God's grace abide firmly and constantly in the doctrine of the righteousness of faith before God, as it is embodied, expounded, and proved from God's Word in the Augsburg Confession, and the Apology issued after it.

Concerning what is needful furthermore for the proper explanation of this profound and chief article of justification before God, upon which depends the salvation of our souls, we direct, and for the sake of brevity herewith refer, every one to Dr. Luther's beautiful and glorious exposition of the Epistle of St. Paul to the Galatians.

IV.

Von guten Werken.

Es hat sich auch ein Zwiespalt von den guten Werken unter den Theologen Augsburger Confession zugetragen, daß ein Teil sich nachfolgender Worte und Art zu reden gebraucht [bedient hat]: Gute Werke sind nötig zur Seligkeit; es ist unmöglich, ohne gute Werke selig [zu] werden; item: Es ist niemand ohne gute Werke selig [ge]worden; weil von den Rechtgläubigen [wahrhaft Gläubigen] gute Werke als Früchte des Glaubens erfordert [werden], und der Glaube ohne die Liebe tot [ist], obgleich solche Liebe keine Ursache der Seligkeit sei.

Das andere [der andere] Teil aber hat dagegen gestritten, daß gute Werke wohl nötig seien, aber nicht zur Seligkeit, sondern um anderer Ursachen willen, und daß deswegen vor[her]gehende propositiones oder gebrauchte Reden (als die dem Vorbild der gesunden Lehre und Worte ungemäß und von den Papisten allewege und noch der Lehre unsers christlichen Glaubens entgegengesetzt, da wir bekennen, daß allein der Glaube gerecht und selig mache) in der Kirche nicht zu dulden [seien], damit der [damit das] Verdienst Christi, unsers Seligmachers, nicht geschmälert werde, und die Verheißung der Seligkeit den Gläubigen fest und gewiß sein und bleiben möge.

In diesem Streit ist auch von etlichen wenigen diese streitige Proposition oder Rede geführt, daß gute Werke zur Seligkeit schädlich seien. Es ist auch von etlichen disputiert worden, daß gute Werke nicht nötig, sondern freiwillig seien, die weil sie nicht durch Furcht und Strafe des Gesetzes erzwungen, sondern aus freiwilligem Geist und frühlichem Herzen geschehen sollen. Dagegen hat der andere Teil gestritten [behauptet], daß gute Werke nötig seien.

Solcher Streit hat sich anfangs über den Worten necessitas und libertas, das ist, „notwendig“ und „frei“, zugetragen, weil besonders das Wort necessitas, „nötig“, nicht allein die ewige, unwanderbare Ordnung, nach welcher alle Menschen Gott zu gehorsamen schuldig und pflichtig [verpflichtet] sind, sondern auch zuzeiten einen Zwang heißt, damit das Gesetz die Leute zu den guten Werken bringt.

Nachmals aber hat man nicht allein von den Worten disputiert, sondern auf das heftigste die Lehre an ihr selbst angefochten und gestritten, daß der neue Gehorsam in den Wiedergeborenen von wegen obvermelter Gottes Ordnung nicht nötig sei.

Diese Uneinigkeit christlich und nach Anleitung Gottes Wort zu erklären und durch seine Gnade gänzlich hinzulegen [beizulegen], ist unsere Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis, wie folgt:

Erstlich ist in diesem Artikel von folgenden Punkten unter den Unfern kein Streit: als, daß [es] Gottes Wille, Ordnung und Befehl sei, daß die Gläubigen in guten Werken wandeln sollen, und daß rechtschaffene gute Werke nicht seien, die ihm [die sich] ein jeder guter Meinung selbst erdenkt oder die nach Menschenfahrungen geschehen, sondern die Gott selber in seinem Wort vorgeschrieben und befohlen hat; daß auch recht-

IV.

DE BONIS OPERIBUS.

1) Dissidium porro ortum est inter quosdam theologos Augustanae Confessionis de bonis operibus. Alii enim has propositiones usurparunt: Bona opera sunt necessaria ad salutem; impossibile est, sine bonis operibus salvari; nemo unquam sine bonis operibus est salvatus; quandoquidem a vere credentibus bona opera ut fructus fidei requirantur, et fides sine caritate mortua sit, etiamsi caritas non sit causa nostrae salutis.

2) Alii vero hoc dogma impugnarunt atque docuerunt, quod bona opera necessaria [R. 699] quidem sint, sed non ad salutem, verum propter alias causas. Et affirmarunt, paulo ante recitatas propositiones in ecclesia Dei non esse ferendas, propterea quod formae sanorum verborum et piae doctrinae non sint conformes, et quod papistae cum antea semper, tum vero imprimis nostro saeculo eas propositiones opposuerint piae nostrae doctrinae, qua asserimus, sola fide nos iustificari et salvari. Itaque eas reiiciendas iudicarunt, ne meritum Christi, Servatoris nostri, extenuetur, et ut promissio de salute nostra credentibus certa sit et firma maneat.

3) In hoc dissidio quidam pauci hanc propositionem (quae et ipsa controversiae occasionem dedit) attulerunt, bona opera ad salutem esse perniciosam. Sed et a quibusdam disputatum fuit, quod bona opera non necessaria, sed libera et spontanea sint, propterea quod non metu et comminationibus legis extorqueantur, sed spiritu spontaneo et alacri mente fieri debeant. Alii vero asseruerunt, bona opera esse necessaria.

4) Haec posterior controversia initio tantum ex aequivocatione vocabulorum necessitatis et libertatis occasionem sumpsit, quod vocabulum necessitatis non tantum immutabilem et aeternum ordinem divinum (quo omnes homines ad obediendum Deo debitores sunt et astricti), verum etiam interdum coactionem, qua lex homines ad bona opera severe urget, designet.

5) Progressu autem temporis non iam de verbis amplius disputatum, sed de rebus ipsis magna vehementia fuit disceptatum. Et a quibusdam acriter pugnatum est, novam obedientiam in renatis (quam supra commemoratus ordo divinus requirit) non esse necessariam.

6) Ut autem et hoc dissidium iuxta [R. 700] Verbi Dei analogiam pie declararetur et per Dei gratiam prorsus componatur, doctrinam, fidem et confessionem nostram de hoc negotio recitabimus:

7) Primo in hoc articulo nulla est inter nostros dissensio de his propositionibus: quod videlicet Dei voluntas et ordinatio sit atque mandatum, ut credentes in bonis operibus ambulent; quod ea non sint vere bona opera, quae quisque bona intentione ipsemet excogitat, aut quae secundum humanas traditiones fiunt, sed ea, quae Deus ipse in Verbo suo praescripsit atque praecepit; quod vere bona

IV.

OF GOOD WORKS.

A disagreement has also occurred among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession concerning good works, one part employing the following words and manner in speaking of them: Good works are necessary for salvation; it is impossible to be saved without good works; likewise, no one has been saved without good works; because, they say, good works are required of true believers as fruits of faith, and faith without love is dead, although such love is no cause of salvation.

The other part, however, contended, on the contrary, that good works are indeed necessary; however, not for salvation, but for other reasons; and that on this account the aforementioned propositiones, or expressions, which have been used (as they are not in accord with the form of sound doctrine and with the Word, and have been always and are still set by the Papists in opposition to the doctrine of our Christian faith, in which we confess that faith alone justifies and saves) are not to be tolerated in the Church, in order that the merit of Christ, our Savior, be not diminished, and the promise of salvation may be and remain firm and certain to believers.

In this controversy also the following controverted proposition, or expression, was employed by some few, that good works are injurious to salvation. It has also been argued by some that good works are not necessary, but are voluntary [free and spontaneous], because they are not extorted by fear and the penalty of the Law, but are to be done from a voluntary spirit and a joyful heart. Over against this the other side contended that good works are necessary.

This [latter] controversy was originally occasioned by the words necessitas and libertas, that is, necessary and free, because especially the word necessitas, necessary, signifies not only the eternal, immutable order according to which all men are obliged and in duty bound to obey God, but sometimes also a coercion, by which the Law forces men to good works.

But afterwards there was a disputation not only concerning the words, but the doctrine itself was attacked in the most violent manner, and it was contended that the new obedience in the regenerate is not necessary because of the above-mentioned divine order.

In order to explain this disagreement in a Christian way and according to the guidance of God's Word, and by His grace to settle it completely, our doctrine, faith, and confession are as follows:

First, there is no controversy among our theologians concerning the following points in this article, namely: that it is God's will, order, and command that believers should walk in good works; and that truly good works are not those which every one contrives himself from a good intention, or which are done according to traditions of men, but those which God Himself has prescribed and com-schaffene gute Werke nicht aus eigenen natürlichen Kräften, sondern also geschehen: wenn die Person durch den Glauben mit Gott versöhnt und durch den Heiligen Geist verneuert, oder, wie Paulus redet, „in Christo Jesu neugeschaffen wird zu guten Werken“.

Es ist auch ohne Streit, wie und warum der Gläubigen gute Werke, ob sie gleich in diesem Fleisch unrein und unvollkommen, Gott gefällig und angenehm seien, nämlich um des Herrn Christi willen, durch den Glauben, weil die Person Gott angenehm ist. Denn die Werke, so zur Erhaltung äußerlicher Zucht gehören, welche auch von den Ungläubigen und Unbelehrten geschehen und erfordert werden, obwohl vor der Welt dieselben löblich, dazu auch von Gott in dieser Welt mit zeitlichen Gütern belohnt werden, jedoch, weil sie nicht aus rechtem Glauben gehen, sind sie vor Gott Sünde, das ist, mit Sünden besetzt, und werden vor Gott für Sünde und unrein um der verderbten Natur willen, und weil die Person mit Gott nicht versöhnt ist, gehalten. Denn „ein böser Baum kann nicht gute Früchte bringen“, wie auch geschrieben steht Röm. 14: „Was nicht aus Glauben gehet, das ist Sünde.“ Denn es muß zuvor die Person Gott gefällig sein, und das allein um Christus' willen, sollen ihm anders auch derselben Person Werke gefallen.

Verhalben der recht guten und Gott wohlgefälligen Werke, die Gott in dieser und zukünftiger Welt belohnen will, Mutter und Ursprung muß der Glaube sein, darum sie denn rechte Früchte des Glaubens wie auch des Geistes von St. Paulo genannt werden. Denn wie D. Luther schreibt in der Vorrede über die Epistel St. Pauli an die Römer: „So ist der Glaube ein göttlich Werk in uns, das uns verwandelt und neugebirt aus Gott und tötet den alten Adam, macht uns ganz andere Menschen von Herzen, Mut, Sinn und allen Kräften und bringt den Heiligen Geist mit sich. O! es ist ein lebendig, geschäftig, tätig, mächtig Ding um den Glauben, daß unmöglich, daß er nicht ohne Unterlaß sollte Gutes wirken. Er fragt auch nicht, ob gute Werke zu tun sind, sondern ehe man fragt, hat er sie getan und ist immer im Tun. Wer aber nicht solche Werke tut, der ist ein glaubloser Mensch, tappt und sieht um sich nach dem Glauben und guten Werken und weiß weder was Glaube oder gute Werke seien, wäscht und schwächt doch viel Worte vom Glauben und guten Werken. Glaube ist eine lebendige, erregene [bewegene, kühne, entschlossene] Zuersticht auf Gottes Gnade, so gewiß, daß er tausendmal darüber stürbe. Und solche Zuersticht und Erkenntnis göttlicher Gnade macht fröhlich, trohig und lustig gegen Gott und alle Creaturen; welches der Heilige Geist tut im Glauben, daher der Mensch ohne Zwang willig und lustig wird, jedermann Gutes zu tun, jedermann zu dienen, allerlei zu leiden, Gott zu Liebe und Lob, der ihm solche Gnade erzeigt hat, also daß unmöglich ist, Werke vom Glauben scheiden, ja, so unmöglich, als brennen und leuchten vom Feuer mag geschieden werden.“

Dominus eum est persecutus. Itaque impossibile est, bona opera a fide vera separare, quemadmodum calor urens et lux ab igne separari non potest.

opera non propriis naturalibus viribus, sed tum demum fiant, cum persona per fidem cum Deo est reconciliata et per Spiritum Sanctum renovata et in Christo Jesu, ut Paulus Eph. 2, 10 loquitur, denuo ad bona opera creata est.

8] Sed et hoc extra controversiam est, quomodo et qua de causa bona credentium opera (licet in hac carne nostra impura et imperfecta) Deo placeant et accepta sint, videlicet propter Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, per fidem, propterea quod persona Deo accepta est. Etsi enim opera illa, quae ad conservandam externam disciplinam faciunt (qualia etiam ab infidelibus et non ad Deum conversis hominibus fiunt, et quidem requiruntur), suam coram mundo dignitatem et laudem habent et temporalibus quibusdam praemiis in hoc mundo a Deo ornantur, attamen, cum non ex vera fide proficiantur, revera coram Deo sunt peccata, hoc est, peccatis contaminata, et a Deo pro peccatis et immunditia reputantur propter naturae humanae corruptionem, et quia persona cum Deo non est reconciliata. Mala enim arbor non potest bonos fructus ferre [Matth. 7, 18]. Et in ea, quae ad Romanos scripta est, legitur, Rom. 14, 23: Quidquid non ex fide est, peccatum est. Necesse est enim, ut persona Deo antea placeat, idque propter solum Christum, si modo personae illius opera Deo placere et accepta esse debent. [R. 701]

9] Quare eorum operum, quae revera bona sunt et Deo placent, quae etiam Dominus tum in hoc tum in futuro saeculo vult remunerari, mater et fons est ipsa fides, unde et veri fructus fidei, sicut et fructus Spiritus a divo 10] Paulo [Gal. 5, 22] appellantur. Fides enim (quemadmodum D. Lutherus in praefatione epistolae Pauli ad Romanos scribit) est divinum quoddam opus in nobis, quod nos immutat, ex Deo regenerat, veterem Adamum mortificat et ex nobis plane alios homines (in corde, animo et omnibus viribus nostris) facit et Spiritum Sanctum nobis confert. Et est fides illa quiddam vivum, efficax, potens, ita ut fieri non possit, quin semper bona operetur. 11] Neque fides quaerit demum, an bona opera sint facienda, sed priusquam de ea re inquiratur, iam multa bona opera effecit et semper in agendo est occupata. Qui vero non ad hunc modum bene operatur, is homo vera fide caret, et ubi sit fides, ubi bona opera, quasi caecus palando quaerit, neque tamen quid fides aut bona opera sint, novit, interim tamen multa inepte de fide et bonis operibus garrit 12] et nugatur. Fides iustificans est vita et solida fiducia in gratiam seu clementiam Dei, adeo certa, ut homo millies mortem oppetere, quam eam fiduciam sibi eripi pateretur. Et haec fiducia atque agnitio divinae gratiae et clementiae laetos, animosos, alacres efficit cum erga Deum tum erga omnes creaturas, quam laetitiam et alacritatem Spiritus Sanctus excitat per fidem. Inde homo sine ulla coactione promptus et alacris redditur, ut omnibus beneficiat, omnibus inserviat, omnia toleret, idque in honorem et laudem Dei pro ea gratia, qua manded in His Word; also, that truly good works are done, not from our own natural powers, but in this way: when the person by faith is reconciled with God and renewed by the Holy Ghost, or, as Paul says, is created anew in Christ Jesus to good works, Eph. 2, 10.

Nor is there a controversy as to how and why the good works of believers, although in this flesh they are impure and incomplete, are pleasing and acceptable to God, namely, for the sake of the Lord Christ, by faith, because the person is acceptable to God. For the works which pertain to the maintenance of external discipline, which are also done by, and required of, the unbelieving and unconverted, although commendable before the world, and besides rewarded by God in this world with temporal blessings, are nevertheless, because they do not proceed from true faith, in God's sight sins, that is, stained with sin, and are regarded by God as sins and impure on account of the corrupt nature and because the person is not reconciled with God. For a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit, Matt. 7, 18, as it is also written Rom. 14, 23: Whatsoever is not of faith is sin. For the person must first be accepted of God, and that for the sake of Christ alone, if also the works of that person are to please Him.

Therefore, of works that are truly good and well-pleasing to God, which God will reward in this world and in the world to come, faith must be the mother and source; and on this account they are called by St. Paul true fruits of faith, as also of the Spirit. For, as Dr. Luther writes in the Preface to St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans: Thus faith is a divine work in us, that changes us and regenerates us of God, and puts to death the old Adam, makes us entirely different men in heart, spirit, mind, and all powers, and brings with it [confers] the Holy Ghost. Oh, it is a living, busy, active, powerful thing that we have in faith, so that it is impossible for it not to do good without ceasing. Nor does it ask whether good works are to be done; but before the question is asked, it has wrought them, and is always engaged in doing them. But he who does not do such works is void of faith, and gropes and looks about after faith and good works, and knows neither what faith nor what good works are, yet babbles and prates with many words concerning faith and good works. [Justifying] faith is a living, bold [firm] trust in God's grace, so certain that a man would die a thousand times for it [rather than suffer this trust to be wrested from him]. And this trust and knowledge of divine grace renders joyful, fearless, and cheerful towards God and all creatures, which [joy and cheerfulness] the Holy Ghost works through faith; and on account of this, man becomes ready and cheerful, without coercion, to do good to every one, to serve every one, and to suffer everything for love and praise to God, who has conferred this grace on him, so that it is impossible to separate works from faith, yea, just as impossible as it is for heat and light to be separated from fire.

Aber weil von diesen Punkten unter den Unsern kein Streit, wollen wir dieselben hier nach der Länge nicht handeln, sondern allein von den streitigen Punkten uns einfältig und deutlich gegeneinander erklären.

Und erstlich, was belangt Notwendigkeit oder Freiwilligkeit der guten Werke, ist offenbar, daß in der Augsburgerischen Confession und derselben Apologia gebraucht und oft wiederholt werden diese Reden, daß gute Werke nötig seien; item, daß es nötig sei, gute Werke zu tun, welche auch notwendig dem Glauben und der Versöhnung folgen sollen; item, daß wir notwendig gute Werke, so Gott geboten, tun sollen und tun müssen. So wird auch in der Heiligen Schrift selber das Wort „not“, „nötig“ und „notwendig“, item „sollen“ und „müssen“ also gebraucht: was wir von wegen Gottes Ordnung, Befehl und Willen zu tun schuldig sind, als Röm. 13; 1 Kor. 9; Act. 5; Joh. 15; 1 Joh. 4.

Werden verhalten [es werden deshalb] gemeldete Reden oder Propositiones in diesem christlichen und eigentlichen Verstand unbillig von etlichen gestraft und verworfen, welche billig, den sicheren, episturischen Wahn zu strafen und zu verwerfen, sollen geführt und gebraucht werden, da viele ihnen [sich] einen toten Glauben oder Wahn, der da ohne Buße und ohne gute Werke ist, dichten, als könnte wohl zugleich in einem Herzen sein rechter Glaube und böser Vorsatz, in Sünden zu verharren und fortzufahren, welches unmöglich ist; oder als könnte wohl einer wahren Glauben, Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit haben und behalten, wenn er gleich ein fauler und unfruchtbarer Baum ist und bleibt, da gar keine guten Früchte folgen; ja, wenn er gleich in Sünden wider das Gewissen verharret oder wiederum sich auf solche Sünden vorfälsch begibt; welches unrecht und falsch ist.

Es muß aber auch die Erinnerung von diesem Unterschied hierbei gemerkt werden, daß nämlich verstanden werden solle necessitas ordinis, mandati et voluntatis Christi ac debiti nostri, non autem necessitas coactionis. Das ist: wenn dies Wort „nötig“ gebraucht [wird], soll es nicht von einem Zwang, sondern allein von der Ordnung des unwandelbaren Willens Gottes, des Schuldner wir sind, verstanden werden, dahin auch sein Gebot weist, daß die Creatur ihrem Schöpfer gehorsam sei: denn sonst (wie 2 Kor. 9 und in der Epistel St. Pauli an Philemon, item 1 Petr. 5) „aus Not“ genannt wird, was einem wider seinen Willen, durch Zwang oder sonst abgenötigt wird, daß er [es] äußerlich zum Schein, aber doch ohne und wider seinen Willen tue. Denn solche Scheinwerke will Gott nicht haben, sondern das Volk des Neuen Testaments soll sein ein „williges Volk“, Ps. 110, und „willig opfern“, Ps. 54, „nicht mit Unwillen oder aus Zwang, sondern von Herzen gehorsam sein“, 2 Kor. 9; Röm. 6. Denn „einen willigen Geber hat Gott lieb“, 2 Kor. 9. In diesem Verstand und solcher Meinung ist's recht ge-redet und gelehrt, daß rechte gute Werke willig oder aus freiwilligem Geist von denen, die der Sohn Gottes gefreiet [befreit hat], geschehen sollen; wie denn auf diese Meinung vornehmlich die Disputation von Freiwilligkeit der guten Werke von etlichen geführt ist.

13] Quia vero de hac re inter nostros [R. 702 non est controversia, nolumus esse nunc prolixiores, sed tantum de iis rebus, quae in controversiam venerunt, quanta fieri potest, simplicitate et perspicuitate mentem nostram declarabimus.

14] Quod igitur ad necessitatem aut libertatem bonorum operum attinet, negari non potest, quod in Augustana Confessione eisdemque Apologia haec verba saepe usurpentur atque repetantur: bona opera esse necessaria; et, quod necesse sit, bona opera facere, quia necessario fidem et reconciliationem cum Deo sequi debent; et, quod necessario ea opera, quae Deus praecepit, a nobis sint facienda. Sed et sacrae litterae vocabulis necessitatis, necessarii, debiti, debemus, oportet etc. utuntur, quoties de iis rebus agunt, quas ratione mandati, ordinationis et voluntatis divinae praestare tenemur, Rom. 13, 5; 1 Cor. 9, 16; Act. 5, 29; Ioh. 15, 12; 1 Ioh. 4, 21.

15] Quare propositiones hae (bona opera esse necessaria, et necesse esse bene agere) in commemorata pia et genuina sententia immerito a quibusdam reprehenduntur et reiiciuntur. Hae enim retinendae atque urgendae sunt ad redarguendam atque refutandam securitatis Epicureae opinionem, qua multi fidem mortuam aut persuasionem quandam vanam, quae sine poenitentia et bonis operibus est, pro vera fide falso habent; quasi scilicet in uno eodemque corde simul stare possint vera fides et malum propositum in peccatis perseverandi et progrediendi, quod tamen prorsus est impossibile; aut quasi aliquis veram fidem, iustitiam et salutem habere ac retinere valeat, etiamsi arbor putrida et infrugifera sit maneatque, neque ullos bonos fructus ferat, imo, quamvis in peccatis contra conscientiam perseveret, aut rursus destinata malitia in scelera priora relabatur. Haec falsa et impia sunt.

16] Interim tamen de hoc etiam discrimine commonefactio observanda est, quod per [R. 703 vocabulum necessitatis intelligenda sit necessitas ordinis, mandati et voluntatis Christi ac debiti nostri, non autem necessitas coactionis.

17] Vult enim mandatum Dei, ut creatura suo Creatori obediat. In aliis enim quibusdam Scripturae locis vocabula ex necessitate de iis rebus accipiuntur, quae homini praeter voluntatem eius coactione quadam aut alias extorquentur, ut externe et quidem in speciem, sed tamen contra suam voluntatem aliquid faciat, 2 Cor. 9, 7; Philemon 14; 1 Petr. 5, 2. Talia enim hypocritica opera Deus non probat, sed vult, ut populus novi testamenti sit populus spontaneus, et ut spontanea sacrificia offerat atque obedientiam non invitatus aut coactus, sed ex animo praestet, Ps. 110, 3; 54, 8; 18] 2 Cor. 9, 7; Rom. 6, 17. Hilarem enim datorem diligit Dominus, 2 Cor. 9, 7. In hanc sententiam recte dicitur atque docetur, quod vere bona opera sponte, libero spiritu, ab iis, quos Filius Dei liberavit, fieri debeant; quemadmodum etiam disputatio illa de libertate bonorum operum praecipue ad hanc sententiam confirmandam a quibusdam agitata est.

But since there is no controversy on these points among our theologians, we will not treat them here at length, but only explain ourselves, part against part, in a simple and plain manner regarding the controverted points.

And first, as regards the necessity or voluntariness of good works, it is manifest that in the Augsburg Confession and its Apology these expressions are often used and repeated that good works are necessary. Likewise, that it is necessary to do good works, which also are necessarily to follow faith and reconciliation. Likewise, that we necessarily are to do and must do such good works as God has commanded. Thus also in the Holy Scriptures themselves the words necessity, needful, and necessary, likewise, ought and must, are used concerning what we are bound to do because of God's ordinance, command, and will, as Rom. 13, 5; 1 Cor. 9, 9; Acts 5, 29; John 15, 12; 1 John 4, 21.

Therefore the expressions or propositions mentioned [that good works are necessary, and that it is necessary to do good] are unjustly censured and rejected in this Christian and proper sense, as has been done by some; for they are employed and used with propriety to rebuke and reject the secure, Epicurean delusion, by which many fabricate for themselves a dead faith or delusion which is without repentance and without good works, as though there could be in a heart true faith and at the same time the wicked intention to persevere and continue in sins, which is impossible; or, as though one could, indeed, have and retain true faith, righteousness, and salvation even though he be and remain a corrupt and unfruitful tree, whence no good fruits whatever come, yea, even though he persist in sins against conscience, or purposely engages again in these sins, — all of which is incorrect and false.

But in this connection the following distinction must also be noted, namely, that the meaning must be: necessitas ordinis, mandati et voluntatis Christi ac debiti nostri, non autem necessitas coactionis (a necessity of Christ's ordinance, command, and will, and of our obligation, but not a necessity of coercion). That is: When this word necessary is employed, it should be understood not of coercion, but only of the ordinance of the immutable will of God, whose debtors we are; thither also His commandment points that the creature should be obedient to its Creator. For in other places, as 2 Cor. 9, 7, and in the Epistle of St. Paul to Philemon, v. 14, also 1 Pet. 5, 2, that is termed of necessity which is wrung from one against his will, by force or otherwise, so that he acts externally for appearance, but nevertheless without and against his will. For such specious [hypocritical] works God does not want [does not approve], but the people of the New Testament are to be a willing people, Ps. 110, 3, and sacrifice freely, Ps. 54, 6, not grudgingly or of necessity, but are to be obedient from the heart, 2 Cor. 9, 7; Rom. 6, 17. For God loveth a cheerful giver, 2 Cor. 9, 7. In this understanding and in such sense it is correctly said and taught that truly good works should be done willingly or from a voluntary spirit by those whom the Son of God has made free, even as it was especially for [confirming] this opinion that the disputation concerning the voluntariness of good works was engaged in by some.

Aber hier ist wiederum der Unterschied auch wohl zu merken, davon Paulus sagt Röm. 7: „Ich bin willig und habe Lust zu Gottes Gesetz nach dem inneren Menschen, aber in meinem Fleisch finde ich ein ander Gesetz, welches“ nicht allein unwillig und unlustig ist, sondern auch „dem Gesetz meines Gemüths widerstrebet.“ Und was das unwillige und widerspenstige Fleisch belangt, da sagt Paulus 1 Kor. 9: „Ich betäube und zähme meinen Leib“, und Gal. 5; Röm. 8: „Welche Christo angehören, die kreuzigen, ja töten ihr Fleisch samt seinen Lüsten, Begierden und Geschäften.“ Das aber ist falsch und muß gestraft werden, wenn vorgegeben und gelehrt wird, als wären die guten Werke den Gläubigen also frei, daß es in ihrer freien Willkür stünde, daß sie solche tun oder lassen oder dawider handeln wollten oder möchten, und sie nichtsdestoweniger den Glauben, Gottes Schuld und Gnade behalten könnten.

Zum andern, wenn gelehrt wird, daß gute Werke vonnöten seien, muß auch erklärt werden, warum und aus was Ursachen sie vonnöten sind, wie die Ursachen in der Augsburgerischen Konfession und Apologia erzählt werden.

Aber hier muß man sich gar wohl vorsehen, daß die Werke nicht in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung und Seligmachung gezogen und eingemengt werden. Derhalben werden billig die Propositiones verworfen, daß den Gläubigen gute Werke zur Seligkeit vonnöten seien, also daß es unmöglich sei, ohne gute Werke selig [zu] werden. Denn sie sind stracks wider die Lehre de particulis exclusivis in articulo iustificationis et salvationis, das ist, sie streiten wider die Worte, mit welchen St. Paulus unsere Werke und Verdienst aus dem Artikel der Rechtfertigung und Seligmachung gänzlich ausgeschlossen und alles allein der Gnade Gottes und dem Verdienst Christi zugeschrieben hat, wie in dem vor[her]gehenden Artikel erklärt [ist]. Item, sie nehmen den angefochtenen, betrübten Gemüthen den Trost des Evangelii, geben Ursache zum Zweifel, sind in viel Wege gefährlich, stärken die Vermessenheit eigener Gerechtigkeit und das Vertrauen auf eigene Werke, werden dazu von den Papisten angenommen und zu ihrem Vorteil wider die reine Lehre von dem alleinigmachenden Glauben geführt. So sind sie auch wider das Vorbild der gesunden Worte, da geschrieben steht: „die Seligkeit sei allein des Menschen, welchem Gott zurechnet die Gerechtigkeit, ohne Zutun der Werke“, Röm. 4. Item, in der Augsburgerischen Konfession, im sechsten Artikel, steht geschrieben, man werde selig ohne die Werke, allein durch den Glauben. So hat auch D. Luther diese Propositiones verworfen und verdammt:

1. An den falschen Propheten bei den Galatern.

2. An den Papisten in gar viel Orten.

3. An den Wiedertäufern, da sie also glossieren: man solle wohl den Glauben auf der Werke Verdienst nicht setzen, aber man müsse sie dennoch gleichwohl haben als nötige Dinge zur Seligkeit.

4. Auch an etlichen andern unter den Seinen, so diese propositionem also glossieren wollten: ob wir gleich die Werke erfordern als nötig zur Seligkeit, so lehren wir doch nicht, das Vertrauen auf die Werke setzen, in Gen., Kap. 22. [In dem Ex-

19] Hic autem etiam discrimen hoc observandum est, de quo Paulus loquitur Rom. 7, 22 sq.: Delector lege Dei (promptus sum ad bene agendum) secundum interiorem hominem, sed in carne mea legem aliam reperio, quae non modo invita et ad bene operandum difficilis est, verum etiam legi mentis meae repugnat. Et quod ad illam rebellem et difficile carnem nostram attinet, ea de re Paulus sic ait 1 Cor. 9, 27; Gal. 5, 24; Rom. 8, 13: Castigo corpus meum et in servitutem redigo, et: Qui sunt Christi, carnem suam crucifixerunt, imo mortificaverunt, cum vitiis et concupiscentiis. Contra autem opinio falsa redarguenda et reiicienda est, cum docetur, bona opera ita esse libera homini Christiano, ut in eius libero arbitrio positum sit, ea vel facere vel omittere, aut licet contra legem Dei [R. 704] peccetur, nihilominus tamen fidem Dei, gratiam atque favorem retineri posse.

21] Deinde, cum docetur, bona opera necessaria esse, etiam hoc explicandum est, quare quibusque de causis ea sint necessaria, quae causae in Augustana Confessione eiusque Apologia recitantur.

22] Interim tamen diligenter in hoc negotio cavendum est, ne bona opera articulo iustificationis et salutis nostrae immisceantur. Propterea merito hae propositiones reiiciuntur: bona opera fidelibus necessaria esse ad salutem, ita ut impossibile sit, sine bonis operibus salvari, quia simpliciter pugnant cum doctrina de particulis exclusivis in articulo iustificationis et salvationis, quibus particulis divus Paulus opera et merita nostra ab articulo iustificationis et salutis nostrae penitus exclusit et omnia soli gratiae atque clementiae divinae et Christi merito ascripsit, 23] quemadmodum superius declaravimus. Et propositiones illae (de necessitate bonorum operum ad salutem) perturbatis et afflictis conscientiae veram evangelii consolationem eripiunt, occasionem praebent dubitationi de gratia Dei, multis modis sunt periculosae, praesumptionem et falsam opinionem de propria iustitia et fiducia propriae dignitatis confirmant, a papistis acceptantur et ad ipsorum malam causam fulciendam (contra sinceram doctrinam de sola fide salvante) adducuntur. Quin etiam formae sanorum verborum repugnant, cum scriptum sit Rom. 4, 6: beatitudinem tantum esse hominis, cui Deus imputat iustitiam sine operibus. Et in Confessione Augustana, articulo sexto, scriptum legimus, salvari nos sine opere, sola fide. Sed et D. Lutherus has propositiones rejecit atque damnavit:

25] I. Primo quidem in falsis apostolis, qui Galatas in errorem induxerant.

26] II. Deinde in papistis, multis admodum locis.

27] III. Postea etiam in Anabaptistis, qui hanc interpretationem afferunt, quod [R. 705] fides quidem non debeat niti meritis operum, sed tamen ea necessario ad salutem requiri.

28] IV. Postremo in quibusdam aliis, suis hominibus, qui hanc, ut loquuntur, glossam in medium adducebant: Si maxime, dicebant, bona opera tamquam ad salutem necessaria requiramus, tamen non docemus, quod bonis

But here, again, it is well to note also the distinction of which St. Paul says, Rom. 7, 22 f.: [I am willing] and delight in the Law of God after the inward man. But I see another law in my members, that is not only unwilling or disinclined, but also warring against the law of my mind. And as regards the unwilling and rebellious flesh, Paul says, 1 Cor. 9, 27: I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection, and Gal. 5, 24; Rom. 8, 13: They that are Christ's have crucified, yea, slain, the flesh with its affections and lusts. But it is false, and must be censured, when it is asserted and taught as though good works were free to believers in the sense that it were optional with them to do or to omit them, or that they might or could act contrary thereto [to the Law of God], and none the less could retain faith and God's favor and grace.

Secondly, when it is taught that good works are necessary, it must also be explained why and for what reasons they are necessary, which reasons are enumerated in the Augsburg Confession and Apology.

But here we must be well on our guard lest works are drawn and mingled into the article of justification and salvation. Therefore the propositions are justly rejected, that to believers good works are necessary for salvation, so that it is impossible to be saved without good works. For they are directly contrary to the doctrine de particulis exclusivis in articulo iustificationis et salvationis (concerning the exclusive particles in the article of justification and salvation), that is, they conflict with the words by which St. Paul has entirely excluded our works and merits from the article of justification and salvation, and ascribed everything to the grace of God and the merit of Christ alone, as explained in the preceding article. Again, they [these propositions concerning the necessity of good works for salvation] take from afflicted, troubled consciences the comfort of the Gospel, give occasion for doubt, are in many ways dangerous, strengthen presumption in one's own righteousness and confidence in one's own works; besides, they are accepted by the Papists, and in their interest adduced against the pure doctrine of the alone-saving faith. Moreover, they are contrary to the form of sound words, as it is written that blessedness is only of the man unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, Rom. 4, 6. Likewise, in the Sixth Article of the Augsburg Confession it is written that we are saved without works, by faith alone. Thus Dr. Luther, too, has rejected and condemned these propositions:

1. In the false prophets among the Galatians [who led the Galatians into error].
2. In the Papists, in very many places.
3. In the Anabaptists, when they present this interpretation: We should not indeed rest faith upon the merit of works, but we must nevertheless have them as things necessary to salvation.
4. Also in some others among his own followers, who wished to interpret this propo-

Concordia Triglotta.

turs, auf den sich hier die Konfessionformel bezieht, sagt Luther u. a.: „Negativa haec est: Non sola fides iustificat, sed fides coniuncta operibus. Ac huic propositioni callidam declarationem sive limitationem addunt: Licet exigamus opera tamquam necessaria ad salutem, inquit, tamen non docemus, confidendum operibus. Est satis astutus diabolus, sed nihil agit, tametsi fucum imperitis et rationi faciat.“ E. opp. exeg. 5, 265.]

Demnach und aus jetzt erzählten Ursachen soll es billig in unsern Kirchen dabei bleiben, daß nämlich gemeldete Weisen zu reden nicht gelehrt, verteidigt oder beschönigt, sondern aus unsern Kirchen als falsch und unrecht ausgelegt und verworfen werden, als die zur Zeit der Verfolgung, da am meisten Klares, richtiges Bekenntnis wider allerlei corruptelas und Verfälschungen des Artikels der Rechtfertigung vonnöten war, aus dem Interim wiederum verneuert, hergefloßen und in Disputation gezogen sind.

Zum dritten, weil auch disputiert wird, ob gute Werte die Seligkeit erhalten, oder ob sie nötig seien, den Glauben, Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit zu erhalten, und aber hieran hoch und viel gelegen (denn „wer verharret bis ans Ende, wird selig werden“, Matth. 24; item Hebr. 3: „Wir sind Christus' teilhaftig worden, so wir anders das angefangene Wesen bis ans Ende festhalten“), muß auch gar wohl und eigentlich erklärt werden, wie die Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit in uns erhalten, daß sie nicht wiederum verloren werden.

Und ist verhalben erstlich dieser falsche epikurische Wahn ernstlich zu strafen und zu verworfen, daß etliche dachten [wähnen], es könne der Glaube und die empfangene Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit durch keine, auch mutwilligen und vorsächlichen Sünden oder bösen Werte verloren werden, sondern wenn ein Christ gleich ohne Furcht und Scham den bösen Lüsten folge, dem Heiligen Geist widerstrebe und auf Sünden wider das Gewissen vorsächlich sich begeben, daß er gleichwohl nichtsdestoweniger Glauben, Gottes Gnade, Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit behalte.

Wider diesen schädlichen Wahn sollen mit allem Fleiß und Ernst diese wahrhaftigen, unwandebaren göttlichen Dräuungen und ernstlichen Strafen [und] Vermahnungen den Christen, so durch den Glauben gerecht [ge]worden sind, oft wiederholt und eingeildet [eingepägt] werden: 1 Kor. 6: „Irret nicht; kein Hurer, kein Ehebrecher, kein Geiziger usw. wird das Reich Gottes ererben.“ Gal. 5: „Die solches tun, werden das Reich Gottes nicht besitzen.“ Röm. 8: „So ihr nach dem Fleisch lebet, so werdet ihr sterben.“ Kol. 3: „Um solcher willen kommt der Zorn Gottes über die Ungehörigen.“

Wann aber und welchergestalt aus diesem Grunde die Vermahnung zu guten Werken, ohne Verbunkelung der Lehre vom Glauben und des Artikels der Rechtfertigung, könne geschärft werden, [davon] zeigt die Apologia ein sein Vorbild, da sie Articulo 20. über den Spruch 2 Petr. 1: „Festiget euch, euren Beruf festzumachen“, also sagt: „Petrus lehrt, warum man gute Werke tun soll, nämlich daß wir unsern Beruf festmachen, daß ist, daß wir nicht aus unserm Beruf fallen, operibus sit confidendum. (In commentario suo super Genesim, cap. 22.)

29] Quare et ex iam commemoratis causis in ecclesiis nostris merito hoc ratum, certum et fixum esse debet, quod phrases seu propositiones illae, de bonis operibus ad salutem necessariis, non sint docendae, defendendae, pingendae, sed potius ex ecclesiis nostris ut falsae et non sincere explodendae atque rejiciendae, quippe quae tempore persecutionis (ubi clara et perspicua confessio adversus omnis generis corruptelas et depravationes articuli iustificationis maxime opus erat) ex interreligionis formula renovatae promanarint atque denuo disputationibus novis occasionem praebuerint.

30] Postea, cum de eo etiam disputatur [disputetur]: an bona opera salutem conservent, aut num ad retinendam aut conservandam fidem, iustitiam et salutem sint necessaria, diligenter et accurate declarandum est, qua ratione iustitia et salus in nobis conserventur, ne rursus amittantur. Scriptum est enim [Matth. 10, 22; 24, 13]: Qui perseveraverit usque ad finem, salvus erit. Et apostolus ait Hebr. 3, 6. 14: Participes Christi effecti sumus, si tamen initium substantiae usque ad finem firmum retinuerimus.

31] Et quidem imprimis falsa et Epicurea illa opinio graviter redarguenda atque rejicienda est, quod quidam fingunt, fidem et acceptam iustitiam atque salutem non posse ullis peccatis aut sceleribus (tametsi omnino [R. 706] voluntarie et destinata malitia mala opera perpetrentur) amitti, sed etiamsi homo ab-que omni Dei timore et pudore pravis suis concupiscentiis indulgeat, Spiritui Sancto repugnet et atrociam flagitia contra conscientiam suam (et quidem malo proposito) designet, nihilominus tamen fidem, gratiam Dei, iustitiam atque salutem retineri posse.

32] Contra hanc pestilentissimam persuasionem singulari diligentia hae verissimae immotae divinae comminationes, poenae et admonitiones Christianis, per fidem iustificatis, saepe repetendae atque inculcandae sunt [1 Cor. 6, 9 sq.]: Nolite errare; neque fornicarii neque adulteri neque avari etc. regnum Dei possidebunt. Et alibi, Gal. 5. 21; Eph. 5, 5: Qui talia agunt, regnum Dei non consequentur. Et ad Romanos 8. 13: Si secundum carnem vixeritis, moriemini. Et Col. 3. 6: Propter talia venit ira Dei super filios incredulitatis.

33] Quando autem et qua ratione ex hoc fundamento exhortationes ad bona opera (absque obscuracione doctrinae de fide et articuli de iustificatione) acui possint, Apologia luculentum eius rei exemplar depingit, ubi capite XX. super verba Petri, 2 Petr. 1, 10 (Satagite vocationem vestram firmam facere), haec verba habet: Petrus docet, quare sint bona opera facienda, scilicet ut sit firma vocatio, hoc est, ne vocatione sua excidant, si sition thus: Although we require works as necessary to salvation, yet we do not teach to place trust in works. On Gen. 22.

Accordingly, and for the reasons now enumerated, it is justly to remain settled in our churches, namely, that the aforesaid modes of speech should not be taught, defended, or excused, but be thrown out of our churches and repudiated as false and incorrect, and as expressions which were renewed in consequence of the Interim, originated from it, and were [again] drawn into discussion in times of persecution, when there was especial need of a clear, correct confession against all sorts of corruptions and adulterations of the article of justification.

Thirdly, since it is also disputed whether good works preserve salvation, or whether they are necessary for preserving faith, righteousness, and salvation, and this again is of high and great importance, — for he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved, Matt. 24, 13; also Heb. 3, 6, 14: We are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end, — we must also explain well and precisely how righteousness and salvation are preserved in us, lest it be lost again.

Above all, therefore, the false Epicurean delusion is to be earnestly censured and rejected, namely, that some imagine that faith and the righteousness and salvation which they have received can be lost through no sins or wicked deeds, not even through wilful and intentional ones, but that a Christian although he indulges his wicked lusts without fear and shame, resists the Holy Ghost, and purposely engages in sins against conscience, yet none the less retains faith, God's grace, righteousness, and salvation.

Against this pernicious delusion the following true, immutable, divine threats and severe punishments and admonitions should be often repeated and impressed upon Christians who are justified by faith: 1 Cor. 6, 9: Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, etc., shall inherit the kingdom of God. Gal. 5, 21; Eph. 5, 5: They which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. Rom. 8, 13: If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die. Col. 3, 6: For which thing's sake the wrath of God cometh upon the children of disobedience.

But when and in what way the exhortations to good works can be earnestly urged from this basis without darkening the doctrine of faith and of the article of justification, the Apology shows by an excellent model, when in Article XX, on the passage 2 Pet. 1, 10: Give diligence to make your calling and election sure, it says as follows: Peter teaches why good works should be done, namely, that we may make our calling sure, that is, that wenn wir wiederum sündigen. Tut gute Werke, spricht er, daß ihr bei eurem himmlischen Beruf bleibt, daß ihr nicht wieder abfallt und verliert Geist und Gaben, die euch nicht um der folgenden Werke willen, sondern aus Gnaden durch Christum widerfahren sind und nun erhalten werden durch den Glauben. Der Glaube aber bleibt nicht in denen, die sündlich Leben führen, den Heiligen Geist verlieren, die Buße von sich stoßen.“ Bis daher die Worte aus der Apologia.

Dagegen aber hat es die Meinung nicht, daß der Glaube allein im Anfang die Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit erreiche und danach sein Amt den Werken übergebe, daß dieselben hierfür den Glauben, die empfangene Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit erhalten müßten, sondern, auf daß die Verheißung der Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit nicht allein zu empfangen, sondern auch zu behalten, uns fest und gewiß sein mögen [möge], gibt Paulus Röm. 5 dem Glauben nicht allein den Eingang zur Gnade, sondern auch daß wir in der Gnade stehen und uns rühmen der zukünftigen Herrlichkeit, daß ist: Anfang, Mittel und Ende gibt er alles dem Glauben allein. Item Röm. 11: „Sie sind abgebrochen um ihres Unglaubens willen, du aber stehst durch den Glauben.“ Kol. 1: „Er wird euch darstellen heilig und unsträflich vor ihm selbst, so ihr anders bleibet im Glauben.“ 1 Petr. 1: „Wir werden aus Gottes Macht durch den Glauben bewahrt zur Seligkeit.“ Item: „Ihr werdet das Ende eures Glaubens davonbringen, nämlich der Seelen Seligkeit.“

Weil denn aus Gottes Wort offenbar, daß der Glaube das eigentliche einige Mittel ist, dadurch Gerechtigkeit und Seligkeit nicht allein empfangen, sondern auch von Gott erhalten wird, soll billig verworfen werden, das im Tridentinischen Concilio geschlossen [beschlossen ist], und was sonst mehr auf dieselbe Meinung ist gerichtet worden, daß unsere guten Werke die Seligkeit erhalten, oder daß die empfangene Gerechtigkeit des Glaubens oder auch der Glaube selbst durch unsere Werke entweder gänzlich oder ja zum Teil erhalten und bewahrt werden.

atque etiam non augeri coram Deo per bona opera, sed opera ipsa fructus solummodo et signa esse iustificationis adeptae, non etiam ipsius augendae causam, anathema sit.“] Denn obwohl vor diesem Streit etliche viel reine Lehrer solche und dergleichen Reden in Auslegung der Heiligen Schrift gebraucht, hiermit aber keineswegs gekniet [gewesen], obdermeldete Irrtümer der Papisten zu bestätigen: jedoch, weil nachmals über solcher Weise zu reden Streit entstanden, daraus allerlei ärgerliche Weiterung erfolget [erfolgte], ist es am aller sichersten, nach der Vermahnung St. Pauli, über „dem Vorbilde der gesunden Worte“ sowohl als über der reinen Lehre selbst zu halten, dadurch viel unnötiges Gezänk abgeschnitten und die Kirche vor vielem Ärgernis behütet werden mag.

Zum vierten, was die Proposition belangt, daß gute Werke zur Seligkeit schädlich sein sollten, erklären wir uns deutlich also: Wenn jemand die guten Werke in den Artikel der Rechtfertigung ziehen, seine Gerechtigkeit oder das Vertrauen der Seligkeit darauf setzen, damit die Gnade Gottes verdienen und dadurch selig werden wolle, hierauf sagen nicht wir, sondern sagt Paulus selbst, und iterum peccent. Facite (inquit) bona opera, ut perseveretis in vestra coelitus vobis iniuncta vocatione, ne rursum deficiatis et amittatis Spiritum ac dona, quae prius contigerunt, non propter sequentia opera, sed ex gratia, per Christum, et iam retinentur fide. At fides non manet in his, qui pravam vitam agunt et amittunt Spiritum Sanctum et abiciunt poenitentiam. Hactenus Apologia.

34] E contrario autem non est sentiendum, quod fides initio tantum iustitiam et salutem apprehendat, postea vero officium suum operibus resignet, ut ea deinceps fidem, [R. 707] apprehensam iustitiam et salutem conservare debeant. Ut enim nobis promissio de iustitia et salute nostra non modo consequenda, verum etiam retinenda, certa et firma esse possit, Paulus Rom. 5, 2 non tantum aditum ad gratiam, verum etiam, quod in gratia perseveramus et de futura gloria gloriamur (hoc est, initium, medium et finem), soli fidei ascribit. Et alibi, Rom. 11, 20, ait: Propter incredulitatem suam defracti sunt, tu autem fide stas. Et ad Colossenses 1, 22 sq. inquit: Exhibebit vos sanctos et immaculatos et irreprehensibiles coram se ipso, si tamen permanetis in fide fundati et stabiles etc. Et Petrus ait, 1 Petr. 1, 5. 9: In virtute Dei custodimini per fidem in salutem. Et: Reportabitis finem fidei vestrae, salutem animarum.

35] Cum igitur ex sacrarum litterarum testimoniis manifestum sit, quod fides proprium et unicum illud medium sit, quo iustitia et salus non modo apprehenduntur, verum etiam a Deo conservantur, merito reiiciendum est Tridentinae Synodi decretum (et si quid alibi in eam sententiam fuit propositum), quod videlicet bona nostra opera salutem conservent, aut quod apprehensa fidei iustitia aut fides ipsa per nostra opera vel ex toto vel saltem ex parte retineantur ac conserventur. [Synodus Tridentina, sess. 6, can. 24: „Si quis dixerit, iustitiam acceptam non conservari

36] Etsi enim ante motam hanc controversiam multi sinceri doctores eiusmodi phrasibus in explicatione Sacrae Scripturae usi sunt, non autem eo animo, quod commemoratos papistarum errores confirmare vellent: tamen cum interea de eiusmodi phrasibus disceptationes, scandala et distractiones variae exortae sint, longe tutissimum est, iuxta Pauli admonitionem [2 Tim. 1, 13] formam sanorum verborum non minori diligentia quam ipsam sinceram doctrinam firmiter retinere, qua ratione multis non necessariis concertationibus ansa praeciditur, et multa in ecclesia Dei offendi-cula praecaventur.

37] Praeterea, quod ad propositionem [R. 708] illam attinet: bona opera ad salutem esse pernicioiosa, sententiam nostram perspicue exponemus. Si quis bona opera articulo iustificationis immisceat, iustitiam suam aut fiduciam salutis suae in ea reponere, gratiam Dei iis promereri et per ea salutem consequi velit, respondemus non quidem nos, sed divus Paulus we may not fall from our calling if we again sin. "Do good works," he says, "that you may persevere in your heavenly calling, that you may not fall away again, and lose the Spirit and the gifts, which come to you, not on account of works that follow, but of grace, through Christ, and are now retained by faith. But faith does not remain in those who lead a sinful life, lose the Holy Ghost, and reject repentance." Thus far the Apology.

But, on the other hand, the sense is not that faith only in the beginning lays hold of righteousness and salvation, and then resigns its office to the works as though thereafter they had to sustain faith, the righteousness received, and salvation; but in order that the promise, not only of receiving, but also of retaining righteousness and salvation, may be firm and sure to us, St. Paul, Rom. 5, 2, ascribes to faith not only the entrance to grace, but also that we stand in grace and boast of the future glory, that is, the beginning, middle, and end he ascribes all to faith alone. Likewise, Rom. 11, 20: Because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Col. 1, 22: He will present you holy and unblamable and unreprouvable in His sight, if ye continue in the faith. 1 Pet. 1, 5, 9: By the power of God we are kept through faith unto salvation. Likewise: Receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

Since, then, it is manifest from God's Word that faith is the proper and only means by which righteousness and salvation are not only received, but also preserved by God, the decree of the Council of Trent, and whatever elsewhere is set forth in the same sense, is justly to be rejected, namely, that our good works preserve salvation, or that the righteousness of faith which has been received, or even faith itself, is either entirely or in part kept and preserved by our works.

For although before this controversy quite a few pure teachers employed such and similar expressions in the exposition of the Holy Scriptures, in no way, however, intending thereby to confirm the above-mentioned errors of the Papists, still, since afterwards a controversy arose concerning such expressions, from which all sorts of offensive distractions [debates, offenses, and dissensions] followed, it is safest of all, according to the admonition of St. Paul, 2 Tim. 1, 13, to hold fast as well to the form of sound words as to the pure doctrine itself, whereby much unnecessary wrangling may be cut off and the Church preserved from many scandals.

Fourthly, as regards the proposition that good works are said to be injurious to salvation, we explain ourselves clearly as follows: If any one should wish to drag good works into the article of justification, or rest his righteousness or trust for salvation upon them, to merit God's grace and be saved by them, to this not we say, but St. Paul himself wiederholt's zum drittenmal Phil. 3, daß einem solchen Menschen seine Werke nicht allein unnützlich und hinderlich, sondern auch schädlich seien. Es ist aber die Schuld nicht der guten Werke an ihnen selbst, sondern des falschen Vertrauens, so wider das ausgebrütete [ausdrückliche] Wort Gottes auf die Werke gesetzt wird.

Aber hieraus folgt keineswegs, daß man simpliciter und also bloß dahinsagen solle: Gute Werke sind den Gläubigen zu oder an ihrer Seligkeit schädlich; denn in den Gläubigen sind gute Werke, wenn sie propter veras causas et ad veros fines, das ist, der Meinung geschehen, wie sie Gott von den Wiedergeborenen erforbert, [eine] Anzeigung der Seligkeit, Phil. 1. Wie denn Gottes Wille und ausdrücklicher Befehl ist, daß die Gläubigen gute Werke tun sollen, welche der Heilige Geist wirkt in den Gläubigen, die ihm [die sich] auch Gott um Christi willen gefallen läßt, ihnen herrliche Belohnung in diesem und künftigen Leben verheißt.

Derwegen auch diese Proposition in unsern Kirchen gestraft und verworfen wird, inwiefern sie, also bloß gesagt, falsch und ärgerlich ist, dadurch Zucht und Ehrbarkeit geschwächt, das rohe, wilde, sichere, episturische Leben eingeführt und gestärkt werden möchte. Denn was einem zu seiner Seligkeit schädlich ist, davor soll er sich ja mit höchstem Fleiß hüten.

Weil aber die Christen von den guten Werken nicht abgehalten, sondern zum fleißigsten dazu vermahnt und angehalten werden sollen, so kann und soll diese bloße Proposition in der Kirche nicht gebildet, geführt noch verteidigt werden.

V.

Vom Gesetz und Evangelio.

Nachdem der Unterschied des Gesetzes und Evangelii ein besonderer herrlich Licht ist, welches dazu dient, daß Gottes Wort recht geteilt und der heiligen Propheten und Apostel Schriften eigentlich erklärt und verstanden [werden], ist mit besonderem Fleiß über denselben zu halten, damit diese zwei Lehren nicht miteinander vermischet oder aus dem Evangelio ein Gesetz gemacht, dadurch der [das] Verdienst Christi verbunkelt und die betäubten Gewissen ihres Trostes beraubt [werden], den sie sonst in dem heiligen Evangelio haben, wenn dasselbe lauter und rein gepredigt, und [mit dem sie] sich in ihren höchsten Ansehnungen wider das Schrecken des Gesetzes aufhalten [aufrecht erhalten] können.

Nun ist hier gleichergestalt zwischen etlichen Theologen Augsburger Konfession Zwiespalt eingetreten, da der eine Teil vor[ge]ben, das Evangelium sei eigentlich nicht allein eine Gnadenpredigt, sondern auch zugleich eine Predigt der Buße, welche die größte Sünde, nämlich den Unglauben, strafft. Der andere Teil aber hat gehalten und gestritten, daß das Evangelium nicht eigentlich sei eine Buße oder Strafpredigt, welches eigentlich dem Gesetz Gottes zugehöre, daß alle Sünde und also auch den Unglauben strafe; sondern das Evangelium sei eigentlich eine Predigt von der Gnade und Huld Gottes um Christus' ipse, idque tertio repetit Phil. 3, 7 sqq., quod tali homini opera sua non tantum sint inutilia atque ad salutem impedimento, verum etiam perniciosa sint. Culpa tamen non est bonorum operum per se, sed vanae fiduciae, quae contra expressum Dei Verbum in opera collocatur.

38) Inde tamen haudquaquam consequitur, quod simpliciter et nude asserere liceat, bona opera credentibus ad salutem esse perniciosam. Bona enim opera in credentibus (cum propter veras causas fiunt et ad veros fines, sicuti ea Deus a renatis exigit, referuntur) indicia sunt aeternae salutis, Phil. 1, 11. Siquidem haec est voluntas et hoc expressum Dei mandatum, ut credentes bona opera faciant, quae Spiritus Sanctus in credentibus operatur, eaque Deus Pater propter Christum accepta et grata habet et praeclara illis praemia, huius et futurae vitae, promittit.

39) Eam ob causam etiam paulo ante commemorata propositio in ecclesiis nostris reprehenditur et relicitur, propterea quod ita nude usurpata falsa est et offendiculi plena, qua disciplina et morum honestas labefactantur, dissolutae vero et Epicureae ferae vitae ianua aperitur et confirmatur. Ab ea enim re, quae alicui ad animae suae salutem perniciose creditur, abstinendum et cavendum esse omnes iudicant.

40) Cum vero Christiani a bonis operibus non deterrendi, sed potius quam diligentissime ad ea adhortandi sint, profecto nuda ista propositio in ecclesia Christi tolerari non potest nec defendenda est.

V.

[R. 709]

DE LEGE ET EVANGELIO.

1) Cum discrimen legis et evangelii magnam et clarissimam lucem sacris litteris afferat, cuius adminiculo Verbum Dei recte secari et prophetica atque apostolica scripta dextre explicari atque intelligi possunt, accurata diligentia illud est in ecclesia conservandum atque retinendum, ne haec duo doctrinarum genera inter se commisceantur aut evangelion in legem transformetur. Ea enim ratione meritum Christi obscuraretur, et conscientis perturbatis dulcissima consolatio (quam in evangelio Christi, sincere praedicato, habent, quae etiam sese in gravissimis tentationibus adversus legis terrores sustentant) prorsus eriperetur.

2) Orta est autem etiam de hoc ipso negotio quaedam inter aliquos Augustanae Confessionis theologos controversia. Una enim pars asseruit, evangelion proprie non esse tantum doctrinam de gratia Dei, verum etiam esse simul concionem poenitentiae, quae summum peccatum, videlicet incredulitatem, redarguit. Altera vero pars contrariam sententiam propugnavit, quod nimirum evangelion proprie non sit concio poenitentiae, arguens peccatum (hoc enim legis Dei proprium esse officium, arguere omnia peccata, atque ita etiam incredulitatem), sed evangelion proprie esse says, and repeats it three times, Phil. 3, 7 ff., that to such a man his works are not only useless and a hindrance, but also injuriously. But this is not the fault of the good works themselves, but of the false confidence placed in the works, contrary to the express Word of God.

However, it by no means follows thence that we are to say simpliciter and flatly: Good works are injurious to believers for or as regards their salvation; for in believers good works are indications of salvation when they are done propter veras causas et ad veros fines (from true causes and for true ends), that is, in the sense in which God requires them of the regenerate, Phil. 1, 20; for it is God's will and express command that believers should do good works, which the Holy Ghost works in believers, and with which God is pleased for Christ's sake, and to which He promises a glorious reward in this life and the life to come.

For this reason, too, this proposition is censured and rejected in our churches, because as a flat statement it is false and offensive, by which discipline and decency might be impaired, and a barbarous, dissolute, secure, Epicurean life be introduced and strengthened. For what is injurious to his salvation a person should avoid with the greatest diligence.

However, since Christians should not be deterred from good works, but should be admonished and urged thereto most diligently, this bare proposition cannot and must not be tolerated, employed, nor defended in the Church [of Christ].

V.

OF THE LAW AND THE GOSPEL.

As the distinction between the Law and the Gospel is a special brilliant light, which serves to the end that God's Word may be rightly divided, and the Scriptures of the holy prophets and apostles may be properly explained and understood, we must guard it with especial care, in order that these two doctrines may not be mingled with one another, or a law be made out of the Gospel, whereby the merit of Christ is obscured and troubled consciences are robbed of their comfort, which they otherwise have in the holy Gospel when it is preached genuinely and in its purity, and by which they can support themselves in their most grievous trials against the terrors of the Law.

Now, here likewise there has occurred a dissent among some theologians of the Augsburg Confession; for the one side asserted that the Gospel is properly not only a preaching of grace, but at the same time also a preaching of repentance, which rebukes the greatest sin, namely, unbelief. But the other side held and contended that the Gospel is not properly a preaching of repentance or of reproof [preaching of repentance, convicting sin], as that properly belongs to God's Law, which re-proves all sins, and therefore unbelief also; wissen, durch welchen den Bekehrten zu Christo der Unglaube, in dem sie zuvor gestekt, den auch das Geseß Gottes gekraft hat, verziehen und vergeben worden [vergeben werde].

Da wir nun diesen Zwiespalt recht bedenken, ist solcher vornehmlich daher verursacht worden, daß das Wörtlein „Evangelium“ nicht in einerlei und gleichem Verstande allwege, sondern auf zweierlei Weise in heiliger göttlicher Schrift wie auch von den alten und neuen Kirchenlehrern gebraucht und verstanden worden. Denn einmal wird es gebraucht, daß dadurch verstanden [wird] die ganze Lehre Christi, unsers Herrn, die er auf Erden in seinem Predigtamt geführt und im neuen Testamente zu führen befohlen und also damit die Erklärung des Geseßes und Verkündigung der Huld und Gnade Gottes, seines himmlischen Vaters, begriffen hat, wie Mark. 1 geschrieben steht: „Das ist der Anfang des Evangelii von Jesu Christo, dem Sohne Gottes.“ Und bald darauf werden die summarischen Hauptstücke gesetzt, Buße und Vergebung der Sünden. Also, da Christus nach seiner Auferstehung den Aposteln befohlen, „das Evangelium in aller Welt zu predigen“, Mark. 16, faßt er die Summa solcher seiner Lehre mit wenig Worten zusammen, da er Luc. 24 sagt: „Also ist's geschrieben, und also mußte Christus leiden und auferstehen von den Toten am dritten Tage und predigen lassen in seinem Namen Buße und Vergebung der Sünden unter allen Heiden.“ Gleichfalls auch nennt Paulus seine ganze Lehre das Evangelium, Act. 20. Er faßt aber die Summa solcher seiner Lehre in diese Hauptstücke: Buße zu Gott und den Glauben an Christum. Und in dem Verstande ist die generalis definitio, daß ist, die Beschreibung des Wortes „Evangelii“, wenn es in weitläufigem Verstand und außerhalb dem eigentlichen Unterschied (außerhalb des eigentlichen Unterschiedes) des Geseßes und Evangelii gebraucht wird, recht, wenn gesagt wird, das Evangelium sei eine Predigt von der Buße und Vergebung der Sünden. Denn es haben Johannes, Christus und die Apostel ihre Predigt von der Buße angefangen und also nicht allein die gnadenreiche Verheißung von Vergebung der Sünden, sondern auch das Geseß Gottes ausgelegt und getrieben. Danach wird das Wort „Evangelium“ in einem andern, nämlich in seinem eigentlichen Verstand gebraucht, da es nicht die Predigt von der Buße, sondern allein die Predigt von der Gnade Gottes begreift, wie gleich hernach folgt Mark. 1, da Christus sagt: „Tut Buße und glaubet dem Evangelio!“

Wie denn auch das Wörtlein „Buße“ nicht in einerlei Verstand in heiliger Schrift gebraucht wird. Denn an etlichen Orten der heiligen Schrift wird es gebraucht und genommen für die ganze Belehrung des Menschen, als Luc. 13: „Werdet ihr nicht Buße tun, so werdet ihr alle auch also umkommen.“ Und im 15. Kapitel: „Also wird Freude sein über einen Sünder, der Buße tut.“ Aber in diesem Ort, Mark. 1, wie auch anderswo, da unterschiedlich gesetzt wird die Buße und der Glaube an Christum, Act. 20, oder Buße und Vergebung der Sünden, Luc. 24, heißt Buße tun anders nichts, denn die Sünde wahrhaftig erkennen, herzlich bereuen und davon absteigen; welche Erkenntnis aus dem Geseß kommt, aber zu heilsamer Belehrung zu Gott nicht genug ist, wenn nicht der praedicationem de gratia et clementia Dei propter Christum, per quem conversis ad Christum incredulitas (in qua antea haeserant, quam etiam lex Dei redarguerat) condonetur atque remittatur.

3] Cum autem de hoc dissidio diligenter cogitamus,prehenditur, inde adeo illud exortum esse, quod vocabulum evangelii [R. 710 non semper in una eademque significatione accipitur, sed duobus modis tum in sacris litteris tum in veterum ac neotericorum scriptis usurpetur et accipitur. Uno enim modo totam Christi doctrinam significat, quam ministerio suo in his terris proposuit et in novo testamento proponendam praecepit, et hac ratione Christus legis explicationem et annuntiationem clementiae et gratiae Dei Patris sui coelestis est complexus, sicut Marci primo, v. 1, scriptum est: Initium evangelii Iesu Christi, Filii Dei etc. Et paulo post capita totius doctrinae coelestis praecipua recitantur, videlicet poenitentia et remissio peccatorum. Ad eundem modum, cum Christus post resurrectionem suam apostolis praeceperet Marc. 16, 15, ut praedicarent evangelion in universo terrarum orbe, totius doctrinae suae summam brevissimis comprehendit, inquit Luc. 24, 46 sq.: Sic scriptum est, et sic oportebat Christum pati, et resurgere a mortuis tertia die et praedicari in nomine eius poenitentiam et remissionem peccatorum in omnes gentes. Et sic etiam Paulus Act. 20, 21 totam suam doctrinam vocat evangelion, summam autem suae doctrinae distribuit in haec duo praecipua capita: in poenitentiam erga Deum et 5] fidem in Christum. Et in hoc sensu generalis illa definitio evangelii (cum late accipitur et extra discrimen legis et evangelii usurpatur) vera est, cum dicitur: Evangelion est concio de poenitentia et [de] remissione peccatorum. Etenim Iohannes Baptista, Christus et apostoli praedicationem suam a poenitentia sunt exorsi et ita non tantum promissionem illam dulcissimam de immensa Dei gratia atque peccatorum remissione proposuerunt, verum etiam legem Dei explicuerunt atque 6] urserunt. Deinde vocabulum evangelii in alia, et quidem propriissima sua significatione usurpatur et tum non concionem de poenitentia, sed tantum praedicationem de [R. 711 clementia Dei complectitur, ut statim Marc. 1, 15 sequitur, cum Christus inquit: Poenitentiam agite et credite evangelio.

7] Sed et poenitentiae vocabulum in sacris litteris non semper unam eandemque significationem habet. Quibusdam enim Sacrae Scripturae locis pro tota hominis conversione ad Deum sumitur. Verbi gratia, cum Christus inquit Luc. 13, 5: Nisi poenitentiam egeritis, omnes similiter peribitis. Et alibi, Luc. 15, 7: Gaudium erit super uno peccatore poenitentiam agente etc. At in Marco, 1, 15 (quod testimonium paulo ante attulimus), et alibi, Act. 20, 21; Luc. 24, 46, 47, ubi distincte ponuntur poenitentia et fides in Christum aut poenitentia et remissio peccatorum, poenitentiam agere nihil aliud significat, quam peccata vere agnoscere, serio dolere et peccatis 8] in posterum abstinere. Ea vero peccatobut that the Gospel is properly a preaching of the grace and favor of God for Christ's sake, through which the unbelief of the converted, which previously inhered in them, and which the Law of God reproved, is pardoned and forgiven.

Now, when we consider this dissent aright, it has been caused chiefly by this, that the term Gospel is not always employed and understood in one and the same sense, but in two ways, in the Holy Scriptures, as also by ancient and modern church-teachers. For sometimes it is employed so that there is understood by it the entire doctrine of Christ, our Lord, which He proclaimed in His ministry upon earth, and commanded to be proclaimed in the New Testament, and hence comprised in it the explanation of the Law and the proclamation of the favor and grace of God, His heavenly Father, as it is written, Mark 1, 1: The beginning of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. And shortly afterwards the chief heads are stated: Repentance and forgiveness of sins. Thus, when Christ after His resurrection commanded the apostles to preach the Gospel in all the world, Mark 16, 15, He compressed the sum of this doctrine into a few words, when He said, Luke 24, 46, 47: Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations. So Paul, too, calls his entire doctrine the Gospel, Acts 20, 21; but he embraces the sum of this doctrine under the two heads: Repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. And in this sense the generalis definitio, that is, the description of the word Gospel, when employed in a wide sense and without the proper distinction between the Law and the Gospel, is correct, when it is said that the Gospel is a preaching of repentance and the remission of sins. For John, Christ, and the apostles began their preaching with repentance, and explained and urged not only the gracious promise of the forgiveness of sins, but also the Law of God. Furthermore the term Gospel is employed in another, namely, in its proper sense, by which it comprises not the preaching of repentance, but only the preaching of the grace of God, as follows directly afterwards, Mark 1, 15, where Christ says: Repent, and believe the Gospel.

Likewise the term repentance also is not employed in the Holy Scriptures in one and the same sense. For in some passages of Holy Scripture it is employed and taken for the entire conversion of man, as Luke 13, 5: Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. And in chap. 15, 7: Likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth. But in this passage, Mark 1, 15, as also elsewhere, where repentance and faith in Christ, Acts 20, 21, or repentance and remission of sins, Luke 24, 46, 47, are mentioned as distinct, to repent means nothing else than truly to acknowledge sins, to be heartily sorry for them, and to desist from them. This knowl-

Glaube an Christum dazukommt, dessen Verdienst die tröstliche Predigt des heiligen Evangelii allen bußfertigen Sündern anbeut [anbietet], so durch die Predigt des Gesetzes erschreckt sind. Denn das Evangelium predigt Vergebung der Sünden nicht den rohen, sicheren Herzen, sondern den Zerfetzten oder Bußfertigen, Luc. 4. Und daß aus der Reue oder Schrecken des Gesetzes nicht möge eine Verzweiflung werden, muß die Predigt des Evangelii dazukommen, daß es möge sein eine Reue zur Seligkeit, 2 Kor. 7.

Denn weil die bloße Predigt des Gesetzes ohne Christum [ohne daß Christus das Gesetz in seine Hand nimmt] entweder vermessene Leute macht, die sich dafürhalten, daß sie das Gesetz mit äußerlichen Werken erfüllen können, oder [Leute, die] ganz und gar in Verzweiflung geraten, so nimmt Christus das Gesetz in seine Hände und legt dasselbe geistlich aus, Matth. 5; Röm. 7 und 1, und offenbart also seinen Zorn vom Himmel herab über alle Sünder, wie groß derselbe sei, dadurch sie in das Gesetz gewiesen werden und aus demselben erst recht lernen ihre Sünde erkennen, welche Erkenntnis Moses nimmermehr aus ihnen hätte erzwingen können. Denn wie der Apostel zeugt, 2 Kor. 3, da gleich Moses gelesen wird, so bleibt doch immer die „Dede“, so er vor sein Angesicht hing, unaufgedeckt, daß sie das Gesetz geistlich, und wie große Dinge es von uns erfordert, und weil wir solches nicht halten noch erfüllen können, wie tief es uns verflucht und verdamme, nicht erkennen. „Wenn sie sich aber zum Herrn bekehrt haben, alsdann wird solche Dede abgetan“, 2 Kor. 3.

Darum muß der Geist Christi nicht allein trösten, sondern auch durch das Amt des Gesetzes „strafen die Welt um die Sünde“ und also im neuen Testament tun, wie der Prophet sagt, opus alienum, ut faciat opus proprium, das ist, er muß „ein fremd Amt“ verrichten (welches ist strafen), bis er komme zu seinem eignen Werk, das ist, trösten und von der Gnade predigen, darum er denn uns durch Christum erworben und gesandt und der Ursache auch der Tröster genennet [genannt] wird; inmaßen [wie dies] D. Luther in der Auslegung des Evangelii Dom. 5. nach Trinitatis mit nachfolgenden Worten erklärt hat:

„Es ist alles des Gesetzes Predigt, was da von unsern Sünden und Gottes Zorn predigt, es geschehe, wie oder wann es wolle. Wiederum ist das Evangelium eine solche Predigt, die nichts anderes denn Gnade und Vergebung in Christo zeigt und gibt; inwiefern es wahr und recht ist, daß die Apostel und Prediger des Evangelii (wie auch Christus selbst getan hat) die Predigt des Gesetzes bekräftigen und anfangen bei denen, die noch nicht ihre Sünde erkennen noch vor Gottes Zorn erschrocken sind, wie er Joh. 16 sagt: ‚Der Heilige Geist wird die Welt strafen über die Sünde, darum daß sie nicht an mich glauben.‘ Ja, was ist für eine ernstlichere, schrecklichere Anzeigung und Predigt Gottes Zorns über die Sünde denn eben das Leiden und Sterben Christi, seines Sohnes? Aber solange dieses alles Gottes Zorn predigt und den Menschen schreckt, so ist es noch nicht des Evangelii noch Christi eigene Predigt, sondern Moses und rum agnitio ex lege est et ad salutarem conversionem ad Deum non sufficit, si non fides in Christum accedat, cuius meritum dulcissima et consolationis plena evangelii doctrina omnibus resipiscitibus peccatoribus offert, qui per concionem legis perterriti et prostrati erant. Evangelion enim remissionem peccatorum non securis mentibus, sed perturbatis et vere poenitentibus annuntiat, Luc. 4, 18. Et ne contritio et terrores legis in desperationem vertantur, opus est praedicatione evangelii, ut sit poenitentia ad salutem, 2 Cor. 7, 10.

10] Cum enim nuda illa legis praedicatione (sine mentione Christi) aut inflatos hypocristas efficiat, qui sibi imaginantur, quod legem externis operibus suis implere valeant, aut homines ad desperationem adigat, Christus legem in manus suas sumit, eamque spiritualiter explicat, Matth. 5, 21 sqq.; Rom. 7, 14; 1, 18, et sic iram suam de coelo revelat super omnem impietatem hominum et ostendit, quanta sit ira divina. Ea ratione ad legem illi alegantur, ut ex ea demum recte peccata sua agnoscere discant; quam agnitionem peccatorum Moses nunquam ab illis extorquere potuisset. Quia (ut apostolus [R. 712 2 Cor. 3, 14 sq. testatur]), etsi Moses praelegitur, manet tamen nihilominus velamen super faciem eius, non reiectum, ut non agnoscere possint homines, legem esse spirituales et exigere a nobis res longe maximas, quas cum praestare et implere nequeant, legem nos horribili et extrema maledictione atque damnatione obruere. Quando autem ad Christum convertuntur, tum velamen illud tollitur, ut idem apostolus docet 2 Cor. 3, 16.

11] Haec cum ita se habeant, manifestum est, Spiritus Sancti officium esse non tantum consolari, verum etiam (ministerio legis) arguere mundum de peccato [Ioh. 16, 8] et ita (etiam in novo testamento) facere opus alienum, ut propheta [Ies. 28, 21] loquitur, quod est arguere, ut postea faciat opus proprium, quod est consolari et gratiam Dei praedicare. Hanc enim ob causam nobis Christus precibus suis et sanctissimo merito eundem nobis a Patre impetravit et misit, unde et Paracletus seu Consolator dicitur, quemadmodum Dr. Lutherus in explicatione evangelii Dominicae 5. post Trinitatis sequentibus verbis hanc rem perspicue exposuit:

12] Concio legis est, quidquid de peccatis nostris et de ira Dei docet, quomocumque aut quandoque id fiat. Evangelion vero talis est concio, quae nihil nisi gratiam et clementiam Dei atque remissionem peccatorum in Christo monstrat et exhibet. Interim tamen verum est et recte fit, quod apostoli et evangelii ministri (quod et ipse Christus fecit) concionem legis confirmant eamque inchoant apud eos, qui peccata sua nondum agnoscunt et sensu irae Dei nondum sunt perturbati, ut ipse inquit Ioh. 16, 8: Spiritus Sanctus arguet mundum de peccato, quia in me non credunt. Imo, quae magis severa et horrenda significatio atque concio irae divinae adversus peccata est quam illa ipsa passio et mors Iesu Christi, Filii Dei? Verumtamen quoad [R. 713 haec omnia iram Dei ostendunt et hominem terrent, nondum sunt proprie evangelii aut edge comes from the Law, but is not sufficient for saving conversion to God, if faith in Christ be not added, whose merits the comforting preaching of the holy Gospel offers to all penitent sinners who are terrified by the preaching of the Law. For the Gospel proclaims the forgiveness of sins, not to coarse and secure hearts, but to the bruised or penitent, Luke 4, 18. And lest repentance or the terrors of the Law turn into despair, the preaching of the Gospel must be added, that it may be a repentance unto salvation, 2 Cor. 7, 10.

For since the mere preaching of the Law, without Christ, either makes presumptuous men, who imagine that they can fulfil the Law by outward works, or forces them utterly to despair, Christ takes the Law into His hands, and explains it spiritually, Matt. 5, 21 ff.; Rom. 7, 14 and 1, 18, and thus reveals His wrath from heaven upon all sinners, and shows how great it is; whereby they are directed to the Law, and from it first learn to know their sins aright — a knowledge which Moses never could extort from them. For as the apostle testifies, 2 Cor. 3, 14 f., even though Moses is read, yet the veil which he put over his face is never lifted, so that they cannot understand the Law spiritually, and how great things it requires of us, and how severely it curses and condemns us because we cannot observe or fulfil it. Nevertheless, when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away, 2 Cor. 3, 16.

Therefore the Spirit of Christ must not only comfort, but also through the office of the Law reprove the world of sin, John 16, 8, and thus must do in the New Testament, as the prophet says, Is. 28, 21, opus alienum, ut faciat opus proprium, that is, He must do the work of another (reprove), in order that He may [afterwards] do His own work, which is to comfort and preach of grace. For to this end He was earned [from the Father] and sent to us by Christ, and for this reason, too, He is called the Comforter, as Dr. Luther has explained in his exposition of the Gospel for the Fifth Sunday after Trinity, in the following words:

Anything that preaches concerning our sins and God's wrath, let it be done how or when it will, that is all a preaching of the Law. Again, the Gospel is such a preaching as shows and gives nothing else than grace and forgiveness in Christ, although it is true and right that the apostles and preachers of the Gospel (as Christ Himself also did) confirm the preaching of the Law, and begin it with those who do not yet acknowledge their sins nor are terrified at [by the sense of] God's wrath; as He says, John 16, 8: "The Holy Ghost will reprove the world of sin because they believe not on Me." Yea, what more forcible, more terrible declaration and preaching of God's wrath against sin is there than just the suffering and death of Christ, His Son? But as long as all this preaches God's wrath and terrifies men, it is not yet the preaching of the Gospel nor Christ's own preaching, but that of Moses das Gesetz über die Unbußfertigen. Denn das Evangelium und Christus ist je nicht geordnet und gegeben zu schreden noch zu verdammen, sondern die, so erschreckt und blöde sind, zu trösten und aufzurichten.“ Und abermals: „Christus spricht Joh. 16: „Der Heilige Geist wird die Welt strafen um die Sünde“; welches mag nicht geschehen ohne durch's Gesetzes Erklärung.“ (Tom. 2, Ienens., fol. 455.)

Also sagen auch die Schmallersdifschen Artikel: „Das neue Testament behält und treibt das Amt des Gesetzes, das die Sünde und Gottes Zorn offenbart; aber zu solchem Amt tut es flugs die Verheißung der Gnade durch's Evangelium.“

Und die Apologia spricht: Zu einer rechten, heilsamen Buße ist nicht genug, allein das Gesetz predigen, sondern „es muß dazu auch kommen das Evangelium“. Also sind beide Lehren beieinander und müssen auch nebeneinander getrieben werden, aber in gewisser Ordnung und mit gebühlichem Unterschied, und werden die Antinomi oder Gesetzesstürmer billig verdammt, welche die Predigt des Gesetzes aus der Kirche werfen und wollen, daß man Sünde strafen, Reue und Leid nicht aus dem Gesetze, sondern allein aus dem Evangelio lehren solle.

Auf daß aber männiglich [jedermann] sehen möge, daß wir in angetregtem Zwiespalt nichts verschlagen [verbergen], sondern dem christlichen Leser den Handel fein lauter unter Augen stellen:

Demnach glauben, lehren und bekennen wir einhellig, daß das Gesetz eigentlich sei eine göttliche Lehre, darin der gerechte, unwandeltbare Wille Gottes geoffenbart [wird], wie der Mensch in seiner Natur, Gedanken, Worten und Werken geschaffen [beschaffen] sein sollte, daß er Gott gefällig und angenehm sei, und bräut den Übertretern desselben Gottes Zorn, zeitliche und ewige Strafen. Denn, wie Lutherus wider die Gesetzesstürmer redet: „Alles, was die Sünde straft, ist und gehört zum Gesetz, dessen eigen Amt ist, Sünde strafen und zur Erkenntnis der Sünden führen“, Röm. 3 und 7; und nachdem [und weil] der Unglaube eine Wurzel und Brunnquell aller sträflichen Sünden ist, so straft das Gesetz auch den Unglauben.

Es ist aber gleichwohl dies auch wahr, daß das Gesetz mit seiner Lehre durch's Evangelium illustriert und erklärt wird, und bleibt dennoch des Gesetzes eigentliches Amt, die Sünde strafen und von guten Werken lehren.

Also straft das Gesetz den Unglauben, wenn man Gottes Wort nicht glaubt. Weil nun das Evangelium, welches allein eigentlich lehrt und befehlt, an Christum glauben, Gottes Wort ist, so straft der Heilige Geist durch das Amt des Gesetzes auch den Unglauben, daß sie nicht an Christum glauben, welches Evangelium doch allein eigentlich lehrt von dem seligmachenden Glauben an Christum.

Das Evangelium aber ist eigentlich eine Lehre (nachdem der Mensch das Gesetz Gottes nicht gehalten, sondern dasselbe übertreten, dawider seine verderbte Natur, Gedanken, Worte und Werke

Christi concio, sed potius Moses et lex contra impenitentes. Evangelion enim et Christus nobis non eam ob causam donantur, ut nos perterrefaciant atque condemnent, sed ut ii, qui perturbati et pusillanimes sunt, consolationem capiant atque erigantur. Et alibi inquit Dr. Lutherus: Christus ait: Spiritus Sanctus arguet mundum de peccato. Hoc autem fieri non potest nisi per explicationem legis. (Tom. 2, Ienens., fol. 455.)

14) In hanc sententiam etiam Smalcaldici Articuli loquuntur [Par. 3, Art. 3]: Novum testamentum retinet atque urget ministerium legis, quae et peccata arguit et iram Dei revelat; sed ad illud legis officium adiungit mox promissionem gratiae divinae per evangelii praedicationem.

15) Et Apologia inquit [Art. 12]: Ad salutarem et veram poenitentiam non sufficit legis praedictio, sed accedere oportet evangelion. Hoc modo duo haec doctrinarum genera coniuncta sunt, et ambo urgenda sunt, certo tamen ordine et convenienti discrimine observato. Et iuste damnantur Antinomi, adversarii legis, qui praedicationem legis ex ecclesia explodunt et affirmant, non ex lege, sed ex solo evangelio peccata arguenda et contritionem docendam esse.

16) Ut autem omnes intelligant, quod in hac controversia nihil dissimulare, sed pio lectori totum negotium, quanta fieri potest simplicitate et perspicuitate, ante oculos proponamus [proponere cupiamus], sententiam nostram exponemus:

17) Credimus, docemus et confitemur unanimi consensu, quod lex proprie sit doctrina divina, in qua iustissima et immutabilis Dei voluntas revelatur, qualem oporteat esse hominem, in sua natura, cogitationibus, verbis, factis, ut Deo probari et acceptus esse possit. Simul autem transgressoribus Dei iram et temporalia atque aeterna supplicia lex [R. 714] denuntiat. Nam (ut D. Lutherus contra Antinomos scribit) quidquid peccatum arguit, id legis habet rationem et ad legem pertinet, cuius proprium officium est, peccata arguere et ad agnitionem peccatorum adducere, Rom. 3, 20; 7, 7. Et quia incredulitas radix et fons est omnium peccatorum, quae arguenda et reprehendenda sunt, lex Dei etiam incredulitatem arguit.

18) Est autem etiam hoc verum, legis doctrinam per evangelion illustrari et declarari. Nihilominus vero proprium legis officium est manetque, peccata arguere et de bonis operibus docere.

19) Hac ratione lex incredulitatem arguit, quando videlicet Verbo Dei fides non adhibetur. Cum autem evangelion (quod solum et proprie docet ac iubet in Christum credere) sit Verbum Dei, Spiritus Sanctus per ministerium legis etiam incredulitatem arguit, quod peccatores non in Christum credant; quod evangelium tamen solum proprie docet de salvifica fide in Christum.

20) Evangelion autem proprie doctrina est, quae docet (quandoquidem homo legi Dei non satisfecit, sed eam transgressus est, et legi Dei tota ipsius natura, cogitationes, sermones, and the Law against the impenitent. For the Gospel and Christ were never ordained and given for the purpose of terrifying and condemning, but of comforting and cheering those who are terrified and timid. And again: Christ says, John 16, 8: "The Holy Ghost will reprove the world of sin"; which cannot be done except through the explanation of the Law. Jena, Tom. 2, fol. 455.

So, too, the Smalcald Articles say: The New Testament retains and urges the office of the Law, which reveals sins and God's wrath; but to this office it immediately adds the promise of grace through the Gospel.

And the Apology says: To a true and salutary repentance the preaching of the Law alone is not sufficient, BUT THE GOSPEL SHOULD BE ADDED THERETO. Therefore the two doctrines belong together, and should also be urged by the side of each other, but in a definite order and with a proper distinction; and the Antinomians or assailants of the Law are justly condemned, who abolish the preaching of the Law from the Church, and wish sins to be reprov'd, and repentance and sorrow to be taught, not from the Law, but from the Gospel.

But in order that every one may see that in the dissent of which we are treating we conceal nothing, but present the matter to the eyes of the Christian reader plainly and clearly:

Therefore [we shall set forth our meaning:] we unanimously believe, teach, and confess that the Law is properly a divine doctrine, in which the righteous, immutable will of God is revealed, what is to be the quality of man in his nature, thoughts, words, and works, in order that he may be pleasing and acceptable to God; and it threatens its transgressors with God's wrath and temporal and eternal punishments. For as Luther writes against the law-stormers [Antinomians]: Everything that reprov's sin is and belongs to the Law, whose peculiar office it is to reprove sin and to lead to the knowledge of sins, Rom. 3, 20; 7, 7; and as unbelief is the root and well-spring of all reprehensible sins [all sins that must be censured and reprov'd], the Law reprov's unbelief also.

However, this is true likewise that the Law with its doctrine is illustrated and explained by the Gospel; and nevertheless it remains the peculiar office of the Law to reprove sins and teach concerning good works.

Thus, the Law reprov's unbelief, [namely,] when men do not believe the Word of God. Now, since the Gospel, which alone properly teaches and commands to believe in Christ, is God's Word, the Holy Ghost, through the office of the Law, also reprov's unbelief, that men do not believe in Christ, although it is properly the Gospel alone which teaches concerning saving faith in Christ.

However, now that man has not kept the Law of God, but transgressed it, his corrupt nature, thoughts, words, and works fighting against it, for which reason he is under streiten, und [er] der Ursachen dem Zorn Gottes, dem Tod, allen zeitlichen Plagen und der Strafe des höllischen Feuers unterworfen [ist]), die da lehrt, was der Mensch glauben solle, daß er bei Gott die Vergebung der Sünden erlange, nämlich, daß der Sohn Gottes, unser Herr Christus, den Fluch des Gesetzes auf sich genommen und getragen, alle unsere Sünden gebüßt und bezahlt [hat], durch welchen allein wir bei Gott wieder zu Gnaden kommen, Vergebung der Sünden durch den Glauben erlangen, aus dem Tod und allen Strafen der Sünden erlédigt und ewig selig werden.

Denn alles, was tröstet, die Gu'd und Gnade Gottes den Übertretern des Gesetzes anbietet, ist und heißt eigentlich das Evangelium, eine gute und fröhliche Botschaft, daß Gott die Sünde nicht strafen, sondern um Christus' willen vergeben wolle.

Demnach ein jeder bußfertiger Sünder glauben, das ist, sein Vertrauen allein auf den Herrn Christus setzen soll, daß er um unserer Sünden willen sei dahingegeben und um unserer Rechtfertigung willen wieder auferstanden, Röm. 4; welcher um unserwillen zur Sünde [ge]worden, der von seiner Sünde wußte, auf daß wir in ihm würden die Gerechtigkeit, die vor Gott gilt, 2 Kor. 5; der uns zur Gerechtigkeit gemacht [ist], 1 Kor. 1, des Gehorsam uns zur Gerechtigkeit vor Gott an seinem strengen Gericht zugerechnet wird; daß also das Gesetz, inmaßen hier oben erklärt, ein Amt ist, das durch den Buchstaben tötet und die Verdammnis predigt, 2 Kor. 3; das Evangelium aber ist eine Kraft Gottes, selig zu machen alle die, so daran glauben, Röm. 1; 1 Kor. 1; das die Gerechtigkeit predigt und den Geist gibt, Gal. 3. Wie denn D. Luther den Unterschied mit besonderem Fleiß schier in allen seinen Schriften getrieben und eigentlich angezeigt, daß viel eine andere Erkenntnis Gottes sei, die aus dem Evangelio kommt, denn die aus dem Gesetz gelehrt und gelernt wird; weil auch die Heiden aus dem natürlichen Gesetz etlichermaßen eine Erkenntnis Gottes gehabt, gleichwohl ihn aber weder recht erkannt noch recht gelehrt haben, Röm. 1.

Diese zwei Predigten sind von Anfang der Welt her in der Kirche Gottes nebeneinander je und allwege mit gebührendem Unterschied getrieben worden. Denn die Nachkommen der lieben Altväter, wie denn auch die Altväter selbst, sich nicht allein stetig erinnert, wie der Mensch anfangs von Gott gerecht und heilig erschaffen und durch Betrug der Schlange Gottes Gebot übertreten, zum Sünder [ge]worden und sich selbst samt allen ihren [allen] seinem Nachkommen verderbt, in den Tod und ewige Verdammnis geführt haben [geführt hat], sondern auch sich wiederum aufrichtet und geträstet durch die Predigt von „des Weibes Samen, welcher der Schlange den Kopf zertreten solle“, Gen. 3; item von „Abrahams Samen, in welchem alle Völker gesegnet werden sollen“, Gen. 22 und 27; item von „Davids Sohn, der das Reich Israel wiederum aufrichten und ein Licht der Heiden sein soll“, Ps. 110; Jes. 49; Luk. 1; „welcher um unserer Sünde willen geschlagen und um unserer Missetat willen verwundet, durch des Wunden wir heil [ge]worden sind“, Jes. 53.

facta, repugnant, unde et irae Dei, morti omnibusque temporalibus aerumnis et aeterno gehennae incendio obnoxius est), quid miserimus ille peccator credere debeat, ut remissionem peccatorum apud Deum obtineat, videlicet Filium Dei, Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, in sese suscepisse maledictionem legis ferendam, omnia nostra peccata plenissima satisfactione expiasse, ita quidem, ut per ipsum solum cum Deo reconciliemur, remissionem peccatorum per fidem consequamur, a morte omnibusque aliis peccati suppliciis liberemur et in aeternum salvemur.

21) Quidquid enim pavidas mentes [R. 715] consolatur, quidquid favorem et gratiam Dei transgressoribus legis offert, hoc proprie est et recte dicitur evangelium, hoc est, laetissimum nuntium, quod Dominus Deus peccata nostra nolit punire, sed propter Christum condonare.

22) Quare peccatores poenitentes credere debent, hoc est, totam suam fiduciam in solum Christum collocent, quod videlicet propter peccata nostra traditus sit et propter iustitiam nostram resurrexerit, Rom. 4, 25; qui peccatum quidem non noverat et tamen pro nobis peccatum factus est, ut nos efficeremur iustitia Dei in ipso, 2 Cor. 5, 21; qui nobis factus est iustitia, 1 Cor. 1, 30, et cuius obedientia nobis coram severo Dei iudicio ad iustitiam imputatur, ut ita lex, ut supra ostensum est, ministerium sit, quod per litteram occidit et damnationem denuntiat, 2 Cor. 3, 7, evangelium autem sit potentia Dei ad salutem omni credenti, Rom. 1, 16 [1 Cor. 1, 18, 21], praedicans iustitiam et dans Spiritum [2 Cor. 3, 8, 9; Gal. 3, 2]; quemadmodum D. Lutherus hoc discrimen propodemum in omnibus suis scriptis diligenter inculcavit atque accurate monuit, longe aliam Dei agnitionem ex evangelio quam ex lege hauriri, quia etiam Gentes ex lege naturae aliquam Dei cognitionem habuere, nec tamen eum recte vel agnoverunt vel coluerunt, Rom. 1, 20 sq.

23) Haec autem duo doctrinarum genera iam inde a condito mundo in ecclesia Dei, convenienti tamen discrimine, proposita fuere. Patriarcharum enim posterius (quemadmodum etiam ipsi patriarchae) non modo assidue in memoriam revocarunt, quod homo initio a Deo iustus et sanctus creatus, fraude autem serpentis mandatum Dei transgressus, peccator sit factus eaque re non modo se, verum etiam totam suam posteritatem perdidit atque in mortem et aeternam damnationem praecipitaverit; sed rursus se erexerunt et consolati sunt dulcissima illa concione de Semine [R. 716] Mulieris, contrituro caput serpentis, Gen. 3, 15; item de Abrahami Semine, in quo benedicendae erant omnes gentes, Gen. 22, 18; et de Filio Davidis, qui regnum Israel restaurare debebat et lumen gentium futurus erat, Ps. 110, 1; Ies. 49, 6; Luc. 1, 79 [2, 32]; qui vulneratus est propter iniquitates nostras et attritus est propter scelera nostra, cuius livore sanati sumus, Ies. 53, 5.

God's wrath, death, all temporal calamities, and the punishment of hell-fire, the Gospel is properly a doctrine which teaches what man should believe, that he may obtain forgiveness of sins with God, namely, that the Son of God, our Lord Christ, has taken upon Himself and borne the curse of the Law, has expiated and paid for all our sins, through whom alone we again enter into favor with God, obtain forgiveness of sins by faith, are delivered from death and all the punishments of sins, and eternally saved.

For everything that comforts, that offers the favor and grace of God to transgressors of the Law, is, and is properly called, the Gospel, a good and joyful message that God will not punish sins, but forgive them for Christ's sake.

Therefore every penitent sinner ought to believe, that is, place his confidence in the Lord Christ alone, that He was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification, Rom. 4, 25, that He was made sin for us who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him, 2 Cor. 5, 21, who of God is made unto us Wisdom, and Righteousness, and Sanctification, and Redemption, 1 Cor. 1, 30, whose obedience is counted to us for righteousness before God's strict tribunal, so that the Law, as above set forth, is a ministration that kills through the letter and preaches condemnation, 2 Cor. 3, 7, but the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1, 16, that preaches righteousness and gives the Spirit, 1 Cor. 1, 18; Gal. 3, 2. As Dr. Luther has urged this distinction with especial diligence in nearly all his writings, and has properly shown that the knowledge of God derived from the Gospel is far different from that which is taught and learned from the Law, because even the heathen to a certain extent had a knowledge of God from the natural law, although they neither knew Him aright nor glorified Him aright, Rom. 1, 20 f.

From the beginning of the world these two proclamations [kinds of doctrines] have been ever and ever inculcated alongside of each other in the Church of God, with a proper distinction. For the descendants of the venerated patriarchs, as also the patriarchs themselves, not only called to mind constantly how in the beginning man had been created righteous and holy by God, and through the fraud of the Serpent had transgressed God's command, had become a sinner, and had corrupted and precipitated himself with all his posterity into death and eternal condemnation, but also encouraged and comforted themselves again by the preaching concerning the Seed of the Woman, who would bruise the Serpent's head, Gen. 3, 15; likewise, concerning the Seed of Abraham, in whom all the nations of the earth shall be blessed, Gen. 22, 18; likewise, concerning David's Son, who should restore again the kingdom of Israel and be a light to the heathen, Ps. 110, 1; Is. 49, 6; Luke 2, 32, who was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities, by whose stripes we are healed, Is. 53, 5.

Solche beide Lehren glauben und bekennen wir, daß sie für und für bis an das Ende der Welt fleißig, doch mit gehörtem guten Unterschied in der Kirche Gottes zu treiben seien, damit durch die Predigt des Gesetzes und desselben Drängung im Amt des neuen Testaments die Herzen der unbußfertigen Menschen geschredt und zur Erkenntnis ihrer Sünden und zur Buße gebracht [werden]; aber nicht also, daß sie darin verzagen und verzweifeln, sondern (weil das Gesetz ein Zuchtmeister auf Christum, daß wir durch den Glauben gerecht werden, Gal. 3, und also nicht von Christo, sondern auf Christum, der „des Gesetzes Ende“ ist, weist und führt, Röm. 10), daß sie durch die Predigt des heiligen Evangelii von unserm Herrn Christo wiederum also getröstet und gestärkt [werden], daß nämlich ihnen, so sie dem Evangelio glauben, Gott alle ihre Sünden durch Christum vergeben, sie um seinetwillen an Kindes Statt annehmen und aus lauter Gnade, ohne all ihren [all ihr] Verdienst gerecht und selig machen [wolle]; aber doch nicht also, daß sie sich der Gnade Gottes mißbrauchen und auf dieselbe sündigen; wie Paulus 2 Kor. 3 den Unterschied zwischen dem Gesetz und Evangelio gründlich und gewaltig erweist.

Demnach, und auf daß beide Lehren, des Gesetzes und Evangelii, nicht ineinandergemengt und vermischt [werden], und der einen zugeschrieben werde, was der andern zugehört, dadurch dann leichtlich der [das] Verdienst und die Guttaten Christi verbunfelt und das Evangelium wiederum zu einer Gesetzeslehre gemacht, wie im Papsttum geschehen, und also die Christen des rechten Trosts beraubt, den sie im Evangelio wider das Schrecken des Gesetzes haben, und dem Papsttum wiederum die Tür in der Kirche Gottes aufgetan werde: so muß mit allem Fleiß der wahre, eigentliche Unterschied zwischen dem Gesetz und Evangelio getrieben und erhalten, und was zur Konfusion inter legem et evangelium (das ist, dadurch die beiden Lehren, Gesetz und Evangelium, verwirrt und in eine Lehre gemengt) Ursache geben möchte, fleißig verhütet werden. Ist derhalben gefährlich und unrecht, daß man aus dem Evangelio, wenn es eigentlich also genennet, wie es vom Gesetz unterschieden wird, eine Buß- oder Strafpredigt machen wolle. Denn sonst, wenn es ingemein verstanden wird von der ganzen Lehre, so sagt auch die Apologia etliche Male, das Evangelium sei eine Predigt von der Buße und Vergebung der Sünden. Es zeigt aber daneben die Apologia auch das an, daß Evangelium eigentlich sei die Verheißung der Vergebung der Sünden und der Rechtfertigung durch Christum, das Gesetz aber sei ein Wort, das die Sünde straft und verdammt. [Über den Gebrauch der Worte „Gesetz“ und „Evangelium“ in der Apologie vergleiche 138, 62; 142, 79; 166, 38; 192, 136; 194, 139; 112, 34; 126, 20; 212; 196, 144 f.; 158, 11 ff.; 276, 88; 258, 29. 34; 260, 35 f.; 264, 51; 274, 78.]

24] Haec duo doctrinae Christianae capita credimus atque profitemur usque ad novissimum diem sedulo, convenienti tamen discrimine, in ecclesia Dei proponenda atque urgenda esse. Concione enim legis eiusque gravissimis comminationibus in ministerio novi testamenti mentes impenitentium hominum perterrefaciendae atque ad veram peccatorum suorum agnitionem et ad agendam poenitentiam sunt adducendae. Id tamen non eo modo, ut propter peccata desperent, sed ut ad Christum confugiant. Lex enim paedagogus est in Christum, ut per fidem iustificemur, Gal. 3, 24, et cum Christus sit finis legis, Rom. 10, 4, non a Christo, sed ad Christum 25] nos ducat. Quare post agnita peccata ex lege mentes perturbatae erigendae sunt, ut ex evangelii de Christo praedicatione solidam consolationem capiant atque confirmato animo sint, scientes, quod Dominus (si quidem evangelio crediderint) omnia peccata per Christum ipsis condonet, eos propter Mediatorem filios adoptet et ex mera gratia, sine ullo ipsorum merito, iustificet et salvare velit. Non tamen divina illa gratia abutantur aut eius 26] fiducia scientes volentes peccent. Et hoc discrimen legis et evangelii Paulus in Epistola ad Corinthios posteriore luculenter admodum declaravit, 2 Cor. 3, 7 sqq.

27] Quare ne doctrina legis et evangelii denuo commisceantur et uni, quod alterius est, tribuatur, summo studio vera et propria differentia legis et evangelii retinenda atque urgenda est, eaque omnia, quae novae [R. 717] confusioni inter legem et evangelium occasionem praebere possent, studiose cavenda atque vitanda sunt. Talis enim confusio facile meritum et beneficia Christi obscurare et evangelion in legem transformare posset, quod sub papatu accidisse videmus. Et hac ratione piis mentibus vera consolatio, quam ex evangelio contra terrores legis hauriri debent, eriperetur, et pontificis erroribus fenestra in ecclesiam Dei irrepenti et invadendi aperiretur. Quapropter magno cum periculo coniunctum est, neque approbari potest, quod asseritur, evangelium (proprie sic dictum et quum a lege discernitur) esse concionem poenitentiae argumentem peccata. Alias vero, quando generaliter de tota doctrina Christiana accipitur, etiam Apologia aliquoties docet, quod evangelium sit concio de poenitentia et remissione peccatorum. Interim tamen Apologia etiam ostendit, evangelion proprie dici promissionem de remissione peccatorum et iustificatione nostra per Christum; legem vero esse doctrinam, quae et peccata arguat et damnationem denuntiet.

These two doctrines, we believe and confess, should ever and ever be diligently inculcated in the Church of God even to the end of the world, although with the proper distinction of which we have heard, in order that, through the preaching of the Law and its threats in the ministry of the New Testament the hearts of impenitent men may be terrified, and brought to a knowledge of their sins and to repentance; but not in such a way that they lose heart and despair in this process, but that (since the Law is a schoolmaster unto Christ that we might be justified by faith, Gal. 3, 24, and thus points and leads us not from Christ, but to Christ, who is the end of the Law, Rom. 10, 4) they be comforted and strengthened again by the preaching of the holy Gospel concerning Christ, our Lord, namely, that to those who believe the Gospel, God forgives all their sins through Christ, adopts them as children for His sake, and out of pure grace, without any merit on their part, justifies and saves them, however, not in such a way that they may abuse the grace of God. and sin hoping for grace, as Paul, 2 Cor. 3, 7 ff., thoroughly and forcibly shows the distinction between the Law and the Gospel.

Now, in order that both doctrines, that of the Law and that of the Gospel, be not mingled and confounded with one another, and what belongs to the one may not be ascribed to the other, whereby the merit and benefits of Christ are easily obscured and the Gospel is again turned into a doctrine of the Law, as has occurred in the Papacy, and thus Christians are deprived of the true comfort which they have in the Gospel against the terrors of the Law, and the door is again opened in the Church of God to the Papacy, therefore the true and proper distinction between the Law and the Gospel must with all diligence be inculcated and preserved, and whatever gives occasion for confusion inter legem et evangelium (between the Law and the Gospel), that is, whereby the two doctrines, Law and Gospel, may be confounded and mingled into one doctrine, should be diligently prevented. It is, therefore, dangerous and wrong to convert the Gospel, properly so called, as distinguished from the Law, into a preaching of repentance or reproof [a preaching of repentance, reproving sin]. For otherwise, if understood in a general sense of the entire doctrine, also the Apology says several times that the Gospel is a preaching of repentance and the forgiveness of sins. Meanwhile, however, the Apology also shows that the Gospel is properly the promise of the forgiveness of sins and of justification through Christ, but that the Law is a doctrine which reproves sins and condemns.

VI.

Vom dritten Brauch des Gesetzes Gottes.

1. Nachdem das Gesetz Gottes nicht allein dazu nützt, daß dadurch äußerliche Zucht und Ehrbarkeit wider die wilden, ungehorsamen Leute erhalten, 2. desgleichen, daß durch solches die Menschen zur Erkenntnis ihrer Sünden gebracht, 3. sondern auch, wenn sie durch den Geist Gottes neugeboren, zu dem Herrn bekehrt und also ihnen die Rede Moses aufgedeckt, [daß sie] in dem Gesetz leben und wandeln: hat sich über diesen dritten und letzten [Ge]brauch des Gesetzes ein Zwiespalt etlicher wenig Theologen zugetragen, da der eine Teil gelehrt und gehalten, daß die Wiedergeborenen den neuen Gehorsam, oder in welchen guten Werken sie wandeln sollen, nicht aus dem Gesetz lernen, noch daraus dieselbe Lehre zu treiben sei, weil sie durch den Sohn Gottes freigemacht, seines Geistes Tempel [ge]worden und also frei, gleichwie die Sonne ohne einigen Trieb für sich selbst [von selbst] ihren ordentlichen Lauf vollbringt, also auch sie für sich selbst, aus Eingegeben und Trieb des Heiligen Geistes, tun, was Gott von ihnen erfordert. Dagegen hat der andere Teil gelehrt: obwohl die Rechtgläubigen nachhaftig durch den Geist Gottes getrieben werden und also nach dem inwendigen Menschen aus einem freien Geist den Willen Gottes tun, so gebrauche doch eben der Heilige Geist das geschriebene Gesetz bei ihnen zur Lehre, dadurch auch die Rechtgläubigen lernen, Gott nicht nach ihren eigenen Gedanken, sondern nach seinem geschriebenen Gesetz und Wort zu dienen, welches eine gewisse Regel und Richtschnur sei eines Gottseligen Lebens und Wandels, nach dem ewigen und unwandelbaren Willen Gottes anzurichten.

Zur Erklärung und endlichen Hinelegung [endgültigen Beilegung] dieses Zwiespalts glauben, lehren und bekennen wir einhellig, daß, obwohl die rechtgläubigen und wahrhaftig zu Gott bekehrten und gerechtfertigten Christen vom Fluch des Gesetzes erlöst und freigemacht sind, daß sie sich doch im Gesetz des Herrn täglich üben sollen; wie geschrieben steht Ps. 1 und 119: „Wohl dem, der Lust zum Gesetz des Herrn hat und redet von seinem Gesetz Tag und Nacht.“ Denn das Gesetz ist ein Spiegel, in welchem der Wille Gottes, und was ihm gefällig, eigentlich abgemalt ist, das man den Gläubigen stets vorhalten und bei ihnen ohne Unterlaß fleißig treiben soll.

Denn obwohl dem Gerechten kein Gesetz gegeben ist, wie der Apostel zeugt, sondern den Ungerechten, so ist doch solches nicht also bloß zu verstehen, daß die Gerechten ohne Gesetz leben sollen. Denn das Gesetz Gottes [ist] ihnen in das Herz geschrieben, und dem ersten Menschen [wurde] gleich nach seiner Erschaffung auch ein Gesetz gegeben, danach er sich verhalten sollte. Sondern die Meinung St. Pauli ist, daß das Gesetz diejenigen, so durch Christum mit Gott versöhnt, mit seinem Fluch nicht beschweren kann, auch die Wiedergeborenen mit seinem Zwang nicht quälen dürfe [zu quälen brauche, zu quälen Ursache habe], weil sie nach dem inwendigen Menschen Lust haben an Gottes Gesetz.

Und zwar, wenn die gläubigen und auserwählten Kinder Gottes durch den einwohnenden Geist in diesem Leben vollkommenlich verneuert würden, also daß sie in ihrer Natur und allen derselben

VI.

DE TERTIO USU LEGIS DIVINAE.

1) Cum constet, triplicem esse legis divinae usum (I. Lege enim disciplina externa et honestas contra feroces et indomitos homines utcumque conservatur; II. lege peccatores ad agnitionem peccati adducuntur; III. denique qui per Spiritum Dei renati et ad Dominum conversi sunt, et quibus iam velamen Moysi sublatum est, lege docentur, ut in vera pietate vivant et ambulent), orta est de tertio illo usu legis controversia inter paucos quosdam 2) theologos. Horum alii docuerunt atque senserunt, non opus esse, ut renati novam obedientiam seu bona opera (in quibus [R. 718 ambulare oporteat] ex lege discant, aut ut doctrina de bonis operibus ex lege depromatur vel urgeatur, quandoquidem per Filium Dei libertati restituti et iam facti sint templa Spiritus Sancti, et propterea liberi, perinde ac sol absque alieno impulsu sponte cursum suum naturalem conficit: ita enim et renatos sua sponte, instinctu et impulsu Spiritus Sancti ea agere, quae Deus ab ipsis requirat. 3) Alii vero docuerunt: etiamsi vere credentes Spiritu Dei revera agantur, et hac ratione secundum interiorem hominem libero et spontaneo spiritu voluntatem Dei faciant, tamen Spiritum Sanctum scripta lege ad doctrinam ipsorum uti solere, qua etiam recte credentes informantur et discant, Deo non esse serviendum iuxta ipsorum cogitationes aut opiniones, sed iuxta scriptam legem et verbum eius revelatum. Illud enim certissimum esse regulam et normam, ad quam vita secundum immutabilem voluntatem Dei sit pie instituenda.

4) Ad declarandam igitur et componendam hanc dissensionem credimus, docemus et confitemur unanimiter, quod, etsi credentes et ad Deum vere conversi atque iustificati liberi sunt a maledictione legis, ita quidem, ut ea ratione iam liberi dicantur, tamen in lege divina quotidie exercere se debeant, ut scriptum Ps. 1, 2; 119, 1: Beatus, qui lege Domini delectatur et in lege eius meditatur die ac nocte. Est enim lex Dei instar speculi limpidissimi, in quo voluntas Dei et quae ipsi placent, perspicue oculis nostris proponuntur: igitur ea credentibus semper inculcanda et apud eos diligenter et assidue est urgenda.

5) Etsi enim iusto lex non est posita, ut apostolus testatur [1 Tim. 1, 9], sed iniustus, hoc tamen non ita nude accipiendum est, quasi iustus sine lege vivere liceat. Lex enim divina cordibus ipsorum inscripta est. Et quidem primo homini statim post ipsius creationem etiam lex data fuit, secundum quam [R. 719 vivere debebat. Haec igitur est verborum Pauli vera et genuina sententia, quod lex eos, qui per Christum cum Deo reconciliati sunt, maledictione sua obruere nequeat, et quod renatis coactione sua molesta esse non possit, quandoquidem illi secundum interiorem hominem lege Dei delectentur.

6) Et sane, si credentes et electi filii Dei per inhabitantem Spiritum in hac vita perfecte renovarentur, ita quidem, ut in tota ipsorum natura et in omnibus viribus peccatum

VI.

OF THE THIRD USE OF GOD'S LAW.

Since the Law of God is useful, 1. not only to the end that external discipline and decency are maintained by it against wild, disobedient men; 2. likewise, that through it men are brought to a knowledge of their sins; 3. but also that, when they have been born anew by the Spirit of God, converted to the Lord, and thus the veil of Moses has been lifted from them, they live and walk in the Law, a dissension has occurred between some few theologians concerning this third and last use of the Law. For the one side taught and maintained that the regenerate do not learn the new obedience, or in what good works they ought to walk, from the Law, and that this teaching [concerning good works] is not to be urged thence [from the Law], because they have been made free by the Son of God, have become the temples of His Spirit, and therefore do freely of themselves what God requires of them, by the prompting and impulse of the Holy Ghost, just as the sun of itself, without any [foreign] impulse, completes its ordinary course. Over against this the other side taught: Although the truly believing are verily moved by God's Spirit, and thus, according to the inner man, do God's will from a free spirit, yet it is just the Holy Ghost who uses the written law for instruction with them, by which the truly believing also learn to serve God, not according to their own thoughts, but according to His written Law and Word, which is a sure rule and standard of a godly life and walk, how to order it in accordance with the eternal and immutable will of God.

For the explanation and final settlement of this dissent we unanimously believe, teach, and confess that although the truly believing and truly converted to God and justified Christians are liberated and made free from the curse of the Law, yet they should daily exercise themselves in the Law of the Lord, as it is written, Ps. 1, 2; 119, 1: Blessed is the man whose delight is in the Law of the Lord, and in His Law doth he meditate day and night. For the Law is a mirror in which the will of God, and what pleases Him, are exactly portrayed, and which should [therefore] be constantly held up to the believers and be diligently urged upon them without ceasing.

For although the Law is not made for a righteous man, as the apostle testifies 1 Tim. 1, 9, but for the unrighteous, yet this is not to be understood in the bare meaning, that the justified are to live without law. For the Law of God has been written in their heart, and also to the first man immediately after his creation a law was given according to which he was to conduct himself. But the meaning of St. Paul is that the Law cannot burden with its curse those who have been reconciled to God through Christ; nor must it vex the regenerate with its coercion, because they have pleasure in God's Law after the inner man.

And, indeed, if the believing and elect children of God were completely renewed in this Kräften ganz und gar der Sünden ledig wären, bedürften sie keines Gesetzes und also auch keines Treibers, sondern sie täten für sich selbst [von selbst] und ganz freiwillig ohne alle Lehre, Vermahnung, Anhalten oder Treiben des Gesetzes, was sie nach Gottes Willen zu tun schuldig sind, gleichwie die Sonne, der Mond und das ganze himmlische Gestirn seinen ordentlichen Lauf ohne Vermahnung, ohne Anhalten, Treiben, Zwang oder Nötigung für sich selbst unbehindert hat, nach der Ordnung Gottes, die ihnen Gott einmal gegeben hat, ja, wie die sieben Engel einen ganz freiwilligen Gehorsam leisten.

Nachdem aber die Gläubigen in diesem Leben nicht vollständig, ganz und gar, complete vel consummative, verneuert werden; denn obwohl ihre Sünde durch den vollkommenen Gehorsam Christi bedeckt [ist], daß sie den Gläubigen zur Verdammnis nicht zugerechnet wird, auch durch den Heiligen Geist die Abtötung des alten Adams und die Verneuerung im Geist ihres Gemüths angefangen [ist]: so hängt ihnen doch noch immer der alte Adam in ihrer Natur und allen desselben innerlichen und äußerlichen Kräften an; davon der Apostel geschrieben Röm. 7: „Ich weiß, daß in mir, das ist, in meinem Fleisch, wohnet nichts Gutes.“ Und abermals: „Ich weiß nicht, was ich tue; denn ich tue nicht, was ich will, sondern das ich hasse, das tue ich.“ Item: „Ich sehe ein ander Gesetz in meinen Gliedern, das da widerstrebet dem Gesetz in meinem Gemüte und nimmt mich gefangen in der Sünde Gesetz.“ Item: „Das Fleisch gelüftet wider den Geist und den Geist wider das Fleisch; dieselbigen sind widereinander, daß ihr nicht tut, was ihr wollet.“

Darum so bedürfen in diesem Leben die rechtgläubigen, auserwählten und wiedergeborenen Kinder Gottes von wegen solcher Gelüste des Fleisches nicht allein des Gesetzes täglicher Lehre und Vermahnung, Warnung und Dräuung, sondern auch öftermals der Strafen, damit sie aufgemuntert [werden] und dem Geist Gottes folgen, wie geschrieben steht Ps. 119: „Es ist mir gut, Herr, daß du mich demütigest, auf daß ich deine Rechte lerne.“ Und abermals, 1 Kor. 9: „Ich betäube meinen Leib und zähme ihn, daß ich nicht den andern predige und selbst verwerflich werde.“ Und abermals, Hebr. 12: „Seid ihr ohne Züchtigung, welcher sie alle sind theilhaftig worden, so seid ihr Bastarde und nicht Kinder.“ Wie D. Luther solches mit mehr Worten in der Kirchenpostille, im Sommertheil, über die Epistel am 19. Sonntag nach Trinitatis ausführlich erklärt hat.

Es muß aber auch unterschiedlich erklärt werden, was das Evangelium zu dem neuen Gehorsam der Gläubigen tue, schaffe und wirke, und was hierin, soviel die guten Werke der Gläubigen anlangt, des Gesetzes Amt sei.

Denn das Gesetz sagt wohl, es sei Gottes Wille und Befehl, daß wir im neuen Leben wandeln sollen, es gibt aber die Kraft und Vermögen nicht, daß wir's anfangen und tun können, sondern der Heilige Geist, welcher nicht durch das Gesetz, sondern durch die Predigt des Evangelii gegeben und empfangen wird, Gal. 3, erneuert das Herz. Danach braucht der Heilige Geist das Gesetz dazu, daß er aus demselben die Wiedergeborenen lehrt und in den zehn Geboten ihnen zeigt und weist, welches da sei „der wohlgefällige Wille Gottes“, non amplius haereret, non indigerent illi lege neque ullo exactore, qui eos ad bene operandum urgeret, quia sponte et liberrimo spiritu, sine omni doctrina, admonitione, cohortatione aut impulsu legis, ea ipsa facerent, quae iuxta voluntatem Dei agere debent. Sicut etiam sol, luna et reliqua astra naturalem suum cursum sine admonitione, cohortatione, impulsu et coactione per se sine impedimento absolvunt ad eum modum, quem Dominus semel in prima creatione instituit; imo sicut sancti angeli promptam et per omnia spontaneam obedientiam praestant.

7] At vero credentes in hac vita non perfecte, complete vel consummative (ut veteres locuti sunt) renovantur. Et quamvis ipsorum peccata Christi obedientia absolutissima connecta sint, ut credentibus non ad damnationem imputentur, et per Spiritum Sanctum veteris Adami mortificatio et renovatio in spiritu mentis eorum inchoata sit, tamen vetus Adam in ipsa natura omnibusque illius interioribus et exterioribus viribus adhuc semper inhaeret. 8] De hac re apostolus ait Rom. 7, 18 sqq.: Scio, quod in me, hoc est, in carne mea, non habitat bonum. Et rursus: Non quod volo bonum, hoc facio, sed quod nolo malum, hoc ago. Et [Rom. 7, 23]: Video aliam legem in membris meis, repugnantem legi mentis [R. 720] meae et captivantem me in lege peccati. Item Gal. 5, 17: Caro concupiscit adversus spiritum, spiritus autem adversus carnem. Haec autem sibi invicem adversantur, ut non, quaecunque vultis, illa faciatis.

9] Eam ob causam credentes, electi et renati filii Dei (propter illas concupiscentias carnis) non modo assidua legis admonitione, doctrina et comminationibus indigent, verum etiam saepe castigationibus, ut veteris illis excutiat et Spiritui Sancto obtemperent, sicut scriptum est Ps. 119, 71: Bonum est mihi, Domine, quod humiliasti me, ut discerem iustificationes tuas. Et 1 Cor. 9, 27: Castigo corpus meum et in servitutum redigo, ne forte, cum aliis praedicaerim, ipse reprobus efficiar. Et Hebr. 12, 8: Quodsi extra disciplinam estis, cuius participes facti sunt omnes, ergo spurii et non filii estis. Ea de re D. Lutherus in explicatione evangelii Dominicae 19. post Trinitatis luculenter admodum docuit.

10] Distincte autem etiam explicandum est, quid evangelium ad novam obedientiam credentium faciat et praestet, et quodnam (quoad bona opera credentium) sit legis officium.

11] Lex enim inculcat quidem, esse voluntatem et mandatum Dei, ut in nova vita ambulemus, at vires et facultatem non donat, quibus novam obedientiam inchoare et praestare possimus. Spiritus autem Sanctus, qui non per legis, sed per evangelii praedicationem datur et accipitur, Gal. 3, 14, cor hominis 12] renovat. Deinde idem Spiritus ministerio legis utitur, ut per eam renatos doceat, atque in Decalogo ipsis monstret, quae sit voluntas Dei bona et ipsi placens, Rom. 12, 2, ut nove-life by the indwelling Spirit, so that in their nature and all its powers they were entirely free from sin, they would need no law, and hence no one to drive them either, but they would do of themselves, and altogether voluntarily, without any instruction, admonition, urging or driving of the Law, what they are in duty bound to do according to God's will; just as the sun, the moon, and all the constellations of heaven have their regular course of themselves, unobstructed, without admonition, urging, driving, force, or compulsion, according to the order of God which God once appointed for them, yea, just as the holy angels render an entirely voluntary obedience.

However, believers are not renewed in this life perfectly or completely, complete vel consummative [as the ancients say]; for although their sin is covered by the perfect obedience of Christ, so that it is not imputed to believers for condemnation, and also the mortification of the old Adam and the renewal in the spirit of their mind is begun through the Holy Ghost, nevertheless the old Adam clings to them still in their nature and all its internal and external powers. Of this the apostle has written Rom. 7, 18 ff.: I know that in me [that is, in my flesh] dwelleth no good thing. And again: For that which I do I allow not; for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I. Likewise: I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin. Likewise, Gal. 5, 17: The flesh lusteth against the spirit and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.

Therefore, because of these lusts of the flesh the truly believing, elect, and regenerate children of God need in this life not only the daily instruction and admonition, warning, and threatening of the Law, but also frequently punishments, that they may be roused [the old man is driven out of them] and follow the Spirit of God, as it is written Ps. 119, 71: It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn Thy statutes. And again, 1 Cor. 9, 27: I keep under my body and bring it into subjection, lest that, by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway. And again, Heb. 12, 8: But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons; as Dr. Luther has fully explained this at greater length in the Summer Part of the Church Postil, on the Epistle for the Nineteenth Sunday after Trinity.

But we must also explain distinctively what the Gospel does, produces, and works towards the new obedience of believers, and what is the office of the Law in this matter, as regards the good works of believers.

For the Law says indeed that it is God's will and command that we should walk in a new life, but it does not give the power and ability to begin and do it; but the Holy Ghost, who is given and received, not through the Law, but through the preaching of the Gospel, Gal. 3, 14, renews the heart. Thereafter the Holy Ghost employs the Law so as Röm. 12; „in welchen guten Werken sie wandeln sollen, die Gott zuvor bereitet hat“, Eph. 2; vermähnt sie dazu, und da sie in dem [und wenn sie darin] von wegen des Fleisches faul, nachlässig und widerspenstig sind, strafft er sie darum durchs Gesetz, also daß er beide Ämter zusammen führt: er tötet und macht lebendig, er führt in die Hölle und führt wieder heraus; welches Amt ist nicht allein trösten, sondern auch strafen, wie geschrieben steht: „Wenn der Heilige Geist kommt, der wird die Welt“ (darunter auch der alte Adam ist) „strafen um die Sünde und um die Gerechtigkeit und um das Gericht.“ Sünde aber ist alles, das wider das Gesetz Gottes ist. Und St. Paulus sagt: „Alle Schrift, von Gott gegeben, ist nütze zur Lehre, zur Strafe“ usw., und strafen ist das eigentliche Amt des Gesetzes. Darum, sooft die Gläubigen straucheln, werden sie gestraft durch den Heiligen Geist aus dem Gesetz und durch denselben Geist wieder aufgerichtet und getröstet mit der Predigt des heiligen Evangelii.

Damit aber, soviel möglich, aller Mißverständnis verhütet, und der Unterschied zwischen den Werken des Gesetzes und des Geistes eigentlich [genau, deutlich] gelehrt und erhalten werde, ist mit [be-]sonderem Fleiß zu merken: wenn von guten Werken geredet wird, die dem Gesetz Gottes gemäß sind (denn sonst sind es nicht gute Werke), daß hier das Wort „Gesetz“ einerlei heißt [ein und dasselbe bezeichnet], nämlich den unwandelbaren Willen Gottes, nach welchem sich die Menschen in ihrem Leben verhalten sollen.

Der Unterschied aber ist in den Werken von wegen des Unterschieds der Menschen, die nach solchem Gesetz und Willen Gottes sich bekeihen zu halten. Denn solange der Mensch nicht wiedergeboren ist und sich nach dem Gesetz hält und tut die Werke darum, daß sie also geboten sind, aus Furcht [vor] der Strafe oder Gesuch des Lohns, der ist noch [so ist er noch] unter dem Gesetz, und seine Werke werden von St. Paulo eigentlich Werke des Gesetzes genennet [genannt], denn sie werden von dem Gesetz erzwungen wie die [wie die der] Knechte; und das sind laienische Heilige.

Wenn aber der Mensch durch den Geist Gottes neugeboren und vom Gesetz freigemacht, das ist, von diesem Treiber ledig [ge]worden und von dem Geist Christi getrieben wird, so lebt er nach dem unwandelbaren Willen Gottes, im Gesetz begriffen, und tut alles, soviel er neugeboren ist, aus freiem, lustigem Geist, 1 Tim. 1; Röm. 6. 8; und solches heißen nicht eigentlich Werke des Gesetzes, sondern Werke und Früchte des Geistes oder, wie es St. Paulus nennt, „das Gesetz des Gemüts und Gesetz Christi“. Denn solche Leute sind nicht mehr unter dem Gesetz, sondern unter der Gnade, wie St. Paulus sagt Röm. 8.

Nachdem aber [da aber] die Gläubigen in dieser Welt nicht vollkommen erneuert [werden], sondern der alte Adam hängt ihnen an bis in die Grube, so bleibt auch in ihnen der Kampf zwischen dem Geist und Fleisch. Darum haben sie wohl Lust an Gottes Gesetz nach dem innerlichen Menschen, aber das Gesetz in ihren Gliedern widerstrebt dem Gesetz in ihrem Gemüte; dergestalt [daher, auf welche Art und Weise] sie denn nimmer ohne rint, quibus bonis operibus opera danda sit, quas Deus praeparavit, ut in illis ambulemus, Eph. 2, 10. Et exhortatur Spiritus Sanctus ad bona opera; ac si quando propter [R. 721] carnem remissiores sunt et negligentiores aut etiam rebelles, per legem eos arguit. Et hoc modo idem Spiritus duo officia diversa in iisdem hominibus facit, mortificat et vivificat, deducit ad inferos et reducit. Eius enim officium non tantum est consolari, verum etiam arguere, ut scriptum est [Ioh. 16, 8]: Cum venerit Paracletus, arguet mundum (sub quo et vetus Adam comprehenditur) de peccato et de iustitia et de iudicio. Peccatum autem est, quidquid legi divinae adversatur. Et Paulus ait 2 Tim. 3, 16: Omnis Scriptura, divinitus inspirata, utilis est ad docendum et ad arguendum etc. Arguere enim peccata est proprium officium legis. Quare quoties credentes delinquant, corripiuntur et arguuntur a Spiritu Sancto per legem et ab eodem Spiritu rursus eriguntur et consolationem accipiunt per evangelii praedicationem.

15] Ut autem omnis ambiguitas et erroris occasio, quoad eius fieri potest, caveatur, et discrimen inter opera legis et opera Spiritus proprie et dextre tradatur atque conservetur, singulari diligentia observandum est, quando de bonis operibus agitur, quae legi Dei sunt conformia (alias enim bona opera nequaquam censerentur), quod hoc loco vocabulum legis unam tantum rem significet: immutabilem videlicet voluntatem Dei, secundum quam homines omnes vitae suae rationes instituere debeant.

16] Est autem discrimen in operibus propter differentiam hominum, qui secundum legem illam et voluntatem Dei vivere student. Homo enim nondum renatus, qui utcumque secundum legem Dei vivit et opera legis ideo facit, quia ad eum modum sunt mandata, eamque obedientiam formidine poenae aut spe praemii alicuius praestat: is adhuc sub lege est tamquam servus, et opera eius proprie a divo Paulo legis opera vocantur, quia talia opera a lege extorta sunt: et hi sunt Cainici sanctuli (hoc est, hypocritae).

17] Cum autem homo per Spiritum [R. 722] Sanctum renatus atque a lege, hoc est, a coactione legis, liberatus est, iamque Spiritu Dei agitur, tum secundum immutabilem Dei voluntatem in lege revelatam vivit et omnia, quatenus renatus est, libero et prompto spiritu agit, 1 Tim. 1, 9; Rom. 6; 8, 14. Et talia opera proprie non sunt appellanda opera legis, sed opera et fructus Spiritus, aut ut divus Paulus ea vocat, dicuntur lex mentis et lex Christi. Hi enim homines non amplius sub lege sunt, sed sub gratia, ut idem apostolus testatur [Rom. 7, 23; 8, 2; 1 Cor. 9, 21].

18] Cum autem credentes in hac vita non plene renouentur, sed vetus Adam ipsi usque ad extremum spiritum adhaereat, manet etiam in illis lucta inter spiritum et carnem. Quare delectantur quidem lege Dei secundum interiorem hominem, interim tamen lex illa, quae est in membris eorum, legi mentis repugnat. Unde sit, ut nunquam quidem sine lege et tamen non sub lege, sed in lege sint, secundum to teach the regenerate from it, and to point out and show them in the Ten Commandments what is the [good and] acceptable will of God, Rom. 12, 2, in what good works God hath before ordained that they should walk, Eph. 2, 10. He exhorts them thereto, and when they are idle, negligent, and rebellious in this matter because of the flesh, He reproves them on that account through the Law, so that He carries on both offices together: He slays and makes alive; He leads into hell and brings up again. For His office is not only to comfort, but also to reprove, as it is written: When the Holy Ghost is come, He will reprove the world (which includes also the old Adam) of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment. But sin is everything that is contrary to God's Law. And St. Paul says: All Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, etc., and to reprove is the peculiar office of the Law. Therefore, as often as believers stumble, they are reprov'd by the Holy Spirit from the Law, and by the same Spirit are raised up and comforted again with the preaching of the Holy Gospel.

But in order that, as far as possible, all misunderstanding may be prevented, and the distinction between the works of the Law and those of the Spirit be properly taught and preserved, it is to be noted with especial diligence that when we speak of good works which are in accordance with God's Law (for otherwise they are not good works), then the word Law has only one sense, namely, the immutable will of God, according to which men are to conduct themselves in their lives.

The difference, however, is in the works, because of the difference in the men who strive to live according to this Law and will of God. For as long as man is not regenerate, and [therefore] conducts himself according to the Law and does the works because they are commanded thus, from fear of punishment or desire for reward, he is still under the Law, and his works are called by St. Paul properly works of the Law, for they are extorted by the Law, as those of slaves; and these are saints after the order of Cain [that is, hypocrites].

But when man is born anew by the Spirit of God, and liberated from the Law, that is, freed from this driver, and is led by the Spirit of Christ, he lives according to the immutable will of God comprised in the Law, and so far as he is born anew, does everything from a free, cheerful spirit; and these are called not properly works of the Law, but works and fruits of the Spirit, or as St. Paul names it, the law of the mind and the Law of Christ. For such men are no more under the Law, but under grace, as St. Paul says, Rom. 8, 2 [Rom. 7, 23; 1 Cor. 9, 21].

But since believers are not completely renewed in this world, but the old Adam clings to them even to the grave, there also remains in them the struggle between the spirit and the flesh. Therefore they delight indeed in God's Law according to the inner man, but the law in their members struggles against the law in their mind; hence they are never Gesetz und gleichwohl nicht unter, sondern im Gesetz sind, im Gesetz des Herrn leben und wandeln und doch aus Trieb des Gesetzes nichts tun.

Sobiel aber den alten Adam belangt, der ihnen noch anhängt, muß derselbe nicht allein mit [dem] Gesetz, sondern auch mit Plagen getrieben werden, der doch alles wider seinen Willen und gezwungen tut, nicht weniger als die Gottlosen durch Dräuungen des Gesetzes getrieben und im Gehorsam gehalten werden, 1 Kor. 9; Röm. 7.

So ist auch solche Lehre des Gesetzes den Gläubigen darum nötig, auf daß sie nicht auf eigene Heiligkeit und Andacht fallen und unter dem Schein des Geistes Gottes eigenernährten Gottesdienst, ohne Gottes Wort und Befehl, anrichten, wie geschrieben steht Deut. 12: „Ihr sollt deren keins tun, ein jeder, was ihn recht dünket, sondern höret die Gebote und Rechte, die ich euch gebiete, und sollet auch nichts dazutun noch davon tun.“

So ist auch die Lehre des Gesetzes in und bei den guten Werken der Gläubigen darum vonnöten: denn sonst kann ihm [sinn sich] der Mensch gar leicht einbilden, daß sein Werk und Leben ganz rein und vollkommen sei. Aber das Gesetz Gottes schreibt den Gläubigen die guten Werke also vor, daß es zugleich wie in einem Spiegel zeigt und weist, daß sie in uns in diesem Leben noch unvollkommen und unrein seien, daß wir mit dem lieben Paulo sagen müssen: „Wenn ich mir gleich nichts bewußt bin, so bin ich darum nicht gerechtfertiget.“ Also, da Paulus die Neugeborenen zu guten Werken vermahnt, hält er ihnen ausdrücklich vor die zehn Gebote, Röm. 13; und daß seine guten Werke unvollkommen und unrein seien, erkennt er aus dem Gesetz, Röm. 7; und David spricht Ps. 119: Viam mandatorum tuorum cucurri, „ich wandle auf dem Wege deiner Gebote“; aber „gehe mit deinem Knecht nicht ins Gericht, denn sonst wird kein Lebendiger vor dir gerecht sein“, Ps. 143.

Wie aber und warum die guten Werke der Gläubigen, ob sie gleich in diesem Leben von wegen der Sünde im Fleisch unvollkommen und unrein sind, dennoch Gott angenehm und wohlgefällig sind, solches lehrt nicht das Gesetz, welches einen ganz [ganzen] vollkommenen, reinen Gehorsam, wo er Gott gefallen soll, erfordert. Sondern das Evangelium lehrt, daß unsere geistlichen Opfer Gott angenehm seien durch den Glauben um Christus' willen, 1 Petr. 2; Hebr. 11. Solchergehalt sind die Christen nicht unter dem Gesetz, sondern unter der Gnade, weil die Person von dem Fluch und Verdammnis des Gesetzes durch den Glauben an Christum befreit [befreit ist], und weil ihre guten Werke, ob sie gleich noch unvollkommen und unrein, durch Christum Gott angenehm sind, weil sie auch nicht aus Zwang des Gesetzes, sondern aus Verneuerung des Heiligen Geistes, von Herzen, willig und ungezwungen tun, was Gott gefällig ist, sobiel sie nach dem innerlichen Menschen neugeboren sind; gleichwohl aber führen sie einen stetigen Kampf wider den alten Adam.

Denn der alte Adam, als der unfällige, streitige Esel, ist auch noch ein Stück an ihnen, das nicht allein mit des Gesetzes Lehre, Vermahnung, Treiben und Dräuen, sondern auch öftermals mit dem Knüttel der Strafen und Plagen in den Gehorsam Christi zu zwingen, bis das Fleisch der Sünde legem Domini vivant et ambulent et tamen bona opera non ex coactione legis faciant.

19] Quod vero ad veterem Adamum attinet, qui in ipsis adhuc haeret, ille non modo lege, verum etiam poenis urgendus et coercendus est et tamen omnia invitus et coactus facit, non minus quam impij, qui comminationibus legis urgentur et in officio et obedientia invitumque retinentur, 1 Cor. 9, 27; Rom. 7, 18. 19.

20] Quin etiam legis doctrina hoc nomine credentibus necessaria est, ne propria quadam sanctimonia religiosum vitae genus de suo ingenio excogitent et sub praetextu Spiritus Dei electicios cultus sine verbo et mandato Dei instituant. De qua re sic scriptum est Deut. 12, 8. 28. 32: Non facietis singuli, quod sibi rectum videtur etc. Quod praecipio tibi, hoc tantum facito Domino, neque addas quidquam, neo minuas.

21] Sed et aliam ob causam doctrina [R. 723] legis in exercitio bonorum operum credentibus necessaria est. Facile enim homo imaginari et persuadere sibi potest, vitam et opera sua omnino pura et perfecta esse. At lex Dei credentibus bona opera ad eum modum praescribit, ut simul tamquam in speculo nobis commonstret, ea omnia in nobis in hac vita adhuc imperfecta et impura esse, ita quidem ut cum apostolo fatendum nobis sit 1 Cor. 4, 4: Etsi mihi nihil conscius sum, tamen in eo non sum iustificatus. Quare cum divus Paulus renatos hortatur, ut bona opera faciant, expresse Decalogum eis proponit, Rom. 13, 9, et opera sua imperfecta et impura esse ipse ex lege agnoscit, Rom. 7, 7 sqq. Et David inquit Ps. 119, 32: Viam mandatorum tuorum cucurri. Interim tamen orat Ps. 143, 2: Non intres in iudicium cum servo tuo, quia non iustificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens.

22] Quomodo autem et qua de causa bona opera credentium (licet in hac vita propter peccatum in carne haerens imperfecta et impura) grata Deo acceptaque sint, hoc non docet lex, quae integram, perfectam et puram omnibusque numeris absolutissimam obedientiam requirit, si modo ea Deo probari debeat. Evangelion vero docet, spiritualia sacrificia nostra Deo accepta esse per fidem propter Christum, 1 Petr. 2, 5; Hebr. 11, 4 sqq. Et 23] hac ratione pii non sunt sub lege, sed sub gratia, propterea quod ipsa persona piorum a maledictione et damnatione legis per fidem in Christum sit liberata, et quod bona opera ipsorum, etsi imperfecta et impura, Deo propter Christum sint accepta et grata, et quod non ex coactione legis, sed ex renovatione Spiritus Sancti ex animo prompte et sponte ea faciant, quae Deo placent, quatenus secundum interiorem hominem sunt renati. Interim tamen assidue cum veteri suo Adamo luctantur.

24] Vetus enim ille Adam (quasi asinus indomitus et contumax) est adhuc etiam pars aliqua ipsorum, quae non modo legis [R. 724] doctrina, exhortationibus, impulsu et comminationibus, verum etiam (quasi fuste) plagis et poenis coercenda et in obedientiam Christi without the Law, and nevertheless are not under, but in the Law, and live and walk in the Law of the Lord, and yet do nothing from constraint of the Law.

But as far as the old Adam is concerned, which still clings to them, he must be driven not only with the Law, but also with punishments; nevertheless he does everything against his will and under coercion, no less than the godless are driven and held in obedience by the threats of the Law, 1 Cor. 9, 27; Rom. 7, 18, 19.

So, too, this doctrine of the Law is needful for believers, in order that they may not hit upon a holiness and devotion of their own, and under the pretext of the Spirit of God set up a self-chosen worship, without God's Word and command, as it is written Deut. 12, 8, 28, 32: Ye shall not do . . . every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes, etc., but observe and hear all these words which I command thee. Thou shalt not add thereto, nor diminish therefrom.

So, too, the doctrine of the Law, in and with [the exercise of] the good works of believers, is necessary for the reason that otherwise man can easily imagine that his work and life are entirely pure and perfect. But the Law of God prescribes to believers good works in this way, that it shows and indicates at the same time, as in a mirror, that in this life they are still imperfect and impure in us, so that we must say with the beloved Paul, 1 Cor. 4, 4: I know nothing by myself; yet am I not hereby justified. Thus Paul, when exhorting the regenerate to good works, presents to them expressly the Ten Commandments, Rom. 13, 9; and that his good works are imperfect and impure he recognizes from the Law, Rom. 7, 7 ff.; and David declares Ps. 119, 32: Viam mandatorum tuorum cucurri, I will run the way of Thy commandments; but enter not into judgment with Thy servant, for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified, Ps. 143, 2.

But how and why the good works of believers, although in this life they are imperfect and impure because of sin in the flesh, are nevertheless acceptable and well-pleasing to God, is not taught by the Law, which requires an altogether perfect, pure obedience if it is to please God. But the Gospel teaches that our spiritual offerings are acceptable to God through faith for Christ's sake, 1 Pet. 2, 5; Heb. 11, 4 ff. In this way Christians are not under the Law, but under grace, because by faith in Christ the persons are freed from the curse and condemnation of the Law; and because their good works, although they are still imperfect and impure, are acceptable to God through Christ; moreover, because so far as they have been born anew according to the inner man, they do what is pleasing to God, not by coercion of the Law, but by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, voluntarily and spontaneously from their hearts; however, they maintain nevertheless a constant struggle against the old Adam.

For the old Adam, as an intractable, refractory ass, is still a part of them, which must be coerced to the obedience of Christ, not only by the teaching, admonition, force, and threatening of the Law, but also oftentimes by the club of punishments and troubles, gang und gar ausgezogen und der Mensch voll-kommenlich in der Auferstehung erneuert [ist], da-er weder der Predigt des Gesetzes noch seiner Drängung und Strafen wie auch des Evangelii nicht mehr bedürfen wird, die in dieß unvollkommene Leben gehören. Sondern wie sie Gott von Angezicht zu Angesicht anschauen, also werden sie durch Kraft des einwohnenden Geistes Gottes frei-willig, ungezwungen, ungehindert, ganz rein und völlig mit eitel Freuden den Willen Gottes zu tun und sich an demselben ewig zu erfreuen [den Willen Gottes tun und sich an demselben ewig er-freuen].

Demnach verworfen und verdammen wir als einen schädlichen und christlicher Zucht, auch wahrer Gottseligkeit nachtheiligen Irrtum, wenn ge-lehrt wird, daß das Gesetz obgemeldeter Weise und Maß nicht bei den Christen und Rechtgläubigen, sondern allein bei den Ungläubigen, Unchristen und Unbußfertigen getrieben werden soll.

VII.

Vom heiligen Abendmahl.

Wiewohl die Erklärung dieses Artikels vielleicht Eitlicher Bedünken nach [nach der Meinung Eitlicher] nicht in diese Schrift sollte gesetzt werden, darin wir die Artikel, so unter den Theologen Augsburgischer Konfession (von welcher sich die Sacramentierer bald anfänglich, als die Konfession zu Augsburg Anno 1530 erstlich gestellt und dem Kaiser übergeben, gänzlich geäußert und abgesondert und ihre eigene Konfession übergeben haben) in Zwiespalt gezogen, zu erklären Vorhabens sind, so haben wir doch (nachdem leider eiliche Theologen und andere, so sich der Augsburgischen Konfession rühmen, die nächsten Jahre [in den letztverfloßenen Jahren] den Sacramentierern in diesem Artikel nicht mehr heimlich, sondern zum Teil öffentlich Beifall getan und wider ihr eigen Ge-wissen die Augsburgische Konfession, als die mit der Sacramentierer Lehre in diesem Artikel ganz übereinstimme, mit Gewalt anziehen und verkehren wollen) nicht unterlassen können noch sollen, auch in dieser Schrift mit unserm Bekenntnis der göttlichen Wahrheit Zeugnis zu geben und die rechte
Meinung und eigentlichen Verstand der Worte Christi und der Augsburgischen Konfession von diesem Artikel wiederum zu erholen [zu wiederholen] und, soviel an uns ist, durch Gottes Hilfe auch auf die Nachkommen zu erhalten und unsere Zuhörer samt andern frommen Christen vor diesem schädlichen und dem heiligen göttlichen Wort und der Augsburgischen Konfession ganz widerrärtigen und wielmal verdammten Irrtum treulich zu verwarnen.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

Der Hauptstreit zwischen unserer und der Sacramentierer Lehre in diesem Artikel.

Obwohl etliche Sacramentierer sich bekennen, mit Worten auf das allernächste der Augsburgischen Konfession und dieser Kirchen Form oder Weise zu reden zu gebrauchen [Worte zu gebrau-cogenda est, donec carnem peccati prorsus exuamus et homo perfecte in beata illa resurrectione renovetur. Tum vero nec doctrina nec comminationibus et reprehensionibus legis, denique ne evangelii quidem praedicatione indigeat; haec enim ad hanc mortalem dun-25] taxat et imperfectam vitam spectant. Sed quemadmodum Dominum facie ad faciem intuebuntur, ita virtute inhabitantis Spiritus Dei sponte sine ulla coactione, absque omni impedimento, puri prorsus et perfecti maximo cum gaudio voluntatem Patris coelestis facient et in Deo in omnem aeternitatem laetabuntur.

26] Quare reicimus et damnamus ut erro-rem perniciosum, qui Christianam disciplinam solvit et verae pietati adversatur, cum doce-tur, quod lex (eo modo, qui supra explicatus est) non apud pios et credentes, sed tantum apud infideles, impios et impenitentes ur-genda sit.

VII.

DE COENA DOMINI.

1] Quamvis fortasse quibusdam videri pos-sit, declarationem articuli de Sacra Coena huic scripto inserendam non fuisse, in quo eos duntaxat articulos, qui inter theologos Augu-stanae Confessionis in controversiam venerunt, declarandos suscipimus, et vero manifestum sit, Sacramentarios iam olim (cum Confessio Augustana anno Domini MDXXX primum conscriberetur et Imperatori exhiberetur) penitus ab ea alienos fuisse atque talem eo tempore secessionem fecisse, ut peculiarem ea de re con-fessionem offerrent; quia tamen (quod sane dolendum est) theologi quidam et alii [R. 725 praeterea nonnulli, qui Confessionis Augu-stanae religionem iactitant, proximis hisce annis in hoc articulo non clam tantum et occulte, sed partim etiam aperte ad Sacramentarios defecerunt et contra conscientiae suae testi-monium Augustanam Confessionem (quasi ea cum Sacramentariorum doctrina in hoc articulo per omnia faceret) violenter in alienam sententiam pertrahere eamque hoc modo depravare nituntur: facere non potuimus, quin etiam in hoc scripto veritatem coelesti pia et sincera nostra confessione testimonium perhi-beremus et veram ac genuinam tam verborum Christi quam Augustanae Confessionis sen-tentiam de hoc negotio repeteremus. Agnosci-mus enim, nostri officii esse, ut (quantum qui-dem in nobis est) piam et sinceram doctrinam hanc per gratiam Dei etiam ad posteritatem transmittamus et auditores nostros aliosque pios homines fideliter admoneamus, ut a pesti-lenti errore illo (qui et Verbo Dei et Augu-stanae Confessionis repugnat ac dudum aliquoties damnatus est) quam diligentissime sibi caveant.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE,

quae est inter nos et Sacramentarios in negotio Coenae Dominicae.

2] Etsi Sacramentarii quidam in eo elaborant, ut quam proxime verbis ad Augustanam Confessionem accedant et nostrarum ecclesiarum formas loquendi usurpent, ac fatentur, until the body of sin is entirely put off, and man is perfectly renewed in the resurrection, when he will need neither the preaching of the Law nor its threatenings and punishments, as also the Gospel any longer; for these belong to this [mortal and] imperfect life. But as they will behold God face to face, so they will, through the power of the indwelling Spirit of God, do the will of God [the heavenly Father] with unmingled joy, voluntarily, unconstrained, without any hindrance, with entire purity and perfection, and will rejoice in it eternally.

Accordingly, we reject and condemn as an error pernicious and detrimental to Christian discipline, as also to true godliness, the teaching that the Law, in the above-mentioned way and degree, should not be urged upon Christians and the true believers, but only upon the unbelieving, unchristians, and impenitent.

VII.

OF THE HOLY SUPPER.

Although, in the opinion of some, the exposition of this article perhaps should not be inserted into this document, in which we intend to explain the articles which have been drawn into controversy among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession (from which the Sacramentarians soon in the beginning, when the Confession was first composed and presented to the Emperor at Augsburg in 1530, entirely withdrew and separated, and presented their own Confession), still, since some theologians, and others who boast [their adherence to] the Augsburg Confession, have, alas! during the last years, given their assent in this article to the Sacramentarians no longer secretly, but partly publicly and against their own conscience have endeavored to wrest forcibly and to pervert the Augsburg Confession as being in this article in entire harmony with the doctrine of the Sacramentarians, we neither can nor should omit our testimony by our confession of the divine truth also in this document, and must repeat the true sense and proper understanding of the words of Christ and of the Augsburg Confession with reference to this article, and [for we recognize it to be our duty], so far as in us lies, by God's help, preserve it [this pure doctrine] also for posterity, and faithfully warn our hearers, together with other godly Christians, against this pernicious error, which is entirely contrary to the divine Word and the Augsburg Confession, and has been frequently condemned.

STATUS CONTROVERSIAE.

The Chief Controversy between Our Doctrine and that of the Sacramentarians in This Article.

Although some Sacramentarians strive to employ words that come as close as possible to the Augsburg Confession and the form and mode of speech in its [our] churches, and con-chen, die der Augsburgerischen Confession und der Form und Redeweise der lutherischen Kirche möglichst gleichförmig sind], und bekennen, daß im heiligen Abendmahl der Leib Christi wahrhaftig von den Gläubigen empfangen werde; dennoch, wenn man sie ihre Meinung eigentlich, aufrichtig und deutlich anzuzeigen bringt, so erklären sie sich alle einträchtig also: daß der wahre, wesentliche Leib und Blut Christi vom gesegneten Brod und Wein im Abendmahl ja so weit als der höchste Himmel von der Erde abwesend sei. Denn also lauten ihre eigenen Worte: Absesse Christi corpus et sanguinem a signis tanto intervallo dicimus, quanto abest terra ab altissimis coelis. Das ist: Wir sagen, daß der Leib und Blut Christi so weit von den Zeichen sei, so weit und fern die Erde von dem allerhöchsten Himmel ist. Verstehen derhalben solche Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes Christi nicht allhier auf Erden [nicht als Gegenwart hier auf Erden], sondern allein respectu fidei, das ist, daß unser Glaube, durch die sichtbaren Zeichen, gleichwie durchs gepredigte Wort, erinnert und erweckt, sich erhebe und über alle Himmel hinauffsteige und den allda im Himmel gegenwärtigen Leib Christi, ja Christum selbst samt allen seinen Guttaten wahrhaftig und wesentlich, aber doch nur geistlich empfangen und genieße; denn wie das Brod und Wein allhier auf Erden und nicht im Himmel, also sei der Leib Christi jeßund im Himmel und nicht auf Erden; [es] werde derhalben mit dem Munde nichts anderes im Abendmahl als Brod und Wein empfangen.

Nun haben sie erstlich [zuerst, anfangs] vor[ge-]geben, des Herrn Abendmahl sei nur ein äußerlich Zeichen, dabei man die Christen kenne, und werde darin nichts anderes als schlecht [als bloßes] Brod und Wein (die des abwesenden Leibes Christi bloße Zeichen seien) gereicht. Als dieses den Stich nicht halten wollen, haben sie bekannt, der Herr Christus sei wahrhaftig in seinem Abendmahl gegenwärtig, nämlich per communicationem idiomatum, das ist, allein nach seiner göttlichen Natur, aber nicht mit seinem Leib und Blut.

Danach, als man sie mit Christi Worten gedungen zu bekennen, daß der Leib Christi im Abendmahl zugegen sei, haben sie es doch nicht anders verstanden und erklärt als geistlich, das ist, [Christi Leib sei gegenwärtig] mit seiner Kraft, Wirkung und Guttat, durch den Glauben zu genießen, weil durch den Geist Christi, der allenthalben ist, unsere Leiber, darin der Geist Christi allhier auf Erden wohnt, mit dem Leibe Christi, der im Himmel ist, vereinigt werden.

Daher denn durch diese herrlichen, scheinlichen [gleichenden, scheinbar richtigen] Worte viel hoher Leute betrogen worden, wenn sie vorge[ge]ben und gerühmt, sie seien keiner andern Meinung, denn daß der Herr Christus wahrhaftig, wesentlich, lebendig in seinem Abendmahl gegenwärtig sei, verstehen aber solches allein nach seiner göttlichen Natur und nicht von seinem Leib und Blut, der nun im Himmel und nirgend anders sei; und gibt uns [und Christus gebe uns] mit Brod und Wein seinen wahren Leib und Blut zu essen geistlich, quod in Coena Domini corpus Christi vere a fidelibus accipitur: attamen, quando serio urgentur, ut sententiam suam ingenue, aperte et perspicue profiteantur, tum uno ore omnes animum suum declarant, quod credant, [R. 726 verum et substantiale Christi corpus eiusque sanguinem a benedicto pane et vino in Coena Sacra tanto locorum intervallo abesse, quanto summum coelum ab infima terra distet. Haec enim sunt ipsorum verba: Absesse Christi corpus et sanguinem a signis tanto intervallo dicimus, quanto abest terra ab altissimis 3] coelis. Quare cum de praesentia corporis et sanguinis Christi in Coena loquuntur, non volunt ea in terris adesse nisi respectu fidei nostrae, hoc est, fidem nostram dicunt per visibilia symbola, perinde ut per verbum praedicatum, commonefieri et excitari, ut sese attollat atque omnes coelos transcendat et hoc modo praesens in coelo corpus Christi eiusque sanguinem (imo ipsum Christum cum omnibus beneficiis suis) vere et substantialiter, sed tamen spiritualiter tantum sumat eoque fratur. Sentiant enim, ut panis et vinum hic sunt in terris et non in coelo, ita corpus Christi iam in coelis esse et non in terra, quare in Coena Domini nihil aliud ore sumi quam panem et vinum.

4] Ac initio quidem, cum haec controversia orta fuisset, fingebant, Coenam Domini esse tantum externum signum professionis, quo Christiani ab aliis hominibus discernerentur, et in eo sacramento nihil nisi panem et vinum (absentis videlicet corporis Christi nuda symbola) exhiberi. At cum intelligerent, hoc figmentum nihil prorsus coloris habere neque consistere posse, coeperunt fateri, Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum in Sacra Coena sua vere praesentem esse per communicationem idiomatum, hoc est, tantummodo secundum divinam suam naturam, sed non suo corpore et sanguine.

5] Postea etiamsi verbis Christi graviter urgebantur, ut praesentiam corporis Christi in Sacra Coena fateri cogerentur, id tamen aliter non intellexerunt et declararunt, quam quod spirituale tantum praesentiam crederent, hoc est, quod Christus tantum virtutis, operationis et beneficiorum suorum per [R. 727 fidem nos participes faceret, quia (inquiet) Spiritus Christi (qui ubique praesens est) corpora nostra (in quibus Spiritus ille hic in terris habitat) cum corpore Christi, quod in coelis est, coniungit.

6] Quare splendidis et magnificis verbis illis multis magnis et praeclaris viris imposuerunt, quando nimirum affirmarunt atque iactitarunt, se plane nihil aliud sentire, quam quod Dominus Iesus Christus vere, substantialiter, vivus in sacra sua Coena praesens sit. Hoc autem intelligit ipsi tantum de divina Christi natura, non autem de ipsius carne et sanguine. De his enim sentiunt, ea tantum in coelis et praeterea nullibi esse, ideoque Christum nobis cum pane et vino verum cor-less that in the Holy Supper the body of Christ is truly received by believers, still, when we insist that they state their meaning properly, sincerely, and clearly, they all declare themselves unanimously thus: that the true essential body and blood of Christ is absent from the consecrated bread and wine in the Holy Supper as far as the highest heaven is from the earth. For thus their own words run: Abesse Christi corpus et sanguinem a signis tanto intervallo dicimus, quanto abest terra ab altissimis coelis. That is: "We say that the body and blood of Christ are as far from the signs as the earth is distant from the highest heaven." Therefore they understand this presence of the body of Christ not as a presence here upon earth, but only respectu fidei (with respect to faith) [when they speak of the presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper, they do not mean that they are present upon earth, except with respect to faith], that is, that our faith, reminded and excited by the visible signs, just as by the Word preached, elevates itself and ascends above all heavens, and receives and enjoys the body of Christ, which is there in heaven present, yea, Christ Himself, together with all His benefits, in a manner true and essential, but nevertheless spiritual only. For [they hold that] as the bread and wine are here upon earth and not in heaven, so the body of Christ is now in heaven and not upon earth, and consequently nothing else is received by the mouth in the Holy Supper than bread and wine.

Now, originally, they alleged that the Lord's Supper is only an external sign, by which Christians are known, and that nothing else is offered in it than mere bread and wine (which are bare signs [symbols] of the absent body of Christ). When this [figment] would not stand the test, they confessed that the Lord Christ is truly present in His Supper, namely per communicationem idiomatum (by the communication of attributes), that is, according to His divine nature alone, but not with His body and blood.

Afterwards, when they were forced by Christ's words to confess that the body of Christ is present in the Supper, they still understood and declared it in no other way than spiritually [only of a spiritual presence], that is, of partaking through faith of His power, efficacy, and benefits, because [they say] through the Spirit of Christ, who is everywhere, our bodies, in which the Spirit of Christ dwells here upon earth, are united with the body of Christ, which is in heaven.

The consequence was that many great men were deceived by these fine, plausible words, when they alleged and boasted that they were of no other opinion than that the Lord Christ is present in His [Holy] Supper truly, essentially, and as one alive; but they understand this according to His divine nature alone, and not of His body and blood, which, they say, are now in heaven, and nowhere else, and that He gives us with the bread and wine His true durch den Glauben, aber nicht leiblich, mit dem Munde, zu genießen.

Denn sie die Worte des Abendmahls: „Esset, das ist mein Leib“, nicht eigentlich, wie sie lauten, nach dem Buchstaben, sondern als verblühte Reden (figurata) verstehen, also daß essen den Leib Christi nichts anderes heiße als glauben und Leib so viel als Symbolum, das ist, ein Zeichen oder Figur des Leibes Christi, welcher nicht im Abendmahl auf Erden, sondern allein im Himmel sei; das Wort ist sacramentaliter seu modo significativo deuten, ne quis rem cum signis ita putet copulari, ut Christi quoque caro nunc in terris adsit modo quodam invisibili et incomprehensibili; das ist, der Leib Christi sei mit dem Brod sacramentlich oder bedeutlich vereinigt, also daß die gläubigen, frommen Christen, so gewiß als sie das Brod mit dem Munde essen, so gewiß auch den Leib Christi, so droben im Himmel ist, mit dem Glauben geistlich genießen. Aber daß der Leib Christi im Abendmahl allhier auf Erden wesentlich, wiewohl unsichtbarlich und unbegreiflich, gegenwärtig und mit dem gesegneten Brod mündlich, auch von Heuchlern oder Scheinchristen, empfangen werde, das pflegen sie als eine grausame Gotteslästerung zu versuchen und verdammen.

Dagegen wird vom Abendmahl des Herrn in der Augsburgerischen Confession aus Gottes Wort also gelehrt, daß der wahre Leib und Blut Christi wahrhaftig unter der Gestalt des Brotes und Weines im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig sei und da ausgeteilt und genommen werde, und wird die Gegensehre (nämlich der Sacramentierer, so eben zur selben Zeit zu Augsburg ihr eigen Bekenntnis, daß der Leib Christi, diemeil er gen Himmel gefahren, nicht wahrhaftig und wesentlich allhier auf Erden im Sacrament gegenwärtig sei, übergeben haben) verworfen; wie denn diese Meinung im Kleinen Katechismo D. Luthers deutlich mit nachfolgenden Worten gesetzt ist: „Das Sacrament des Altars ist der wahre Leib und Blut unsers Herrn Jesu Christi, unter dem Brod und Wein uns Christen zu essen und zu trinken, von Christo selbst eingesetzt“; und noch deutlicher in der Apologia nicht allein erkläret, sondern auch mit dem Spruch Pauli 1 Cor. 10 und Christi bekräftigt wird mit diesen Worten: „Der zehnte Artikel ist angenommen, darin wir bekennen, daß im Abendmahl des Herrn der Leib und Blut Christi wahrhaftig und wesentlich gegenwärtig sind und mit den sichtbaren Elementen, Brod und Wein, wahrhaftig gereicht werden denen, die das Sacrament empfangen. Denn diemeil Paulus sagt, das Brod, das wir brechen, sei die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi uhm.“, würde folgen, daß das Brod nicht des Leibes, sondern des Geistes Christi Gemeinschaft wäre, wenn der Leib Christi nicht, sondern allein der Heilige Geist wahrhaftig gegenwärtig wäre. So wissen wir, daß nicht allein die römische, sondern auch die griechische Kirche die leibliche Gegenwart Christi im heiligen Abendmahl lehret“ [hat]. Und wird aus Cyrillo angezogen, daß Christus auch leiblich im Abendmahl durch Mitteilung seines Fleisches in uns wohnt.

pus et verum sanguinem manducandum et bibendum dare, spiritualiter per fidem, sed non corporaliter ore sumendum.

7) Verba enim institutionis Coenae Domini: Edite, hoc est corpus meum, non proprie, ut sonant, secundum litteram, sed quasi figuratum sermonem, figurate accipiunt, ita ut edere corpus Christi nihil aliud ipsis significet, quam credere in Christum, et vocabulum corporis illis nil nisi symbolum, hoc est, signum seu figuram corporis Christi, denotet, quod tamen non in terris et in Sacra Coena praesens, sed tantum in coelis sit. Verbum est sacramentaliter seu modo significativo interpretantur, ne quis rem cum signis ita putet copulari, ut Christi quoque caro nunc in terris adsit, modo quodam invisibili et in-8) comprehensibili. Hoc nimirum volunt, corpus Christi cum pane sacramentaliter seu significative unitum esse, ita, ut credentes ac pii homines tam certo corpus Christi (quod sursum in coelis sit) fide spiritualiter accipiant, quam certo panem ore manducant. Quod vero corpus Christi in Sacra Coena in his terris substantialiter (licet invisibili et incomprehensibili modo) praesens sit et [R. 728 una cum pane benedicto ore, etiam ab hypocritis et nomine duntaxat Christianis, sumatur, id solent quasi horrendam blasphemiam damnare et execrari.

9) Contra vero de Coena Domini in Confessione Augustana ex Verbo Dei sic docetur: verum corpus et sanguinem Christi vere, sub specie panis et vini, in Sacra Domini Coena praesentia esse, distribui et sumi; secus autem docentes improbari. His postremis verbis Sacramentarium error perspicue relictur, qui eo ipso tempore Augustae peculiarem confessionem obtulerunt, quae veram et substantialem corporis et sanguinis Christi praesentiam in sacramento Coenae, in terris administratae, idcirco negabat, quia Christus 10) ascendisset in coelos. Pia etiam nostra de hac re sententia in minore D. Lutheri Catechismo perspicue sequentibus verbis expressa est: Sacramentum altaris est verum corpus et verus sanguis Domini nostri Iesu Christi, sub pane et vino nobis Christianis ad manducandum et bibendum a Christo ipso institutum. 11) tum. Luculentius etiamnum haec ipsa sententia nostra in Apologia non modo declaratur, verum etiam illustri dicto Pauli 1 Cor. 10, 16 et testimonio Cyrilli confirmatur hisce verbis: Decimus articulus approbatus est, in quo constitemus, nos sentire, quod in Coena Domini vere et substantialiter adsint corpus et sanguis Christi et vere exhibeantur cum illis rebus, quae videntur, pane et vino, his, qui sacramentum accipiunt. Cum enim Paulus dicat, panem, quem frangimus, communicationem corporis Christi esse etc., sequeretur, panem non corporis, sed Spiritus Christi participationem esse, si non ipsum Christi corpus, sed duntaxat Spiritus Sanctus vere praesens esset. Et comperimus, non tantum Romanam ecclesiam affirmare corporalem Christi [R. 729 praesentiam, sed idem et nunc sentire et olim etiam sensisse Graecam ecclesiam. Sed et ibidem ex Cyrillo testimonium adducitur, Christum etiam corporaliter in Sacra Coena communicatione suae carnis in nobis habitare.

body and blood to eat, to partake of them spiritually through faith, but not bodily with the mouth.

For they understand the words of the Supper: Eat, this is My body, not properly, as they read, according to the letter, but figurate, as figurative expressions, so that eating the body of Christ means nothing else than believing, and body is equivalent to symbol, that is, a sign or figure of the body of Christ, which is not in the Supper on earth, but only in heaven. The word is they interpret sacramentaliter seu modo significativo (sacramentally, or in a significative manner), nequis rem cum signis ita putet copulari, ut Christi quoque caro nunc in terris adsit modo quodam invisibili et incomprehensibili (in order that no one may regard the thing so joined with the signs that the flesh also of Christ is now present on earth in an invisible and incomprehensible manner); that is, that the body of Christ is united with the bread sacramentally, or significatively, so that believing, godly Christians as surely partake spiritually of the body of Christ, which is above, in heaven, as they eat the bread with the mouth. But that the body of Christ is present here upon earth in the Supper essentially, although invisibly and incomprehensibly, and is received orally, with the consecrated bread, even by hypocrites or those who are Christians only in appearance [by name], this they are accustomed to execrate and condemn as a horrible blasphemy.

Over against this it is taught in the Augsburg Confession from God's Word concerning the Lord's Supper: That the true body and blood of Christ are truly present in the Holy Supper under the form of bread and wine, and are there dispensed and received; and the contrary doctrine is rejected (namely, that of the Sacramentarians, who presented their own Confession at the same time at Augsburg, that the body of Christ, because He has ascended to heaven, is not truly and essentially present here upon earth in the Sacrament [which denied the true and substantial presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Sacrament of the Supper administered on earth, namely, for the reason that Christ had ascended into heaven]); even as this opinion is clearly expressed in Luther's Small Catechism in the following words: The Sacrament of the Altar is the true body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ under the bread and wine, for us Christians to eat and to drink, instituted by Christ Himself; and in the Apology this is not only explained still more clearly, but also established by the passage from Paul, 1 Cor. 10, 16, and by the testimony of Cyril, in the following words: The Tenth Article has been approved, in which we confess that in the Lord's Supper the body and blood of Christ are truly and substantially present, and are truly tendered with the visible elements, bread and wine, to those who receive the Sacrament. For since Paul says: "The bread which we break is the communion of the body of Christ," etc., it would follow, if the body of Christ were not, but only the Holy Ghost were truly present, that the bread is not a communion of the body, but of the Spirit of Christ. Besides, we know that not only the Romish, but also the Greek Church has taught the bodily presence of Christ in the Holy Supper. And testimony is produced from Cyril that Christ dwells also bodily in us in the Holy Supper by the communication of His flesh.

Danach, als diejenigen, so zu Augsburg ihr eigen Bekenntnis von diesem Artikel übergeben, sich unferer Kirchen Konfession vermandt gemacht, ist zu Wittenberg Anno 1536 nachfolgende Formula Concordiae, das ist, Artikel einer christlichen Vergleichung, zwischen den sächsischen und oberländischen Theologen gestellt und von D. Martino Luthero und andern beiderseits Theologen unterschrieben worden:

„Wir haben gehört, wie Herr Martinus Bucer seine und der andern Präbilitanten Meinung, so mit ihm aus den Städten [ge]kommen sind, von dem heiligen Sakrament des Leibes und Blutes Christi erklärt haben, nämlich also:

„Sie bekennen, laut der Worte Trensäi, daß in diesem Sakrament zwei Dinge sind, ein himmlisches und ein irdisches. Demnach halten [ersichten, glauben] und lehren sie, daß mit dem Brod und Wein wahrhaftig und wesentlich zugegen sei, gereicht und empfangen werde der Leib und das Blut Christi. Und wiewohl sie keine Transsubstantiation, das ist, eine wesentliche Verwandlung [des] Brotes und Weines in den Leib und Blut Christi, glauben, auch nicht halten, daß der Leib und Blut Christi localiter, das ist, räumlich, ins Brod eingeschlossen oder sonst beharrlich damit vereinigt werde außer der Nahrung des Sakraments, doch so lassen sie zu [geben sie zu], daß durch sakramentliche Einigkeit das Brod sei der Leib Christi usw. Denn außer der Nahrung, so man das Brod beiseitelegt und behält's im Sakramentshäuslein oder in der Prozession umträgt und zeigt, wie im Papsttum geschieht, halten sie nicht, daß Christus' Leib zugegen sei.

„Zum andern halten sie, daß die Einsetzung dieses Sakraments, durch Christum geschehen, kräftig sei in der Christenheit, und daß es nicht liege an [daß das Sakrament nicht abhängen von] der Würdigkeit oder Unwürdigkeit des Dieners, so das Sakrament reicht, oder des, der es empfängt, darum, wie St. Paulus sagt, daß auch die Unwürdigen das Sakrament [ge]nießen: also halten sie, daß auch den Unwürdigen wahrhaftig dargereicht werde der Leib und das Blut Christi, und die Unwürdigen wahrhaftig daselbe empfangen, so man des Herrn Christi Einsetzung und Befehl hält. Aber solche empfangen's zum Gericht, wie St. Paulus sagt; denn sie mißbrauchen des heiligen Sakraments, weil sie es ohne wahre Buße und ohne Glauben empfangen. Denn es ist darum eingesetzt, daß es zeuge, daß denen die Gnade und Wohlthaten Christi allda zugeeignet werden, und daß die Christo eingeleibt und durch Christi Blut gewaschen werden, so da wahre Buße tun und sich durch den Glauben an Christum trösten.“

nem et Apologiam Principum Evangelium profitentium in omnibus articulis sentire et docere velle, maxime cupimus sanciri et constitui concordiam. Et spes est nobis, si reliqui utrumque ita consenserint, solidam futuram esse concordiam.“ Unterschrieben wurde die Wittenberger Formula Concordiae von Capito, Bucerus, Frechtus, Ottherus, Lycosthenes, Musculus, Gervasius, Bernhardi, Germani, Aulbertus, Schradinus, Lutherus, Ionas, Cruciger, Bugenhagius, Melancthon, Menius, Myconius, Regius, Spalatinus, Melander und vielen andern. Corpus Reformatorum, Melancthonis Opera, 3, 75 f.]

In folgendem Jahr, als die vornehmsten der Augsburgerischen Konfession zugehörigen Theologi aus ganzem deutschen Lande zu Schmalkalden versammelt [waren], und, was im Concilio dieser Kirchenlehre halben vorzulegen [sei], beratschlagt

12] Postea cum illi, qui Augustae peculiaris suam confessionem de hoc articulo obtulerant, nostrarum ecclesiarum confessionem approbare velle viderentur, Vitembergae anno Domini MDXXXVI formula quaedam concordiae (quam nunc recitabimus) inter Saxonicos et superioris Germaniae quosdam theologos conscripta, et D. Martini Lutheri aliorumque (utriusque partis) theologorum subscriptione approbata est. Ea sic habet:

13] Audivimus Bucerum explicantem suam et aliorum concionatorum, qui una affuerunt, sententiam de sacramento corporis et sanguinis Christi, hoc modo:

14] Confitentur, iuxta verba Irenaei, eucharistiam constare duabus rebus, terrena et coelesti. Proinde sentiunt et docent, cum pane et vino vere et substantialiter adesse, exhiberi et sumi corpus et sanguinem Christi. Et quamquam negant fieri transsubstantiationem, nec sentiunt fieri localem inclusionem in pane aut durabilem aliquam coniunctionem extra usum sacramenti, tamen concedunt, sacramentali unionem panem esse corpus Christi, hoc est, porrecto pane sentiunt simul adesse et vere 15] exhiberi corpus Christi. Nam extra usum, cum reponitur aut asservatur in pizide aut ostenditur in processionibus, ut fit apud papistas, sentiunt non adesse corpus Christi.

16] Deinde hanc institutionem sacramenti a Christo factam sentiunt valere in ecclesia, nec pendere ex dignitate vel indignitate ministri et sumantis. Quare sicut Paulus ait [1 Cor. 11, 27], etiam indignos manducare sacramentum, ita sentiunt, corpus Christi et sanguinem vere porrigi etiam indignis, et indignos vere illa sumere, ubi servantur verba et institutio Christi. Sed tales sumunt ad iudicium, ut Paulus ait, quia abutuntur sacramento, cum sine vera poenitentia et fide [R. 730 eo utuntur. Ideo enim institutum est, ut testetur illis applicari gratiam et beneficia Christi, illos inseri Christo et sanguine eius ablui, qui agunt poenitentiam et erigunt se fide in Christum. [Die Wittenberger Konkordie schliesst mit folgenden Sätzen: „Cum autem pauci convenerimus, et opus sit utrumque hanc rem ad alios concionatores et superiores referre, nondum licet nobis de concordia pacisci, priusquam ad alios retulerimus. Cum autem omnes profiteantur, se iuxta Confessionem

17] In sequenti anno praecipui Augustanae Confessionis theologi e tota Germania Smalcaldiam convocati sunt, ut in medium consulerent, quae doctrinae capita, in nostris ecclesiis hactenus proposita, concilio (quod

Afterwards, when those who at Augsburg delivered their own Confession concerning this article had allied themselves with the Confession of our churches [seemed to be willing to approve the Confession of our churches], the following Formula Concordiae, that is, articles of Christian agreement, between the Saxon theologians and those of Upper Germany was composed and signed at Wittenberg, in the year 1536, by Dr. Martin Luther and other theologians on both sides:

We have heard how Mr. Martin Bucer explained his own opinion, and that of the other preachers who came with him from the cities, concerning the holy Sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, namely, as follows:

They confess, according to the words of Irenaeus, that in this Sacrament there are two things, a heavenly and an earthly. Accordingly, they hold and teach that with the bread and wine the body and blood of Christ are truly and essentially present, offered, and received. And although they believe in no transubstantiation, that is, an essential transformation of the bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, nor hold that the body and blood of Christ are included in the bread LOCALITER, that is, locally, or are otherwise permanently united therewith apart from the use of the Sacrament, yet they concede that through the sacramental union the bread is the body of Christ, etc. [that when the bread is offered, the body of Christ is at the same time present, and is truly tendered]. For apart from the use, when the bread is laid aside and preserved in the sacramental vessel [the pyx], or is carried about in the procession and exhibited, as is done in popery, they do not hold that the body of Christ is present.

Secondly, they hold that the institution of this Sacrament made by Christ is efficacious in Christendom [the Church], and that it does not depend upon the worthiness or unworthiness of the minister who offers the Sacrament, or of the one who receives it. Therefore, as St. Paul says, that even the unworthy partake of the Sacrament, they hold that also to the unworthy the body and blood of Christ are truly offered, and the unworthy truly receive them, if [where] the institution and command of the Lord Christ are observed. But such persons receive them to condemnation, as St. Paul says; for they misuse the holy Sacrament, because they receive it without true repentance and without faith. For it was instituted for this purpose, that it might testify that to those who truly repent and comfort themselves by faith in Christ the grace and benefits of Christ are here applied, and that they are incorporated into Christ and are washed by His blood.

In the following year, when the chief theologians of the Augsburg Confession assembled from all Germany at Smalcald, and deliberated as to what to present in the Council convinum in Sacra Coena esse verum corpus et verum sanguinem Iesu Christi, quae et exhibeantur et sumantur non modo a piis, verum etiam ab iis, qui praeter nomen nihil habent Christianum.

[haben], sind mit gemeinem Rat von D. Luthero die Schmalkaldischen Artikel gestellt und von allen Theologen sämtlich und sonderlich unterschrieben, in welchen die eigentliche, rechte Meinung mit kurzen, runden Worten, so am genauesten mit Christi Wort [über]einstimmen, deutlich gefaßt [ist], und den Sakramentierern (so des vergangenen Jahres aufgerichtete Formulam Concordiae, das ist, die vorermeldeten Artikel der Einigkeit, zu ihrem Vorteil also geedeutet haben, daß mit dem Brot nicht anderer Weise als mit dem Wort des Evangelii der Leib Christi samt allen seinen Guts-taten dargereicht [werde], und durch die sakramentliche Einigkeit nichts anderes als die geistliche Gegenwärtigkeit des Herrn Christi durch den Glauben soll gemeint sein) alle Ausflucht und Schlupfwinkel verstopft worden, nämlich, daß Brot und Wein im Abendmahl sei der wahrhaftige Leib und Blut Jesu Christi, welcher gereicht und empfangen werde nicht allein von frommen, sondern auch von bösen Christen.

Es erklärt und bestätigt auch solche Meinung Doktor Luther weitläufiger aus Gottes Wort im Großen Katechismo, da also geschrieben steht: „Was ist nun das Sakrament des Altars? Antwort: Es ist der wahre Leib und Blut Christi, in und unter dem Brot und Wein, durch Christus' Wort uns Christen befohlen zu essen und zu trinken.“ Und bald danach: „Das Wort, sage ich, ist das, das dies Sakrament macht und unterscheidet, daß es nicht lauter Brot und Wein, sondern Christi Leib und Blut ist und heißt.“ Und bald danach: „Aus dem Wort kannst du dein Gewissen stärken und sprechen: Wenn hunderttausend Teufel samt allen Schwärmen herfahren: Wie kann Brot und Wein Christi Leib und Blut sein? so weiß ich, daß alle Geister und Gelehrten auf einen Haufen nicht so klug sind als die göttliche Majestät im kleinen Fingerlein. Nun steht die Christi Wort: Nehmet, esset, das ist mein Leib; trinket alle daraus, das ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut usw. Da bleiben wir bei und wollen sie ansehen, die ihn meißern und [es] anders machen werden, denn er gerebet hat. Das ist wohl wahr: wenn du das Wort davontust oder ohne Wort ansehest, so hast du nichts denn lauter Brot und Wein; wenn sie aber dabei bleiben, wie sie sollen und müssen, so ist's laut derselben wahrhaftig Christus' Leib und Blut. Denn wie Christus' Mund redet und spricht, also ist es, als der nicht lügen oder trügen kann.

ris, quod tum praeter panem et vinum nihil habeas. At si Verbum cum sacramento retineatur, ut fieri omnino convenit, tum sacramentum illud (ut ipsa verba testantur) revera est corpus et sanguis Iesu Christi. Ut enim Christus ore suo de hoc sacramento loquitur, ita res verissime habet; ipse enim mentiri et fallere nescit. Tit. 1, 2.

„Daher ist nun leicht zu antworten auf allerlei Fragen, damit man sich jetzt bestümmert, als diese ist: ob auch ein böser Priester könne das Sakrament handeln und geben, und was mehr dergleichen ist. Denn da schließen wir und sagen: Obgleich ein Bube das Sakrament nimmt oder gibt, so nimmt er das rechte Sakrament, das ist, Christus' Leib und Blut, ebenjowohl, als der es aufs allerwürdigste handelt; denn es ist nicht gegründet auf Menschenheiligkeit, sondern auf Gottes pontificii celebraturi dicebantur) exhibenda et defendenda essent. Ibi D. Lutherus articulos illos, quos Smalcaldicos vocant, composuit, qui communi et unanimi consensu ab omnibus illis theologis, qui convenerant, subscriptione confirmati sunt. In illis articulis D. Lutherus veram et genuinam supra commemoratae formulae, Vitembergae conscriptae, sententiam brevibus quidem, sed significantibus et perspicuis verbis, quae proxime ad verba Christi 18] accederent, explicuit. Sacramentarii enim iam dictae formulae verba ad malam suam causam fulciendam plane in alienam sententiam detorserant, quod videlicet corpus Christi non alia ratione in Coena distribueretur, quam sicut idem corpus una cum omnibus beneficiis suis verbo evangelii exhibetur. Et sacramentalem unionem nihil aliud esse quam praesentiam Christi spiritualem, quae sit fide, interpretati fuerant. Has rimas, per quas illi effugium quaerebant, Smalcaldici Articuli ob-19] struxerunt. Asserunt enim, panem et

20] Hanc piam sententiam D. Lutherus copiosius e Verbo Dei in maiore suo Catechismo declarat et sic ait: Quid igitur est [R. 731] sacramentum, quod ad altare distribuitur? Respondetur: Est verum corpus et verus sanguis Christi in et sub pane et vino, quae edere 21] et bibere Christi verbo iubemur. Et post aliqua: Verbum Dei, inquam, illud est, quod hoc sacramentum constituit et discrimen facit, ut non sit merus panis et merum vinum, sed ut haec Christi corpus et sanguis sint et 22] dicantur. Et post pauca: Hoc Christi verbo conscientiam tuam confirmare et inirepido animo dicere potes: Etiam si decem diabolorum myriades una cum omnibus fanaticis doctoribus irruentes mihi obiciant, dicentes: Quomodo panis et vinum possunt esse corpus et sanguis Christi? tamen certo scio, quod omnes fanatici spiritus et doctissimi quique homines, omnes simul, non tantum sapientiae habeant, quantum divina maiestas vel in minimo digitulo habet. Hic vero in medio est Christi verbum expressum: Accipite, edite, hoc est corpus meum; bibite ex hoc omnes, hoc est novum testamentum in meo sanguine. Huic verbo firmiter insistimus, hic tuto manebimus et expectabimus eventum, an ipsum vincere et institutionem eius mutare valeant. 23] Hoc quidem verum est: Quando Verbum Dei ab hoc sacramento removeris, aut absque Verbo divino sacramentum considerare volue- cerning this doctrine of the Church, by common consent the Smalcald Articles were composed by Dr. Luther and signed by all the theologians, jointly and severally, in which the proper and true meaning is clearly expressed in short, plain words, which agree most accurately with the words of Christ, and every subterfuge and loophole is barred to the Sacramentarians (who had interpreted [perverted] the Formula of Concord, that is, the above-mentioned articles of union, framed the preceding year, to their advantage, as saying that the body of Christ is offered with the bread in no other way than as it is offered, together with all His benefits, by the Word of the Gospel, and that by the sacramental union nothing else than the spiritual presence of the Lord Christ by faith is meant); for they [the Smalcald Articles] declare: The bread and wine in the Holy Supper are the true body and blood of Jesus Christ, which are offered and received, not only by the godly, but also by godless Christians [those who have nothing Christian except the name].

24] His fundamentis iactis, facile est respondere ad quaestiones multas, quae hoc saeculo plurimum agitantur: an videlicet minister ecclesiae, qui vitae est dissolutionis, possit Coenam Domini recte administrare et exhibere, et si quae sunt alia his non [R. 732] dissimilia, de quibus disputatur. Ita enim sentimus et statuimus: si maxime homo improbus et sceleratus sacramentum Coenae Domini sumat aut distribuat, tamen sumere

Dr. Luther has also more amply expounded and confirmed this opinion from God's Word in the Large Catechism, where it is written: What, then, is the Sacrament of the Altar? Answer: It is the true body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, in and under the bread and wine, which we Christians are commanded by the Word of Christ to eat and to drink. And shortly after: It is the Word, I say, which makes and distinguishes this Sacrament, so that it is not mere bread and wine, but is, and is called, the body and blood of Christ. Again: With this Word you can strengthen your conscience and say: If a hundred thousand devils, together with all fanatics, should rush forward, crying, How can bread and wine be the body and blood of Christ? I know that all spirits and scholars together are not as wise as is the Divine Majesty in His little finger. Now, here stands the Word of Christ: "Take, eat; this is My body. Drink ye all of this; this is the new testament in My blood," etc. Here we abide, and would like to see those who will constitute themselves His masters, and make it different from what He has spoken. It is true, indeed, that if you take away the Word, or regard it without the Word, you have nothing but mere bread and wine. But if the words remain with them, as they shall and must, then, in virtue of the same, it is truly the body and blood of Christ. For as the lips of Christ say and speak, so it is, as He can never lie or deceive.

Hence it is easy to reply to all manner of questions about which at the present time men are disturbed, as, for instance, whether a wicked priest can administer and distribute the Sacrament, and such like other points. For here conclude and reply: Even though a knave take or distribute the Sacrament, he receives the true Sacrament, that is, the true terris neque angelus in coelis efficere potest, ut panis et vinum sint corpus et sanguis Christi, ita nemo id sacramentum mutare potest, ut non sit Christi corpus et sanguis, etiamsi quidam eo abutantur.

Wort. Und wie kein Heiliger auf Erden, ja kein Engel im Himmel das Brot und Wein zu Christi Leib und Blut machen kann, also kann's auch niemand ändern noch wandeln [zurückverwandeln in bloßes Brot], ob es gleich mißbraucht wird.

„Denn um der Person oder Unglaubens willen wird das Wort nicht falsch, dadurch es ein Sacrament und eingesetzt worden ist. Denn er spricht nicht: Wenn ihr glaubt oder würdig seht, so habt ihr meinen Leib und Blut, sondern: Nehmet, esst und trinket, das ist mein Leib und Blut; item: Solches thut (nämlich das ich jetzt tue, einseze, euch gebe und nehmen heiße). Das ist so viel gesagt: Du siehest würdig oder unwürdig, so hast du hier seinen Leib und Blut aus Kraft dieser Worte, so zum Brot und Wein kommen. Solches merke und behalte nur wohl; denn auf den Worten steht all unser Grund, Schutz und Wehr wider alle Irrthümer und Verführung, so je kommen sind und noch kommen mögen.“

scrunt. Haec memori mente reponere, quia in his verbis (institutionis Coenae) fundamentum nostrum, defensio et arma nostra sunt adversus omnes errores et fallacias, quae aut allatae sunt hactenus, aut unquam afferri in hoc negotio poterunt.

Bisher [bis hieher] der Große Catechismus, in welchem die wahre Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im heiligen Nachtmahl aus Gottes Wort befestigt, und dasselbige nicht allein auf die [und dieselbe nicht allein von den] Gläubigen und Würdigen, sondern auch auf die Ungläubigen und Unwürdigen verstanden wird.

Diemeil aber dieser hocherleuchtete Mann im Geist gesehen, daß etliche ihn nach seinem Tode werden wollen verdächtig machen, als ob er von jetztgedachter Lehre und andern christlichen Artikeln abgewichen [sei], hat er seinem großen Bekenntnis nachfolgende Protestation angehängt:

„Weil ich sehe, daß des Rottens und Irrthums je länger, je mehr wird, und kein Aufhören ist des Tobens und Wüthens des Satans, damit nicht hinfort bei meinem Leben oder nach meinem Tode deren etliche zukünftig sich mit mir behelfen [mich vorschützen] und meine Schriften, ihre Irrthümer zu härten, fälschlich führen möchten, wie die Sacraments- und Tauffchwärmer anfangen zu tun, so will ich mit dieser Schrift vor Gott und aller Welt meinen Glauben von Stid zu Stid bekennen, darauf ich gedente zu bleiben bis in den Tod, darinnen (daß mir Gott helfe) von dieser Welt zu scheiden und vor unsers Herrn Jesu Christi Richterstuhl zu kommen; und so jemand nach meinem Tode würde sagen: Wo D. Luther jetzt lebte, würde er diesen oder diese Artikel anders lehren und halten, denn er hat ihn nicht genugsam bedacht: dawider sage ich jetzt als dann und dann als jetzt, daß ich von Gottes Gnaden alle diese Artikel habe auch fleißigste bedacht, durch die Schrift und wieder herdurch oftmals gezogen und so gewiß dieselben wollte verketen, als ich jetzt hab' das Sacrament des Altars verketen. Ich bin nicht trunken noch unbedacht; ich weiß, illum verum sacramentum, hoc est, Christi corpus et sanguinem, non minus quam eum, qui dignissime illud sumat aut distribuatur. Hoc enim sacramentum non habet fundamentum hominum sanctitatem, sed ipsum Verbum Dei. Et quemadmodum nec ullus sanctus in panis et vinum sint corpus et sanguis Christi, ita nemo id sacramentum mutare potest, ut non sit Christi corpus et sanguis, etiamsi quidam

25] Non enim propter alicuius aut personam aut incredulitatem Verbum Dei (quo Coena Domini instituta est et propter quod rationem sacramenti habet) irritum et vanum fieri potest. Quia Christus non dicit: Si credideritis aut digni fueritis, tum in Coena Sacra corpus et sanguinem meum praesentia habebitis; sed potius ait: Accipite, edite et bibite, hoc est corpus meum, hic est sanguis meus. Et praeterea inquit: Hoc facite.

Quidnam? Hoc ipsum certe, quod ego nunc facio, quod instituo, quod vobis trado et vos accipere iubeo. Verba Christi hoc volunt: Sive dignus sive indignus sis, habes hic in Coena Christi corpus et sanguinem, idque virtute verborum, quae ad panem et vinum accesserunt (institutionis Coenae) fundamentum nostrum, defensio et arma nostra sunt adversus omnes errores et fallacias, quae aut allatae sunt hactenus, aut unquam afferri in hoc negotio poterunt.

27] Haec Catechismi Maioris recitata verba veram praesentiam corporis et sanguinis Christi in Coena Domini Verbo Dei egregie confirmant, et iis solide demonstratur, praesentiam illam non tantum de manducatione credentium et dignorum, verum etiam de infidelibus et indignis communicantibus [R. 733 intelligendam esse.

28] Et quia singularibus et excellentissimis Spiritus Sancti donis illuminatus heros, D. Lutherus, in spiritu praevidit, quod post mortem ipsius quidam ipsum suspectum facturi essent, quasi vel a doctrina iam commemorata vel ab aliis etiam partibus purioris doctrinae recesserit, eam ob causam maiori suae de Coena Domini confessioni hanc protestationem sub finem inseruit:

29] Quia video, nullum esse sectarum et errorum finem, sed haec mala in dies incrementa sumere, Satanamque magis ac magis furere, ne quis igitur sectariorum, me vivo aut mortuo, aliquando nomen meum suo figmento praetextare possit erroremque suum (non candide in medium allatis meis scriptis) stabilire ausit, quod Sacramentarii et Anabaptistae iam facere coeperunt: scdm meam in hoc scripto, coram Deo et toto mundo, de omnibus religionis nostrae articulis profitebor. Et in ea fide (Domino me bene iuvante) ad extremum usque vitae spiritum perseverare atque ex hac vita emigrare et coram tribunali Domini nostri Iesu Christi intrepide comparere paratus sum. Ac si quis forte post meum obitum dicturus esset: Si D. Lutherus nunc viveret, profecto de hoc vel illo articulo longe aliter sentiret atque doceret (non enim satis diligenter eam rem hactenus expendi): contra hoc figmentum id iam dico, quod tunc essem affirmaturus, et quod tunc dicturus essem, idem iam nunc profiteor, me videlicet per gratiam Dei omnes hosce articulos quam body and blood of Christ, just as truly as he who receives or administers it in the most worthy manner. For it is not founded upon the holiness of men, but upon the Word of God. And as no saint upon earth, yea, no angel in heaven, can change bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, so also can no one change or alter it, even though it be abused.

For the Word, by which it became a sacrament and was instituted, does not become false because of the person or his unbelief. For He does not say: If you believe or are worthy, you will receive My body and blood, but: "Take, eat and drink; this is My body and blood"; likewise: "Do this" (namely, what I now do, institute, give, and bid you take). That is as much as to say, No matter whether you be worthy or unworthy, you have here His body and blood, by virtue of these words which are added to the bread and wine. This mark and observe well; for upon these words rest all our foundation, protection, and defense against all error and temptation that have ever come or may yet come.

Thus far the Large Catechism, in which the true presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper is established from God's Word; and this [presence] is understood not only of the believing and worthy, but also of the unbelieving and unworthy.

But inasmuch as this highly illumined man [Dr. Luther, the hero illumined with unparalleled and most excellent gifts of the Holy Ghost] foresaw in the Spirit that after his death some would endeavor to make him suspected of having receded from the above-mentioned doctrine and other Christian articles, he has appended the following protestation to his Large Confession:

Since I see that as time wears on, sects and errors increase, and that there is no end to the rage and fury of Satan, in order that henceforth during my life or after my death some of them may not, in future, support themselves by me, and falsely quote my writings to strengthen their error as the Sacramentarians and Anabaptists begin to do, I mean by this writing to confess my faith, point by point [concerning all the articles of our religion], before God and all the world, in which I intend to abide until my death, and therein (so help me God!) to depart from this world and to appear before the judgment-seat of Jesus Christ. And if after my death any one should say: If Dr. Luther were living now, he would teach and hold this or that article differently, for he did not sufficiently consider it, against this I say now as then, and then as now, that, by God's grace, I have most diligently compared all these articles with the Scriptures time and again [have examined them, not once, but very often, according to was ich rede, fühle auch wohl, was mir's gilt auf des Herrn Christi Zukunft am jüngsten Gericht. Darum soll mir niemand Scherz oder löse Leiding [loses Gerede, Gejchmäß] daraus machen. Es ist mir Ernst; denn ich kenne den Satan von Gottes Gnaden ein großes Teil; kann er Gottes Wort verkehren und verwirren, wann sollte er nicht tun mit meinen oder eines andern Worten?" Tom. 2, Wit. Ger., fol. 243.

rit vivos et mortuos iudicaturus. Quare nemo me in re tam magna et seria nugari existimet, haec enim res vel maxime cordi mihi est. Novi (Dei beneficio) Satanam magna ex parte, qui cum possit Verbum Dei et sacras litteras pervertere et depravare, quid ille meis aut cuiuspiam alterius scriptis non faceret? Tom. 2, Wit. Ger., fol. 243.

Auf solche Protestation setzt Lutherus seliger unter andern Artikeln auch diesen: „Ebenso rede ich (spricht er) auch und bekene das Sacrament des Altars, daß daselbst wahrhaftig der Leib und Blut im Brot und Wein werde mündlich [ge-]essen und getrunken, obgleich die Priester, so es reichen, oder die, so es empfangen, nicht glaubten oder sonst mißbrauchten. Denn es steht nicht auf Menschen Glauben oder Unglauben, sondern auf Gottes Wort und Ordnung; es wäre denn, daß sie zuvor Gottes Wort und Ordnung ändern und anders deuten, wie die jehigen Sacramentsfeinde tun, welche freilich eitel Brot und Wein haben; denn sie haben auch die Worte und eingesezte Ordnung Gottes nicht, sondern dieselbigen nach ihrem eigenen Dünkel [nach ihrer subjektiven Meinung] verkehrt und verändert.“ Fol. 245.

Es hat auch D. Luther, welcher ja die rechte eigentliche Meinung der Augsburgerischen Konfession vor andern verstanden und beständiglich bis an sein Ende dabei geblieben und [sie] verteidigt, unlängst vor seinem Tode in seinem letzten Bekenntnis seinen Glauben von diesem Artikel mit großem Eifer in nachfolgenden Worten wiederholt, da er also schreibt: „Ich rechne sie alle in einen Ruhen, das ist, für Sacramentierer und Schwärmer, wie sie auch sind, die nicht glauben wollen, daß des Herrn Brot im Abendmahl sei sein rechter, natürlicher Leib, welchen der Gottlose oder Judas ebensowohl mündlich empfängt als St. Petrus und alle Heiligen; wer das, sage ich, nicht glauben will, der lasse mich nur zufrieden und hoffe bei mir nur keiner Gemeinschaft; da wird nichts anders aus!“ Tom. 2, Wit. Ger., fol. 252.

Aus diesen Erklärungen kann ein jeder Verständiger, so die Wahrheit und Frieden liebhat, besonders aber aus D. Luthers, als des vornehmsten Lehrers der Augsburgerischen Konfession, Erklärung, was der Augsburgerischen Konfession eigentliche Meinung und Verstand in diesem Artikel allezeit gewesen sei, ungezweifelt entnehmen.

Denn daß neben den Worten Christi und St. Pauli: Das Brot im Abendmahl ist der Leib Christi oder die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi, auch die Formen „unter dem Brot“, „mit dem Brot“, „im Brot“ gebraucht [werden], ist die Ursache, daß hierdurch die papistische Transsubstantiation verworfen und des unverwandelten Wesens des Brotes und des Leibes Christi sacramentliche Vereinigung angezeigt würde; gleichwie diligentissime expendisse et non semel, sed saepissime ad normam Sacrae Scripturae exegisse et tamquam ad lydium lapidem examinasse, neo minore animi constantia [R. 734 atque ἀληθοποία singulos articulos defensurum, quam qua nunc doctrinam de sacramento 31] altaris propugnavi. Non temulentus sum, aut parum considerate loquor; scio, quid affirmem, et intelligo, quanta res mea agatur in illo die Domini nostri Iesu Christi, cum vengo-

32] Post hanc protestationem D. Lutherus sanctae memoriae inter alios articulos etiam hunc ponit: Eodem modo (inquit) loquor et confiteor etiam de sacramento altaris, quod nimirum ibi revera corpus et sanguis Christi in pane et vino ore edatur et bibatur, etiamsi ministri, qui Coenam Domini distribuunt, aut qui eam sumunt, non credant aut alias Sacra Coena abutantur. Coena enim Domini non nittitur hominum fide aut incredulitate, sed Verbo Dei et ipsius institutione. Nisi forte Verbum Dei prius immutent et prorsus aliter, quam oportet, interpretentur, ut hodie sacramenti hostes faciunt. Hi dubio procul nil nisi panem et vinum in Coena habent, quia neque verba neque institutionem Domini habent, sed ea ad suam falsam opinionem inflexerunt, mutant et depravarunt. Fol. 245.

33] Et sane D. Lutherus (qui certe veram et genuinam Augustanae Confessionis sententiam prae aliis intellexit et eam constanter usque ad finem vitae retinuit et defendit) paulo ante suum ex hac vita discessum in postrema illa sua de Coena Domini confessione fidem suam de hoc articulo magno zelo sequentibus verbis professus est atque repetivit, ubi sic ait: Ego omnes eos eodem numero habeo, hoc est, pro Sacramentariis et fanaticis agnosco (sunt enim tales), qui credere nolunt, quod panis Domini in Sacra Coena sit verum ipsius naturale corpus, quod impius quispiam vel Iudas ipse non minus ore accipiat [R. 735 quam divus Petrus et omnes alii sancti. Qui, inquam, hoc credere recusat, is me missum faciat, neque ullam amicitiam aut familiaritatem a me expectet; sic enim stat sententia, quam non sum mutaturus. Tom. 2, Wit. Ger., fol. 252.

34] Ex hisce (praesertim vero D. Lutheri ut primarii doctoris Augustanae Confessionis) declarationibus, quas prolixè recitavimus, cuilibet homini cordato (si modo is veritatis et pacis sit studiosus) manifestum, certum et indubitatum esse potest, quae fuerit, hodieque sit genuina et vera Confessionis Augustanae sententia.

35] Quod autem praeter illas phrases, quibus Christus et Paulus utuntur (cum dicunt, panem in Coena esse corpus Christi aut communicationem corporis Christi), etiam alias loquendi formas usurpamus, verbi gratia, cum dicimus, sub pane, cum pane, in pane adesse et exhiberi corpus Christi, id non sine gravibus causis facimus. Primum enim his phrasibus ad reiiciendam papisticam transsubstanthe standard of Holy Scripture], and often have gone over them, and would defend them as confidently as I have now defended the Sacrament of the Altar. I am not drunk nor thoughtless; I know what I say; I also am sensible of what it means for me at the coming of the Lord Christ at the final judgment. Therefore I want no one to regard this as a jest or mere idle talk; it is a serious matter to me; for by God's grace I know Satan a good deal; if he can pervert or confuse God's Word, what will he not do with my words or those of another? Tom. 2, Wittenb., German, fol. 243.

After this protestation, Doctor Luther, of blessed memory, presents, among other articles, this also: In the same manner I also speak and confess (he says) concerning the Sacrament of the Altar, that there the body and blood of Christ are in truth orally eaten and drunk in the bread and wine, even though the priests [ministers] who administer it [the Lord's Supper], or those who receive it, should not believe or otherwise misuse it. For it does not depend upon the faith or unbelief of men, but upon God's Word and ordinance, unless they first change God's Word and ordinance and interpret it otherwise, as the enemies of the Sacrament do at the present day, who, of course, have nothing but bread and wine; for they also do not have the words and appointed ordinance of God, but have perverted and changed them according to their own [false] notion. Fol. 245.

Dr. Luther, who, above others, certainly understood the true and proper meaning of the Augsburg Confession, and who constantly remained steadfast thereto till his end, and defended it, shortly before his death repeated his faith concerning this article with great zeal in his last Confession, where he writes thus: I rate as one concoction, namely, as Sacramentarians and fanatics, which they also are, all who will not believe that the Lord's bread in the Supper is His true natural body, which the godless or Judas received with the mouth, as well as did St. Peter and all [other] saints; he who will not believe this (I say) should let me alone, and hope for no fellowship with me; this is not going to be altered [thus my opinion stands, which I am not going to change]. Tom. 2, Wittenb., German, fol. 252.

From these explanations, and especially from that of Dr. Luther as the leading teacher of the Augsburg Confession, every intelligent man who loves truth and peace, can undoubtedly perceive what has always been the proper meaning and understanding of the Augsburg Confession in regard to this article.

For the reason why, in addition to the expressions of Christ and St. Paul (the bread in the Supper is the body of Christ or the communion of the body of Christ), also the forms: under the bread, with the bread, in the bread [the body of Christ is present and offered], are employed, is that by means of them the papistical transubstantiation may be rejected and the sacramental union of the unchanged es-diese Rede: Verbum caro factum est, „Das Wort ist Fleisch worden“, durch gleichstimmende [gleichbedeutende] Reden: „Das Wort wohnet in uns“; item: „In Christo wohnet die ganze Fülle der Gottheit leibhaftig“; „Gott war mit ihm“; item: „Gott war in Christo“, und dergleichen, wiederholt und erklärt wird, nämlich daß nicht das göttliche Wesen in die menschliche Natur verwandelt, sondern die beiden unverwandelten Naturen persönlich vereinigt seien. Wie denn eben dieses Gleichniß viel vornehmte alte Lehrer: Justinus, Cyprianus, Augustinus, Leo, Gelasius, Chrysostomus und andere, von den Worten des Testaments Christi: „Das ist mein Leib“, brauchen: daß, gleichwie in Christo zwei unterschiedliche, unverwandelte Naturen unzertrennlich vereinigt seien, also im heiligen Abendmahl die zwei Wesen, das natürliche Brod und der wahre natürliche Leib Christi, in der geordneten Handlung des Sacraments alhier auf Erden zusammen gegenwärtig seien. Wiewohl solche Vereinigung des Leibes und Blutes Christi mit Brod und Wein nicht eine persönliche Vereinigung, wie beider Naturen in Christo, sondern [eine sacramentliche Vereinigung ist,] wie sie D. Luther und die Unsern in den vielgedachten Artikeln der Vergleichung Anno 1536 und sonst sacramentalem unionem, das ist, eine sacramentliche Vereinigung, nennen; damit sie anzeigen wollen, daß [sie], ob sie schon die formas: in pane, sub pane, cum pane, das ist, diese unterschiedene Weise zu reden: „im Brod“, „unter dem Brod“, „mit dem Brod“, auch brauchen, dennoch die Worte Christi eigentlich, und wie sie lauten, angenommen [aufgefaßt haben] und in der Proposition, das ist, in den Worten des Testaments Christi: Hoc est corpus meum, „das ist mein Leib“, nicht eine figuratam praedicationem, sondern inusitatam [anerkannt haben], das ist, [die Worte Christi] nicht für eine figurliche, verblümete Rede oder Deutelei verstanden haben; wie Justinus spricht: „Dieses empfahen wir nicht als ein gemein Brod und gemeinen Trant, sondern gleichwie Jesus Christus, unser Heiland, durchs Wort Gottes Fleisch [ge]worden, auch Fleisch und Blut um unserer Seligkeit willen gehabt, also glauben wir, daß die durchs Wort und Gebet von ihm gesegnete Speise des Herrn Jesu Christi Fleisch und Blut sei.“ Wie denn D. Luther auch in seinem großen und sonderlich im letzten Bekenntniß vom Abendmahl eben die Form zu reden, welche Christus im ersten Abendmahl gebraucht, mit großem Ernst und Eifer verteidigt.

Wieweil denn D. Luther [als] der vornehmste Lehrer der Kirchen, so sich zur Augsbургischen Konfession bekennen, zu halten [ist], als dessen ganze Lehre, Summa und Inhalt [als dessen ganzer Lehre Summa und Inhalt] in den Artikeln vielermeßelter Augsburgischer Konfession verfaßt und dem Kaiser Karolo V. übergeben [ist]: so kann und soll mehrgedachter Augsburgischer Konfession eigentlicher Verstand und Meinung aus keines andern denn aus D. Luthers Lehre und Streitschriften [Lehr- und Streitschriften] eigentlicher und besser genommen werden.

Wie denn eben diese letzterzählte Meinung auf den einigen, festen, unbeweglichen und unzweifelhaften Fels der Wahrheit, aus den Worten der Einsetzung im heiligen göttlichen Wort, gegrün-tionem utimur. Deinde etiam sacramentalem unionem substantiae panis non mutatae et corporis Christi hac ratione docere volumus. 36] Ad eundem enim modum hoc dictum [Ioh. 1, 14]: Verbum caro factum est, repetitur et declaratur aliis aequipollentibus propositionibus, exempli gratia: Verbum habitavit in nobis; [Col. 2, 9] in Christo inhabitat tota plenitudo Divinitatis corporaliter; [Act. 10, 38] Deus erat cum eo; [2 Cor. 5, 19] Deus erat in Christo etc. et alia plura huius generis. Hae phrases supra commemoratum dictum Iohannis repetunt et declarant, videlicet quod per incarnationem divina essentia non sit in humanam naturam conversa, sed quod duae naturae sine confusione personaliter sint 37] unitae. Et quidem multi excellentes doctores ex erudita antiquitate: Iustinus, Cyprianus, Augustinus, Leo, Gelasius, Chrysostomus et alii, hac ipsa similitudine [R. 736] (de persona Christi) mysterium sacramenti Coenae Dominicae explicant. Docent enim, quemadmodum in Christo duae distinctae et non mutatae naturae inseparabiliter sunt unitae, ita in Sacra Coena duas diversas substantias, panem videlicet naturalem et verum naturale corpus Christi, in instituta sacramenti administratione hic in terris simul esse praesentia. Quod tamen non ita est accipiendum, quasi unio haec corporis et sanguinis Christi cum pane et vino sit personalis unio, qualis est utriusque naturae in Christo, sed est unio sacramentalis, ut eam D. Lutherus et alii (in illa concordiae formula anno XXXVI. conscripta et alias) appellant. Quo significare volunt, etiamsi formis loquendi, in pane, sub pane, cum pane, quandoque utantur, tamen se propositionem: Hoc est corpus meum simpliciter, et ut verba sonant, accipere et amplecti, eamque nequaquam pro figurata, sed pro inusitata 39] tata praedicatione agnoscere. Sic etiam Iustinus de hoc negotio loquitur, inquit: Non ut panem vulgarem et potum accipimus, sed quemadmodum Christus, Servator noster, per Verbum Dei caro est factus, carnem quoque et sanguinem propter nostram salutem habuit: ita etiam credimus, per verbum et preces ab ipso sanctificatum cibum Domini nostri Iesu Christi corpus et sanguinem esse. 40] Et sane D. Lutherus (in maiori, praesertim vero ultima sua confessione de Coena) eam de hac re formam loquendi, qua Christus in prima Coena celebranda usus est, graviter et magno zelo defendit.

41] Cum autem D. Lutherus haud dubie praecipuus earum ecclesiarum, quae Augustanam Confessionem amplexae sunt, doctor fuerit (cuius tota doctrina tamquam compendio summam in Augustana Confessione comprehensa et Imperatori Carolo V. exhibita est): profecto commemoratae illius Augustanae Confessionis propria, vera et [R. 737] genuina sententia ex nullius hominis libellis rectius et certius quam ex D. Lutheri didacticis et polemicis scriptis hauriri potest.

42] Et quidem haec ipsa iam commemorata D. Lutheri sententia in unica solidissima, immota et extra omne dubium posita petra veritatis (institutione nimirum Coenae, quae in sence of the bread and of the body of Christ indicated; just as the expression, Verbum caro factum est, The Word was made flesh [John 1, 14], is repeated and explained by the equivalent expressions: The Word dwelt among us; likewise [Col. 2, 9]: In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily; likewise [Acts 10, 38]: God was with Him; likewise [2 Cor. 5, 19]: God was in Christ, and the like; namely, that the divine essence is not changed into the human nature, but the two natures, unchanged, are personally united. [These phrases repeat and declare the expression of John, above mentioned, namely, that by the incarnation the divine essence is not changed into the human nature, but that the two natures without confusion are personally united.] Even as many eminent ancient teachers, Justin, Cyprian, Augustine, Leo, Gelasius, Chrysostom and others, use this simile concerning the words of Christ's testament: This is My body, that just as in Christ two distinct, unchanged natures are inseparably united, so in the Holy Supper the two substances, the natural bread and the true natural body of Christ, are present together here upon earth in the appointed administration of the Sacrament. Although this union of the body and blood of Christ with the bread and wine is not a personal union, as that of the two natures in Christ, but as Dr. Luther and our theologians, in the frequently mentioned Articles of Agreement [Formula of Concord] in the year 1536 and in other places call it sacramentalem unionem, that is, a sacramental union, by which they wish to indicate that, although they also employ the formas: in pane, sub pane, cum pane, that is, these distinctive modes of speech: in the bread, under the bread, with the bread, yet they have received the words of Christ properly and as they read, and have understood the proposition, that is, the words of Christ's testament: Hoc est corpus meum, This is My body, not as a figuratam propositionem, but inusitatam (that is, not as a figurative, allegorical expression or comment, but as an unusual expression). For thus Justin says: This we receive not as common bread and common drink; but as Jesus Christ, our Savior, through the Word of God became flesh, and on account of our salvation also had flesh and blood, so we believe that the food blessed by Him through the Word and prayer is the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. Likewise Dr. Luther also in his Large and especially in his last Confession concerning the Lord's Supper with great earnestness and zeal defends the very form of expression which Christ used at the first Supper.

Now, since Dr. Luther is to be regarded as the most distinguished teacher of the churches which confess the Augsburg Confession, whose entire doctrine as to sum and substance is comprised in the articles of the frequently mentioned Augsburg Confession, and was presented to the Emperor Charles V, the proper meaning and sense of the oft-mentioned Augsburg Confession can and should be derived from no other source more properly and correctly than from the doctrinal and polemical writings of Dr. Luther.

And, indeed, this very opinion, just cited, is founded upon the only firm, immovable, and indubitable rock of truth, from the words of bet [ist] und von den heiligen Evangelisten und Aposteln und ihren Discipeln und Zuhörern also verstanden, gelehrt und fortgepflanzt worden.

Denn diemeil unser Herr und Heiland Jesus Christus, von welchem, als unserm einigen Lehrmeister, dieser ernste Befehl vom Himmel herab allen Menschen gegeben wird, Luk. 9: Hunc audite, „Den sollt ihr hören“, welcher nicht ein schlechter [ein bloßer] Mensch oder Engel, auch nicht allein wahrhaftig, weise und mächtig, sondern die ewige Wahrheit und Weisheit selbst und allmächtiger Gott ist, der gar wohl weiß, was und wie er reden soll, und kann auch alles dasjenige, was er redet und verheißt, kräftiglich ausrichten und ins Werk setzen, wie er spricht Luk. 21: „Himmel und Erde müssen vergehen, aber meine Worte müssen nicht vergehen“; item Matth. 28: „Mir ist gegeben alle Gewalt im Himmel und auf Erden“;

Diemeil nun dieser wahrhaftige, allmächtige Herr, unser Schöpfer und Erlöser Jesus Christus, nach dem letzten Abendmahl, da er jezt sein bitter Leiden und Sterben für unsere Sünden anfängt, zu der traurigen letzten Zeit, mit großem Bedacht und Ernst in Einsetzung dieses hochwürdigsten Sacraments, welches bis ans Ende der Welt mit großer Reberenz und Gehorsam gebraucht werden und ein festes Gedächtnis seines bitteren Leidens und Sterbens und aller seiner Guttaten, eine Versiegelung des neuen Testaments, ein Trost aller betrübten Herzen und festes Band und Vereinigung der Christen mit ihrem Haupt Christo und unter sich selbst sein sollte, diese Worte in Stiftung und Einsetzung des heiligen Abendmahls von dem gesegneten und dargereichten Brod gesprochen hat: „Nehmet hin und esset; das ist mein Leib, der für euch gegeben wird“, und von dem Kelch oder Wein: „Das ist mein Blut des neuen Testaments, welches für euch vergossen wird zur Vergebung der Sünden“:

So sind wir ja schuldig, diese des ewigen, wahrhaftigen und allmächtigen Sohnes Gottes, unsers Herrn, Schöpfers und Erlösers Jesu Christi, Worte nicht als verblühte, figürliche, fremde Reden anders zu deuten und auszulegen, wie es unserer Vernunft gemäß scheint, sondern die Worte, wie sie lauten, in ihrem eigentlichen, klaren Verstand mit einfältigem Glauben und schuldigem Gehorsam anzunehmen und uns durch keine Einrede oder menschlich Widerprechen, aus menschlicher Vernunft gesponnen, wie lieblich sie auch der Vernunft scheinen, davon abwenden [zu] lassen.

Wie Abraham, da er Gottes Wort von Aufopferung seines Sohnes hörte, ob er wohl Ursache genug gehabt zu disputieren, ob die Worte (diemeil sie nicht allein wider alle Vernunft und wider das göttliche und natürliche Gesetz, sondern auch wider den hohen Artikel des Glaubens vom verheißenen Samen Christo, der von Isaak sollte geboren werden, öffentlich streiten) nach dem Buchstaben oder mit einer leidlichen oder sanften Glossa sollten zu verstehen sein; dennoch, wie er zuvor, Verbo Dei recitatur) fundata est, et hanc sententiam sancti evangelistae, apostoli et ipsorum discipuli ad eum modum acceperunt et amplexi sunt eamque alios docuerunt atque ad posteritatem propagarunt.

43) Cum enim Dominus et Salvator noster Iesus Christus, de quo (ut de unico nostro Praeceptore) severissimum mandatum de coelis omnibus hominibus datum est Matth. 17, 5 [Luc. 9, 35]: Hunc audite, non sit vulgaris aliquis homo aut angelus, nec sit tantummodo verax, sapiens, potens, sed et ipsa aeterna veritas et sapientia et verus omnipotens Deus, qui rectissime novit, quid et quomodo loqui debeat, et omnia, quae loquitur ac promittit, potentissime efficere et praestare valet, sicut ipse inquit Luc. 21, 33: Coelum et terra transibunt, verba autem mea non transibunt; et alibi, Matth. 28, 18: Mihi data est omnis potestas in coelo et in terra etc.;

44) Cum, inquam, hic verax, omnipotens Dominus, Creator et Redemptor noster Iesus Christus post ultimam illam Coenam, cum iam iam acerbissimam suam passionem et mortem pro peccatis nostris accederet, tristissimum nimirum illo et postremo tempore, re gravissime deliberata, et magno zelo augustissimum hoc sacramentum ecclesiae ordinaverit (quod usque ad finem mundi magna cum reverentia, obedientia et humilitate sumendum et perpetuum acerbissimae passionis et mortis et omnium beneficiorum eius monumentum futurum erat, simulque obsignatio et confirmatio novi testamenti, solatium omnium perturbatarum conscientiarum, firmum vinculum societatis Christianae et cum capite suo [R. 738 Christo et inter se invicem coniunctio arctissima), certe res gravissimas et longe maximas animo agitavit, cum haec verba institutionis Coenae (de pane illo, cui benedicebat et quem discipulis porrigebat) pronuntiaret: Accipite, comedite, hoc est corpus meum, quod pro vobis traditur, et de calice seu vino: Hic est sanguis meus novi testamenti, qui pro vobis effunditur in remissionem peccatorum.

45) Haec cum ita se habeant, profecto aeterni, veracissimi atque omnipotentis Filii Dei, Domini, Creatoris et Redemptoris nostri Iesu Christi verba non ut figurate, metaphrice, tropice dicta aut prolata in aliam sententiam detorquenda sunt, ut nostrae humanae rationi verisimilia fiant. Quin potius haec Christi verba, ut sonant, in propria sua ac perspicua sententia simplici fide et debita obedientia atque reverentia accipere tenemur. Neque committendum est, ut ullae obiectiones aut hominum contradictiones, quae ab humanae rationis acumine promanant, utcumque humanae rationi blandiantur, nos ab expresso illo Christi testamento abducant.

46) Sanctissimus patriarcha Abrahamus, cum verbum Dei de offerendo filio suo audisset, poterat certe occasionem disputandi arripere, an verba secundum litteram accipere, an vero commoda et tolerabiliore aliqua interpretatione lenire deberet, quandoquidem non modo cum omni ratione et cum lege Dei et naturae, verum etiam cum praecipuo illo fidei articulo, de promisso semine Christo, qui ex Isaaci stirpe nasciturus erat, aperte pugnare institution, in the holy, divine Word, and was thus understood, taught, and propagated by the holy evangelists and apostles, and their disciples and hearers.

For since our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, concerning whom, as our only Teacher, this solemn command has been given from heaven to all men: Hunc audite, Hear ye Him, who is not a mere man or angel, neither true, wise, and mighty only, but the eternal Truth and Wisdom itself and Almighty God, who knows very well what and how He is to speak, and who also can powerfully effect and execute everything that He speaks and promises, as He says Luke 21, 33: Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away; also Matt. 28, 18: All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth, —

Since, now, this true, almighty Lord, our Creator and Redeemer, Jesus Christ, after the Last Supper, when He is just beginning His bitter suffering and death for our sins, in those sad last moments, with great consideration and solemnity, in the institution of this most venerable Sacrament, which was to be used until the end of the world with great reverence and obedience [and humility], and was to be an abiding memorial of His bitter suffering and death and all His benefits, a sealing [and confirmation] of the New Testament, a consolation of all distressed hearts, and a firm bond of union of Christians with Christ, their Head, and with one another, in the ordaining and institution of the Holy Supper spake these words concerning the bread which He blessed and gave [to His disciples]: Take, eat; this is My body, which is given for you, and concerning the cup, or wine: This is My blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins; —

[Now, since this is so,] We are certainly in duty bound not to interpret and explain these words of the eternal, true, and almighty Son of God, our Lord, Creator, and Redeemer, Jesus Christ, differently, as allegorical, figurative, tropical expressions, according as it seems agreeable to our reason, but with simple faith and due obedience to receive the words as they read, in their proper and plain sense, and allow ourselves to be diverted therefrom [from this express testament of Christ] by no objections or human contradictions spun from human reason, however charming they may appear to reason.

Even as Abraham, when he hears God's Word concerning offering his son, although, indeed, he had cause enough for disputing as to whether the words should be understood according to the letter or with a tolerable or mild interpretation, since they conflicted openly not only with all reason and with the divine and natural law, but also with the chief article of faith concerning the promised Seed, Christ, who was to be born of Isaac, nevertheless, just as previously, when the als ihm die Verheißung von dem gebenedeiten Samen aus Isaak gegeben wird (wiewohl es seiner Vernunft unmöglich scheint), Gott die Ehre der Wahrheit gibt und auf das allergewisseste bei sich geschlossen und geglaubt hat, daß Gott, was er verheißt, solches auch tun kann: also versteht und glaubt er auch allhier Gottes Wort und Befehl einfältig und schlecht, wie sie nach dem Buchstaben lauten, und läßt es Gottes Allmächtigkeit und Weisheit befohlen sein, welche er weiß, daß sie viel mehr Weisen und Wege hat, die Verheißung des Samens aus Isaak zu erfüllen, als er mit seiner blinden Vernunft begreifen kann:

Also sollen wir auch mit aller Demut und Gehorsam unsers Schöpfers und Erlösers deutlichen, festen, klaren und ernstlichen Worten und Befehl ohne allen Zweifel und Disputation, wie es sich mit unserer Vernunft reime oder möglich sei, einfältig glauben. Denn dieser Herr solche Worte geredet hat, welcher die unendliche Weisheit und Wahrheit selbst ist und alles, was er verheißt, gewißlich auch ins Werk setzen und vollbringen kann.

Nun zeugen alle Umstände der Einsetzung des heiligen Abendmahls, daß diese Worte unsers Herrn und Heilandes Jesu Christi, so an sich selbst einfältig, deutlich, klar, fest und unzweifelhaftig sind, anders nicht denn in ihrer gewöhnlichen, eigentlichen und gemeinen Deutung können und sollen verstanden werden. Denn diemittel Christus diesen Befehl über Tisch und ob dem Nacht-mahl tut, ist ja kein Zweifel, daß er von rechtem, natürlichem Brot und von natürlichem Wein, auch von mündlichem Essen und Trinken redet, daß keine Metaphora, das ist, eine Veränderung des Verstandes, im Wort „Brot“ sein kann, als, daß der Leib Christi ein geistlich Brot oder eine geistliche Speise der Seele sei. So vermahnt es auch Christus selbst, daß keine Metonymia, das ist, gleichergehalt auch keine Veränderung des Verstandes im Wort „Leib“ sei, und daß er nicht von einem Zeichen seines Leibes oder von einem Be-deuten oder figurlichem Leib (oder von einem be-deuteten oder figurlichen Leib) oder von der Kraft seines Leibes und Wohlthaten, die er mit Aufopferung seines Leibes erworben hat, redet, sondern von seinem wahren, wesentlichen Leib, den er für uns in den Tod gegeben, und von seinem wahren, wesentlichen Blut, das er für uns am Stamm des Kreuzes zur Vergebung der Sünden vergossen hat.

Nun ist ja kein so treuer und gewisser Ausleger der Worte Jesu Christi denn eben der Herr Christus selbst, der seine Worte und sein Herz und Meinung am besten versteht und dieselben zu erklären am weisesten und verständigsten ist, welcher allhier, als in Stiftung seines letzten Willens und Testaments und stets währenden Bündnisses und Vereinigung (wie sonst in allen Artikeln des Glaubens und aller andern Bundes- und Gnaden-zeichen oder Sacramente Einsetzung, als der Beschneidung, der mancherlei Opfer im alten Testament, der heiligen Taufe), nicht verblümte, sondern ganz eigentliche, einfältige, unabweisbare und klare Worte gebraucht und [diese], damit ja kein Mißverstand einfallen könne, mit den Worten: „Für euch gegeben, für euch vergossen“ deutlicher erklärt; lässet [er läßt] auch seine Jünger in dem einfältigen, eigentlichen Verstand bleiben viderentur. Verumtamen, sicut antea promissionem de benedicto semine (ex Isaaci progenie nascendo) fide acceperat atque amplexus fuerat, etsi id ipsum rationi eius impossibile videretur et sic Deo laudem veritatis tribuerat, certissime sciens atque credens, quod Deus, quae promisisset, etiam praestare [R. 739] posset: ita quoque nunc simpliciter accipit verbum et mandatum Dei secundum litteram, remque totam divinae omnipotentiae et sapientiae permittens, quam scit multo plures habere modos, per quos promissionem illam de semine, ab Isaaco propagando, implere posset, quam ipse caeca sua ratione comprehendere valeret.

47) Et ad hunc modum etiam nos vera humilitate et obedientia Creatoris et Redemptoris nostri perspicuo, firmo, claro et maxime serio verbo et mandato (absque omni haesitatione et disputatione), quomodo id ad nostram rationem quadret aut possibile sit, simpliciter credere debemus. Haec enim verba locutus est Dominus ille, qui immensa est Dei Patris sapientia et veritas ipsa, qui omnia, quae promittit, certissime re ipsa perficere et praestare potest.

48) Et sane omnes circumstantiae institutionis Coenae Dominicae luculenter testantur, verba illa Domini et Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi (quae per se perspicua, firma, clara et indubitata sunt) non aliter quam in usitata, propria et communi significatione accipi posse et debere. Cum enim Christus mandatum illud (de edendo corpore suo etc.) in mensa et in coena dederit, dubium esse non potest, quin de vero naturali pane et de vero naturali vino atque de manducatione, quae ore fit, loquatur, ita ut nulla in vocabulo panis metaphora esse possit, quasi Christi corpus spiritualem panem aut spiritualem cibum animae dicere voluerit.

49) Et Christus ipse praecavere studuit, ne metonymia in vocabulo corporis intelligeretur, et ne existimaretur de signo corporis sui, aut tantum de symbolo vel de figurato corpore aut de virtute corporis sui seu de beneficiis, quae oblatione corporis sui nobis promeruit, agere. Diserte enim loquitur de vero, essentiali et substantiali suo corpore, quod in mortem pro nobis tradidit, et de vero, substantiali sanguine suo, quem pro nobis in ara crucis [R. 740] in remissionem peccatorum effudit.

50) Atqui nullus potest esse tam fidelis aut idoneus atque doctus interpret verborum Iesu Christi quam ille ipse Christus Dominus, qui sua verba illa certissima, suam mentem atque sententiam omnium optime intelligit atque ad eam dextre declarandam intelligentia et sapientia instructissimus est. Hic in declaratione imprimis ultimae suae voluntatis, testamenti et perpetui foederis atque coniunctionis non figuratis, non ambiguis, sed propriis, simplicissimis et disertis verbis uti voluit, quemadmodum etiam in aliis fidei articulis ponendis et confirmandis atque in signis gratiae et pacti seu sacramentis instituendis (verbi gratia in circumcissione, in constituendis olim sacrificiis veteris testamenti, postea vero in Baptismi institutione) non verbis obscuris, figuratis aut ambiguis uti solitus est. Et ut promise of the blessed Seed from Isaac was given him, he gave God the honor of truth, and most confidently concluded and believed that what God promised He could also do, although it appeared impossible to his reason; so also here he understands and believes God's Word and command plainly and simply, as they read according to the letter, and commits the matter to God's omnipotence and wisdom, which, he knows, has many more modes and ways to fulfil the promise of the Seed from Isaac than he can comprehend with his blind reason; —

Thus we, too, are simply to believe with all humility and obedience the plain, firm, clear, and solemn words and command of our Creator and Redeemer, without any doubt and disputation as to how it agrees with our reason or is possible. For these words were spoken by that Lord who is infinite Wisdom and Truth itself, and also can execute and accomplish everything which He promises.

Now, all the circumstances of the institution of the Holy Supper testify that these words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, which in themselves are simple, plain, clear, firm, and indubitable, cannot and must not be understood otherwise than in their usual, proper, and common signification. For since Christ gives this command [concerning eating His body, etc.] at the table and at supper, there is indeed no doubt that He speaks of real, natural bread and of natural wine, also of oral eating and drinking, so that there can be no metaphor, that is, a change of meaning, in the word bread, as though the body of Christ were a spiritual bread or a spiritual food of souls. Likewise, also Christ Himself takes care that there be no metonymy either, that is, that in the same manner there be no change of meaning in the word body, and that He does not speak concerning a sign of His body, or concerning an emblem [a symbol] or figurative body, or concerning the virtue of His body and the benefits which He has earned by the sacrifice of His body [for us], but of His true, essential body, which He delivered into death for us, and of His true, essential blood, which He shed for us on the tree [altar] of the cross for the remission of sins.

Now, surely there is no interpreter of the words of Jesus Christ as faithful and sure as the Lord Christ Himself, who understands best His words and His heart and opinion, and who is the wisest and most knowing for expounding them; and here, as in the making of His last will and testament and of His ever-abiding covenant and union, as elsewhere in [presenting and confirming] all articles of faith, and in the institution of all other signs of the covenant and of grace or sacraments, as [for example] circumcision, the various offerings in the Old Testament and Holy Baptism, He uses not allegorical, but entirely proper, simple, indubitable, and clear words; and in und befiehlt's ihnen, daß sie alle Völker also lehren sollen, alles das zu halten, was er ihnen, den Aposteln, befohlen hat.

51] cum apostoli haec ipsius verba simplicissime acciperent, relinquit eos in hac propria et simplici sententia ac mandat illis, ut omnes gentes ad eum modum doceant iubeantque eas observare, quae ipsis, apostolis, a Christo praecepta erant.

Derhalben auch alle drei Evangelisten, Matth. 26, Mark. 14, Luk. 22, und St. Paulus, der nach der Himmelfahrt Christi daselbe empfangen, 1 Kor. 11, einhellig und mit einerlei Worten und Silben diese hellen, klaren, festen und wahrhaftigen Worte Christi: „Das ist mein Leib“ ganz auf einerlei Weise von dem gesegneten und dargelegten Brot ohne alle Deutung und Änderung wiederholen. Ist darum kein Zweifel, daß auch vom andern Teil des Sakraments diese Worte Lucä und Pauli: „Dieser Kelch ist das neue Testament in meinem Blut“, keine andere Meinung können haben, denn die St. Matthäus und Markus geben: „Das“ (nämlich, das ihr aus dem Kelch mündlich trinkt) „ist mein Blut des neuen Testaments“, dadurch ich dies mein Testament und neuen Bund, nämlich die Vergebung der Sünden, mit euch Menschen aufrichte, versiegele und bekräftige.

So ist auch diese Wiederholung, Bestätigung und Erklärung der Worte Christi, die St. Paulus 1 Kor. 10 tut, als ein sonderliches helles Zeugnis der wahren, wesentlichen Gegenwartigkeit und Austeilung des Leibes und Blutes Christi im Abendmahl mit allem Fleiß und Ernst zu betrachten, da er also schreibt: „Der gesegnete Kelch, welchen wir segnen, ist der nicht die Gemeinschaft des Blutes Christi? Das Brot, das wir brechen, ist das nicht die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi?“ Daraus wir klarlich lernen, daß nicht allein der Kelch, den Christus im ersten Abendmahl gesegnet, und nicht allein das Brot, welches Christus gebrochen und ausgeteilt hat, sondern auch, das wir brechen und segnen, sei die Gemeinschaft des Leibes und Blutes Christi, also daß alle die, so dies Brot essen und aus dem Kelch trinken, wahrhaftig empfangen und theilhaftig werden des wahren Leibes und Blutes Christi. Denn wo der Leib Christi nicht wahrhaftig und wesentlich, sondern allein nach seiner Kraft und Wirkung gegenwärtig [wäre] und genossen würde, so würde [so hätte] das Brot nicht eine Gemeinschaft des Leibes, sondern des Geistes, Kraft und Guttaten Christi müssen genennet werden, wie die Apologia [Artikel X, 54] argumentiert und schleußt [schließt]. Und so Paulus allein von der geistlichen Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi durch den Glauben redete, wie die Sakramentierer diesen Spruch verkehren, so würde er nicht sagen, das Brot, sondern der Geist oder Glaube wäre die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi. Nun sagt er, das Brot sei die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi, daß alle, die des gesegneten Brotes genießen, auch des Leibes Christi theilhaftig werden: so muß er ja nicht von geistlicher, sondern von sakramentlicher oder mündlicher Nahrung des Leibes Christi, die den frommen und gottlosen [den wahren und falschen] Christen gemein ist, reden.

omnem ambiguitatem caveret, satis mentem suam declaravit, cum de corpore suo in Sacra Coena exhibendo dixit: quod pro vobis datur, et de sanguine: qui pro vobis effunditur. Et acciperent, relinquit eos in hac propria et simplici sententia ac mandat illis, ut omnes gentes ad eum modum doceant iubeantque eas observare, quae ipsis, apostolis, a Christo praecepta erant.

52] Qua de causa etiam tres evangelistae, Matthaeus, Matth. 26, 26; Marcus, Marc. 14, 22; Lucas, Luc. 22, 19, et divus Paulus, 1 Cor. 11, 24, qui institutionem Coenae Domini ab ipso Christo post ascensionem ipsius acceperat, unanimi consensu iisdem verbis et syllabis haec clara, firma, perspicua et vera verba Christi: Hoc est corpus meum, prorsus eodem modo de benedicto et distributo pane sine omni tropo, figura aut variatione recitant. Itaque dubium esse non potest, quin et 53] de altera parte sacramenti haec verba: Hic calix est novum testamentum in meo sanguine, in evangelista Luca et Paulo [R. 741] nullam aliam sententiam habeant quam verba Matthaei et Marci, qui dicunt: Hoc, quod ore ex calice bibitis, est sanguis meus novi testamenti, quo videlicet hoc testamentum meum et novum foedus, videlicet remissionem peccatorum, vobis hominibus sancio, ferio, obsigno et confirmo.

54] Sed et haec repetitio, confirmatio et declaratio verborum Christi, quam divus Paulus ponit (ut clarissimum verae substantialis praesentiae et distributionis corporis et sanguinis Christi in Coena testimonium), singulari diligentia et accurate esse expendenda. Sic enim ait 1 Cor. 10, 16: Calix benedictionis, cui benedicimus, nonne communicatio sanguinis Christi est? Et panis, quem frangimus, nonne participatio corporis Domini est? His enim apostoli verbis docemur, quod non modo calix ille, cui Christus in prima Coena benedixit, et non modo panis, quem Christus fregit et distribuit, sed etiam panis, quem nos frangimus, et calix, cui nos benedicimus, sint corporis et sanguinis Christi communicatio, ita quidem, ut omnes, qui hunc panem edunt atque e calice bibunt, vere accipiant atque participant verum corpus et verum sanguinem 55] Christi. Etenim nisi corpus Christi vere et substantialiter, sed duntaxat virtute et efficacia sua praesens esset et sumeretur, panis non corporis, sed Spiritus, virtutis et beneficiorum Christi communicatio dici debuisset, quemadmodum etiam Apologia prorsus eadem 56] ratione in hoc ipso negotio argumentatur et statuit. Et sane si divus Paulus duntaxat de spirituali communicatione corporis Christi, quae per fidem fit, ageret (ut Sacramentarii hoc Paulinum dictum suo more depravare solent), non dixisset, panis, sed Spiritus aut fides est communicatio corporis Christi. At apostolus affirmat, panem esse communicationem corporis Christi, quod videlicet [R. 742] omnes, qui participant benedictum panem, etiam corporis Christi participes fiant. Ex eo ergo hoc conficitur, Paulum haudquaquam de spirituali, sed de sacramentali seu ea, quae ore fit, participatione corporis Christi loqui, quae piis et impiis, titulo duntaxat Christianis, communis est.

order that no misunderstanding can occur, He explains them more clearly with the words: Given for you, shed for you. He also allows His disciples to rest in the simple, proper sense, and commands them that they should thus teach all nations to observe what He had commanded them, the apostles.

For this reason, too, all three evangelists, Matt. 26, 26; Mark 14, 22; Luke 22, 19, and St. Paul, who received the same [the institution of the Lord's Supper] after the ascension of Christ [from Christ Himself], 1 Cor. 11, 24, unanimously and with the same words and syllables repeat concerning the consecrated and distributed bread these distinct, clear, firm, and true words of Christ: This is My body, altogether in one way, without any interpretation [trope, figure] and change. Therefore there is no doubt that also concerning the other part of the Sacrament these words of Luke and Paul: This cup is the new testament in My blood, can have no other meaning than that which St. Matthew and St. Mark give: This (namely, that which you orally drink out of the cup) is My blood of the new testament, whereby I establish, seal, and confirm with you men this My testament and new covenant, namely, the forgiveness of sins.

So also that repetition, confirmation, and explanation of the words of Christ which St. Paul makes 1 Cor. 10, 16, where he writes as follows: The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? is to be considered with all diligence and seriousness [accurately], as an especially clear testimony of the true, essential presence and distribution of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper. From this we clearly learn that not only the cup which Christ blessed at the first Supper, and not only the bread which Christ broke and distributed, but also that which we break and bless, is the communion of the body and blood of Christ, so that all who eat this bread and drink of this cup truly receive, and are partakers of, the true body and blood of Christ. For if the body of Christ were present and partaken of, not truly and essentially, but only according to its power and efficacy, the bread would have to be called, not a communion of the body, but of the Spirit, power, and benefits of Christ, as the Apology argues and concludes. And if Paul were speaking only of the spiritual communion of the body of Christ through faith, as the Sacramentarians pervert this passage, he would not say that the bread, but that the spirit or faith, was the communion of the body of Christ. But as he says that the bread is the communion of the body of Christ, that all who partake of the consecrated bread also become partakers of the body of Christ, he must indeed be speaking, not of a spiritual, but of a sacramental or oral participation of the body of Christ, which is common to godly and godless Christians [Christians only in name].

Wie auch die Ursache und Umstände derselben ganzen Predigt St. Pauli ausweisen, daß er die, so vom Sündenopfer aßen und mit heidnischem Teufelsdienst Gemeinschaft hatten und gleichwohl auch zum Tisch des Herrn gingen und des Leibes und Blutes Christi theilhaftig wurden, abschreckt und warnt, daß sie nicht ihnen selbst [sich selbst] zum Gericht und Verdammnis den Leib und Blut Christi empfangen. Denn weil alle, die des gesegneten und gebrochenen Brotes im Abendmahl theilhaftig werden, auch mit dem Leib Christi Gemeinschaft haben, so muß [so kann] ja St. Paulus nicht von der geistlichen Gemeinschaft mit Christo reden, die niemand mißbrauchen kann, und davor man auch niemand warnen soll.

Verhalben auch unsere lieben Väter und Vorfahren, als Lutherus und andere reine Lehrer Augsburgerischer Confession, diesen Spruch Pauli mit solchen Worten erklären, daß er zum allerbesten mit den Worten Christi übereinstimmt, da sie also schreiben: Das Brot, das wir brechen, ist der ausgetheilte Leib Christi oder der gemeine Leib Christi, unter die geteilt [ausgeteilt], so daß gebrochene Brot empfangen.

Bei dieser einfältigen, gegründeten Erklärung dieses herrlichen Zeugnis [Zeugnisses], 1 Cor. 10, bleiben wir einträchtiglich und verwundern uns billig, daß etliche so kühn sind, daß sie diesen Spruch, den sie selbst vorhin den Sacramentierern entgegengesetzt [haben], je kund für einen Grund ihres Irrtums, daß im Abendmahl der Leib Christi allein geistlich genossen werde, anziehen dürfen: Panis est communicatio corporis Christi, hoc est, id, quo fit societas cum corpore Christi (quod est ecclesia), seu est medium, per quod fideles unimur Christo, sicut verbum evangelii fide apprehensum est medium, per quod Christo spiritualiter unimur et corpori Christi, quod est ecclesia, inserimus. Welches zu deutlich also lautet: Das Brot ist die Gemeinschaft des Leibes Christi, das ist, es ist das, dadurch wir Gemeinschaft haben mit dem Leib Christi, welcher ist die Kirche; oder es ist das Mittel, dadurch wir Gläubigen vereint werden mit Christo, gleichwie das Wort des Evangelii, wenn es mit [dem] Glauben ergriffen wird, ist ein Mittel, dadurch wir mit Christo geistlich vereint und dem Leib Christi, welcher ist die Kirche, einverleibt werden.

Denn daß nicht allein die gottseligen, frommen und gläubigen Christen, sondern auch die unwürdigen, gottlosen Heuchler, als Judas und seine Gesellen, so keine geistliche Gemeinschaft mit Christo haben und ohne wahre Buße und Bekehrung zu Gott zum Tisch des Herrn gehen, auch den wahren Leib und Blut Christi mündlich im Sacrament empfangen und sich mit ihrem unwürdigen Essen und Trinken am Leib und Blut Christi schwerlich [schwer] verunreinigen, lehrt St. Paulus ausdrücklich 1 Cor. 11: „Wer unwürdig von diesem Brot isset und von dem Kelch des Herrn trinket, der verunreinigt sich nicht allein am Brot und Wein, nicht allein an Zeichen oder symbolis und Figur des Leibes und Blutes, sondern „wird schuldig am Leib und Blut des Herrn Jesu Christi“, welchen er allda gegenwärtig verunehrt, mißbraucht und schändet, gleichwie die Zuben, welche sich mit der Zat wirklich an dem Leibe Christi vergriffen und ihn ermüdet haben, inmaßen die alten christlichen

57] Hanc piam nostram sententiam etiam ratio et circumstantiae concionis illius Paulinae confirmant. Eos enim, qui de idolothytis edebant et ethnicis cultibus diabolicis communicabant, nihilominus autem etiam ad mensam Domini accedebant et corporis ac sanguinis Christi participes fiebant, Paulus a tanto facinore deterret et admonet, ne sibi ipsi ad iudicium et damnationem corpus et sanguinem Christi sumant. Cum enim omnes illi, qui benedicti et distributi panis in Sacra Coena participes fiunt, etiam cum corpore Christi communicationem habeant, profecto divi Pauli verba non possunt accipi de spirituali communicatione cum Christo, qua nemo abuti unquam potest, et a qua homines non sunt deterrendi.

58] Quare patres et pii maiores nostri, D. Lutherus et alii sinceri doctores Augustanae Confessionis, hoc divi Pauli dictum eiusmodi verbis declarant, ut cum verbis Christi optime consentiant; ut cum ad hunc modum id explicant: Panis, quem frangimus, est corpus Christi distributum, seu communicatum corpus Christi, quod inter eos distribuitur, qui fractum panem accipiunt.

59] In hac simplici et solide fundata explicatione luculenti illius testimonii Paulini magno consensu acquiescimus. Et non iniuria miramur, quod audaces homines repellantur, qui, cum ipsi ante haec tempora Sacramentariis hoc Pauli dictum, 1 Cor. 10, 16, opposuerint, nunc illud ipsum pro fundamento erroris sui (quod videlicet corpus Christi in Coena spiritualiter tantummodo sumatur) ponere non erubescant. Sic enim loquuntur: Panis est communicatio corporis Christi, hoc est, id, quo fit societas cum corpore [R. 743] Christi, quod est ecclesia, seu est medium, per quod fideles unimur Christo, sicut verbum evangelii fide apprehensum est medium, per quod Christo spiritualiter unimur et corpori Christi, quod est ecclesia, inserimus.

60] Quod autem non tantum pii et credentes in Christum, verum etiam indigni, impii hypocritae (verbi gratia Iudas et huius farinae homines, qui nullam prorsus spiritualem cum Christo communicationem habent et sine vera poenitentia atque conversione ad Deum ad Coenam Domini accedunt), etiam verum corpus et verum sanguinem Christi ore in sacramento sumant et grande scelus, indigne edendo et bibendo, in corpus et sanguinem Christi admittant, id divus Paulus, 1 Cor. 11, 27, expresse docet, cum affirmat, quod ii, qui indigne de illo pane edunt et de calice Domini bibunt, rei fiant non tantum panis et vini, non tantum signorum et symbolorum aut figurae corporis et sanguinis, sed quod rei sint corporis et sanguinis Iesu Christi, quem in Sacra Coena praesentem contumelia atque ignominia afficiunt, sicut Iudaei, qui ipso facto et opere (indignis modis Salvatorem tractantes) in corpus Christi

This is shown also by the causes and circumstances of this entire exposition of St. Paul, in which he deters and warns those who ate of offerings to idols and had fellowship with heathen devil-worship, and nevertheless went also to the table of the Lord and became partakers of the body and blood of Christ, lest they receive the body and blood of Christ for judgment and condemnation to themselves. For since all those who become partakers of the consecrated and broken bread in the Supper have communion also with the body of Christ, St. Paul indeed cannot be speaking of spiritual communion with Christ, which no man can abuse, and against which also no one is to be warned.

Therefore also our dear fathers and predecessors, as Luther and other pure teachers of the Augsburg Confession, explain this statement of Paul with such words that it accords most fully with the words of Christ when they write thus: The bread which we break is the distributed body of Christ, or the common [communicated] body of Christ, distributed to those who receive the broken bread.

By this simple, well-founded exposition of this glorious testimony, 1 Cor. 10, we unanimously abide, and we are justly astonished that some are so bold as to venture now to cite this passage, which they themselves previously opposed to the Sacramentarians, as a foundation for their error, that in the Supper the body of Christ is partaken of spiritually only. [For thus they speak]: Panis est communicatio corporis Christi, hoc est, id, quo fit societas cum corpore Christi (quod est ecclesia), seu est medium, per quod fideles unimur Christo, sicut verbum evangelii fide apprehensum est medium, per quod Christo spiritualiter unimur et corpori Christi, quod est ecclesia, inserimur. Translated, this reads as follows: "The bread is the communion of the body of Christ, that is, it is that by which we have fellowship with the body of Christ, which is the Church, or it is the means by which we believers are united with Christ, just as the Word of the Gospel, apprehended by faith, is a means through which we are spiritually united to Christ and incorporated into the body of Christ, which is the Church."

For that not only the godly, pious, and believing Christians, but also unworthy, godless hypocrites, as Judas and his ilk, who have no spiritual communion with Christ, and go to the Table of the Lord without true repentance and conversion to God, also receive orally in the Sacrament the true body and [true] blood of Christ, and by their unworthy eating and drinking grievously sin against the body and blood of Christ, St. Paul teaches expressly. For he says, 1 Cor. 11, 27: Whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, sins not merely against the bread and wine, not merely against the signs or symbols and emblems of the body and blood, but shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord Jesus Christ, which, as there [in the Holy Supper] present, he dishonors, abuses, and disgraces, as the Jews, who in very deed

Väter und Kirchenlehrer diesen Spruch einhellig also verstanden und erklärt haben.

So ist nun zweierlei Essen des Fleisches Christi, eines geistlich, davon Christus Joh. 6 vornehmlich handelt, welches nicht anders als mit dem Geist und Glauben in der Predigt und Betrachtung des Evangelii ebensowohl als im Abendmahl geschieht und für sich selbst nütz und heilsam und allen Christen zu allen Zeiten zur Seligkeit nötig ist, ohne welche geistliche Nahrung auch das sacramentliche oder mündliche Essen im Abendmahl nicht allein unheilsam, sondern auch schädlich und verdammlich ist.

Solch geistlich Essen aber ist nichts anderes als der Glaube, nämlich, Gottes Wort (darin uns Christus, wahrer Gott und Mensch, samt allen Tugenden, die er uns mit seinem Fleisch, für uns in [den] Tod gegeben, und mit seinem Blut, für uns vergossen, erworben hat, nämlich Gottes Gnade, Vergebung der Sünden, Gerechtigkeit und ewiges Leben, vorgetragen wird) hören, mit Glauben annehmen und uns selbst zueignen und auf diesen Trost, daß wir einen gnädigen Gott und ewige Seligkeit um des Herrn Jesu Christi willen haben, uns mit gewisser Zuversicht und Vertrauen festiglich verlassen und in aller Not und Ansehung [an ihn uns] halten.

Das andere Essen des Leibes Christi ist mündlich oder sacramentlich, da im heiligen Abendmahl der wahre, wesentliche Leib und Blut Christi von allen, die das gesegnete Brot und Wein im Abendmahl essen und trinken (von den Gläubigen zu einem gewissen Fand und Versicherung, daß ihnen gewißlich ihre Sünden vergeben sind und Christus in ihnen wohne und kräftig sei, von den Ungläubigen aber zu ihrem Gericht und Verdammnis), auch mündlich empfangen und genossen wird, wie die Worte der Einsetzung Christi ausdrücklich lauten, da er über Tisch und ob dem Nachtmahl seinen Jüngern natürlich Brot und natürlichen Wein reicht, welche er seinen wahren Leib und sein wahres Blut nennt und dabei sagt: „Esset und trinket“; so kann ja solcher Befehl vermöge der Umstände nicht anders als von dem mündlichen Essen und Trinken, aber nicht auf grobe, fleischliche, capernaitische, sondern auf übernatürliche, unbegreifliche Weise, verstanden werden, dazu nachmals der andere Befehl noch ein anderes und geistliches Essen setzt, da der Herr Christus weiter spricht: „Solches tut zu meinem Gedächtnis“, da er den Glauben erfordert.

Derhalben alle alten christlichen Lehrer nach diesen Worten der Einsetzung Christi und St. Pauli Erklärung ausdrücklich und mit der ganzen heiligen christlichen Kirche einträchtig lehren, daß der Leib Christi nicht allein geistlich mit dem Glauben, horribiliter peccarunt et Christum occiderunt. Sic enim antiquissimi, pii et eruditi doctores ecclesiae hoc Pauli dictum intellexerunt et magno consensu in hanc sententiam sunt interpretati.

61] Duplex igitur est manducatio carnis Christi. Una spiritualis, de qua praecipue Christus in evangelista Iohanne, capite sexto, v. 54, agit, quae non alio modo quam spiritu et fide in praedicatione et meditatione evangelii fit, non minus quam cum Coena Domini digne et in fide sumitur. Haec spiritualis manducatio per se utilis et salutaris [R. 744 est, omnibusque Christianis et quidem omnibus temporibus ad salutem necessaria est, sine qua spirituali participatione sacramentalis illa, aut quae ore duntaxat fit, manducatio in Coena non modo accipientibus non salutaris, sed noxia etiam et damnationis causa esse solet.

62] Spiritualiter igitur manducare nihil aliud est, quam credere praedicto Verbo Dei, in quo nobis Christus, verus Deus et homo, cum omnibus beneficiis, quae carne sua, pro nobis in mortem tradita, et sanguine suo, pro nobis effuso, promeruit, offertur, videlicet gratia et clementia Dei, remissio peccatorum, iustitia et vita aeterna. Haec qui ex Verbo Dei commemorari audit, fide accipit sibi applicat et hac consolatione totus nititur (quod Deum placatum et vitam aeternam propter mediatorem Iesum Christum habeamus), qui, inquam, vera fiducia in verbo evangelii firmiter in omnibus tribulationibus et temptationibus acquiescit, hic spiritualiter corpus Christi edit et sanguinem eius bibit.

63] Altera vero manducatio corporis Christi est sacramentalis et ore fit, quando in Sacra Coena verum et substantiale corpus et sanguis Christi ore accipiuntur atque participantur ab omnibus, qui panem illum benedictum et vinum in Coena Dominica edunt et bibunt. Ac pii quidem corpus et sanguinem Christi in certum pignus et confirmationem accipiunt, quod peccata ipsis certo sint remissa, et quod Christus in ipsis habitet atque efficax esse velit. Impii vero idem corpus et eundem sanguinem Christi etiam ore suo, sed ad iudicium et damnationem sumunt. Hoc Christi 64] verba, quibus Coenam instituit, expresse docent. In prima enim Coena mensae assidens discipulis suis naturalem panem et naturale vinum porrigit et de iis pronuntiat, verum esse corpus et sanguinem suum, et [R. 745 iubet eos edere et bibere. Ergo illud Christi mandatum, consideratis diligenter omnibus circumstantiis, non potest nisi de orali, non autem de crassa, carnali, Capernaitica, sed de supernaturali et incomprehensibili manduca-

65] tione corporis Christi intelligi. Ad hanc manducationem, quae ore fit, Christus mandato suo etiam alteram requirit, cum inquit: Hoc facite in mei commemorationem; hic enim fidem (quae est spiritualis corporis Christi participatio) postulat.

66] Quare tota erudita et pia antiquitas (secundum haec verba institutionis Christi et explicationem Pauli) expresse et cum tota catholica ecclesia magno consensu docuit, quod corpus Christi non tantum spiritualiter fide violated the body of Christ and killed Him; just as the ancient Christian Fathers and church-teachers unanimously have understood and explained this passage.

There is, therefore, a twofold eating of the flesh of Christ, one spiritual, of which Christ treats especially John 6, 54, which occurs in no other way than with the Spirit and faith, in the preaching and meditation of the Gospel, as well as in the Lord's Supper, and by itself is useful and salutary, and necessary at all times for salvation to all Christians; without which spiritual participation also the sacramental or oral eating in the Supper is not only not salutary, but even injurious and damning [a cause of condemnation].

But this spiritual eating is nothing else than faith, namely, to hear God's Word (wherein Christ, true God and man, is presented to us, together with all benefits which He has purchased for us by His flesh given into death for us, and by His blood shed for us, namely, God's grace, the forgiveness of sins, righteousness, and eternal life), to receive it with faith and appropriate it to ourselves, and in all troubles and temptations firmly to rely, with sure confidence and trust, and to abide in the consolation that we have a gracious God, and eternal salvation on account of the Lord Jesus Christ. [He who hears these things related from the Word of God, and in faith receives and applies them to himself, and relies entirely upon this consolation (that we have God reconciled and life eternal on account of the Mediator, Jesus Christ), — he, I say, who with true confidence rests in the Word of the Gospel in all troubles and temptations, spiritually eats the body of Christ and drinks His blood.]

The other eating of the body of Christ is oral or sacramental, when the true, essential body and blood of Christ are also orally received and partaken of in the Holy Supper, by all who eat and drink the consecrated bread and wine in the Supper — by the believing as a certain pledge and assurance that their sins are surely forgiven them, and Christ dwells and is efficacious in them, but by the unbelieving for their judgment and condemnation, as the words of the institution by Christ expressly declare, when at the table and during the Supper He offers His disciples natural bread and natural wine, which He calls His true body and true blood, at the same time saying: Eat and drink. For in view of the circumstances this command evidently cannot be understood otherwise than of oral eating and drinking, however, not in a gross, carnal, Capernaitic, but in a supernatural, incomprehensible way; to which afterwards the other command adds still another and spiritual eating, when the Lord Christ says further: This do in remembrance of Me, where He requires faith [which is the spiritual partaking of Christ's body].

Therefore all the ancient Christian teachers expressly, and in full accord with the entire holy Christian Church, teach, according to these words of the institution of Christ and the explanation of St. Paul, that the body of welches auch außerhalb des Sacraments geschieht, sondern auch mündlich, nicht allein von gläubigen, frommen, sondern auch von unwürdigen, ungläubigen, falschen und bösen Christen, empfangen werde; welche hier zu erzählen zu lang, und [zu lang wäre, und wir] deswegen den christlichen Leser in der Unsern ausführliche Schriften um geliebter Kürze willen gewiesen haben wollen.

Daraus erscheint, wie unbillig und giftig die Sacramentschwärmer (Theoborus Beza) des Herrn Christi, St. Pauli und der ganzen Kirche spotten, die diese mündliche und der Unwürdigen Nahrung duos pilos caudae equinae et commentum, cuius vel ipsum Satanam pudeat, wie auch die Lehre von der Majestät Christi excrementum Satanae, quo diabolus sibi ipsi et hominibus illudat, genennet [genannt] haben, das ist, so erschrecklich davon reden, daß sich auch ein frommer Christ schämen solle, daselbe zu verdolmetschen.

Es muß aber mit Fleiß erklärt werden, welche da seien die unwürdigen Gäste dieses Abendmahls, nämlich die ohne wahre Reue und Leid über ihre Sünden und ohne wahren Glauben und guten Vorsatz, ihr Leben zu bessern, zu diesem Sacrament gehen und ihnen selbst [sich selbst] das Gerichte, das ist, zeitliche und ewige Strafen, mit ihrem unwürdigen mündlichen Essen des Leibes Christi auf den Hals laden und am Leib und Blut Christi schuldig werden.

Denn die schwachgläubigen, blöden, betrübten Christen, die von wegen der Größe und Menge ihrer Sünden von Herzen erschrocken sind und gedanken, daß sie in dieser ihrer großen Unreinigkeit dieses edlen Schatzes und Guttales Christi nicht wert seien und ihre Schwachheit des Glaubens empfinden und beklagen und von Herzen begehren, daß sie mit stärkerem, freudigerem Glauben und reinem Gehorsam Gott dienen möchten, die sind die rechten, würdigen Gäste, für welche dies hochwürdige Sacrament vornehmlich eingesetzt und verordnet ist; wie Christus spricht Matth. 11: „Kommet her zu mir alle, die ihr mühselig und beladen seid; ich will euch erquiden“; item Matth. 9: „Die Gesunden bedürfen keines Arztes, sondern nur die Kranken“; item 2 Kor. 11: „Gottes Kraft ist in den Schwachen mächtig“; item Röm. 14: „Nehmet den Schwachen im Glauben auf; denn Gott hat ihn aufgenommen.“ Denn „wer an den Sohn Gottes glaubet“, es sei mit einem starken oder schwachen Glauben, „der hat das ewige Leben“, Joh. 3.

Und Rehet [besteht] die Würdigkeit nicht in großer oder kleiner Schwachheit oder Stärke des Glaubens, sondern im Verdienst Christi, welches der kleingläubige betrübte Vater, Mark. 9, ebenso wohl geneußt [genießt] als Abraham, Paulus und andere, so einen freudigen, starken Glauben haben.

Das sei von der wahren Gegenwartigkeit und zweierlei Nahrung des Leibes und Blutes Christi, so entweder mit dem Glauben geistlich oder auch mündlich beide von Würdigen und Unwürdigen geschieht, bis hieher geredet.

(quod etiam extra usum sacramenti fieri potest), verum etiam ore non modo a creditibus, sed et ab indignis, infidelibus, hypocritis, nomine duntaxat Christianis, accipiat. Quae antiquitatis testimonia recitare hoc loco nimis esset prolixum, quare lectorem ad nostrorum scripta, in quibus haec copiose tractata sunt, remittimus.

67] Ex his manifestum est, quam inique virulentis sarcasmis Sacramentarii Domino nostro Iesu Christo et divo Paulo totique ecclesiae insultent, qui oralem et indignorum manducationem vocant duos pilos caudae equinae et commentum, cuius vel ipsum Satanam pudeat, doctrinam vero de maiestate Christi excrementum Satanae, quo diabolus sibi ipsi et hominibus illudat, appellare ausi fuerunt. Haec adeo horrenda sunt, ut homo Christianus ea sine horrore non recitare possit.

68] Accurate autem hoc etiam declarandum est, quinam sint indigni conviviae in hac Sacra Coena, hi nimirum, qui sine vera poenitentia et contritione et sine vera fide et absque bono proposito vitam emendandi ad Coenam Domini accedunt. Hi sibi ipsis iudicium, hoc [R. 746] est, temporales et aeternas poenas, indigna sua orali manducatione corporis Christi accersunt et corporis atque sanguinis Christi rei sunt.

69] Digni vero conviviae in Coena Domini sunt infirmi in fide, pusillanimes, perturbati Christiani, qui dum magnitudinem et multitudinem peccatorum suorum secum reputant, cohorrescunt, qui magnam suam immunditiam considerantes, hoc pretiosissimo thesauro et beneficiis Christi indignos sese iudicant, qui fidei suae infirmitatem sentiunt atque deplorant et nihil magis in votis habent, quam ut Domino Deo firmiore et alacriore fide et puriore obedientia servire possint. Hi (ut diximus) sunt vere digni illi conviviae, in quorum gratiam et quibus recreandis imprimis hoc augustissimum sacramentum et sacrum 70] convivium est institutum. Christus enim eiusmodi homines benignissime invitat, dicens Matth. 11, 28: Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis et onerati estis, et ego reficiam vos. Et alibi ait, Matth. 9, 12: Non est opus valentibus medicus, sed male habentibus. Et apostolus inquit 2 Cor. 12, 9: Virtus mea (dicit Dominus) in infirmitate perficitur. Et ad Romanos, 14, 1, scribit: Infirmi in fide assumite. Et paulo post: Deus eum assumpsit. Quis enim in Filium Dei crediderit, sive is firma sive infirma fide praeditus fuerit, habet vitam aeternam, Ioh. 3, 15. 36.

71] Dignitas igitur neque in magna neque in exigua infirmitate aut firmitate fidei, sed in merito Christi consistit. Huius fructum infirmus ille in fide angustique animi parens, qui opem Christi in curando filio miserrimo implorabat, Marc. 9, 24, non minus quam patriarcha Abraham, apostolus Paulus et alii, qui robustam fidem habuere, participat.

72] Et haec de vera praesentia et duplici manducatione corporis et sanguinis Christi, quae aut fide spiritualiter aut ore fit [R. 747] (quae posterior dignis et indignis communis est), dicta sunt [sunto].

Christ is not only received spiritually by faith, which occurs also outside of [the use of] the Sacrament, but also orally, not only by believing and godly, but also by unworthy, unbelieving, false, and wicked Christians. As this is too long to be narrated here, we would, for the sake of brevity, have the Christian reader referred to the exhaustive writings of our theologians.

Hence it is manifest how unjustly and maliciously the Sacramentarian fanatics (Theodore Beza) deride the Lord Christ, St. Paul, and the entire Church in calling this oral partaking, and that of the unworthy, duos pilos caudas equinae et commentum, cuius vel ipsum Satanam pudeat, as also the doctrine concerning the majesty of Christ, excrementum Satanæ, quo diabolus sibi ipsi et hominibus illudat, that is, they speak so horribly of it that a godly Christian man should be ashamed to translate it.

But it must [also] be carefully explained who are the unworthy guests of this Supper, namely, those who go to this Sacrament without true repentance and sorrow for their sins, and without true faith and the good intention of amending their lives, and by their unworthy oral eating of the body of Christ load themselves with damnation, that is, with temporal and eternal punishments, and become guilty of the body and blood of Christ.

For Christians who are of weak faith, diffident, troubled, and heartily terrified because of the greatness and number of their sins, and think that in this their great impurity they are not worthy of this precious treasure and the benefits of Christ, and who feel and lament their weakness of faith, and from their hearts desire that they may serve God with stronger, more joyful faith and pure obedience, they are the truly worthy guests for whom this highly venerable Sacrament [and sacred feast] has been especially instituted and appointed; as Christ says, Matt. 11, 28: Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Also Matt. 9, 12: They that be whole need not a physician, but they that be sick. Also [2 Cor. 12, 9]: God's strength is made perfect in weakness. Also [Rom. 14, 1]: Him that is weak in the faith receive ye [v. 3], for God hath received him. For whosoever believeth in the Son of God, be it with a strong or with a weak faith, has eternal life [John 3, 15 f.].

And worthiness does not depend upon great or small weakness or strength of faith, but upon the merit of Christ, which the distressed father of little faith [Mark 9, 24] enjoyed as well as Abraham, Paul, and others who have a joyful and strong faith.

Let the foregoing be said of the true presence and twofold participation of the body and blood of Christ, which occurs either by faith, spiritually, or also orally, both by worthy and unworthy [which latter is common to worthy and unworthy].

Diemeil auch von der Konsekration und von der gemeinen Regel, daß nichts Sakrament sei außer dem eingefegten Gebrauch, Mißverstand und Spaltung zwischen etlichen der Augsburgerischen Konfession Lehrern eingefallen sind, haben wir auch von dieser Sache uns brüderlich und einträchtig miteinander auf nachfolgende Meinung erklärt, nämlich: daß die wahre Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im Abendmahl nicht schaffe einiges Menschen Wort oder Werk, es sei das Verdienst oder Sprechen des Dieners oder das Essen und Trinken oder Glaube der Kommunikanten, sondern solches alles solle allein des allmächtigen Gottes Kraft und unsers Herrn Jesu Christi Wort, Einsehung und Ordnung zugeschrieben werden.

Denn die wahrhaftigen und allmächtigen Worte Jesu Christi, welche er in der ersten Einsehung gesprochen, sind nicht allein im ersten Abendmahl kräftig gewesen, sondern währen, gelten, wirken und sind noch kräftig, daß in allen Orten, da das Abendmahl nach Christi Einsehung gehalten und seine Worte gebraucht werden, aus Kraft und Vermögen derselben Worte, die Christus im ersten Abendmahl gesprochen, der Leib und Blut Christi, wahrhaftig gegenwärtig, ausgeteilt und empfangen wird. Denn Christus selbst, wo man seine Einsehung hält und seine Worte über dem Brod und Kelch [über das Brod und den Kelch] spricht und das gesegnete Brod und Kelch austheilt, durch die gesprochenen Worte, aus Kraft der ersten Einsehung, noch [heute noch] durch sein Wort, welches er da will wiederholt haben, kräftig ist; wie Chrysostomus spricht (in Serm. de Pass.) in der Predigt von der Passion: „Christus richtet diesen Tisch selbst zu und segnet ihn; denn kein Mensch das vorgelegte Brod und Wein zum Leib und Blut Christi macht, sondern Christus selbst, der für uns gekreuzigt ist. Die Worte werden durch des Priesters Mund gesprochen, aber durch Gottes Kraft und Gnade, durch das Wort, da er spricht: „Das ist mein Leib“, werden die vorgehalten [vorgehalten] Elemente im Abendmahl geeignet. Und wie diese Rede: „Wachset und vermehret euch und erfüllet die Erde“, nur einmal geredet, aber allezeit kräftig ist in der Natur, daß sie wächst und sich vermehret, also ist auch diese Rede einmal gesprochen, aber bis auf diesen Tag und bis an seine Zukunft ist sie kräftig und wirkt, daß im Abendmahl der Kirche sein wahrer Leib und Blut gegenwärtig ist.“

Und Lutherus, tom. 6. Ien., fol. 99: „Solch sein Befehl und Einsehung vermag und schafft, daß wir nicht schlecht Brod und Wein, sondern seinen Leib und Blut darreichen und empfangen, wie seine Worte lauten: „Das ist mein Leib“ usw., „Das ist mein Blut“ usw.; daß nicht unser Werk oder Sprechen, sondern der Befehl und Ordnung Christi das Brod zum Leib und den Wein zum Blut macht vom Anfang des ersten Abendmahls bis an der Welt Ende und durch unsern Dienst und Amt täglich gereicht wird.“

73] Cum vero etiam de consecratione et de usitata illa regula: Nihil habet rationem sacramenti extra usum seu actionem divinitus institutam, dissensiones quaedam inter aliquos Augustanae Confessionis theologos inciderint, de his etiam duobus capitibus unanimem et pium nostrum consensum declarare 74] visum est. Ac de priore illa quaestione, quae est de consecratione, sentimus, quod veram praesentiam corporis et sanguinis Christi in Coena non efficiat ullius hominis vel verbum vel opus, dignitas seu meritum, sive pronuntiatio ministri, seu manducatio, seu fides communicantium; horum nullum nobis corpus et sanguinem Christi praesentia facit. Sed hoc totum, quod in Coena Christi corpus praesens habemus, simpliciter et in solidum omnipotentis Dei virtuti et verbo, institutioni atque ordinationi Domini nostri Iesu Christi est ascribendum.

75] Verissima enim illa et omnipotentia verba Iesu Christi, quae in prima institutione pronuntiavit, non modo in prima illa Coena efficacia fuere, sed eorum vis, virtus et efficacia adhuc hodie durant et valent: ita quidem certe, ut eorum virtute in omnibus locis, ubi Coena Domini iuxta Christi institutionem celebratur et verba ipsius usurpantur, virtute et potentia eorum verborum, quae Christus in prima Coena locutus est, corpus et sanguis Christi vere praesentia distribuuntur et sumantur. Christus ipse enim (ubi ipsius institutio observatur et verba eius super pane et vino recitantur et benedictus panis et vinum benedictum distribuuntur) per verba illa recitata, virtute primae institutionis, hodie etiam verbo suo, quod repeti vult, efficax est. Hanc 76] piam nostram sententiam Chrysostomus his verbis confirmat. Et nunc (inquit) (R. 748) ille praesto est Christus, qui illam ornavit mensam, ipse istam quoque consecrat. Non enim homo est, qui proposita, panem et vinum, corpus Christi facit et sanguinem, sed ille, qui crucifixus pro nobis est, Christus. Sacerdotis ore verba proferuntur, et Dei virtute consecrantur et gratia. Hoc est, ait: „Corpus meum“; hoc verbo proposita elementa in Coena consecrantur. Et sicut illa vox, quae dicit [Gen. 1, 28]: „Crescite et multiplicamini et replete terram“, semel quidem dicta est, sed omni tempore sentit effectum, ad generationem operante natura, ita et vox illa: „Hoc est corpus meum, hic est sanguis meus“, semel quidem dicta est, sed per omnes mensas ecclesiae usque ad hodiernum diem et usque ad eius adventum praestat sacrificio firmitatem. De Proditione Iudae, hom. 7, sive de passione.

77] D. Lutherus de hac ipsa re ad eundem modum scribit. Haec illius iussio et institutio possunt hoc praestare et efficiunt, ut non nudum tantum panem et vinum, verum etiam corpus et sanguinem ipsius distribuamus et accipiamus. Sic enim verba ipsius habent: „Hoc est corpus meum; hic est sanguis meus.“ Itaque non opus nostrum, non pronuntiatio nostra, sed mandatum et ordinatio Christi efficiunt, ut panis sit corpus et vinum sit sanguis Christi; idque iam inde a prima institutione Coenae usque ad finem mundi fieri solet, nostro autem ministerio haec quotidie distribuuntur. Tom. 6. Ien., fol. 99.

Since a misunderstanding and dissension among some teachers of the Augsburg Confession also has occurred concerning consecration and the common rule, that nothing is a sacrament without the appointed use [or divinely instituted act], we have made a fraternal and unanimous declaration to one another also concerning this matter to the following purport, namely, that not the word or work of any man produces the true presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper, whether it be the merit or recitation of the minister, or the eating and drinking or faith of the communicants; but all this should be ascribed alone to the power of Almighty God and the word, institution, and ordination of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For the true and almighty words of Jesus Christ which He spake at the first institution were efficacious not only at the first Supper, but they endure, are valid, operate, and are still efficacious [their force, power, and efficacy endure and avail even to the present], so that in all places where the Supper is celebrated according to the institution of Christ, and His words are used, the body and blood of Christ are truly present, distributed, and received, because of the power and efficacy of the words which Christ spake at the first Supper. For where His institution is observed and His words are spoken over the bread and cup [wine], and the consecrated bread and cup [wine] are distributed, Christ Himself, through the spoken words, is still efficacious by virtue of the first institution, through His word, which He wishes to be there repeated. As Chrysostom says (in Serm. de Pass.) in his Sermon concerning the Passion: Christ Himself prepares this table and blesses it; for no man makes the bread and wine set before us the body and blood of Christ, but Christ Himself who was crucified for us. The words are spoken by the mouth of the priest, but by God's power and grace, by the word, where He speaks: "This is My body," the elements presented are consecrated in the Supper. And just as the declaration, Gen. 1, 28: "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth," was spoken only once, but is ever efficacious in nature, so that it is fruitful and multiplies, so also this declaration ["This is My body; this is My blood"] was spoken once, but even to this day and to His advent it is efficacious, and works so that in the Supper of the Church His true body and blood are present.

Luther also [writes concerning this very subject in the same manner], Tom. VI, Jena, Fol. 99: This His command and institution have this power and effect that we administer and receive not mere bread and wine, but His body and blood, as His words declare: "This is My body," etc.; "This is My blood," etc., so that it is not our work or speaking, but the command and ordination of Christ that makes the bread the body, and the wine the blood, from the beginning of the first Supper even to the end of the world, and that through our service and office they are daily distributed.

Item, tom. 3. Ien., fol. 446: „Also hie auch, wenn ich gleich über alle Brote spreche: ‚Das ist Christi Leib‘, würde freilich nichts daraus folgen [erfolgen, entstehen]; aber wenn wir seiner Einsetzung und Heißung [seinem Befehl] nach im Abendmahl sagen: ‚Das ist mein Leib‘, so ist's sein Leib, nicht unsers Sprechens oder Theilmahls [ausgesprochenen Wortes] halben, sondern seines Heißens halben, daß er uns also zu sprechen und zu tun geheißen hat und sein Heißen und Tun an unser Sprechen gebunden hat.“

Nun sollen die Worte der Einsetzung in der Handlung des heiligen Abendmahls öffentlich vor der Versammlung deutlich und klar gesprochen oder gesungen und keineswegs unterlassen werden, damit dem Befehl Christi: „Das tut!“ Gehorsam geleistet und der Zuhörer Glaube vom Wesen und Frucht dieses Sacraments (von der Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi, von Vergebung der Sünden und allen Guttaten, so uns durch Christi Tod und Blutvergießen erworben und im Testament Christi geschenkt sind) durch Christi Worte erweckt, gestärkt und vergewissert [werde], und die Elemente des Brotes und Weines in [zu] diesem heiligen [Ge]brauch (daß uns damit Christi Leib und Blut zu essen und zu trinken gereicht werde), geheiligt oder gesegnet werden; wie Paulus spricht: „Der gesegnete Kelch, den wir segnen“; welches ja nicht anders denn durch Wiederholung und Erzählung der Worte der Einsetzung geschieht.

Aber dieser Segen oder die Erzählung der Worte der Einsetzung Christi (wo nicht die ganze Aktion des Abendmahls, wie die [wie sie] von Christo geordnet, gehalten wird, als, wenn man das gesegnete Brot nicht austheilt, empfängt und geneuht [genießt], sondern einschleuht [einschließt], aufopfert oder umträgt) macht allein kein Sacrament, sondern es muß der Befehl Christi: „Das tut!“ (welches die ganze Aktion oder Verrichtung dieses Sacraments, daß man in einer christlichen Zusammentunft Brot und Wein nehme, segne, austheile, empfangen, esse, trinke und des Herrn Tod dabei verkündige, zusammenfaßt) unzertrennt und unbrochen gehalten werden, wie uns auch St. Paulus die ganze Aktion des Brothrechens oder Austheils und Empfangens vor Augen stellt 1 Cor. 10.

Diese wahrhaftige christliche Lehre vom heiligen Abendmahl zu erhalten und vielerlei abgöttische Mißbräuche und Verfehrung dieses Testaments zu meiden und auszuräumen, ist diese nützliche Regel und Richtschnur aus den Worten der Einsetzung genommen: Nihil habet rationem sacramenti extra usum a Christo institutum oder extra actionem divinitus institutam (das ist: Wenn man die Stiftung Christi nicht hält, wie er's geordnet hat, ist es kein Sacrament), welche [Regel] mitnichten zu verwerfen, sondern nützlich in der Kirche Gottes kann und soll getrieben und erhalten werden. Und heiet [bezeichnet] allhier usus oder 78] Item alibi: Sic et hic fit, etiamsi de omnibus panibus haec verba pronuntiarem: „Hoc est corpus Christi“, nihil tamen ea re efficereetur. At quando ad ipsius mandatum et institutionem in administratione Coenae Dominicae dicimus: „Hoc est corpus meum“, tum revera est ipsius corpus. Non propter nostram pronuntiationem, aut quod haec verba pronuntiata hanc habeant efficaciam, sed quia Christus nobis praecipit, ut haec verba pronuntiemus et hoc agamus, quod ipse in prima Coena fecit et hoc modo suum mandatum et factum cum recitatione nostra coniunxit. Tom. 3. Ien., fol. 446.

79] Et quidem verba institutionis Christi in administratione Coenae Dominicae [R. 749] palam coram ecclesia diserte et clare recitentur aut decantentur, neque ulla ratione intermittantur; idque plurimis et gravissimis de 80] causis: primum quidem, ut satisfiat et pareatur Christi mandato, qui inquit: Hoc facite; non igitur omittendum est, quod Christi 81] ipse in Sacra Coena fecit; deinde, ut auditorum fides de substantia et fructu huius sacramenti (de praesentia corporis et sanguinis Christi et de remissione peccatorum omnibusque beneficiis, quae nobis Christi morte et sanguinis profusione partae sunt et nobis in testamento Christi donantur) per verba testamenti Christi excitetur, confirmetur et 82] quam certissima reddatur; praeterea, ut elementa panis et vini ad hunc sacrum usum (quo videlicet nobis una cum illis Christi corpus manducandum et sanguis eius bibendum exhibeatur) sanctificentur seu benedicantur, ut divus Paulus inquit [1 Cor. 10, 16]: Calis benedictionis, cui benedicimus etc., haec autem benedictio non alia ratione fit quam verborum institutionis repetitione et recitatione.

83] Haec tamen benedictio seu recitatio verborum institutionis Christi sola non efficit sacramentum, si non tota actio Coenae, quemadmodum ea a Christo ordinata est, observetur; verbi gratia, cum benedictus panis non distribuitur, sumitur aut participatur, sed vel includitur vel sacrificatur vel circumgestatur. Mandatum enim Christi: Hoc facite, quod totam actionem complectitur, totum et invio- 84] latum observandum est. Ad huius autem sacramenti administrationem requiritur, ut in conventu aliquo piorum hominum panis et vinum benedictione consecrentur, dispensentur, sumantur, hoc est, edantur et bibantur, et mors Domini annuntietur. Ad hunc enim modum divus Paulus totam actionem, in qua panis frangitur seu distribuitur et sumitur, ob oculos nobis proponit 1 Cor. 10, 16.

85] Accedamus iam etiam ad alterum caput, de quo paulo ante mentio est facta. Ut [R. 750] vera et pia doctrina de Coena Domini sincera conservaretur, et multiplices idololatrie abusus atque corruptelae huius sacrosancti testamenti Christi vitarentur et abolerentur, utilis haec regula et norma ex verbis institutionis Coenae desumpta est: Nihil habet rationem sacramenti extra usum a Christo institutum seu extra actionem divinitus institutam. Haec regula nequaquam reliquenda est, magno enim cum fructu in ecclesia Christi retineri potest 86] et debet. Vocabula autem usus seu actio

Also, Tom. III, Jena, Fol. 446: Thus here also, even though I should pronounce over all bread the words: This is Christ's body, nothing, of course, would result therefrom; but when in the Supper we say, according to His institution and command: "This is My body," it is His body, not on account of our speaking or word uttered [because these words, when uttered, have this efficacy], but because of His command — that He has commanded us thus to speak and to do, and has united His command and act with our speaking.

Now, in the administration of the Holy Supper the words of institution are to be publicly spoken or sung before the congregation distinctly and clearly, and should in no way be omitted [and this for very many and the most important reasons. First,] in order that obedience may be rendered to the command of Christ: This do [that therefore should not be omitted which Christ Himself did in the Holy Supper], and [secondly] that the faith of the hearers concerning the nature and fruit of this Sacrament (concerning the presence of the body and blood of Christ, concerning the forgiveness of sins, and all benefits which have been purchased by the death and shedding of the blood of Christ, and are bestowed upon us in Christ's testament) may be excited, strengthened, and confirmed by Christ's Word, and [besides] that the elements of bread and wine may be consecrated or blessed for this holy use, in order that the body and blood of Christ may therewith be administered to us to be eaten and to be drunk, as Paul declares [1 Cor. 10, 16]: The cup of blessing which we bless, which indeed occurs in no other way than through the repetition and recitation of the words of institution.

However, this blessing, or the recitation of the words of institution of Christ alone does not make a sacrament if the entire action of the Supper, as it was instituted by Christ, is not observed (as when the consecrated bread is not distributed, received, and partaken of, but is enclosed, sacrificed, or carried about), but the command of Christ, This do (which embraces the entire action or administration in this Sacrament, that in an assembly of Christians bread and wine are taken, consecrated, distributed, received, eaten, drunk, and the Lord's death is shown forth at the same time) must be observed unseparated and inviolate, as also St. Paul places before our eyes the entire action of the breaking of bread or of distribution and reception, 1 Cor. 10, 16.

[Let us now come also to the second point, of which mention was made a little before.] To preserve this true Christian doctrine concerning the Holy Supper, and to avoid and abolish manifold idolatrous abuses and perversions of this testament, the following useful rule and standard has been derived from the words of institution: Nihil habet rationem sacramenti extra usum a Christo institutum ("Nothing has the nature of a sacrament apart from the use instituted by Christ") or extra actionem divinitus institutam ("apart from the action divinely instituted"). That is: If the institution of Christ actio, das ist, Gebrauch oder Handlung, vornehmlich nicht den Glauben, auch nicht allein die mündliche Niekung, sondern die ganze äußerliche, sichtbare, von Christo geordnete Handlung des Abendmahls: die Konsecration oder Worte der Einklebung, die Ausstellung und Empfangung oder mündliche Niekung des gesegneten Brotes und Weines, Leibes und Blutes Christi; außer welchem Gebrauch, wenn das Brot in der papistischen Messe nicht ausgeteilt, sondern aufgeopfert oder eingeschlossen, umgetragen und anzubeten vorgestelt [wird], ist es für kein Sakrament zu halten; gleich als das Taufwasser, wenn es die Gloden zu weichen oder den Ausfluß zu heilen gebraucht oder sonst anzubeten vorgestelt würde, kein Sakrament oder Taufe ist; denn solchen papistischen Mißbräuchen diese Regel anfänglich entgegengeleget und von D. Luthero selbst, tom. 4, Ien., erklärt ist.

Daneben aber müssen wir auch dieses erinnern, daß die Sakramentierer diese nütze [nützliche] und nötige Regel hinterlistig und bösslich zur Verleugnung der wahren, wesentlichen Gegenwärtigkeit und mündlichen Niekung des Leibes Christi, so alhier auf Erden beide von Würdigen und Unwürdigen zugleich geschieht, verkehren und auf den usum fidei, das ist, auf den geistlichen und innerlichen Gebrauch des Glaubens, deuten, als wäre es den Unwürdigen kein Sakrament, und geschähe die Niekung des Leibes Christi allein geistlich durch den Glauben, oder als machte der Glaube den Leib Christi im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig, und verhalten die unwürdigen, ungläubigen Heuchler den Leib Christi nicht gegenwärtig empfangen.

Nun macht unser Glaube das Sakrament nicht, sondern allein unsers allmächtigen Gottes und Heilandes Jesu Christi wahrhaftiges Wort und Einklebung, welches stets kräftig ist und bleibt in der Christenheit, und durch die Würdigkeit oder Unwürdigkeit des Dieners oder [deß], der es empfängt, Unglauben [oder durch den Unglauben dessen, der es empfängt] nicht aufgehoben oder unkräftig gemacht wird; gleichwie das Evangelium, ob es schon die gottlosen Zuhörer nicht glauben, dennoch nichtsdestoweniger das wahre Evangelium ist und bleibt, allein daß es in den Ungläubigen zur Seligkeit nicht wirkt. Also die, so das Sakrament empfangen, sie glauben oder glauben nicht, so bleibt Christus nichtsdestoweniger in seinen Worten wahrhaftig, da er sagt: „Nehmet, esset, das ist mein Leib“, und wirkt solches nicht durch unsern Glauben, sondern durch seine Allmächtigkeit.

Verhasen es ein schädlicher und unterschämter Irrtum ist, daß etliche aus listiger Verlehrung dieser gewöhnlichen Regel unserm Glauben, als der allein den Leib Christi gegenwärtig mache und genieße, mehr als der Allmächtigkeit unsers Herrn und Heilandes Jesu Christi zuschreiben.

Was [so] dann der Sakramentierer allerlei vermeinte Gründe und nichtige Gegenargumente von den wesentlichen und natürlichen Eigenschaften eines menschlichen Leibes, von der Himmelfahrt Christi, von seinem Abschied aus dieser Welt und dergleichen anlangt, weil solche allzumal gründlich und ausführlich mit Gottes Wort durch D. Luther in seinen Streitschriften: „Wider die himmlischen in hoc negotio proprie non significant fidem nec solam manducationem, quae ore fit, sed totam externam visibilem actionem Coenae Dominicae a Christo institutam. Ad eam vero requiritur consecratio seu verba institutionis, distributio et sumptio seu externa, quae dicitur, oralis manducatio benedicti panis et vini, item corporis et sanguinis Christi perceptio. 87] Et cum extra hunc usum panis in missa pontificia non distribuitur, sed vel offertur vel includitur vel circumgestatur aut adorandus proponitur, non est ille pro sacramento agnoscendus. Quemadmodum etiam aqua baptismi, si ad campanas baptizandas aut ad curandam lepram adhiberetur aut adoranda proponeretur, nullam haberet sacramenti (baptismatis) rationem. Huiusmodi pontificii abusus haec regula initio renascentis evangelii opposita et ab ipso D. Luthero pie declarata est. Tom. 4, Ien.

88] Interim tamen dissimulare non debemus, quod Sacramentarii hanc utilem et necessariam regulam vafre, subdole et malitiose ad negandam veram et substantialem praesentiam et oralem manducationem corporis Christi (quae hic in terris fit et dignis atque indignis communis est) falsa interpretatione depravent. Interpretantur enim eam de [R. 751] spirituali usu fidei interno ac sentiunt, assumptionem Coenae Dominicae indignis non esse sacramentum, et fieri communicationem corporis Christi tantummodo spiritualiter per fidem, aut fidem hoc praestare, ut corpus Christi in Coena praesens sit. Inde porro colligunt, indignos, infideles, hypocritas corpus Christi nec praesens habere nec accipere.

89] Atqui fides nostra sacramentum non efficit, sed tantum omnipotentis Dei atque Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi certissimum verbum et institutio hoc praestant. Verbum enim Domini in ecclesia efficax est manetque, neque vel dignitate vel indignitate ministri, neque summentis incredulitate quidquam ei derogatur aut virtus eius enervatur. Sanctum Christi evangelion est permanetque evangelion, etiamsi impii quidam auditores nullam illi fidem adhibeant, in quibus etiam illud non est efficax ad salutem. Idem etiam fit in sumptione sacramenti, ut Christus in verbis suis: Accipite, edite; hoc est corpus meum, verax maneat, sive communicantes in ipsum credant, sive non credant; praesentiam enim corporis et sanguinis sui non per nostram fidem, sed per omnipotentiam suam efficit.

90] Quare perniciosus error est, quem adversarii impudenter defendunt, et subdola depravatione usitatae huius regulae plus fidei nostrae (quippe quae, ipsorum opinione, corpus Christi praesens nobis sistat atque participet) quam omnipotentiae Domini atque Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi ascribunt.

91] Iam quod ad Sacramentarium varia et imaginaria fundamenta atque fuitiles obiectiones attinet, quas illi de essentialibus et naturalibus humani corporis proprietatibus, de ascensu Christi ad coelos et de ipsius ex hoc mundo discessu, et si quae sunt his similia, afferunt: hae nugae, inquam, omnes et singulae, argumentis e Verbo Dei desum-be not observed as He appointed it, there is no sacrament. This is by no means to be rejected, but can and should be urged and maintained with profit in the Church of God. And the use or action here does not mean chiefly faith, neither the oral participation only, but the entire external, visible action of the Lord's Supper instituted by Christ, [to this indeed is required] the consecration, or words of institution, the distribution and reception, or oral partaking [manducation] of the consecrated bread and wine, [likewise the partaking] of the body and blood of Christ. And apart from this use, when in the papistic mass the bread is not distributed, but offered up or enclosed, borne about, and exhibited for adoration, it is to be regarded as no sacrament; just as the water of baptism, when used to consecrate bells or to cure leprosy, or otherwise exhibited for worship, is no sacrament or baptism. For against such papistic abuses this rule has been set up at the beginning [of the reviving Gospel], and has been explained by Dr. Luther himself, Tom. IV, Jena.

Meanwhile, however, we must call attention also to this, that the Sacramentarians artfully and wickedly pervert this useful and necessary rule, in order to deny the true, essential presence and oral partaking of the body of Christ, which occurs here upon earth alike by the worthy and the unworthy, and interpret it as referring to the usus fidei, that is, to the spiritual and inner use of faith, as though it were no sacrament to the unworthy, and the partaking of the body occurred only spiritually, through faith, or as though faith made the body of Christ present in the Holy Supper, and therefore unworthy, unbelieving hypocrites did not receive the body of Christ as being present.

Now, it is not our faith that makes the sacrament, but only the true word and institution of our almighty God and Savior Jesus Christ, which always is and remains efficacious in the Christian Church, and is not invalidated or rendered inefficacious by the worthiness or unworthiness of the minister, nor by the unbelief of the one who receives it. Just as the Gospel, even though godless hearers do not believe it, yet is and remains none the less the true Gospel, only it does not work for salvation in the unbelieving; so, whether those who receive the Sacrament believe or do not believe, Christ remains none the less true in His words when He says: Take, eat: this is My body, and effects this [His presence] not by our faith, but by His omnipotence.

Accordingly, it is a pernicious, shameless error that some from a cunning perversion of this familiar rule ascribe more to our faith, which [in their opinion] alone renders present and partakes of the body of Christ, than to the omnipotence of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

Now, as regards the various imaginary reasons and futile counter-arguments of the Sacramentarians concerning the essential and natural attributes of a human body, concerning the ascension of Christ, concerning His Propheten"; item, „Daß diese Worte: „Daß ist mein Leib“ usw. noch feststehen“; desgleichen in seinem großen und kleinen Bekenntnis vom heiligen Abendmahl“ und andern seinen Schriften widerlegt und nach seinem Tode nichts Neues durch die Rottengeister vorgebracht, wollen wir den christlichen Leser um geliebter Kürze willen in dieselben gewiesen und uns darauf gezogen [bezogen] haben.

Denn daß wir uns durch keine menschlichen klugen Gedanken, was für einen Schein und Ansehen sie immermehr haben mögen, nicht wollen, können noch sollen abführen lassen von dem einfältigen, deutlichen und klaren Verstand des Wortes und Testaments Christi auf fremde Meinung, anders denn wie sie lauten, sondern gehörtemmaßen einfältig verstehen und glauben, sind unsere Gründe, darauf wir in dieser Sache je und allwege nach erregtem Zwiespalt von diesem Artikel gestanden, diese, wie D. Luther dieselben gleich anfangs [1528] wider die Sakramentierer mit nachfolgenden Worten gesagt hat (D. Luther im großen Bekenntnis vom heiligen Abendmahl): „Meine Gründe, darauf ich siehe in solchem Stück, sind diese:

„1. Der erste ist dieser Artikel unsers Glaubens: Jesus Christus ist wesentlicher, natürlicher, wahrhaftiger, völliger Gott und Mensch in einer Person, unzertrennt und ungeteilt.

„2. Der andere, daß Gottes rechte Hand allenthalben ist.

„3. Der dritte, daß Gottes Wort nicht falsch ist oder Lügen [lüge].

„4. Der vierte, daß Gott mancherlei Weise hat und weiß, etwa [irgendwo] an einem Ort zu sein, und nicht allein die einige, da die Schwärmer von gaulen, welche die Philosophi localem oder räumliche nennen.“

Item: „Christus' einiger Leib hat dreierlei Weise oder alle drei Weisen, etwa [irgendwo] zu sein:

„Erflich die begreifliche, leibliche Weise, wie er auf Erden leiblich ging, da er Raum gab und nahm, nach seiner Größe. Solche Weise kann er noch brauchen, wenn er will, wie er nach der Auferstehung tat [tat] und am jüngsten Tage brauchen wird, wie Paulus sagt 1 Tim. 6: „Welchen wird zeigen zu seiner Zeit derselbige Gott“ [welche wird zeigen zu seiner Zeit der selbige Gott]. Und Kol. 3: „Wenn Christus, euer Leben, sich offenbaren wird.“ Auf solche Weise ist er nicht in Gott oder bei dem Vater noch im Himmel, wie der tolle Geist träumt; denn Gott ist nicht ein leiblicher Raum oder Stätte. Und hierauf gehen die Sprüche, so die Geißler [die Schwärmer] führen, wie Christus die Welt verlasse und zum Vater gehe.

„Zum andern die unbegreifliche, geistliche Weise, da er keinen Raum nimmt noch gibt, sondern durch alle Creatur fährt, wo er will, wie mein Gesicht ptis, solide, nervose et copiose a D. Luthero in polemicis ipsius scriptis refutatae [R. 752] sunt. Quare pium lectorem (brevitatis studio) ad illius scripta remittimus. In his autem principem locum habent: libellus, quem contra coelestes prophetas (ut tum vocabantur) edidit, et aliud opusculum, cuius inscriptio est: Quod verba: Hoc est corpus meum adhuc firma constant; item maior ipsius et minor (post aliquot annos) edita confessio de Coena Domini et alia praeterea eiusdem de hoc negotio evulgata opuscula. Neque enim fanatici spiritus a morte D. Lutheri ullum novum argumentum in medium attulerunt.

92] Quod autem nullis argumentis ab hominibus argute excogitatis, utcumque rationi blandiantur, abduci nos patimur, nec pati vel volumus vel possumus vel debemus a perspicua, simplicissima et clara verborum testamenti Christi sententia in aliam opinionem, quae ab expressis verbis Christi recedit, sed simpliciter potius ea intelligimus et credimus: haec nostra sunt fundamenta, quibus hactenus, post motam controversiam in hoc articulo, constanter nixi sumus, quae etiam D. Lutherus initio exortae huius dissensionis contra Sacramentarios sequentibus verbis posuit (D. Lutherus in maiori sua de Coena Domini confessione): Mea fundamenta, quibus in hoc negotio nitior, haec sunt:

93] I. Primum est hic articulus fidei: Iesus Christus est substantialis, naturalis, verus, perfectus Deus et homo, in una persona indivisus et inseparabilis.

95] II. Secundum, quod dextera Dei est ubique.

96] III. Tertium, quod Verbum Dei neque falsum est neque fallax.

97] IV. Quartum, quod Deus varios modos habet novitque, quibus aliquo in loco esse potest, neque uno illo tantummodo contentus esse cogitur, de quo fanatici homines nugantur, quem philosophi localem vocant.

98] Et Christi unicum corpus (inquit Lutherus) tribus modis seu triplici ratione potest alicubi esse:

99] Primo, comprehensibili et corporali ratione, quali usus est, cum in terris [R. 753] corporaliter conversaretur, cum certo loco secundum quantitatem suam circumscriberetur. Hoc modo etiam hodie uti potest, quoties ipsi visum fuerit, id quod post resurrectionem suam aliquoties fecit et in novissimo die tali ratione praesentiae sese manifestabit, sicut Paulus de Christo docet, iniquis 1 Tim. 6, 15: „Quem [quam] suis temporibus ostendat beatus et solus potens, Rex regum et Dominus dominantium.“ Et ad Colossenses 3, 4: „Cum Christus apparuerit, vita vestra“ etc. Hoc modo Christus non est in Deo aut apud Patrem, aut in coelis, sicut fanatici ille spiritus somniat. Deus enim non est corporalis locus. Et de hoc modo agitur in illis Scripturae dictis, quae a fanaticis hominibus afferuntur, quod videlicet Christus mundum reliquerit et ad Patrem iverit.

100] Deinde alio incomprehensibili et spiritali modo alicubi esse potest, ut loco non circumscribatur, sed per omnes creaturas penedeparture from this world, and such like, inasmuch as these have one and all been refuted thoroughly and in detail, from God's Word, by Dr. Luther in his controversial writings: Against the Heavenly Prophets, That These Words, "This Is My Body," Still Stand Firm; likewise in his Large and his Small Confession concerning the Holy Supper [published some years afterwards], and in other of his writings, and inasmuch as since his death nothing new has been advanced by the factious spirits, we would for the sake of brevity have the Christian reader directed to them and have referred to them.

For that we neither will, nor can, nor should allow ourselves to be led away by thoughts of human wisdom, whatever outward appearance or authority they may have, from the simple, distinct, and clear sense of the Word and testament of Christ to a strange opinion, other than the words read, but that, in accordance with what is above stated, we understand and believe them simply, our reasons upon which we have rested in this matter ever since the controversy concerning this article arose, are those which Dr. Luther himself, in the very beginning, presented against the Sacramentarians in the following words (Dr. Luther in his Large Confession concerning the Holy Supper): My reasons upon which I rest in this matter are the following:

1. The first is this article of our faith: Jesus Christ is essential, natural, true, perfect God and man in one person, inseparable and undivided.

2. The second, that God's right hand is everywhere.

3. The third, that God's Word is not false, nor does it lie.

4. The fourth, that God has and knows of many modes of being in any place, and not only the single one concerning which the fanatics talk flippantly, and which philosophers call LOCALEM, or local.

Also: The one body of Christ [says Luther] has a threefold mode or all three modes of being anywhere.

First, the comprehensible, bodily mode, as He went about bodily upon earth, when, according to His size, He vacated and occupied space [was circumscribed by a fixed place]. This mode He can still use whenever He will, as He did after the resurrection, and will use at the last day, as Paul says, 1 Tim. 6, 15: "Which in His times He shall show, who is the blessed God [and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords]." And to the Colossians, 3, 4: "When Christ, who is our Life, shall appear." In this manner He is not in God or with the Father, neither in heaven, as the mad spirits dream; for God is not a bodily space or place. And this is what the passages how Christ leaves the world and goes to the Father refer to which the false spirits cite.

Secondly, the incomprehensible, spiritual mode, according to which He neither occupies nor vacates space, but penetrates all creatures et obsignato prodiret, et quando per ianuas clausas ad discipulos ingrederetur, et sicut est in pane et vino Coenae, atque hoc modo creditur de sanctissima virgine Maria, matre sua, natus esse.

(daß ich großes Gleichniß gebe) durch Luft, Licht oder Wasser fährt und ist [und in denselben ist] und nicht Raum nimmt noch gibt; wie Klang oder Ton durch Luft oder Wasser oder Brett und Wand fährt und ist und auch nicht Raum nimmt noch gibt; item, wie Licht und Hitze durch Luft, Wasser, Glas, Kristall und dergleichen fährt und ist und auch nicht Raum gibt noch nimmt; und dergleichen viel mehr. Solcher Weise hat er gebraucht, da er aus verschlossenem Grabe fuhr und durch verschlossene Thür kam, und im Brot und Wein im Abendmahl, und, wie man glaubt, da er von seiner Mutter geboren ward.

„Zum dritten die göttliche, himmlische Weise, da er mit Gott eine Person ist, nach welcher freilich alle Kreaturen ihm gar viel durchläuftiger und gegenwärtiger sein müssen, denn sie sind nach der andern Weise. Denn so er nach derselben andern Weise kann also sein in und bei den Kreaturen, daß sie ihn nicht fühlen, rühren, messen noch begreifen, wieviel mehr wird er nach dieser hohen dritten Weise in allen Kreaturen wunderbarlich sein, daß sie ihn nicht messen noch begreifen, sondern vielmehr, daß er sie vor sich hat gegenwärtig, [sie] misst und begreift. Denn du mußt dies Wesen [dieses Sein] Christi, so er mit Gott eine Person ist, gar weit, weit außer den Kreaturen setzen, so weit, als Gott draußen ist, wiederum so tief und nahe in allen Kreaturen setzen, als Gott darinnen ist. Denn er ist eine ungetrennte Person mit Gott; wo Gott ist, da muß er auch sein, oder unser Glaube ist falsch. Wer will aber sagen oder denken, wie solches zugehe? Wir wissen wohl, daß es also sei, daß er in Gott, außer allen Kreaturen, und mit Gott eine Person ist, aber wie es zugehe, wissen wir nicht; es ist über Natur und Vernunft, auch aller Engel im Himmel, allein Gott bewußt und bekannt. Weil es denn uns unbekannt und doch wahr ist, so sollen wir seine Worte nicht eher leugnen, wir wissen denn zu beweisen gewiß, daß Christus' Leib allerdings nicht [auf keine Weise] möge sein, wo Gott ist, und daß solche Weise zu sein falsch sei; welches die Schwärmer sollen beweisen, aber sie werden's lassen.

Cum igitur hoc arcanum nobis incomprehensum et tamen verissimum sit, non decet nos ipsius verbo contradicere, nisi firmis argumentis probare possimus, quod Christi corpus nequaquam ibi esse valeat, ubi Deus est, et quod hic modus praesentiae confictus sit. Hoc fanaticis illis hominibus probandum incumbit, sed nunquam id praestabunt.

„Ob nun Gott noch mehr Weisen habe und wisse, wie Christus' Leib etwa [irgendwo] sei, will ich hiemit nicht verleugnet, sondern angezeigt haben, wie grobe Humpel [Tröpfe, einfältige Menschen] unsere Schwärmer sind, daß sie Christus' Leib nicht mehr denn die erste, begreifliche Weise zugeben; wiewohl sie auch dieselbige nicht können beweisen, daß sie wider unsern Verstand sei [unserm Verständnis zuwider sei]. Denn ich's in keinem Weg leugnen will, daß Gottes Gewalt nicht sollte so viel vermögen, daß ein Leib zugleich an vielen Orten sein möge [sein könne], auch leiblicher, begreiflicher Weise. Denn wer will's beweisen, daß Gott solches nicht vermag? Wer hat seiner Gewalt ein Ende gesehen? Die Schwärmer denken tret pro liberrima sua voluntate, quemadmodum (ut crassa quadam similitudine rem utcumque adumbrem) visus meus per aërem, lumen aut aquam penetrat atque in iis rebus est, neque tamen loco circumscribitur. Et quemadmodum sonus per aquam, aërem, asserem aut parietem transit et in iis rebus est neque tamen loco circumscribitur. Eodem modo etiam lux et calor per aërem, aquam, vitrum, crystallum et per similes materias penetrant et in iis rebus sunt, nec tamen loco circumscribuntur; et quidem eius rei multae comparationes adduci possent. Hoc modo usus est Christus, cum resurgens e sepulcro clauso

101] Praeterea alicubi esse potest divino et coelesti modo, secundum quem cum Deo [R. 754 una est persona. Ea ratione creaturae longe illi praesentiores et penetratu faciliores sunt quam iuxta secundum modum. Si enim iuxta illum secundum modum potest esse in creaturis et apud creaturas, ut tamen ipsum non sentiant, tangant, circumscribant aut comprehendant, multo profecto magis secundum hunc tertium, admirandum, sublimem modum in omnibus creaturis, multoque mirabilius erit, ut ipsum non includant, circumscribant aut comprehendant, sed potius, ut ipsas praesentes habeat, circumscribat et comprehendat. Hunc enim praesentiae Christi modum, quem ex unione personali cum Deo habet, longissime extra creaturas, quam longe videlicet Deus extra creaturas est, ponere te oportet. Rursus autem tam profunde et prope eundem modum in omnes creaturas, quam profunde et prope Deus in omnibus creaturis est, pones. Est enim una inseparabilis persona cum Deo; ubi igitur Deus est, ibi ipsum quoque esse, aut

102] fidem nostram falsam esse oportet. Quis autem explicare aut saltem cogitationibus suis assequi poterit, quomodo hoc fiat? Scimus quidem, rem revera ita se habere, quod videlicet sit in Deo extra omnes creaturas, et cum ipso una sit persona; modum autem, quo ista fiant, ignoramus. Excedit hoc mysterium naturam et rationis humanae, imo etiam angelorum in coelis captum; soli Deo notum est.

103] An vero Deus etiam plures modos habeat et norit, iuxta quos Christi corpus alicubi sit, ego haudquaquam negaverim. Hoc saltem indicare volui, quam crassi et [R. 755 stupidi homines sint fanatici illi, qui Christi corpori nonnisi unicum illum, primum et comprehensibilem praesentiae modum tribuunt. Sed neque de illo modo probare poterunt, quod cum nostra sententia pugnet. Ego enim nunquam asserere velim, quod potentia Dei non efficere valeat, ut unum corpus simul in pluribus locis, etiam corporali et comprehensibili modo, adesse possit. Quis enim et quibus argumentis evincet, quod hoc Deo sit impossibile? Quis potentiae ipsius finem depre- wherever He pleases [according to His most free will]; as, to make an imperfect comparison, my sight penetrates and is in air, light, or water, and does not occupy or vacate space; as a sound or tone penetrates and is in air or water or board and wall, and also does not occupy or vacate space; likewise, as light and heat penetrate and are in air, water, glass, crystal, and the like, and also do not vacate or occupy space; and much more of the like [many comparisons of this matter could be adduced]. This mode He used when He rose from the closed [and sealed] sepulcher, and passed through the closed door [to His disciples], and in the bread and wine in the Holy Supper, and, as it is believed, when He was born of His mother [the most holy Virgin Mary].

Thirdly, the divine, heavenly mode, since He is one person with God, according to which, of course, all creatures must be far more penetrable and present to Him than they are according to the second mode. For if, according to that second mode, He can be in and with creatures in such a manner that they do not feel, touch, circumscribe, or comprehend Him, how much more wonderfully will He be in all creatures according to this sublime third mode, so that they do not circumscribe nor comprehend Him, but rather that He has them present before Himself, circumscribes and comprehends them! For you must place this being of Christ, who is one person with God [for you must place this mode of presence of Christ which He has by His personal union with God], very far, far outside of the creatures, as far as God is outside of them; and again as deep and near within all creatures as God is within them. For He is one inseparable person with God; where God is, there must He also be, or our faith is false. But who will say or think how this occurs? We know indeed that it is so, that He is in God outside of all creatures, and one person with God, but how it occurs we do not know; it [this mystery] is above nature and reason, even above the reason of all the angels in heaven; it is understood and known only by God. Now, since it is unknown to us, and yet true, we should not deny His words before we know how to prove to a certainty that the body of Christ can by no means be where God is, and that this mode of being [presence] is false. This the fanatics must prove; but they will forego it.

Now, whether God has and knows still more modes in which Christ's body is anywhere, I did not intend to deny herewith, but to indicate what awkward dolts our fanatics are, that they concede to the body of Christ no more than the first, comprehensible mode; although they cannot even prove that to be conflicting with our meaning. For in no way will I deny that the power of God may accomplish this much that a body might be in many places at the same time, even in a bodily, comprehensible way. For who will prove that this wohl also, Gott vermöge es nicht; aber wer will ihrem Denken glauben? Womit machen sie solches Denken gewiß? Bis daher Lutherus.

Aus welchen Worten D. Luther's auch dies klar ist, in was Verstande [in welcher Bedeutung] das Wort „geistlich“ in unsern Kirchen von diesem Handel gebraucht wird. Denn dieses Wort „geistlich“ heißt den Sacramentierern anders nichts denn die geistliche Gemeinschaft, wenn durch den Glauben im Geist Christo denn HErrn die Rechtgläubigen [wahrhaft Gläubigen] einverleibt und wahrhaftige geistliche Glieder seines Leibes werden.

Wenn aber D. Luther oder wir dies Wort „geistlich“ in diesem Handel gebrauchen, verstehen wir dadurch die geistliche, übernatürliche, himmlische Weise, nach welcher Christus bei dem heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig [ist und] nicht allein in den Gläubigen Trost und Leben, sondern auch in den Ungläubigen das Gericht wirkt, dadurch wir die lapernatistischen Gedanken von der groben, fleischlichen Gegenwärtigkeit verwerfen, welche unsern Kirchen durch die Sacramentierer über [unbekümmert um und wider] alles unser öffentlich vielfältig Bezeugen zugemessen und aufgedrungen wird; in welchem Verstande wir auch reden, daß der Leib und Blut Christi im heiligen Abendmahl geistlich empfangen, [ge]essen und getrunken werde, obmohl solche Nahrung mit dem Munde geschieht, die Weise aber geistlich ist.

Also ist unser Glaube in diesem Artikel von der wahren Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im heiligen Abendmahl auf des wahrhaftigen, allmächtigen Gottes, unsers HErrn und Heilandes Jesu Christi, Wahrheit und Allmächtigkeit gebaut; welche Gründe (unsrer Glauben in allen Ansehungungen dieses Artikels haben zu stärken und zu befestigen und dagegen alle der Sacramentierer Gegenwürfe und Entreden, wie annehmlich und scheinlich [scheinbar richtig] sie der Vernunft immer sein mögen, umzustoßen und zu widerlegen) stark und fest genug sind, darauf sich auch ein christlich Herz sicher und fest lehnen und verlassen kann.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir mit Herzen und Mund als falsch, irrig und verführerisch alle Irrtümer, so dieser abgesetzt und in Gottes Wort gegründeten Lehre ungemäß, zuwider und entgegen sind, als:

1. Erstlich die papistische Transsubstantiation, da gelehrt wird, daß das konsekrierte oder gesegnete Brot und Wein im heiligen Abendmahl seine Substanz und Wesen ganz und gar verlieren und in die Substanz des Leibes und Blutes Christi verwandelt werden, also daß allein die bloße Gestalt des Brotes und Weines, oder accidentia sine subiecto, übrigbleiben; unter welcher Gestalt des Brotes der Leib Christi (das doch nicht mehr Brot [sei], sondern ihrem Vorgeben nach jein natürlich Wesen verloren [habe]) auch außerhalb der Handlung des Abendmahls, wenn das Brot in das Sacramenthäuslein eingeschlossen oder zum Schauspiel und anzubeten umhergetragen wird, gegenwärtig sei; denn nichts Sacrament sein kann außer Gottes Befehl und geordnetem [Ge]brauch, dazu es in Gottes Wort eingesetzt ist, wie droben angezeigt worden.

hendit? Fanatici quidem id cogitant: hoc Deus praestare non potest; sed quis ipsorum cogitationibus credet, et quo argumentorum genere has cogitationes suas confirmabunt? Hactenus Lutherus.

104] Ex his D. Lutheri verbis etiam manifestum est, in qua significatione vocabulum spiritualiter in ecclesiis nostris quoad hoc negotium usurpetur. Vocabulum enim spiritualiter Sacramentariis nihil aliud significat quam spirituales illam communionem, quando nimirum per fidem in Spiritu vere credentes Christo Domino incorporantur et revera spiritualia membra corporis eius fiunt.

105] Cum vero D. Lutherus aut nos vocabulo spiritualiter in hoc negotio utimur, intelligimus spirituales, supernaturales, coelestem modum, secundum quem Christus in Sacra Coena praesens est et non tantum in credentibus consolationem et vitam, verum etiam in infidelibus iudicium efficit. Et quidem per vocabulum illud spiritualiter Capernaïticas illas imaginationes de crassa et carnali praesentia excludimus et reieicimus, quae ecclesiis nostris per Sacramentarios post tot publicas nostras protestationes affingitur. Et in ea sententia intelligi volumus vocabulum spiritualiter, cum dicimus, corpus et [R. 756] sanguinem Christi in Sacra Coena spiritualiter accipi, edi et bibi. Tametsi enim participatio illa ore fiat, tamen modus spiritualis est.

106] Fides igitur nostra in hoc articulo de vera praesentia corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena super veri et omnipotentis Dei, Domini et Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi, veritatem et omnipotentiam est fundata et exstructa. Haec fundamenta ita solida atque immota sunt, ut et fidem nostram in omnibus tentationibus (quae de hoc articulo incidere possunt) confirmare et stabilire et omnes Sacramentariorum obiectiones et argutias, utcumque speciosae sint et humanae rationi plurimum blandiantur, refutare et evertere et piis animis per omnia sufficere et praesentissimam consolationem et fiduciam asferre possint.

107] Quare reieicimus et damnamus corde et ore utpote fallaces et fraude plenos omnes errores, qui recitatae iam sanae doctrinae et in sacris litteris fundatae adversantur et repugnant:

108] I. Pontificiam transsubstantiationem, cum docetur, quod panis et vinum, si consecrata seu benedicta fuerint, in Sacrosancta Coena substantiam et essentiam suam penitus amittant et in substantiam corporis et sanguinis Christi convertantur, ita quidem, ut sola externa species panis et vini, sive accidentia sine subiecto, reliqua maneant. Et quod fingunt, corpus Christi sub specie panis (qui tamen panis ipsorum opinione iam non amplius est panis, sed naturalem suam essentiam amisit) revera praesens esse etiam extra actionem Coenae Dominicae, cum videlicet panis in sacrario inclusus asservatur aut in solenni et theatraica pompa adorandus ostentatur et circumgestatur. Nihil enim rationem sacramenti habere potest extra mandatum Dei et usum a Christo institutum, ut supra monuimus.

is impossible with God? Who has seen an end to His power? The fanatics indeed think thus: God cannot do it. But who will believe their thinking? With what do they make such thinking sure? Thus far Luther.

From these words of Dr. Luther this, too, is clear in what sense the word spiritual is employed in our churches with reference to this matter. For to the Sacramentarians this word spiritual means nothing else than the spiritual communion, when through faith true believers are in the Spirit incorporated into Christ, the Lord, and become true spiritual members of His body.

But when Dr. Luther or we employ this word spiritual in regard to this matter, we understand by it the spiritual, supernatural, heavenly mode, according to which Christ is present in the Holy Supper, working not only consolation and life in the believing, but also condemnation in the unbelieving; whereby we reject the Capernaïtic thoughts of the gross [and] carnal presence which is ascribed to and forced upon our churches by the Sacramentarians against our manifold public protestations. In this sense we also say [wish the word spiritually to be understood when we say] that in the Holy Supper the body and blood of Christ are spiritually received, eaten, and drunk, although this participation occurs with the mouth, while the mode is spiritual.

Thus our faith in this article concerning the true presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Holy Supper is based upon the truth and omnipotence of the true, almighty God, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. These foundations are strong and firm enough to strengthen and establish our faith in all temptations concerning this article, and, on the contrary, to overthrow and refute all the counter-arguments and objections of the Sacramentarians, however agreeable and plausible they may be to our reason; and upon them a Christian heart also can securely and firmly rest and rely.

Accordingly, with heart and mouth we reject and condemn as false, erroneous, and misleading all errors which are not in accordance with, but contrary and opposed to, the doctrine above mentioned and founded upon God's Word, such as,

1. The papistic transubstantiation, when it is taught that the consecrated or blessed bread and wine in the Holy Supper lose entirely their substance and essence, and are changed into the substance of the body and blood of Christ in such a way that only the mere form of bread and wine is left, or accidentia sine subjecto (the accidents without the object); under which form of the bread, which nevertheless is bread no longer, but according to their assertion has lost its natural essence, the body of Christ is present even apart from the administration of the Holy Supper, when the bread is enclosed in the pyx or is carried about for display and adoration. For nothing can be a sacrament without God's command and the appointed use for which it is instituted in God's Word, as was shown above.

Concordia Triglotta.

2. Desgleichen verwerfen und verdammen wir alle andern papistischen Mißbräuche dieses Sakraments, als, den Greuel der Opfermesse für die Lebendigen und Toten.

3. Item, daß den Laien nur eine Gestalt des Sakraments wider den öffentlichen Befehl und Einsetzung Christi gereicht wird, wie dieselben papistischen Mißbräuche in unserer Kirchen gemeinen Konfession und Apologia, Schmalkaldischen Artikeln und andern der Unfern Schriften ausführlich mit Gottes Wort und der alten Kirche Zeugnissen widerlegt worden.

Wieweil aber in dieser Schrift wir vornehmlich allein von der wahren Gegenwartigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi wider die Sakramentierer, deren etliche sich unter der Augsburgerischen Konfession Namen in diese Kirchen unterkömmt einbringen, unser Bekenntnis und Erklärung zu tun vorgenommen, so wollen wir auch der Sakramentierer Irrthümer vornehmlich alhier setzen und erzählen, damit unsere Zuhörer, daß sie sich davor hüten und vorsehen können, zu verwarnen.

Demnach verwerfen und verdammen wir mit Mund und Herzen als falsch, irrig und verführerisch alle sakramentierischen opiniones und Lehren, so dieser obgesetzten und in Gottes Wort gegründeten Lehre ungemäß, zuwider und entgegen sind:

1. Als, wenn sie vorgeben, daß die Worte der Einsetzung nicht einfältig in ihrer eigentlichen Bedeutung, wie sie lauten, von der wahren, wesentlichen Gegenwartigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi im Abendmahl verstanden, sondern durch tropos oder figurliche Deutung auf einen andern, neuen, fremden Verstand gezogen werden sollen; wie wir hiermit alle solche sakramentierischen opiniones und ihnen [und einander] selbst widerwärtigen Meinungen, wie vielfältig und mancherlei dieselben auch seien, verwerfen.

2. Item, daß die mündliche Nennung des Leibes und Blutes Christi im Abendmahl gezeugnet und dagegen gelehrt wird, daß der Leib Christi im Abendmahl allein geistlich, durch den Glauben, genossen werde, also daß unser Mund im Abendmahl nur allein Brot und Wein empfangt.

3. Gleichfalls auch, da gelehrt wird, daß Brot und Wein im Abendmahl nicht mehr sein sollen als Kennzeichen, dadurch die Christen untereinander zu erkennen; oder

4. Daß sie nur Bedeutungen, Gleichnisse und Abbildungen [Abbildungen] des weit abwesenden Leibes Christi seien, dergestalt, daß, gleichwie Brot und Wein unsers Leibes äußerliche Speise ist, also sei auch der abwesende Leib Christi mit seinem Verdienst unserer Seele geistliche Speise.

5. Oder, daß sie nicht mehr als Wahrzeichen, Gedenzichen des abwesenden Leibes Christi seien, durch welche Zeichen, als durch ein äußerliches Pfand, wir versichert werden sollten, daß der Glaube, der sich vom Abendmahl abmendet und über alle Himmel steigt, droben ja so wahrhaftig des Leibes und Blutes Christi theilhaftig werde, als so wahr wir im Abendmahl mit dem Munde die äußerlichen Zeichen empfangen; und daß also die Versicherung und Beträstigung unsers Glau-

109] II. Repudiamus et damnamus etiam omnes alios pontificios abusus huius [R. 757 sacramenti, imprimis vero abominationem sacrificii missae pro vivis et defunctis.

110] III. Quod laicis (ut vocant) una tantum sacramenti species sive pars (et quidem contra expressum mandatum et claram institutionem Christi) porrigitur. Et sane hi alii-que plurimi pontificii abusus in ecclesiis nostris, in communi illa Confessione et Apologia, in Smalcaldicis Articulis et aliis nostrorum scriptis, solide Verbo Dei et eruditae atque piaae antiquitatis testimoniis refutati et reiecti sunt.

111] Cum autem in hoc scripto praecipue confessionem et declarationem nostram de vera praesentia corporis et sanguinis Christi contra Sacramentarios (quorum aliqui sub Augustanae Confessionis titulo in ecclesias nostras sine fronte sese ingerunt) proponere voluerimus, eam ob causam Sacramentarium errores praecipue hoc loco recitare et commemorare visum est, eo fine, ut auditores nostri eos agnoscere et cavere possint.

112] Reicimus igitur atque damnamus corde et ore ut falsas et imposturae plenas omnes Sacramentarium opiniones et dogmata, quae supra commemoratae et in Verbo Dei fundatae doctrinae non consentiunt, sed adversantur et repugnant:

113] I. Cum docetur, quod verba institutionis non simpliciter in propria sua significatione, ut sonant, de vera substantiali corporis et sanguinis Christi praesentia in Coena Domini, accipienda, sed per tropos et figuratas significationes in alienam et novam sententiam sint torquenda. Et hoc loco omnes Sacramentarium opiniones eiusmodi, quarum aliquaee inter se etiam pugnant (quot aut quam variae illae sint), reicimus.

114] II. Quod oralis sumptio corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena a Sacramentariis negatur eique opponitur, quod [R. 758 corpus Christi in Coena spiritualiter tantum, per fidem, accipitur, ita quidem, ut ore in Sacra Coena tantum panem et vinum edamus atque bibamus.

115] III. Quod docetur, panem et vinum in Coena Domini nihil aliud esse nisi notas quasdam professionis, quibus Christiani se invicem agnoscant.

IV. Vel quod panis et vinum sint tantum figurae, symbola, typi ac similitudines longissime absentis corporis Christi, ea quidem ratione, quod, ut panis et vinum sunt cibus externus nostri corporis, ita absens corpus Christi una cum ipsius merito sit animae nostrae cibus spiritualis.

116] V. Quod panis et vinum non sint nisi symbola aut signa memorialia absentis corporis Christi, quibus signis tamquam externo pignore confirmemur, quod fides illa (quae a Coena sese avertit et supra omnes coelos ascendit) sursum non minus vere corporis et sanguinis Christi particeps fiat, quam revera in Coena Domini ore externa symbola accipimus. Et quod hoc modo fides nostra in Sacra Coena tantummodo per externa symbola, non

2. We likewise reject and condemn all other papistic abuses of this Sacrament, as the abomination of the sacrifice of the mass for the living and dead.

3. Also, that contrary to the public command and institution of Christ only one form of the Sacrament is administered to the laity; as these papistic abuses have been thoroughly refuted by means of God's Word and the testimonies of the ancient Church, in the common Confession and the Apology of our churches, the Smalcald Articles, and other writings of our theologians.

However, since we have undertaken in this document to present especially only our confession and explanation concerning the true presence of the body and blood of Christ against the Sacramentarians, some of whom shamelessly insinuate themselves into our churches under the name of the Augsburg Confession, we will also state and enumerate here especially the errors of the Sacramentarians, in order to warn our hearers to guard against and look out for them.

Accordingly, with heart and mouth we reject and condemn as false, erroneous, and misleading all Sacramentarian opiniones (opinions) and doctrines which are not in accordance with, but contrary and opposed to, the doctrine above presented and founded upon God's Word:

1. As when they assert that the words of institution are not to be understood simply in their proper signification, as they read, of the true, essential presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper, but are to be wrested, by means of tropi (tropes) or figurative interpretations, to another new, strange sense. We hereby reject all such Sacramentarian opiniones (opinions) and self-contradictory notions [of which some even conflict with each other], however manifold and various they may be.

2. Also, that the oral participation of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper is denied [by the Sacramentarians], and it is taught, on the contrary, that the body of Christ in the Supper is partaken of only spiritually by faith, so that in the Supper our mouth receives only bread and wine.

3. Likewise, also, when it is taught that bread and wine in the Supper should be regarded as nothing more than tokens by which Christians are to recognize one another; or,

4. That they are only figures, similitudes, and representations [symbols, types] of the far-absent body of Christ, in such a manner that just as bread and wine are the outward food of our body, so also the absent body of Christ, with His merit, is the spiritual food of our souls.

5. Or that they are no more than tokens or memorials of the absent body of Christ, by which signs, as an external pledge, we should be assured that the faith which turns from the Supper and ascends beyond all heavens and there above becomes as truly participant of the body and blood of Christ as we truly receive with the mouth the external signs in the Supper; and that thus the assurance bens im Abendmahl geschehe allein durch die äußeren Zeichen und nicht durch den wahrhaftigen, gegenwärtigen und uns überreichenden Leib und Blut Christi.

6. Oder, daß im Abendmahl dem Glauben allein die Kraft, Wirkung und Verdienst des weit abwesenden Leibes Christi ausgeteilt werde, und wir also seines abwesenden Leibes theilhaftig werden; und daß auf diese jetzt erzählte Weise unio sacramentalis, das ist, sacramentliche Vereinigung, zu verstehen sei de analogia signi et signati, das ist, wie Brot und Wein mit dem Leib und Blut Christi ein Gleichnis [eine Ähnlichkeit] haben.

7. Oder, daß der Leib und Blut Christi anders nicht denn allein geistlich, durch den Glauben, empfangen und genossen werde.

8. Item, da gelehrt wird, daß Christus von wegen seiner Himmelfahrt mit seinem Leibe also an einem gewissen Ort im Himmel begriffen und umfassen sei, daß er mit demselben bei uns im Abendmahl, welches nach der Einsetzung Christi auf Erden gehalten wird, wahrhaftig und wesentlich nicht gegenwärtig sein könne oder wolle, sondern sei so weit oder fern davon, als Himmel und Erde voneinander ist; wie etliche Sacramentierer den Text Act. 3: Oportet Christum coelum accipere, das ist: „Christus muß den Himmel einnehmen“, vorzüglich und bößlich zur Bestätigung ihres Irrtums verfälscht haben und anstatt desselben gesetzt: Oportet Christum coelo capi, das ist: „Christus muß vom oder im Himmel also eingenommen oder umschrieben und begriffen werden“, daß er bei uns auf Erden keinerlei Weise mit seiner menschlichen Natur sein könnte [könne] oder wolle.

9. Item, daß Christus die wahre, wesentliche Gegenwärtigkeit seines Leibes und Blutes in seinem Abendmahl nicht habe verheizen noch leisten können oder wollen, weil die Natur und Eigenschaft seiner angenommenen menschlichen Natur solches nicht leiden noch zugeben könne.

10. Item, da gelehrt wird, daß nicht allein die Worte und Allmächtigkeit Christi, sondern der Glaube den Leib Christi im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig mache; daher von etlichen die Worte der Einsetzung in der Handlung des Abendmahls unterlassen werden. Denn obwohl die papistische Konsekration, in welcher dem Sprechenden als dem Wert des Priesters die Kraft zugemessen wird, als mache dasselbe ein Sacrament, billig gestraft und verworfen wird, so können oder sollen doch die Worte der Einsetzung in der Handlung des Abendmahls in keinem Weg ausgelassen werden, wie solches in vorgehender Erklärung angezeigt ist.

11. Item, daß die Gläubigen den Leib Christi vermöge der Worte der Einsetzung Christi bei dem Brot und Wein des Abendmahls nicht suchen [sollen], sondern vom Brot des Abendmahls mit ihrem Glauben im Himmel an das Ort [an den Ort] gewiesen werden, da der Herr Christus mit seinem Leibe sei, daß sie daselbst sein genießen sollen.

12. Wir verwerfen auch, so gelehrt wird, daß die ungläubigen und unbußfertigen, bösen Christen, die allein den Namen Christi tragen, aber den rechten, wahrhaftigen, lebendigen und seligmachenden Glauben nicht haben, im Abendmahl nicht den Leib und Blut Christi, sondern allein autem per verum, praesens et nobis exhibitum corpus et sanguinem Christi obsignetur et confirmetur.

117] VI. Quod in Coena Domini fidei tantummodo virtus, operatio et meritum longe absentis corporis Christi distribuuntur et communicentur, ut hac ratione absentis corporis Christi participes fiamus. Et quod iuxta hunc modum unio sacramentalis sit intelligenda, videlicet de analogia signi et signati, quatenus nimirum corpus et sanguis Christi cum pane et vino aliquid similitudinis habent.

118] VII. Quod corpus et sanguis Christi spiritaliter duntaxat, per fidem, sumatur et participetur.

119] VIII. Quod Christus propter ascensum suum in coelos corpore suo in certo quodam coeli loco ita sit comprehensus et circumscriptus, ut suo corpore nobiscum in Sacra Coena (quae iuxta institutionem Christi in terris celebratur) vere et substantialiter praesens esse neque possit neque velit, sed potius tam longe a Sacra Coena absit, quantum altissimum coelum a terris distat. Sic enim quidam Sacramentarii verba illa in [R. 759] Actis Apostolicis 3, 21: Oportet Christum coelum accipere, de industria malitiose (ad confirmandum errorem suum) depravarunt et loco sinceræ translationis haec verba reposuerunt: Oportet Christum coelo capi, quae verba significant, Christum ita in coelum receptum, ut coelo circumscribatur et comprehendatur, ut nobiscum in terris humana sua natura nullo prorsus modo praesens esse possit aut velit.

120] IX. Quod Christus veram, substantialem praesentiam corporis et sanguinis sui in sacra sua Coena neque promiserit neque praestare possit aut velit, cum ipsius natura et proprietates assumptae suae humanitatis id non admittant.

121] X. Quod non solum verbum et sola Christi omnipotentia, sed fides corpus Christi in Coena Domini praesens nobis sistat. Unde quidam verba institutionis in actione Coenae Dominicae non recitant, sed omittunt. Etsi autem papistica consecratio (quae pronuntiationi verborum tamquam operi sacerdotis eam vim ascribit, quasi ea sacramentum efficiat) non iniuria reprehenditur atque reicitur, tamen verba institutionis in actione Coenae Dominicae nequaquam omitti possunt aut debent; id quod ex superiore declaratione manifestum est.

122] XI. Quod credentes iubentur, corpus Christi non cum pane et vino Coenae (iuxta Christi institutionem) quaerere, sed a pane Sacrae Coenae fide sua in coelum ad locum illum ablegantur, in quo Christus suo corpore sit, ut ibi eius fiant participes.

123] XII. Reicimus etiam hunc errorem, cum docetur, quod infideles et impenitentes (qui titulo duntaxat Christiani sunt, revera autem fidem vivam, veram et salvificam non habent) in Coena Domini non corpus et sanguinem Christi, sed tantum panem et vinum and confirmation of our faith occur in the Supper only through the external signs, and not through the true, present body and blood of Christ offered to us.

6. Or that in the Supper the power, efficacy, and merit of the far-absent body of Christ are distributed only to faith, and we thus become partakers of His absent body; and that, in this way just mentioned, unio sacramentalis, that is, the sacramental union, is to be understood de analogia signi et signati (with respect to the analogy of the sign and that which is signified), that is, as [far as] the bread and wine have a resemblance to the body and blood of Christ.

7. Or that the body and blood of Christ cannot be received and partaken of otherwise than only spiritually, by faith.

8. Likewise, when it is taught that because of His ascension into heaven Christ is so enclosed and circumscribed with His body in a definite place in heaven that with the same [His body] He cannot or will not be truly present with us in the Supper, which is celebrated according to the institution of Christ upon earth, but that He is as far and remote from it as heaven and earth are from one another, as some Sacramentarians have wilfully and wickedly falsified the text, Acts 3, 21: oportet Christum coelum accipere, that is, Christ must occupy heaven, for the confirmation of their error, and instead thereof have rendered it: oportet Christum coelo capi, that is, Christ must be received or be circumscribed and enclosed by heaven or in heaven, in such a manner that in His human nature He can or will in no way be with us upon earth.

9. Likewise, that Christ has not promised the true, essential presence of His body and blood in His Supper, and that He neither can nor will afford it, because the nature and property of His assumed human nature could not suffer or admit of it.

10. Likewise, when it is taught that not only the Word and omnipotence of Christ, but faith, renders the body of Christ present in the Supper; on this account the words of institution in the administration of the Supper are omitted by some. For although the papistic consecration is justly rebuked and rejected, in which the power to produce a sacrament is ascribed to the speaking as the work of the priest, yet the words of institution can or should in no way be omitted in the administration of the Supper, as is shown in the preceding declaration.

11. Likewise, that believers are not to seek, by reason of the words of Christ's institution, the body of Christ with the bread and wine of the Supper, but are directed with their faith away from the bread of the Supper to heaven, to the place where the Lord Christ is with His body, that they should become partakers of it there.

12. We reject also the teaching that unbelieving and impenitent, wicked Christians, who only bear the name of Christ, but do not have the right, true, living, and saving faith, receive in the Supper not the body and blood

Brot und Wein empfangen. Und weil allein zweierlei Gäste bei dieser himmlischen Mahlzeit gefunden [werden], würdige und unwürdige, verwerfen wir auch, wenn ein solcher Unterschied unter den Unwürdigen gemacht wird, daß die gottlosen Epiturer und Spötter Gottes Wort, so in der äußerlichen Gemeinschaft der Kirche sind, nicht den Leib und das Blut Christi zum Gericht im [Ge]brauch des heiligen Abendmahls, sondern allein Brot und Wein empfangen.

13. Also auch, da gelehrt wird, daß die Würdigkeit nicht allein in wahrem Glauben, sondern auf der Menschen eigener Vereitung stehe.

14. Desgleichen auch, da gelehrt wird, daß auch die Rechtgläubigen, so einen rechten, wahrhaftigen, lebendigen Glauben haben und behalten, und aber vorgefekter eigener genugsamer Vereitung mangeln, dies Sakrament zum Gericht als die unwürdigen Gäste empfangen könnten.

15. Item, da gelehrt wird, daß die Elemente, sichtlichlichen [sichtbaren] species oder Gestalten des gesegneten Brotes und Weines, angeboten sollen werden. Daß aber Christus selber, wahrer Gott und Mensch, so im Abendmahl wahrhaftig und wesentlich gegenwärtig, in wahrem Gebrauch desselben solle im Geist und in der Wahrheit wie auch an allen andern Orten, sonderlich da seine Gemeinde versammelt [ist], angeboten werden, kann und wird niemand leugnen, er sei denn ein arrianischer Ketzer.

16. Wir verwerfen und verdammen auch alle vorwitzigen, spöttischen, lästerlichen Fragen und Reden, so auf grobe, fleischliche, lapernaitische Weise von den übernatürlichen himmlischen Geheimnissen dieses Abendmahls vorgebracht werden.

Anderer [andere] und mehr antitheses oder verworfene Gegenlehren sind in vorgehender Erklärung gestraft und verworfen worden, welche wir geliebter Kürze halben alhier nicht wiederholen wollen; und was noch über das andere mehr verdammliche opinionones oder irrige Meinungen sind, können aus der obgefügten Erklärung leichtlich genommen und namhaft gemacht werden; denn wir alles, was der obgefügten und in Gottes Wort wohlgegründeten Lehre ungemäß, zuwider und entgegen ist, verwerfen und verdammen.

VIII.

Von der Person Christi.

Es hat sich auch ein Zwiespalt zwischen den Theologen Augsbургischer Konfession von der Person Christi zugetragen, welche doch nicht erst unter ihnen angefangen, sondern ursprünglich von den Sakramentierern herrührt.

Denn nachdem D. Luther wider die Sakramentierer die wahre wesentliche Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Jesu Christi im Abendmahl aus den Worten der Einsetzung mit beständigem Grund erhalten, ist ihm von den Zwinglianern vorgeworfen: wenn der Leib Christi zumal im Himmel und auf Erden im heiligen Abendmahl gegenwärtig sei, so könnte es kein rechter, wahrhaftiger menschlicher Leib sein; denn solche Majestät allein Gottes eigen, deren der Leib Christi nicht fähig sei.

accipiant. Et cum nonnisi duo genera convivarum in hoc coelesti convivio reperiantur, digni videlicet et indigni, reicimus [R. 760] etiam illud discrimen inter indignos, quod aliqui faciunt, qui asserunt, impios Epicureos, empaectas et Verbi Dei contemptores (qui in externa ecclesiae communione sunt) non corpus et sanguinem Christi ad iudicium in usu Coenae, sed tantummodo panem et vinum sumere.

124] XIII. Et cum docetur, dignitatem non tantum in vera fide, verum etiam in propria hominis praeparatione consistere.

125] XIV. Similiter, cum docetur, etiam vere credentes, qui viva et vera fide praediti sunt eamque retinent, si tamen ea praeparatione propria et sufficiente careant, quam ipsi sibi proposuerunt, hoc sacramentum tamquam indignos convivas ad iudicium accipere.

126] XV. Elementa illa seu visibiles species benedicti panis et vini adorari oportere. Quod autem Christus ipse, verus Deus et homo (qui in Coena sua, in legitimo nimirum eius usu, vere et substantialiter praesens est) in spiritu et in veritate (quemadmodum etiam omnibus aliis locis, praecipue vero ubi ecclesia ipsius est congregata) adorari debeat, id nemo nisi Arianus haereticus negaverit.

127] XVI. Repudiamus praeterea et damnamus omnes curiosas, sarcasmas tinctas et blasphemias quaestiones atque huius generis sermones, qui crasse, carnaliter et Capernaitice de supernaturalibus et coelestibus mysteriis Coenae Dominicae proferuntur.

128] Reliquae antitheses et reiectae opinionones, quae cum pia doctrina pugnant, in superiore declaratione reprehensae atque repudiatæ sunt, eas (quia brevitati studemus) hoc loco repetere noluimus. Si quae usque autem, praeter haec, alia falsa et damnata dogmata, eorum diiudicatio ex praemissa copiosa explanatione peti et (si opus sit) nominatim [R. 761] reprobari possunt. Nos enim omnia, quae supra commemoratae et in Verbo Dei bene fundatae doctrinae non consentiunt, sed repugnant, reicimus atque damnamus.

VIII.

DE PERSONA CHRISTI.

1] Orta est etiam controversia inter Augustanae Confessionis theologos de persona Christi, quam tamen non ipsi inter se moverunt, sed ei occasionem Sacramentarii originaliter dederunt.

2] Cum enim D. Lutherus veram et substantialem corporis et sanguinis Christi in Sacra Coena praesentiam contra Sacramentarios, e verbis institutionis Coenae firmissimis argumentis liquido probasset atque confirmasset, a Cinglianis illi obiectum est: si corpus Christi simul in coelo et in terris in Cena Domini praesens sit, necessario consequi, illud non esse verum et humanum corpus; talem enim maiestatem soli Deo tribuendam, corpus vero Christi nequaquam illius capax esse.

of Christ, but only bread and wine. And since there are only two kinds of guests found at this heavenly meal, the worthy and the unworthy, we reject also the distinction made among the unworthy [made by some who assert] that the godless Epicureans and scoffers at God's Word, who are in the external fellowship of the Church, when using the Holy Supper, do not receive the body and blood of Christ for condemnation, but only bread and wine.

13. So, too, the teaching that worthiness consists not only in true faith, but in man's own preparation.

14. Likewise, the teaching that even true believers, who have and keep a right, true, living faith, and yet lack the said sufficient preparation of their own, could, just as the unworthy guests, receive this Sacrament to condemnation.

15. Likewise, when it is taught that the elements or the visible species or forms of the consecrated bread and wine must be adored. However, no one, unless he be an Arian heretic, can and will deny that Christ Himself, true God and man, who is truly and essentially present in the Supper, should be adored in spirit and in truth in the true use of the same, as also in all other places, especially where His congregation is assembled.

16. We reject and condemn also all presumptuous, frivolous [sarcastically colored], blasphemous questions and expressions which are presented in a gross, carnal, Capernaitic way regarding the supernatural, heavenly mysteries of this Supper.

Other and additional antitheses, or rejected contrary doctrines, have been reproved and rejected in the preceding explanation, which, for the sake of brevity, we will not repeat here, and whatever other condemnable opinions or erroneous opinions there may be still, over and above the foregoing, can be easily gathered and named from the preceding explanation; for we reject and condemn everything that is not in accordance with, but contrary and opposed to, the doctrine recorded above and thoroughly grounded in God's Word.

VIII.

OF THE PERSON OF CHRIST.

A controversy has also occurred among the theologians of the Augsburg Confession concerning the Person of Christ, which, however, did not first arise among them, but sprang originally from the Sacramentarians [for which the Sacramentarians furnished the occasion].

For when Dr. Luther, in opposition to the Sacramentarians, had maintained the true, essential presence of the body and blood of Christ in the Supper with solid arguments from the words of institution, the objection was urged against him by the Zwinglians that, if the body of Christ were present at the same time in heaven and on earth in the Holy Supper, it could be no real, true human body; for Als aber D. Luther solches widersprochen und gewaltig widerlegt, wie seine Lehre [seine Lehr-] und Streitschriften vom heiligen Abendmahl ausweisen, zu welchen wir uns hiermit öffentlich sowohl als zu seinen Lehrschriften bekennen, haben nach seinem Tode etliche Theologen Augsburger Confession sich zwar noch nicht öffentlich und ausdrücklich zu den Sacramentierern von des Herrn Abendmahl bekennen wollen; aber doch eben dieselben Grundseften von der Person Christi, dadurch die Sacramentierer die wahre, wesentliche Gegenwärtigkeit des Leibes und Blutes Christi aus seinem Abendmahl wegzuräumen sich unterstanden, geführt und gebraucht, daß nämlich der menschlichen Natur in der Person Christi nichts solle zugeschrieben werden, was über oder wider ihre natürliche, wesentliche Eigenschaft sei, und haben darüber D. Luthers Lehre und alle diejenigen, so derselben als Gottes Wort gemäß folgen, mit Bezeichnung [Bezeichnung] fast aller alten ungeheuren Ketereien beschwert.

Diesen Zwiespalt Christi, vermöge Gottes Worts, nach Anleitung unsers einfältigen christlichen Glaubens zu erklären und durch Gottes Gnade gänglich hinzulegen [beizulegen], ist unsere einhellige Lehre, Glaube und Bekenntnis, wie folgt:

Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, obwohl der Sohn Gottes eine sonderliche, unterschiedene, ganze göttliche Person und also wahrer, wesentlicher, völliger Gott mit Vater und dem Heiligen Geist von Ewigkeit gewesen [ist], daß er gleichwohl, da die Zeit erfüllt, auch menschliche Natur in Einigkeit seiner Person angenommen [hat], nicht also, daß nun zwei Personen oder zwei Christus wären, sondern daß Christus Jesus nunmehr in einer Person zumal [zugleich] wahrhaftiger ewiger Gott sei, vom Vater von Ewigkeit geboren, und ein wahrhaftiger Mensch, von der hochgelobten Jungfrau Maria geboren, wie geschrieben steht Röm. 9: „Aus welchen Christus herkommt nach dem Fleisch, der da ist Gott über alles, gelobet in Ewigkeit.“

Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen, daß nunmehr in derselben einigen, unzertrennten Person Christi zwei unterschiedliche Naturen seien, die göttliche, so von Ewigkeit [ist], und die menschliche, so in der Zeit in Einigkeit der Person des Sohnes Gottes angenommen [ist], welche zwei Naturen nimmermehr in der Person Christi weder getrennt noch miteinander vermisch[t] [sind], oder eine in die andere verwandelt, sondern eine jede in ihrer Natur und Wesen in der Person Christi in alle Ewigkeit bleibt.

Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, wie gemeldete beide Naturen in ihrer Natur und Wesen unvermischt und unabgetilgt bleiben, daß also auch eine jede ihre natürlichen, wesentlichen Eigenschaften behalte und in alle Ewigkeit nicht von sich lege, noch einer Natur wesentliche Eigenschaften der andern Natur wesentliche Eigenschaften nimmermehr [jemals] werden.

Also glauben, lehren und bekennen wir, daß allmächtig sein, ewig, unendlich, allenthalben zumal natürlich, daß ist, nach Eigenschaft der Natur und ihres natürlichen Wesens, für sich selbst gegen-

3] Hanc obiectionem D. Lutherus refutavit, eamque nihil ponderis habere, luculenter in didacticis et polemicis suis scriptis de Coena Domini, quae Sacramentariis opposuit, demonstravit, quae nos non minus quam didactica huius viri scripta approbamus; idque publice 4] testatum esse volumus. Interim, post mortem D. Lutheri prodierunt quidam theologi (Augustanam Confessionem profitentes), qui non quidem aperte et manifeste ad Sacramentarios in negotio Coenae Dominicae transierunt, sed tamen eadem fundamenta falsa, de persona Christi, quibus Sacramentarii veram et substantialem corporis et sanguinis Christi praesentiam e Coena Domini tollere [R. 762] conati sunt, in medium attulerunt, asserentes, humanae naturae in persona Christi ea non esse tribuenda, quae sint supra vel etiam contra humanas illius naturales et essentialia proprietates. Atque super hoc negotio D. Lutheri piam doctrinam et una omnes illos, qui eam utpote Verbo Dei conformem amplexi sunt, omnium propemodum veterum horribilium haereseon insinularunt atque accusarunt.

5] Ut autem haec controversia pie iuxta Verbi Dei et fidei nostrae analogiam declaratur et per gratiam Dei componatur, unanimi consensu doctrinam, fidem et confessionem nostram de hoc articulo recitabimus.

6] Credimus, docemus et confitemur: Etsi Filius Dei per se integra et distincta Divinitatis aeternae persona est, adeoque verus, substantialis, perfectus Deus, cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto ab aeterno fuit, quod tamen (in plenitudine temporis) humanam naturam in unitatem suae personae assumpserit, non ita, quasi duae iam in Christo personae aut duo Christi facti sint, sed quod Christus Iesus iam in una persona simul verus sit aeternus Deus, ab aeterno ex Patre genitus, et verus homo, e laudatissima virgine Maria natus, ut scriptum est Rom. 9, 5: Ex quibus est Christus secundum carnem, qui est super omnia Deus benedictus in saecula.

7] Credimus, docemus et confitemur, iam in una illa indivisa persona Christi duas esse distinctas naturas, divinam videlicet, quae ab aeterno est, et humanam, quae in tempore assumpta est in unitatem personae Filii Dei. Et hae duae naturae in persona Christi nunquam vel separantur, vel confunduntur, vel altera in alteram mutatur, sed utraque in sua natura et substantia seu essentia (in persona Christi) in omnem aeternitatem permanet.

8] Credimus etiam, docemus et confitemur, quod, ut natura utraque in sua natura [R. 763] et essentia inconfusa manet, neque unquam aboletur, ita etiam utraque suas naturales essentialia proprietates retineat, neque in omnem aeternitatem eas deponat, et quod unius naturae proprietates essentialia nunquam alterius naturae proprietates essentialia fiant.

9] Credimus autem, docemus et confitemur, quod omnipotentem esse, aeternum, infinitum, ubique simul esse, naturaliter, hoc est, secundum proprietatem naturae et naturalis illius such majesty was said to be peculiar to God alone, and the body of Christ not capable of it.

But while Dr. Luther contradicted and effectually refuted this, as his doctrinal and polemical writings concerning the Holy Supper show, which we hereby publicly confess [approve], as well as his doctrinal writings [and we wish this fact to be publicly attested], some theologians of the Augsburg Confession after his death sought, though still unwilling to do so publicly and expressly, to confess themselves in agreement with the Sacramentarians concerning the Lord's Supper; nevertheless they introduced and employed precisely the same false arguments concerning the person of Christ whereby the Sacramentarians dared to remove the true, essential presence of the body and blood of Christ from His Supper, namely, that nothing should be ascribed to the human nature in the person of Christ which is above or contrary to its natural, essential property; and on this account they have loaded the doctrine of Dr. Luther, and all those who follow it as in conformity with God's Word, with the charge of almost all the ancient monstrous heresies.

To explain this controversy in a Christian way, in conformity with God's Word, according to the guidance [analogy] of our simple Christian faith, and by God's grace entirely to settle it, our unanimous doctrine, faith, and confession are as follows:

We believe, teach, and confess that the Son of God, although from eternity He has been a particular, distinct, entire divine person, and thus, with the Father and the Holy Ghost, true, essential, perfect God, nevertheless, in the fulness of time assumed also human nature into the unity of His person, not in such a way that there now are two persons or two Christs, but that Christ Jesus is now in one person at the same time true, eternal God, born of the Father from eternity, and a true man, born of the most blessed Virgin Mary, as it is written Rom. 9, 5: Of whom, as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever.

We believe, teach, and confess that now, in this one undivided person of Christ, there are two distinct natures, the divine, which is from eternity, and the human, which in time was assumed into the unity of the person of the Son of God; which two natures in the person of Christ are never either separated from, or mingled with, one another, or changed the one into the other, but each abides in its nature and essence in the person of Christ to all eternity.

We believe, teach, and confess also that, as both natures mentioned remain unmingled and undestroyed in their nature and essence, each retains also its natural, essential properties, and does not lay them aside to all eternity, neither do the essential properties of the one nature ever become the essential properties of the other nature.

Accordingly, we believe, teach, and confess that to be almighty, eternal, infinite, to be of itself everywhere present at once naturally, that is, according to the property of its na-wärtig sein, alles wissen sind wesentliche Eigenschaften der göttlichen Natur, welche der menschlichen Natur wesentliche Eigenschaften in Ewigkeit nimmermehr werden.

Hinwiederum ein leiblich Geschöpf oder Kreatur sein, Fleisch und Blut sein, endlich und umschrieben sein, leiden, sterben, auf und ab fahren, von einem Ort zu dem andern sich bewegen, Hunger, Durst, Frost, Hitze leiden und dergleichen, sind Eigenschaften der menschlichen Natur, welche der göttlichen Natur Eigenschaften nimmermehr werden.

Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß nunmehr, nach der Menschwerdung, nicht eine jede Natur in Christo für sich selbst also bestehe, daß eine jede eine sonderbare [eine besondere] Person sei oder mache, sondern daß sie also vereinbart seien, daß sie eine einige Person machen, in welcher zugleich persönlich ist und besteht beide die göttliche und die angenommene menschliche Natur, also daß nunmehr, nach der Menschwerdung, zu der ganzen Person Christi gehöre nicht allein seine göttliche, sondern auch seine angenommene menschliche Natur, und daß, wie ohne seine Gottheit, also auch ohne seine Menschheit die Person Christi oder Filii Dei incarnati, das ist, des Sohnes Gottes, der Fleisch an sich genommen und Mensch [ge]worden, nicht ganz sei; daher Christus nicht zwei unterschiedene, sondern eine einige Person ist, unangehen, daß zwei unterschiedliche Naturen in ihrem natürlichen Wesen und Eigenschaften unermischt an ihm erfunden werden.

Wir glauben, lehren und bekennen auch, daß die angenommene menschliche Natur in Christo nicht allein ihre natürlichen wesentlichen Eigenschaften habe und behalte, sondern daß sie darüber [außerdem] durch die persönliche Vereinigung mit der Gottheit und hernach durch die Verklärung oder Glorifikation erhöht sei zur Rechten der Majestät, Kraft und Gewalt über alles, was genannt kann werden, nicht allein in dieser, sondern auch in künftiger Welt.

Sobiel nun diese Majestät belangt, zu welcher Christus nach seiner Menschheit erhoben, hat er solches nicht erst empfangen, als er von den Toten erstanden und gen Himmel gefahren, sondern da er im Mutterleib empfangen und Mensch [ge-] worden, und die göttliche und menschliche Natur miteinander persönlich vereinigt worden [sind]. Welche persönliche Vereinigung doch nicht also zu verstehen [ist], wie etliche dieselbe unecht auslegen, als sollten beide Naturen, die göttliche und menschliche, miteinander vereinigt sein, wie zwei Bretter zusammengeleimt, daß sie realiter, daß ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, ganz und gar keine Gemeinschaft miteinander haben sollten. Denn solches ist Nestorii und Samosateni Irrtum und Herekei gewesen, welche, wie Suidas und Theodorus presbyter Rethenensis bezeugen, gelehrt und gehalten haben: δύο φύσεις ἀκοινωνήτους πρὸς ἑαυτὰς παντάπασι, hoc est, naturas omni modo incommunicabiles esse, daß ist, daß die Naturen ganz und gar keine Gemeinschaft miteinander haben, dadurch die Naturen voneinander abgetrennt und also zwei Christus gemacht [werden], daß ein anderer sei Christus und ein anderer Gott das Wort, so in Christo wohnt.

Denn also schreibt Theodorus presbyter: Paulus quidam iisdem, quibus Manes temporibus, essentiae, per se ubique praesentem esse, omnia nosse etc. sint vera essentialia naturae divinae proprietates, quae etiam humanae naturae essentialia proprietates in aeternum nunquam fiant.

10] At vero esse corpoream creaturam, carnem et sanguinem, finitum et circumscriptum esse, pati, mori, ascendere, descendere, de loco in locum moveri, esurire, sitire, algere, aestu affligi, et si quae sunt similia, esse proprietates humanae naturae statuimus, quae nunquam proprietates divinae naturae fiant.

11] Credimus, docemus et confitemur etiam, quod iam, post factam incarnationem, non quaelibet natura in Christo per se ita subsistat, ut utraque sit persona separata, aut quod utraque personam singularem constituat, sed ita naturas unitas esse sentimus, ut unicam tantum personam constituent, in qua simul personaliter ambae, divina et humana natura assumpta, unitae sint et subsistant, ita quidem, ut iam, post incarnationem, ad integram Christi personam non modo divina, sed etiam assumpta humana natura pertineat, et quod persona Filii Dei incarnati ut sine divinitate sua, ita etiam sine humanitate sua non sit integra persona. In Christo igitur non sunt duae distinctae, sed unica tantum persona, non obstante, quod duae distinctae naturae, utraque in sua essentia et proprietatibus naturalibus, inconfusae in ipso reperiantur.

12] Credimus quoque, docemus ac confitemur, assumptam humanam naturam in [R. 764] Christo non tantum essentialia et naturales suas proprietates habere et retinere, sed praeterea etiam per unionem personalem, qua cum divinitate mirando modo copulata est, et postea per glorificationem exaltatam esse ad dexteram maiestatis, virtutis et potentiae super omne, quod nominatur, non tantum in hoc, sed etiam in futuro saeculo, Eph. 1, 21.

13] *Quod vero ad hanc maiestatem attinet, ad quam Christus secundum humanitatem suam exaltatus est, non eam tum demum accepit, cum a mortuis resurrexit et ad coelos ascendit, sed tum, cum in utero matris conciperetur et homo fieret, quando videlicet divina et humana natura personaliter sunt unitae. De hac autem hypostatica unione non ita sentiendum est (ut quidam sinistre eam accipiunt), quasi duae illae naturae, divina et humana, eo modo unitae sint, quo duo asseres conglutinantur, ut realiter seu re ipsa et vere nullam prorsus communicationem inter se habeant. Hic enim Nestorii et Samosateni error est et haeresis, qui haeretici (ut Suidas et Theodorus presbyter Rethenensis testantur) senserunt atque docuerunt: δύο φύσεις διηρημένως ἔχούσας, καὶ ἀκοινωνήτους πρὸς ἑαυτὰς παντάπασι, hoc est, duas naturas separatim seu seorsim se habentes et omni modo ad invicem seu inter se incommunicabiles esse. Hoc falso dogmate naturae separantur et duo Christi finguntur, quorum unus sit Christus, alter vero Deus Logos, qui in Christo habitat.*

16] Sic enim Theodorus presbyter scribit: Paulus quidam iisdem, quibus Manes temporibus, ture and its natural essence, and to know all things, are essential attributes of the divine nature, which never to eternity become essential properties of the human nature.

On the other hand, to be a corporeal creature, to be flesh and blood, to be finite and circumscribed, to suffer, to die, to ascend and descend, to move from one place to another, to suffer hunger, thirst, cold, heat, and the like, are properties of the human nature, which never become properties of the divine nature.

We believe, teach, and confess also that now, since the incarnation, each nature in Christ does not so subsist of itself that each is or constitutes a separate person, but that they are so united that they constitute one single person, in which the divine and the assumed human nature are and subsist at the same time, so that now, since the incarnation, there belongs to the entire person of Christ personally, not only His divine, but also His assumed human nature; and that, as without His divinity, so also without His humanity, the person of Christ or Filii Dei incarnati (of the incarnate Son of God), that is, of the Son of God who has assumed flesh and become man, is not entire. Hence Christ is not two distinct persons, but one single person, notwithstanding that two distinct natures are found in Him, unconfused in their natural essence and properties.

We believe, teach, and confess also that the assumed human nature in Christ not only has and retains its natural, essential properties, but that over and above these, through the personal union with the Deity, and afterwards through glorification, it has been exalted to the right hand of majesty, power, and might, over everything that can be named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come [Eph. 1, 21].

Now as regards this majesty, to which Christ has been exalted according to His humanity, He did not first receive it when He arose from the dead and ascended into heaven, but when He was conceived in His mother's womb and became man, and the divine and human natures were personally united with one another. However, this personal union is not to be understood, as some incorrectly explain it, as though the two natures, the divine and the human, were united with one another, as two boards are glued together, so that they realiter, that is, in deed and truth, have no communion whatever with one another. For this was the error and heresy of Nestorius and Samosatenus, who, as Suidas and Theodore, presbyter of Raithu, testify, taught and held: δύο φύσεις ἀκοινωνήτους πρὸς ἐαντίας παντάπασιν, hoc est, naturas omni modo incommunicabiles esse, that is, that the two natures have no communion whatever with one another. Thereby the natures are separated from one another, and thus two Christs are constituted, so that Christ is one, and God the Word, who dwells in Christ, another.

For thus Theodore the Presbyter writes: Paulus quidam iisdem, quibus Manes tempori-

Samosatenus quidem ortu, sed Antiochiaey Syriay antistes, Dominum impie dixit nudum fuisse hominem, in quo Deus Verbum sicut et in singulis prophetis habitavit, ac proinde duas naturas separatas et citra omnem prorsus inter se communionem in Christo esse, quasi alius sit Christus, alius Deus Verbum in ipso habitans. Das ist: Es hat eben zur selben Zeit, da Manes der Keger auch gelebt, einer mit Namen Paulus, der wohl seiner Geburt nach ein Samosatener, aber ein Vorsteher zu Antiochia in Syrien gewesen, gottlos gelehrt, daß der Herr Christus nur ein purlauterer Mensch gewesen [sei], in welchem Gott das Wort habe gewohnt wie in einem jeden Propheten; daher er auch gehalten, daß die göttliche und menschliche Natur voneinander getrennt und abge sondert [seien], und daß sie in Christo allerdings [ganz und gar] keine Gemeinschaft miteinander haben, gleich als wenn ein anderer wäre Christus und ein anderer Gott das Wort, so in ihm wohnt.

Wider diese verdamnte Kekerai hat die christliche Kirche je und allwege einstimmig geglaubt und gehalten, daß die göttliche und menschliche Natur in der Person Christi also vereinigt [sind], daß sie eine wahrhaftige Gemeinschaft miteinander haben, dadurch die Naturen nicht in ein Wesen, sondern, wie D. Luther schreibt, in eine Person gemengt [werden]; inmaßen um solcher persönlichen Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft willen die alten Lehrer der Kirche vielfältig, vor und nach dem Chalcedonischen Konzilio, das Wort mixtio, „Vermischung“, in gutem Verstand und Unterschied gebraucht (wie deshalben viele Zeugnisse der Väter, wo bonnöten, angezogen werden möchten, welche auch vielfältig in der Unsern Schriften zu finden) und die persönliche Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft mit dem Gleichnis animay et corporis und ferri candentis (das ist, eines feurigen Eisens, des Leibes und der Seele) erklärt [haben]. Denn Leib und Seele wie auch Feuer und Eisen nicht per phrasin oder modum loquendi ober verbaliter, das ist, daß es nur eine Weise zu reden und bloße Worte sein sollte, sondern vere und realiter, das ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, Gemeinschaft miteinander haben, und gleichwohl dadurch keine confusio oder exaequatio naturarum, das ist, einige Vermischung oder Vergleichung der Naturen, eingeführt [wird], als, wenn aus Honig und Wasser ein Met gemacht, welcher kein unterschieden Wasser oder Honig mehr, sondern ein gemengter Trank ist, da es sich denn mit der göttlichen und menschlichen Natur Vereinigung in der Person Christi viel anders [ver]hält. Denn es viel eine andere, höhere und unaussprechlichere Gemeinschaft und Vereinigung ist zwischen der göttlichen und menschlichen Natur in der Person Christi, um welcher Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft willen Gott ist Mensch und Mensch ist Gott, dadurch doch weder die Naturen noch derselben Eigenschaften miteinander vermischt werden, sondern es behält eine jede Natur ihr Wesen und Eigenschaften.

Um dieser persönlichen Vereinigung willen, welche ohne solche wahrhaftige Gemeinschaft der Naturen nicht gedacht werden noch sein kann, hat nicht die bloße menschliche Natur für der ganzen Welt Sünde gelitten, deren Eigenschaften ist leiden und sterben, sondern es hat der Sohn Gottes selbst wahrhaftig, doch nach der angenommenen menschlichen Natur, gelitten und ist (vermöge unsers einseitigen christlichen Glaubens) wahrhaftig gestorben, wiewohl die göttliche Natur weder leiden noch sterben kann; wie D. Luther solches in seinem großen Bekenntnis vom heiligen Abendmahl wider bus, Samosatenus quidem ortu, sed Antiochiaey Syriay antistes, Dominum impie dixit nudum fuisse hominem, in quo Deus Verbum sicut et in singulis prophetis habitavit [habitaverit], ac proinde duas naturas separatas et citra omnem prorsus inter se communionem in Christo esse, quasi alius sit Christus, alius Deus Verbum in ipso habitans.

17] Contra hanc damnatam haeresin [R. 763 catholica Christi ecclesia semper omnibusque temporibus simplicissime credidit et sensit, humanam et divinam naturam in persona Christi eo modo unitas esse, ut veram inter se communicationem habeant. Neque tamen ideo naturae in unam essentiam, sed ut D. Lutherus loquitur, in unam personam conveniunt 18] et commiscuntur. Et propter hanc hypostaticam unionem et communicationem veteres orthodoxi ecclesiae doctores saepe admodum, non modo ante, verum etiam post Chalcedonense Concilium, vocabulo mixtionis, in pia tamen sententia et vero discrimine, usi sunt. Eius rei confirmandae gratia multa patrum testimonia in medium afferri possent, quae passim in hominum nostrorum scriptis reperire licet. Et quidem erudita antiquitas unionem hypostaticam et naturarum communicationem similitudine animae et corporis, item ferri candentis aliquo modo declaravit. Anima 19] enim et corpus (quemadmodum etiam ignis et ferrum) non tantum per phrasin aut modum loquendi aut verbaliter, sed vere et realiter communicationem inter se habent, neque tamen hoc modo confusio aut naturarum exaequatio introducitur, qualis fieri solet, cum ex melle et aqua mulsum conficitur; talis enim potus non amplius aut aqua est mera aut mel merum, sed mixtus quidam ex utroque potus. Longe certe aliter se res in illa divinae et humanae naturae unione (in persona Christi) habent [habet]. Longe enim sublimior est et plane ineffabilis communicatio et unio divinae et humanae naturae in persona Christi, propter quam unionem et communicationem Deus homo est et homo Deus. Nec tamen hac unione et communicatione naturarum vel ipsae naturae vel harum proprietates confunduntur, sed utraque natura essentiam et proprietates suas retinet.

20] Propter hanc hypostaticam unionem (quae sine vera illa communicatione [R. 763 naturarum nec cogitari nec subsistere potest) non nude et sola humana natura, cuius proprium est pati et mori, pro totius mundi peccatis est passa, sed ipse Filius Dei vere (secundum tamen naturam humanam assumptam) passus est, ut Symbolum nostrum Apostolicum testatur, vere mortuus est, etsi divina natura neque pati neque mori potest. Hanc 21] rem D. Lutherus in maiore sua de Coena Domini confessione copiose et solide declaravit, bus, Samosatenus quidem ortu, sed Antiochiae Syriae antistes, Dominum impie dixit nudum fuisse hominem, in quo DEUS Verbum sicut et in singulis prophetis habitavit [habitaverit], ac proinde duas naturas separatas et citra omnem prorsus inter se communionem in Christo esse, quasi alius sit Christus, alius DEUS Verbum in ipso habitans. That is: At the same time in which also the heretic Manes lived, one by the name of Paul, who, though born in Samosata, was a bishop at Antioch in Syria, wickedly taught that the Lord Christ was nothing else than a mere man in whom God the Word dwelt, just as in every prophet; therefore he also held that the divine and human natures are apart from one another and separate, and that in Christ they have no communion whatever with one another, just as though Christ were one, and God the Word, who dwells in Him, the other.

Against this condemned heresy the Christian Church always and at all times has simply believed and held that the divine and the human nature in the person of Christ are so united that they have a true communion with one another, whereby the natures [do not meet and] are not mingled in one essence, but, as Dr. Luther writes, in one person. Accordingly, on account of this personal union and communion, the ancient teachers of the Church, before and after the Council of Chalcedon, frequently employed the word mixtio, mixture, in a good sense and with [true] discrimination. For proof of this, many testimonies of the Fathers, if necessary, could be adduced, which are to be found frequently also in the writings of our divines, and which explain the personal union and communion by the illustration animae et corporis and ferri candentis, that is, of the soul and body, and of glowing iron. For the body and soul, as also fire and iron, have communion with each other, not per phrasin, or modum loquendi, or verbaliter (by a phrase or mode of speaking, or in mere words), that is, so that it is to be a mere form of speech and mere words, but vere and realiter (truly and really), that is, in deed and truth; and, nevertheless, no confusio or exaequatio naturarum, that is, a mixing or equalizing of the natures, is thereby introduced, as when hydromel is made from honey and water, which is no longer pure water or pure honey, but a mixed drink. Now, in the union of the divine and the human nature in the person of Christ it is far different. For it is a far different, more sublime, and [altogether] ineffable communion and union between the divine and the human nature in the person of Christ, on account of which union and communion God is man and man is God, yet neither the natures nor their properties are thereby intermingled, but each nature retains its essence and properties.

On account of this personal union, which cannot be thought of nor exist without such a true communion of the natures, not the mere human nature, whose property it is to suffer and die, has suffered for the sins of the world, but the Son of God Himself truly suffered, however, according to the assumed human nature, and (in accordance with our simple Christian faith) [as our Apostles' Creed testifies] truly died, although the divine nature can neither suffer nor die. This Dr. Luther has fully explained in his Large Confession concerning the Holy Supper in opposition to die gotteslästerliche allooesin [Bedeutungsverwechslung] Zwinglii (da er gelehrt, daß eine Natur für die andere genommen und verstanden werden solle), die er als des Teufels Lärben bis in Abgrund der Hölle verdammt, ausführlich erklärt hat.

Der Ursache denn die alten Kirchenlehrer beide Worte: κοινωνία und ἔνωσις, communio et unio, das ist, „Gemeinschaft“ und „Vereinigung“, in Erklärung dieses Geheimnisses zusammengelegt und eins durch das andere erklärt haben, Irenaeus, lib. IV, cap. 37; Athanasius in Epistola ad Epictetum; Hilarius De Trinitate, lib. IX; Basilius et Nyssenus in Theodoro; Damascenus, lib. III, cap. 19.

Um dieser persönlichen Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft willen der göttlichen und menschlichen Natur in Christo glauben, lehren und bekennen wir auch vermöge unsers einfältigen christlichen Glaubens, was gesagt wird von der Majestät Christi nach seiner Menschheit zur Rechten der allmächtigen Kraft Gottes, und was derselben anhanget; welches alles nichts wäre noch bestehen könnte, wo diese persönliche Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft der Naturen in der Person Christi nicht realiter, das ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit, bestünde.

Um dieser persönlichen Vereinigung und Gemeinschaft willen der Naturen hat Maria, die hochgelobte Jungfrau, nicht einen purlauteren Menschen, sondern einen solchen Menschen, der wahrhaftig der Sohn Gottes des Allerhöchsten ist, geboren, wie der Engel zeugt; welcher seine göttliche Majestät auch in Mutterleibe erzeigt [hat], daß er von einer Jungfrau unversehrt ihrer Jungfrauschaft geboren [ist]; darum sie wahrhaftig Gottes Mutter und gleichwohl eine Jungfrau geblieben ist.

D a h e r [vermöge dieser persönlichen Vereinigung] hat er auch alle seine Wunderwerke gewirkt und solche seine göttliche Majestät nach seinem Gefallen, wann und wie er gewollt, und also nicht erst allein nach seiner Auferstehung und Himmelfahrt, sondern auch im Stand seiner Erniedrigung, geoffenbart; als, auf der Hochzeit in Cana Galiläa; item, da er zwölf Jahre alt gewesen, unter den Gelehrten; item im Garten, da er mit einem Worte seine Feinde zu Boden geschlagen; desgleichen im Tode, da er nicht schlecht wie ein anderer Mensch gestorben [ist], sondern mit und in seinem Tode die Sünde, Tod, Teufel, Hölle und ewige Verdammnis überwunden [hat], das menschliche Natur allein nicht vermocht hätte, wenn sie nicht mit der göttlichen Natur also persönlich vereinigt [gewesen wäre] und Gemeinschaft gehabt hätte.

D a h e r hat auch die menschliche Natur die Erhöhung nach der Auferstehung von den Toten über alle Kreaturen im Himmel und auf Erden, welche nichts anderes ist, denn daß er Knechtsgestalt ganz und gar von sich gelegt und gleichwohl die menschliche Natur nicht abgelegt [hat], sondern in Ewigkeit behält und in die völlige Possess [Besitzergreifung] und Gebrauch der göttlichen Majestät, nach der angenommenen menschlichen Natur, eingesetzt [ist]; welche Majestät er doch gleich in seiner Empfängnis auch in Mutterleibe gehabt, aber, wie der Apostel zeugt, sich derselben geäußert und, wie ubi blasphemam Cinglii allooesin, qui docuit, unam naturam pro altera sumi et intelligi, tamquam diaboli larvam reiecit et ad inferni barathrum damnavit.

22) Et sane veteres ecclesiae doctores duo haec vocabula, κοινωνία et ἔνωσις, communionem et unionem, in explicatione huius mysterii coniunxerunt et alterum per alterum declararunt. Irenaeus, lib. IV, cap. 37; Athanasius in Epistola ad Epictetum; Hilarius De Trinitate, lib. IX; Basilius et Nyssenus in Theodoro; Damascenus, lib. III, cap. 19.

23) Propter hanc hypostaticam unionem et communionem divinae et humanae naturae in Christo credimus, docemus et confitemur iuxta fidei nostrae Christianae analogiam omnia ea, quae de Christi maiestate secundum humanam eius naturam, qua ad dexteram omnipotentiae et virtutis Dei sedet, et iis, quae ex ea consequuntur, dici solent, locum non habitura, neque stare posse, nisi hypostatica illa unio et communicatio naturarum in persona Christi realiter et vere existerent.

24) Huius hypostaticae unionis ratione et naturarum communione Maria, laudatissima illa virgo, non hominem duntaxat, sed talem hominem, qui vere Filius Dei altissimi est, genuit, ut archangelus Gabriel testatur. Is Filius Dei etiam in utero matris divinam suam maiestatem demonstravit, quod de virgine, inviolata ipsius virginitate, natus est. [R. 767] Unde et vere θεοτόκος, Dei genitrix, est et tamen virgo mansit.

25) Illius hypostaticae unionis et communionis virtute omnia miracula sua edidit et divinam suam maiestatem pro liberrima voluntate, quando et quomodo ipsi visum fuit (non tantum post resurrectionem suam et ascensum ad coelos, verum etiam in statu exinanitionis), manifestavit; verbi gratia in nuptiis, quae in Cana Galilaeae celebratae fuerunt; item, cum duodecim annos natus, inter viros eruditos eruditissime disputaret; praeterea in horto, quando unico propemodum verbulo hostes suos in terram prosterneret; quin imo in ipsa morte; non enim ut alius quispiam vulgaris homo mortuus est, sed in morte, et quidem per suam mortem, ipsam mortem, peccatum, diabolum, infernum et aeternam damnationem devicit. Haec certe admiranda opera humana natura sola nequaquam praestare potuisset, nisi cum divina natura personaliter unita fuisset et realem cum ea communicationem habuisset.

26) Ex hac unionem et naturarum communione humana natura habet illam exaltationem, post resurrectionem a mortuis, super omnes creaturas in coelo et in terra, quae revera nihil aliud est, quam quod Christus formam servi prorsus deposuit, humanam vero naturam non deposuit, sed in omnem aeternitatem retinet et ad plenam possessionem et divinae maiestatis usurpationem secundum assumptam humanam naturam evectus est. Eam vero maiestatem statim in sua conceptione, etiam in utero matris habuit, sed, the blasphemous alloeosis of Zwingli, who taught that one nature should be taken and understood for the other, which Dr. Luther committed, as a devil's mask, to the abyss of hell.

For this reason, then, the ancient teachers of the Church combined both words, κοινωνία and ἑνωσις, communio et unio, that is, communion and union, in the explanation of this mystery, and have explained the one by the other. Irenaeus, lib. 4, chap. 37; Athanasius, in the Letter to Epictetus; Hilary, Concerning the Trinity, Book 9; Basil and Gregory of Nyssa, in Theodore; Damascenus, Book 3, chap. 19.

On account of this personal union and communion of the divine and the human nature in Christ we believe, teach, and confess also, according to our simple Christian faith, what is said concerning the majesty of Christ according to His humanity, [by which He sits] at the right hand of the almighty power of God, and what is connected therewith [follows therefrom]; all of which would be naught and could not stand if this personal union and communion of the natures in the person of Christ did not exist realiter, that is, in deed and truth.

On account of this personal union and communion of the natures, Mary, the most blessed Virgin, bore not a mere man, but, as the angel [Gabriel] testifies, such a man as is truly the Son of the most high God, who showed His divine majesty even in His mother's womb, inasmuch as He was born of a virgin, with her virginity inviolate. Therefore she is truly the mother of God, and nevertheless remained a virgin.

In virtue of this He also wrought all His miracles, and manifested this His divine majesty, according to His pleasure, when and as He willed, and therefore not first after His resurrection and ascension only, but also in His state of humiliation; for example, at the wedding at Cana of Galilee; also, when He was twelve years old, among the learned; also in the garden, when with a word He cast His enemies to the ground; likewise in death, when He died not simply as any other man, but in and with His death conquered sin, death, devil, hell, and eternal damnation; which the human nature alone would not have been able to do if it had not been thus personally united and had not had communion with the divine nature.

Hence also the human nature, after the resurrection from the dead, has its exaltation above all creatures in heaven and on earth; which is nothing else than that He entirely laid aside the form of a servant, and yet did not lay aside His human nature, but retains it to eternity, and is put in the full possession and use of the divine majesty according to His assumed human nature. However, this majesty He had immediately at His conception, even in His mother's womb, but, as the

D. Luther erklärt, im Stand seiner Erniedrigung heimlich gehalten und nicht allezeit, sondern wann er gewollt, gebraucht hat.

Zekund aber, nachdem er nicht schlecht wie ein anderer Heiliger [sieht aber gebraucht er seine Majestät völlig und allezeit, fintemal er nicht bloß wie ein anderer Heiliger] gen Himmel, sondern, wie der Apostel zeugt, über alle Himmel gefahren [ist], auch wahrhaftig alles erfüllt und allenthalben nicht allein als Gott, sondern auch als Mensch gegenwärtig regiert von einem Meer zum andern und bis an der Welt Ende, wie die Propheten weisagen und die Apostel bezeugen, daß er allenthalben mit ihnen gewirkt und ihr Wort bekräftigt habe durch nachfolgende Zeichen; doch solches nicht auf eine irdische Weise zugegangen [zugegangen ist], sondern, wie D. Luther erklärt, nach Art göttlicher Rechten, welche kein gewisser Ort im Himmel, wie die Sacramentierer ohne Grund der Heiligen Schrift vorgeben, sondern anderes nichts denn die allmächtige Kraft Gottes ist, die Himmel und Erde erfüllt, in welche Christus nach seiner Menschheit realiter (das ist, mit der Tat und Wahrheit), sine confusione et exaequatione naturarum (das ist, ohne Vermischung und Vergleichung beider Naturen in ihrem Wesen und wesentlichen Eigenschaften) eingeseht worden; aus welcher mitgetheilten Kraft vermöge der Worte seines Testaments er mit seinem Leib und Blut im heiligen Abendmahl, dahin er uns durch sein Wort gewiesen, wahrhaftig gegenwärtig sein kann und ist; das sonst keinem Menschen möglich [ist], diemeil kein Mensch solchergestalt mit der göttlichen Natur vereinigt und in solche göttliche, allmächtige Majestät und Kraft durch und in der persönlichen Vereinigung beider Naturen in Christo eingeseht [ist], wie JESUS, der Sohn Marien, in dem die göttliche und menschliche Natur miteinander persönlich vereinigt [sind], also daß in Christo „alle Fülle der Gottheit leibhaftig wohnet“, Kol. 2, und in solcher persönlichen Vereinigung eine solch hohe, innerliche, unaussprechliche Gemeinschaft haben, darüber sich auch die Engel verwundern und, solche zu schauen, wie St. Petrus bezeugt, ihre Lust und Freude haben, wie solches alles ordentlich hernach etwas weilkünftiger soll erklärt werden. Pf. 93; Sach. 9; Marc. 16; 1 Petr. 1.

Aus diesem Grunde, inmahen hievor [wie vorhin] angezeigt und die unio personalis erklärt, daß ist, welchergestalt die göttliche und menschliche Natur in der Person Christi miteinander vereinigt [sind, nämlich], daß sie nicht allein die Namen gemein, sondern auch mit der Tat und Wahrheit unter sich selbst, ohne alle Vermischung oder Vergleichung derselben in ihrem Wesen, Gemeinschaft haben, fleucht [fliehet] auch her die Lehre de communicatione idiomatum, das ist, von wahrhaftiger Gemeinschaft der Eigenschaften der Naturen, dabon hernach weiter gesagt werden soll.

Denn weil es wahrhaftig also [ist], quod propria non egrediantur sua subiecta, das ist, daß eine jede Natur ihre wesentlichen Eigenschaften behalte [behält], und dieselben nicht von der Natur abgefordert, in die andere Natur wie Wasser aus einem Gefäß in das andere ausgegossen werden, so könnte auch keine Gemeinschaft der Eigenschaften nicht sein noch bestehen, wenn obgehörte persönliche Vereinigung oder Gemeinschaft der Natu-ut apostolus loquitur Phil. 2, 7, se ipsum exinanivit eamque, ut D. Lutherus docet, in statu suae humiliationis secreto habuit, neque eam semper, sed quoties ipsi visum fuit, usurpavit.

27] Iam vero, postquam non communi ratione, ut alius quispiam sanctus, in [R. 768] coelos ascendit, sed, ut apostolus Eph. 4, 10 testatur, super omnes coelos ascendit et revera omnia implet et ubique non tantum ut Deus, verum etiam ut homo praesens dominatur et regnat a mari ad mare et usque ad terminos terrae, quemadmodum olim prophetae, Ps. 8, 2. 7; 93, 1 sq.; Zach. 9, 10, de ipso sunt vaticinati, et apostoli Marc. 16, 20 testantur, quod Christus ipsis ubique cooperatus sit et sermonem ipsorum sequentibus signis confirmavit. Haec autem non terreno modo, sed, ut D. Lutherus loqui solet, pro modo et ratione dexterarum Dei facta sunt, quae non est certus aliquis et circumscriptus in coelo locus (ut Sacramentarii sine testimonio Sacrae Scripturae fingunt), sed nihil aliud est nisi omnipotens Dei virtus, quae coelum et terram implet, in cuius possessionem Christus iuxta humanitatem suam sine confusione tamen et exaequatione naturarum et in essentialibus proprietatibus realiter seu revera venit. Ex 29] hac communicata sibi divina virtute homo Christus, iuxta verba testamenti sui, corpore et sanguine suo in Sacra Coena, ad quam nos verbo suo ablegat, praesens esse potest et revera est, quod alioqui nulli alii homini possibile est, quia nemo hominum cum divina natura hoc modo unitus et in divinam illam omnipotentem maiestatem et virtutem (ratione hypostaticae duarum in Christo naturarum unionis) collocatus est, sicut unus et solus ille 30] Iesus virginis Mariae filius. In ipso enim divina et humana natura hypostaticae sunt unitae, ita ut in Christo tota Divinitatis plenitudo corporaliter inhabitet, Col. 2, 9, et in illa personali unionem tam arcta et ineffabilis est naturarum communio, in quam etiam, ut apostolus Petrus, 1 Pet. 1, 12, ait, desiderant angeli cum admiratione et gaudio prospicere. De qua re paulo post suo loco ordine et copiosius dicetur.

